Mr. Gravel Senator Nunez, since apparently an amendment is going to be accepted by you without objection, would you have any objection to adding the words at the State Capitol. The legislature shall meet annually at the State Capitol in regular session. I don't believe anywhere in the article is there any designation as to where the legislature shall meet.

Mr. Nunez Mr. Gravel, I don't know of any place the legislature has met in regular session besides the State Capitol. I don't think it's necessary to put it in there.

Point of Information

Mr. LeBlau Mr. Chairman, I was going to direct my question to you. As I understand it, it's going to take two-thirds to reconsider Mr. Riecke's amendment.

Mr. Henry To reconsider the vote by which his amendment passed? Well it would take two-thirds to call from the table the motion to reconsider, yes sir.

Mr. LeBlau All right. If Senator Nunez's amendment also contains the provision that... for reconsideration of Mr. Riecke's amendment as I understand it only takes a simple majority to pass an amendment, but two-thirds on the reconsideration. Wouldn't that have to be two separate amendments, or would it be divided on... or just what would the procedure be?

Mr. Henry Of course these amendments are susceptible to division. Someone could request a division of the question, but you're talking about two separate issues. One, you're talking about the Riecke amendment, Mr. LeBlau. We are operating just like we do in the House of Representatives. The Riecke amendments were offered, the Riecke amendments were adopted, the motion was made to reconsider the vote by which they were adopted and lay the motion on the table and the motion carried. Consequently, to undo all of that insofar as the mechanics of that you've got to call it from the table with a two-thirds vote. But just as you can do it in the House of Representatives, Senator Nunez has come up with an entirely different amendment which we have not yet voted on. While it would affect the Riecke amendment, does not do detriment to it insofar as the prior amendment, the Riecke amendment which we have adopted. If that's confusing enough...

Further Discussion

Mr. Roemer Fellow delegates, you see the problem with this amendment is that it's no good. Those of us who live in north Louisiana don't know a whole lot, but we know what backdoor is. There's a front-door and there's a backdoor. Backdoor, right here. Backdoor all the way. We've been here for three days, we heard everybody four times, and now we're going to backdoor it one more time again. Now for the record I want to set my position clear. I voted for "Sixty" Rayburn's amendment. I thought it was the best one we had because it did the very things that Senator Nunez wants to do, yet gave the legislature time and the people the right for consultation. This does not do that. I'll tell you why. It says 60 consecutive days. Now where's the problem, every 7 days there's a Sunday, where I'm from every 7 days there's a Saturday. You watch us work on Saturday and Sunday and see the quality of our work. It'll be very, very poor. You watch that legislature on Saturday and Sunday and see the quality of their work, after working Monday through Friday very, very poor. You take 2 days out of 7, that's 30% of their time, our time, the people's time. It's poor work. That's what this amendment does. It doesn't protect anybody except those of the legislature who don't want to work 60 days. Cause I guarantee you they won't work on Saturday and Sunday. I don't care what the needs are back home. Their needs will come first. I think that it's right. I hope that we can come up with something we can all live with, a compromise that does justice, not just to our time, but to the people—rich and poor, all of them. This does not do that. This is the very kind of thing that happened in 1921. Read it. That's why we're here. This is 1973, scratch it out, 1921. We don't need this, well-intentioned though it may be, this vote right at the heart of the democratic process. Two days out of seven, they either won't meet or if they do, it won't be worth a thing. I think that's too high a price to pay for clarity, thirty percent of our time. I hope we vote it down.

Further Discussion

Mr. Weiss Fellow delegates, I hate to belabor the issue but I think this is a good amendment and I hope you'll vote in favor of it. I'd like to give you the reasons why. It's very simple if you listen a moment with me. First of all, one of the delegates has said that the vote here are so close that everyone is dissatisfied. Well, this unfortunately is the process of compromise and all of us are meeting it now. I think we all better learn how to compro wise early. This is a compromise issue and I think it's a good compromise. First of all, look at this. Sixty days per year is a twenty-five percent increase over our present fifty-two year period. Actually since '54 they've had ninety days in a two year period. Now you have one hundred and twenty days. You have a twenty-five percent increase and these men have enough time as you and I to go home on Saturday and Sunday and they care for them they care to. But there's a twenty-five percent increase. Now how much more time are we going to give the legislature. So we have given them what they asked. With Senator Rayburn's decision whether this be a split session, it seems to be a very important issue at this time. As far as I'm concerned this is a legislative issue and I'll leave it to the legislature. If the people back home want it split, they'll see that it's so as Senator Rayburn pointed out, Delegate Rayburn and we'll have a split session. If not, we'll have it run the other way, 19 days for introduction of bills and then vote on it. What I'm most concerned about is an issue that has not been discussed and which I tried to express when I brought you on to amend Delegate Rayburn's motion. That is the caliber of the legislator which has not been discussed here thus far. We have talked about the people back home, we've talked about a 5% turnout for elections, and the folks back home let us down sometimes. Now I hope that we, the delegates, will not let the folks back home, and I hope the legislators will not let the folks back home, down. Representative Triche, Senator Rayburn are the caliber of men who are doing their job here working hard. You can see how they can sway and persuade people. I'm not here and I'm not trained for that purpose. But I think if you will just reason this out, you will see that this is a compromise and it's the best compromise that has been put before this assembly thus far. Now the caliber of the legislator depends upon the amount of time a man spends down here. That was my original point. Sixty days gives a man a time to know when he is going to be here and when he's not going to be here. Sixty days is 60 calendar days. It's 120 months less, in between, 3 months, 4 months have already had a calendar body meeting. So let's limit the legislature to a 60 day session with quality legislators. That's the pitch that I would like to make in favor of this amendment. I hope you will vote it favorably.

Further Discussion

Mrs. Warren: Mr. Chairman, and delegates, I'm not going to take much of your time. I'm just going to make it real simple. This is not a compromise. This is a steal. It's going to steal the privilege of people back home from having the opportunity to review the bills and put some input into the legislature. I'm going to ask you to vote against it.

[Previous question withdrawn.]

Closing

Mr. Nunez: Mr. Chairman, gentlemen of the convention, Ladies of the convention, I'll just be brief in my closing remarks. I think you've heard all the arguments. I personally believe that this is probably as good a compromise as you're ever going to arrive at. We started out with 120 days we went to 90 days we went to 70 days and now we're down to a basic 60 day session. A 60 day session that has proven to work. A 60 day session that you know your legislature can do the job in. A 60 day session that the legislature has proven that they can function in, and they can operate under the basic this State can operate for the next 30 or 40 or 50 years. And Mr. Roemer, I think that you're wrong in saying this is 1921 caliber material. In 1921 they didn't have the 30 days, that was an amendment, and it was amended in 1971 or 1970 when we submitted the proposal to the people to increase the days. By the way, they turned it down, I'll repeat that to you again. They did turn it down. I think the climate is better and I think this convention has made that climate better. I think you'd be doing the people a favor, of this State if you gave them the opportunity to vote on 60 day annual sessions. Sixty day annual sessions is what has been recommended by legislative committees that's been studying it. They've tried to do it several times. Tried to do it in legislature and then finally were successful in submitting it to the people. And let me remind you, when the amendment was defeated, so was 53 other amendments defeated. So was 40 some odd amendments the year before that defeated, and we was 20 some odd amendments the year before that defeated. So I can't say they defeated 60 day sessions because they didn't want it. They defeated it because of the political climate at that time. I think if the time had been today, and knowing the conditions under which the legislature labors under in the 30 day session, I believe that the people would allow them to work for 60 days. I think the people are satisfied or would be satisfied with a 60 day session. You talk to them. Sure some of them want split sessions, they want a lot of different things. In 30 days you take the 10 day limitation period, I think it's good to extend that a little more. It does give a few more days to introduce bills and it gives the legislature and it gives the staff, nobody has ever considered that staff, the Legislative Council who drafts those bills and the staff that has to enroll those bills and get them back to the legislature and the folks they should be. That's why I increased the days from 120 to 90, and that was recommended by the people who do the work. The people who do the actual mechanical work of a legislative session. Gentlemen and ladies of the convention, I think this is a good amendment. I think it is a compromise. Don't ever think it isn't a compromise, it's a real compromise. As far as working on Saturday and Sunday, I think that a lot of good people work on Saturday and Sunday. They get paid overtime for it, but the legislature doesn't, but a lot of good people work on Saturday and Sunday. A lot of labor unions work on Saturday and Sunday and get overtime. Mr. Roemer, a lot of dairy farmers, I'm from a farming and agricultural area, and when you're a dairy farmer, I mean ready, I mean work on a Saturday and Sunday. And I think the milk you produce is excellent. I've drank it since I was a kid and I know you milk those cows on a Saturday and a Sunday. So I would ask you to go along with the provision. Saturday and Sunday is not bad. You can do as good a day's work on a Saturday and a Sunday as you can do on a Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. I've found legislative functions very well on Saturdays and Sundays. I've found it to function very well on the fourth of July. You put a time limitation on the legislature and they're going to provide you with good legislation. They're going to provide you with the time, with the element and they're going to come up with the legislation in the time you provide. There are several states in this union that work on unlimited sessions and I want to tell you in my dealings with them, in my travels throughout and talking to them, it doesn't work. It doesn't work, you need a time limit. It makes you function better. A 60 day period has proven that it will give you, your legislative body, enough time to do the job that they should be doing. Without further ado, I think we've talked about it enough for 3 or 4 days, I would ask you to approve this amendment and I think you've done the people of this state a favor and you've made this convention look like it's going in the right direction. Thank you very much.

Question

Mr. Toça: Mr. Nunez, did you know that all the good legislation that we've passed for Bossier City in the last session was passed on a Sunday?

Mr. Nunez: Well those are good folks in Bossier City and they deserve good legislation and if it's going to be passed on a Sunday, or a Monday, or a Tuesday, we'll do it for them.

Amendment 54-62. Mr. Nunez has the floor.

16th Days Proceedings—July 18, 1973

Order tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. De Blieux]. On Page 1, Delegate Amendment No. 1, proposed by Delegate Riecke and others and adopted by the convention on July 14, 1973, on line 17 before the words "in any year period", delete the words "31st day of July" and insert in lieu thereof the following words, "5th day of August".

Explanation

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this is a very simple amendment. I think that Delegate Roemer explained it very well a few minutes ago when he stated that you would not do your best work on Saturday and Sunday. I also want to call your attention that in any period in which the legislature will meet, there is also a fourth of July. It's very simple mathematics. If you will take your calendar or anything and figure up if the fourth Monday of May happens to fall on the 28th day of May, you only have 4 more days during the month of May. You've got 30 days during the month of June, and 31 days during the month of July, giving you a total of 65 days. During that period of time, you are going to have at least 8 Saturdays and 8 Sundays and the fourth of July which will give you 15 days. During that period of time, sometime during the years you are going to have at least 9 Saturdays and 9 Sundays and the fourth of July making a total of 19 days. With this addition of five days it would relieve the legislature of the absolute necessity of meeting on the fourth of July and on Saturdays and Sundays. It does not say you have to meet on those days, it just says that you do not have to meet those days. I ask you for adoption of the amendment which will help to make the Riecke amendment a much, much better provision.

Questions

Mr. Jenkins Senator De Blieux, under the proposal then, if your amendment passed, we would be meeting from April, all during May, all during June, all during July, and on into August. Now you know most of us didn't run to be in session parts of 5 months a year. Don't you think that we deserve a little time to deal with our own personal business and affairs rather than stringing this out over parts of 5 months?

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Jenkins, this is not going to add any days to the legislative session. It just adds a 5 day period, only 5 days, in which you can meet your limitation of 50 days if it's absolutely necessary. It's not going to string out your time any more, it just gives you the right and privilege of not having to meet on Saturday or Sunday. I would prefer not to have to legislate on those days, if possible. That's the only thing it does.

Mr. Flory Senator, isn't it true though that you mentioned the fact that you're not increasing the legislative days but what you're actually doing is increasing 5 more committee work days?

Mr. De Blieux No, it will not do that, Mr. Flory, because you only have 50 days during that period of time. This does not lengthen the interval between the time that the legislature is in recess to the time it goes back. You're not doing that whatsoever.

Mr. LeBleu Senator De Blieux, isn't it a fact that the reason the legislature has met on Sundays a number of times in the past, is to allow the legislators to introduce their bills on that last day if it happens to be on a Sunday? Hasn't the legislature stayed in session up until midnight on that last day? Wouldn't it preclude the legislature from meeting on Sunday in that way?

Mr. De Blieux This would not affect the provision of when you can introduce bills whatsoever because they must be introduced during that first 15 day period, Mr. LeBleu. So it will not affect that whatsoever. It has nothing to do with that.

Mr. Burns Senator, I've been sitting up here about four days now listening to the people back home, I mean referring to the people back home. Do you find that the people back home are in favor of shorter legislative sessions rather than longer ones?

Mr. De Blieux Well, I haven't had any expression of a shorter period of time, but this is not going to lengthen the session any. It's going to eliminate the necessity of the legislature meeting on a Saturday or Sunday.

Mr. Burns In other words, yours provides for a total of how many days?

Mr. De Blieux The total that is in the provision right now is the total of 65 days. You count the original 15, plus the 50 days. It does not change that whatsoever.

Mr. Burns Your amendment adds 5 days to the Riecke amendment.

Mr. De Blieux To the time in which that the legislature can get in its 50 days. That's all it does. It doesn't do anything else. Doesn't add any more legislative days.

Point of Information

Mr. Avant My question is for the chair, not for Senator De Blieux. My question is one of parliamentary procedure. My question is, how many votes would it take to adopt an amendment to Mr. Riecke's amendment?

Mr. Henry It would take a majority of those voting, Sir.

PRAYER

Mr. Zimmerman Lord, we pray that You would make us instruments of Your peace. Where there is mediocrity, let us bring creativity; where there has been confusion, let us bring clarity; where there has been division, let there be unity. Let us be mindful of what we have come to do, to serve rather than to rule, to set free rather than to bind. And finally, Lord, heal the wounds that have been inflicted upon us by our own mistrust of one another. Amen.

Mr. Poynter Committee Proposal No. 3, introduced by Delegate Blair, Chairman on behalf of the committee on Legislative Powers and Functions.

A proposal making provisions for the legislative branch of government, impeachment and removal of officials and necessary provisions with respect to.

The status this juncture is that the convention has adopted Section 1, presently has under consideration Section 2 of the Article.

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Amendments proposed by Delegates Rayburn, Casey, Womack and Fayard

Amending the report on the bill.
Amendment No. 1, strike out Amendment No. 1 proposed by Mr. Riecke and others and adopted by the Convention on July 14

Amendment No. 2, on page 1, delete lines 21 through 32 and insert in lieu thereof the following, Quote:

"Section 2A. The legislature shall meet annually in regular session in the State Capitol during a period of 85 calendar days, for not more than 60 legislative days. A legislative day is a calendar day on which either House is in session. No such session shall continue beyond the eighty-fifth calendar day after convening. The legislature shall convene at twelve o'clock noon on the third Monday in April of each year. No new matter intended to have the effect of law shall be introduced or received by either House of the legislature after midnight of the fifteenth calendar day except by a favorable vote of two-thirds of the elected members of each House...that's favorable record vote of two-thirds of the elected members of each House."

Explanation

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, much has been said in the last several days about this particular issue. Many ideas have been brought forth. I really believe we have here a workable amendment. I believe you have one that you can support. I certainly hope so. It does make a little change from our regular amendment. It provides that the legislature shall convene the third Monday in April in place of the fourth, and that's to give us more time in the present fiscal year and it does increase the eighty days to eighty-five days. And the purpose of that increased five days is to make sure that if a legislature desires to have a split session, there will be ample time to have it without having to work on Sundays.

I think you are familiar with the amendment. I think everything has been said that could be said about it. I'll be happy to answer any questions if anyone has one, and I hope that you will go along and support it.

Questions

Mr. Abraham Mr. Rayburn, this does allow the legislature flexibility which I am in favor of. Now I'd like to ask you, in your personal opinion, do you think that the legislature, after all this discussion, will, under this provision, try a split session?

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Abraham, I certainly think they will and I will make a pledge to this body now... I will... I can only speak for myself. I'm one member of that body, but I certainly will support it and let me say this, Mr. Abraham. The reason that I want this amendment adopted so bad is under today's constitution, we are locked in. We've got a provision that was put in there back in 1955 that was workable at that time and was wonderful at that time. It says we can't go beyond thirty days.

Our appropriations in this State and our expenditures have over doubled since that time. Now we are locked in with a thirty-day and can't do anything about it. This amendment would leave us the flexibility of having a forty day session, fifty day session, fifty-five day session or even a thirty day if we so desired, that's all we'd need to take care of our work load. But it does peg it down. It cannot go beyond a sixty-day period.

Mr. Abraham And you will support these...

Mr. Rayburn I certainly will.

Mr. Fulco Mr. Rayburn, would you have any objection to the machine, voting machine being opened and allowing everyone who would like to to become co-authors of this amendment if we had the Chairman's permission to do so?

Mr. Rayburn I certainly have no objection, and I would be happy to see as many as so desire join us.

Point of Information

Mr. Fulco Mr. Chairman, is it possible that we might open the machine now for those who might want to become co-authors of this amendment?

Mr. Henry Well, it's highly irregular. If there are no objections from... Do you object, Mrs. Warren?
Mrs. Warren would object, so I would suggest that perhaps we not do that Mr. Fulco Well, thank you.

Questions

Mr. Burns Senator Rayburn, as you stated, we have been at this thing for four days and now it looks like we might be getting near the end, but before we do, I've had so many dates and so many times for introduction in the lengthy sessions, I just want to ask you this final question.

As I understand your amendment, they meet in regular session for a period of eighty-five days... that's the total it could last

Mr. Rayburn No sir... yes, sir, Mr. Burns, it could not last for over eighty-five calendar days, but the session itself cannot last over sixty legislative days in the eighty-five day period.

Mr. Burns That's my next question. In other words you meet in legislative session for not more than sixty days within an eighty-five day period.

Mr. Rayburn That's correct, Mr. Burns.

Mr. Burns And within that sixty days the bills would have to be introduced within the first fifteen days.

Mr. Rayburn That is correct.

Mr. Burns And I understand that you pledge your word that you would work towards seeing that they had a split session.

Mr. Rayburn I certainly will because I want to try it. I really do, and I feel...I hope that it will be successful and I think it will.

Mrs. Warren Mr. Chairman, and delegates, I think from the beginning I wanted to ask this question. I was a little bit confused by Senator Rayburn's statement when he said the legislature was "locked in." I don't want them to be "locked in" but I was wondering if his amendment would keep the people locked out? That they wouldn't have the time that they would care...you know that they have the bills available for people to see.

So if they are going to be available, that you can get them before they act on them, I have no objection, and that is the reason I didn't want these people to say that they didn't want to put their name on the amendment before I knew what it was all about. Thank you.

Mr. Rayburn Thank you very much.

Mr. Derbes Senator Rayburn, is it not true under your proposal that certainly during the first fifteen days of any legislative session, the legislature could convene and in the regular course of business summarily pass a piece of legislation without providing the people an interim period for disclosure and suggestion?

Mr. Rayburn That could happen, yes, sir. On the other hand, if we decide to have a split session and we want to set the first twelve days to introduce bills, or the first ten days, we could do that, also. It does leave a little flexibility.

Mr. Chatelain Senator, you know that I was one of those who changed my mind, I think three times Thursday or Friday, and you are working pretty hard on me to have changed it for the fourth time.

Mr. Rayburn I don't see where one more change would hurt you.

Mr. Chatelain I would like to ask you this question, sir. I did a lot of homework last night and talked to a lot of people, and I have my mind about made up. But here is the question I want to know, sir.

I see you have three distinguished delegates who are co-authoring this with you. Would they have the same view that you might have so far as trying a split session? This is my problem.

Mr. Rayburn I have talked to Mr. Casey, I am sure he shares my same views. I'm sure Mr. Womack shares my same views. They are the only two names I see on the amendment I have, and I am sure they share my views.

Mr. Chatelain Then one more time for the record, that you will try, in your behalf you will try a split session.

Mr. Rayburn I certainly will.

Mr. Chatelain Thank you, sir.

Mr. Womack Mr. Rayburn, I think you realize that in this case you can and have spoken for me. I'm willing and ready and want to try it, because if anything will improve the system we have, I want it.

Mr. Casey Mr. Rayburn, I understand you have expressed the opinion that your co-authors who are legislators would support, vote for, and produce legislation to try the split session method. Do you know that I would support that move?

Mr. Rayburn Thank you very much.

Mr. D'Gerolamo Mr. Chairman, Mr...Senator Rayburn, do you know, as a member of the legislature, I will also support the split session, and I am also speaking for Representative Toca, Representative Alario, Representative Johnny Jackson, Representative Taylor, and Representative Alfonso Jackson. We all support your...

Mr. Henry We've got a Priest over here that can answer your question, if you all want to, but we would go ahead and take care of the business of the business that we have before us.

Mr. D'Gerolamo Welcome to the fold, welcome to the fold.

Mr. Flory Senator Rayburn, in view of the fact that all these members of the legislature are so eager to support the split session, I wonder why you didn't write it in your amendment?

Mr. Rayburn Because, Mr. Flory, the reason I didn't write it in my amendment because we are now struggling with a thirty-day session that was written in the amendment in 1955, I believe, which has caused us a tremendous amount of problems within the last few years since our work load has got so heavy, and it's too heavy for a thirty day session, and we are locked in. That's the reason I didn't do it, Mr. Flory, because of the fact that I felt like we should have a little latitude. We should try it without being locked in...be twenty years, thirty years, forty years or longer.

If there are no further questions, I move the adoption of the amendment, Mr. Chairman.

Further Discussion

Mr. Blair Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention. Instead of four days we have worked on this one section, we are going into the sixth day, and I think we have heard many good ideas and many good amendments, but do you think as I think that probably we should bring this on to a head?

To give you a good example, my good friend, Bob Ainsworth, who I had the utmost respect for, he was the one who was the author of the thirty-day fiscal session. That was obsolete in ten years, and thank you, it looks like we are going to get rid of this thirty-day session.

You have been patient, and I think we should move on. Give the legislature some way to move and not lock us in. There is only one state now to my knowledge, that is Tennessee. California tried it back in 1953 and they have removed it. Several of them have it in the statutes.

Give us that latitude in which to work that has the locked in split session and we will appreciate it.

Further Discussion

Mr. Jack Mr. Chairman and delegates, I'll be brief. I wasn't going to mention the name, but since the last speaker did, I want to mention it. Bob Ainsworth is a very good friend of mine and was down there. I did not see that thirty-day session as being feasible. I told him...

Then they had Cap Harham, who was a very close friend of mine. He was in the Senate. I came over and they both said, "Well, wellborn, if it doesn't work, we'll get a constitutional amendment and do away with it. Well, you see, you have never done away with it. Now on this amendment of Senator Rayburn's which I have been through and talked on and been for all the way, it gives you a chance under this provision which will be in the constitution of trying a split session. And I want them to try it and decide. Now you are tired of four days of listening to arguments.

From 1940 to 1964 in that House, I heard people all the time talking about whether or not they ought to have a split session. That argument has been going on for thirty-three years to my knowledge and this is the way to put a stop to it. Now I am not in the legislature, but if anybody will remind me and ask me, at my own expense I will be glad to come down to the committee and speak in favor of any provision necessary in the next session to set up the machinery to try out a split session.

I don't think you are going to like a split session. I told you the reason. But I would like to see it tried, but not put in the constitution like these other Riecke amendments would.

So here you have it in plain language in this amendment, the Rayburn amendment, where you can try out that split session and you have enough people already been telling you they'd come down there to committee and help you get through the necessary mechanics so you could have one and try it.

Now why put it in this constitution like the Riecke amendment? The reason we are in session down here as a constitutional convention is because people are sick and tired of voting on constitutional amendments. So don't think you are going to put something in this constitution and submit a batch of amendments to people to take it out. You better take whatever time is necessary and try to get this document as near to where it will be left alone for a good long length of time. And that's what the Rayburn amendment will do. So you can operate under either one of these.

So I say, let's adopt this, and get on with other work. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Tate Mr. Chairman and brother delegates, we have been discussing this question for the last three or four days. I think you have had excellent discussion, excellent debate, and in short, I move the previous question.

[Previous question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendments adopted. 80-5. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Boynter Amendment No. 1 [By Mr. Finary, et al.] on page 2 at the end of line 9 insert the following, quote,

"During any regular session held in an odd numbered year, no measure levying new taxes or increasing existing taxes shall be introduced or enacted. Page 2 at the end of line 9."

Point of Order

Mr. Schmitt I believe that we have voted on this already and placed it on the table. Won't it take a two-thirds vote in order to get it removed?

Mr. Henry It is a different amendment. It's an entirely different amendment, sir, and so it would be considered to take a majority of those present and voting to adopt such an amendment.

Explanation

Mr. Stinson Mr. Chairman, and delegates of the convention. This is to a certain degree similar, but it is entirely different from the one that was voted down by a close vote several days ago...last week.

The one...to discuss it first, I'd like to point out the difference. The one that was voted down and that was primarily the objection from a number of people was that this repeated that this...that this odd session that there could be no repeal of tax exemptions from industry. So in view of that, this new amendment deletes that from the former amendments and it only says that "at no annual session held in the odd numbered years could measures be introduced...measures leveling new taxes or increasing taxes at such an odd year session."

As was pointed out by much debate and a number of speeches at the last voting, the people in Louisiana have since the enactment of the fiscal session, have then felt secure in that an increase in taxes would only be every other year or the even years...the possibility. They did not feel it necessary to worry about increased taxation or to come down and lobby against it or work against it on the odd numbered years. So we would like to continue that security in the taxpayers of the state and say that only taxes can be considered and introduced and passed at the even numbered years of our regular session.

This would mean that taxes...at least be a holiday on taxes every other year, the odd numbered years. Those of use that have worked for this amendment and are supporting it feel that it will help the final passage of this constitution submitted to the people if this is included. And we would like to urge that this security and feeling of stability in our tax payers be continued and guaranteed to them and only have tax measures introduced on the even numbered years of our regular session.

Of course, this would have no prohibition against a special session at any time the legislature or the governor could call an extraordinary session under our constitution.

I personally believe that in the future, that any taxpaying governors will call an extraordinary session where it will not bog down and interfere with our normal legislative matters on our annual sessions.

So I would like to urge that you insert this provision in the constitution to give the people a feeling of security and also help in the support of this constitution when it is submitted to the people for a state-wide vote.

If there are any questions, I would be happy to answer them.

Questions

Mr. Tobias Mr. Stinson, you stated that this particular amendment would prohibit introduction of taxes in odd numbered years...proposals. You also stated that this would not prohibit special sessions of the legislature from considering tax matters in odd numbered years.

Well, my question is this. In what...why would you want to do this, because it would just add to the load of the convention. It would cost a lot more money when it can just be handled in an ordinary session. It is a false prohibition since the legislature could adjourn and come right back after a delay and consider it. So you are just churning your wheels.

Mr. Stinson Mr. Tobias, if you had been a member of the legislature, you would realize that in sixty days, or if you have them, or whatever we vote, you really have too many problems and measures in each to really consider taxes. By this, we are really actually helping the legislators because if the tax burden that we have now is to be increased, I feel that it should be at an extraordinary session for that purpose where the people will all be knowing of it and can come down not for sixty days but for maybe ten or fifteen or whatever number of days the session is called for.

Mr. Tobias Are you aware that a special session could cost upwards of seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars? Around seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars?

Mr. Stinson Well, Mr. Tobias, for twenty-four years in the legislature I worried about the cost of government and I voted against it usually in the minority, and no one ever complained about it or suffered from it. So I've about reached, in my old age, the fact that people like to spend money to have legislative sessions.

Mr. Tobias Are you aware that in 1965 there was an extraordinary session of the legislature... that's an odd numbered year and they did consider tax matters?

Mr. Stinson Yes, sir. I was in attendance at that session.

Mr. Kelly Mr. Stinson, would you not agree that the Rayburn amendment which was just passed gives general sessions each year, which is directly adverse to what we have had in the past such as fiscal and non-fiscal legislative sessions. Would you agree with that?

Mr. Stinson Yes, sir.

Mr. Kelly Alright, sir, now by this amendment in effect, what we are doing is going right back to the old system? Is that correct?

Mr. Stinson No, sir.

Mr. Kelly In other words, you are saying that... see if my interpretation of your amendment is correct, that in odd numbered years, you can have no tax matters or increases in existing taxes, which really we are getting back to a determination of a fiscal matter. Is that correct?

Mr. Stinson Well, there never has been a definite interpretation of what a fiscal matter is.

Mr. Kelly Alright, sir. Has there been a determination of what a tax is?

Mr. Stinson Yes, sir.

Mr. Kelly What is a tax?

Mr. Stinson A tax is something that is put on people that usually don't want to pay it, but they have to go along because it is imposed on them.

Mr. Kelly Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Stinson With the gentleman being facetious on that, really I don't think that there has been any problem legislatively as to what a tax is.

Now the reason that we have the provision to increase existing taxes there has been some question as to whether an increase is a tax or not... a new tax. So for that reason it is included, and ladies and gentlemen, I say I would like to urge you to go along with this. We are not limiting the annual, regular session in the odd years, except with one provision, and that is that they will not consider tax measures at that time. I don't think that there is any emergency that we should have to consider them every year. You know we often hear the argument that taxes have not been increased since... they usually use the date as 1948 when Governor Long put so many taxes on. Well, if you think there is also a reason why you don't have to increase taxes to take care of the cost of living because when you have a tax, sales tax, for example, people buy a lot more now than they did in '48. They buy a lot more gasoline tax. Their salaries have gone up, income tax is more. Everything as the economy changes, the tax base the income from it increases proportionately. So, just the fact that the cost of things go up you don't have to run and put a new tax on. And I think that has been demonstrated by our present Revenue Department. They are going out and collecting taxes that have not been. The burden has been in the past on a lot of people who have paid their taxes conscientiously and favorites and crooks have not paid them. I think we should clean up and get the taxes and hold down on the taxes the best we can.

If I am a crook and not going to pay taxes, I'm going to be a bigger crook and not pay big and little taxes. So let's all be honest and give the people a feeling of security and vote this amendment, it will not in any way tie the hands of the administration, whoever it may be, nor the legislature.

If it is important enough, I think in spite of some mention of the cost, I still think it will be important enough for a special session... extraordinary session instead of this annual session.

Ladies and gentlemen I'd like to...

Questions

Mr. O'Neill Mr. Stinson, if this amendment were defeated, is it not true that this would be the first time in the history of our state that the people of Louisiana passed income taxes being levied on them every year instead of every other year?

Mr. Stinson Since the...listen, wait a minute...

Mr. O'Neill Would you not agree, also, Mr. Stinson, that by being able to place taxes on the people of the state only every other year and only in special sessions, extraordinary sessions, that a focus would be put upon the legislature so that the people would be watching for new taxes in these odd numbered years instead of just recurring new taxes every year?

Mr. Stinson I think they would not have to worry each year on it, yes sir. In other words, if an extraordinary session is called, the governor's call is put in the paper, if the legislature calls themselves under our new provision they advertise what it's going to be. They have to advertise what tax is going on at that time, so the people would know in advance. And like it is now if we are in a regular session and have two thousand or three thousand bills, it's in there with that many. It's going to be confusing, and with the big fight for taxes, it's going to really interfere with the normal passage of bills in the regular session.

Mr. O'Neill I know you have explained it already, Mr. Stinson, but I just like to be perfectly clear on it, this in no way would limit the legislature to what is now commonly known as a thirty-day fiscal session. Correct?

Mr. Stinson There would not be the limitation that is now on the fiscal session. No, sir.

As far as that is concerned, apparently it is out the window when the people adopt this constitution.

If there are no further questions, I close, Mr. Speaker, and I'd like to urge and ask that you please favorably consider this measure.

Further Discussion

Mr. Blair Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in opposition to the amendment. It will further tie the hands of the legislature. We've had about three or four major tax years since 1948, and I think if you look back one of the years was brought out in 1965 and I think we had some tax adjustments in 1971. I think if you look back you will find that quite a few of them were done in the odd years. So this, I think is a little window dressing, but don't tie the legislature's hands. If we had some adjustments to make, we could make it without having to come into a seven hundred fifty thousand or more or less special session.

The people, also, would, I think, know more in advance because in an extraordinary session you are only given a five day notice at the present time.

Further Discussion

Mr. Jenkins Mr. Chairman, delegates to the convention, I want to apologize that this measure comes before you again because it is essentially the same as the one we considered before. But before the amendment failed to get a change of three votes would have altered the outcome and five delegates had come to me and told me that the reason they voted against it was because it had prohibited repeals of exemptions in odd numbered years. And we thought we should try it with that provision in there because it does seem so important. At present there are two limitations that exist in regular annual sessions in odd numbered years. They are separate and distinct. One is, non-fiscal matters may not be considered without a super majority vote in the legislature, that's the first one. And that is the one that we would like to have. That makes it a fiscal session. The second prohibition though is against raising taxes which admittedly is a fiscal matter. In a fiscal session there is one fiscal thing you can't do at all and that's raise taxes. The reason it has never caused a procedural problem is because legislators have known that a super majority vote would not allow them to introduce a tax measure so there was no use even trying to introduce it and get it passed. They knew that if they passed it and it were considered a tax by the courts then it would be declared invalid. So this is not bringing back fiscal sessions at all. In no way is this bringing back fiscal sessions. This is a limitation that has been in our law before and has not caused problems before from a procedural standpoint.

The language with regard to forbidding the levying of new taxes or rather increasing existing taxes is just like in the present constitution as in this amendment. That's been said that the legislature needs more flexibility and that is no doubt true but it is our job to give some protection to the people while the legislature exercises that flexibility. I think the people want and need some protection and this is one sort of protection that they need.

Now the people are not worried about some little tax adjustments that might be made. The adjustments are not what they are concerned about. They are concerned about tax increases and levying new taxes. And this is what this particular provision would prohibit in regular annual sessions during odd numbered years.

Now some think that if we don't adopt this amendment it won't imperil the new constitution. I dispute that. And I call your attention to proposition number B that was on the ballot in November, 1972 with regard to allowing sixty day annual sessions. Now that provision failed at that time you remember. You said the only reason it failed was because all the amendments failed or most of them failed. (All the amendments failed or most of them failed.) All the amendments did not fail, five passed out of thirty. Now that's the interesting thing to me is this. This particular proposal not only failed, and I think one factor was the fact that people didn't want any tax increases. But it failed rather badly. It was eighth on the list of amendments but it was twenty-second in terms of the percentage of the vote that it got. Twenty-one other proposals got a higher percentage of the vote than it did even though it was eighth. It was a rather unpopular proposal. Sixty-three percent of the people voted against it.

Now I am sure that a large portion of that sixty-three percent certainly knew what they were voting against, it was a conscious vote. They did not want to send their representatives to regular sessions in odd numbered years. That will certainly be true if we include that same provision that was in that amendment in our new constitution. It's going to give a certain percentage of the people a good reason to vote against the constitution. And it's a reason that we shouldn't have to give them. ... I do this during regular sessions in odd numbered years. Budgets are planned well in advance. Taxes if they need to be increased can be increased in even numbered years. So we're not going to do any violence to the legislative system. We're not going to take away any significant flexibility. But we are going to give the people a good protection, a popular protection. A protection that I think you agree you have to vote on right now that would undoubtedly vote overwhelmingly in favor of it. So I urge you to go along with this amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. DeBlieux Mr. Chairman, and ladies of the convention, I don't want to labor this. I don't because I think it's a dead issue to start with. But I would just like to lay one or two things out before you.

The proponents of this resolution I have always referred were those that were in favor of giving the legislature the prerogative rather than the governor to do the legislation in taxes. If you pass this amendment it would absolutely put the taxing power you might say, in the hands of the governor at his pleasure to do with as he sees fit because he can call a special session of the legislature anytime he sees fit and limit it to the tax issue.

I think that is one of the reasons why governors in the past have always rather had the biannual sessions of the legislature rather than the annual sessions. It was true that fiscal sessions did take a part of this power away from the governor insofar as other matters are concerned... fiscal matters but it still left it in the hands of the governor with reference to taxes.

Now if you want to build a powerful, executive over there to the legislature just adopt this amendment. If you want to leave it to the discretion of the true representatives of the people who are the representatives in the legislature, then you will vote against this amendment. And I ask you to vote against it because it is absolutely a step in the wrong direction.

Further Discussion

Mr. Smith Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I only want to get up here when I think that there is something important and I do think this amendment is important. And I want to join in with Mr. Stinson asking you to support it.

They talk about tying the hands of the legislature. Well sometimes I think you need to tie their hands. I was author of the two-thirds amendment. I like to keep on talking about it. I think it's a good law. That tied the hands of the legislature. But I think every other industry, business and people ought to know that there are not going to have any taxes at least that particular session they can work on other things. Now, they want to eliminate the fiscal session which I think is good. I was one of the co-authors of the fiscal session but I think it failed its purpose. It didn't do what it was supposed to do and now I voted the Rayburn Amendment awhile ago. But I think this is a good law and it will help pass this constitution.

And I feel like every two years we can vote taxes if we need it. If the governor thinks we need a special session we can call that. But I think this is a fine amendment and I think the people back home if you are talking about the people back home are not happy every two years. For those who do. So I ask you to join with us and vote for this amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. J. Jackson Mr. Chairman, and fellow delegates, I am in support of this amendment. What this amendment does, is basically offers... and as someone would say... it is some peace of mind to constituency. I think that we have accomplished in terms of the latitude that the legislature needs. We have accomplished that by the adoption of Senator Rayburn's Amendment.

My concern is that you may have situations whereby it has happened, that a tax measure could be introduced that maybe not affects everybody but affects particular a certain segment. To give you an example, you have a lot of boards who could come very annually talking about increasing the license certification fees for a particular occupation. This provides some protection in the light that that can only happen every two years. For those persons who are concerned about local government and the fact that the legislature imposing financial burdens on that. Then it would appear that this amendment would provide a time span whereby local government would know that this could not happen within a period of two years. I think that if in fact that there is need on the part of the legislature, the part of the state to increase its taxes then we do have alternate measures by which we can do it.

We can do it in even years or we can do it by special session. I think for those proponents of split sessions... what this does... in fact that the legislature does not come... adopt a split session concept. What this basically does is to provide the public with the kinds of import particularly on a very vital issue like tax measures because it would necessarily have to mean the calling of a special session or in fact, the public preparing itself to deal with the legislature in the even years. And for those reasons I would ask delegates here to give some favorable adoption of this amendment. Particularly in the fact that it does no more than provide the people of the state of Louisiana with some peace of mind and with some measuring stick as to when and where and how they can expect tax increases.

Let me say that I oppose this measure firstly because it did not provide... the fact that it did provide that we could not appeal certain tax exemptions. That has satisfied my basic arguments with it and I would suggest to you that this is a good amendment and I would ask your favorable consideration of it.

Further Discussion

Mr. Jack Mr. Chairman, and members, I'll be brief. I spoke on the amendment last week and then we took out the exemptions. I am for this amendment.

All in the history of Louisiana in the odd numbered years you could not levy on a tax on the people unless it was by a special session. Special sessions for taxes for very difficult. So I don't believe you will be able if we pass this amendment in the odd years to put a tax on the people.

There is enough stress and strain on people now in the whole world and it would make the people better off, more secure to know that at the annual session, under the present constitution they would not be able to put a tax on them at that session in odd years. There is a very little chance of being able to do it in the special session. Now the reason I haven't offered an amendment to include special sessions is because you have always got to have an escape hatch if you can. If we had to because of an emergency of some kind have a tax in the odd years then the procedure would be a special session. So you are protected.

I don't see how anybody should object to this amendment. If the people, and they have shown it... don't like to pay taxes. A lot of them don't even if it's necessary. Most people are good citizens and do when it's necessary. But if you have got to tax them for tax purposes in the odd years... the even years. Let them at least go to bed... like the Lord made night and day so you can get some rest from the twenty-four operation hours in a day and a night. And I say let's give the people some peace of mind. If you are in the legislature it's not going to hurt you not to be able to put a tax on you to put a tax on the people. I can't understand why anybody would be against this amendment. And I hope you will pass it.

Further Discussion

Mr. Stovall Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, let me respond to ourselves that we are presently dealing with the session on the Legislative Committee. This is not the report of the Revenue and Taxation Committee. That will come later. We are presently trying to make basic decisions concerning the future of the Louisiana Legislature. And it seems to me that we have been governed by two basic principles. One is the separation of powers... that there should be a strong legislature. And the other is that we should not restrict them but instead we should give to them the ability to respond to the needs of the future as it comes to us.

Now it seems to me that this amendment is another attempt to put the legislature in some kind of frame work that will prevent them from responding to the needs that might occur in the state. It really makes unnecessary the provision which we just passed.

Mr. Jack a few moments ago said he recognized that the thirty day fiscal session was irrelevant. This again is an attempt to limit and confuse. It hampers work that will prevent them from responding to the needs, on suspicion, on cynicism. I feel that we need to have faith in the ability of our legislature to respond to the needs of the people and I encourage you to defeat this amendment in order that the future legislatures of our state might be able to respond to the needs of the people on a given occasion. Thank you.

Questions

Mr. Toomy Reverend Stovall, wouldn't the adoption of this amendment only give a reprieve of eighty-five days during the odd numbered years to the poor people, the rich people, the industry and everybody else to the state of taxes only for that eighty-five day period and only that period during the year?

Mr. Stovall Yes, Mr. Toomy. There could still be special sessions of the legislature which would increase taxes. This type of restriction is completely unnecessary for that very obvious reason and if there must be special sessions of the legislature to accomplish this purpose it increases the cost of operation of the state.

Mr. Bollinger Reverend Stovall, do you find it happening often in the past since this provision is in the present constitution, do you find it regularly that the governor or the legislature calls themselves or the governor calls the legislature into special session for the purpose of passing taxes? Is it a regular occurrence?

Mr. Stovall This has been done quite often in the past.
Yes, Mr. Bollinger.

Mr. Bollinger It has been done quite often for the purpose of taxation?

Mr. Stovall As I recall, it has. Yes.

Mr. Bollinger Thank you.

Mrs. Warren Reverend Stovall, you mentioned Revenue and Taxation covering this issue. Will the Revenue and Taxation have anything to do or say about what the legislature is going to do in considering taxes in one year or the other?

Mr. Stovall Mrs. Warren, I'm not sure what the Revenue and Taxation Committee is going to do. I know that from listening to Mr. Stinson that I simply gather that's what he's talking about here is Revenue and Taxation. And I think he really should take this to that committee, so that we are dealing with here today, is the powers of the legislature. And I'm simply saying that this takes away their flexibility, their ability to respond to changing situations and needs which might arise.

Mrs. Warren Yes, Mr. Stovall you said that it was Revenue and Taxation and then you say you don't know what they are going to do. I still ask the question, will they be deciding... whoever told you about it did they say who would be deciding when they were going to discuss the years that we were going to have taxes discussed or not?

Mr. Stovall I don't know Mrs. Warren.

17th Days Proceedings—July 19, 1973

Mrs. Warren Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Flory Mr. Chairman and delegates, I rise in support of the amendment. I do so for a number of reasons. This convention by a substantial majority just a few moments ago increased the time that the legislature can meet from less than nine weeks in the even numbered years when they can increase taxes to a regular twenty-four week period in two years and they can raise taxes within any of those twenty four weeks. Now I suggest to you if you read the morning paper. With the announcement of phase four and in the same announcement the indication that food prices and other prices are going to rise substantially in the immediate future. That the mood of the people of this state and across this nation are at the point that they are paying all that they can afford to pay and even more. That the burden has become too great for them to bear. Now I admit it takes revenues to run state government. And I'm not suggesting that we cut state services, but I do suggest to you that the average citizen of this state has to set their economy based upon the tax load taken by this state and by the federal government. And I think that they are entitled to know at least some in advance as to how they can set their personal economy. And I don't think that they ought to be subjected every year to the possibility of increased taxes.

It has been mentioned that the governor or the legislature could call themselves into special session in the odd numbered years for the purpose of considering increase in taxes. That's true. And I think that is the way it ought to be in the cases of emergency. But I submit to you that there are very rare instances when the governor of a state or when the legislature itself will call itself into a special session for the purposes of levying new or increased taxes. They just don't do it unless there exists a dire emergency. And if they do, then of course the attention of the entire electorate of this state is focused on the legislature for that one special purpose of increasing taxes which is put in a call when they call that a special session. And nothing else can be considered except what is in that call. So then the attention of the people of their...with the legislature and if they have objection of course that attention is focused on the legislature and they have the right of course to let their legislators know how they feel. So I suggest to you that in order to carry on the affairs of the state in an orderly, proper fashion, that every biannually is adequate in order to increase taxes if that becomes necessary. But I don't think we ought to subject the taxpayers of this state to wake up every morning of every year knowing not what their taxes are going to be the next coming months. I ask that you give strong consideration to the adoption of this amendment.

Further Discussion

Mrs. Warren Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise to support this amendment. I think it is good. I have been sitting here for days and most I have heard in debate is let's give the legislators more flexibility. I have heard a few people say...let's give the people a chance. I think we have just passed an amendment. I was kind of in limbo, I didn't know really which way to go and I am being truthful with you. I was tied between two opinions. A story came to my mind that I mentioned in the off-set of this convention about the rattlesnake and the bull.

I am going to tell it to you now.

I want to tell you this little story now. We have been talking about the farm and the vineyard and so forth and so on...but this is a story of the fields also.

The bull lives in the forest and so does the rattlesnake.

One day, a big fire broke out in the forest and of course the rattlesnake crawled on his belly and he couldn't get out like the bull so he crawled up to the bull and he said "Mr. bull, let me crawl out on your back, he say...oh, no Mr. rattlesnake if I do you are going to bite me...he begged and he begged with the bull and finally the bull gave in and he told the rattlesnake to crawl up on his back and he carried him out. When he got out of the fire the rattlesnake rattled to get ready to bite the bull. The bull said to him, Mr. rattlesnake you said you weren't going to bite. He said I was in the fire then.

I said that to say this, all of us seem to be in a little bit of fire now and we are going to say a lot of things probably to try and get out of it. But I do think in consideration of the people that they could sleep better at night if they knew when you were going discuss tax issues. For that reason I think that we should give them this opportunity to know what is going to happen to them. What their future is going to be like. You can vote a tax on them and they don't know anything about it and then it's gone.

I heard some people in my community say the reason they voted against a lot of amendments and I want to tell you this...Because they thought it was taxes...they had voted once on taxes and they didn't know what they were voting on so they decided after they found out they had voted on taxes they wouldn't vote for nothing.

So let's make it kinda clear for them so that they will know that we are not trying to put taxes on them and let's support this amendment.

Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Bollinger Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I have been informed that in the last twenty years there have been four special sessions called for the purpose of taxation. This in my opinion is not regular. This...it could be construed may be emergencies and if so, they are fine. However, I think the people need the protection of this provision. Many people think that this is a move by the good government people.

What the [...] is wrong with good government? No one can question the policy of good government. It has been stated over and over again that the nineteen twenty one constitution is much too long.

I'm not here for the sake of shortening the constitution. I'm here for the sake of writing a new one. One that protects the people if that is what it takes. And no matter how long it's going to have to be to protect the people that's the length it should be.

I ask your support of this amendment.

[Previous Question Ordered.]

Closing

Mr. Stinson Members of the convention, I would like to hurriedly point up about two matters. Now brother Stovall said that we should leave it up to the Revenue and Taxation Committee. I don't consider this as an infringement because this is in the legislative article of the present constitution and the legislative bodies should naturally follow what is in the present article No. 3 of our constitution. So it is not an infringement on that honorable committee.

Next, there is according to the department of administration and the governor there is no need of taxes at the present time.

If the present need develops within the next year the next session is an even numbered year and taxes can be voted at that time. We will not in any way be tying down the present administration. This is certainly not an anti-administration measure against any administration. This is an amendment for the people.

Mr. Warren, I did appreciate your story, and Senator De Blieux we have been friends since we were in law school. Don't get on our back here.

Thank you.

I would appreciate your vote on this and the people will thank you and know that you are helping them.

17th Days Proceedings—July 19, 1973

Questions

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Stinson, if you are trying to limit the time when the legislature could pass taxes wouldn't it make a lot more sense if you had an amendment that stated that taxes could be passed only during the regular session during even years?

Mr. Stinson Well, it's just a matter of words. We would have the same meaning, I believe Mr. De Blieux. Would you vote for it if it was worded that way?

Mr. De Blieux Another question. Yes.

Isn't it a fact that if you don't do that you absolutely leave it to the governor at the time that he wanted to call a session of the legislature for the passing of taxes?

Mr. Stinson He would have the right under this, Mr. De Blieux.

We are not trying to tie the hands of any governor or any legislature under the... I believe it is going to be passed by a majority of the legislature can call that. We are not in any way trying to tie the hands.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment passed: 66-50. Motion to reconsider tabled. Section B of paragraph 2 reread.]

Explanation

Mr. Blair Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this particular part of Section 2 the B part we had a unanimous vote. I am committed in this matter with two members being absent. Your main change at the present time in the constitution calls for a two-thirds vote for the legislature to call itself in session. This comes with a majority of the members of each house by the presiding officer of both houses. One other little change... we tied it I think a little tighter than what the objects are. We use object... or objects instead of subject matter and we think that we have tightened that a little better... we still have... we have worked with the Executive Committee. We have given you five days time for the legislators to have before they come into the session. That's your main differences.

I ask for the approval, Mr. Chairman.

Vice Chairman Miller in the Chair

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Amendments proposed by Delegate Juneau to the Committee propose as follows:
Amendment No. 1. On page 2, line 11 strike out the word "request" and insert in lieu thereof the word "petition".

Amendment No. 2. On page 2, line 13 immediately after the words and punctuation "houses", and before the words "the governor" on line 13, insert the following: "such petition shall be in such form as shall be provided by law or the rules of the two houses".

Explanation

Mr. Juneau I am advised that the amendment in question is being taken out. I might add that this is not a substantive amendment it is more in the nature of a clarification. As you will note as we came out of committee we used the word written request. It was the thinking of most of us that this was a rather loose language and would be something that would be subject to interpretation. In order to tighten that language what we did was to insert in lieu thereof the word petition. And say that the petition would be provided for by statute.

For example, if one hundred and five members of the legislature wrote into the Speaker of the House of Representatives indicating that they wanted one particular subject taken up. Even though it might be one hundred and thirty-two different subjects under the language as we now have it. It is conceivable then that it would be left to the speaker as to which items he would take up for the proclamation call. I don't think that the speaker would want that prerogative and we wouldn't want to give it to him. The thrust of it is, that the legislature itself by a mechanical and meticulous statute could provide for the mechanics by which this petition would be circulated.

It was the thinking that that kind of language does not belong in the constitution but this amendment would allow for that latitude.

I would move for the favorable adoption of the amendment.

Questions

Mr. Flory Mr. Juneau, my question is, your reasoning behind the line for the rules of the two houses that would make such provision when in all possibility and probability it could be that the rules of the two houses would be different.

Mr. Juneau Well, the thrust of the thing behind the provision as written that it was of necessity. I think Mr. Flory would require a joint rule between the two houses.

Sir, I didn't understand your question.

Mr. Flory I realize that what your intentions are that they be the same or be a joint rule and I don't know of any joint rules that they now have or could have. Because each house governs its own rule. My only question to you is, I think it should be provided for in the law and not left to discretion of rules whereby they can both have different sets of rules on how to provide it rather than a uniform system whereby if you provided it in the law. Wouldn't that be more appropriate than allowing it either in the law or in the rules.

Mr. Juneau I don't have any particular quarrel with that, Mr. Flory and I agree with you the intent... as I indicated is to keep uniformity. The reason why I put the rules because I just thought that would give some latitude. If the delegates think that would not achieve that purpose I would have no objection to leaving the provision as provided by law. Which would put it in the statute.

With the leave of the convention, we would like to have leave to withdraw the amendment. Refile the amendment with the deletion after the word law... insert therein a period and delete the words "or the rules of the two houses".

So if there would be any question with regard to the uniformity I think that would take care of it and it would be handled by statute alone.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter If there is no objection, we won't go through the process of re-xeroxing. The amendment would read:
On page 2, line 13, right before the sentence that begins "the governor" insert the sentence... "such petition shall be in such forms as shall be provided by law".

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment reread and adopted without objection.]

Mrs. Miller Are there further amendments on that, Mr. Clerk?

Mr. Blair I believe we had a question, Mrs. Acting Chairman, Mr. Anzalone

Mrs. Miller Mr. Anzalone had a question of you, Mr. Blair.

Questions

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Blair and the Executive Department Committee, we took under consideration the call of a special session by the governor. One of the contested issues in the discussion of this committee was the issuance of a proclamation by the governor for a period of not less than five days before the legislature actually met. And, then came up the question of changing the subject matter of the proclamation before the legislature actually went into session. Is it the intent of the article as written by the legislative committee to allow the governor to change the subject matter of the proclamation after the five day period?

Mr. Blair It stands corrected but it is the intention of our committee that he would have to name the subject matter within the call of the five days, and there would not be a change.

Mr. Anzalone He would not be able to change the subject matter after, or prior to, a five days, within five days, you would have to get that much notice.

Mr. Blair Correct.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendments offered by Mr. Jenkins. Amendment No. 1 - On page 2, line 13, immediately after the period and before the word "the" insert the following: "however, any proposal to call or convene a special session of the legislature within thirty days prior to the convening of any regular, annual session or within thirty days after the adjournment sine die of any session, shall require the consent of three-fourths of the elected members of each House."

Mr. Jenkins, with your leave and that of the convention, I think the amendment technically now, since the previous amendment, on page 2, line 13, immediately after the period, before the word "the" and after the language inserted by the Juneau amendment, insert the following.

Explanation

Mr. Jenkins Mr. Chairman, delegates to the convention, because of a number of different factors that have convened under the provisions that we have adopted, sort of a hiccup in the proposal that we have that would allow year round meetings of the legislature on a continuous basis, and this amendment is an attempt to cure that defect. We have now the proposals in the first session dealing with the fact that the legislature shall be a continuous body. Then in Sub-section B of Section 2 we have the provision that a mere majority of the elected members rather than two-thirds can call a special session. And then we have the omission of the provision in our current law providing that a special session cannot be called within thirty days before or after sessions, at least in odd numbered years now, so that you can see that it would be possible if merely a majority of the legislature wanted to continue in session or the governor wanted to continue in session year round, indefinitely, it would be possible. There is nothing in the law whatsoever that would prevent that so the purpose of this particular provision is this, it is to say that, that thirty days before any session, or thirty days after any session, you can't call a special session. That is the only thing that it does, and I think that this will give us some protection so that we don't have continuous sessions. I don't think that's our intent at all, so I move it's adoption.

Further Discussion

Mr. Blair Madam Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, we object to this, in the present constitution it is the odd years that cause this at the present time, but in your even years, our sixty day sessions, we have nothing to prohibit us from calling a special session. We would like for it to go as we had it because we think that it would give us a little more latitude to work with. We ask you to vote these down if you will.

Questions

Mr. Avant Mr. Blair, I notice in the present constitution, the provisions for the legislature to call itself into a special session requires a two-thirds vote of the legislature.

Mr. Blair That is correct.

Mr. Avant The committee has changed that now to provide a machinery whereby the legislature may convene itself in a special session by a simple majority petition?

Mr. Blair That is correct.

Mr. Avant And I would ask you, Sir, would you briefly explain the reason to me for that proposed change.

Mr. Blair We felt that the committee...one of the main things we would like to have three strong bodies, your Executive body, your Legislative body and your Judicial body, and this was just a means of giving the legislature a little more strength, Sir. That was the feeling of the committee.

Mr. Avant But the...in connection with Mr. Jenkins amendment, the provisions that you cited that there was no limitations on the special session following a regular session has to be construed in the light of the two-thirds vote, does it not, Sir?

Mr. Blair That's true.

Mr. Avant That's required?

Mr. Blair As I understand it here, if I understand his amendment correctly, he has put in the restrictions on both of our annual sessions now where we did not have the restrictions in our sixty day session as we are working now.

Mr. Avant Thank you, Mr. Blair.

Further Discussion

Mr. Roy Madam Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I believe we are going to get on that merry-go-round that I have been on somewhat with Woody with the Bill of Rights, where we come in we say that we are for an independent legislature. We fight for four or five days on that exact point. We finally passed Senator Rayburn's Amendment which I thought was good, we turn right around and get eased into that situation where we say, well now, even though we require two-thirds vote to raise taxes, you legislators, we are not going to let you take anything up of a tax nature without requiring a two-thirds vote. We just passed this other amendment that was successfully proposed by Woody and Mr. Flory, et al. Now we come back here and as Senator Blair pointed out not only do you increase from two-thirds to three-fourths the ability to call a special session, but he has even worded this amendment to where it is done in a regular session year, not an odd numbered year where you can't take up taxes, as we've just done. The other thing is that we are going back in the same route that I think is contrary, at least of what I believe I thought was the issue in our state government, the lack of independence on the part of the legislature because of the Executive branch being so much more powerful. We are now asked to say that if you need to take up a tax matter in a special session, even in an even numbered year, you must require three-fourths vote of the legislature. I am opposed to it, if we have the skill and I know it will obtain the two-thirds vote to raise taxes, I am opposed to that as a matter of philosophy because I believe in the majority rule, but I know that the people who generally benefit from taxes are those who really need it are going to be up in arms if they hear that we have taken out the two-thirds vote for the assessment of a tax. So I am going to stick with that. I can't tell you that right now that is how I feel. But we are going further now. We say now that we want a three-fourths vote to call a special session to consider a tax when the legislature itself, at any time, ought to be able to convene itself on a simple majority vote. We are still going to have the two-thirds vote to consider the tax or to assess it. I just see that we are going against what we said we had believed in and what we said and what we have in fact done in the last few days. We are once again making the legislature the whipping boy, the whipping boy of state government. The people disagreed with anything. We are always jump on the legislature and say they are raising your taxes. I am opposed to this amendment. I think it is a sneaky amendment because I think it requires a three-fourths vote at all times, but I am opposed to it even as it stands if you would take out the regular sessions three-fourths requirements. I think the legislature ought to be able to call itself into special session on a simple majority vote if you have any heat you want to put on them about a matter that's coming up, go ahead and put it on them. If they convene all year round and try to get around being a continuous body then you vote them out, but I think the amendment is bad. I am against it.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

Mr. Jenkins Mr. Chairman, delegates to the convention, I know that it was unintentional but delegate Roy misrepresented what this amendment does. It does not require a three-fourths vote to call a special session, that's not what this does at all. Under the proposal proposed by the legislative committee and this does not change it, it is simply, a majority could call an even numbered session. The only thing this deals with is within thirty days before or thirty days after any regular or special session it would take a three-fourths vote of the membership in order to come back in session or stay in session. Now that's exactly the way it is now in odd numbered years, it's not changed any. Now Senator Blair said but in even numbered years, that's not the case, well that's true there's no limitation in even numbered years on staying in continuous session but in even numbered years now, it takes a two-thirds vote to go into special session. Where as under the proposal proposed by the Legislative Committee it is merely a majority to come into a special session, or stay in one, so what this is attempting to do is not to limit the ability to call special sessions at all. It will still be by a majority vote at any time for taxes or anything else, but, within thirty days before or after any other session you could not call without three-fourths of the members, and if you have an emergency or something you say, I believe back in the Davis administration you had cases of the legislature staying in continuous session and this is not a healthy situation when that occurs, when a simple majority can do that because there is always bills pending, there is always something that somebody would like to pass if he could just stay over another week or three days, and there needs to be some cutoff date, so that's all this attempts to do. I urge the adoption. Also, one other point I want to make is that it's been said that this makes the governor, that this amendment makes the governor stronger, that's not true. Without this amendment, the governor is stronger than he is under the present constitution, because without this amendment under the proposal by the legislative committee, the governor can call a special session immediately at the adjournment of any regular session even in odd numbered years, and that would not be true under this amendment, it will still take a three-fourths vote as now in odd numbered years. So, I urge the adoption of this amendment.

Questions

Mr. Blair Woody, in essence wouldn't you be restricting the legislature for almost five months, didn't we agree on 85 days, then you would have thirty days prior to this regular session and thirty days afterwards so you're tying the hands of the legislature with a three-fourths vote for almost five months, isn't that true, if your amendment passes?

Mr. Jenkins No, that's not correct at all. It would be for thirty days before and thirty days after, that's two months, not five months, and that would mean that you couldn't get any more bills in early and you couldn't stay later. You would have to finish, unless three-fourths of the members think that it's important enough to stay. That's the way the present law is in odd numbered years.

Mr. Blair In your odd years, your amendment just a few minutes ago limited to where we could not have the taxes argued, wouldn't you be in the odd years limited to some five months?

Mr. Jenkins No, you would be in session for three months or almost three months under Rayburn's proposal then the rest of the year except for a two month period you could have special sessions at any time and you could even during those two months, if you have three-fourths of the members agreeing to it. Just like the present law.

Mr. Roy Woody, do I understand that what you're saying is that if the legislature is in session and there is need to continue on, on something that is of real significance, you would have a three-fourths vote to go beyond the sine die. Is that right?

Mr. Jenkins That's right. That's so we won't have continuous sessions of the legislature...

Mr. Roy I understand.

Mr. Jenkins I don't think this body is for that.

Mr. Roy All right.

Mr. Jenkins Well you see we might as well not have limitations at all built into the session length if a simple majority of the legislature can keep things going, because a simple majority is what it would take anyway to keep going if we had unlimited sessions.

Mr. Roy All right, but then what could happen, is that you couldn't get the three-fourths vote to keep it going, but one month later fifty percent plus one could come back and call the special session and you'd have all the trouble and all the expense of going back into special session on something that could have been finished in maybe two or three days with an extension of the current regular session. Isn't that correct?

Mr. Jenkins Well I don't know what expense, great expense, additional that you are talking about, about coming back rather than staying. What would be the additional expense?

Mr. Roy But isn't that how it works? Say if you wait thirty days it only takes fifty percent plus one to call the special session that would maybe last another month, that you could have covered everything when it was hot and ready to be handled with just a majority vote saying let's go one or two extra weeks. Isn't that in essence what would happen?

Mr. Jenkins That's right, it would take a majority vote later. So let me emphasize once again because this is the key point. We've spent all this time discussing session lengths, how many days a year we should meet, if we had put no limitations at all on the constitution, the session length would have been determined by simple majority vote. Majority wanted to stay, you'd stay, if they didn't, they wouldn't. But in fact, unless we adopt an amendment like this or some other restriction, that's all it would be anyway, because a special session can be called right at the end of the regular session for an unlimited period of time. So in order to validate what we have already done, in order to make sure we have what we've already done, we have to have a limitation of this nature. Otherwise, a simple majority can keep it going indefinitely year round.

Mr. Roemer Woody, what's the law now in the regular session years, and in the thirty day session years now, in regards to special sessions?

Mr. Jenkins All right, the law right now is, during odd numbered years, just what we're saying here. No special session can be called within thirty days before or after without three-fourths of the membership agreeing. Now, in both odd numbered and even numbered years, you can have special sessions called by a three-fourths vote, so in even numbered years... I am sorry, by a two-thirds vote... so even in even numbered years now within thirty days before or after it takes a two-thirds vote to call a special session. So it's really keeping things essentially like they are and making sure that we don't have continuous sessions unless, I argue...

Mr. Roemer What about outside that thirty days prior to and immediately after the session? What's the law now?

Mr. Jenkins The law is two-thirds.

Mr. Roemer The law is two-thirds now. Now as I understand the committee recommendation, or at least the recommendation as it stands prior to your amendment, that's reduced to a simple majority?

Mr. Jenkins That's correct.

Mr. Roemer So at anytime, is it your understanding that under the committee's proposal, the legislature can vote itself into special session with fifty percent plus one, at any time?

Mr. Jenkins That's correct. Even at the end of their regular session they can just keep going and at the end of that special session they can keep going so that they go year round.

Mr. Roemer But what I don't understand is why doesn't your amendment address itself not only to the thirty days immediately prior to and immediately following the session, but all the rest of the time that we're standing naked.

Mr. Jenkins Well now, it does from this standpoint, Buddy, it says before and after. It says before any regular session or after any session. You can't have a special session within thirty days without a three-fourths vote. So at the end of any special session unless you have three-fourths of the members agreeing, you can't meet for another thirty days, so it does pertain to year round, although the main thrust, of course, would be during a regular session. I think that the thing to really consider is the whole impact of what we passed, unless we want a continuous, year round session, we have to have this.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected: 32-83. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment proposed by Delegate Jenkins, being passed out now, to Committee Proposal No. 3 by Mr. Blair et al, amending the reprinted as engrossed proposal

Amendment No. 1 on page 2, line 12, immediately before the words "of the" delete the words "a majority" and insert in lieu thereof the words "two-thirds."

Explanation

Mr. Jenkins Mr. Chairman and delegates to the convention, I would not have offered this amendment had the other one passed because I would have liked to have seen the majority in there with that other limitation. But since it didn't, I just feel compelled to offer it. Now we should consider what we've done before, say you could have sixty calendar days, sixty legislative days a meeting within eighty-five calendar days. The rest of what we say is that by a simple majority a special session can then be called. That means when the majority of the members want to stay in session at the end of that eighty-five days they can, and they can stay in without limitation as to duration. They can stay in thirty days, of course, at the end of the thirty days they call another thirty day session, that's a limitation if any. Now what this amendment simply does then is to call a special session, will take a two-thirds vote of the members in order to call a special session. So that means you, under this, you will have some restrictions on having year round sessions. You could have year round unlimited session but it would take two-thirds of the members agreeing thereto. There needs to be some limitation on this otherwise the four, or five consecutive days that we've spent discussing this whole matter is absolutely meaningless, absolutely meaningless, unless we adopt some limitation of this nature, because the simple majority can decide to stay in session just as they would if we had no limitation at all on legislative sessions, so for that reason, I urge the adoption of this amendment. It simply changed majority to two-thirds.

Questions

Mr. Avant I think that you and I have the same understanding of the situation as it now exists, but I want to make sure that we do. Do you agree that the situation as it now exists, without the adoption of this amendment or some other amendment, is simply this; that the legislature by a simple majority vote can keep itself in perpetual session, 365 days a year, every year?

Mr. Jenkins There is no doubt about that. There can be no other interpretation of the proposal other than that and there would have been no point in putting this provision in there. We might as well have said that the legislature shall meet annually as provided by law. It is the same thing unless we have some limitation on it. Because that is all it would have taken, would have been a vote to keep the session going under such provision.

Mr. Toomy The amendment that we adopted previously that in odd numbered years, no new measures in regard to new taxes or increasing taxes will be introduced or enacted. Wouldn't the way the committee proposal is written presently, allow the majority vote to bring the legislature into special session, allow for the introduction or enactment of these special taxes during this session that there was so much fear about previously?

Mr. Jenkins You are absolutely right. You see, what would happen, we would have a sixty day session in odd numbered years, we cannot increase taxes. But right at the end of that, if the majority wanted to stay in session, they could call a special session, and in a period of five or six days, they could pass taxes in that special session, right at the end of an odd numbered year session. So without this, we defeat the real purpose of that other amendment. You are absolutely right.

Mr. Roy Wouldn't it still require a two-thirds vote to assess those taxes?

Mr. Jenkins Well yes, it sure would. If we keep that same provision, I assume we will.

Mr. Roy Are you really concerned that the legislature will in some way attempt to keep itself in perpetual session for more money or anything like that? Is that a concern?

Mr. Jenkins It is not so much for more money, but here is the thing, Chris, if you look at other states where they have had unlimited sessions, then look at how long they meet. They meet most of the year. They meet 120 or more days a year, because work expands to fill the time available. We always have bills laying over. We always have bill that haven't come up yet, they haven't had committee meetings, because they were low on the priority of the various legislators. They want those bills, sure, but they don't want to hear them. They have no other legislation. All it would take would be 53 members in the House and 20 in the Senate to say, oh well, we've still got a few little bills we want to consider, so they just keep going and keep going and keep going until they do that. It would cost the taxpayers of this state a lot in additional legislation regulation interference with their private lives as well as the cost of such sessions.

Mr. Roy You keep raising other states and I wonder if you have ever addressed yourself to the question of whether their staying in session for longer periods of time has been beneficial or not. Are you able to answer us that? Because that is the issue to me, is it beneficial for the state, and if it is then what's the gripe?

Mr. Jenkins Well, that would have to be a subjective question and answer in both cases. There is no way I can answer that, Chris, but I know this, that it will certainly tend to attract a different, and I don't think a better, sort of person to serve in the legislature. It will attract people who will make their living from being in politics, who will be in Baton Rouge maybe more than they would be at home, who would lose contact with their people. This is what happens in Washington and that is why I think the Congress has so far drifted from the people in many instances because they are not sitting with the people, they are there in Washington in that insulated environment, and I feel that we might have a situation like that. It is certainly not inconceivable.

Mr. Roy Well, if that is the issue then, by a few more votes, if we assume that that is what legislators may be interested in, additional per diems or additional salary, then what is the difference between fifty percent plus one and two-thirds. Really, if you are going ascribe to the legislature the notion that these folks are going to be trying to make a living out of it instead of doing what's best for the people.

Mr. Jenkins That wasn't the only basis upon which this proposal was set forward so I am not going to be tied to that. But I don't know what future legislators will be like or what they will do. I certainly think and hope that they will be good men and do by their best, but I think the intention of this convention is to limit sessions to sixty day, legislative days or calendar days or something. I think that is the intent of this convention unless there are extraordinary circumstances, and, unwittingly I think, the proposal of the committee is such that we have not really limited them to that at this point. That is why we need some limitation to make sure that the majority can't keep it going from day to day, year in and year out.

Mr. Derbes As I understand the further provisions of Section B, any special session of the legislature called by a majority of the delegates would have to declare the purpose and purposes of the special session, would have to provide the specific number of days for which the special session is called, and in the event the special session exceeded the number of days or exceeded the purposes for which it was called, any legislation passed therein would be null. Isn't that correct?

Mr. Jenkins That is correct, but at the end of that thirty days all they have to do is call another special session and there is not limit to the number of itemized proposals or limitations that could be included. I think in our last special session we had something like 25 or 28, you could have a hundred, you could have any number, and I am sure what would happen you could just have each different bill listed as one of the subject matters to be continued. But notice that there is no limitation in here to tacking on another thirty days to any special session that is called. You just keep on with your thirty days on top of thirty days under the way this thing is set up right now.

Mr. Derbes That is correct, but you seem to convey the impression that the legislature can just casually do this on a continuing basis and I merely want to clarify what I believe the intent of Section B is and that is to specify the number of days for which an additional special session will be called and to set forth the purposes of that special session. So we agree on that.

Mr. Jenkins We agree. That is no practical limitation though is what I am saying.

Mr. Derbes Well I believe that it is a practical limitation, although I...but I am only questioning you and I won't take the convention's time. Thank you.

Mr. Duval Mr. Jenkins, your amendment that passed in reference to the odd number years, it didn't pass by a two-thirds vote. Don't you think it should have had a two-thirds vote to pass?

Mr. Jenkins No, I don't. I don't see any relevance between calling a special session and passing something in here.

Further Discussion

Mr. Burson I speak in favor of this amendment for one simple reason. It is a matter of principle. If you wanted to establish an all powerful government, then all you would need to do really is to set yourself up a king. If you wanted to establish an all powerful legislature, then all you would have to do is say that the legislature can meet whenever they want to. Now, we haven't done that. In fact, this convention overwhelmingly rejected a measure which would have done that in effect. We have in our constitution at the present time a scheme which permits the legislature to meet for ninety days in a two year period of time. The constitution calls for a special session by the legislators and has the three-quarters proposal within thirty days which Mr. Jenkins has proposed and was rejected. Now, we have already gone for 120 days which adds 25 percent to the time that the legislature will meet. We have removed the fiscal session limitation and the limitation regarding the taxes is not the same thing by any manner of means. Now we are being asked to remove an additional limitation and permit by simply fifty percent plus one call a special session any time that majority of the legislature wants it. I submit to you ladies and gentlemen we should not forget while we are here with grandiose schemes of government, that the same people who have lived under the constitution that I set up the other scheme for the last fifty-odd years are the same people that elected us to come here to represent them. I submit to you the people of the state of Louisiana are not noted for their love for radical changes in government. I think giving the 25 percent more legislature already suits a step forward in increasing the power of the legislature and it may be a little more than they want to permit. The possibility which is clearly evident here as far as I am concerned of having continuous legislative sessions, because you have already adopted language which says that the legislature is a continuing body. You are going to be asked to adopt language here a little bit further which sets out a whole number of things that the legislative committees can do, including reporting bills out. Now, somewhere along the line I think before we leap from the restrictions inherent in the system that we've worked under, some of which I disagree with, such as the fiscal session, into something that would very much resemble what I can see, a Congress of the state of Louisiana, I think we had better stop and remember that when we get finished with our schemes here a majority of the people of the state of Louisiana have to approve this. I submit to you that I don't believe that they are going to be quite as concerned with words like flexibility and so on as they will be over what can be done to us, and I don't think it is a question of distrust of the legislature. I think our people have a healthy cynicism about government in general, not just legislative government, executive government, judicial government or any other kind of government that interferes with their day to day lives and operations. If we are going to increase their dose of medicine, let's not give them more than they can stand here at one sitting. I ask you to support this amendment. It keeps the law like it is and while we are changing a lot of things, let's not change everything.

Questions

Mr. Toomy Delegate Burson, without the adoption of this amendment would not it provide for the same amendment which you referred to earlier which read, the legislature shall meet in regular annual sessions as provided by law?

Mr. Burson As far as I can see, it would make that a clear possibility.

Mr. Toomy And you understand that amendment was defeated 15 to 96 in this convention.

Mr. Burson Yes sir.

Further Discussion

Mr. Blair Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, we oppose this amendment. It just comes down simply to this, do you want a strong independent legislature or do you want a real super strong governor, or what not. Let's suppose the legislature wanted to call itself in session in an extraordinary session, the governor, with his two-thirds vote, could stop it with a mere fourteen men in the Senate, and do you think that's fair? Give us some room, give the governor his powers, but don't keep tying our hands, let us have some room to work. I urge you to defeat this amendment.

Questions

Mr. Flory Senator Blair, you said I think twice now, that your committee was for a strong three branches of government, the legislative, executive and judiciary. Are you suggesting that we have three strong arms of government and a weak public?

Mr. Blair No I'm not, Mr. Flory, and you know I don't mean that, but at the same time why keep the legislature weak and give the governor power out of 144 members to let him control whether or not you can have a special session with fourteen men. I don't think that's right. And if you vote for this, you are giving the governor that much power.

Mr. Roy Senator Blair, I am going to do like Justice Tate who says this is a friendly question when he questions you from the bench, but isn't it a fact that in 1921 when Mr. Burson was referring to the constitution of the state of Louisiana that we presently have that the budget was about 2.1 million dollars, and didn't you just this past session go into a 2.1 billion dollar budget?

Mr. Blair That is true.

Mr. Roy And all we have done is give you 25 percent more time within which to deal with something of that magnitude when you are dealing with about a thousand percent more money, I think. Is that about right?

Mr. Blair I would think you are right, Mr. Roy, yes.

Mr. Roy Wouldn't you think that the fact that the people of this state...do you agree with Mr. Burson that the people of Louisiana are never for any change and that this would be a radical change just to give 25 percent more days of legislating?

Mr. Blair Mr. Roy, I would have to disagree with the fact that you are doing that. I definitely would, I would have to disagree with that.

Mr. Fulco Don't you agree that in reference to Delegate Flory's question about the weak public, that by making...defeating this amendment and having an equally powerful legislature that the legislative body is a true representative of the people and not necessarily a weak people?

Mr. Blair I don't believe we have any weak people, our voters or legislature either one.

Mr. Fulco But the legislative body represents the people, isn't that right?

Mr. Blair That's correct and this body is closer to the people than anyone. I am not worried about the present governor or the next governor or the next, but what about way down the line, maybe you had an extreme emergency and you couldn't come in session because he had to control it over a minority of fourteen people out of one hundred and forty-four.

Further Discussion

Mr. Fontenot Fellow delegates, I rise in opposition to this amendment and I'll take a little bit of your time to give you my idea of what, of a little bit of philosophy right here. If we change this statement from a majority to a two-thirds vote, I think somehow we are losing sight of the democratic processes. I was taught the democratic process was that the majority would rule. I think this is creating a bad precedent by creating a super majority. Whenever somebody gets up here and says right now I trust the legislature but in a couple of years maybe the legislature can be made up of people that are not responsive to the people or don't agree with the people, such statements as this I think you are losing sight of your democratic and the makeup of your government. The people back home, like take your representative district control, I want a representative and a senator to represent...these people are the spokesmen for this group of people, so when you are talking about the legislature, actually you are talking about the people. When you say I don't trust the legislature, you are saying I don't trust the people, because the legislature is the people. So why should you create a super majority. You are creating a bad precedent every-time somebody gets up here and his word says a majority, they are going to try to substitute two-thirds for it. I don't think it is right. I think the majority ought to control and I think that if a majority of the legislature thinks they ought to go into a regular or extend special session, I think a majority ought to control. Now, concerning...you might say that well why do you need a two-thirds vote for taxing purposes. I see an inconsistency there, but I can argue that for taxing purposes maybe you need a little extra protection, but I don't feel like you ought to create a super majority for everything that the legislature does, and for the reason I don't want to start creating a bad precedent right here today that will carry on into the deliberations of this convention from now on until January. For this reason I am going to oppose this amendment and I think we ought to let the legislature decide by a simple majority. And, when I say let the legislature, I'm meaning let the people decide, because the people are the ones who choose these legislators and the legislature has to answer to the people.

Questions

Mr. Toomy Mr. Fontenot, you mention how much you trust the legislators, but I do not, but I want to know would you clarify to what extent you do. Do you think that we should have a majority vote on tax increases new taxes?

Mr. Fontenot This is just what I just tried to say. I can justify two-thirds vote for tax increases because taxing provisions are something that are so dear to the hearts of the people in the state that I think maybe a little added protection, in that particular case, is needed. It's almost arbitrary, but I think politically speaking you... it has to be done; whereas I can't justify it for calling a session or any other purpose that the legislature is trying to... any other job the legislature is trying to do.

Mr. Toomy Well, are those not the same legislators that you are talking about that you trust on one issue and you don't trust on another issue?

Mr. Fontenot That's right, they are, but I'm saying that the taxing issue is a lot dearer to the people's heart than all these other issues whereas I feel like the protection of the two-thirds vote on the taxing issues is just absolutely needed. It is inconsistent, I agree with that, but I think the inconsistency is because we have to protect our people on taxing provisions. That's the only justification I have for it.

If I'm in order Mr. Chairman, I move the previous question.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

Mr. Jenkins Mr. Chairman, delegates, of course the only thing this does is to change the words "a majority" to "two-thirds". But the impact of it is to protect everything that we've been here debating and discussing for the last four or five convention days. Frankly, I didn't come prepared to debate the merits or demerits of a year-round legislature, because I thought the delegates here were already convinced that a year-round session was not in the best interests of the people of this state. Suffice it to say, that the people would not tolerate year-round sessions of the legislature, and I really don't think by our past votes that we want year-round sessions, either. But the mechanism exists right here unless we adopt this amendment. In essence, year-round sessions of the legislature. We've already said it will be a continuous body, and now we say by a simple majority it can have a special session. Not after a thirty day delay after a regular, but right at the end of a regular session, including those in odd numbered years that are supposed to forbid taxes. And at the end of the special session the majority can simply call another special session for thirty days. The legislature, under this, can stay in session for as long as it wants to. Many people have said that we need to increase the power of the legislature, and there is no one more concerned than I am about the disparity in power, particularly between the executive and legislative branches. I fear that when we attempt to level-out the power among the various branches, though, that we might succeed in doing something quite different. And that's tremendously increasing the overall power of government. If we don't... if we keep the level of power of the governor the same, and the judiciary the same and we simply tremendously increase the power of the legislative branch, the overall effect is going to be to tremendously increase the overall power of government. Let's increase the power of the legislature, at the same time decreasing the power, maybe, of the executive branch. But we need some limitations. We have trust in the legislature, but not complete, total trust, to the extent that we're willing to abdicate our responsibility, and let them meet year-round. I don't think we feel that way. Let's simply provide that, as we have in the past, a special session can be called by a two-thirds vote of the membership not by a mere majority. I'd hate to see us have a situation like we had during the period of sixty to sixty-four when we had a special session meeting on segregation matters for, I think, about sixty days continuously in special session. Of course two thirds agreed then, but it's harder to get two-thirds than a majority. Let's make sure that it's something that a substantial number of the legislature really wants and will agree to, so that we won't have year-round sessions. So I urge your adoption of this amendment.

Questions

Mr. Casey Mr. Jenkins, I can certainly understand some of the arguments that you are setting forth, but would not, under your proposal if adopted, then permit the governor to have more control over the legislature to make the legislature a less independent body and thereby permit the governor, who may have some control, for instance in the Senate, by obtaining the consent of ten senators under your proposal rather than fourteen senators under the proposal as it exists to prohibit the calling of a special session of the legislature by itself. So therefore, would not the governor have more control under your proposal?

Mr. Jenkins I don't think your figures are correct at all. It simply keeps the system the same. It keeps a two-thirds vote required. It would take fourteen to prevent it, just as now. There's there's no question of ten being involved, I don't think.

Mr. Casey You're correct. My figures are wrong, but would not it take fewer senators to prevent a calling of a special session under your proposal than under the proposal as it exists right now? Is that not correct?

Mr. Jenkins That's correct, Tom, and let me say this: I know that you and many others would like to see year-round sessions of the legislature, because you've advocated in committee and on the floor, and I certainly respect your right to do this, but what I'm saying is I don't want this to get in the back door. I think that we've already pretty well agreed that we don't want year-round sessions of the legislature and yet if we don't adopt such a mechanism we can have the possibility, indeed perhaps the probability that they will occur.

Mr. Casey Well, first of all, if you'll yield to another question with the permission of the chair is it not correct, Mr. Jenkins, that I have not advocated year-round sessions of the legislature... that I have merely advocated the possibility, initially, that if the legislature were permitted by law to establish legislative sessions... that they would set up the mechanics in the period of time. That is not me advocating year-round sessions, first of all. Is that not correct that I have merely advocated a different method...

Mr. Jenkins I think you're right. I'm sorry. I didn't mean to misrepresent your position. But I do think that the debate has come around to that point, whether or not we want the possibility of year-round sessions. We'd appreciate your favorable vote on this amendment.

[Amendment rejected: 37-15. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment Number 1 [By Mr. Abraham]. On page 2, line 16, after the word and period "session," delete the remainder of the line, or the sentence, it says Amendment Number 2. On page 2, delete all of lines 17 through 24 in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof, the following: "The proclamation shall state the specific subjects to be considered, the date and time the legislature is to convene and the number of days for which the legislature is convened. The subject matter of the session may be amended by proclamation to the legislature until 48 hours prior to the hour in which the legislature convenes. The power to legislate under the penalty of nullity shall be limited to the subject specifically enumerated in the latest proclamation convening such extraordinary session."

17th Days Proceedings—July 19, 1973

The session shall be limited to the time named therein, and shall not exceed thirty days. The governor may convene the legislature in extraordinary session without prior notice or proclamation on occasions of public emergencies caused by epidemics, attacks by the enemy, or public catastrophe.

Explanation

Mr. Abraham This amendment is brought up now on behalf of the Committee on the Executive Branch, and the reason I bring it up now is in order to bring this thing before the convention in the executive branch article, we have a provision for extraordinary session which allows the governor to call the legislature into extraordinary session. And we track it along the same lines of the existing constitution and the language is essentially the same as that proposed by the Committee on Legislative Branch with one exception. In the course of our discussions, it was brought out that many times a legislator or someone will have a subject that he would like brought up in a special session. And he will not ask for a special session himself. Once the special session is called, he would like to have the opportunity of submitting his subject matter. So, what this does, it's the same as essentially, as the one presented by the legislative article, except that it gives them a three day period in which the subject matter can be amended. That anyone wishing to have something added to it has within 48 hours of the time the legislature convenes to get his subject matter included...and that is the basic difference here, and, of course, the last paragraph and...what we've done here is repeated the exact language in the executive article that allows the governor to convene the legislature in extraordinary session without prior notice in public emergencies and so forth. Now, the reason we bring this up now is so that we can probably settle the issue now, rather than having to consider it now and then have the same thing come up in the executive article later.

Questions

Mr. Juneau Instead of having five days as is this provision originally enacted, in essence, you have provided that within two days a matter may be put on the agenda and brought to a special session. Therefore, limiting the time period that the public would know of a specific object until the limited time of two days before the session. Isn't that possible?

Mr. Abraham That's correct. It takes five days to call the session but the subject matter can be amended during a three day period and you cannot amend it after the 48 hours prior to the session.

Mr. Juneau Well then, in essence we might as well not have the five day provision, we might as well put it all down to two days, according to that amendment.

Mr. Abraham No it's still...you still have to have five days notice to call the thing. A couple of legislators said that we would like to have something considered, and we didn't feel that we should call a special session for it, but as long as the special session is going to be called, we'd like an opportunity to get our subject matter in.

Mr. Juneau Well, wasn't the object of having a time delay so that the people wouldn't get caught short on public notice and what we've done is reduce that notice time to two days according to that...

Mr. Abraham You've reduced it to two days, that's correct.

Mr. Fontenot If I understood you correctly, you said that some of this language was traced from the present constitution, is that right?

Mr. Abraham Yes, it sort of tracks the present constitution.

Mr. Fontenot OK, my question is concerning the second paragraph. Is this the exact wording of the present constitution?

Mr. Abraham No, are you talking about the same, where the governor may convene in times...

Mr. Fontenot Right.

Mr. Abraham Yes, this is something new. This is new.

Mr. Fontenot Could you give me some idea what is your definition of a public emergency.

Mr. Abraham Well, we've given examples, such attacks by the enemy, by epidemics, or public catastrophes.

Mr. Fontenot Would a public catastrophe in your words be like a hurricane or a tornado...

Mr. Abraham Hurricane, flood or something like that.

Mr. Fontenot How about a riot?

Mr. Abraham I don't think a riot is a public catastrophe, John.

Mr. Flory Mr. Abraham, my question relates to the first line in your amendment where you mention the proclamation. Let's assume for the sake of discussion that a majority of the legislators see fit to call themselves into special session. And the Speaker of the House and the President Pro Tempore of the Senate issue the call. Could you tell me what goes in the proclamation?

Mr. Abraham Normally what would go in the proclamation will be the specific subject to be considered, the date and time the legislature convenes and the number of days for which the legislature is convened.

Mr. Flory All right, then.

Mr. Abraham We spell that out.

Mr. Flory All right, let's assume then there is a hundred and forty-four members of the legislature who all vote for a special session provided each issue that they are concerned with is included in the call. Are you saying, then, that there is no limit to what could be put in the call?

Mr. Abraham Mr. Flory, there is no limit, right here, because if a majority wants to call a special session you could have the same thing...that a person says I will not agree to a special session unless I can get my subject matter into the call. This was brought up in previous discussion where you might have a hundred and thirty-two different things that wanted to...

Mr. Flory I'm just trying to understand the mechanics from those issuing the proclamation as to who makes the determination as to what goes in the call and what's included in the call. How does...

Mr. Abraham I would answer that by asking you a question...now.

Mr. Flory Well, it isn't in there, and would have thought that your amendment was attempting to clarify that.

Mr. Abraham Well, it was brought out in discussing this here, Mr. Flory, that there would have to be rules set up as to how the mechanics of these calls would be handled. I think Mr. Juneau brought that out. And I would assume that you would have to do the same thing under either case.

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Abraham, the second paragraph dealing with the governor may convene the legislature in extraordinary session without prior notice or proclamation on occasions of public emergencies caused by epidemics, attacks by the enemy, or public catastrophe; does not this take the words public emergencies and define them specifically to say that only an epidemic, attack by the enemy, or public catastrophe could be the reason for a call?

Mr. Abraham Yes, this is specific. This is... these are not examples. It says public emergencies caused by. So that limits it to these things.

Mr. Anzalone So it would prevent someone saying that something that was not a public emergency, not associated with these three things to be a reason for a call of the legislature.

Mr. Abraham That's correct.

Mr. Burson Mr. Abraham, I notice what I believe to be a difference and I wonder if you agree with me. The committee proposal says on line 24 that the special session shall never exceed thirty calendar days, whereas your proposal in the last line of the first paragraph says shall not exceed thirty days. Wouldn't that be different? In other words, it implies to me that maybe you could have a thirty legislative day session. It just doesn't say.

Mr. Abraham I don't know of any other way of measuring a day than by the calendar.

Mr. Burson Well, we have, of course...

Mr. Abraham A day is a twenty-four hour period, Jack.

Mr. Burson We have, of course, dealt with through-out discussion of legislative days on one hand and calendar days on the other. Isn't what you meant thirty calendar days, that's my question.

Mr. Abraham Well, that's correct, but in considering our article, we were never in the process of talking about legislative days. We were talking about calendar days.

Further Discussion

Mr. Blair Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention. We would like to divide the question. We have no objections to the last paragraph, but if you will notice he picks up language into... down to the first sentence and he should've inserted the subject matter of the session may be amended down to the end of that sentence. Then he picks up our same language again with the exception of calendar days. We'd much rather, since it's been brought out, the fact that we've been talking about legislative days and calendar days. So, I understand there's an amendment being prepared to take care of the last paragraph so to clear this I'd like to see, I'd urge you to defeat this one and come up with the other amendment, which we wouldn't have any objection to.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

Mr. Abraham No, I simply wanted to bring out the reason that this thing up now was not necessarily so... it's simply to bring the issue to you that we do have two proposals, and in order to save arguing over this thing twice, if this one passes then there's no point in us, in our legislative article, we are arguing the same issue again. So that's the only reason that this is brought up now.

[Amendment rejected: 11-92. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendments proposed by Mr. Denney. Amendment Number 1, on page 2 between lines 24 and 25 insert the following: "the governor may convene the legislature in extraordinary session without prior notice or proclamation on occasions of public emergencies caused by epidemics, attacks by the enemy, or public catastrophe."

Explanation

Mr. Denney This is the same as the last paragraph in the previous amendment in which you rejected and which could not be divided. The question on it could not be divided. Senator Blair says that the legislative committee has no objection to this. As I understand it, it was omitted because in the original section, in the original draft the legislative department there was no requirement of a five day notice. Therefore, this would have been unnecessary. When the five day notice was inserted and placed in their report, they overlooked the emergency situation and the purpose of this is merely to take care of emergencies as they are taken care of in the present constitution.

[Amendment adopted: 89-7. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 92-8. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Recess

[Quorum Call: 95 members present and a quorum.]

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter Section 3, size. Section 3, the number of members of the legislature shall be provided by law but the number of senate members shall not exceed 41 and the number of house members shall not exceed 111.

Explanation

Mr. Blair Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, we just added a few more down the way. We might not know what would happen twenty years or more. So, we gave a little more latitude going from 39 to 41 that could be in the senate and going from 105 to 111 in the house. Now, there's two sides to this, of course. Our committee was a unanimous vote for this particular section, with two members being absent. But on the other side, of course, someone brought up there's a lot of argument back and forth, that might cause arguments in later years, especially in urban areas, or how you would go on from your 39, for instance your senate, on to your 41. But our reason behind it was to give us a little more latitude in the legislature when we do appointment.

Questions

Mr. Toomy Senator Blair, I appreciate your comments on why you increased the numbers because the comments of your committee don't express any reasoning at all. Why did you pick these particular numbers if you wanted to have leeway?

Mr. Blair I think it would be in proportion as for as the senate increase and the house increase because of the numbers now being 105 and we've tried to keep it at an uneven number, of course, avoiding ties and things of that type. But along the line that we have at the present time. Just a little more latitude for the legislature to work under on appointment when it came up.

Mr. Toomy Well, if this constitution is going to last for many years, which I hope it does, why didn't you increase it even greater than it is to allow for flexibility. Why these particular numbers. Why increase the senate by 2 and the house by 6.

Mr. Blair Well, particularly, one of the things in the house I understand the house could handle 111 members, and if you increased it more you would probably have to knock out a side. There were some people that thought that maybe we should reduce both houses, but our general agreement, after we studied it and listened to the different testimony and all. we came out with this number.

Mr. Toomy Were these numbers chosen basically on the physical plan of the legislature, the house and the senate, as it is right now.

Mr. Blair Partially so, yes.

Mr. Toomy Thank you.

Mr. Chatelain Delegate Blair, have you given any thought to a problem of reapportionment, sir?

Mr. Blair That's where you may have a problem, but we are now apportioned on a population basis. Just giving an example, suppose that the legislature wanted to increase, then the way I'd see it you would just lower, fix your population with that particular number that you'd have, whether it would be 39 or 49 or 41 or either your 105 or 111.

Mr. Chatelain Well, I could anticipate being adopted in 1974 or maybe 75 or the 76...want to increase the number of legislators that would create a boundary problem and cause a lot of furor, wouldn't it sir?

Mr. Blair I could see possibilities, yes.

Mr. Chatelain Thank you.

Mr. Bollinger Senator Blair, could you explain to the convention what was the purpose of limiting the legislature at all in the number of legislators? I was just curious and possibly some other people are curious.

Mr. Blair I think if you had left it wide open that you would have had a lot of confusion. In fact, I've heard some complaint, and I wouldn't be surprised if you don't have an amendment here, to peg it back to the 39 or 105. We felt that we had to hit on a number. For clarification and so there'd be no confusion and things of that nature.

Mr. Weiss Delegate Blair, did your committee take into consideration the report on the state of the state of Louisiana in which we find that the population growth has actually declined considerably in the four year and below age group, some 17%, and therefore in the years to come, although we've had a 1% increase each year in the past ten years, we may find that there's a decline in the population and therefore less people in the state. Did you all consider that in this figure?

Mr. Blair Yes, we surely did, and it's kind of like giving someone a salary. You can give them the salary, but boy if you start to cut it, you're in trouble. We figured that we would definitely be in trouble if we cut the size of either house. And we again were hoping that we would come through with an article that would help pass the whole article as we will have it finished in January.

Mr. Weiss Even though, to have the same number apportionment at this time there may be actually be less members of the legislature in the house to meet this number today in years ahead in view of the zero and below population growth that we're faced with in the future.

Mr. Blair Well, I look forward to Louisiana growing, Dr. Weiss, and I hope that doesn't create a real problem.

Mr. Velazquez Senator Blair, since we do have single member districts now, wouldn't you say that in the case of reapportionment, this increase that you've put in would take what help those areas which were underrepresented before and might lose out in reapportionment to continue to have representation?

Mr. Blair I think on this single member district, Mr. Velazquez that we would still have to go on a population basis, that is, if we keep it as we have now. It could be taken care of on a population or fluctuation or reaching that number dividing into it. I don't think you'd have a real problem, there.

Mr. Velazquez Then doesn't this increase in number take care of the situation where there is an increase in population or a decrease in population?

Mr. Blair Yes, if you had 39 now divided into the population comes out what some 92,000 people that we represent in the senate, and what 34,000 in the house. So if you had the population, we kept it on the same number, and the population increased then you would have an increased amount of people that you would have to represent. Vice-versa with a decrease, if you had a decrease in population.

Mr. Velazquez Fine, thank you.

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Amendment Number 1 [By Mr. Alario and Mr. Toomy]: on page 2 line 28, immediately after the words "iced" and before the words "and the" delete the word "forty-one" and insert in lieu thereof "thirty-nine". Amendment Number 2: page 2, line 29 immediately after the word "hundred" and before the period delete the words "and eleven" and insert in lieu thereof the word "five".

Explanation

Mr. Alario Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this amendment seeks to limit the number of members in the house and the senate to exactly the number they presently have, 105 in the house and 39 in the senate. The committee's proposal and their argument was that it would allow some flexibility and that's some latitude in later years when they reapportion. I suggest to you that that latitude and that flexibility is going to end the very first time the legislature has to reapportion itself because immediately I can foresee, since they had the right to go up to 41 members in the senate and 111 in the house that's exactly what they're going to do and that's going to lock in at that amount of members. I think all that you're doing here is simply increasing the number of members in the house and the senate. Without any real argument as to why you should do that. I don't think we ought to increase the number of members. I don't think you ought to increase the costs of government to the taxing people of this state. It is my belief and under figures that I have worked out tentatively, that you're going to increase by these number of members in the house and the senate the cost, at a minimum cost to the state and the taxpayers, some $152,800. I get that by computing 8 new members at an approximate salary of, figuring there committee meetings and benefits that he may be entitled to. And I'm also considering the proposal that the committee has of annual salaries but it might increase this figure, of some $10,000 a member at 8 members, some $80,000, and not counting the costs to the state for each member to have bills printed and introduced and the work of the legislative council, the other fringe benefits that he may be entitled to. And I'm also computing that each legislator has the right to hire a legislative assistant at some $400 a month; he's allowed a $50 a month office expense and a $100 a month for rent. This may increase in the future, I would think, as the cost of these things go up. I think this $152,000 cost to the state and the taxpayers is not justified. I don't think it's necessary and I ask that you will vote for this amendment.

Question

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Alario, considering the problems that the legislature had in 1970 in reapportioning itself, and the result of having it done by a master, do you not feel that what you are doing here is creating that same problem in 1980?

Mr. Alario Mr. Anzalone, the legislature in 1970,

17th Days Proceedings—July 19, 1973

I think, addressed itself to more gerrymandering and was concerned with trying to put multimember districts in certain areas. Under the proposal that this convention has adopted, the legislature would be required to go under single member districts and to reapportion accordingly. I think you're going to stop a lot of that business they had in 1970 with that proposal. I don't see the same problem arising in 1980.

Further Discussion

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates to the convention. Senator Blair has already indicated that this proposition passed unanimously by the committee. I think it would be appropriate to comment on some of the questions and some of the argument brought out here. First of all, Mr. Bollinger, I think you asked the question about why should we have a limit at all in the constitution. In the New England states such as New Hampshire and Massachusetts, their house of representatives comprises as many as three or four hundred house members and they are severely criticized for that large number because the most effective body by all statistics pointed out, I have the ideal situation is in the area that we are dealing with at this time. And the reason, Mr. Joe Toomy asked the question, why do we have these particular numbers that we are dealing here with now? Well, Senator Blair has already indicated that the Clerk of the House and the Secretary of the Senate appeared before our committee. We discussed this matter; they indicated that the physical facilities could only comfortably handle 2 more senators, from 39 to 41 and 6 more house members from 105 up to 111. The real reason that the committee adopted this proposal as is, was merely for flexibility. Mr. Alario is absolutely correct that there is no real argument, or there's nothing sacred about the numbers and 111. Nor is there anything sacred about the numbers 39 and 105. If you really, really want to streamline things, Mr. Alario, maybe the ideal situation might be to have only 30 senators and 90 members of the house. Why stick with 105 members in the house and 39 members in the senate? And if you're going to argue... I'll yield, but when I'm finished... and if you're going to bring up the cost argument, that's the best argument that you can give them. Let's reduce it, down to 30 senators and 90 house members or 25 senators and 80 house members. You can pick any figure that you want to. So I really don't consider those to be really the potent arguments behind this. I think this really goes to the heart of the entire concept of a constitution. Are you going to be flexible and viable and versatile and offer to the legislature and to the people the most workable constitution that we can come up with. And I feel that you will not have a problem on reapportionment in the immediate future of adding additional spaces in either the house or the senate, although I'm the first to admit, that politically, it should happen, but I don't think that would be a major catastrophe because it's not a drastic change, increasing the senate from 39 to 41 and 105 to 111 with a population growth you're not going to water down or diminish your representation. Each member of the house represents approximately 33,000 people. Each member of the senate, approximately 93 to 95,000 people. With the increase in population, the time that we get to the next period of reapportionment, even if you did increase the membership to the maximum, you would still have approximately the same percentage of representation in population. I don't think that this is a big thing to argue about. I don't think that we should really be laboring the point too much longer. Either you're in favor of the concept of flexibility or you're against it or you're going to lock us in again on another particular proposal. I think that's the whole issue that we're really deciding here and I will yield.

Questions

Mr. Alario Delegate Casey, are you aware that in the amendment that I have and the proposal that the committee has submitted that in both instances, we say, that it shall not exceed thirty-nine Senate members and shall not exceed one hundred and five, which means to me... does it mean to you... that then the legislature could reduce itself if it so chose and allow for that flexibility?

Mr. Casey But my answer to that, Mr. Alario, if you are really concerned about the cost factor and really want to save the people of the State of Louisiana money, why not just say in the constitution, "shall not exceed thirty Senators and shall not exceed ninety members of the House of Representatives"?

Mr. Fayard Delegate Casey, as our committee studied this proposition, did we not consider that as presently constituted, you have approximately three representatives for each Senator?

Mr. Casey That's correct.

Mr. Fayard As the proposal is presently presented to the convention, the increase is approximately by the same ratio. Is that not correct?

Mr. Casey It is proportionate. That's correct.

Mr. Nunez Representative Casey, why do we have to increase at all? Why can't we just leave it thirty-nine and one hundred and five? You're dealing in the area of increasing the numbers in the legislature when we can just pick up additional people like we did this past time. I wouldn't mind going to one hundred and fifty if we have to and you go to 40,000 and keep the numbers the same.

Mr. Casey As I said, there's no sacred number. We could say thirty and ninety. Mr. Alario would like to say thirty-nine and one hundred and five. All we are trying to provide is the flexibility. The legislature doesn't have to go up to forty-one Senators and one hundred and eleven House members. They can in the future after the next reapportionment plan reduce the number to whatever number might be appropriate and the dictates of efficient government might require.

Mr. Nunez But the flexibility is also there now. Just increase your district to include more people, if the population growth of the state dictates as such and a ten year count comes out and you have to pick up four or five thousand people, just like we did this time. Why can't we do it rather than increase the number of the legislature. I think that was his point.

Mr. Casey My answer to that is, the flexibility is only one way that you can alter this. It provides for no flexibility upward and that's all we're offering. If you like the proposal as it is, vote against the amendment of Mr. Alario. If you do not want to provide the flexibility, the slight margin that we are allowing, the vote for the amendment. It's a very simple proposition as far as I'm concerned.

Mr. Nunez You say it's a simple proposition, but when you start dividing the districts as opposed to a thirty-nine into forty-one and as opposed to one hundred and five, what are you going to hundred and what? One hundred and eleven? It's additional districts that you have to create.

Mr. Casey That's correct

Mr. Nunez You have to recreate the lines whereby if you stuck with the same numbers, you'd have to move the boundaries to include new people that have moved into the area or just shift the boundaries. I think you are creating a problem when you take on additional numbers as to the same numbers and taking on additional people. I think you do create a problem.

Mr. Casey Mr. Nunez, I would have to leave that to the infinite wisdom of the legislature to determine whether they are merely going to strictly re-apportion by geographical bounds and keep the numbers rather than increase the numbers. So I'll rely on their infinite wisdom.

Dr. Weiss Delegate Casey, the Louisiana Office of State Planning clearly indicates in projecting to the future that we will not have an increase in population growth. Is the only reason that your committee recommended this is because they have more facilities in the Senate and the House? Is that the purpose?

Mr. Casey Initially I think the committee has well-indicated that we would prefer to offer in the constitution a flexible, workable constitution rather than locking too much in and itemizing too many things. This is one of the areas where we attempted to allow some small, minute margin of flexibility. I don't think it's a great margin of flexibility at all. As I mentioned, the only reason why we arrived at these high figures, and I don't personally consider them high, is the limitation of the physical facilities. I think we are saddled, we are locked with the State Capitol that we have at this time. I don't anticipate any real change in the chambers as they exist today.

Mr. Alexander Mr. Casey, is it not a fact that the basic concept of reapportionment is that it divides the population by the number of seats? In this instance 105 by 3,600,000, 39 by 3,600,000?

Mr. Casey That's correct.

Mr. Alexander All this provision would do is increase that number, 42 to 3,600,000 or 4,000,000 as it may be subsequently. Isn't that right?

Mr. Casey That's all. It's a very simple mathematical proposition.

Mr. Alexander Then the boundaries would move automatically according to where the people live. It would not affect the boundaries so far as keeping them in place or moving them. They would move with the population. Isn't that right?

Mr. Casey That, of course, is part of the process of reapportionment to determine those boundaries.

Mr. Alexander Right. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. J. Jackson Mr. Chairman, members of the convention, I rise in opposition to Delegate Alario's amendment which in fact just says that we are going to limit the present seats that exist in the House and the Senate as it is today. The question of cost is brought up as to whether it is going to cost the people of the state additional amounts of money for representation. I grant that we ought to control cost in government. But, how can you measure the cost of the people being represented? Can you measure an additional four hundred dollars in cost as to, for instance, representing an additional 35,000 people? I don't think that the argument of cost is as sound as it is being proposed. Another point is that, and I'm not a statistician, but I take opposition to the projections as indicated by a speaker relative to the State Planning Commission indicating that we possibly wouldn't have a population increase. As we move into the area of better labor management, and we are going to have more people moving into our state. I think that if you just suggest that in a period of ten years, if we just had three hundred thousand people, which means that we would fit the requirements of the State Planning Commission. Reapportionment is based on a multitude of factors, not necessarily on the amount of seats that exist in the House or in the Senate. As I reflect and did some research, since 1921 this is about the proportionate increase that the House has had. I think in 1970 we increased it from maybe 100 and gave five more seats, but urban areas, I think New Orleans got a couple, or Jefferson got a couple or Caddo Parish got a couple. I think as Mr. Casey has said it's just a proposition to offer some flexibility to the legislature. If you freeze it at present, then in effect what we are basically doing, is saying that (1) that our population won't increase and I disagree with it and (2) that cost will be so great as opposed to the adequate representation of a person and (3) that all we have to do is increase the population per representative district or senatorial district. I think that Mr. Casey has expounded on that by saying that that's only one avenue. This allows two. I'm not too sure that the present figures of the committee is the maximum figure but I'm suggesting that does provide some kind of latitude, some kinds of flexibility. Now if you want total flexibility, then I guess we would say we will provide by law. Then for those persons who are sincerely concerned about cost, you may have a problem because we may rise as high as one hundred and sixty-five or a hundred and seventy-five. Based on the arguments pro and con for this kind of proposition, I think that what the committee has offered so far seems to rationally approach the kinds of growth that's needed in our state legislature. For those reasons I would ask that you oppose Representative Alario's amendment which limits the legislature to the very fixed number. I will end my remarks by saying, I'm proud of what we have, however, and I agree with you Dr. Abraham, that we ought to determine representation of our population based on seats. Because I think the question we would ask is, well, what if in the past we had larger seats. I think we're renovating the Capitol right now at a great expense to the state, so I don't think that argument holds but it does give me pride if you look at some legislature across the country that this at least approaches the medium in terms of medium for representation of the people of our state. For those reasons I ask you to oppose Representative Alario's amendments.

Further Discussion

Mr. Landrum Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates. Certainly what has been said by Mr. Casey should really sum up what should be the feeling of most of us here today. This is the one area where the committee really was unanimous in their feeling. If you notice what the committee proposed, it did not really ask that you change anything as far as the number, the present number...but at least it gives you the latitude to change if a change is necessary. What we have now, we started in 1921, I believe, with 101 and in the Senate thirty-nine as it is today. Now, I really wish that it was changed to an even larger number than forty-one, so that the people could get better representation. I've heard you talk so much about what the people are not interested in. The people don't really get a chance to see you too often. Only when election time comes around, and when there are so many of them that you are not able to see them even at that time. It is necessary for the legislature to be able to increase its size if it becomes necessary. If they deem it that their wisdom to increase its size, then I believe that they should have that type of latitude. Mr. Alario's amendment will only make matters stay as they are now, and I don't believe in staying where we are now. I believe we should move forward. We've been where we are now for too long.

Further Discussion

Mr. Ginn Mr. Chairman, delegates, I, too, was a member of the legislative committee, and originally, I supported the concept of perhaps increasing the number of senators and representatives to allow for the future, but since then I've had second thoughts, more, rise in support of Mr. Alario's amendment. I'd like to tell you why. The 1921 constitution allowed for 39 senators and it has remained 39; it allowed for 100 representatives, in 1921. In 1954 we increased the number of representatives to 101 giving that representative, I believe, to Jefferson Parish, and in 1960 we increased the number four more, representatives. We added one to Caddo, one to East Baton Rouge Parish, and two to Jefferson Parish. Gentlemen, I have a fear that the country people are losing representation. I understand that the population is growing in the metropolitan areas, but I am rising in support of Mr. Alarino's amendment.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendments adopted: 53-52. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Tobias], on page 2, line 27 immediately after the word "law", change the comma to a period and delete the remainder of the line and delete lines 28 and 29 in their entirety.

Explanation

Mr. Tobias Briefly, all this amendment does is leave the number of legislators in the legislature to be absolutely flexible. The present restrictions, or the restrictions that this convention just voted, to me seem unreasonable. We've provided protection to the people with single member districts. Federal requirements require that we have an apportioned legislature on the basis of population. By adopting this amendment we will allow absolute flexibility as times change. If the population decreased, perhaps the legislature would want to decrease the number of members in each house. This is to be left to them. There's a practical restriction too. The number of seats in the present Capitol is limited. There are very few that they could add but someday we may have a new State Capitol Building and we may want to expand the number of Representatives and Senators in the legislature. I would urge the adoption.

Questions

Mr. Velazquez Mr. Tobias, if we have a choice between justice for all the people of Louisiana and a wall, which one do you think ought to go?

Mr. Tobias I would hope justice for all the people in Louisiana.

Mr. Velazquez I think you mis-heard me, brother.

Mr. Tobias I couldn't hear you. I'm sorry.

Mr. Velazquez I said if you have a choice between justice for all the people in Louisiana or a wall in the state legislature, which one has to go?

Mr. Tobias The wall has to go.

Mr. Velazquez Don't you feel that by allowing the state legislature to decide itself by law which size the legislature should be we protect some of the rural districts which are losing population to urban areas? To keep the representation that they need, to give the people of their district the services that those people need

Mr. Tobias I would certainly hope so.

Mr. Velazquez Wouldn't you say that, in many ways, our rural people need protection as much as our urban people do?

Mr. Tobias I would hope so

Mr. Velazquez Would you say that this last thing that we worked on, that managed to get by one vote, in many ways cheats our rural people who live in an area of declining population but not declining needs?

Mr. Tobias I would agree

Mr. Velazquez Thank you, Mr. Tobias.

Mr. Burns Mr. Tobias, do I understand from your amendment that if the legislature should meet and decide to increase their number to 150 members or EBB members that they could do that?

Mr. Tobias That's correct, sir.

Mr. Burns Don't you think perhaps that the citizens of the state, or a majority of them, think we have too many at the present time?

Mr. Tobias My feeling is that most legislators presently in the legislature would not vote to dilute their voting strength in the legislature. You've got practical limitations on it.

Mr. Burns My question was based on the general line of questions and arguments that I have been listening to where so much is based on assumption and anticipatory, something that might happen way in the future. It's getting away from realism and my question was more or less based along that line, not that I think it's ever going to happen.

Mrs. Warren Mr. Tobias, are you saying give the Legislature the opportunity of doing anything they would like to do? Because that is what it sounds like to me, the same as what Mr. Velazquez just got through saying. You're putting a wall around them. Let's tear it down a little bit. I am really wondering if you really want to...it's just like giving a person a blank check and you write in what you want. Now is this what you're saying?

Mr. Tobias I would answer you this way. Can you imagine the legislature trying to get rid of one of their members. For example, if they decided that they didn't like one particular member, if we were to reduce the number of Senators to 38, that district would have to be reapportioned among other districts. So it provides protection in that light. It provides protection from what you say. The practicalities of it is that the legislature is just not going to change it for a long time to come, in my opinion.

Mrs. Warren I still don't understand you when you say, "try to get rid of one" and I don't know for what reason they would want to get rid of one. If it is necessary to get rid of one, then I think they should be gotten rid of. If not, I don't think they should.

Mr. Tobias They probably wouldn't. This just allows maximum flexibility.

Mrs. Warren If you ask me a question, if it keeps going like it is now, I could just imagine they'll get anything or do anything.

Mr. Shannon I believe that we have gone through the animal kingdom and we got through the reptile kingdom and I think we've gone the gamut on everything. I move the question on the entire subject matter of Section 3.

[Previous Question ordered on the entire subject matter. Amendment 133-109: 13-79 Motion to reconsider tabled. Quorum—11; 112 delegates present; 112-11. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter Section 4: Qualifications, Residence Requirements, Term, Vacancies and Salary

Section 4 (A): Every elector, who at the time of the general election shall have reached the age of 18 years shall be eligible to membership in the House of Representatives. Every elector who at the time of the general election shall have reached the age of 21 years shall be eligible for membership in the Senate

B. No person shall be eligible for membership in the legislature unless at the time of the general election he shall have been a resident of the State for two years and actually domiciled within the legislative district from which he seeks election for one year immediately preceding his election.

However, at the next regular election for members of the legislature following the reapportionment of the legislature, a person may qualify for election to either House of the legislature from any district created in whole or in part from the district existing prior to reapportionment in which such person was domiciled, if he was domiciled in that prior district for at least one year immediately preceding his election.

The seat of any member who changes his domicile from the legislative district which he represents shall be vacated, thereby. Any declaration of a retention of domicile to the contrary, notwithstanding.

C. The members of the legislature shall be elected for a term of four years each.

D. When a vacancy occurs in either House of the legislature, the remainder of the term shall be filled only by election as provided by law.

E. The members of the legislature shall be compensated by an annual salary which shall be fixed by a majority vote of the elected members of each house of the legislature. The amount fixed may be changed only by two-thirds of the elected members of each House of the legislature to be effective at a term other than that for the members presently serving.

Explanation

Mr. Juneau Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I think what I'd like to do is an explanation is tell you some of the changes with regards to the present constitution.

Number 1, with regard to the House of Representatives as pertains to the age, there is no change. We have provided the age shall be eighteen. The present constitution says that a qualified elector shall be served in the House of Representatives. So in that respect there is no change.

With regard to the Senate, there is a change. In the present constitution, it requires that a member of the Senate be at twenty-five. That has been changed in the committee to age twenty-one.

Now if you will, I will move to Section B of Section 4. In that regard, there are several changes I'd like to call to your attention. With regard to the requirement that he be a resident of the State of Louisiana, the present constitution says that he must be a resident of the State of Louisiana...

Mr. Henry Mr. Juneau, do you mind if we go ahead with A first because that is the way we have been proceeding, if you don't mind.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No 1 [by Mrs. Taylor], on page 3, line 4, immediately after the words, quote, "age of," and before the word, quote, "years," delete the words, quote, "twenty one," and insert in lieu thereof the word, quote, "eighteen."

Explanation

Mrs. Taylor Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I think the amendment really explains itself. All that the amendment does is lower the age from the recommended age of twenty one to eighteen for qualifications in the Senate.

By law, eighteen years olds are eligible to vote, and I would think that if eighteen year olds are mature enough to serve in the House of Representatives, then they are mature enough to also serve in the Senate.

Also, they have reached the age of majority and are fully responsible for their acts. And I would say that under democratic principles, the people should be allowed to elect their leaders without age restrictions. It is basically undemocratic to put limits on the representation the people can choose. I ask a favorable vote on this amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Tobias I was appointed to this convention to represent youth. I can honestly say that youth has not contacted me. They have been very quiet. But I am of the firm opinion that if a person is old enough to vote, he really ought to be allowed to run for the legislature.

As a practical matter, a person eighteen years of age is not going to run. This just allows that individual... we would be saying to the young people of this state, if you can vote, you can have the power to run. You can run and you can be elected. You may not be elected, but you have that right. And I urge the adoption, and I agree with all of the reasons stated by Mrs. Taylor.

Questions

Mr. Bollinger Delegate Tobias, in your opinion, or from the arguments you are presenting in favor of the proposed amendment, wouldn't you consider a better provision to be simply state the elector can run since it might be in twenty or thirty years the U. S. Constitution might provide for an elector say of seventeen or sixteen and this same argument would prevail.

Mr. Tobias As I understand, Mr. Landry has an amendment which he will offer up after this one which will provide exactly that and I think that... as practical as we would agree with both amendments... I think that Mr. Landry's amendment will offer more flexibility for the future should the voting age ever be reduced to age 16 then I would believe that those people should be allowed to vote.

But I would urge the adoption of this amendment at this time. And when Mr. Landry comes back with his amendment, I would also urge the adoption of that amendment.

Mr. Burns Mr. Tobias, I understood you to make the statement that you thought that if a person was old enough to vote they were qualified to run for office. Is that correct?

Mr. Tobias That is correct.

Mr. Burns Do you think this would apply, since then, to the office of governor?

Mr. Tobias Yes, sir.

Mr. Burns Do you think that the rights of a voter supersedes the importance to the State of Louisiana, for instance, as to getting an experienced person to head up the government of the state?

Mr. Tobias The point is that as a practical matter, the people of this state probably will not elect an eighteen year old to be their governor. I just say if you are going to... why have a distinction of say age eighteen. Perhaps we ought to put a limit on the age of governor, or perhaps on the Senate to lower to age fifty-five. That would sure make a few people happy here.

Mr. Burns Don't... do we not have age qualifications of limitations with reference to United States Senators?

Mr. Tobias Right. The Constitution was drafted back in the 1700's.

Further Discussion

Mr. Chehardy Mr. Speaker, ladies and gentlemen, Mrs. Taylor's amendment in my mind is a must if we are to proceed logically in what we are doing. I have an amendment proposed which does substantially the same thing, except it takes away a little more verbiage. But this is such an important amendment, I am more concerned with seeing us take the proper action at this time than to delay. And I believe that the greatest contradiction that I've seen to date in our convention is one sentence stating that the age of eighteen qualifies you to be a member of the House, and in the very next breath, but to be a member of the Senate, you must be twenty-one. Now even if we should propose a difference in age for any office, in those bodies both of which consider our laws and the passage of our laws, I believe it is absolutely ridiculous to require or to state in effect that there is some difference in the abilities, or difference in the abilities required of the member of the House and a member of the Senate.

However, foremost I am in favor of eighteen year olds enjoying in every case the privilege of adulthood no matter what the public office is. If he stands out enough to be elected to any office that is his right, that is his privilege, and that is what we should not do anything to hinder. But just on the simple basis that we have a provision being offered which discriminates between members of the Senate and the House, not that I see any basis in the discrimination. I cannot understand how it has even reached the floor distinguishing what we expect of a member of the House and a member of the Senate, and just on the importance of the whole issue I am myself inclining Mrs. Taylor's amendment and I hope it receives a favorable vote.

Further Discussion

Mr. Abraham I simply want to relate an experience I had with the Student Constitutional Convention that was here last year.

In... I worked with one of the committees and later on I ran across three of the little girls, little high school girls and I asked them what they did and how they came out and they told me, they said, "Man, you guys sure were liberal. You all lowered the age by which a governor could hold office to twenty five." I may said, "I see, all these elected offices up to thirty years of age."

Further Discussion

Mr. Velazquez I feel that one of the things that we really need is involvement in government, and that we owe it to ourselves to involve all the segments of our population including our younger people in the Democratic process. Either they are going to become involved in the Democratic process, or they are going to try to find some other method which might not be as good for the country as Democracy itself.

I think that since both houses in the Louisiana Legislature, the House of Representatives and the Senate, are apportioned on the basis of population, we shouldn't tell the people you can elect anybody except someone eighteen. Most eighteen-year-olds now know a lot more than we did when we were eighteen. We have at least one eighteen-year-old serving in this convention and I think it's unfair to discriminate in this manner. I myself have an amendment prepared to lower the age to eighteen, but I am supporting this amendment because I feel that it is so important a thing that it must be handled as soon as possible to give everybody justice.

Further Discussion

Mrs. Warren Mr. Chairman, delegates, I'm rising in support of Mrs. Taylor's amendment. I think that eighteen-year-olds are qualified, if they are qualified at eighteen years old to vote and they can go to war, and be responsible at eighteen. If they can stand trial as an adult at eighteen and they know their actions at eighteen I think they are qualified to run for public office and I am going to thank you very much if you vote for Mrs. Taylor's amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Juneau Mr. Chairman, I know that most of the previous speakers have spoken in support of the amendment. I want to speak and rise in opposition to the amendment for the reasons which I will outline.

Number one, it has been asserted that this is a discriminatory type age with regard to the Senate and House of Representatives. If we would adopt that argument or follow it to it's logical course, I think we would then conclude that the Senate ought to have 105 members and the House ought to have 105 members. I submit to you that historically in this country, in this Democracy we live in, that it is the accepted fact not only by the elders of this country but also by the young, that there is a sound, stable reason for providing an age difference. We have lowered that age difference to twenty-one. I think it has historically been that the House of Representatives is deemed to be that body which is the closest to the people because it is small in the legislative districts.

By the same token, the Senate is an area which encompasses a larger area, and for that reason it was thought historically that more maturity, or a little bit more experience would not be a bad factor.

I submit to you and take with heed to this extent, that this student constitutional convention didn't think what you are thinking. They thought that all electors ought to be age 30. I think that that is a significant fact to me. I submit to you that the people of this state have got to consider this a significant provision. They are looking to see what kind of age factors we establish and they are going to remember history. And in that regard, I would rise in opposition to the amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Guarisco I rise in opposition to the amendment for several reasons. One, I think a person should have a little age on him before he runs for public office even though he can vote.

Socrates said in his Republic, that a person should go to school for the first twenty years of his life. For the next twenty years he should work in his chosen profession, and then for ten more years he should return to the university and then and only then, should he run for public office. I wouldn't want to carry it that far or most of us wouldn't be here.

In 1787, the framers of the Constitution of the United States set the average age was thirty-four, adopted three areas of age; thirty-five for President, thirty for Senator and twenty-five for United States Representative, twenty-five. And I think that we can do no less than that. I think that... I know some fifty-year old children. But by and large and generally speaking a person does acquire some experience and some maturity by having a little age on him. And I think that we should not go all out and be that liberal and allow people eighteen years old to hold these offices.

Questions

Mr. Reeves Mr. Guarisco, I am just wondering, I'd like an answer to this question, just yes or no. I understand from the Big Book that there was a man who taught in the Temple at only twelve.

Mr. Guarisco You will have to ask Reverend Stovall about that. I am not familiar with the Bible.

Mr. Duval Just to clear up the records of this convention because it is all being transcribed, I'm sure Mr. Guarisco wanted to clear up something, and Plato wrote the Republic and not Socrates. And I just wanted to get that straight.

Mr. Guarisco That's right, that's right.

Mr. Duval He wasn't fifty when he wrote it either.

Mr. Guarisco He drank poison before that, I guess

Further Discussion

Mr. Hayes I rise in support of the amendment. If my history serves me correctly, the Senate was simply a compromise. And I don't understand why the old age because they represent land and not people. It's the House of Representatives that represent the people. Now the age has been lowered to eighteen. The Senate almost got abolished with an amendment here the other day which meant that they are apparently not needed. They wanted to make just one House. If you had one House, it would have to be the House of Representatives.

So, if we are going to lower the age to eighteen for voting purposes, I think that it should not be any higher for the House or Senate. So I am in support of one age for the House and one for the Senate because there is really no need for the Senate except for a compromise. I don't really know why we have a State Senate in the first place.

Further Discussion

Mr. Burns Mr. Chairman, and gentlemen of the House, I see no reason why the age limit should be twenty-one in the Senate and eighteen in the House. They have just as important legislation originating in the House of Representatives as there is in the Senate. But my main reason for getting up here is because of my question of Mr. Tobias might have led to the impression that I was against this particular amendment.

I see a vast difference between the age limit that should apply to a Governor, for instance, and should apply to members of the legislature. And I think in this day and time when we are recognizing youth in all the different phases of our government and our economy. That we are not talking only about eighteen years of age. We are talking about people nineteen years of age and twenty years of age that may just lack a day or two or a week or two of being twenty-one years of age.

But those, because of the age limit are not qualified to run. And this last but not least, and I have not interest in this phase of it. But if I was an office holder and I intended to run for office again, I would think long and hard before I ever voted against this amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Derbes Mr. Chairman, I support the Taylor amendment and I move the previous question.

[Motion for the Previous Question rejected: 30-71.]

Further Discussion

Mr. Fontenot Thank you very much, fellow delegates. I appreciate you giving me a little last opportunity to say something.

Mr. Tobias said he represented youth. Well, I am even younger than him and I also rise in support of the amendment. I don't know exactly how much to say it, but I can't see discriminating against the person who wants to run for Senator. Why should you let an eighteen-year-old run for Representative and not let him run for Senator? Now remember what I am saying. Letting him run, that doesn't mean that he is going to win.

Right now, an individual who is eighty-five years old and senile and in the hospital bed can run for office. A twenty-year-old qualified individual cannot run for office if you reject this amendment. Run for Senator, excuse me, if you reject this amendment. Not only... I think it's discriminating against a qualified eighteen or nineteen or twenty year old to run for office. You are discriminating against him to run for Senator. And I agree, sometimes you have to discriminate, but I don't think in this particular instance you should discriminate against a man running for Senator and not running for Representative. I feel we have many candidates who have been running for Senator who are not qualified to run, yet the law says they can run. But you are going to keep a qualified twenty-year old from running for office. I don't think we ought to do it in the constitution. I think if you are eligible to vote, you ought to run for Senator or Representative.

I appreciate you giving me these last couple of comments. I wish you would approve the amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I just want to say I have served in both bodies of the legislature, and I was fortunate when I first ran for public office as being the youngest Police Juror in the State of Louisiana. Certainly I think that there is room for youth in this State. And if they are qualified to run for House of Representatives at eighteen years of age, I am of the opinion that they should run for Senate at eighteen years of age. They are voting on identically the same bills, they have to make identically the same decisions and even though I am a member of the Senate and have been for many years, if they had had a provision when I first ran for office, I couldn't have run for the legislature and that's why I ran for the Police Jury, because I could.

Back in the days I had to run, you had to have property. Well, I qualified and didn't have none. But I didn't find it out until after I had qualified. I happened to have a good friend that, of course he decided to let me, and I decided to bid to him all in the same deal. But I got on record as being that little property owner. I was afraid somebody was going to question me and disqualify me.

But let me just say this. The youth of this state today knows more than I knew when I was thirty years old. My children do, and I don't think they are any smart children. But they know more than I know when I was twenty-eight or thirty, and I think your children are in the same category. They have come a long ways and if you are going to let them run for the House, I suggest you let them run for the Senate. Fact of the business, I believe I would vote to let them run for anything.

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted: 90-20. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Amendment No 1 [By Mr. A. Landry], on page 2, delete line 32 in its entirety.

Amendment No. 2, on page 3 delete lines 1 through 5, both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: quote, "Section 4A, every elector shall be eligible to membership in the House of Representatives or the Senate."

Explanation

Mr. A. Landry Mr. Chairman, delegates to this convention, you will notice my amendment is very brief. The reason for it is this, that as amended by Mrs. Taylor, if you read the amendment and read the proposal as amendment, you will find that every elector who at the time of the general election shall have reached the age of eighteen years are creating a question because of the fact that we have primary elections and second primary elections before we have general elections. And there could possibly be a situation where a person would reach the age of eighteen between the second primary and the general election and could not qualify to be a candidate. And cannot qualify by either of the committees that have charge of qualification, then you might be depriving him of his constitutional rights to be a candidate.

And I believe that an elector as was well-said awhile ago, that a person who has reached the age of majority, who has registered under the laws of the State of Louisiana, and I like the rest, cannot see the discrimination between a Representative or a Senator, and I urge you to adopt my amendments.

Questions

Mr. Bollinger Delegate Landry, I question your thoughts on the constitutional legality of the elector having reached the age eighteen between the second and general primary and the general election. It says every elector who at the time of the general election I think there is no question in there what it means. If he will reach the age of eighteen at the time of the general election he can qualify and can be elected.

Well, how is he going to qualify when all of the executive committees have closed. Who are you going to qualify with?

Mr. A. Landry I'll answer that question by asking you a question.

17th Days Proceedings—July 19, 1973

Mr. Bollinger He can qualify even though he is seventeen.

Mr. A. Landry Right he can qualify at seventeen, he cannot be elected.

Mr. Bollinger And how is he going to qualify if he is not an elector. He has to be eighteen to be registered to vote. He is not an elector until he has registered...

Mr. Roy Isn't it a fact now that a seventeen year old may register ahead of time so that if on the day of election, he is eighteen, he may vote?

Mr. A. Landry That is correct Mr. Roy, providing he has reached the age of eighteen during the time that the books of the registration have closed, is my understanding of it.

He cannot register, for instance, let's take in 1971... In November you had a primary election. In December you had a second primary. Then, on February 1st you had a general election. And therefore, a young man who had reached the age of let's say, eighteen, in January of 1972, say December 31st or January 31st, I don't think he could have qualified in time to be a candidate for the general election.

Mr. Roy That's the only thing... I'm in favor of what you are trying to do. I am wondering, though, if there might not be a hiatus that a person would be able to qualify merely because he has pre-registered, but not be eighteen at the time of the date that he is in fact elected.

Mr. A. Landry I think, Mr. Roy, that the election laws of the state would provide. I can't see any reason to have this in the constitution to say that he must reach the age before the general election. I think it would be much better to provide in our election laws to help this young man or young lady to qualify.

Mr. Derbes Mr. Landry, I am in complete agreement with the purpose of your amendment, but it seems to me, it raises in my mind a couple of questions.

It seems to me it is... not indeed as liberal in its provisions as the original proposal by the Committee, which is to say, your amendment says, "Every elector shall be eligible to membership in the House of Representatives or the Senate."

Now suppose the Committee on the Bill of Rights produces a provision which says, "An elector is a person who is eighteen years of age and a resident of this state."

Alright, now, suppose on the date of qualifying, the person is not an elector, but the exception is not provided in your amendment. It would seem to me that he could not be permitted to qualify.

Mr. A. Landry Mr. Derbes, wouldn't that be also true under the original bill that if he is not an elector, how can he qualify?

Mr. Derbes Well, no, by that I mean...

Mr. A. Landry You have to reach the age of eighteen to be an elector.

Mr. Derbes It's a tricky situation here, but suppose a person is short of his eighteenth birthday, but he will be eighteen on the date of the general election. Then according to the original committee proposal, he would be eligible to qualify. Without further clarification, according to your proposal, it would seem to me that there would be some doubt as to whether or not he could qualify.

Mr. A. Landry I don't think so. I think if you look at it, it addresses itself to the legislature who will pass or enact our legislation. Our election laws. I don't think that has anything to do with it because our election laws may prohibit this young man... under what you are saying, from qualifying, then you'd have a question between the Supreme Court and whether or not his constitutional rights have been deprived, because he was eighteen at the time of the election.

Mr. Derbes It would seem to me, Mr. Landry, that by simple clarification of your amendment, we would remove the doubt and make it crystal clear and alleviate any problems. It would seem to be all we need to say is every person who is an elector at the time of the general election shall be eligible to membership in the House of Representatives or the Senate.

Mr. A. Landry Well, I think we are trying to put something in the constitution that the election laws of the state have already taken care of. I don't think it's necessary.

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Landry, I'd just like to get this point over. At the present time, we have primary elections and general elections. Isn't that right?

Mr. A. Landry That is correct, sir.

Mr. De Blieux Now under the provisions as we presently have it in the constitution, if a person only has to be eighteen at the time of the general election, wouldn't it be possible that a person would be a candidate for office before he is even eligible to run in the primary?

Mr. A. Landry I don't think so under the laws of the State of Louisiana.

Mr. De Blieux He would have to be an elector in order to qualify in the primary election?

Mr. A. Landry That's my...

Mr. De Blieux Even though that you have a provision in the constitution that says that he is eligible if he is eighteen at the time of the general election.

Mr. A. Landry That is correct, sir.

Mr. De Blieux Now, if by the adoption of your amendment it would make it crystal clear, he had to be an elector during the primary state as well as the general election state...

Mr. A. Landry At the deadline for qualifying set by the Louisiana Legislature, yes...

Mr. De Blieux In order to qualify for the election. In other words, if we leave that provision like it is now, wouldn't we be in trouble trying to administer it mechanically?

Mr. A. Landry We'd wind up in court, sir.

Mr. Gravel Mr. Landry, what... there is something that concerns me about your proposal. As a matter of fact, if we adopted your proposal in lieu of the one that we have now as a consequence of Mrs. Taylor's amendment, your proposal would permit somebody who was not eligible to serve, to actually run and be elected.

Mr. A. Landry I don't get your question because I said every elector. I understand what an elector means, maybe I am wrong, but my understanding of an elector is a person who has met the residence requirements of the State of Louisiana, who has reached the age of eighteen, or age of majority, whichever the age of majority is, and has also registered and qualified as a voter.

Mr. De Blieux What I am saying is this. Isn't the effect of your amendment to provide that a person can only become a member of the House of Representatives or the Senate when he is an elector.

Now what I am saying is this, this would permit somebody, let's say that is seventeen years of age to run for office under the amendment as proposed by Mrs. Taylor a person would have to be eighteen at the time of his election. This would permit somebody seventeen to run for office and that person could be elected but would not be eligible to serve until he was eighteen which might be several months past the time that the legislative session began.

Mr. A. Landry You are talking about under the Taylor amendment.

Mr. De Blieux No the Taylor amendment provides that the person must be eighteen years of age at the time he is elected.

Mr. A. Landry That is correct. That's what -- Mine says you have to be an elector. And in order to qualify in any election.

Mr. De Blieux That's not what it says...

Mr. A. Landry So you have to be eighteen.

Mr. De Blieux No sir, that's what bothers me. Isn't it a fact that your provision, Mr. Landry, really addresses itself to eligibility for membership and has nothing to do with the age of the person who is qualifying to run for the office.

Mr. A. Landry That's correct, but the Louisiana laws are set out by the legislature as how and who are electors, and how they qualify. And I could tell you this that, if you remember the 1921 constitution, it didn't say you had to be a certain age. It says you have to be an elector and we were lucky in the State of Louisiana when the Constitution of the United States was amended reducing the age to eighteen that our constitution at least complied with that and we were able to elect eighteen-year olds if the people wanted it. And that's all it said in 1921 constitution.

And you go back to the 1852 constitution, it had no provision except being an elector.

Mr. De Blieux But all I am saying is that this provision standing by itself. Mr. Landry, deleting the provision that the committee proposed, as amended by Mrs. Taylor, does permit someone who is not an elector to run for the office, and does only permit that person, if elected, to serve in the legislature when that person becomes an elector.

Mr. A. Landry I don't think so because of the fact that you have laws in the State of Louisiana tells you when you can qualify, and in order to qualify, as I recall, you have to be a qualified elector. And you are not an elector until you have registered to vote.

Vice Chairman Alexander in the Chair

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Ambrose, are you aware that by placing the word elector in your provision that should the voting age be reduced sometime in the future that you are automatically going to lower the age of a member of the House of Representatives or the Senate.

Mr. A. Landry That is correct. I also understand the fact that in twenty-five or thirty years from now if the United States Constitution increases the age of eligibility, then it also takes care of that. It gives you the flexibility.

Mr. Nunez Mr. Landry, my concern was identical to what Mr. Gravel's concern was. It seems to me you are making membership of the House and Senate based on being an elector and no qualifications at all except in the statutes that is so big, based on being able to run.

Another thing is we have liberalized it to the point where an eighteen year old can run for the House or the Senate and it seems to me that you are making it if he can take office on May 1, and that's about where we have it, I'm going to get to my question in just a minute, and he just turned seventeen that he can run in August qualify and run, and if he turns eighteen on May 1 he is eligible to serve.

Is that correct?

Mr. A. Landry I don't think so. I think if you read the bill, the proposal as it is now written, that if a person is seventeen and reaches the age of eighteen before the general election, then he is eligible to run for the office of Representative or Senator.

My amendment says he has to be an elector and you cannot violate the United States Constitution at the present time that says eighteen which the State of Louisiana has adopted.

Mr. Nunez But your qualifications for membership...

Mr. A. Landry You have to be an elector at the time you qualify, yes sir.

Mr. Nunez I understand. But your qualifications for membership is an elector. He can run at seventeen. I'm just trying to save us four months of maturity and let him get a little older. Let him be eighteen. I think we have liberalized it quite considerably when we went down to eighteen on everything. You want to make it actually seventeen, and according to Mr. Gravel's theory, he can run at sixteen and wait until he is eighteen to serve.

I would interpret it... I am not quite sure that Mr. Gravel's interpretation is correct, but I am almost sure that what I am saying, that he can run in August at seventeen, just turned seventeen by the way, and he doesn't turn eighteen until May 1. Which means that if we go into session May 1, he is eligible to become a member if he was elected, he is eighteen years old on May 1, which means he just turned seventeen and he is running for office, and I think you are going just a little too far.

Mr. A. Landry I think you will find that the way the proposal is now written that you can do exactly what you say.

Under my proposal, you have to be an elector and therefore you would have to be eighteen.

Mrs. Warren A child five years old and going to be six in November can enter school. Mr. Derbes asked you about an exception. Wouldn't it be in order to have that exception put into your amendment?

Mr. A. Landry No, I don't think so.

Mr. Roy Mr. Landry, we both feel the same way, but I think Mr. Gravel is right and so is Senator Nunez.

I am wondering if you will accept this. Every elector who at the time of election shall have reached the age of eighteen years shall be eligible to membership in the House of Representatives or the Senate.

Mr. A. Landry Mr. Roy, let me say this. I don't mind any amendments. However, how familiar are you with the election laws of this state whereby you have to qualify to run for office? You cannot qualify to run for office unless you are an elector. And, therefore, you cannot run at seventeen when the law says you have to be eighteen to register to vote.

Mr. Roy But the constitution, according to you is going to say that you are elector if you pre-register at seventeen.

Mr. A. Landry No, I did not say that. You had better read it again. All I said is that an elector shall be eligible for the House of Representatives or the Senate. Now, what is an elector? An elector is a person who has reached the age of eighteen, who has met the residency requirements, and has also registered to vote.

Mr. Burson Mr. Landry, isn't it true that under Article 3, Section 9 of the present State Constitution the language reads, "Every elector under this constitution shall be eligible to a seat in the House of Representatives."

17th Days Proceedings—July 19, 1973

Mr. A. Landry You are correct, Mr. Burson.

Mr. Burson And wouldn't your language substantially repeat the same provision except it also makes his eligible for a seat in the Senate?

Mr. A. Landry That is correct, sir.

Mr. Burson And the interpretation of the election laws that you are giving us is after serving...how many years...

Mr. A. Landry Twenty-one years...

Mr. Burson And these twenty-one years have all been under Article 3, Section 9 of the present constitution?

Mr. A. Landry That is correct, sir.

Mr. Winchester Eighteen is the age that a person can become an elector?

Mr. A. Landry That is correct, sir.

Mr. Winchester If it was twenty-one he could become a member of the House or Senate, then at eighteen, he could run for office...he could run for office any time that he was eighteen...between eighteen and twenty-one. But he could not take office until he was twenty-one if that was the requirement.

Doesn't that answer your question? Doesn't that explain it a little more clearly.

Mr. A. Landry In other words, we have already reduced it to the age of eighteen under the present Louisiana constitution by adopting the amendment to the Federal Constitution. A person who is an elector at age eighteen could now run for the House of Representatives or for the present constitution. All we are doing is changing it to provide that he could also be a Senator, not only a Representative. It is the same language that was used not only in 1921 constitution, but way back in 1852, they did not use age. They used...said an elector.

Mr. Winchester This does not change the requirements that a man to qualify for office has to be an elector does it?

Mr. A. Landry Then the state sets what an elector is.

Further Discussion

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Acting Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention. This is a good amendment. Let me just ask you this. What is an elector?

An elector is a registered voter. It doesn't make any difference whether that voter is twenty years of age, eighteen years of age, forty-five years of age, if he is not registered, if he is not a voter. Now, it doesn't make any difference when he becomes eighteen years of age because he can't register to vote he's not an elector. This particular provision clarifies what we have already done by the previous amendment.

Now this business about a person becoming eighteen years of age some two, three or four months later on hasn't got anything to do with this because it doesn't say they are eighteen at the time he is going to take office, or eighteen at the time of the general election. It says an elector. It means he must be a registered voter. And I think this is a good amendment and it clarifies the law, makes no...absolutely makes it distinct that there is no question about when he will be eligible to run for the office, of the House of Representatives or the Senate. And I ask you to vote for it for clarification purposes.

Questions

Mr. Nunez Senator, after rereading what the present constitution says, and rereading what the amendment, the draft of the proposal is, and rereading Mr. Ambrose...Mr. Landry's amendment here, I am reconsidering what I said before because very possibly he is right and we should adopt it because what we have in there now is that he can be an elector at the time of the general election which means he can qualify at seventeen. Is that correct? What we just adopted. Unless we adopt this, he can, in fact, qualify at seventeen years old in August if he is going to be eighteen at the time of the general election.

Mr. De Blieux That's right. You are telling him he can do something which he cannot actually do because there is no way for him to get into the primary.

Mr. Nunez But if we adopt this, by the definition of an elector on the statute which means you have to be a registered voter to qualify, then we are truly making it eighteen years old to qualify, not when you take office. And I think that's where I ...

Mr. De Blieux That's right, that's right. You are saying that as long as he is eighteen, at the time he qualified and a registered voter, he can run for this office. That's all you need.

Further Discussion

Mr. Perez Mr. Chairman and delegates, I would hope that you would understand the present posture in which we now find ourselves. The amendment which was previously adopted and the provision recommended by the committee which provides that every elector, who at the time of his election has reached the age of eighteen years shall be eligible to membership in the House of Representatives, puts us in this posture.

Under our election laws, a person may not qualify...or rather may not register either until that person is eighteen years old, or unless that person will be eighteen years old before the next succeeding election. So we are now talking about, with respect to this section, the general election which is many months before the first primary. So what we have now provided in the amendment which is now adopted so far by the body, is that a person would be able to qualify as a candidate for a Democratic primary and yet not be registered as a democrat. So that what it would do would be to open wide the requirements that a person has to be...or rather it would do away with the requirement that a person has to be a member of the party before that person could qualify for office. And he also must be an elector.

So I say that in the present posture of what we have now adopted, we have created a real nightmare. Now I do not believe that the amendment offered by Mr. Landry completely clarifies the situation. It should provide that every person before he can qualify must qualify as a candidate, must be an elector and in that case, I believe we will have solved the problem. But in the present light, neither one of these provisions is workable, but the second provision by Mr. Landry is certainly more workable than the first provision which we now have.

So I would urge that we adopt the proposal by Mr. Landry and possibly we can come back and amend it to help straighten it out to require that the person be registered prior to the time that that person qualified to run.

Further Discussion

Mr. Roy Mr. Chairman, and fellow delegates, I don't want to get into a legal discussion of whether the views of some of us are correct or not with respect to what Mr. Landry's proposal does. I agree essentially with what he is trying to say, and I just wanted to say that I'm opposed to it and I ask if you would accept something else because I have a proposal coming up which I think clearly states the limitations which may be imposed and also eliminates the words "general election". We're presupposing that the legislature is going to continue with our democratic primaries, and it may be that in the future, we have open primaries which would, of course, do away with general elections. So, if it makes any difference, my provision that I'm going to propose subsequent to this is that every elector who at the time of election shall have reached the age of 18 years shall be eligible to membership of the House of Representatives or the Senate. Meaning that you may qualify, a person 17 years of age, will be able to qualify to run for the position if, at the date of the election he is 18 years of age. Secondly, in doing away with the notion of a general election because we may not have general elections. I just wanted to say that. Thank you.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

Mr. A. Landry Thank you, Mr. Chairman. The only thing that I can say is that in my 21 years experience as an elected official of my parish, I urge you to adopt this amendment so that we will not have the elections in the courts. Keep it out of the courts if we can. Thank you.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted: 82-25. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Roy]. Delete Amendment No. 1 proposed by Delegate Taylor and adopted by the convention on July 19, 1973. Mr. Roy would need to amend that now to delete the last amendment as well.

Amendment No. 2. On page 2, delete lines 32 in its entirety and on page 3, delete lines 1 through 5 both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Section 4A. Every elector who at the time of election shall have reached the age of 18 years shall be eligible to membership in the House of Representatives or the Senate."

Explanation

Mr. Roy Well, I've raised the issue that I think is a valid one with the distinction between what Mr. Landry has proposed and what we have adopted. Mine changes two things. It definitely states that at the time of the election, you must be 18 years of age. You cannot be elected prior to that time, and besides that, it obviates the chance of talking about dealing with general elections and gives the legislature the chance to go into open primaries without any problem. That's all I have to say. Apparently everybody has got his mind made up. I don't know what good questions will do, so let's just...I'd just as soon vote on it. If you think I'm wrong, vote against it.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

Further Discussion

Mr. Perez I only wanted to comment that this puts us right back into the same quagmire we just got out of a few minutes ago. I want to call that to your attention to be sure that you don't misunderstand what you would be doing. You would again be putting yourself in a position where a person could run in a democratic primary without him even being registered as a democrat and of course without him even being registered at all because under our law he could not be registered. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Gravel Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I want to make it absolutely clear as to the point that I tried to develop in my questions to Mr. Landry. Mr. Landry's proposal that has just been overwhelmingly adopted has to do with the qualifications for membership in the House or in the Senate. It's totally and completely disassociated from any age requirement with respect to the qualifications of a candidate who seeks either one of the offices of Senator or Representative. Let me tell you why I think that the Roy amendment should be adopted and why it should supersede what you've just done. I don't know how many of you are old enough to recall, but this is what I'm trying to avoid, and this is what Mr. Roy is trying to avoid. Many years ago I think the candidates name was Rush Holt. A man ran for the United States Senate, Holt ran for the United States Senate, from West Virginia. He was, I think he was 23 years of age. He got elected, but he could not serve in the United States Senate until he got to be 30 years of age. Now just so you'll know what you've done, that's precisely what the situation can be if the constitution does contain the provision that you've adopted that Mr. Landry sponsored. Now the distinction between his proposal and the proposal of Mr. Roy, is that Mr. Roy's proposal requires that at the time of the election the candidate would be an elector or 18 years of age. Now that's the only difference. You are going to admit of the possibility insofar as this particular language is concerned, if you don't undo what you just did of someone being elected to office that can't hold the office.

Questions

Mr. A. Landry You tell me how a person is going to qualify under the Louisiana law if he is not 18 and is not registered to vote?

Mr. Gravel You're presupposing that, Mr. Landry, and that I think is your problem and mine too, is that the provisions of the present Louisiana law are going to always remain in effect. I'll agree with you that if there are statutes that are supplementary to this, that it's possible to protect the result of what you've done. But it's going to take statutory provisions to do that.

Mr. A. Landry All right, what election are you talking about? The primary election, the general election, or what election, the second primary election?

Mr. Gravel The election, of course, has always been considered in Louisiana to be that particular time when the actual election takes place, which would be in my judgment, the general election. That's what the court ...

Mr. A. Landry My final question. Can the legislature of the state of Louisiana in an act of law state to the effect that an elector shall be younger than the age set by the United States Constitution?

Mr. Gravel For Louisiana purposes I think they could. One thing that you've done here too, Mr. Landry, just so there won't be any question about it, is you have eliminated the provision that was sponsored by Mrs. Taylor fixing the age of the elector at 18. You're leaving open now the question of the age of the elector that was foreclosed I thought by the adoption of the Taylor amendment. If you don't adopt the Roy amendment you have completely deleted from the law what you just overwhelmingly adopted when it was proposed by Mrs. Taylor.

Mr. Silverberg Delegate Gravel, isn't it true that the example you just used, I think it was the West Virginia situation where a Senator was elected who was 29 years old, I believe we had the same thing happen in Louisiana when Russell Long was elected. But weren't in each case, isn't each of these two men an elector at the time?

Mr. Gravel They were an elector, that's correct, but they were not eligible to serve in the United States Senate until they got to be 30 years of age.

Mr. Silverberg Well aren't you using an extreme example and isn't there a great deal of redundancy in this new amendment?

17th Days Proceedings—July 19, 1973

Mr. Gravel No sir, Mr. Silverberg. I don't think so. I think the Roy proposal does exactly what this convention voted should be done with respect to the age of electors. You've now eliminated that by the adoption of Mr. Landry's amendment. There's nothing in Mr. Landry's proposal that says anything at all about the age of the electors or the age of the eligibility of those who are going to serve in the House or the Senate. You're going to have to do that somewhere else. All that the Roy amendment does, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, is to say that for a person to be eligible for membership in the House of Senate, is that he has to have been, be 18 years of age at the time of his election. That's something certain and definite. The Landry proposal that you've just adopted is not.

Mr. Nunez The present constitution says that every elector under this constitution shall be eligible to a seat in the House of Representatives. Now what's so different than that and Mr. Landry's amendment? The statutes that 18 years old is a qualified elector and we're doing the same thing with this amendment. That's one question. Now the other question is how would a candidate qualify as a democrat or republican or what, if he's not a qualified elector? He won't be if he doesn't become 18 until the general election or whatever election he's talking about. If he qualifies in August, what does he qualify as? He can change his party affiliations after he wins the democratic... theoretically speaking he can do that. After he wins one primary, he can change to the other. I don't see any point in it, but he can do it.

Mr. Gravel Senator Nunez, I will admit that there can be other things done to cure the defects that I have pointed out. I'll admit that, but all that the provision does that was adopted, the one that was sponsored by Mr. Landry, does is to say that a person has to be an elector in order to be eligible for membership in the House or Senate. It doesn't have anything to do with the amendment. It's the fact that a person should be an elector at the time of this election, which I think should be in the constitution.

Mr. Nunez Well, what I pointed out to you, it isn't in the present constitution and we establish in the statutes that a qualified elector shall be 18 years old. It's there now and are you supposing that we're going to change that and make that 21? Is that what you...

Mr. Gravel I don't know. As it presently stands, we do not have any age provision with respect to electors in the constitution. After we adopted Mrs. Taylor's amendment, I thought at least with respect to the House and to the Senate, we did have a provision that persons 18 years of age were electors at the time of their election would be eligible for membership.

Mr. Guarisco Mr. Gravel, maybe you can clear this up for me. You use the Holt example. Now under Mr. Landry's amendment, in what instance would a person be elected and be too young to serve?

Mr. Gravel Unless there is something else done either in this constitution or by the legislature a person could run for the office of State Senator, for example, when he is say 17 years of age. Could be elected...

Mr. Guarisco How could he run at 17? Mr. Gravel, I don't understand.

Mr. Gravel Because all this provision has to do, all this provision addresses itself to is to the age of membership in the House. I'm not disagreeing that you can't otherwise put something in the constitution to cure what I consider to be the defect. I just think you're going to have to. Somewhere we're going to have to establish the age of an elector, either in the statute or in the constitution.

Mr. Guarisco Well isn't that something for another committee or another proposal somewhere else?

Mr. Gravel Well, maybe so. I'm not all that hung up on it. I think it's a defect in what we're doing. I don't think we're doing it properly, and I think it's better to provide in this article that at the age of 18, at the time of his election, that a person then will be qualified to serve in the legislature.

Mr. Burns Mr. Gravel, Mr. Ambrose Landry has argued very forcefully about being an electorate. Under this present amendment of Mr. Roy's, it says it shall have reached the age of 18 years, who at the time of the election have reached the age of 18 years shall be eligible and so forth. Suppose a person who became 18 years of age 10 months before the election and he registered and qualified. Under this amendment he would be eligible...

Mr. Gravel There'd be no problem at all.

Mr. Burns I can't see any problem in that. And if he didn't come within that age limit to where he could register and become a qualified voter, then he wouldn't be eligible to run for the office. But you've got a 12 month period in there. Besides that, the registration rolls close 30 days before an election so that adds another month on to it by which time he could qualify and become qualified.

Mr. Gravel Mr. Burns, I think the whole problem is this. I'm looking at it from the point of view of qualifications of members of the House and of the Senate. I think others are looking at it from the point of view of whether or not people are or not registered to vote. We're putting an article in the constitution which I think requires further clarification and further implementation. I think the Roy amendment is a self executing provision that should be in the constitution. That's all I think.

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Gravel, I'm a little confused and maybe you can enlighten me a little. Under Mr. Landry's amendment that we just adopted which I supported, I would like to ask you this question. The language of that amendment says every elector shall be eligible to membership in the House of Representatives or the Senate. Every elector. Assuming that, I'll use myself as an example, assuming I'm going to be 18 years old the first day of January, under this provision would I be able to qualify and run in the first primary in December under our present election laws? I would be 18 before I took membership in either body. I could register between primaries because I would become 18 and they open the books between primaries. I could become 18 in January while the books were being registered and I would be an elector before I received membership in either body.

Mr. Gravel That's entirely possible Senator.

Mr. Rayburn Is that possible under this present amendment that we just adopted?

Mr. Gravel Yes that is possible.

Mr. Rayburn Well that's what I'm trying to get clear in my mind because I'm rather confused.

Mr. Gravel But it's also possible, unless there are other constitutional or statutory provisions to supplement what Mr. Landry has proposed and what has been passed. It's also possible that somebody could run for office and not be an elector and not be able to start serving even if he was elected until after the legislature had gone into session. Now, all I'm saying is that if we maintain and keep the language that Mr. Landry has sponsored, that we've got more to do either in this constitution or by legislative action. That's all I'm saying. And I cite the example of the Rush Holt situation that we, I think, are all pretty much familiar with. Mr. Landry's proposal only addresses itself to a qualification for membership which doesn't mean he's not to start serving at any particular time.

17th Days Proceedings—July 19, 1973

Mr. Rayburn Well let me ask you this, Mr. Gravel. Under Mr. Roy's amendment where he says in Section 4A, every elector who at the time of election shall have reached the age of 18 years shall be eligible for membership in the House or Senate. Now, when would you consider a candidate to be elected? After the general election?

Mr. Gravel That would be the election. That's the only election...

Mr. Rayburn That's right. You'd be a nominee prior to the general election.

Mr. Gravel That's correct. The courts have consistently held that, that a primary is not the election. There are some cases that deal precisely with this kind of a problem growing out of resolutions...

Further Discussion

Mr. A. Landry Mr. Chairman and members of the convention, I rise in opposition to Mr. Roy's amendment for the simple reason that for 53 years our present constitution states that every elector under this constitution shall be eligible to a seat in the House of Representatives. The legislature has provided the laws to permit or to set out the qualifications for an elector. Under Mr. Roy's proposal, there is a question as to when a person becomes an elector. Under my original amendment a person has to be an elector, he has to be qualified in order to qualify to be a candidate; therefore mine is clear and precise and I hope that you will vote against the Roy amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Avant Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I ask you to vote against the Roy amendment because in all due respect to both Mr. Roy and Mr. Landry, I'm not satisfied that the matter is clear. I have an amendment which I have prepared and will offer which I think will make it clear. That will make the section read simply, every elector shall be eligible to qualify for nomination for an election to membership in either House of the Legislature. That makes it clear that you have to be an elector before you can qualify. I think that that is good because this idea of qualifying and seeking election in anticipation of being an elector either at the time of the general election or either at the time you take office, is fraught with problems. One problem I can see, you can't register until you become 18, but perhaps you can qualify. If you don't have to register as a voter, you don't have to declare your party affiliation, you don't have to declare whether you're an independent or anything other than that you want the office and you're going to be 18 either at the time of the election or at the time you will take office. For those reasons, I ask you to vote against Mr. Roy's amendment in all due respect to Mr. Roy, and vote for this amendment which I will offer later. It will simply make it clear by saying every elector shall be eligible to qualify for nomination for an election to membership in either House of the legislature. I think that that will make it clear that before you can qualify for the office, you have to be an elector. That means you have to be at least 18 years of age, you have to be registered and you have to meet the qualifications of an elector.

Questions

Mr. LeBlou Mr. Avant, is there any instance in which a 17 year old can register to vote before his 18th birthday except before the time of the 30 day period time the registration books close and say the first primary? Is there any other time that he can preregister providing he would be 18 at the time...

Mr. Avant Mr. LeBlou, I have to answer to you sir, that I just don't know I really don't. I understand that there is a provision for preregistration in anticipation of being 18 at the time of an election. But what the technicalities of that are, I frankly don't know.

Mr. Roy But Mr. Avant, the question is if the legislature chose to say that a person who preregisters at the age of 16 or 17 is an elector. If the legislature defined elector as a preregistered individual, then under your view and Mr. Landry's amendment, he could run and serve in the House of Representatives if he were only 17, or the Senate. Isn't that right?

Mr. Avant If they so defined it and if they have the power to so define it when we finish...under the constitution, if it's adopted.

Mr. Roy Wasn't it your view that Mrs. Taylor's proposal and the sense of this whole convention was that inasmuch as 18 year olds have been given the right to vote and what have you and they fight for this country, that we wanted them to be able to serve in the House of Representatives or the Senate? Isn't that the view?

Mr. Avant It is my intention, Mr. Roy, that a person who is 18 years of age and otherwise qualified can be either a Senator or a Representative. But now we're refining it down into an area of extreme technicality about what you're going to do with the fellow who is going to be 18 at the time he takes office or when the general election is held, but he's not 18 at the time he has to qualify for the first primary. I think we ought to make that clear. I don't think we ought to leave it up in the air where we're going to have a lawsuit to figure it out. I'll yield to any questions, otherwise I have nothing to say.

Mr. A. Landry Mr. Avant, isn't it correct that under the present constitution every elector under this constitution shall be eligible to a seat in the House of Representatives. Isn't it true that we are here giving the legislature a lot of power? Isn't it true that in 53 years, up until last year in 1972 until the constitution of the United States was amended to 18 years old, was the only time that the Louisiana legislature reduced the qualifications of an elector from 21 to 18? Is that correct?

Mr. Avant I think it's correct. If you say it's correct, sir, I assume it's correct. I do not know.

Mr. A. Landry Do you feel that the legislature, by just saying an elector, would go ahead and who represent their people. If they're going to reduce the age to 16 and say he's a qualified elector then it's up to them, and then that individual should also be qualified to be a candidate for Representative or Senator? Is that correct?

Mr. Avant The purpose of my amendment, Mr. Landry, is to simply make it clear that you have to be an elector and eligible to vote before you can qualify.

Mr. A. Landry I was not really asking a question about your amendment because it's not before us. Isn't it true that Mr. Roy's amendment sets it at 18 so if the Louisiana legislature wants to reduce the age of an elector from 18 to 17 that it would be locked in at 18 and that 17 would not be eligible and would not be an elector under the present constitution as Mr. Roy so advocates. That if they reduce the age to 17 then the constitution would be locked in under 18. Am I right?

Mr. Avant Yes, that's right.

Mr. A. Landry So it wouldn't be very good would it?

Mr. Henry Why do you rise Mr. Denberry?

Motion

Mr. Denberry I rise, Mr. Chairman, to move that we adjourn until 9:30 in the morning. I think we are all fuzzy on this. Mr. Avant has not another

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

READING AND ADOPTION OF THE JOURNAL

Personal Privilege

Mr. Asseff Mr. Chairman, delegates. Since I did not take my fair share in the prior debate, I will do it today. And I want to make it clear to the members, I will not ask again to speak on this subject under personal privilege. I am doing it once and which you may ignore. I am aware of the fact that I could not win a popularity contest in the convention, but too often my intent is misunderstood. I hope you will take what I say in the spirit in which it is intended. The desire for a good constitution that the people will approve.

Were I not gravely concerned about our procedure and our public image and sincerely want a good constitution, I would say nothing, and let the opponents profit by the mistakes we make. As they will do in the ratification act.

Do remember the fight does not end here, it will be fought before the people of Louisiana who will seek a judgment of us. Unless we present a reasonably united front, we might as well forget a new constitution. The issues alone will split us wide open. If there also is a split on other matters regardless of the result, there is no hope. There have been personality clashes. The minority, those who disagree with the majority, in many cases feel they did not have a fair chance and were ignored. And others fell left out.

As we well know, a person will fight you harder by wounding his pride, not giving him a fair chance and for personality clashes than he will of the issues.

It is possible to accomplish reconciliation on the issues but almost impossible on other grounds. I am not here to impress anyone, though that is being said, and certainly, I have no reason to do so. When I entered politics in 1952 by becoming Director of the Legislative Council I was selected by Circuit Judge, Robert Ainsworth of New Orleans. My education and background were thrown in my face. And here I have faced the same thing. It seems strange that my district which is poor, and has many illiterates does not hold it against me. But the educated members of this convention do. I shall vote my convictions and not on the issues unless I am convinced that the people want a particular thing and will reject the constitution if it is not included. That is what my people want me to do whether I get along with a person or whether it's good politics are immaterial to me. Over and over I have heard here, you must vote a particular way, it is good politics and have spent over thirty years in the theory and practice of politics and I think I know the game, since I won without knocking on the door.

I voted against reducing the age to the Senator to eighteen. I would vote against reducing the voting age to eighteen. I voted against single member districts and I will vote against equal rights amendment, if any. In voting against single member districts I voted against my best interest personally. For it is virtually impossible to beat me in that district.

All I ask is my right to vote on the issues as I think best. I am not voting against anyone as we of you seem to think. Vote as you please and I never will criticize you. I shall account for my votes at the proper time and the proper place to the voters of my district. And if I ever seek office again I will run on the issues above stated and on my vote.

I am in complete agreement with the Chairman that we must work as we must compromise. But to date, I have seen little of either though therein lies the hope for a new constitution.

The people are not enthusiastic about a new constitution. Most, haven't the faintest idea what it's all about. And many do not care. Our public image is at a low ebb. And many think we are wasting the state's money by the way we meet. Most think no good will come of it all. That spells trouble. For in recent years in Louisiana when the voters do not understand or do not care, they vote no. At the moment we are doing what the legislature does, we are moving slowly, working our meetings into our business or professional schedules and making the writing of the constitution a part-time job.

If we continue this way, we are going to have the same last minute rush with chaos and few knowing what is going on. Absenteeism will be high for many of us will be unable to work the long hours and the six days a week required.

I have listened to you without talking. Ignore everything I say but don't say you weren't told. We must discuss the matter and plan and stay here and work at least four days a week. If we do we can finish and go a good job. If we don't, I predict we will not meet the deadline, the last few weeks will be a nightmare. Provisions will be passed or defeated without thorough debate. Many mistakes will be made and the voters will reject the constitution.

It is difficult for me to understand how anyone can say we cannot think. We can, and we must. Certainly, we can't play it by ear. Have we forgotten by December 20th everyone will want to go home for the Christmas holidays. Then we have the Thanksgiving holidays. Style and Drafting will meet at least a month to review the completed document and present it to you for your consideration. And don't forget the football season begins in September and how many of you are going to come to a convention against the football game. Not many.

I urge the following...let us vote on the issues and only on the issues and not feel that it is a personal vote for or against it. Two, let us avoid personality clashes. We don't have to like each other but at least keep an outward appearance. Three, above all let us work four or five days a week until we see how we progress. If it is good then we can always reduce it. In doing this we will do a better job, will move faster, we will impress the public that we are serious, working hard and not wasting their money. And so improve our image.

It is argued that if we meet on Saturday we will not get a full house. I wonder how many of you think we are going to get a full house when we start meeting six days a week, fourteen hours a day. You'll be lucky if you get sixty percent. Let us use all our efforts to do what is best for the people of Louisiana. Let us put aside our personal differences and avoid personality clashes. If we disagree, let them be honest disagreements. But let us plan and set up definite schedules then we will all know what to expect.

The faith of a new constitution and good government in Louisiana may all hang in the balance. I would hate to see you stay here six months and get it rejected. But at the present moment, I predict it would be.

In conclusion, I want to say this Mr. Chairman, as you know the United Givers always say...ask have you given your fair share...I must concede that I have given my fair share in the discussion. I will not again repeat it, if you wish to ignore it, do so. But when the nightmare comes this is one delegate who will not be present.

Thank you Mr. Chairman, I appreciate your permitting me to speak and for at least some of the delegates listening.

PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

Mr. Poynter Committee Proposal 3, introduced by Delegate Blair, Chairman on behalf of the Committee on Legislative Powers.

A proposal making provisions for the legislative branch of government, impeachment and removal of officials, and necessary provisions with respect thereto.

The status today is that Sections 1 through 3 as amended have been adopted by the convention to date, and at the present time the convention has before it Section 4, and in particular, we adjourned yesterday with a pending amendment to Section 4, Paragraph A thereof, proposed by Delegate Roy.

[Amendment pending on Section 4 withdrawn.]

Amendments

Mr. Poynter At this time we have amendments offered up by Mr. Roy, Mrs. Taylor, Landry and many other delegates have their name attached as coauthors.

Amendment No. 1, delete Amendment No. 1 proposed by Delegate Taylor and adopted by the convention on July 19, 1973.

Amendment No. 2, on page 2, delete line 32 in its entirety and on page 3 delete lines 1 through 5, both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Section 4 A. Every person who is an elector and has reached the age of eighteen years at the time of qualifications for the office shall be eligible for membership in the legislature."

Amendment No. 3, delete Amendment No. 1 proposed by Delegate Landry and adopted by the convention on July 19, 1973.

Explanation

Mr. Roy Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this essentially is a compromise between blacks, cajuns, red necks, Republicans, patricians, city dwellers, youths, liberals, conservatives and moderates. What it says is, it locks into the constitution the notion that you must be at least eighteen years of age to serve as a member of either House. It also... and with that in mind that only the people be able to change the qualifications for that position. It also locks into the constitution the idea that you must be eighteen at the time of qualification rather than, as yesterday's proposal provided, eighteen at the time that you would be elected. That's a compromise because it's going to require the voters, of course, to set a specific date for qualifying so that all people will be treated equally—that is you won't have an independent able to come in and register at a later date than the democratic primary or the republican primary, something that Mr. Perez raised. That's all it does. There is a technical amendment in that qualification, the word "and" be left off of it and it just be qualification. I would like for you to make that amendment or the Style and Drafting Committee could if it did choose to do so at a later date. It's strictly a technical amendment. All of the authors are the people who initiated this whole concept of locking into the constitution a minimum age requirement, Mrs. Taylor, Mr. Landry, myself, Mr. Denney, etc.

Explanation

Mr. Juneau Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, now that we're through with the uncontroversial parts of this provision, I'd like to go on to Section 8. I thought it would be appropriate to indicate to you what the changes are with the present constitution with regard to the draft you now have before you. Number 1, the residency requirement for someone running for the legislature has been changed from a period of five years to one year, secondly, and an important change, is that the requirement that is in the present constitution for residence within the district for the period of one year has been changed to the word "domicile". Now, let me just offer this explanation in that regard. It is our appreciation that the word "domicile" is in fact a more restrictive word than the word "residence". By the same token, you can have but one domicile but you can have more than one residence. To be a domiciliary of an area, that means that that is the area where you intend to be your permanent home. The thought being behind the committee with regard to inserting the word "domicile", we thought that there ought to be one place where your residence is, where you intend to permanently live, the place wherein you can run for office. We further thought that this would give some continuity, some stability, to the area from which you run. It would require that you live and intend to permanently live... your intent at that time is to live in that particular area for one year before you run. We also have a provision in there with regard to a situation which may arise after reapportionment. It provides that after reapportionment if someone is in the legislature, that for that period and that period alone, that next four year term, that he would be able to run from any district which is created in whole or in part from the district from which he originally came. That takes care of the situation which conceivably arise with reapportionment. With regard to the vacancy, if someone changes his domicile, the seat of that member in the legislature is vacated. Now some question has arisen as to what happens in the situation, I'll give you an example that's closest to me would be, for example in Lafayette. If you lived in District 43 and you moved because of the legislative district that blocks away and you were then in a new district, would that vacate your seat? Under this provision, if you intend to change your permanent domicile and that's where you intended to move to, yes, that would vacate your seat. The position was this: that if you did not provide such a provision, then what you could have would possibly be just the same as what you have now, as I said, you can have more than one residence. So the issue is dramatized when you are moving from across the street, but it is much more acute when you are moving from one parish to another or moving from north to south Louisiana. The thrust of these provisions are to require that someone spend time and have a permanent attachment to that particular area from which he is running. We further submit that in this regard that the reason for having the domicile provision with regard to vacancy and with regard to an area, that if that's the area you want to represent, that's the area you ought to live in. I submit that that's a reasonable logical concept. I would move for the favorable adoption, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

Mr. Denberry Mr. Juneau, I have several questions. You say the general election in line 7. In view of the amendment to Section A, do you think that that should now be changed to, at the time of his qualification?

Mr. Juneau I wouldn't see any particular objection. Of course when we wrote the article, as you realize, it was written in context with the previous article. I think that would be consistent, Mr. Denberry.

Mr. Denberry Mr. Juneau, in line 8, at the end of the line, you have the word "actually domiciled" but later in the same paragraph you don't use the word "actually". Is there a distinction between the two? Because when you use the word in one place and don't modify the same word in the same manner, it's conceivable that there would be reason for that.

Mr. Juneau We didn't put that connotation on it, Mr. Denberry. The concept of the word "domicile" was the word we were trying to lock in. I personally don't see that problem but if there was a problem, I wouldn't have any particular objection, and I don't think the committee would either, to the elimination of the word "actually", if that's deemed to be a problem.

Mr. Denberry I also would like to know, Mr. Juneau, on line 10, the phrase "immediately preceding his election or qualification" that were also changed, does that apply to the two years residency in the state, as well as the one year residency or domicile within the legislative district, or does it only apply to the one year domicile in the legislative district?

Mr. Juneau You're saying whether the words "immediately preceding his election" apply to the two and one year provisions...

Mr. Denberry Correct. Or just to the one year provision. It wasn't clear to me and I just wanted to know exactly what you meant.

Mr. Juneau My understanding of the provision is that it applies to the domiciliary provision with regard to one year, Mr. Denberry.

Mr. Denberry It does not apply to the two...

Mr. Juneau That's right.

Mr. Denberry And finally, this is more stylistic than anything, I notice you use the word reapportionment in 4B but when you look down in Section 5, you talk only about apportionment. Is there any reason for that distinction or was that just stylistic?

Mr. Juneau No, but the point was raised earlier. I thought that after this thing was drafted that this particular language would appear probably throughout several sections of the constitution. I thought that that was a matter that would properly address itself to Style and Drafting.

Mr. Denberry Style and Drafting. Thank you.

Mrs. Warren Mr. Juneau, did I understand you to say that you felt that a person should live in the district in which he is running?

Mr. Juneau That's correct, yes.

Mrs. Warren Beginning at B and going down to the period on line 10, then when you leave there, going down to 10, it reads, "no person shall be eligible to membership in the legislature unless at the time of the general election he has been a resident of the state for two years and actually domiciled within a legislative district from which he seeks election for one year immediately preceding this election." Then on line 11 you start with an exception. I'm wondering if that exception there is to favor people or incumbents... incumbent elected officials. May I make that plain?

Mr. Juneau No, it was not thought to favor any incumbent. We did think that it was grossly unfair from the standpoint that if an individual is an elected official, was elected by people within a particular district, and that district theoretically, if reapportioned, would be split in half, then we thought that the people in that district for that term and that term alone should at least have the decision whether that individual should continue to represent them in that election. The reason was because he would have been domiciled in at least a portion of that district at the time that he was in office.

Mrs. Warren Why would you assume that he would want it or she would want it, whichever the case would be? The one running for office if he didn't any longer live in the district?

Mr. Juneau At the time he was serving in office, Mrs. Warren, he was in fact a member of at least a portion of that district.

Mrs. Warren I follow you. But why not if he was in a portion... why shouldn't he run from the one he is in? Not be able to run from any of it. Why shouldn't he run from where he is.

Mr. Juneau Mrs. Warren, again I can only tell you that the thrust of the thing was that we were trying to get for, not an extended period of time, but a period of four years for the people in that area to make that determination. The person submitting himself to office is not making the determination. It will be made by the people within at least a portion of that district would have the right to say well for this four year period we can retain that individual in office.

Mrs. Warren I still don't get it. I really don't.

Mr. Burns Mr. Juneau, did your committee consider that the same importance should be given to the residency requirement in the district from which the candidate runs as it should have for being a resident of the state for two years? In other words, it seems like to me it's just as important to the voters that a candidate should reside within the district from which he runs as it is that he should be a resident of the state for two years. I just cite this example. Suppose a person from a parish bordering the Arkansas line moves down to St. Tammany Parish, my parish which is in the extreme southeast corner of the state, and after he's lived there a year, he can't possibly know the people of that parish and the conditions that exist in the parish, but yet by some fluke some political alignment, he might be elected. So therefore, I ask you do you not think it's just as important that both of them should be two years?

Mr. Juneau Let me answer it this way. Under the hypothetical situation that you posed, Mr. Burns, Number one, he couldn't run as the legislator because, as I understand your hypothet, he would have only been in the state one year. He's knocked out by the two-year provision under the state requirement anyway; that's number one. Number two there is under the present law and has always been, a loner period of time to which you must be a resident of the state as opposed to a resident of the particular district in which you run. The theory was this that we do have a transient society and we do very frequently have people moving within a locality. Covington could move to Bogalusa and vice versa. It was thought that a one year period within the confines of the state of Louisiana was sufficient time for the people to know an individual and to give him sufficient time to know the problems of that area. We didn't want to restrict...we thought that the two year requirement for a state requirement would require someone to be familiar with the problems of this state, yet a lesser time requirement would be necessary on a local level within a district.

Mr. Burns I understand that, but it still doesn't change my mind.

Mr. Derbes Mr. Juneau, isn't it correct that under this proposal a person who would be elected from a reapportioned district might indeed not actually take up residence in that district until the election following the election in which he was elected? In other words, that the district may have an absentee representative for a period of four years, but nevertheless a duly elected absentee representative.

Mr. Juneau So far, you are talking about where he may live...would not be in that reapportioned district necessarily?

Mr. Derbes Correct.

Mr. Juneau All right. The only answer that I can give to you in that regard, Mr. Derbes, is that that is correct, but because of the nature of this language, he would be in an area that was created from a portion of that prior district, so we're not talking about the situation where someone moves from Lafayette to New Orleans or Shreveport to Baton Rouge. That's not the kind of problem we have.

Mr. Derbes Oh, I understand that.

Mr. Juneau But to answer your question, the answer is yes.

Mr. Derbes Did you consider in your committee's deliberation the possibility of merely waiving a district domicile requirement for such a candidate but requiring him to move into the district before he ran? Do you understand what I am saying? Rather than move into the district after he ran and won.

Mr. Juneau We considered that and we just didn't think that that was a practical or feasible requirement to put into the constitution.

Mr. Derbes Could you say why?

Mr. Juneau Well, the thrust of the thing is we're saying for a period of four years that the people in that particular area or adjoining areas could make that determination as to whether or not they wanted to keep that representative and they would know where he lived. We didn't think it was a mandate, Mr. Derbes, to tell someone during that four years under those peculiar circumstances you've got to move your house...sell your house and move four blocks away. I personally think that that would be an unreasonable demand.

Mr. Derbes Thank you.

Mr. Anzalone Pat, your last sentence beginning on line 20—any declaration of a retention of domicile to the contrary notwithstanding—don't you think that rather than allowing a person to have two residences, that this is actually going to inhibit him from having same?

Mr. Juneau I don't view it like that, Joe; I don't think anything inhibits an individual from having three, four, six, eight, ten or fifteen residences.

Mr. Anzalone But, if he does have three, four, eight, ten or sixteen, he's got to have one of them as his domicile, and one of the most legally binding methods of doing it, as you are aware of, is to establish be a declaration of domicile, but you are preventing him from doing that by this article.

My question is that if I have three residences how am I going to establish which is my domicile?

Mr. Juneau Well, as you are well aware, Joe, under the present law you can have but one domicile; there can not be but one domicile. The thrust of this is that an individual cannot on his own move that domicile...any declaration of retention of domicile to the contrary...we don't want to give him that latitude. We want that to be the determination. We don't give him the latitude to say I'm going to move that domicile just to fit the needs of whatever district I want to move into.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment Number One [by Mr. Casey]: Goes to the reprinted bill. On page 3, after the partial word "tion" at the beginning of line 18, strike out the period and before the word "the" insert the following: "and if he was a resident of this state for at least two years immediately preceding his election."

Explanation

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and Delegates, the proposed amendment which I'm submitting at this time is strictly a technical amendment to make that portion of this section relating to the election following reapportionment to require that a person not only be domiciled for one year, but also that in this case he must also be a resident of the state for at least two years immediately preceding his election, just as it is required for any other election prior to reapportionment where there must be a two year resident and also domiciled for one year. Strictly technical and I would urge your adoption.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Amendments sent up by Delegate Abraham. Amendment Number One: On page 3, line 10, at the beginning of the line after the word "election" insert a period and delete the remainder of the line. Amendment Number Two: On page 3 delete lines 11 through 17 both inclusive in their entirety. Amendment Number Three: On page 3, line 18 at the beginning of the line before the word "the" delete the word "tion" and delete the period.

Explanation

Mr. Abraham What this amendment does, is eliminate the one year-residency requirement within a district. It also eliminates the choice that a person has of running in either district due to a reapportionment, through a change of the district lines. Now, what I am concerned about, if a person has established residency in this state for two years, he may live in an area, a town, say he lives in Baton Rouge. This man may move across the street, but because the district lines are what they are he would be in another district. Now, here is a man who has lived in the town all of his life. He's known in this town. And simply because he's moved into another district, he's going to have to wait another year before he can run for office. This also means that the incumbent legislator, who lives in the city of Baton Rouge, might move to another district and he would not be able to run again. He'd have to lay out four years because he'd have to establish residency requirements one year in that district. Now, when you have reapportionment and you redraw the lines there is going to be some confusion. There are going to be some incumbents who would have to make a choice as to where to run. There may be many people who are not incumbents, who are not running for the legislature, but what you're going to do there is penalize that person. You won't penalize him but you're going to give him the choice to where he can run in another district. So, on the one hand, we're placing a one year restriction on a person. He's got to live in an area for a year, but on the other hand, we're saying you can run in either district if you like, due to reapportionment and we're not being consistent. Now, I'm not worrying about the person who moves from Baton Rouge to New Orleans who wants to run and has only lived there two or three months, because he's not going to be well enough known, and I don't think he would get elected. But I am concerned about the person who simply moves across town and then is not eligible to run for office. I am concerned about confusing the issue, because you can't have a lot of absentee representatives, whenever reapportionment occurs in this district, in which they do not reside. You can have a lot of absentee representatives whenever reapportionment occurs who can run in a district in which they do not reside. I therefore urge your adoption of this amendment.

Mr. Poynter Mr. Abraham, with your leave, sir, I think now it would be necessary for a technical amendment to delete the Casey amendment which goes into the language that you wanted deleted.

Further Discussion

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I think that Mr. Abraham has good intentions on this resolution, but I don't think that it will improve the provision as presently drawn and amended. In fact the business, I think it will do a lot of damage to it and I would like to oppose it for that particular reason. Let me tell you what happened in the last election. I know one case where a man moved from one district to a block. He was forced to move because of the fact that the interstate took his house and he had to find another place. He moved so that he might remain in the same district, moved about a block away from where he previously lived. Because of the reapportionment in the redistricting of his district, he was outside of the district and could not run for the office. I know a man here in Baton Rouge who had some candidates who had qualified for office because at the particular time they were eligible to run for the office and after the redistricting the candidates were not in the district as they had originally qualified for and therefore could not run. I certainly feel that the provision as presently enforced, is a good provision and I don't think you should deprive a man from running for office just because he has been redistricted so long as he was in the original portion of the district. It doesn't make any difference whether he is already a legislator or whether or not he is a candidate. He might have moved into the area with the idea that he is going to run for office at the next election. If the election should fall immediately after the reapportionment of the legislature, you would make him ineligible to run even though he has gone in and he has been campaigning for the office, you might say, for a couple of years. I know this is particularly true of some of the young people. They look forward to serving in the legislature and start campaigning in the area in which they are and they start campaigning. Then if you reapportion the district which they are in, they are automatically out. Under this particular provision just so long as he was a resident and domiciled within the area before the reapportionment, he is still eligible to run in that particular area in which that he might be. He can transfer his residence into the area which he wants to represent. I think it's good in order that you can get a better legislature. It's democratic and we ought not try to keep people from running for office, we ought to make it available to as many people as possible, cause then you have a better selection.

Let me make this last statement, Mr. Chairman. I want to say this. I have seen areas in which the candidates were very few because of the fact that there was some restriction on the candidates being able to run and as a result of that, the people suffered for representation. Not only for the legislature, but for other offices as well. I think we ought to encourage as many people as possible to run for office. Let the best man win, if he can. Now I'll be glad to answer questions.

Questions

Mr. J. Jackson Senator, just a while ago I believe Mr. Derbes posed the point that you could have someone in absentia representing another district. Now you talk about the democratic process, do you think that to some degree is some violation of the democratic process?

Mr. De Blieux As I see this, Mr. Jackson, there's no way that that can happen. He's got to actually be domiciled in let's say legislative district "A", but he qualifies for "B" and let's say he wins the election in "B". He can stay in "A" for one full term. That's my appreciation of the kind of example.

Mr. J. Jackson I take issue with you, Senator, because as the committee proposal is presently written and as reiterated by Mr. Juneau, it says that you can have a situation whereby a man can qualify being domiciled in let's say legislative district "A", but he qualifies for "B" and let's say he wins the election in "B". He can stay in "A" for one full term. That's my appreciation of the kind of example.

Mr. De Blieux I don't believe that is correct, Mr. Jackson, because of this. Let's suppose this. Let's take an area. Since I'm right here in East Baton Rouge Parish we'll say the East Baton Rouge Parish representative district. You have a person who resides in the northern part of the parish and that's where he wants to run from. Then you redistrict him and it so happens that the area that you place him in makes that particular area, makes him outside of the particular area in which the district is concerned. If you do that, you can allow him under this provision to move into the area which he wants to represent because he was a part of it before the election, before the redistricting. Therefore he would be eligible. He's still known within the area, that's where he campaigned, that's where he was to represent and the opportunity to take the chances whether or not they want him or somebody else. If you don't have this particular provision, you will eliminate that person who has possibly been campaigning for the office for a long time from being eligible to run. You're not going to have a person in absentia. He's got to be a resident of the area he represents. He must be a domiciled in the area. You're not going to allow him to change his domicile so that he might run.

Mr. J. Jackson Yes, Senator, I guess my only caution to you is whereas you point out the faults of the new amendment, I want to suggest to you that the present amendment as being proposed by the committee has faults, I think that exceed very greatly because. I still maintain the position that one, you are providing an optional choice for candidates for a district, and secondly, you are saying that when he qualifies just because he's a part of his old district, that he's eligible to run in some cases from two to four depending on how they cut the district. Not only that, but more so, you can represent another district up to four years without even staying in that district. I think if you would read the committee's provisions, it allows for that to happen. That the provision as offered by I believe Delegate...

Mr. De Blieux I'd just like to say this. If you knock out this provision, you will allow the gerrymandering of candidates, particularly potential candidates, out of a qualification to run for the office. That's what you'll do. You can eliminate candidates by redistricting regardless of the qualifications if you knock out this particular provision. I don't think it's good to do that. I ask that you reject the amendment. Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention. I think it's a bad proposal.

Mrs. Warren Senator De Blieux, I'm under the impression, and if I'm wrong correct me, that you are in favor of a person being able to run in a district that he does not live in, under special provisions.

Mr. De Blieux No, Mrs. Warren, he must move his domicile into that. He has the time to do that, but he has to live within the area. If he previously lived within the district which has been divided, or if he previously lived within the district that has been divided he can change from one portion of the previous district into another portion to run for the office. That's all that this provides for. Mr. Abraham's amendment will knock out that provision and I say that if you knock out that provision, it is possible to gerrymander out of districts potential candidates so as to favor somebody else. I don't think we want to do that.

Mrs. Warren Mr. De Blieux, you mentioned in one of your statements that a person might move within a district hoping to run for office. I'm wondering if the legislature, the representation that we are going to get...

[Quorum Call: 107 delegates present and a quorum.]

Mrs. Warren Senator De Blieux, I'm wondering if this amendment that you are speaking in favor of would not be in favor of individual legislators of being in the interest of the people. You mentioned that a person was well known in that area. There are some people living in parishes that are well known all over it, so he has his choice to run from any district that he would like to run from because he is well known.

Mr. De Blieux Mrs. Warren, I think it's the other way because regardless of how well known a candidate may be, if the people don't want him to represent them, they are not going to vote for him. But what I'm trying to do is preserve to the right of the people of a district to have the representative of their choice. This was you all together do that. The only way they can be deprived of a choice to run under the provision is by the committee's proposal is that he does not offer himself for election. After he has offered himself for election, it's up to the voters to decide whether or not they want him or not. I don't think that we ought to be able to gerrymander him out of a district in favor of another candidate if we should adopt Mr. Abraham's provision. That's exactly what it would provide for. I don't believe that we ought to be able to do that.

Mrs. Warren Mr. De Blieux, do you think reapportionment is to gerrymander people out of positions?

Mr. De Blieux Sometimes it could be. I've seen the legislature do exactly that. Of course the proposal was thrown out, but I've seen them make proposals in order for the benefit of individuals rather than for the benefit of the people. That's what I'm talking about. It can happen.

Mrs. Warren Well you say the legislature is the people, so I mean this doesn't put very much confidence in the legislature from this point. Wouldn't you think so?

Mr. De Blieux Sometimes some of us, even here, sometimes we forget about the people we represent. I hope that we don't do that, but unfortunately we are all human beings in that regard and we have our imperfections. I just want to guard against those imperfections taking over as much as possible.

Mr. LeBlieu Senator De Blieux, I've read a lot of what we're talking about of representative in absentia. If you took a theoretical House district which was composed of 5 precincts, between now and the next census one of those precincts filled up with people to the required number for one representative. At the next reapportionment, the other four precincts would be in different districts. Therefore any person who lived within the 5 original precincts, not only the incumbent but any person who lived within, any candidate or any person who wanted to be a candidate, who lived within the 5 original precincts would be allowed to run in either of those 5 plus any of the new districts that would be created of which he was a part. Therefore he could take his choice maybe out of 4 or 5 seats. I think you also stated this, within one year after his election and no matter from which district he was elected, he would have to move within that district and be a resident. Is that correct?

Mr. De Blieux That's not my understanding of the provision, Mr. LeBlieu. That is true that he could run, but he must first move into the area and establish his domicile. He does not have to live within the newly created area a year before he is eligible to run. He only has to have been a resident of the area from which the district was composed originally, in order to qualify for the election. You don't let him get elected then decide to move. He's got to move and create his domicile before. That's the way I understand the provision because it says he must be domiciled within the new district.

Further Discussion

Mrs. Taylor Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in support of Mr. Abraham's amendment. You know, it's about time we stop making special provisions for special people. It seems to me somewhere the committee thoughts were thinking in terms of protecting incumbents. I guess you find it strange that I would be here speaking out against this committee proposal being an incumbent. But I certainly have the belief that every individual should be treated equally whether he be an incumbent or not. I do not believe in giving special privileges to incumbents if, because of reapportionment, a portion of their district becomes a new district. I feel that every person should qualify from the district where he lives. No special people. It's as simple as that and I urge you to pay close attention and support the amendment that's been proposed by Mr. Abraham.

Further Discussion

Mr. Drew Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in opposition to this amendment and primarily to Amendment No. 1 which deletes and this pertains to all elections, the one year requirement.

If you will read this section you will see that Amendment No. 1 deleting "for one year immediately preceding his election, applies to all elections for the legislature." It does not only apply to the elections following reapportionment. If this Amendment No. 1 is deleted from the committee proposal, you are going to encourage and make it possible to have hedge hopping at any time you see fit. That proposal that is being deleted applies to all elections for membership in the legislature. For that reason I oppose it. On the second amendment which deletes lines 11 through 17, and while under the rules I am not at liberty to discuss an amendment which has already been filed and I thought possibly might come up prior to these amendments, I do have an amendment which will clarify this, lines 11 through 17 and I think make it much more workable and in accord with the will of the people. That amendment will be offered if these amendments are defeated or it will still be offered. But I sincerely urge you to defeat, in the event there is a division of the question, Amendment No. 1. If you do not defeat Amendment No. 1, it would mean that you could move from district to district to district within the metropolitan areas or in the rural areas and run from any district that you saw fit. That's what you would do by deleting that one year residency or domicile requirement. I don't think that's what the people of this state want. I think that they want a representative who has lived in the district long enough in he familiar with the problems and the people of that district. I ask that you defeat this amendment and permit me to offer an amendment which I think will straighten it out, as I do disagree with the provisions of lines 11 through 17. That part of this section would permit an incumbent or a non-incumbent in many instances, to have his choice of running in three different districts and not live in two of those districts but he could still run in them. However, he would have to move within the next four years into that district if he ran for reelection. It could very easily mean that a district was represented by a non-resident for a period of four years. I urge your defeat of the amendment. I'll yield, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

Mr. O'Neill Mr. Drew, do I understand that your amendment will not raise the requirements at all, only clarify?

Mr. Drew It will do nothing to lines 6 through 10 as written in the committee proposal, Mr. O'Neill.

Mr. O'Neill Okay good. Thank you.

Mr. Drew I urge your rejection of the amendments.

Further Discussion

Mr. Juneau Mr. Chairman, I'll make my remarks very brief. There are, of course, two separate issues and we can discuss this in context. I want to reiterate what Mr. Drew did and I think it's very, very important you consider this point. If you would adopt the Abraham amendment you are then saying that an individual does not have to live in a particular legislative district for any time, period of time, before he runs for office. I can assure you that I don't think the people of this state support that concept. For that reason and that reason alone at this juncture, I would strenuously oppose the adoption of the Abraham amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Fontenot I rise in opposition to this amendment and I'll make my remarks very brief. I'll take an example, perhaps we could understand it a little bit better. It's kind of complicated. Suppose somebody who are politically against each other, like I'm going to use the example Mr. De Blieux and Mr. Lawrence Chehardy who tend to be political opposites. Suppose one of them wants to move and run against the other man in his district. If you do away with this one year requirement Mr. De Blieux could move into Mr. Chehardy's district and run against him if Mr. Chehardy was running for the legislature or vice versa. Mr. Chehardy could move into Mr. De Blieux's district and run for the Senate if he moved the day before the qualifications. All he has to do is be domiciled the day before the qualifications. There is no one year requirement to be domiciled before he can qualify. So technically you're opening the door to some political figure moving into any district he wanted and I think it's a bad provision. I think we ought to vote it down. If we vote it down, maybe Mr. Drew would have an opportunity to propose his amendment. Therefore I move the previous question.

[Motion for the Previous Question rejected: 52-45.]

Further Discussion

Mr. Burns Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates I have no intent of prolonging this discussion, but inasmuch as I did express my views in questioning one of the speakers just now, I would like to rise in opposition to Amendment No. 1. It seems like it's always my luck, the few times that I get up here, that about the previous speakers speak on the same point and in the same view that I entertain. I would just add my voice to the three previous speakers in opposition to this Amendment No. 1. I haven't been impressed by the argument that's said in behalf of this amendment of Mr. Abraham's where they concentrate all of their arguments on the convenience of the candidates. I think that this convention has talked so much about the people, that in considering this amendment we ought to think about the people of these districts rather than of the convenience and the facility of making it so easy for candidates to hop from one district to another at their convenience. I think the people are entitled to have a candidate or a representative who has been in their district or their parish long enough to acquaint himself with the economy of the parish and with the people and their customs and habits to where the people will be served. I ask for defeat of this Amendment No. 1 and Amendment No. 2 and 3.

Closing

Mr. Abraham Mr. Chairman, there seems to be quite a bit of controversy on my amendment as it stands on the whole question. If I'm in order at this time, I would move for a division of the question between Amendment No. 1 and Amendment No. 2 and 3.

[Division of the Question ordered. Amendment No. 1 reread and rejected: 3-104. Motion to reconsider tabled. Amendments No. 2, 3, and 4 reread and rejected: 29-82. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Mr. Drew sends up the next set of amendments.

Amendment No. 2. Page 3, line 18, at the beginning of the line delete the word "tion" and delete the period.

Explanation

Mr. Drew Mr. Chairman, members of the convention, as lines 11 through 17 are written, and I will give you one example and it could apply to any metropolitan area or rural area. Let me take Mr. Fowler's district as an example. Mr. Fowler represents DeSoto Parish, Red River Parish, and Sabine Parish. That is the present district from which he was elected. If the committee proposal, and I understand what they were trying to do, but if the committee proposal on lines 11 through 17 remains in this proposal, it would mean that Mr. Fowler, in the event of reapportionment DeSoto was put in district 11, Red River in district 12, Sabine in district 13 with Mr. Fowler living in Coushatta which would be district 12, would be eligible to run in any one of the three districts that he may choose. That would give an incumbent, in particular an incumbent, a right to pick out the district in which he had the greatest strength and run from that district whether he was a resident or domicile thereof or not. That is the purpose of this amendment. Let me add this. This amendment has no effect whatsoever, but goes hand in hand with the amendment that was offered by Mr. Casey, and does not have to be deleted. If you will read Amendment No. 1, we are deleting lines 11 through 17 as Mr. Abraham's applied or had in his amendment. This may be surplus, I really don't think it is though. What it would do, and I will go back to Mr. Fowler's district, that should those three parishes be put in three separate districts, Mr. Fowler would have to run from the district in which he is domiciled and that would be the only district he could run in. Not select any one of three districts in which he had the greatest strength. Of course, under the committee proposal if he did run out of the one year residency, all change his domicile to another district in which he was running or elected from, he would not be eligible for reelection. This provision applies only to the elections after reapportionment. My main objection, although there was a division of the question, my main objection to Mr. Abraham's was that he was taking out the one year residency, all elections and that would certainly encourage hedge hopping and running in any district that you would have seen fit to run in. It would have been a question of whether we wanted Teddy Kennedy to come to Louisiana and run for Senate. I mean that would have been a good analogy to the situation. I think that under this amendment that is being offered here, you are going to have a Representative living in the district with the people that he represents and I think that is what the people desire. I move for the adoption of the amendment.

Questions

Mr. Denney Mr. Drew, only one question. Is there a reason for saying at the next regular election? Suppose the incumbent should die after apportionment and a new member of the legislature would have to be elected. Under your amendment as it is now written, he could then select his district.

Mr. Drew I think that any election after the first election after reapportionment would follow the general rules in the first part of the proposal, Mr. Denney.

Mr. Denney In other words, the word "regular" is inserted there for a specific purpose.

Mr. Drew It would be, in other words, it's the next regular election following reapportionment.

Mr. Denney I don't know that I made my point clear. Suppose there were a special election to fill a vacancy.

Mr. Drew After reapportionment?

Mr. Denney Yes.

Mr. Drew I think that would be the next regular election.

Mr. Denney You mean a special election would be a regular election, then?

Mr. Drew It would be the first regular election after reapportionment, yes sir.

Mr. Denney Thank you, sir.

Mr. Asseff Mr. Drew, though this does not alter your comment, isn't it true that Representative Fowler represents half of DeSoto, and I the other half? He represents 4 wards, it doesn't alter but I would like it clear for the record, that I represent half of DeSoto and he the other half.

Mr. Drew At the same time, Dr. Asseff, he could still run in DeSoto because a portion of his district is there.

Mr. Asseff That's correct. I said that.

Mr. Fontenot Mr. Drew, did I understand you to say that you were not doing away with the Casey amendment?

Mr. Drew No sir. I think it's probably surplus, but it does not have to be deleted.

Mr. Fontenot I can't understand how we're not because I thought the Casey amendment was an addition to the...

Mr. Drew All the Casey amendment did was restate the two year state residency requirement.

Mr. Fontenot Okay, let me ask you further. Your provision, as I interpret it, is an exception to the general election rules. It's an exception because it's a special rule for reapportionment elections. Is that correct?

Mr. Drew It's not the exception in the effect that the committee proposal is, Mr. Fontenot. There is some question and I'm sorry that I haven't been able to work it out on the thing. But apparently the reason I say that this may not absolutely be necessary because if a party is required to run in the parish in which they are domiciled, it more or less follows the general rules of all elections for the legislature.

Mr. Fontenot wouldn't it be possible for an out of state person or a person from New Orleans to move into your district after reapportionment, under your provision, and run against your member of the legislature? The only requirement is that he move there and actually be domiciled.

Mr. Drew That could very possibly be done, Mr. Fontenot. That's the question that I say that I don't know exactly the answer to and I hope maybe that there would be other amendments that would clarify that point. But as this now reads, in other words I think that the first part of lines 1 through 9 would very probably apply.

Mr. Fontenot I tend to disagree. It would seem like, don't you agree, that the first 5 lines of the general rule and then you however creates an exception. Isn't that correct? It creates an exception for elections after reapportionment.

Mr. Drew To some extent yes sir.

Mr. Fontenot And whenever you create an exception the previous sentences do not apply. Is that correct?

Mr. Drew That could possibly be the correct interpretation, yes sir.

Mr. Fontenot So as I understand it, if you agree with me, a person from say moving out of state could move into a legislative district and all he would have to do is actually move in and be domiciled and he could run after a reapportionment.

Mr. Drew Not from out of state, Mr. Fontenot.

Mr. Fontenot Why not?

Mr. Drew Because Mr. Casey's amendment requires two years state residency. Following this amendment Mr. Casey's reinstates the two year state residency provision.

Mr. Henry Before we go any further, if you don't mind, on the merits of this I think we've got a little technical problem, Mr. Drew, insofar as the Casey amendment is concerned. It appears to me while you are deleting lines 11 through 17, the Casey amendment took up on line 18 and you've got "and if he was a resident of the state for at least 2 years immediately preceding his election" just dangling there. Is that right, Mr. Clerk?

Mr. Poynter It would rather and the instructions certainly would be rather confused. If it's your intention, Mr. Drew, to keep the Casey language, I think perhaps a better way if we just added the Casey language at the end of the language inserted in your Amendment No. 1 and then add Amendment No. 3 striking his.

Mr. Drew Or delete the period after domiciled [...] Well if it is in order I would like to make that amendment.

Mr. Henry Well let's withdraw these and then....

Mr. Poynter If we come in, the problem would be at the "and" at the beginning. I don't think it would need to be there and make your language read "however, following reapportionment, at the next regular election for members of the legislature a candidate shall run from the district in which he is domiciled if he was a resident" picking up with the Casey language, but dropping the "and", if he was a resident of the state for at least two years immediately preceding his election." Then add an Amendment No. 3 to take off Mr. Casey's amendment.

Amendments

Mr. Poynter The language would read Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Drew], page 3, delete lines 11 through 17 and insert the following: "However, following reapportionment at the next regular election for members of the legislature a candidate shall run from the district in which he is domiciled." Then pick up the Casey language which you have in front of you dropping the 'and' "if he was a resident of the state for at least two years immediately preceding his election."

Amendment No. 2 stays the same.

Add an Amendment No. 3 striking out the floor amendment proposed by Mr. Casey and adopted by the convention today.

Questions

Mr. LeBleu Mr. Drew, Mr. Fontenot spoke and raised another question. I think what he was questioning you about is didn't you intend to require one years residence even after reapportionment? I think this could be added to your amendment while you are fooling with it, if you intended to do that.

Mr. Drew Conway, that's the question that I say that I'm not satisfied with this amendment as it's drawn because that is a hiatus at the present time. I think possibly an amendment will come along on that basis.

Mr. LeBleu The other question that I had, without your amendment to the committee proposal and when you refer to Representative Barber's district, mention was made of the incumbent but wouldn't the committee proposal allow any resident of either of those three parishes to run in either of three separate districts under your proposed reapportionment.

Mr. Drew I think the committee proposal would definitely allow anyone to be limited to incumbents and this is limited to incumbents.
If there are no further questions...

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Harmon, what you are actually doing with this... with your amendment, is removing the option of the elected representative to run in either district that he may be reapportioned out of.

Mr. Drew I am trying to prevent a district from having a representative that is a non-resident for a period of four years and that can be done under the committee proposal.

Mr. Anzalone I hate to say do you know or... but would you agree that probably a better amendment would be to allow him the option to run in either district but force him to move into that district within a certain time, a short period of time.

Mr. Drew Actually, Joe, the way this amendment is written, he could do it, and that is the reason I think it will probably be criticized by additional amendments as to whether the convention would require the one year domicile or not.

Mr. Anzalone Well, of course what I am saying is that as a practical matter, if I am an elected representative and going to run from another district and they don't want me, well I am not going to want to move there.

Mr. Warren I think that Mr. Drew has just about clarified what I wanted to ask because I had an amendment and if his was going to do the same thing that mine was going to do, I was wanting to save some time, so I am wondering if it is in order for me to let him see it, Mr. Chairman?

Mr. Henry Well, when he gets through speaking, it would be appropriate for you all to try to work out that, yes, ma'am, Mrs. Warren.

Mr. Juneau Mr. Drew, the one concern that I have is I appreciate the provision as you now have it drafted. An individual after reapportionment could merely move and establish a domicile within a period of two months. You don't have the one year restrictive period and immediately run for office as long as he would have lived in another part of the state for two years. Is that right?

Mr. Drew I'm afraid that could be done.

Mr. Juneau I don't have too much objection to what you're trying to do, but I don't like that provision and I think that's contrary to the initial portion which requires that a person live at least one year in the area from which he is running.

Mr. Rachal Yes, my question was the same as Mr. Juneau's, actually, but what disturbs me now is the way that you answered it when you said, "I'm afraid that is so," and I wondered if you are beginning to think that possibly we should have that one year requirement as is required in line ten.

Mr. Drew Well, Mr. Rachal, the one reason that I didn't put it in there because you have this possibility that did happen that a district... representative district line was a certain street and the incumbent representative lived on the street... on the side of the street that went into a new district. Now I don't know whether the convention would want to permit him to change his domicile across the street and run in his old district or not. And that is... and that did happen. Of course, it is not limited to incumbents, I mean it's anyone after reapportionment could possibly move into a district. That is a possibility as this proposal is written.

Mr. Rachal Yes, well your amendment then would mean that after reapportionment, it's open shop, so to speak, that anybody could move and run provided he has been in the state for two years.

Mr. Drew Except he would have to be domiciled in his district. He could not run from a district in which he did not live, or was not domiciled.

Mr. Rachal No, I mean he could immediately move in the new district and run without having to satisfy any residency requirements in that district.

Mr. Drew As I said, Mr. Rachal, I think that possibly needs some clarification.

If there are no further questions I move...

Mr. Avant Mr. Drew, I am just concerned about one thing and I want to make sure I understand it.

As I understand the committee proposal in its entirety, not just this particular language, it contemplates first that the reapportionment will be conducted by the legislature. That is not done then, under certain circumstances it may be done by the Supreme Court which I would take would mean a majority, or four justices of the Supreme Court would be the minimum.

And of course there is still always the final alternative that what happened when the legislature was last reapportioned could conceivably occur again. That still remains the possibility.

But however it is done, it is possible that whoever does it, if they were so constituted and inclined that I think that possibly more consideration should be given because under mine, under this amendment as written with Mr. Casey's incorporated into it, I believe that incumbent could then move into his old district and run as well as anyone else.

If there are no further questions, I move that this...

Mr. Flory Mr. Drew in pursuing that same hypothetical case, if the line was drawn and it was done by either the Federal Court or the State Court and they handed down the decision at five o'clock this afternoon and they said you have seventy-two hours with which to qualify, how could a man then change his domicile under those conditions in order to run from the district in which he would have normally run from without the reapportionment.

Mr. Drew I was trying to remember, Mr. Flory, as to the effect of a declaration. I mean how soon a declaration of a change of homestead is effective. Off hand, I don't recall.

Further Discussion

Mr. Fontenot Fellow delegates, I appreciate Mr. Drew, I appreciate the problem he is trying to alleviate, but I am afraid he is creating a bigger problem than he is trying to do away with.

By his amendment, as I stated previously, a member, a public figure could move to another district and run against another public figure if he so wished and I am against this. I think the amendment will create this possibility. Therefore I am against it. I think we ought to come up with another amendment to clarify exactly what Mr. Drew wants.

But I am afraid if you vote for this amendment you are going to be creating a bigger problem than you are trying to solve. Therefore, I move that we reject this amendment and I move the previous question.

Personal Privilege

Mr. Blair If we are going to have to come back and vote on each one, will you give me just enough time? I'm getting a little old and I'm running, but will you give just a little more time? I really wanted to vote on that last one. I didn't quite get there.

Mr. Henry Well, Senator, if it looks like you are going to vote right, yes sir, we'll let you get back there.

Further Discussion

Mr. Rachal Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this amendment by Mr. Drew bothers me. It really is following to a great extent the recommendation by the committee which also bothers me.

It is difficult for me to see why a newly reapportioned district should be made open prey for anyone in the state who wants to run in that particular district, and to me that's what this amendment will permit.

I'm a little bit further concerned because it seems to me that we are more concerned about protecting an incumbent than we are about the principles of reapportionment. Reapportionment as I understand it is done to give the people in the district better representation. It doesn't necessarily mean that a person who has run has to be in another, which is not outside of that district, needs to be given any special privileges in order to run in that district because by the same token, an individual in the newly created district may have an opportunity he did not have before. He should not be disadvantaged by running against a professional. And it probably will offer an opportunity for someone who would otherwise not run have a chance to run and represent the people in his particular district. I don't know that the legislators will gerrymander someone as somebody's arguments have said, out of position. If it is he is a part of that gerrymandering and maybe it is not popular enough in the legislature.

But it bothers me to think that we seem to be giving more concern to an incumbent to protect his right to remain in the legislature, than we are about giving opportunity to those who may not be in that legislature.

So I urge you to defeat this amendment so that we might delete lines 11 through 18 and better serve the interests of all the people within that newly created district.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendments rejected: 46-63. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Recess

[Quorum Call: 94 delegates present and a quorum.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment proposed by Mr. [J.] Jackson as follows:

Amendment No. 1 on page 3 delete lines 11 through 18 both inclusive in their entirety, and on line 18 delete the portion of the word "tion" and insert in lieu thereof the following, quote, "however, at the first general election for members of the legislature following the reapportionment of the legislature, any person may qualify for election to either House of the legislature from the district in which such person is then domiciled, if he was domiciled in the prior district for at least one year immediately preceding his qualifications.

Explanation

Mr. J. Jackson Presently the concern about the committee amendments is that it has an arcan effect. In fact, the committee proposal as presented allows someone to swing from one district to another district and at the same time allows him for a period of time up to four years to represent that district in absentia. The arguments that I've heard against it is that you may if you say that just provided by law or just that he must meet a one year residency requirement so that this person may not be someone. My amendment allows that a person after reapportionment that a person can qualify for a new legislative district with the requirement that... My amendment tends to address itself to the problem saying that 1. a person must be domiciled in a new legislative district and that the one year requirement will apply to him... My amendment tends to address itself to the problem saying that 1. a person must be domiciled in a new legislative district and that the one year requirement is in the prior district. What this does in effect, allows someone who feels as though he's been gerrymandered out of a district to set up a domicile at qualification time and at the same time it waives the one year requirement for the new district that at the same time maintains some degree of residential requirement in the fact that he must have resided in the old district.

Questions

Mr. Alexander: Mr. Jackson, is it the intent of this amendment to apply to all elections, primaries, etc.

Mr. J. Jackson No. It says Rev. Alexander that at the first general election for members of the legislature following reapportionment so it wouldn't apply to all elections because of the possibility you may have two elections and maybe up to four primaries during the course of ten years.

Mr. Alexander I'm trying to determine what you're trying to remedy here.

Mr. J. Jackson What I'm trying to remedy in effect Reverend, and I'll try to explain it again is the fact that the basic concern by the committee proposal is that someone could run in the district and he doesn't have to be domiciled. I'm saying in my proposal that he must be domiciled. The second problem with the committee proposal is that there has been some concern on the part of delegates that how can you have a one year residential requirement for a new district, particularly, let's say, if you move something like one month before the election and third thing that I'm doing is, I basically feel that you have a principle whereby someone must stay in the district they represent and what I'm attempting to do is fill that requirement, at the same time saying he must have at least one year in the old district in which he moved.

Mr. Alexander Of course my concern Mr. Jackson here is with the word general.

Mr. J. Jackson I have no problems Reverend if you feel as though that is going to eliminate him from the primaries but it's my appreciation that if a man qualifies, then further down in the paragraph it says that he must qualify in the district which he's then domiciled.

Mr. Alexander Let me see if I can make myself a little clearer. It appears to me that your language would refer to the general election only but there could be some other qualifications for primary elections and that would make the kind of difference that I don't think would be consistent with your whole intent. I think your interest is to connect ...

Mr. J. Jackson Reverend if you look at the language that says any person may qualify for election to either house of the legislature from the district in which such person is then domiciled. So in other words if he decides that because his district has been reappointed, before he qualifies then he moves into that district which means if there is a primary that exists and is run in that district then he is eligible to run in that primary. I think the meat of the substance is because we may at some point decide to go to open primaries, is to say that, not to take out the fact that he couldn't be elected at the general election.

Mr. Alexander Don't you think it would be safer to say the first election, instead of general election, because then you confine it to the general election after the primaries.

Mr. Alexander I have no major objections to that.

Point of Information

Mr. Alexander O.K. You may have to withdraw it to include that language because I think technically, it may not work because of the word "general election." Am I right Mr. Chairman? Mr. Chairman we're raising a technical question here about the wording. The word general election would confine this provision if adopted to general elections and would eliminate primary elections. Isn't that correct?

Mr. Henry I think what you're doing is calling on me to make a judgement which more properly we should address to Justice Tate because this is where it would end it. I don't mean that literally but it's a decision or judgment which I don't think I, properly speaking have the authority or right to make. If there is some confusion insofar as the amendment is concerned and clear verbiage could be used and certainly should be used but I don't believe it's at the discretion of the chair to make such a determination as to whether something is legally correct or incorrect.

Mr. Alexander I see. I will yield to Justice Tate.

Mr. Henry No sir. Justice Tate isn't working on the bench today so he won't get to answer that either.

Questions

Mr. Kelly Mr. Jackson, I think I realize what you're trying to accomplish but there's one thing in your amendment that disturbs me and that is the latter part of the third line and then the last two lines. If he was domiciled in the prior district for at least one year immediately preceding his qualification. Am I to understand that what you're trying to accomplish in this amendment is that in order for a man to seek a place in the legislature, he must be domiciled in the new district at the time of the time of the election

Mr. J. Jackson Right. At the time of qualifying for the election.

Mr. Kelly What does the statement of being domiciled in the prior district have to do with the concept that you're trying to advocate here?

Mr. J. Jackson The concept is that the problem with the new district is that there has been some arguments fostered that some people will not have the residential requirement of one year for a new district, a new legislative district, particularly if he moved a month or anything less than twelve months before the election. What I attempted to do is set in a residency requirement, a one year residency requirement, to refer where you have to be a part of some district prior to the creation of the new district, so in essence prior refers to any other district created prior to the creation to the new district.

Mr. Kelly Could not this be accomplished by the first part of your amendment which simply says "delete lines 11 through 17 and tion of line 18". Would not this accomplish the same purpose?

Mr. J. Jackson No, I think we just rejected an amendment to that extent because that amendment did not address itself to the argument about disenfranchising some people who did not meet the domicile requirements, particularly if they happened to be gerrymandered and they did not move within the fifty days say they moved within a fifty day period. It didn't provide for those kind of situations where someone could be gerrymandered out of their district. I think that was the thrust of Mr. Drew's amendment.

Mr. Juneau Johnny, I understand what you're trying to do but I think this is a bad amendment. As I read this amendment, under the reapportionment year, if the individual was domiciled in his prior district for a period of one year, in this amendment he could run in any district in the State of Louisiana after reapportionment. That's what it says to me. Is that correct?

Mr. J. Jackson Mr. Chairman, I think that the basic argument that I did not move from my district... Let's say I move in another district. That's not a part of my old district. Should I then be denied the right of running? Let's say I move from North Baton Rouge to South Baton Rouge, in the course of moving I'm not an incumbent but just a candidate. Should I still be denied the right of running in that office so you have that kind of problem when you don't at least see some kind of... if you try to word it as I understand you would like for me to word it. One way of solving it is just eliminate our one year residency requirement but the problem is you've got to establish some basis of requirement and what I've attempted to do is not to limit them to this particular district because a man may want to run somewhere and my position is that if he moves uptown and he sets that up as his domicile then he ought not be disenfranchised from running. I don't think we can do anything to prevent a person from moving where he chooses to move. I would hope that we wouldn't but at the same time I think that we ought to provide some protection that if somebody is going to play tarzan that where they land is where they are going to represent.

Mr. DeBlieux Mr. Jackson, let me see if you and I understand each other. The first sentence of section B requires that a candidate must be a resident of the State for two years and domiciled within the district from which he runs for one year. Is that correct?

Mr. J. Jackson Right

Mr. DeBlieux Your amendment is supposed to make an exception to that. Just how do you change those particular words of qualifications by your amendment?

18th Days Proceedings—July 20, 1973

Mr. J. Jackson Based on the arguments we have heard this morning, the only exception is to the extent that one, let's say if a person is gerrymandered out of his particular district, it's possible and it's conceivable that under the first section, the first lines you just referred to, he could not be eligible to run because he would one, not have one year residency requirement in the new legislative district. I think that's the argument we heard this morning. So what I'm saying is that he can run in any district he wants to run providing that he moves and that he has a residency requirement in some prior district before.

Mr. De Blieux In other words, if I understand your amendment correctly, if he resided in the parish of East Baton Rouge naturally he would be in a representative district. Suppose he resided here ten years and decided he wanted to move down in Orleans parish and run from one of those districts down there, he could do that...

Mr. J. Jackson Provided he meets the requirements of domiciliary...

Mr. De Blieux Your requirements says he must reside within that district for one year. Now wouldn't he meet those qualifications of the first sentence because he only has to be domiciled in a district for one year before he can run. Isn't that true?

Mr. J. Jackson Let's use your same example. What if he stayed in the State for ten years and moved to New Orleans ten months later before the final reapportionment was... before the election was to be held. Then according to what you say, on this first amendment, on the arguments I heard this morning, he would be disenfranchised because he has the two year requirements but he does not have the one year requirement.

Mr. De Blieux That's right but you can still require them to have one year requirement.

Mr. J. Jackson That's a matter of him having one year requirement in some prior district, Senator De Blieux, and...

Mr. De Blieux In other words, you want to remove the restriction on how long he has to reside in the new district before he can run.

Mr. J. Jackson Right. But all I'm saying is before he can run in that new district he must be domiciled in it and as I appreciate it there is some judicial distinctions between residence and domicile and that in order to... the courts have interpreted domicile to be more permanent and you just can't automatically say one day before qualification that this is my domicile. I think if someone contested it as Mr. Drew mentioned, that possibly what you would have is the court interpretation of the word domicile so I try to word it this way as to allow for those of us who feel that he ought to come from the district he represents and to allow that persons who want to run would not be disenfranchised.

Mr. De Blieux Now let me see if I understand you correctly. So long as he was domiciled in some other district for one year he can move into any district he wants to and run upon, you might say, a moments notice.

Mr. J. Jackson No.

Mr. De Blieux Well, that's the way I read you.

Mr. J. Jackson In order for him to qualify, he must be then domiciled in the new legislative district.

Mr. De Blieux How long does it take to establish a domicile? Can't you do that upon an affidavit?

Mr. J. Jackson No. And as I appreciate it, and maybe Mr. Drew might want to comment, I think it's a greater period than you can just arbitrarily come up and say I want to just move over there and so this is my domicile. I've heard anywhere from six months to a year but as I understand it the biggest... the courts have interpreted...

Mr. Henry Mr. Jackson, you've exceeded your time so please wind up your remarks.

Further Discussion

Mr. J. Jackson Fellow delegates, the major objections to committee proposals is that in effect it does allow someone to play tarzan and represents a district for four years without living there. The second objection is that it provides the kinds of options without the necessary requirements and what I have attempted to do is to allow someone to run wherever he wants to run provided that he meets three requirements. One, that he meets the two year State requirement. Two, that at the time of qualification for any new legislative district he must then prove domicile in a new legislative district and that three, to meet the problems of the one year requirement is to provide him that he at least have one year requirement in some other district. Now, as a matter of fact you could possibly take off the last one year requirement because if he has been in the State for two years then he normally fits that because he lived in some district but this is an attempt to get around the concept that someone play tarzan without living and representing a district without living there. It attempts to address itself to those, particularly disenfranchising someone who just happens to be gerrymandered out of a district.

Further Discussion

Mr. Anzalone Ladies and Gentlemen of the convention, delegate Jackson has a proposal wherein a representative of the people should live and reside with his people which is good. But what Representative Jackson is attempting to do he is not doing with his amendment for these reasons. He is saying that you have to be domiciled in the new district at the time you qualify to run. There can be and will be possibilities where this would force an incumbent representative to move away from the district that he now represents into a new district which is diametrically opposed to what Representative Jackson is saying, coupled with the fact that if you leave in a residency or domiciliary requirement of one year you are going to have to second guess the final judgment of the Supreme Court as to where you are going to have to be living at the time you run for office. If we could be sure that the Supreme Court or the legislature was going to reapportion itself in excess of one year prior to the date of qualification this would have some merit but there is no assurance that this is going to happen. These are the basic reasons that I urge your rejection of the amendment.

Questions

Mr. Kelly Joe, do you not agree that in order for Mr. Jackson to accomplish the purpose which I think he is trying to accomplish, all he needs to do is delete lines 11 through 17 and "tion" on 18.

Mr. Anzalone No. Because what you're doing if you do that, you are going to eliminate the possibility of someone who is in a gerrymandered or reapportioned district to make his choice of which district he is going to have to live in prior to one year before qualification and there is no assurance of the fact that the Supreme Court or the legislature is going to finally decide on the reapportionment in excess of one year before qualification.

Mr. J. Jackson Isn't it a fact Mr. Anzalone that the two prior proposals did indicate just deleting lines 11 through 17?

Mr. Anzalone I don't remember.

18th Days Proceedings—July 20, 1973

Mr. J. Jackson Yes. Mr. Drew's and Dr Abraham's. This provided that you must have two years State requirement, one year residency in a legislative district.

Mr. Anzalone Right.

Mr. J. Jackson And, in fact, this convention defeated both of those propositions on the basis that one, for the case you mentioned, you could disenfranchise somebody and that two, there is a possibility someone would not meet the residency requirement in the new district.

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Jackson you bring up a very good point. Let me answer you this way. If you're going to force somebody to live in a representative district one year before they qualify, do you have any assurance that after the census is taken in 1980 that the reapportionment is going to be final more than one year before the date of qualification. What you're forcing somebody to do is second guess the final judgment of the Supreme Court.

Mr. J. Jackson Do you also firmly believe that if someone is going to represent a certain district that the least requirement that he ought to live there at the time he runs for that particular district. That's the least requirement.

Mr. Anzalone Of course you know I've got an amendment and I say this. If you're elected for a term of four years to represent the people of the seventeenth ward of Orleans parish that you should live there for four years. Now if in the ensuing four years you're going to represent the people of half of the seventeenth ward and part of the eighteenth ward, then I think most certainly you should live there. But I don't think it is reasonable when abandoning those people that you now represent for the sake of saying we're going to live with the people we may represent in the future.

Mr. J. Jackson Would you also be in favor of an amendment to allow voters to register in any district wherever their representative is some voters who may live in whole or part of some old district to register in the new legislative district if they have been gerrymandered out.

Mr. Anzalone If they live there that's fine.

Mr. J. Jackson They don't live there at present but they could vote there with the possibility of moving there before the next general election.

Mr. Anzalone The only way we in the country would agree to something like that if is you let us vote in two places.

Mr. J. Jackson Yes, but do you know that is the provision of the committees' proposal right now.

Further Discussion

Mr. Tapper Mr. Chairman and members of the convention, I think very brief. I have to oppose Mr. Jackson's amendment. I think I know what he is trying to do and I am not against what he is trying to do, but I don't think he is doing what he wants to do here. I believe this amendment will do basically what the Abraham amendment would have done and that would be to allow anyone to move into any district right before qualification, register, qualify to run, and run. I don't think this is what we want to do and I don't think it is what the people in the state want to do. I believe that any person who wants to run for office from a particular district should be living in that district for a particular time. Here the committee has come up with a proposal that one year is that time and as far as domicile, we are just playing with something here that is very abstract because the Supreme Court has already ruled that you can establish domicile in thirty days. Yet our state courts have been battling with it for years and years and years as to what the interpretation of domicile is. I don't think Mr. Jackson is doing what he would like to do, I believe that this amendment would do would allow me to move right before qualification time, to move to Baton Rouge if I so chose, and run here for the legislature. Now, I don't think that this is the way it should be done. I urge the defeat of the amendment.

Further Discussion

Mrs. Warren Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, each morning when we come in to assemble, after we say our prayer, we say we pledge the allegiance to the flag of the United States of America and for the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible with liberty and justice for all. I would like for you to underscore liberty and justice for all. I am going to oppose Mr. Jackson's amendment for the same reason I opposed the others. When you begin to make exceptions, you are going to have to make exceptions all the way down the line. I don't feel that a person should be able to go in the legislature to represent someone when he doesn't live there. I can't represent you for four years and he can't run any more, then there is no accountability there. I can't oppose you because you are not going to be able to run any more so I am just going to have to take whatever you dish out. I've heard some of the legislators say "Put trust in the legislators." Then, today, I hear some of those same legislators say "I can't trust the legislators because they might gerrymander me out of my district." What are we going to do? Are we going to gerrymander our constitution to provide for special persons to have the privilege of running for office? Are we going to have a constitution for the people and by the people? If so, let us give every citizen the same opportunity. If an incumbent can run in a district and he doesn't live in it, then give the other person the same opportunity to run from a district. But I do believe that anybody can be better represented if he represents the district from which he comes from. In the first place, if he wants to do good and this is his idea, if he is in my district and he is going to represent me, I am sorry to be personal about it, then he is going to do what is good for me and him. But, if he lives in another district, he is going to be divided between two opinions: whether I should represent the district which I am living in, or shall I represent the district that I just moved out of. For that reason, I am going to ask you to deal with your conscience and defeat this amendment and let's make it all for the people and by the people. Thank you.

Mr. Henry The gentleman I believe wants to withdraw the amendments at this time, Mr. Tapper, so will that...Are you going to withdraw them now?

Mr. J. Jackson Mr. Chairman and members of the convention, the motive for withdrawing it is because it is a technical amendment, not as a matter of fact that I want to favor some incumbents. I just want to make this point perfectly clear, that we voted on two occasions to what Mrs. Warren and some members feel particularly, that we ought to have domicile in the district and they ought to have domicile in the district from which they are going to represent, but we have defeated that and unless we can come up with something that provides for one domicile and at the same time assuring that no one is disenfranchised whether he be incumbent or candidate, then I think we are going to be in a box. I am withdrawing my amendment to maybe more properly word it and will submit it at a later time.

Point of Information

Mr. Fulco Mr. Chairman, as a point of information, is there some way that we can organize or get a committee who can check these amendments out and discover whether or not there may be a hiatus or whether there may be any other needed corrections so we can save some time. We have lost over an hour and a half or two hours today. Is there some way we can have a committee to which we delegates can appear before in reference to any amendment that we plan to introduce?

Mr. Henry Mr. Fulco, there is no provision for such a committee at this time and I would imagine that the delegates to this convention would feel that they were severely hampered and I would agree with them, if there was any move which would attempt to prevent any member at any time from introducing an amendment which he felt was germane and appropriate and I think we would save a lot of time doing less talking and more reading on these amendments then we could speed up the process, Sir.

Mr. Fulco Mr. Chairman, I don't want to see them deprived of introducing amendments, certainly not.

Mr. Henry I know of no way we could accomplish that. You have been in the legislature, Mr. Fulco, a lot longer than I have. We have the same problem there. It is a part of the problem insofar as a legislative process is concerned and we just are going to have to live with it. That is why we are going to have to work long and hard and talk as little as possible.

Mr. Fulco That is why I just thought maybe it might not be a bad idea, just to help all of us delegates.

Mr. Henry Mr. Fulco, I will be happy to appoint you as a committee of one, and I am not being facetious, if you can come up with a rational idea that the delegates will accept, I will be in favor of it, but I have given it some thought and the clerk has, but I don't know of any process right now. I will be glad to give it some thought, Mr. Fulco.

Mr. Fulco I will appreciate it if you will. I think it will save the convention a lot of lost important time.

Mr. Henry I think your point is well taken, Sir.

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [By Mr. Lennox], on page 3, line 8, at the end of the line after the word "and" delete the word "actually."

Amendment No. 2, page 3, line 9, at the beginning of the line, before the words "the legislature", delete the words "domiciled within."

Amendment No. 3, page 3, line 16, immediately after the word "person" and before the comma, delete the word "domiciled" and insert the word "resided."
Amendment No. 4, page 3, line 16, delete the words "was domiciled" and insert in lieu thereof "had resided."

Amendment No. 5, page 3, line 18, end of the line, delete the words "domicile" and insert in lieu thereof the word "residence".

Amendment No. 6, page 3, line 20, at the end of the line, after the words "retention of" delete "domicile" and insert in lieu thereof "residence".

Explanation

Mr. Lennox Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, when this matter was brought to my attention first, it appeared to me that these amendments were technical in nature, but in all candor I must say that I understand that the words domicile and/or resided was apparently debated at some length with the committee. In any event, I bring this to your attention. It is my understanding, and incidentally the entire subject matter of amendments one through six have the end result of replacing the word "domicile" with the words "residence" or "resided". The present law requires that a candidate be a citizen of Louisiana for five years and an actual resident of his district for two years immediately preceding his election. The proposal of the committee would require that he be a resident of the state for two years and be "actually domiciled" within his legislative district for one year immediately preceding his election. The present law has been interpreted by Louisiana courts to require that a candidate have a bona fide residence in the district he represents, but to allow him other residences outside his district as well. The courts have never really given a precise definition to the term "actual residence" as related to legislators' qualifications but have indicated that it is primarily a matter of intention illustrated usually by the legislator's conduct and the circumstances of his life. The courts have declared that he must spend more than one or two nights a week in a district to qualify as a candidate from that district. The actual effect of the altered wording in the proposed article cannot be determined without judicial interpretation. Some indication of possible effects can be obtained from previous judicial interpretations of the term "domicile." It is more of a legal term than residence. A person can have several residences but he can claim only one of them as a domicile. The civil code defines domicile as a place one has "as his principal domestic establishment," in which he makes his habitual residence. The code further provides, and jurisprudence seems to support, that if a person resides about equally in several places, he may declare his intention to have one of them as his legal domicile. However unless he resides at each equally, his domicile is necessarily where he spends the most time. Again, courts have never established a precise formula for making this distinction but have rules that where a person spends two-thirds of his time at one residence and one-third at another, his domicile is legally the former. The probable effect of this word change is that a candidate with multiple residences would be required to spend at least one-half of his time at the residence within his district as well as to declare it to be his legal domicile according to provisions in the Civil Code. I ask your adoption of the amendment.

Vice Chairman Miller in the Chair

Questions

Mr. Derbes Mr. Lennox, I am impressed with the candor in which you explained your amendment. What you have done, in effect, and I would like to be specific on this, you have made the requirements for candidacy less restrictive than the committee proposal.

Mr. Lennox I think that is correct as a matter of fact, Mr. Derbes.

Mr. Derbes May I ask you sir, on a philosophical matter what interests will be served by permitting a person to choose the district from which he runs? In other words, to give him multiple choices for any given election.

Mr. Lennox I think the only interest to be served is to avoid future litigation involving candidates elected to office where some of the requirements of his district. Where he, in fact, has two or three or four residences.

Mr. Derbes But isn't it a fact, Mr. Lennox, that also the requirement of residence could become a matter of litigation? That is, a person may have two suits in a closet in his office on Baronne and Gravier, and a couch on which he could spend the night, and he may have a home in another district.

Mr. Lennox Mr. Derbes, it is my understanding and I don't know this first hand, that there has been some jurisprudence on that subject matter.

Mr. Derbes But in any case the requirement of domicile as it relates throughout the Louisiana Civil Code, although it has been a matter for judicial interpretation, has always been resolved in one way or another by the courts. Isn't that a fact, also?

18th Days Proceedings—July 20, 1973

Mr. Lennox I would assume that that's the case, yes sir.

Mr. Derbes So all that your amendment seeks to do, the principal purpose of your amendment is to avoid litigation, is that it?

Mr. Lennox I think so, primarily.

Mr. LeBreton Mr. Lennox, if I understood you correctly, and I was trying to listen, you said that it would be necessary for the candidate to live at his domicile at least fifty percent of the time. Is that correct? Did I hear you, sir?

Mr. Lennox This is the consensus of attorneys who are members of the legislature, that when this matter is litigated that the courts would say that if you had two or three residences that you could only declare your domicile as being the one at which you spent half your time or more.

Mr. LeBreton The reason I ask that question, the thought occurs to me, in view of other problems we've had along these lines in previous years, how do you tell, or who says what is fifty percent of the time? Do you take twenty-four hours a day, twelve hours a day, do you take seven days a week and three and a half days a month, and fifteen days? I think this is a rather ambiguous deal that would just bring us back into court. This is my question. How do you decide what fifty percent of the time is?

Mr. Lennox I would assume that that would be done by affidavit of the candidate, but I am at a loss to give you an intelligent answer to your question.

Mr. LeBreton Thank you.

Mr. Juneau Mr. Lennox, you did say that if we would adopt the concept of going from domicile to residency, you admit that that is a much more liberal or broader base than it gives somebody to run from.

Mr. Lennox Please don't use the word liberal, but I think it is broader, yes.

Mr. Juneau Well, it is liberal in this sense. Second question, if we had an individual who spent fifty percent of his time on one street in one district and spent fifty percent of his time in another district, you mean to tell me we haven't created more litigation than by saying we have a domicile?

Mr. Lennox Again, I don't feel that I am competent to answer that but I would like to answer by stating to you that if there was a legislator who maintained a residence in a district but also had a summer home at Grand Isle, for example, where he moved his family for the spring and summer months, that there could be some litigation as to whether or not his primary residence was in fact his domicile, and I think there is some concern on the part of incumbent legislators that this might be the case.

Mr. Juneau Let me ask you this question. As I understand your remarks, you admit that there can be but one domicile, is that correct...

Mr. Lennox Correct.

Mr. Juneau ...but there can be more than one residence.

Mr. Lennox There can and is in fact, in many cases, more than one residence.

Mr. Juneau Then wouldn't it logically follow that the most likely litigation would occur over whether there is a residence or a domicile if legally you can only have one domicile?

Mr. Lennox Again, I don't feel competent to give you an intelligent answer.

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Lennox, do I understand your proposal to mean that if I have three houses in three parishes across the state of Louisiana that I could qualify as a representative in either one of those three places?

Mr. Lennox No, I think that you could qualify in the one where you maintain your residence...

Mr. Anzalone I've got three of them.

Mr. Lennox You've got to declare which one of them it is.

Mr. Anzalone Well, we've gone back to domicile then.

Mr. Lennox Well, to some extent you are.

Mrs. Warren Mr. Lennox, do you mean to say to this delegation that if a person is able to afford three residences in three different parishes, he will have a multiple choice, and if he is poor enough not to be able to afford but one, he can't have but one choice?

Mr. Lennox That is a three part question. Let me answer in three parts. First, I own only one residence that's my domicile. Secondly, I am a candidate only for early retirement and nothing else, so this does not affect me in any way. What I am saying to you that if there is a situation where a legislator has more than one residence, that this would avoid litigation resulting from persons who would claim that the domicile other than that he selected was in fact his domicile.

Mrs. Warren Well, it still would disenfranchise a poor person that wasn't able to afford three domiciles, or residences.

Mr. Lennox I really don't believe that to be the case, but certainly you are entitled to your opinion.

Mrs. Warren I am not trying to get my opinion. I am trying to get your opinion since you brought it. Now, my opinion, if you want my opinion, if I'm too poor to afford three, then I am going to have to have a choice of one, and if you are able to afford three, I'm not saying that you are going to run because you said you wasn't but if you can afford three then you can have a choice of three.

Mr. Lennox And I can only afford one as well.

Mrs. Warren I didn't say that. I am just using an example because you did it. If you can afford three, you have a choice of running from three, either three that you want to. But if I can't afford but one, I can only run from one.

Mr. Lennox I think that is a logical conclusion. I ask your adoption of the amendment.

Mr. LeBleu Mr. Lennox, is there any way that you can see any parallel between where the votes and his domicile or are you that acquainted with the law. I just wonder if that might be some way to determine his domicile.

Mr. Lennox I don't think there is any question but what the place at which an individual votes is in fact his legal domicile. There is no question there. There are some legislators apparently who fear that there is going to be litigation resulting from this new proposed language which comes as a result of their ownership and use of facilities for a residence other than their domicile at which they are registered to vote.

[Quorum Call: 92 delegates present and a quorum.]

Further Discussion

Mr. Casey Madam Chairman and Delegates, as a member of the Legislative Committee I think it is incumbent on me to at least explain the action of the committee and the reason why the word domicile was adopted in preference to the word residence. The concept was advanced, and incidentally was adopted with only one dissenting vote, with the thought in mind that we would hope to avoid abuses by candidates for the legislature who attempt, or who rather actually reside or are legally domiciled in one area of a district or city or parish, or who rather and through other means establish a residence in another legislative district. For instance, a person may have his home, have a homestead exemption, rear his children, and actually live in a home in one area of a city or a parish, and then have a business, let's say a barroom, in another area, a different legislative district, and have a cot in the second floor and he might sleep on that cot once a week or twice a week, register to vote in that area where he has his business, and then run for election in that area; in an area where in fact he does not actually live with his family and is not actually domiciled. We have attempted to do this to prevent just that thing, a person living with his family in one area could theoretically have many, many residences, five or six, and therefore have the option, through these means, and I feel they could be devious means, to establish other residences merely for the purpose of running in a certain legislative district. That was the whole thinking behind this. I must grant that Mr. Lennox has made some good points, that possibly we may have litigation over the interpretation of the word domicile, but the truth is that we definitely have had and may in the future have additional litigation over the word residence. The entire subject matter and the entire document that we adopt will instigate litigation. I think we must face that fact of life. I also feel, and I speak only for myself, that there was a concern, I know advanced by Mr. Lennox, that the court may go into the question of how long you are going to spend in any particular area. Are you going to live fifty percent of the time here and twenty-five percent of the time in another place, and twenty-five percent of the time in another place. I submit to you that if a person is going to run for an office and represent a certain area of the state and be familiar with the thinking of the people and their problems that they should well spend in excess of fifty percent of their time in a certain area. And, I would hope that that area would be their domicile. I would submit to you also that the word domicile has been greatly, and on many occasions interpreted, particularly in the area of divorce laws, they have talked about the subject matter of domicile for purpose of jurisdiction for bringing suit for divorce and separation, and the courts have expounded on this greatly. The word domicile is really where a person intends to have his main home, to rear his children, to register to vote, where he goes to church, where he associates with many of his friends and neighbors and things of that type, where his children may go to school. Various criteria such as that are things that the court looks at and not just how much time you might happen to spend in a particular residence, if you have more than one residence. So, there can be many criteria for the interpretation of the word domicile. I submit to you gentlemen and ladies that this is more restrictive, it ties down the qualifications somewhat more than it is under existing law. Domicile is more demanding. You must make that determination yourself, to determine where you are going to make your principal home, raise your children, have your bank account, send your children to school, and go to church. Rather than give an individual the option to establish many residences and run possibly from many districts. I would urge rejection of the amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Derbes Ladies and gentlemen, I merely want to echo Mr. Casey's sentiments and say to you that on the first hand I believe that Mr. Lennox position with regard to the fostering of litigation is not well founded. The courts have repeatedly, in my opinion, interpreted the qualification or the requirement of domicile. It is not a burdensome, difficult, impossible qualification to administer. Philosophically, I think it is consonant with the position that this convention has taken on other issues. It requires that a person have his principal domestic establishment and intend to permanently reside in the area that he seeks to represent. That to me is clearly preferable, the difficulties in administering the word domicile, I believe, are not overwhelming, in fact are quite simple. It is merely a fact question. So, I concur in Mr. Casey's remarks and I urge you to defeat the Lennox amendment. Thank you.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

Mr. Lennox Madam Chairman, fellow delegates, I submit to you that there are many elected public officials in the state of Louisiana, other than legislators, who must face this problem in the courts if this proposal is adopted in its present form. I ask your adoption of the amendments.

[Amendment rejected: 20-79. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Mr. Denney sends up amendments at this time.

Amendment No. 1, page 3, line 7, after the words "the time of" and before the words "he shall", delete the words "the general election" and insert in lieu thereof the words "qualification for the office."

Amendment No. 2, on page 3, at the end of line 10, after the words "preceding his" delete the words "election" and insert in lieu thereof the words "qualification for office."

Explanation

Mr. Denney The purpose of these amendments is merely to conform with the language which we previously adopted when we changed from election to qualification for the office. I suppose you would call it a technical change although it does make a material difference in the time. I think it is much more accurate and much more clear to state at qualification for the office. Senator Blair authorizes me to say that his committee has no objection to this.

Mr. Poynter Madam Chairman, we have discovered a slight error that affects Mr. Denney's amendment. We discovered it with respect to that particular line in the second amendment, is in error in the reprinted bill. It reads "for one year immediately preceding his election." That language was contained as the bill was originally introduced but was amended in committee in conformity with where it appears in line 7 to read "for one year immediately preceding the general election" in the actual reengrossed bill. The printed bill is in error so if it is acceptable to Mr. Denney and to the convention, I would suggest that a way out of the impasse to accomplish his purpose is to vote first on Amendment No. 1 by itself where you will reflect your intent. If you do that one, we will come back with the second amendment which will go not to the reprinted as engrossed, but the actual reengrossed bill to make the same change in the same appropriate language in the actual reengrossed bill. Is that all right with you, Mr. Denney? Actually, the question before you is just the Amendment No. 1, realizing that if you adopt it you will need a second amendment drawn to the reengrossed bill.

Questions

Mr. Schmitt Does this mean that in a situation where you have qualification for the office six months in advance of the time of the general election, that that person would have to be domiciled there for eighteen months prior to that time in order for him, in other words eighteen months prior to the time of the general election in order for him to run?

Mr. Denny It could have that effect.

Further Discussion

Mr. Conroy It seems to me that the wording of the proposal as it presently exists is good enough. It requires a year's domicile. This effectively increases the period that a person must be domiciled within the district prior to the time of the election. It deals with a one year period and a two year period for qualification and simply backs up the time from the general election to the date the person qualifies for office. It does not say he must merely be an elector at that time, it says he must be an elector for at least a year prior to the time he qualifies to run, so all it effectively does is increase the period of time that a person must be domiciled in the district and in the state and I think the year and two year requirements are long enough.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment No. 1 adopted: 66-26. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter This now becomes a technical matter. Amendment No. 1, by Mr. Denny, on page 1, line 11, this goes to the actual reengrossed bill, not to the reprinted as reengrossed, page 1, line 11, immediately after the word "proceeding" strike out "the general election" and insert in lieu thereof "qualification for office." Now your copy has not the "general election" but "his election" which the committee has changed. This will be a technical amendment just to complete what Mr. Denny had begun with the first amendment.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter The next set of amendments is offered by Delegate Warren.

Amendment No. 1, on page 3, delete lines 11 through 17 both inclusive in their entirety, and at the beginning of line 18 delete the word "tion".

Explanation

Mrs. Warren Madam Chairman and fellow delegates, it is very easy for me to explain this amendment. It only does one thing, it says that you do not live in a district in order to represent it. Mr. Lennox just got through saying that a person... or he said in essence that a person that was able to have three residences would have a multiple choice. If you don't have the money to afford but one, you have one choice. Are we going to give legislators the opportunity of having a choice and give non-legislators a different choice?

I have no objection to legislators, I think they are good. I don't say that all the legislature is bad. I don't say the legislature is all good. I'll compare it kind of like this, you can have a barrel of apples and you can have two or three rotten apples in there or one rotten apple and it is going to cut smell all the rest of those apples. At this time I think that we should give liberty and justice for all and not make our flag that we get up and pledge allegiance to our force. Let's give everybody the same opportunity and let's not make exceptions. Because when you start making exceptions somebody is going to get it and you will like that also say this, be mindful how we think of vested interest because sometime our vested interest might turn on us. So let's be fair and let's give everybody a fair chance. Evidently, when you see something like this coming up and people are looking to have a chance to do as they please, there has got to be a dead cat on the line somewhere.

Questions

Mr. LeBlau Will you point out the language that says a legislator can run in three districts if he wants to and no one else can? Will you point that out, please?

Mrs. Warren I think if you will follow me back and if I am not wrong I'll have the Clerk to read it back to you. I said that Mr. Lennox in his address to this convention said, if you have three residents or you are domiciled in three residents you have a choice to run from either. When I got up this morning and I spoke, I said that this seem to be gerrymander and this was not my words but it is in effect the same thing, gerrymander in this convention to suit special people which were incumbent legislators.

Point of Information

Mr. Leigh I would like to ask, does Mrs. Warren's amendment include, and perhaps this should be directed to Mr. Poynter. Does this include the deletion of the so-called Casey Amendment also?

Mr. Poynter The effect inevitably would have to be or it would leave that portion dangling. I would recommend, Mrs. Warren, if convention has no objection that it would be preferable to add to the amendment an Amendment No. 2 which would strike out that amendment proposed by Mr. Casey and adopted.

Mrs. Warren I was going to say that before I left this microphone and I thank Mr. David Poynter for saying it for me.

Questions

Mr. Weiss Do you realize that the amendment you proposed is identical to the one which was rejected eighty some-odd to twenty some-odd of Mr. Abraham's Amendments 2 and 3 of his. It is identical. Your amendment is identical to his.

Mrs. Warren I am not really concerned about what was rejected since I have been in this convention I have seen so much turn over till I thought I would just put my own up here and say what I have to say. So, and I want to say this, if you don't like it, you have the right to vote against it. But I am asking you in fairness to all people that you would support it.

Any other questions?

Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. De Blieux Lady Chairman, and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this provision was inserted by the committee in my opinion to prevent the gerrymandering and the favoring of incumbent legislators. It is my opinion that if you take this provision out of this particular section when reapportionment time comes around and the legislature gets ready to reapportion its districts you can bet your bottom dollar that it will be redistricted to favor incumbent legislators. If you leave this in the act... in the constitution, you will cut out the chance of a legislator fixing himself up to where he excludes his chief opponents. It is just as simple and plain as that. Now if you want to permit gerrymandering, adopt Mrs. Warren's Amendment. If you want to make it fair and square to everybody where everybody will have an equal chance, I ask you to reject her amendment.

Questions

Mr. Blair Senator De Blieux, just suppose a case that we change this particular district you add a thousand more voters. Now who are we giving the advantage by keeping it like we are? We're giving a thousand more people an advantage to run than one incumbent, are we not?

18th Days Proceedings—July 20, 1973

Mr. De Blieux That is correct. You are absolutely correct.

Mr. Anzalone Senator De Blieux, you keep referring to incumbents being affected by this provision but is it not true that it also affects a citizen as well?

Mr. De Blieux That is true, I agree with you. But I say if you take it out you are favoring incumbent legislators.

Mr. Anzalone If you take out lines 11 through 17?

Mr. De Blieux You are favoring incumbent legislators. If you leave it in you are protecting the citizens so that they can have whoever they want to represent and won't be forced to take somebody they might not want.

Further Discussion

Mr. Juneau Madam Chairman, and fellow delegates, I think we got off on the wrong foot somehow on this particular provision. It developed, at least remarks have been made that this is a legislator proposal. That is quite to the contrary. I think if someone believes that, they have misunderstood what we have done in the committee. We specifically discussed this particular aspect of that provision. What you would be doing if you delete this language, you are asking for gerrymander.

Let me give you an example. If a member of the legislature, the governor of this state has a particular legislator or he knows of someone in an area who is going to run, and he wants to knock him out of the race, the easy way to do it is get him by deleting this language. If you have this language in, you have in essence passed an anti-gerrymandering bill or at least made that possible. I would like to also close by telling you this. That the whole context of this article was to give people within a locale the ability to choose their own local representative. This clause is activated only and only when you come into a reapportionment situation. That is the only time it arises. And if you don't pass such a provision, you are going to be asking for trouble as you will know in reapportionment gerrymandering is a topic of conversation. And if you don't pass this proposal you are going to be activating that kind of problem.

That's all.

Questions

Mrs. Zervigon Mr. Juneau, if I had planned to run for the legislature and my main base of support was in a particularly active P.T.A. and the line was drawn in such a way that it would separate me from that P.T.A. under the provision of the committee wouldn't I have the right to move across the street so that I could stay with my main base of support whether or not there was an incumbent legislator in that district?

Mr. Juneau That is absolutely correct.

Mrs. Zervigon So that it would give the citizens the right to stay with any support that they had developed in order to run against an incumbent or for the legislature in the same way that it would legislators, is that correct?

Mr. Juneau I might answer the question this way, Mrs. Zervigon. I view this as an anti-incumbent type of provision.

Mrs. Zervigon Thank you.

Mr. Kelly Mr. Juneau, would not the proposal of the committee in fact allow a little more as we commonly refer to it as forum shopping than would Mrs. Warren's proposal?

In other words, as I understand the committee's proposal, any person who has lived in any portion of a district which later that portion of a district is divided into say three different districts, could run in either of those three districts, is that correct, under the committee proposal?

Mr. Juneau That is right, Mr. Kelly, as long as the district he runs in was a portion of the district in which he formerly lived. That is absolutely correct.

Mr. Kelly And I do understand this to mean the language in the committee proposal. It does say person, it doesn't incumbent.

Mr. Juneau It is meant to be person exactly what it says. That's right.

Further Discussion

Mr. Drew Madam Chairman, and members of the convention, I rise in support of Mrs. Warren's Amendment. The amendment that I offered earlier today which was defeated, was an attempt to compromise because I heard so much discussion about gerrymandering out and gerrymandering in. And as I told you from this podium it was not well drawn, it was not a finished product.

I think this, I think that if the present proposal stands and you permit anyone and I like to stress that there has been a great deal of misunderstanding that this was limited to incumbents. It is anyone to choose anywhere from two to three or possibly four districts in which they may run would be a very totally unrepresentative legislature. I think that this amendment puts our elections on an equal basis year and year out and I see no reason for making any exceptions because of reapportionment which will only occur every ten or eleven years. And I urge your support of Mrs. Warren's Amendment. I think it is good, I think it would resolve this question with all that we need in the constitution.

Now the question has been raised that if we delete these, then the legislature could provide as they saw fit. The legislature cannot provide for that which is already provided for in the constitution. And the initial part of this section is very specific in determining and sets forth the qualifications in the way of running for the House and the Senate. I think that the legislature could make any changes whatsoever in a constitutional provision. I think this puts all elections on the same basis. It's good and I urge your support.

Closing

Mrs. Warren Madam Chairman, and fellow delegates, I am not going to labor the time. I am going to tell you something, a personal experience that I had once.

Some years ago, I took out an insurance policy. The policy sounded real good after the agency talked about it and I glanced over it and read the big print. But the thing that I didn't read was the small print. I can be thankful to Almighty God that my health has been pretty good and I am not one that rides on insurance. After I had been in this insurance for about fifteen years, I got a letter saying my policy was cancelled. I went back, I got the policy and I read it and I started reading all the fine print. In this policy I found that this insurance company had the right to cancel this policy whenever they got ready. The thing that I am trying to do is close up the loopholes so it won't be any way out that the people will not be fairly represented and that incumbents will have the same opportunity as anybody else.

I did not intend to open a keg of worms when I mentioned incumbents but it is hard for me to write a speech. I have tried it and when I do it I find myself getting away from it because I usually speak as the spirit dictates. So for that reason I am not always saying the thing that is popular that I might get me a vote, but I am going to ask you in all fairness to everybody, to show to all the people of the state of Louisiana that you care and vote and give them a fair chance.

Thank you very much.

18th Days Proceedings—July 20, 1973

[Amendments reread. Record vote ordered.
Amendments rejected: 34-73. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Mr. Anzalone sends up the following amendments.

Amendment No. 1. On page 3, line 18 immediately after the portion of the word "tion" and this needs a little technical correction after the language... added by Mr. Casey's amendment. Delete the remainder of the line and delete lines 18, 20, and 21 in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "the seat of any member who changes his domicile from the legislative district he represents or if elected after reapportionment whose domicile is not within the district he represents at the time he is sworn into office shall be vacated there by any declaration of a retention of domicile to the contrary notwithstanding."

Explanation

Mr. Anzalone Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, the original proposal by the legislative committee has led approximately a three-year hiatus when a legislator who is representing a new district must move into that district. On the other end you have had proposals by Mr. Drew, by Mr. Jackson that require a person who is seeking office with a further amendment by Mr. Denney that he be in the area which he is to represent at least one year prior to the date of qualification. I think that in the minimal amount... I should say the great amount of trouble that we have had with reapportionment in the past it doesn't seem likely that the legislature or the courts or the United States Supreme Court is going to get the job of reapportionment done in record time. This is going to put you in a position such as this. If you are representing a district which is going to be cut into three pieces and if you had the opportunity as an incumbent or as a citizen to choose the area from which you would like to run, you must make this choice within one year prior to qualification. The problem with this is, is that you are not going to be sure as to when reapportionment is going to be final. You are placing yourself in a position of making a judgment when you actually don't have any idea where the district lines are going to be drawn. What my amendment does, simply is this. It gives you the opportunity if the year has passed to run for, seek reelection to any district within the district you previously resided with one stipulation. At the time that you are sworn into office you must be a domiciliary of the district from which you were elected. This keeps you in the district that you were before. You are representing those people and living with them. It puts you in the new district at the time that you are sworn into office to represent the people that you are now going to represent and live with, and it removes the hiatus of a year and it doesn't get you caught in the log jam of reapportionment. I ask for your favorable vote.

Questions

Mr. A. Jackson Mr. Anzalone, would you admit that besides winning an election the basic premise we've been arguing about is the fact of qualifying for election as it relates to domicile? So in effect that he can still do what the committee is doing in terms of playing Tarzan and having his choice of qualifying up from two to four districts let's say. He still has the right to qualify without meeting any kind of domicile requirement.

Mr. Anzalone He has the right to qualify in any district encompassing the district in which he resided in before. It doesn't allow him as your provision did to say for instance live in a district in the north end of Tangipahoa Parish and move all the way over to Lake Charles and run. We are localizing it within the particular district and it only pertains to reapportionment.

Mr. A. Jackson Well, would you admit that some of the proposals that were introduced in addition to mine indicated very strongly that maybe the principle we were talking about was representation but particularly at the point of qualifying. Cause that seems to be the issue.

Mr. Anzalone Well, Representative Jackson what you are saying is true. The only reason that I disagreed with your provision was because you forced a man to move out of a district that he was now representing and forced him to go into a district that he could possibly represent in the future which is diametrically opposed to your proposition of living where you are represented.

Mr. Avant Mr. Anzalone, isn't it a fact that your amendment will prohibit either an incumbent or a would be candidate from being gerrymandered into an area where he couldn't possibly win and yet at the same time, satisfy the other requirements that before he actually represents an area, that is, he sits in the legislature and votes, he must live and be domiciled in that area. That's what your amendment does, doesn't it?

Mr. Anzalone That's exactly what it does.

Mr. Avant Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Conroy We have spent a great deal of time on this general problem but this is a good amendment. It deserves your consideration. It deserves your support. The last sentence of paragraph B presently requires that if a person moves out of the district that he represents he vacates that seat. This proposal, this amendment carries that same concept further and says that if a man is caught up in the problems of reapportionment that he can still have his choice to run but if he is going to serve that district, which he is serving that district he must move and be domiciled within the district. I think that it is consistent under the philosophy of the last sentence of this paragraph and I urge your support of this amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Roy Madam Chairman, and ladies and gentlemen of the convention. I rise in opposition to this particular amendment. I will tell you why. I have heard all day long the issue as to the candidate seeking to run in a certain area and I haven't heard anyone address himself to the issue as to whether the people in that area in which he is allowed to run under the present provision choose to elect him. To me that is the issue. If I like the people in district A let's call it district A and draw a little rectangular on a blank piece of paper. This is a cajun district. I live there in the north part of it. It is one hundred square miles in size. The legislature reapportions it so that my area is then gerrymandered into a larger area where there are other people who don't particularly like cajuns, and it is four hundred square miles in size.

Under the proposal of the committee. And this new area is called B. So I am not living in district B. But I previously lived in district A.

Under the proposal that the committee has come up with, I may choose to run in district A and be elected. And it is up to the people of district A the homogeneous district that I was a part of to decide whether they will elect me or not. Once in their wisdom, if they are, they choose to elect me then I should have the right to serve them. And I should not under this amendment of Mr. Anzalone be forced to sell my home in district B before I am sworn in to start serving the people of district A. There is no connection between forcing me to sell my property in B before I am sworn in. Under the committee proposal if I choose to serve district A, then if I choose to seek reelection one year before that time I am forced to sell out in new district B and move to A and that is as it should be. I should ultimately have to go live in A. But

I shouldn't have to go live in A under some type of gun to my head that by the time I am sworn in some three months from the date that I am elected I should have disposed of my entire property in district B.

Now that is the danger here. It serves no useful purpose. It only puts a great burden on a person who has been elected by the people of A because he is one of them to dispose of his entire live property acquisition in B at maybe a great loss. How it affects his representing A I do not know. It has nothing to do with it, but if you pass this amendment that is what you do. You strangle a guy who has been elected by the people who believe in him and you force him at the risk of some pecuniary loss to get rid of his holdings in B before he can serve. And you do one other thing, because if he can't serve you see... if he can't sell that is and be out of that area and have acquired a new place in district A, you nullify the people's choice in district A. You are saying, that notwithstanding you cajun people in district A wanted elect me to serve you, you have nullified that by some process that does not address itself to whether I will effectively serve them or not. For those reasons, I am against it.

Questions

Mr. Conroy Mr. Roy, isn't the whole question here a matter of timing?

Mr. Roy No, it is not?

It is a matter of whether people in district A and the democratic process have a right to elect me and whether you are going to force me to dispose of my property holdings in B before I am sworn in. It is not a matter of time.

Mr. Conroy You do have to make the move before you run again, right?

Mr. Roy Correct.

Mr. Conroy And nothing in this says you have to dispose of anything, does it?

Mr. Roy It says that I have got to move there.

Mr. Conroy Got to have a domicile in the place where you are going to serve, where you are going to serve those people, you have to be domiciled.

Mr. Roy That is right. But that also means that I have to be rich enough, Mr. Conroy, which I may not be, to be able to acquire another home... another place in district A to live and I may have to move my children out of B and go to district A and start having them educated there before I even start serving.

Mr. Abraham Chris, I fail to understand and you might explain to me the difference between denying the people their choice of a person to represent them under the provision here whereas they do not have the opportunity to decide who they want to vote for. And the position that we took on line 10 in which we said that this person must live in a district before people can vote for them. Aren't we denying the people of their choice there by requiring a new man who moves into a district. The people may want him but we are saying that he is going to have to live there one year before he can be elected. Even though all of the people in that district may want him.

Mr. Roy No, you are not because you see what we are talking about here is reapportionment or after reapportionment and that is where this thing addresses itself and the fact of the matter is that the person who has been reapportioned out of an area should not be discriminated against in running in the area he previously lived in.

Mr. Abraham Yes but we weren't talking about the reapportionment or the person who is running. We are talking about denial of the people's right to vote for whom they wanted. In one instance we are denying them the right to vote for a man who moves in an area because he has not lived there for one year. On the other hand, now you are saying we are denying them the right to vote for this man who happened to live in an area and who now resides out of the area due to reapportionment. Regardless of what the reason may be as to why he is not in the area, we are still denying the people the right to vote in either case.

Mr. Roy Yes, that is one thing. But let me answer you further. The theory of causing the residents to be there, for a person living there, is that theoretically he knows the area and that is why you wouldn't want a stranger moving into an area and we haven't provided for that. Although I wouldn't be opposed to it. But the issues that in the instant case after reapportionment you are taking a person who lived and served in an area maybe twenty-five years and he is denied the chance of really running and being elected by that area unless he chooses to sell his ownings before the time that he is sworn in. There is a great difference in the two.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

Mr. Velazquez Mr. Roy, I don't see anywhere here where it requires you to sell your property. It just requires you to change your domicile. I mean I would think you wouldn't want to rent your property and collect your depreciation. Make it both ways then.

Mr. Roy Well, I am assuming that most people maybe living in an area like a hypothet I gave might have owned a home and that is their domicile. Now he has got to change his domicile which means he will have to arrange to go and move elsewhere and rent a home or I might be sold it. And I just don't believe you should impose that condition on him cause my idea is, as a Jacksonian Democrat if the people in A choose to elect that person it is their choice and not ours to put incumbencies on him to where he may not choose to run at all.

Mr. Velazquez Are you telling me that you believe that you can be good enough to represent the people but too good to live next door to them?

Mr. Roy No, not at all. I say that you do have to move there ultimately but you should not be forced to move at an arbitrary date, i.e., before you are sworn in. It has nothing to do with living them and representing them properly.

Mr. Velazquez Well isn't any time that you have to move and you are going to eventually have to move... isn't any time that is picked arbitrary?

Mr. Roy It is to some extent. And if I had my choice, I may not choose that, but at least there is some reasonable basis for setting it be at a later date. But Mr. Anzalone's amendment makes it so that he must move before he is even sworn in or otherwise you nullify what the people of that district have chosen. And I am against that.

Mr. Velazquez Don't you think that Mr. Anzalone is very reasonable in this thing and that he could have set the time even earlier and gotten support but instead he is willing to give you a couple of months to get your affairs in order. He is just asking you to move your main place of residence... your domicile he is not telling you to sell your property or divorce your wife or shoot your kids. He is just telling you to change your domicile to represent the people who have elected you.

Mr. Roy Not only do I think he is not reasonable, I don't think if he were reasonable it has any basis for the position he has raised. To make it that you have to sell out or move within a two months period

18th Days Proceedings—July 20, 1973

Mr. Bergeron Mr. Roy, doesn't Mr. Anzalone's amendment in fact stop a legislator from being gerrymandered or reapportioned out of his district? It gives him the opportunity...

Mr. Roy No. You mean an incumbent representative from being reapportioned out of his district.

Mr. Bergeron An incumbent representative or anyone who seeks office.

Mr. Roy No, it doesn't stop that from occurring.

Mr. Bergeron It gives that gentleman the opportunity to stay in the particular district from which he has been in for many years.

Mr. Roy Provided that that district is not changed. But if that district is changed he has then got to change into that district and if he doesn't then he can't stay there. If he is reelected to that district then within a year of the time that he seeks reelection after reapportionment he must move there.

Mr. Bergeron This three month period allows the gentleman the opportunity I feel to run in a particular district where he has set up his domicile, where he has lived. I would just like to express my opinion on it.

Mr. Roy Well, look, I don't differ. Let me say this, I want to make my point clear. If you choose in your wisdom to do it like Mr. Anzalone wants that is this convention's business. All I am saying that I am opposed to it because I think it is an arbitrary cutoff date for forcing a person who has been elected by people of a certain district to move there and it just...there is no need for it in my opinion. But I just wanted to make the problem clear and that is why I am against it.

Mrs. Warren Mr. Roy, do you believe the concept or the intent of reapportionment is good?

Mr. Roy Do I believe in what...reapportionment.

Mrs. Warren Do you think it is good?

Mr. Roy Yes.

Mrs. Warren Do you believe any solution that we could come up with would be perfect?

Mr. Roy No.

Mrs. Warren Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. V. Jackson Mr. Chairman, delegates of the convention... Although I recognize that Mr. Anzalone's amendment is not perfect, it is far better than the amendment that is being proposed by the committee. It does not totally meet my objections, but I'm very fearful that if this amendment is killed, then we're...as I understand it...we'll probably have to vote upon the committee's amendment and ultimately what happens is that, as I understand it from the Clerk, there are no amendments coming after. For those reasons, I would ask that you adopt Mr. Anzalone's amendments, that if we need to, at a further time, provide for some minute technical changes then we can do it. I would like to suggest that it is much better in my estimation than the committee proposal.

Further Discussion

Mr. Fontenot Mr. Chairman, I think I sit the furthest away from this stand, up here. It takes me about four and a half minutes to get up here, so all I have time left to do is move the previous question.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: 76-28. Motion to reconsider.]

tabled.]

Mr. Poynter The next set of amendments that I have goes to "C".

Explanation

Mr. Juneau Mr. Chairman, we've come to paragraph "C" which is the next non-controversial subject, and that provision provides that the members of the legislature shall be elected for terms of four years. I move for favorable adoption.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Delegate Abraham has an amendment being distributed. Amendment No. 1, on page 3, line 23, after the period add the following: "the term of office of each legislator shall begin at 10 A.M. on the second Monday in March next following the election."

Explanation

Mr. Abraham The only purpose of this amendment is to fix the time of taking of office. In the executive branch article we have fixed the time for the governor to take office at 12 noon on the second Monday in March, and this simply parallels that you will take office at 10 A.M. on the second Monday in March. That's all it does.

Questions

Mr. O'Neill Mr. Abraham, is this amendment really necessary insofar as the legislators shall convene at 12 P.M. on, whenever we have it. It seems kind of superfluous.

Mr. Abraham Well, I think it's good to have it, because this allows them actually to take office before the legislature convenes. Under the rules where it is a continuous body, if they wanted them to come down and meet as a committee of the whole or however they wanted to do it in order to effect their organization once every four years, this allows them to do so. It means they're officially in office and then they can draft bills or do whatever they want to do in preparation for the legislative session.

Mr. O'Neill Thank you.

Mr. Guarisco Mr. Abraham, are you familiar with the rule that you serve until your successor is elected and qualified.

Mr. Abraham Yes.

Mr. Guarisco Why do you need what you have there?

Mr. Abraham Do what now?

Mr. Guarisco Why do you put what you have there?

Mr. Abraham Because this fixes the time that the person actually takes office, and your successor takes office on this particular day. Otherwise there is nothing in the constitution that says when the person takes office.

Mr. Denney Mr. Abraham, under your amendment, this will permit the new legislators to prefile bills, is that correct?

Mr. Abraham That's correct.

Mr. Denney It will permit in the event the governor should call a special session to have the newly elected legislators called into special session, is that correct?

Mr. Abraham That's correct.

Mr. Denney Thank you.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment rejected: 37-63. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

18th Days Proceedings—July 20, 1973

Mr. Henry Explain "D" then please, sir.

Explanation

Mr. Juneau Mr. Chairman, now that the train is rolling, we move to Section D, which provides that if a vacancy occurs in either house of the legislature, the remainder of the term shall be filled only by election as provided by law. In essence, what we've done, Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, what we have done is inserted into the constitution on this particular provision the word "only" which makes it absolutely clear that the vacancy, in the event there is a vacancy, can be filled only by election, and that the mechanics of said election can be provided for by statute. In effect, of course, would eliminate the necessity for a detailed election provision in the provision. We move for its favorable adoption.

Mr. Henry Are there any amendments on this [sub-section], Mr. Clerk?

Is there any further discussion on [sub-section] Section D?

Proceed to [sub-section] Section E, Mr. Juneau.

Mr. Juneau I'm afraid the train is going to stop, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Henry Please quit calling it a train.

Explanation

Mr. Juneau Fellow delegates, Section E, of course, is a substantial change. It provides in essence that the members of the legislature shall be compensated by an annual salary, which of course, will be fixed by a majority of the elected members of both houses. It can be changed but only by a two-thirds vote of the elected members of each house, which is, of course, is more than just a simple majority. But, to be effective it's a term other than the one's who presently enact that law. The thought of the committee with this regard was, of course, the controversy involved whether or not you wanted the concept of an annual salary or a continuation of the program which we now have with regard to per diem. It was the thought of the committee that a more independent legislature in the effort to hasten the deliberations of a legislative body... that it would be more consistent with an annual salary. We think it's consistent with the more modern state legislatures which have enacted such provision, and for that reason the annual salary was asserted therein. I move for its adoption, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

Mr. Burns Why the difference in the voting of the fixing of a salary requires only a majority vote but to change a salary requires a two-thirds vote? Why not have two-thirds to fix the salary?

Mr. Juneau Well, the initial thought was this, Mr. Burns. I personally adhere to the concept of a majority vote, generally speaking. We thought that that would be a physical manner which would be appropriate to be susceptible to a majority vote by the same token. It would preclude after it was initially established the cutting off the possibility of a particular group of legislators or particular body increasing their own salary. Merely a matter of concept.

Mr. Toomy Pat, at what time do you... would this provide for the annual salary to be implemented. Would you provide for that in the schedule or something.

Mr. Juneau We plan to put that in the schedule, yes sir. The thought would be the legislature which would come in after the institution of this particular constitution.

Mr. Toomy Is that what's recommended by the committee to be put in the schedule?

Mr. Juneau Yes, sir, that's correct.

Mr. Avant Mr. Juneau, would you just explain why, if the legislature cannot raise its own salary under this provision during a... the time for which they are elected, it would take two-thirds to raise it at some future time?

Mr. Juneau Well,...

Mr. Avant Rather than a simple majority.

Mr. Juneau The thought was, Mr. Avant, that we didn't think that it would be appropriate... our consensus was that the public would feel that the legislators, number one, first of all, should not be in a position to raise their own salary, that speaks for itself. Again, I submit that the distinction between two-thirds and a majority as to raising their own salary is purely a matter of concept. I personally and I think that the committee as a whole felt that if it was of that magnitude to raise the salary, which would be something the people would be very interested in, it would mandate more than just a simple majority. That much of a consensus to pass it. It's purely a matter of concept. It's a very difficult matter to say that if you've done it by a majority why not do it by a majority subsequently. I just think that the whole concept of this constitution... the people would more or less demand a two-thirds vote in that regard. That's the best answer that I can give you in that connection.

Mr. Bollinger Delegate Juneau, do you think it necessary that the fixing of the salary of the legislature should be provided for in the constitution? My question is directed to mean couldn't it be done in the schedule that the legislature would fix their salary and the constitution provide for the changing of that salary?

Mr. Juneau We debated that issue at length, Mr. Bollinger. It was the thought of the committee, and I concur 100% that unless you mandate to the legislature that they shall fix an annual salary, I would say that the chances are 80 to 20 against them coming up and fixing an annual salary.

Mr. Bollinger Wouldn't the terminology, "the members of the legislature shall be compensated by an annual salary" mandate them to fix an annual salary for themselves?

Mr. Juneau Well, of course, that's how I read the provision, Mr. Bollinger. The legislature shall be compensated by an annual salary.

Mr. Bollinger I'm just talking about deleting the words "shall be fixed by majority vote". Couldn't the schedule say that the legislature shall fix a salary and the constitution only provide for the changing of that salary? This is only a one time provision in the constitution and will never be needed again on the salary issue. It's just adding terminology which is not necessary.

Mr. Juneau My answer to that is, I think it's mandatory, if I understand your question correctly, that we've got to put in the language "annual salary" or it won't be done.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Foyard]: On page 3 delete lines 27 through 32 both inclusive in their entirety and on page 4 delete line 1 in its entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Each member of the legislature shall be paid an annual salary which shall be fixed... now your copy has got the word initially, but Mr. Foyard has taken that word and the commas before and after it out which shall be fixed by a favorable vote of a majority of the members elected to each house. Thereafter, the salary may be changed by a favorable vote of two-thirds of the members elected to each house, the change to be effective only at the beginning of the next succeeding term for which members of the legislature are elected."

18th Days Proceedings—July 20, 1973

Explanation

Mr. Fayard Mr. Chairman, I appreciate your pronunciation of my name. I think that I will at least acquire temporary residence in the city of Amite or Independence after watching Mr. Anzalone perform earlier. I hope that I meet with the same success. This amendment makes no substantial change in the committee proposal. It was brought to my attention by several members of the committee and also by several delegates that the wording of subsection E as proposed by the committee was somewhat awkward. I'm in hopes that this amendment will clear up several areas which may have led to objections, if not cleared up. Number one, this amendment conforms in the latter sentence with the language that we have later in our proposal with regard to Section 7, Salaries to public officers and change. I think that the terminology is better. This amendment further makes it clear that the legislature will be able to fix the annual salary and thereafter only change it by a vote of two-thirds of the members elected to each house. It was brought to my attention that under the wording of the committee proposal in subsection E that an interpretation would have been possible to the effect that the legislature at each term could have changed or fixed its salary. In other words, this four years fix it and then a new legislature in the next four years come back and fix it again by a majority vote. I would be happy to answer any questions regarding my amendment. Actually, it's the same substantial proposition that is originally submitted by the committee. I personally favor this concept. I think that there is no reason for camouflaging a salary paid legislators in terms other than a salary. I personally feel that members of the legislature work very hard. I think that they should be paid an annual salary comparable to the work that they put forth.

And I further feel that this concept of being paid an annual salary is supported by most students of government and I'm not only saying that this is a good government move, I'm saying that it lends support to the legislature. It encourages them and mandates them to fix their salary which I think that they deserve. It further establishes a precedent to the public to know before running for an office as to how much he's going to get paid for seeking that office. I can anticipate some arguments and some questions about the fact well, does this cut out the expense allowances? This does not. I would submit to you that this provision allows any reasonable expenses to be paid; mileage, for hotels, for meals, or whatever the legislature in its wisdom desires. But it does require the members to be paid on an annual salary which shall be fixed. I will yield to a question now.

Questions

Mr. Leigh Mr. Fayard, does your amendment contemplate that the Senate can fix the salary for its members different from what the House fixes for its members.

Mr. Fayard No sir. My amendment contemplates...

Mr. Leigh Isn't it subject to that interpretation where you say it's fixed by each house, or the members of each body.

Mr. Fayard No sir, I don't think so. I think that it's... it says that each member of the legislature shall be paid an annual salary which shall be fixed by a favorable vote of a majority of the members elected to each house. This is language which we have used throughout our proposal and it's merely used to conform with other provisions of the proposal.

Mr. Riecke Mr. Fayard, I'm certainly in favor of the legislature... legislators getting increases when the time is right and getting everything that they should have, but I'm just wondering... don't you think that if they're taken off of a per diem and put on an annual salary that it would encourage absences from the legislature? The legislator knows that if he's going to get an annual salary, he doesn't have to show up at all.

Mr. Fayard No sir, Mr. Riecke because the legislature at this time gets a certain amount of money whether he shows up or not. I think that this would encourage more responsible, at least more responsible action in the legislature. It would further encourage more people to participate in the seeking of office to the legislature.

Further Discussion

Mr. Bollinger I have no major objections to the gist of Mr. Fayard's amendment. However, I still feel that there is dead language in here which is not necessary to the constitution. We could provide simply in the schedule that the legislature shall fix the salary and the constitution could provide that the legislature shall be paid an annual salary which may be changed only by a two-thirds vote and then concur with the rest of his language. I just feel that this is adding language that will never again be used, once the legislature sets the first salary which will come hopefully after the adoption of this constitution. So, I think that this could be cleaned up considerably for the constitution and I would like to see Mr. Fayard possibly redraft it to delete it. Thank you.

Questions

Mr. Velazquez Mr. Bollinger, wouldn't it be a lot easier if the convention itself just went ahead and fixed an initial salary and give the legislature the authority to expand it from then on by a two-thirds vote?

Mr. Bollinger I didn't understand your question. Could you repeat it?

Mr. Velazquez Wouldn't it be easier, since a lot of your problem seems to be in the fixed salary portion of this thing, for the convention itself to merely go ahead and set up initial fixed salaries and give the legislature the authority to expand that by a two-thirds vote which would not be for them but for the next succeeding legislature? And solve the problem that way.

Mr. Bollinger You would suggest this be in the constitution. Is that your question?

Mr. Velazquez It would seem to be a way to break through the problem.

Mr. Bollinger No, I don't. I think the language is totally erroneous to the constitution. That's my objection. Not to further specify that we... the constitution will set the first salary. This is not at all my intention.

Mr. Velazquez Then what is your intention, to remove the thing completely?

Mr. Bollinger To remove the portion which is germane to the legislature fixing the first salary by a majority vote. The schedule could provide that the legislature shall fix the first salary, or the salary for the 1976 members and then the constitution shall provide that it will be an annual salary and how it will be changed. But once it's fixed, this portion of the constitution will never again be needed.

Mr. Velazquez The question is, are you really saving any words by making a difference from the thing that's presently on the floor?

Mr. Bollinger Yes, I think you're saving words.

Mr. Velazquez I don't think that you're saving more than one or two.

Mr. Roemer Why is it two-thirds vote in here?

Mr. Bollinger I'm not arguing that point, Buddy, at this time. I'm just talking about this particular provision in the amendment, about fixing the salary. As far as the two-thirds vote, I'm not arguing pro or con to that effect.

18th Days Proceedings—July 20, 1973

Mr. Roemer You don't have a position on it?

Mr. Bollinger Not at this time.

Mr. Roemer Your amendment doesn't deal with it, does it?

Mr. Bollinger It does not.

Further Discussion

Mr. Burson Ladies and gentlemen, I just want to point out to you that the Fayard amendment does more than just change the wording of this section. The way I read it, it changes the substance, because the section as drafted by the committee says "members of the legislature shall be compensated by an annual salary", the clear indication of those words being that the only compensation will be an annual salary whereas the Fayard amendment simply says "each member of the legislature shall be paid an annual salary". I think you're talking about two different things. Whichever way you want to vote on it is all right with me, but I simply wanted to point that out.

Further Discussion

Mr. Roemer Fellow delegates, I tried to ask a question a while ago and it seemed to be to the wrong person. I didn't have time, unfortunately, under these new streamlined rules we have to ask the author of the amendment what the amendment means. And I refer specifically to the two-thirds vote provision. Now I would like to hear someone who either authored or is in sympathy with this amendment discuss the two-thirds rule. As it's written now, it takes a majority to set the initial salary and a two-thirds to raise or change it subsequent to that. Now, if it's a good idea to have two-thirds change it, why isn't it a good idea to have two-thirds set it initially? That's my point. We seem to be inconsistent on the point. It ought to be a majority both ways. If we trust them to set it initially, why can't we trust them to change it when the times dictate that it needs to be changed? If we can't trust them to change it over time, why should we trust them to set it initially? Now, I'm not hung-up over the point, I just want to know the logic here. It escapes me.

Further Discussion

Mr. Stagg Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, the proposal before the house on the payment of an annual salary to the legislature, I believe, is a good one, and I support it. The language proposed by Mr. Fayard, while it is productive of some questions in some minds, says that the legislature, each member, shall be paid an annual salary. In answer to Mr. Burson, I would say, that it would be equally equitable for the members of the legislature to be paid mileage so that those legislators who live in the area of Vivian in my parish would end up with the same take-home pay as the delegate who lives in East Baton Rouge Parish. It doesn't escape me that that disparity affects the delegates to this convention. To change the salary from that initially set, I believe ought to be done by two-thirds vote simply so that a majority of the legislature at any given time might not unreasonably raise their own salaries. It appears to me that as a Republican watcher of the legislature, I will be quite interested in those legislators who shirk their duty because they're not receiving a per diem to come to Baton Rouge for the legislative committee hearings. They are the prime targets for the opponent of an incumbent legislator who takes the salary and then does not perform. I'm not too worried about it. I think that we can nail those guys who take our money and don't produce results. The annual salary is a good thing. The Fayard amendment is a good amendment, and I do support it.

Questions

Mr. Roemer Delegate Stagg, as I understood your remarks, you pointed out that you did not want the legislature to, by a simple majority, put in an inappropriate sum for their annual salary at some future date. Is that correct?

Mr. Stagg Yes sir, that is correct.

Mr. Roemer Do you have that same concern on the initial setting of the salary itself?

Mr. Stagg No sir, I don't.

Mr. Roemer How do you differentiate the two?

Mr. Stagg I think when they start off on this move after this convention has finished its work and after the constitution has been adopted that legislature on the initial fixing of the salary will be doing so in the glaring broad light of everybody's interest in what they do, and they are not going to unseasonably mess up their legislative record in the first setting of the salary to turn the public against them permanently. You will remember that the Congress in the last few years was paid $33,000. Five or six or seven years ago they raised their salary to $42,500 and people are still talking about it and are still concerned about and though the time has maybe now come for them to again consider to raise their pay they are afraid to do it because of the public reaction.

Mr. Roemer Well, Mr. Stagg, would you agree that the temptation of money is great anytime.

Mr. Stagg All the time.

Mr. Roemer Both initially and at some later date, I might add, in my opinion. Can't you see the danger in having a simple majority set an absurdly high level of salary initially and then have it frozen in because it took two-thirds to change it.

Mr. Stagg Mr. Roemer, our remedy is always at the ballot box. Those men who fix their salary unseasonably high will have a short session in the legislature, i.e., only four years.

Mr. Roemer Well, then, if we follow that logic to its natural conclusion, which we seem not to be doing, then we ought to let a majority do it all the time and vote them out of office every four years.

Mr. Burns Mr. Stagg, I'm asking this because I actually don't know. Under this proposed amendment fixing a salary for the legislature, does that take the place of the per diem or is this in addition to the present per diem of $50 a day and mileage.

Mr. Stagg The per diem would no longer be paid and the salary would be its replacement.

Mr. Burns Is that...do you think that that is spelled out with sufficient particularity in the present amendment. Nothing is said about it.

Mr. Stagg There are four amendments on the desk, Mr. Burns, and if you'll read them you'll find that two of them will make that clear.

Mr. Burns Yes, I saw one by Mr. Burson, but I'm talking about the present amendment...committee proposal.

Mr. Stagg Mr. Burns, I'm in favor of the concept of the salary, the Fayard vehicle to put it on the floor before us is a more perfect vehicle than that which we originally met.

Mr. Burns I'm in favor of the concept too, of the salary, but I just wanted to know if we're going to get the double shot out of it.

18th Days Proceedings—July 20, 1973

Mr. Stagg We'd better not.

Mr. Willis Mr. Stagg, Mr. Fayard told us that this provision would allow for the payment of per diem but that would possibly allow the legislature to give itself an allowance for hotels and meals... and meals. Now, that's what the per diem is for isn't it?

Mr. Stagg Yes, sir.

Mr. Willis Now, a rose by any other name smells just as sweet. So, that whether you call it per diem or a subsistence and allowances they can still get the per diem by another name or catch word, isn't that correct?

Mr. Stagg Burt, I think that the legislature ought to be paid a salary and to make...

Mr. Willis That's not my question. My question is isn't that correct?

Mr. Stagg But can I not answer it in my own fashion?

Mr. Willis Yes, you may, but as you and I, in our profession, you answer yes and no and then you can explain. Let your time go out.

Further Discussion

Mrs. Warren Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, since I was not able to ask my question at the mike some time ago, I'm taking this privilege. I don't see how I could vote intelligently on a matter I have not had the privilege of sitting in on a legislative committee. I don't know really what it's all about. The other day one of the delegates said that the legislators get $500 a month, that doesn't sound big, but if they get $500 a month that's an annual salary, I don't care how you spell it. You might use a technical word and say well it's not in the constitution saying "annual salary". Then, he also mentioned the expense account, the travel expense and so forth and the per diem a day while they were meeting. I'm just wondering, I heard one person say that money was tempting, in some instances we can trust the legislator and some instances the legislators can trust themselves and some instances they can't. But when it comes to money, I imagine they can all trust each other because they're all interested in the same thing. Another thing that I was thinking about was that a yearly salary is good providing we can trust that the legislators will not do what I have in mind, and I'm going to tell it to you in a little story. I can remember, and this is true, it's a true story, a first cousin of mine which was similar like an aunt. She was working for a family. They put out the groceries to be cooked. The amount they put out was just enough to serve their families. For the first couple of days she went without eating. So, the next couple of days she got smart like Senator Rayburn. She decided she would cook, she would eat and then she would serve. Then whatever was left, they would eat it. So I would like to know more about this before I could vote intelligently. So I don't have any way of asking any questions since we don't have that privilege any more. This matter might be settled before next week. So I really don't know how to vote on it, so I'm going to oppose it.

Further Discussion

Mr. Jack Mr. Chairman and delegates, I started to say I'll be brief, you've got to now, thank goodness. I merely want to point out this, that this language states you'll fix the salary. There is nothing in there that provides that you no longer have a per diem. Per diem, in 1940, was $10 expenses. It was later raised to $25 per diem expenses. Presently, $50 per diem expenses. The law provides the per diem is not subject to state income tax because it's expenses. Under this, you do what you want and you are, but I want to call it to your attention. The legislature, under this, can fix a salary, annual salary, and unless they repeal the per diem they would still be entitled to the per diem just the same as they would be entitled to the $500 a month expense money which is $6,000 a year. The per diem under our present 60 day session is $3,000. So you would have in a 60 day session the $500 a month totaling $6,000 plus $3,000 which is $9,000 a year. Then if you fix the annual salary at $1,000 a month which is $12,000, a legislator would draw $12,000 plus $9,000 which is $21,000 a year plus whatever the amount was for his secretary and for stationary or rent of office space. I call that to your attention because that's what you're going to do in spite of what Mr. Stagg says. I served there 24 years beginning in 1949, ending just before the '64 session and always that per diem was listed, not his salary, but expense money. You can say, and you may be right, that if the legislature does and you pass this he fixes an annual salary, they will repeal the per diem. If you trust them to do it forget what I'm saying. If there's my doubt in my mind somebody better offer an amendment or if they don't, I'm going to vote against it. I don't think it's proper and I think a reasonable salary would be $12,000 a year for a State Representative plus only mileage. I think they ought to get the mileage. I don't think if you set an annual salary they should get any $500 a month expense money and in session any $50 a day. Thank you.

Question

Mr. Willis Mr. Jack, don't you think that the original proposal by the committee which in pertinent part reads "shall be compensated by an annual salary" when it [..] if there is my doubt in my mind "annual salary" under the Fayard amendment, that the committee proposal would prohibit the payment of per diem, hotels and meals, office space, office staff, office expenses and travel expenses.

Mr. Jack It would not at all anymore than when I was given an allowance as a kid by my parents if I could get something out of my Aunt Susie, I got that also. That's the answer.

Further Discussion

Mr. Weiss Fellow delegates, as I appreciate the problem, we have to decide whether the legislature should receive an annual salary or whether they go on the basis of what has happened in the past years of per diem and expense allowances. The Fayard amendment I must oppose as I read it, and I certainly think the committee members who must have spent a lot of time considering this have the most desirable type of amendment. I do have some questions, but I envision that these questions could be answered by our legislators here present. For example the compensated annual salary is a fixed amount. However that fixed amount may not necessarily be the same for each legislator. For example, those in different sections of the state may be compensated differently for the distance they may have to travel than those that are residing in Baton Rouge or nearby. Perhaps the legislature which has requested so much more power, will be able to resolve that within their own domain. I question the present legislators whether they would do that and I think they may. The second point is those who fail to attend sessions. I hope that they would penalize themselves for those that are having a problem that they must attend before they are penalized in some way for their annual salary. Now this resolves itself to allowing the legislature to make these decisions based upon the suggestion of the committee under Section "E". I do believe that that may or may not occur. If the legislators feel otherwise, I wish they would comment on questions of floor amendments that they are proposing and amendments that are coming up will be an attempt to present this on a per diem basis such as the Fayard amendment and I think we should defeat all of these amendments and go with the committee's proposal. I hope that the legislature in its wisdom and through the men who serve us will see that they have a good attendance by penalizing those who do not attend and provide for their fellow delegates who are out of certain areas and have to spend more money. That they too be allowed a larger annual salary.

Further Discussion

Mr. Champagne I too might have had this by questions but we didn't have enough time. I simply want to make the statement that the Fayard amendment positively does not take care of the fact of per diem in my estimation. It simply, and the first one is not complete enough. I submitted without the amendments that are coming, I would have to vote against all of these. I want to leave one thought in your mind. Many years ago when we had a reconnaissance squadron and there was one plane up observing and the other one flew wing man, the wing man's purpose was to take care of the boy up front. I heard the expression once by the pilots to his wing man. He said, "You know Joe, I trust you with my life but with my girlfriends and my bourbon I positively do not." There's a little similarity here with the legislature and some of our minds. I just want to put that thought to you. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Duval I thought at this time, fellow delegates, that I would like to if you haven't read the present constitutional provision which provides: "The members of the legislature shall receive a compensation of $10 per day during their attendance on that body and 10 cents per mile going to and returning from the seat of government not to exceed three round trips." Now that's what's in the present constitution. Obviously it's been interpreted to me, not less than. In drafting this provision I would suggest that we avoid any specific amounts and further, that if we want to fix an annual salary the way that the amendments now read there's nothing to prevent per diem or any other thing. It really destroys me the whole effect of the article. I would ask you to vote against the amendment as it presently reads.

Further Discussion

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I just want to take a few moments to kind of enlighten some of you that might feel that the members of the legislature are making a tremendous amount of money. I think I'm one of the top paid members. My salary last year counting per diem and all was $15,000. There is one thing I'm going to ask you to think about when you're talking about per diem and expenses. I'm on the Bond and Building Commission because I'm Chairman of the Finance Committee. I'm on the Board of Liquidation because I'm Chairman of the Finance Committee. Likewise as the Chairman of the Appropriation Committee in the House. I'm a member of the Budget Committee. I just want you to think of this. When you say an annual salary period, Mr. Champagne, you're saying to a man like me that I've got to come to Baton Rouge probably, I've got to come twice a month for the Bond and Building, we usually meet once or maybe twice a month for the Board of Liquidation, the Budget Committee meets twice a month, so I've got to come to Baton Rouge if I'm going to be a good legislator and I've got to attend those meetings for the same salary that a member who is not a member of that body will receive. I just wanted to bring that out.

Questions

Mr. Weiss Delegate Rayburn, my question as I mentioned before is do you think your fellow legislators would consider this and therefore make allowances within the legislature for this problem?

Mr. Rayburn Well Doctor, the way I see it, you're going to have to have some latitude if you're going to really tend to the various committees that legislators have to serve on. I think if they've got added expenses, for instance I'll use my good friend Senator DeBlieux, is it right for him to make the same salary that I make and I've got to come 105 miles to get here? I've got to stay in a hotel here and he stays at home?

Mr. Weiss Obviously not, but do you think it's up to the constitutional body here assembled to make that decision or should we leave it to the legislature?

Mr. Rayburn I think it should be left to the legislature and let them be responsible to the people. Now you ask me what I think, and that's what I think.

Mr. Weiss Therefore the amendment by the committee is more desirable than...

Mr. Rayburn I also think this. I think this body should give some consideration, I'm sure you are going to pass the amendment where it says that we can't raise our salary, which is alright with me without a two-thirds vote. I think you should consider other elected officials too because they are elected officials just as I am.

Mr. Weiss That proposal is in the making.

Further Discussion

Mr. Burns Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, let me make my position clear. I'm not talking about against members of the legislature getting the proper compensation for their efforts. I know that the duties and obligations and what they are called on to do has increased tremendously over the years just like every other phase of business has. What I am concerned about under the present wording of this amendment that has been reported by the committee is it leaves as far as the voting public is concerned. That's the point I'm trying to stress. We may understand the legislators and have complete trust and confidence in them and so may the public, but I think the public when they go to vote on this constitution, are entitled to a little more definite information. Not just the amendment that the legislature can fix its own salary. I think they're entitled to know what else is included. Not any specific amounts, and I'm not talking against any other expenses that they will be subjected to in carrying out their duties. All I would like to urge that somebody come up with an amendment that we not be called on to vote on this amendment in its present form. We can do it in this convention, but I don't know how the public is going to look on it when they're called on to vote with no more definite details than we have in this amendment.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

Mr. Fayard Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, let me make my position very clear on this amendment. I served on the Legislative Powers and Functions Committee. Sub-section "E" is my proposal. We discussed this throughout our meetings and it was brought to our attention that the salary for legislators did not belong in the constitution. I studied that over in my mind for many weeks and on the last day of our committee meeting, I drafted Sub-section "E". I didn't draft it in a closed room, I didn't draft it behind doors, I drafted while I was sitting there at the desk and I submitted it. The question now is what do you want to debate on? Sub-section "E" as drafted or my amendment. I merely submit to you that my amendment is in better language and better form than I had hurriedly drafted Sub-section "E" on the final day of our committee session. We have had questions. Why the two-thirds vote? I submit to you that the two-thirds vote was put in here because in Sub-section 11 we have two-thirds vote. You can eliminate the two-thirds provision about the change. That does not bother me. I'll leave that decision up to you, but what I would like for you to do is to pass this amendment now, get the concept on the floor, and if you want to further amend it to prohibit per diem, to prohibit gasoline expenses, to prohibit secretarial expenses that's fine, I do not favor that. I favor letting the legislature make up their own minds. My position is merely that a salary should be called a salary. As you may or may not know as Senator Rayburn pointed out, they get paid a salary right now. You can call it what you want. The average legislator receives $9,000 a year whether he goes to a committee meeting or whether he goes to a session or not if he gets a leave of absence. I submit to you that everybody gets a leave of absence and gets his $9,000 a year. It's called a per diem if you want to call it that. He still gets paid a salary. I see nothing wrong with it. As a matter of fact, I think it should be a minimum of $12,000 a year. I had originally proposed that but figures do not belong in the constitution. I would further say that the legislature in its wisdom is not going to set a salary at $1,000 a month and then come back and tack on per diem. They may allot expenses or they may provide for a salary for a committee chairman or they may provide different measures for compensating members who attend committee meetings and have to come from Shreveport and New Orleans and Alexandria or what have you. The proposition before us is merely whether you would want to mandate the legislature to pay themselves an annual salary. We've heard arguments that it's not necessary, that there is no need to have a salary because they're going to do what they want to do. I say that if the constitution provides it, the legislature will definitely fix a salary which everyone will know the exact amount that legislators are expected to receive and deserve to receive and make. I believe that when they run for election that this will not hamper the incumbents and that this will open other people who want to run for the office, give them at least the knowledge as to what they can expect to make. I would further submit that under Sub-section "E" as the committee reported it out, it does not prevent other allowances. It does not even prevent per diem. It merely says the legislature shall be compensated by an annual salary. That is not a restriction. It can be interpreted back and forth and I would further say that it would be hard to restrict a meaning of that in the constitution unless you come back and specifically say that the salary shall be in lieu of all other compensation and in lieu of all per diem. If you want to do that, that's fine. I would say that the amendment which I have proposed is a better vehicle from which to start to further amend if you so agree with me on the concept that legislators should be paid an annual salary and that the public and the people and the legislators individually should know and have an idea and know definitely what they're going to receive.

[Amendment rejected: 44-56. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Recess

[Quorum Call: 82 delegates present and a quorum.]

Personal Privilege

Mr. Haynes Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise to speak on personal privilege. As you observed in the news media of our capitol city on Tuesday morning July 19, there was reporting of the senseless killing of one, Milton X. Scott, of our city. In view of the fact that this indicates the reckless disregard that we have for human lives and for the sanctity and safety of the family in our homes. I found in this delegation a segment that is concerned about this kind of behavior. A group of our delegates feel that this is worse than any Watergate that enshrouds our nation today and that no longer can we tolerate in our capitol city this kind of disregard for the family and for the home. In view of this, Mr. Chairman, some of these delegates wish to form a committee and get leave from this constitutional convention and go down to the FBI and for this poor family here in Baton Rouge, seek some semblance of justice. See that our nation and our city would thoroughly investigate the circumstances surrounding this reckless disregard for human life, and that the perpetrators of this injustice would be brought to court and that this family would be protected. Mr. Chairman, I have risen and ask your permission to address this delegation to us that those sympathetic delegates would be permitted to have leave to go down to the FBI office in the Post Office Building of our city to ask that the investigation be made, that the perpetrators of this crime would be brought to justice. I think you would recognize that the more recent news media has revealed that the wrong person, in his own home looking after his two little children and his young wife was killed. That the man for whom they were seeking was in San Quentin prison. This is not a black or white issue. This is an issue that involves the sanctity and safety of every home in this nation. We would ask your indulgence at this time that those delegates sympathetic to this cause would meet in the lobby of this hotel and thereafter we would go down to the FBI and ask that justice be brought to bear here in our capitol city, here in our nation which all of us are concerned about. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank you very much for the opportunity.

Personal Privilege

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, Mr. Wellborn Jack made a statement a few minutes ago upon the argument of the Foyard amendment that the per diem that legislators receive is not income. I just want to make my record clear on this. It may not be income to some people, but I have placed it on my tax return as income and you can go and check my tax returns at the Clerk of Court's office here in East Baton Rouge Parish. I am not going to get myself into a position to where I can be accused by the Federal government or Mr. Joe Train or anybody else for not reporting income that I have received. I think that that's something is a chance we are taking. I just want to make it perfectly clear if you want to take that risk, that's all right, but I'm not in that category.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter The next set of amendments is sent up by Mr. Asseff.

Amendment No. 1, on page 3 strike out lines 27 through 32 in their entirety and on page 4 strike out line 1 in its entirety.

Explanation

Mr. Asseff Mr. Chairman, delegates, it seems to me most unwise to set a special provision for the members of the legislature and to direct that they be paid a set salary. Salaries are provided for in Section 11 of the proposed constitution. I think it will create nothing but trouble for this convention if we set the legislature aside for a salary whereas we provide otherwise for other public officials. If we delete the provision under the concept we will follow with respect to the constitution, the legislature will be free to set a salary or not as it thinks best. When we reach Section 11, I will offer an amendment at that time to be certain that the legislature may set a salary for all public officials, including members of the legislature. For the moment I am moving that the entire "E" be stricken.

Further Discussion

Mr. Jack Mr. Chairman, and members, I'm speaking in favor of this amendment. Now it's my opinion, and I've talked with numerous people and they all agree, there's no necessity for the constitution to authorize the legislature to fix the salaries. They have that right. Now historically the reason the legislature in Louisiana never had a salary was because way back the amount of work didn't warrant it. So you had a per diem expense. I don't know what it was before 1940, somebody said it was $5. I don't know. But in 1940 when I went there it was $10 a day and you met 60 days every other year in the even years. Now that was for expenses. It was later raised to $25 per diem for expenses. Later to $50. Now after that we got $250. Now when I was talking a few minutes ago, somebody said it was not subject to state income tax because as I recall, a ruling of the tax collectors. Someone said I was in error. If I'm in error I stand corrected. It still has nothing to do with what we're talking about because that per diem that you get today of $50 is expense. It's not a salary. That $500 a month is not a salary, it's not caused it. The whole thing here is this is a matter that concerns itself with the legislature. We don't have anything in the constitution that says what the salary of a judge or that they get a salary. The legislature's got a right to fix their own. If we're going to try to come up with a semblance of a constitution that eliminates things that are necessary, here's quite a number of lines to take out. Just delete the whole section here then they can equitably fix a proper salary, and I think they ought to have one. I think the chairman ought to be paid more than the other people. I think a person serving on that Budget Committee for 30 days or whatever it is, he ought to get more than a man that does it. Take for instance a judge, that ought to be proper. Some of you think under this bill it eliminates per diem, since it is some doubt on things. In justice to the hard workers in the legislature, if for no other reason, let them work out their problem. Since they don't need authority from the constitution to do it, why in the world do we have this section in here? So I say this is a good amendment, eliminate the thing and let's get along with it.

[Quorum Call: 93 delegates present and a quorum.]

Further Discussion

Mr. Burns Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I'm in favor of the Asseff amendment for this reason. In the first place I didn't even think this article should have been in the constitution but when I was up here before, I didn't want to go as far as to say that. By deleting it, I said I don't think it ever should have been in there, it's going to a large measure, in my opinion, take away the concern that I had with reference to presenting this to the voters in the form that it was. I think if under Section 11 of the general law the legislature has the right to fix its salary, that's up to them. Many speakers have said if they overdo it or take advantage of it why they and they alone are the one that's going to have to pay the price. So I urge the support of Dr. Asseff's amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Champagne I simply want to say that I'm in favor of this motion. I want to put whatever inequities or blames that might occur where they belong. To say in the constitution that we have something which appears that it's a check and it is no check, I simply want to leave the fact to the public. I want the public to know that the legislature alone decides this and if they decided wrong, then kick them out of office when they so do. I'm in favor of this motion.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

Mr. Asseff Mr. Chairman, delegates, I wish to say only two things. First, the amendment meets with the approval of the chairman of the Committee on Legislative Powers and two, it will not prevent the legislature from setting a salary. Thank you.

[Amendment adopted; #2-15. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous Question ordered on the Section: 72-22. Section passed; 98-2. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Personal Privilege

Mr. Juneau I'm getting a lesson today, gentlemen, in legislative process. I guess we all are in some respects.

I want to clarify one thing because it is going to come up again. I don't know if you got the impression I did in the slight span of time of five or six seconds. I think Mr. Fayard would share my thoughts in this regard, that the Legislative Committee consensus seems to be that we favored the deletion of that amendment. I don't know if I understood you correct, Dr. Asseff. That is totally and completely incorrect. I don't know if you said that exactly. But if that's the implications, that is not true.

Personal Privilege

Mr. Asseff Well, I said I'm not sure if the implication... I just wanted to clarify that. It is not correct.

Personal Privilege

Mr. Blair Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I think I can explain that. I think I can clear it, and I think I can clear it from the beginning.

When we started the Legislative Power and Functions Committee, it was the general agreement that I got the... had the agreement that I would only break ties or fill quorum and I thought we could act and carry on our work much better in that manner. On the day that we decided this particular issue, the vote was 5 to 4, five in favor and four against. If I had not kept my consistency at the time, I could have killed it there. But I preferred to stay consistent and I did so. When Mr. Asseff, or Dr. Asseff, asked me how I did, "Personally, I would like to see this pass." As an individual, I did not quote for the whole committee. So I hope that clears it, Mr. Juneau.

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter Section 5. Legislative apportionment, judicial review, apportionment by the Supreme Court. Section 5A. Not later than the end of the first year following the year in which the population of this state is reported to the President of the United States for each decennial federal census, the legislature shall apportion the representation in each House on the basis of the total state population as shown by the census.

Within ten days after the legislature adopts an apportionment plan, the presiding officers of the two Houses shall submit the plan to the Supreme Court for review.

B. If the legislature fails to apportion itself, the Supreme Court upon petition therefore by the attorney general within ten days after the close of the year above specified, shall apportion each House as provided in paragraph A of this Section.

C. The procedure for review and petition shall be provided by law.

Explanation

Mr. O'Neill Ladies and gentlemen of the convention. The article on reapportionment was perhaps the longest discussion that our committee held during our deliberations. We went from one extreme that the legislature shall apportion itself, period, to the extreme of adopting the language in the Florida Constitution which set out approximately three pages of material on apportionment.

We took the Florida plan, capsuled it down, and we came out with this. Now let me explain why we came out with this. It was felt by myself, and I think fairly said by other members of the committee, that we would like to keep apportionment out of the federal courts. Therefore, we have provided that it shall go directly to the Supreme Court if the legislature fails to apportion itself. Now you ask, will this keep it out of federal court? Well, I think that that answer has to be determined by each one of us.

Personally, I am not so sure that it will. If an individual files suit, I feel that it would go directly into federal court. Therefore, it would not go, it would be in federal court and we had not anticipated that.

The Supreme Court, if they had to pass upon apportionment, would probably go the route of getting a special person to gather information and what have you and then would draw up the apportionment plan. I do not think, and I may be wrong, that they would appoint a special master. I think that instead they would have someone to gather information on apportionment and would be guided by that information.

The present constitution states that the legislature shall apportion itself after each decennial census. Well, we know the story behind that, and we also know that until the federal courts did it last year, the legislature was not able to do it, and I doubt that even though the legislature will perhaps draw reapportionment plans that we can't keep it out of federal court, anyway.

But by this, and several members of the committee join with me, we felt that we were placing kind of a stick over the legislature in making them reapportion, and I feel that this is the thrust of this article.

There have been questions about whether or not the legislature can make the attorney general apply to the Supreme Court for reapportionment. I think that this article may be vague on that and I also personally feel that any elector or anybody ought to be able to petition the Supreme Court. But these are matters that can be amended out.

I say to you that we have provided a stick over the legislature so that they shall reapportion and that I think it wise that we leave this stick in there and make sure that we keep it out of federal court if at all possible.

I hope I can answer your questions, and I hope I can reflect somewhat what the members of the committee thought while drafting this proposal.

I move for its favorable adoption.

Questions

Mr. Denny Mr. O'Neill, I assume that you mean that the legislature shall apportion as equally as practicable?

Mr. O'Neill Yes, sir. Let me say this, Mr. Denny, I think that under the previous section that we have adopted, that they have no choice but to apportion on one man, one vote principle. I checked that out earlier, by the way, and I think that was the opinion of most everyone. They have no choice but to apportion that way...single member districts.

Mr. Lambert Mr. O'Neill, on line 12 you refer to submission of the plan to the Supreme Court for review. What I am concerned about is this. Would the State Supreme Court, I would assume under this provision they would...they could in effect take the entire plan and just throw it out and redraw the lines. Is that the way you interpret this particular provision?

Or, could it be interpreted that they would leave whatever the legislature does as is? To what extent does this review power go? That's my question.

Mr. O'Neill I would assume, Senator Lambert, that the entire plan would be able to review the plan, and until a suit is filed, probably wouldn't be able to do much changing in it.

Mr. Lambert Well, you are assuming.

Mr. O'Neill Yes, sir, I am.

Mr. Lanier Mr. O'Neill, I am noticing the sentence which commences on line 9 and terminates on line 12, appears to indicate that the review, whatever that is, by the Supreme Court is automatic whether or not the plan is acceptable to all parties concerned or not. Is this correct? And if it is correct, why did you think it was necessary to have an automatic review when the reapportionment plan was not contested.

Mr. O'Neill Mr. Lanier, and if I misrepresent the feelings of the committee, I hope the members will tell me, we planned this so that if in case it did not go to the Supreme Court...I'm sorry, the federal court would have taken this into consideration when passing upon it perhaps in a suit. The Supreme Court would have reviewed the plan and would have passed upon it and that it would have had some effect in some way when it got into federal court. I think that's the intent of this section and that's why it was put in there.

Mr. Lanier Mr. Chairman, I'd like to ask a point of order. I have submitted some amendments on this proposal. At what point in time would those be considered?

Mr. O'Neill When you quit asking questions.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter The first set to be passed out right now is sent up by Delegate Denny.

Amendment No. 1 on page 4, line B, immediately after the word, quote, house, and before the word, quote, on, insert the words, quote as equally as practicable, end quote. Equally as practicable.

Explanation

Mr. Denny The purpose of my amendment...the purpose of this amendment is to assure that the one man one vote rule is followed. I am not so certain as Mr. O'Neill indicated that the single member district would require an equal apportionment.

Apportionment as defined in the dictionary does not necessarily require equality. As a matter of fact, I think the last decision of the Supreme Court defining this word or discussing this word used the language just and equitable, but did not indicate as equally as practicable. And the purpose of my resolution is merely...of my amendment, rather, is merely to put into the constitution very clearly that any apportionment by the legislature shall divide the total number of citizens in the state by the total number of legislative districts in the House and in the Senate and come out as equally as practicable for each district in numbers of representatives.

Motion

Mr. Fontenot Mr. Chairman, I just saw you yawning upstairs and I am in the same position physically and mentally. Therefore, I move we adjourn until 9:30 tomorrow morning.

Mr. Henry Mr. Fontenot, for goodness sakes now. Someone jumped up and moved to adjourn yesterday afternoon, and we are fixing to round this thing out in a minute. But there are duties at the desk that we have to go through with, and all these just out of the blue adjournment motions cause all kinds of confusion.

Mr. Fontenot Excuse me, Mr. Chairman. I move we revert to the regular order of business.

[Motion to revert to other orders rejected: 6-81.]

Further Discussion

Mr. Blair I would at least like to see the amendment. I have not had the amendment given to me yet and I thought we were going to get these amendments down here first.

[Previous question ordered. Amendment adopted: 83-10. Motion to reconsider

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. J. Jackson], page 4, line 11.

After the words, quote, plan to the, delete the word, quote, Supreme, delete line 12 in its entirety and insert in lieu thereof the words, quote, Louisiana Supreme Court for review.

Explanation

Mr. LeBreton Mr. Chairman and delegates, on the premise that Johnny won't have any objection to me handling his amendments, the only thing this does is add the word, Louisiana, in front of the Supreme Court. It now stands to Supreme Court for review. This would make it read Louisiana Supreme Court for review. I don't think that's very controversial and on that basis why I ask for a favorable report on this amendment.

Questions

Mr. Tate Mr. LeBreton, I would assume that on the style and drafting, when we get to it, we will try to talk of the, say, the Supreme Court, in the same terms throughout. And for instance in the judiciary, we are just saying supreme court and saying Louisiana State Supreme Court. I would just think this is sort of a style and drafting amendment that really we might...it is not well considered.

Mr. LeBreton Well, why don't you let it pass, Judge, and then just style it and dress it when you get it in committee.

Mr. Tate Well, that's why I didn't want to be forced in the position later to look like we are taking out something that the delegates in their wisdom had thought was a good change.

Mr. LeBreton On the other hand, if I don't pass this, Johnny may never speak to me again.

Mr. O'Neill I think the Lord is telling us something.

Mr. LeBreton, let me ask you, and I know you are not a lawyer, but you are on our committee and I don't know if you were there to remember it. Do you think we could petition the United States Supreme Court to pass upon our apportionment plan?

Mr. LeBreton We could ask them.

Questions

Mr. Newton Mr. LeBreton, I have three separate amendments with the name J. Jackson at the top. Which one are we voting on, please?

Mr. LeBreton The one that says, on page 4, line 11, after the word, quote, plan to the, unquote delete the word supreme, and delete line 12 in its entirety and insert in lieu thereof, the words, quote, "Louisiana Supreme Court for review," unquote

Mr. Newton Thank you, sir.

Further Discussion

Mr. O'Neill Mr. Chairman and members of the convention, we discussed this matter in the committee meeting and if Mr. LeBreton was not there, I apologize for that. Let me say that in speaking in the Louisiana Constitution, we cannot be speaking of any other supreme court besides the Louisiana Supreme Court and that this amendment seems to be superfluous.

INTRODUCTION OF PROPOSALS

[Journal 185]

Mr. Poynter Committee Proposal No. 17, introduced by Delegate Perez, chairman on behalf of the Committee on Local and Parochial Government, Delegates Burson, Cannon and others.

A proposal making general provisions for local and parochial government, levee districts and ports, with the financing thereof and necessary provisions with respect to.

Incidentally, Perez might want me to comment, this is very similar to the committee's first proposal but has been reworked, Mr. Perez, and so forth, you might want to explain that so the delegates would know which one to read.

Mr. Henry If you will, Mr. Perez.

Mr. Perez It was the consensus of the Local and Parochial Government Committee that instead of submitting technical amendments because of the fact that there was a lot of regrouping of sections but very little or no change in the substance, that we should introduce a new proposal.

So I would ask the delegates if they would give their attention to the new proposal which has been introduced and the proposal which was previously introduced by the committee will probably be voted out without action.

PRAYER

Mr. A. Jackson Let us pray. Dear God, as we come to this place to make great decisions for Louisianians, we ask that You would invoke Your blessings upon this body in order that the decisions we make for generations yet unborn will be fair and just and will rebound to the benefit of all citizens of this great state. We ask that You give us the creative power not to be mindful of what the present mood is so much as we would project and realize that there are things yet to come that we must plan and consider as we write a set of laws for these people that are here and will come. PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

Mr. Poynter Committee Proposal No. 3 by Delegate Blair, chairman on behalf of the Committee on Legislative Powers and Functions.

A proposal making provisions for the legislative branch of government, impeachment and removal of officials, and necessary provisions with respect thereto.

The status at this time is that the convention has adopted to date the first four sections of the proposed article dealing with the legislative branch. It is presently considering Section 5 dealing with legislative apportionment, judicial review, apportionment by the Supreme Court. To date, on Friday, one amendment proposed by Mr. Denney which will be noted in your Journal on the second to last page, I believe, was adopted, and one proposed by Mr. Johnny Jackson was rejected on Friday. That is the status of Section 5 at this time.

Personal Privilege

Mr. Tate Sister and brother delegates, at this time, with regard to the section under discussion, one of the delegates yesterday asked me to check with the Chief Justice with regard to any views he might have on the function of the Supreme Court under the proposal to apportion the legislature upon petition of the attorney general, elector, or whoever, if the legislature fails to do so. I feel obliged to communicate to you the views I expressed because some of the delegates asked for the views of the Supreme Court. This does not necessarily represent the views of all of the Supreme Court, it just represents the views of the Chief Justice. Here is what he says. "Dear Judge Tate, I have been advised that the Constitutional Convention is considering a proposal whereby the legislature will reapportion itself periodically, but if it fails to do so that the State Supreme Court will have the duty to reapportion on the petition of the attorney general. I am opposed to such a provision for at least two reasons. One, it violates, at least in spirit, the separation of powers between the legislative and judicial branches. Two, it places upon this court the administrative or political duty of reapportionment in a proceeding outside the form of a law suit between competing parties. I trust that you will give this matter earnest consideration and, if you think it advisable, you may acquaint the members of the convention with my views on the matter.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to do whatever I need to do to file this with the records of the convention.

Mr. Henry I think that if you would present that with the clerk and then we will take it up... we just need to read it in Motion Hour No. 4. I believe, Petitions, Memorials and Communications, and we will file that appropriately.

Thank you Justice Tate.

Amendments

Mr. Poynter The next set of amendments was sent up by Delegate Lanier with many names on it, Keen, Duval, O'Gerolamo, Landry, Silverberg, et al.

Amendment No. 1, on page 4, line 9, after the word and punctuation "census," delete the remainder of line 9 and delete lines 10 through 12, both inclusive in their entirety.

Amendment No. 2, on page 4, line 18, after the words "procedure for" and before the word "petition" delete the words "review and".

Amendment No. 3, on page 4, at the end of line 13, delete the words "the supreme" and at the beginning of line 14 delete "court," and insert in lieu thereof the following: "the Louisiana Supreme Court."

I am a few people still looking for this. This was offered up by Mr. Lanier, it has many other handwritten names on it: Keen, Duval, O'Gerolamo, et al. Are there a good number of you who have misplaced the copy? I'll have a few more run and if you see the pages walking around, if you don't have a copy of it, then raise your hand.

Explanation

Mr. Duval Fellow delegates, the purpose of this amendment is basically to delete the provision that the Supreme Court of Louisiana automatically reviews the plan within ten days after its adoption. There are very many arguments against them automatically doing this because, one has been read to you in a letter, it certainly abrogates the separation of powers theory. If the Supreme Court, without any justifiable controversy, comes in and immediately reviews the plan, and the word review, in my mind, allows them to amend, alter and in any way change the plan. I think that actually you are going to have the Supreme Court reapportioning the legislature rather than the legislature itself under this provision. This is what this amendment attempts to do is to take out the automatic review of the Supreme Court. You would normally have a review by the courts in the event any citizen of Louisiana petitioned the courts to review the reapportionment plan. I do not think it is necessary to have an automatic review and therefore I urge the adoption of the amendment.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendments adopted: 75-6. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. J. Jackson] on page 4, delete lines 13 and 14 in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "8. If the legislature fails to apportion itself the Louisiana Supreme Court, upon petition thereof by the attorney general or a qualified elector with- in,".

Point of Information

Mr. J. Jackson Mr. Chairman, in light of the previous amendment that was just adopted, I would assume that my amendment would possibly be out of order so I just wish to withdraw it at this time.

19th Days Proceedings—July 25, 1973

Mr. Henry Mr. Poynter, would it, in light of the Duval amendment, be out of kilter there?

Mr. Poynter As I appreciate it, Mr. Chairman, it wouldn't be. Mr. Duval's amendment, straighten me out if I am incorrect, Mr. Duval, affected particularly lines 9 through 12 and took out the right of review. This deals, Mr. Jackson, with Section B, not with review, but just the failure of the legislature to apportion. Mr. Duval's amendment did not affect that particular area so, as I understand it, it would certainly be in order.

Explanation

Mr. [J.] Jackson Mr. Chairman, delegates of the convention, in light of the interoperation by the clerk, Mr. Poynter, what this amendment basically does is add the right of a qualified elector, it makes it very clear within the constitution that if the legislature fails to apportion itself that not only does the attorney general have the right to file a petition but a qualified elector also. That is the basis and the thrust of this particular amendment.

Questions

Mr. Derbes Mr. Jackson, don't you find a little peculiar that the Committee on Legislative Powers and Functions say fit to set forth in their proposal a method for reapportioning and that provision for reapportioning has been completely gutted from that proposal without any discussion whatsoever.

Mr. [J.] Jackson That's an observation, Mr. Derbes, that some would share, I don't know how totally true, but the emphasis of my amendment basically is to provide another vehicle whereby a qualified elector of the state of Louisiana could also file a petition. I wouldn't want it to be construed that it could only be...that a petition could only be filed by the attorney general. If there is not further question or discussion, Mr. Chairman, I move adoption.

Mr. Gravel Mr. Jackson, I appreciate the spirit, I think, and purpose of your amendment, but aren't you afraid that by adopting your amendment that we would perhaps restrict those persons, or the class of persons who would be eligible to institute a reapportionment suit? If the constitution provides that only an elector or the attorney general can institute a petition for review, would that not preclude a citizen and taxpayer who presently has the right to petition for reapportionment from being able to do so?

Mr. J. Jackson Mr. Gravel, I have no problems if you want to further amend this to provide for a particular class, but as I read the amendment as proposed by the committee it only restricted itself, it only clarified and stated that the attorney general. I have attempted to go a step further by saying the qualified elector. If you have an amendment that you feel would be all inclusive that would not only include qualified electors but would possibly include persons who may not be qualified electors but may have a particular interest in filing a suit, I would have no objection, but at present I am submitting this because I think that one of the basis for anyone filing a suit challenging the reapportionment of the representation, it would seem to be that one of the automatic criteria ought to be that he ought to be a qualified elector. A qualified elector, it would seem to me, could very well file that suit in the name of particular class of individual.

Mr. Gravel I do have an amendment. All I am saying is don't you feel that your proposed amendment will really restrict the right of persons who are not electors to institute a suit for reapportionment when they should have the right to do so? I am talking about citizens and taxpayers who are not electors. My only problem is whether or not you don't think that what you are trying to do is probably not being accomplished by your amendment. It is too restrictive, don't you agree?

Mr. J. Jackson It may be, Mr. Gravel, but most of the apportionment suits that I've been acquainted with have in all cases persons who lived in a particular geographical area who represented a certain class and particularly carried the criteria of being a qualified voter, but I have no major objections; I would ask the convention to adopt it so that we do have an expansion of the present committee proposal and you could very well fellow later with an amendment that you may feel will be all inclusive. I am not too sure if by opening the door, not wanting to be restrictive, I might just have such language in there that it would not accommodate even the class of persons that you are probably interested in.

Mr. Roy Mr. Jackson, I am a little worried about this entire section. The way I read it is that it mandates the Supreme Court to do something that it may not want to do. That is, even assuming that you would have a census taken and no reapportionment done by the legislature because the census would not have changed. Nevertheless, the Supreme Court, on line 15 with the word "shall," would be mandated to do it and I am just wondering if it shouldn't be optional. That is if the Supreme Court, if it is not necessary, we ought to have the word "may," because we may be making them do something they have to do when there is no need to do it.

Mr. J. Jackson My only response to that, Mr. Roy, is that normally it has been a historical fact that the federal courts have had to decide what the reapportionment lines are going to look like. I believe if you provide the options, too many options involved in reapportionment, what you have is people just shifting the buck and nobody taking the responsibility of his right of charges. I have attempted to do is to say that if the legislature fails to fulfill its responsibility then upon petition of the attorney general or a qualified elector, then the Supreme Court. If we make it optional I just wonder what if the Supreme Court decides not to become involved in the reapportionment then what you have is what people are very much against, what you have is that...

In closing, just let me say that I offer this amendment as to one, to provide alternatives, not allowing only the attorney general but a qualified elector and, two, is to make sure that someone, and on the state level that we are attempting to take care of our business before it necessitates someone outside of the state taking care of our business. I would hope that members of this convention would adopt this proposal as written and if there were other amendments then what we could possibly do is amend them to meet with every other objection that some of the delegates have mentioned. I wanted to just use that, I think there is a responsibility of the legislature to apportion itself and if it doesn't, I think that someone else on the state level must take that responsibility before we push it on to the federal government.

Further Discussion

Mr. Conroy I wish to speak in favor of Delegate Jackson's proposed amendment. I think it fills a hole that has to be filled in the proposal as it came from the committee. The committee proposal does not really make it anybody's obligation to seek reapportionment if the legislature fails to do so. Unfortunately in this state the legislature has had some difficulty in reapportioning itself and the result has been that the matter has been pushed into the federal court. Hopefully with this provision, with the insertion that Mr. Jackson suggests with any interested citizen being able to petition our Supreme Court in the event the legislature fails to reapportion itself, perhaps we can keep the thing at least within Louisiana bodies' jurisdiction to determine what the makeup of the Louisiana legislature should be instead of pushing it into the federal court. I urge your support of this amendment.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment rejected: 40-41. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Point of Information

Mr. Kean In light of the letter that has been read to us from the Chief Justice about his concern with this provision, I raise the question of whether or not we could defer action on this particular section to have some further committee or other consideration of it, in light of the Chief Justice's comments, and then proceed with the other sections of the article.

Mr. Henry I think, Mr. Kean, if the convention delegates are of a mind to do so we could pass over this section pending the necessary information that the convention feels it should get, or the time it should spend on this section, but of course that action would have to be taken by the full convention, sir.

Motion

Mr. Kean If it is in order, Mr. Chairman, I move that we defer action and pass over this section for the time being in order to give us time to study and consider the comments of the Chief Justice with respect to it and that we proceed with the next section.

Mr. Henry Mr. Kean, just in my own mind, because I imagine there would be some questions asked, would you specify any period of time, or do you want to make that indefinite?

Mr. Kean I would say until this afternoon at least, Mr. Chairman.

Further Discussion

Mr. Gravel Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, the only reason why I am objecting to Mr. Kean's suggestion or motion to defer is because I have pending, that I would like to submit to the convention for consideration, a further amendment which will delete Sections B and C for reasons which I believe are legally valid and I do think we should give consideration as to whether or not we want to totally and completely eliminate from the constitution the provisions in B and C and particularly because of the action just taken by the convention and the adoption of the Lanier amendment. I think it is important that we give consideration to that concept. That is the reason I oppose.

Questions

Mr. Avant Mr. Gravel, is it not a fact that prior to the entry of the federal courts into the reapportionment situation in the one man, one vote decision, the original decision, that a suit was brought in this state which went to the Louisiana Supreme Court under the Constitution of 1921, when the legislature had failed to reapportion itself and the Supreme Court refused to consider that suit, said it was a political question and they couldn't get into that. Is that not a fact?

Mr. Gravel That was an early decision of the Louisiana Supreme Court and one which, I am sure any lawyer would agree, would not now be followed in view of the constitutional provisions that the courts have now held apply to the concept of reapportionment. That is correct, there was an early case to that effect and I don't think it will ever come about under any circumstances similarly.

Mr. Avant Is it not a fact that that was the primary reason behind the entry of the federal courts into the reapportionment situation at all? That it was not only in this state but in many other states the state Supreme Court had refused to implement their own constitutional provision calling for reapportionment of the legislature by itself?

Mr. Gravel I don't know about any other states on that particular issue, Mr. Avant. I personally am confident that the Supreme Court of Louisiana as presently constituted would address itself to a valid reapportionment case if such a case came before that court.

Mr. Lanier Mr. Gravel, isn't it true that under the present voting rights law that reapportionment plans must be submitted to the U.S. Attorney in Washington, unless the matter is in federal court?

Mr. Gravel That is the present law but I don't believe that under the terms of the statute itself that that will be the law in 1980. I think the present voting rights act is due to expire unless it is extended, I believe in 1975, the federal voting rights act.

Mr. Lanier And, really since any citizen has the right to go to federal court to bring his grievance concerning reapportionment directly to the federal court, wouldn't it be your opinion that these provisions that we are trying to put into our constitution to avoid federal court action are really whittling in the wind?

Mr. Gravel I don't think that that result will come about. I think that with respect to the question of reapportionment that either the state or the federal court can and would exercise jurisdiction in a proper case.

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Gravel, did I understand you to say that the present 1964 Civil Rights Act is going to run out in 1975?

Mr. Gravel It is my understanding that it was extended at one time, I believe in 1971...Mr. Lanier corrects me. It is 1974. Unless it is extended again by the Congress it would not be in effect after 1974.

Mr. Anzalone Well now, if the state of Louisiana were to set up some type of a valid, court approved, or court originated, or giving the courts of this state some type of original jurisdiction in the reapportionment, don't you think it would more unlikely that they would extend it rather than to extend it automatically?

Mr. Gravel I don't think that would have any bearing at all on the question of reapportionment as such because I believe that reapportionment constitutes both a federal and a state equal protection question.

Mr. Anzalone I understand that. Now, Mr. Gravel, one more question. If we had in the state of Louisiana a definite procedure set up within the state courts for reapportionment, isn't it a little bit more likely that the federal court system would stay out of it until at least the state's court had a chance to review it?

Mr. Gravel I think the federal court would stay out of any reapportionment suit instituted in the state court under the doctrine of abstention whether there is anything in the constitution or not. I don't think that has anything to do with it.

Further Discussion

Mr. LeBlue Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I just had a couple of remarks that I thought maybe you might be interested in and may help clarify some of this. I have been involved in the last three elections in three different representative districts. In each one, I was on the short end of the stick, but all the efforts that were made by the legislature the last time to reapportion itself, were restricted by the fact that the committee could not recommend districts that crossed parish boundaries. In some instances, you had to have multiple member districts. After the court gave the case to the reapportionment master, he was allowed to do anything that he pleased as far as a single member district was concerned, even cut across ward lines. In fact, in my district I have eight voting precincts in South Lake Charles which comprised 27,000 people out of the 35,000 in my whole district. So I think that was the whole case. If the next reapportionment, since we have single member districts, the legislature will be allowed to cut across ward lines, then there is going to be no serious problem at all. I think the whole thing why the legislature could not come up with an acceptable reapportionment plan last time was the fact that they could not cut across parish lines because of our present constitution.

Further Discussion

Mr. Asseff Mr. Chairman, delegates, I have no objection to a delay suggested by Mr. Keen if all of the proposals made at this convention at this time. It is my opinion that in view of the fact that Justice Sanders does not want jurisdiction of apportionment and I doubt very seriously it will do any good anyhow, for that reason I have proposed an alternative plan of a state legislative apportionment board which you may not wish. Now, if the court is willing to accept jurisdiction, then I will withdraw my amendments, but I doubt seriously that it will. But, in view of that and the desire of some of the members to study Justice Sanders' letter, and I would like to read it too, I would suggest that all of the amendments be read to the convention and then we delay action along with Mr. Kean's suggestion until this afternoon.

Mr. Keen Mr. Chairman, I understand that there are amendments which will take into consideration the comments made by Justice Sanders that were to be offered, or have been offered, which I did not have at the time I made my motion. For that reason, I withdraw the motion.

[Motion to defer action withdrawn.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment proposed by Delegate Avant, as follows, a single amendment.

Amendment No. 1. On page 3, delete lines 13 through 17 both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "B. If the legislature fails to apportion itself as required in paragraph A of this section, the Supreme Court, upon petition by any elector shall apportion each House as provided in paragraph A of this section."

Explanation

Mr. Avant Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, point number one. As I interpret the letter from Judge Sanders as read by Judge Tate, his objection is not to the provision that we have here where there is an actual controversy and an actual suit filed over a reapportionment plan. But his objection was to the preceding section which has been amended which would inject the Supreme Court into the review of a reapportionment plan in the absence of an actual case or controversy. Now that was my understanding of the objection. If I am wrong, I stand to be corrected.

Question

Mr. Tate Mr. Avant, that was one of the objections. The other objection was, I don't know how I'm going to make this in the form of a question, but it was to the fact that the "B" provision required the Supreme Court itself to apportion instead of to review someone else's apportionment plans.

Mr. Avant Now, getting to Mr. Gravel's remarks as to a citizen as opposed to an elector, there is one, in my mind, valid reason why it should be limited to an elector and that is the simple fact that legally a corporation is a citizen, but a corporation cannot be an elector. Speaking in my own personal views and maybe not the views of a majority of your gentlemen and ladies, I do not relish the idea of a corporation which cannot vote being entitled to contest a reapportionment plan. The main difference between this amendment and Mr. Jackson's amendment, and this is the most serious thing that occurred to me, was this removes the 10 day limitation that is contained in Section B, as drafted by the committee. The section says that within 10 days after the year above specified. Now as I read Section A, the legislature has until the 31st of December in the year following that in which the census is reported to the President in which to adopt a reapportionment plan. If they finally adopt a plan in the last day of that year then the elector would have only 10 days after the close of that year within which to file this petition. So the net effect of the amendment which I have prepared and which I offer is to permit any elector to contest a reapportionment plan adopted by the legislature and to remove the time limitation within which he must do so. It leaves the review by the Supreme Court in the event there is an actual contest, an actual case or controversy and it says, and I understand there is an objection to this based upon Justice Tate's question, but that if the legislature has not reapportioned itself in accordance with these provisions of Section B, that it is not that jurisdiction, but if they haven't done it in accordance with the provisions of Section A which is, as I interpret that would be in accordance with population and accordance with the one man one vote jurisprudence of the United States Supreme Court which I understand is incorporated in this. Then any elector at any time and not just within a limited time period would have the right to go by petition to the Supreme Court to seek a review of that reapportionment plan and if the Supreme Court found that it was not in accordance with this constitution, then the Supreme Court would render a judgment ordering the legislature to be reapportioned in accordance with this provision. Now that's the net effect of my amendment. I've stated the reasons why I drew it as I drew it.

Further Discussion

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates to the convention, I would like to just advance one objection that I personally have, and I'm not speaking for the legislative committee, I'm speaking only for myself as an individual delegate. Personally, the very thing that Mr. Avant pointed out that he is deleting is the very thing I think should, you should consider as meritorious in the reapportionment plan. The fact that from January 1 to January 10 the responsibility is placed on one individual person, the Attorney General, that there must be a petition filed with the Supreme Court to require reapportionment if the legislature does not itself reapportion itself. Under Mr. Avant's plan if an elector does not, on his own, take the prerogative to file the necessary proceeding theoretically, and of course realistically is purely theoretical, if one is deemed appropriate two years before anyone would advance the thought that a petition should be filed with the Supreme Court and therefore delay reapportionment any longer. I don't think, personally, that the provision as drafted and I'm referring to Subparagraph 1, prohibits the idea of an elector bringing a suit to reapportion at any time, if one is deemed appropriate. All we're arguing here is a 10 day period where the Attorney General is required to bring this proceeding. I personally think as an individual that this remedy is an addition to the rights that any elector has to bring whatever proceedings are necessary either in state or in federal court. I would urge you to defeat the amendment and retain Paragraph B.

Questions

Mr. Conroy Mr. Casey, one thing that particularly worried me about the proposal from the Legislative Committee was whether or not it intended to make it mandatory for the Attorney General to file this petition. It does not so state. It simply says that the Supreme Court shall reapportion itself upon petition by the Attorney General, but it doesn't say that the Attorney General has the duty. Was it the intention of the Legislative Committee that the Attorney General would have the mandatory duty to file this petition within that time?

19th Days Proceedings—July 25, 1973

Mr. Casey My interpretation as one individual is that the Attorney General has no choice but to file this petition. I would think that an elector would have some sort of remedy whether it be mandamus or a similar type of remedy or it doesn't say a remedy on his own on the part of an individual elector, but I would think the remedy would be a mandamus proceeding to require the Attorney General to comply.

Mr. Conroy I would agree with you if it made it a mandatory duty of the Attorney General, but I don't find that language in it and it's for that reason that I have supported these various other proposals, to make sure there was a mandamus.

Mr. Flory Mr. Casey, as I read Subsection B the Attorney General is not mandated to petition the Supreme Court. I ask you the question if the 10 days passes, the Attorney General has not petitioned the Supreme Court and if you try to mandamus at that time and the 10 days would have already been prescribed, then you're right back where you started with and no action has been taken. How do you account for that?

Mr. Casey I don't agree with you there, Mr. Flory. The 10 day period is merely a mechanical time limit that is established for whatever procedure is necessary for the Attorney General to take to instigate the necessary proceedings. That's all. If this provision is not complied with under law, my humble opinion is that any citizen or any citizen whether he be an elector or not could bring whatever legal proceedings are necessary to force the Attorney General and to force the Supreme Court of Louisiana to, do its duty whatever its duty might be, that being petitioned for reapportionment and the final judgment of apportionment if its necessary.

Mr. Flory Mr. Casey, if you read carefully Subsection B, haven't you precluded a citizen from filing the petition by naming specifically only the Attorney General who is allowed to petition the Supreme Court.

The only thing that you have excluded is the thought that within this 10 day period, within this 10 day period the Attorney General is the proper person to file the petition. During this 10 day period. If he does not within that 10 day period, then any citizen has the right, I would think, under law, to bring some sort of proceeding to either force the Supreme Court and force the Attorney General to do their duty.

Mr. Avant You say you so think but you agree that the Supreme Court may not so think. Is that correct, Mr. Casey?

Mr. Casey Well the Supreme Court and I have disagreed on other occasions, not face to face, but sometimes I certainly don't agree with their rulings. If we delete this provision we don't know, we're not sure what the Supreme Court is going to think.

[Quorum Call: 84 delegates present and a quorum.]

Further Discussion

Mr. Derbes Fellow delegates, I'd merely like to bring to your attention the fact that there is a floor amendment proposed by me which is behind the amendments currently under consideration, which will require automatic review by the Louisiana Supreme Court which will provide for the express of that forum of adversary interests, the interests of any citizen and which will require the Supreme Court to render an opinion within a relatively brief period of time, 30 days. It's an automatic review provision. It does not require independent action. It does not require the filing of a lawsuit. You know frequently when lawsuits are filed on reapportionment topics, people become relatively unpopular doing so and some people are afraid to do it. Frequently, at least in my opinion, private citizens don't take the necessary initiative. So I think to require an individual elector or an individual citizen to file a lawsuit in order to contest a reapportionment plan, is perhaps a little burdensome. If there is an automatic review provision where nobody has to become the "bad guy," so to speak, it seems to me that that's very effective and accomplishes our purpose. This amendment will be distributed to you shortly and therefore I urge you to reject the Avant amendment. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Triche Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I think it's a historical fact and a fact of life and a reality that the legislature cannot reapportion itself. The legislature will not reapportion itself on the basis of population. Why? Because to reapportion itself on the basis of population requires a judicial decision and the legislature does not, cannot, and will not make judicial decisions. That's the nature of the beast. The legislature is a political body and it makes political decisions. I don't think it should be faulted for doing that and it should be required to do otherwise something that it just cannot and will not do. I think the proposal that the legislature be required to reapportion itself on the basis of population every 10 years is adequate and fine and ought to be done and it ought to be in the constitution. I find no fault with that. I think we should face the reality, however, and require some procedure for the courts to solve the problem that we know the legislature will not solve. I'd suggest to you that the proposal by Mr. Avant is adequate. It solves the problem. It provides that in the event the legislature fails to reapportion itself in accordance with the provisions of the constitution then the court shall do it. The opinion of the Justice of the Supreme Court to the contrary, notwithstanding, we ought to do this and we ought to provide some procedure for review by the Supreme Court and we ought to require that they do it. To repeat, the simple historical fact is that the legislature is not going to do it. I find fault with the language of the proposal as originally written. There's some respectable division of opinion as to what that means. Competent lawyers as Mr. Casey and Mr. Avant differ and I think if we leave the language in the posture that it presently is written we may end up with some results that we do not intend, simply because the language is confusing. I don't think there's a thing confusing about Mr. Avant's language in his amendment that provides that if the legislature fails to reapportion itself in accordance with the provisions and accordance with provisions of Section A requiring reapportionment on the basis of population. The Supreme Court on petition of any elector shall perform the task. It's short, it's simple, it's direct, it's to the point and it will accomplish the purpose. Thank you.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: 47-37. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Lengthy amendments.

Amendment No. 1. On page 4, strike out lines 2 through 19 in their entirety, it would delete the entire section, and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Section 5. Legislative Apportionment Board. Section 5A. Not later than the end of the first year following the year in which the population of this state is reported to the President of the United States for each decennial federal census, the legislature shall apportion the representation in each House on the basis of total state population as shown by the federal census. No special census of the state or any part thereof may be used. The legislature shall submit any apportionment plan adopted by it to the State Apportionment Board hereinafter created for review and approval.

19th Days Proceedings—July 25, 1973

B. In the event that the legislature fails to apportion itself as provided in Paragraph 1 of this section, the State Legislative Apportionment Board automatically shall apportion each House.

C. The State Legislative Apportionment Board shall consist of 7 members to be appointed as follows: one member to be appointed by the Presidents of Tulane University of Louisiana and Loyola University of the South, acting jointly. One member to be appointed by the Presidents of Dillard University and Xavier University of Louisiana, acting jointly. One member to be appointed by the Presidents of Centenary College and Louisiana College, acting jointly. One member appointed by a majority of the elected members of the House of Representatives. One member appointed by a majority of the elected members of the Senate. One member appointed by the entire membership of the Louisiana Supreme Court and the Secretary of State, ex officio.

Explanation

Mr. Assaff Mr. Chairman, the amendment does two things— One, it prohibits a special census of the state or any part thereof. As you well know, when the federal courts reapportioned using a special master, the special master made a special census of certain areas of this state and not of other areas. In other words, he used the federal census at some times, and a special census at others. This precludes that. The second part of the amendment is a special board to do the reapportionment. So far as I am concerned, we are trying to give jurisdiction to the Supreme Court of Louisiana in the hope that if we do it, the federal courts will accept it because the Supreme Court of Louisiana did it. The court will appoint a special master just as well as the federal courts. I doubt very seriously that the federal courts would accept any decision made by the state courts of Louisiana. It is my opinion that a special board is likely to do a better job and the federal courts, more likely to accept it. It is going to end up in the federal courts anyhow. I doubt that the legislature will do it in acceptable form. I do not mean any criticism of any member of the legislature. I did watch under four governors and I drafted many proposals for them, and never once did they draft an acceptable proposal. Every time a member came to me to draft a reapportionment proposal he would say this: I want my district this way, then you go ahead and draft the rest. It will go the federal courts anyhow and I feel that if a special board is appointed then the federal courts would be more likely to accept the decision. I would prefer that the legislature do it because it is a political problem, I simply doubt that it will do it. And if the state court which does not apparently want jurisdiction considers it, I doubt very seriously that Judge West will accept it. I will yield to questions, Mr. Chairman.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment rejected: 14-68. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1. On page 4, line 9 after the period delete the remainder of the line and delete lines 10 through 19 in their entirety.

Mr. Gravel, as a matter of clarity, perhaps should delete the previous amendments which have been adopted with respect to lines 13 through 17 offered by Mr. Avant.

Explanation

Mr. Gravel I think it might be appropriate also to... That's all right. I don't know whether that would have to be an amendment to take care of the Lanier amendment, although the purpose of my amendment is the same as Mr. Lanier's amendment in part. I any event, let me go ahead and state what I've proposed to do by this amendment.

The purpose of this amendment, Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, is to delete from Section 5, all provisions that have to do with review by the Supreme Court or with any other action that might be taken by the Attorney General. The reason for that is because in my judgment we're putting something into the constitution that is not required that absolutely accomplishes nothing. There's absolutely no question but that the Supreme Court of Louisiana would have jurisdiction to consider any case that might come before it in the event that the remedy is not responded to as an obligation as set forth in Section 5A. The additional language in here, in my judgment, is surplusage, it's not needed, it's clutter insofar as the constitution is concerned and serves no useful purpose whatsoever. I submit to you that we ought to leave out from this particular provision of the constitution, any reference whatsoever which might have the result of limiting the expanded rights which we're giving. As of right now, if the legislature does not respond to its equal protection obligation under this provision or under the provision of the Constitution of the United States then the Supreme Court of Louisiana would have jurisdiction at the instance of any aggrieved taxpayer, any aggrieved citizen, any elector, any corporation or anybody else who was adversely affected as a consequence of malapportionment, and the court would have to take and would take jurisdiction and would resolve the matter. We've got an entirely different situation now from the situation that existed prior to the last reapportionment decided in the federal court. This convention has modified the rights which are provided in a single-member district concept. I have confidence in the fact that the legislature will respond to the obligation imposed upon it to reapportion after the next federal census. We don't have the problems, I don't think at all, that we had in years gone by when we were talking about reapportionment and how it affected persons in multi-member districts. I submit to you earnestly as one who has made a very careful study of the question of reapportionment, and probably I have been involved in more reapportionment cases than any other attorney in the state of Louisiana. I submit to you that this language is unnecessary. I move the adoption of the amendment and the deletion of the unnecessary language in Sections 8 and C.

Questions

Mr. Duval Mr. Gravel, it's obviously a concern of some of the delegates here that unless some state remedy is placed in the constitution, the federal courts might immediately take cognizance of a reapportionment suit and perhaps, especially after the Voting Rights Act expires, if there is a specific state remedy, federal courts would not take jurisdiction until exhaustion of the state remedy. I'd like to hear what you have to say about that.

Mr. Gravel Well I don't think there's any question, Mr. Duval, but if we're going to have an equal protection clause in the new constitution of Louisiana. If we do, that's the basis for Louisiana courts to exercise jurisdiction and I'm confident that they will. If the state courts do not accept jurisdiction, which to me is unchangeable, then of course the remedy of aggrieved plaintiffs would be to go to the federal court and invoke the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment.

Mr. Duval In other words you're saying that it is a state remedy whether it's in the constitution or not. The courts will take jurisdiction, you think.

Mr. Gravel Well there's no question in my mind but that this constitution is going to provide for equal protection of the citizens of Louisiana, and when it does, that's the basis of jurisdiction for the state courts to consider any case where the equal protection concept flows from the reapportionment process.

Mr. Derbes Mr. Gravel, as I interpret your proposition, original jurisdiction for any reapportionment question would lie in the district court.

Mr. Gravel It would unless there is...and it should, in my judgment, in order to develop a record without any question. But unless there is some other provision in the Judiciary article, I would certainly assume so, but I would certainly hope so because that's the only place you can develop the record.

Mr. Derbes So as you see it, I think we ought to get this out in the open and let the delegates decide on it.

Mr. Gravel I think that's a very good point because reapportionment...

Mr. Henry Well now gentlemen, you've exceeded your time now.

Mr. Gravel Well I'm trying to answer the question, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Henry I understand, but we've got the 5 minute rule and we just exceeded it.

Further Discussion

Mr. Lanier Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise in support of Delegate Gravel's proposal and I completely agree with him that what this proposal says in Paragraph B, will actually not accomplish very much. I concur in his view that under existing law, there is adequate remedy in the courts to redress this type of a matter in our state courts. Under the present law all reapportionment plans must be submitted to the federal Attorney General. Now this law will expire in November of 1974. However, if it is reenacted by Congress, certainly this procedure will not avoid federal intervention. Now one thing we should keep in mind when we are deliberating the legislative, executive and judicial articles is the principle of division of powers. The three branches of government. This is presently in our constitution and it is being proposed by the Bill of Rights Committee in Articles 5, Section 1. We have three branches of government acting independently with delicately balanced powers so that they can work to bring government to our state. What is being proposed in Paragraph B is an extraordinary remedy to breach the wall between the legislative branches and the judicial branch. I believe that there is adequate remedy in our law and we do not need to have such an extraordinary remedy put into our constitution. If the Louisiana Legislature does not properly reapportion itself, a citizen can go into a Louisiana court to seek redress. The Louisiana Supreme Court does not wish to have original jurisdiction according to the chief justice. Further, and this is an interesting point, the Louisiana Supreme Court is not set up to receive evidence concerning this type of a thing. They would have to either appoint a special master or remand to a district court to take evidence if evidence is required. So why do we need to create this extraordinary remedy of a straight shot by any citizen or the Attorney General to the Louisiana Supreme Court. There are other remedies. I believe that this is window-dressing, this is whistling in the wind, and I do not believe that it will accomplish the result that is intended. I believe that if we precede through the ordinary processes of a court case, that adequate remedies are available. And for this reason I support the Gravel amendment.

Questions

Mr. Denney Unless the district court declares the apportionment unconstitutional, is it not conceivable that the Supreme Court would not hear the question at all?

Mr. Lanier That is very conceivable. If in their judgment they found that the ruling of the trial court was accurate, there would be no need for them to do so.

Mr. Denney In other words, there is no guarantee that the Supreme Court of Louisiana will pass upon the question of reapportionment.

Mr. Lanier That is correct. There is a guarantee that a court will pass upon it and a court of appeal will pass upon it. There is no guarantee that the Louisiana Supreme Court will pass upon it under our existing law, as I understand it.

Mr. Denney And you would be satisfied with either a district court or a court of appeal ruling on it.

Mr. Lanier Yes. And if a citizen was aggrieved by that, he could jump into federal court under his federal right anyway.

Mr. Denney Thank you, sir.

Mr. Chatelain Mr. Lanier, I tend to agree with you. I think the Gravel amendment will take care of a lot of ills. But in your comments you said that under existing laws that we had adequate protection. How about the drafting of the new constitution? Will we still have that same protection?

Mr. Lanier I assume we will. I can't conceive of us not providing for this under equal protection.

Mr. Chatelain Well I join with you. I support this proposal.

Mr. Roy Mr. Lanier, doesn't Mr. Avant's amendment that we just passed mandate the Supreme Court as the court of original jurisdiction in these cases?

Mr. Lanier Yes.

Mr. Roy And that would eliminate the opportunity for a voter, any voter, under the Gravel amendment to go before a district court and put on whatever evidence is necessary? Isn't that true?

Mr. Lanier I don't know that it eliminates it, but I think it creates a difficult problem because the Supreme Court is not geared to take evidence. It is an appellate, review court.

Mr. Roy That's right.

Mr. Lanier With this thing as it's presently drawn, you're creating a situation where, if evidence is needed, how would you go about presenting that evidence?

Mr. Roy One last question. Hasn't the U.S. Supreme Court recently ruled that there is a greater deviation allowed between single-member districts of the 1.6 or 2 percent that it had once bound us by and the present Supreme Court has now allowed as much deviation as about 15 percent?

Mr. Lanier It's my understanding of that opinion, and as I recall the deviation is higher than 15 percent, and they drew a distinction between the deviation allowed in federal Congressional districts and the deviation allowed in state districts. This was the majority opinion.

Mr. Roy Wouldn't it be necessary in really getting an effective decision as to whether the legislature did what was right or not, that all of this evidence be presented to a court of original jurisdiction that has the wherewithal, the court reporters, the stenographers, the machinery to take in evidence from experts and all and make a record and review it rather than just have a Supreme Court try to guess at what should be done?

Mr. Lanier To me that's a much more orderly procedure for handling something as sensitive as this. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Further Discussion

Mr. Avant Mr. Chairman, and fellow delegates, if you adopt the Gravel amendment you're doing exactly what was done in 1921 and I say this, that any lawyer who sat down in 1921 the day after that constitution became effective and read it, could have made the same argument that Mr. Gravel makes. That we would have had a judicial review and the courts would have straightened it out if the legislature didn't. But we all know that the courts would straighten it out. They said it was a political issue. Now as far as the Supreme Court not being able to take evidence, there's nothing to that argument. They take evidence all the time, they have original jurisdiction of disbarment proceedings which requires the taking of evidence and they have a procedure for taking evidence. Now, the issue is simply this: Is it or do you believe it's high time that Louisianians started handling the affairs of Louisiana in accordance with law. I prefer that our legislature be one, reappointed by legislators elected by the citizens of Louisiana. That if they do not do that, that then it be reviewed by judges elected by the citizens of Louisiana, and that our legislature not be reappointed by a single man elected by no one, through a master who is not a lawyer or a judge elected or appointed, and then reviewed by a bunch of non-elected judges from states other than Louisiana. To me, that's the issue, and I say that if you vote for the Gravel amendment, you are again advocating to somebody else the single man or appointing him to be the state of Louisiana and that is the manner in which the people of this state will be able to express themselves through their elected representatives. And that to me, ladies and gentlemen, is something that is sacred to the people of this state, and that we should not advocate our responsibility and that we should provide a very definite and a very clear procedure whereby the delicate issue will be handled by Louisianians. That to me is the issue and I rise and I ask you to vote against Mr. Gravel's amendment because if you vote for it, we are exactly where we were in 1921. And I say this in all due respects to the present Supreme Court. But I don't know who is going to be on the Supreme Court in 1980 or 1990 or 2000, and you don't either. And you don't know whether or not they're going to follow the jurisprudence that was established under the 1921 constitution or not. So I say, and I urge you and implore you, spell it out. It's your responsibility. Discharge that responsibility. Say that to the court. In this constitution, make no loopholes for anyone to get out of their responsibility and again allow the legislature of this state to be apportioned by a single man, not a lawyer to my knowledge, certainly not a judge elected or appointed by anyone.

Questions

Mr. Roy I say I hate to keep getting up but I think it is important and we had a philosophical difference. Isn't it a fact that when the Supreme Court takes original jurisdiction in disbarment proceedings that the evidence is gathered by someone else other than the Supreme Court, by the judicial administrator or a committee appointed to gather it?

Mr. Avant That is correct?

Mr. Roy All right. Well then that is not the Supreme Court gathering the evidence isn't that true?

That is not the Supreme Court sitting as a District Judge would who would have everybody before taking in what evidence is permissible or not, you are now allowing a non-judicial person, somebody appointed by the Louisiana Supreme Court to take the evidence that you just griped about would be taken by a master, isn't that true?

Mr. Avant That is right. But that is the Louisiana Supreme Court, every member of which has been elected by a segment of the citizens of this state.

Mr. Roy So is a District Judge whose review would be... whose findings of fact would be reviewed by the Supreme Court of Louisiana.

Mr. Avant Mr. Roy, I don't argue with you, if you want to put it in the District courts, that is all right. I wouldn't object to that. If you want it to start in the district courts and go through the long procedures, my only objection is that would be that it is a matter that perhaps should be expedited. But it could be expedited.

My point, my objection is I want the Louisiana Legislature and the Louisiana Courts to tend to the business of Louisiana and not somebody else.

Mr. Roy I agree with you, and that is why Section 3 of the Bill of Rights, the right to individual dignity, the proposed stuff... reads no person shall be denied the equal protection of the laws nor shall any law discriminate against the person in the exercise of his rights on account of birth, etc., race, creed and all that.

Now, do you think this convention will not pass an equal protection clause of this nature, granting to our citizens...

Mr. Henry Wait just a minute, he has exceeded his time, I am sorry.

Further Discussion

Mr. Newton Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in support of the Gravel amendment. First thing I would like to point out is this is not 1921. Since 1921 the Supreme Court of the United States has acted and I believe that the Supreme Court of the state of Louisiana will act.

I would like to point out that the 1921 Constitution of the state of Louisiana does not contain an equal protection clause. And I think that in itself, was a sufficient reason for the Louisiana Supreme Court to decline to take action with respect to legislative reapportionment. I believe that we are going to have an equal protection clause in this constitution and I think that is a sufficient reason that the Supreme Court of the state of Louisiana and all of the courts of Louisiana would exercise jurisdiction.

With all due respect to Mr. Avant, I would like to point out and I don't claim to be a great constitutional lawyer, but his amendment restricts the filing of a suit to an elector. And I think that in itself is an unconstitutional provision in that it violates the equal protection clause of the United States Constitution which says that no state shall deny the equal protection of the law to any person. And I understand Mr. Avant's problems with corporations but I do believe that this may very well be an unconstitutional provision and I certainly wouldn't want to come out of here with an unconstitutional constitution. There is one other point I would like to make. That the Supreme Court does not want original jurisdiction for the simple reason that they are not set up to take evidence. If you allow the matter to go through the normal court proceeding where the case originates in the district court you are in an adversary procedure where the contending sides can present their evidence that is most favorable to them and then the judge can make a decision on that evidence that he sits there and he hears.

I think in answer to Mr. Denney's question. The question is whether or not the Supreme Court would review it? If the case were from the district court and the district court concluded that the legislative reapportionment plan was constitutional, and then the Court of Appeals decided that the legislative plan was constitutional and an application for writs was made to the Supreme Court, The Supreme Court would in effect review it, they might conclude that it was a constitutional plan and refuse writs, but that doesn't seem to me to be before the Supreme Court and they would be looking at it. And again, I would like to say this is not 1971, this is 1973 and I urge your support of the Gravel amendment.

Questions

Mr. Denney Is it your understanding that all members of the Supreme Court would review this writ?

19th Days Proceedings—July 25, 1973

Mr. Newton It is my understanding Mr. Denberry, that all members of the Supreme Court would not be required to look at it. I do not exactly sure what the percentages are, but I do believe that on questions as important as this, I believe they would look at it.

Mr. Denberry Even in view of the letter we received from the Chief Justice?

Mr. Newton I believe so.

Mr. Denberry Thank you.

Mr. Planchard Mr. Newton, is it your impression that if we pass the amendment by Mr. Gravel that the legislature will still have the authority and the right to pass or provide for any procedure for the review and the petition?

Mr. Newton Yes, that would be my opinion.

Mr. Planchard All right. Thank you.

Mr. Lanier Isn't it your understanding of the Louisiana Supreme Court rules and this is with reference to the questions asked by Mr. Denberry, that two judges of the court specifically review all applications for supervisory writs?

Mr. Newton Walter, I really am not sure about that.

It is my feeling and just through the actions that I have observed of the court over the years, that on questions of significant public importance as this would be, they would look at this question.

Mr. Lanier And further after the two judges reviewed these writs in detail, do they not present their conclusions to the whole panel of the court in conference before they make their determination as to what action to take on the writs?

Mr. Newton I think that is the procedure, yes.

Further Discussion

Mr. Conroy I oppose Mr. Gravel's proposed amendment. This is a very difficult process, and I think that what we have to remember as we get to these various amendments is that we cannot compare the amendment with what we think is perfect. We can only compare the proposed amendment with what the section will read if the amendment is not adopted. Those are our choices right now. Our choice is a better of two choices not the best possible. There are still other amendments which I think some of which may do the job better. But I think our present choice, and my objective in this difficult area is to try to insure that the problem of reapportionment if the legislature cannot cope with it, will be reviewed by a Louisiana entity or body rather than directly by the federal courts as has been done in the past. I am concerned about the Gravel amendment that it would throw us right back to where we were in 1970 when the federal courts did the job that the legislature did not do. There was not a Louisiana court proceeding, it went right into federal court. I think that is our decision, that is our choice as to which course better insures that the matter will be reviewed by a Louisiana entity before it is subject to federal court jurisdiction.

Further Discussion

Mr. Tate Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise neither to oppose nor to support the Gravel amendment. I am here more or less to express the situation within relation to the letter I read this morning. Our court is divided and the views expressed by the Chief Justice of the letter did not necessarily represent my own.

I am here more or less to answer any technical questions that have arisen and to outline very briefly what I think the considerations are.

Under the Gravel amendment, there will be no provision for judicial review except as provided by law and in the judiciary article. Normally that would mean, of course, a one judge district court could formulate a reapportionment plan which would be passed on by the Court of Appeal and then the Supreme Court would review it by writs. However, the legislature under almost any circumstance would have the leeway to provide for instance, that the venue shall be in East Baton Rouge and that the initial trial court shall be three judges and so on. So some of the considerations that we are talking about are technically troublesome but could be changed very easily by a legislative act. The Gravel amendment in other words would permit the district court to first receive the reapportionment suit or failure to reapportion suit and would provide unless we have something else in the constitution for the Court of Appeals to hear the full appeal on the facts and for the Supreme Court to pass...either grant a writ or deny a writ based essentially upon whether the... (I'll answer questions, I don't know how my time is going)...deny or grant a writ based essentially upon whether there was an error of law. In the proposal before us would spell out in detail that the Attorney General or an elector should bring a suit in the Supreme Court. Some of the technical problems I don't think are insuperable because C would provide that the legislature shall provide the procedure and in that respect the legislature could provide for the fact findings say by three judge technical court and so on. Now with regard to the ultimate issue, if the policy issue members of my court are divided on whether we want to get into the thicket of politics, we're not politicians, of course...gentlemen, ladies...thank you...but if the convention in its wisdom should place the responsibility I am sure a number of the court would shrink. Now, (a question back there)

Questions

Mr. Denberry Judge Tate, if the legislature failed to act, is it conceivable that a right of appeal would then lie to the Supreme Court from a district court ruling of other apportionment?

In other words an original apportionment by the district court.

Mr. Tate It is conceivable that if you have a provision in here instead of the B...the legislature shall provide for the judicial review you could do so. Or you could in a judiciary article add a special exception if we keep the present scheme all civil cases with certain limited categories go directly to the Court of Appeals.

Mr. Denberry Well, my question was, does the judiciary committee propose to make such an amendment which would give a right of appeal in all apportionment cases to the Supreme Court?

Mr. Tate Mr. Denberry, I suppose it could. But the general approach has been the general rules and allows, for instance, civil service, public utility commissions and it would be reapportionment to fall under and accept as otherwise provided by this constitution. And just provide the general jurisdiction shall be in all civil cases, the Court of Appeals.

Mr. Denberry Thank you.

Mr. Tate Does that answer the question?

Mr. Denberry It answers it, doesn't necessarily satisfy me.

Mr. Tate No.

Mr. Triche, do you have a question?

Mr. Triche Judge, do you know of any state decisions now which have addressed themselves to the problem of reapportionment.

Mr. Tate For some reason they don't come to the state court.

19th Days Proceedings—July 25, 1973

Mr. Gravel Justice Tate, is there a specific provision in the present Louisiana constitution that guarantees equal protection to all citizens of the state?

Mr. Tate No, there is not, Mr. Gravel.

Mr. Gravel Would you think that would be the reason?

Mr. Tate I just don't know.

I suppose you can enforce a federal constitutional right in a state court, you can try it anyway.

Mr. Gravel But you do agree that there is at the present no equal protection right in the Louisiana constitution.

Mr. Tate And I would suppose Mr. Gravel, you are right.

That is why probably they start off in the federal courts.

Mr. Gravel Are you familiar Justice Tate with the proposed provisions in the Bill of Rights section of the proposed new constitution that do guarantee equal protection to all citizens. And would you further agree that the concept of reapportionment is an equal protection...

Mr. Henry Don't lead the witness, Mr. Gravel.

Mr. Gravel I think the expert can take care of himself, Mr. Chairman. You can always lead an expert witness Mr. Chairman, in case you didn't know that.

Mr. Henry You haven't qualified him yet.

Mr. Gravel I think he has qualified himself, sir.

Mr. Tate I am not an expert on reapportionment.

Mr. Weiss Judge Tate, wouldn't you say that a politician is an elected official?

Mr. Tate I have known a great many good politicians who aren't elected.

Mr. Weiss My question really is, aren't you a politician then, you are an elected person?

Mr. Tate A point of personal privilege. I think politician means a student of the art of government and I am proud to be a politician and I am a professional politician cause I earn my living that way.

Further Discussion

Mr. Triche Mr. Speaker and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I hate to belabor to this point but I think it is of a great deal of importance and something that troubles my mind a bit.

Sometimes I think we listen but we just don't hear. The Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, Justice Tate, just read a letter to us from the Supreme Court. The letter didn't say that the Supreme Court is not going to handle any reapportionment matters no, it didn't say that. "But it used such terms as "separation of powers." That means to me that the court doesn't want to get involved in legislative matters. It used such terms as "political questions" and that means to me that the court doesn't want to concern itself with the political problem of reapportionment. I think we listened, I wonder what we heard? What I heard was the same ring of the decisions of prior years that reapportionment is a political problem, it is not a judicial question. This court will not entertain the question, will not review the reapportionment because it is a political decision to be made by political parties, it is not a judicial problem, not a justiciable issue and that it violated the separation of powers for a court to instruct the legislature on what it should do. Now that is what I heard. What did you hear? What was the purpose of this letter. I am not being critical of the court, far be it from me. I have too much regard and too much respect for our Supreme Court and the judiciary of this state. But I think we must recognize the inertia that exists. We must recognize the hesitancy on the part of a court to tell a legislature what it should do. And if you don't spell it out in the constitution, and if you don't tell the court very plainly that the people of this state want reapportionment and that if because the nature of the problem is too difficult, the legislature will not do it, the people of the state will tell the Supreme Court to do it, I don't believe the Supreme Court is going to do it. If you don't agree with me there, at least you have to admit that getting the Supreme Court to review reapportionment and to order reapportionment is going to be a problem. I have a great deal of respect for the ability of Delegate Lanier, and Delegate Roy and DeLoach. So far as their ability to read and interpret laws and to tell us what the courts would do. They seem to think that is going to be not too difficult a problem to get the highest court of the land in this state to take on and tackle the problem of reapportionment. I don't agree with them. In the history of this state up until 1973 not until the year 1973, not one decision of the court to this state ordering reapportionment. And to my knowledge we have always had a reapportionment article in the constitution requiring reapportionment. And our courts have never faced that issue. Now we have all kinds of excuses why the court has not faced that issue. Someone suggests because constitution never had an equal protection clause we always had a reapportionment clause, if we put an equal protection clause in this constitution, I promise you that is no guarantee that the courts are going to say because the constitution now provides equal protection that means one man, one vote and we are going to require the legislature to reapportionment. I promise you that that decision is not guaranteed to you because, just let me illustrate. We have a due process clause and there is a due process clause in the federal constitution and Justice Tate can point to you many, many decisions where this court, the courts of this state have said due process in the state constitution is not the same as due process in the federal constitution. In the past judicial decisions interpreted in the same language and same principles in both constitutions that have reached different results. So you have no guarantee, that simply because this constitution...new constitution of 1973 will have an equal protection clause that the state courts are going to tackle the problem of reapportionment. The Avant amendment guarantees to the people of this state that if the legislature does not reapportion, the Supreme Court will have to take a petition on reapportionment by any citizen and reapportion. Now the Gravel amendment does not guarantee you that. Gentlemen we have had too many problems in the past with reapportionment to gamble with this issue. I think the people of this state are mature enough to recognize that they are best governed by a equitably reapportioned legislature. I think they want this constitution to contain a provision that the legislature shall reapportion itself on the basis of population every ten years. To guarantee that to them, we must guarantee the people of this state that if the legislature does not act there will be judicial recognition of that problem and it will be solved by the court. The Avant amendment guarantees you that. The Gravel amendment, I am sorry to say, gambles with the problem and we should not gamble with this sacred right of the people to be governed in proportion to the population.

Thank you

[Proceeding suspended.]

Closing

Mr. Gravel Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, Mr. Triche's argument completely misses the point. There is no position that can be taken as a consequence of the proposed amendment that I asked you to adopt that in any way suggests that the courts of Louisiana will not have the authority to review whatever action is taken by the legislature or if the legislature does not act, then to take whatever action is necessary upon the instance of a party who has a right to bring a suit. All I am saying is this, is that we should leave out of the constitution any restricted provisions that will make it harder to put into effect that equal protection clause of the Louisiana constitution and to provide for a fair and just reapportionment of the legislature. Anything that you do less than that is going to redound to our disadvantage. We don't have the equal protection clause in the Louisiana constitution and that has been the source of the trouble. We are going to have it in this new constitution or believe me, it will not pass the scrutiny that will attend the constitution by the people of the state of Louisiana. And I submit to you that the modern concept would be to require the legislature to reapportion itself and if the legislature doesn't do it, then under the inherent law of the state of Louisiana under the constitution, the courts of this state shall have a right to review that failure of the legislature and to make a determination based upon the equal protection concept. If we persist in putting into the constitution extraneous, irrelevant, vague, obscure and general materials such as this, we are going to hamper the cause that all of us at least say we espouse. And I submit to you ladies and gentlemen of the constitutional convention that it is important to leave, if we are going to do anything at all about the appellate jurisdiction, or the original jurisdiction of the authority of the court with respect to reapportionment that that be done in the judiciary article and not here.

And I urgently appeal to each and everyone of you to delete this language from the constitution... from the proposed constitution and adopt a meaningful provision that will not have the restraint that this language will permit to exist if it is continued in effect.

Questions

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Gravel if your amendment passes, it would have repealed the amendment we adopted by Mr. Avant, is that correct?

Mr. Gravel Yes.

Mr. De Blieux Well now how could Mr. Avant's amendment keep us from getting real reapportionment?

Mr. Gravel Well, the Avant amendment only goes in part to the problem and as I understand this amendment it just gave the right of... additionally the right of an elector to institute a suit. I don't think Mr. Avant's amendment is necessary. I think that any person who has been aggrieved whether he is an elector or not, any citizen, any taxpayer, any elector or anybody who has been aggrieved as a consequence of malapportionment should have the right to go to the court under the equal protection clause of the new Louisiana Constitution and get relief and I think he will be able to do so if you eliminate this language. Now if you don't and leave the Avant amendment and leave this language in there then the right of the people has been restricted and delimited.

Mr. De Blieux Now the... any elector is any voter, why should anybody other than a voter be entitled to this right?

Mr. Gravel Any citizen and taxpayer whether he is a voter or not, might well be adversely affected by a malapportioned legislature. There are some places Senator De Blieux where people can't register to vote and many of those people are disadvantaged.

Mr. De Blieux You know any place in the state of Louisiana where they want to register and they can't register?

Mr. Gravel I know many places in the state of Louisiana where it is very, very difficult, if not impossible, for some of the black citizens of this state to register right now.

Mr. De Blieux Do you know that a petition was presented to Judge Holcombe when he was judge asking for reapportionment and he wrote on the bottom of the petition... denied, ridiculous, without even allowing him to serve the papers.

Mr. Gravel I didn't know that but it is certainly unfortunate that a judge would put that at the bottom...

Mr. De Blieux Now couldn't we find ourselves right back...

Mr. Henry Senator De Blieux, the gentleman has exceeded his time. I am sorry.

[Record vote ordered. Amendments rejected: 41-57. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment proposed by Delegate Derbes, amendment is as follows: Amendment No. 1. On page 4 delete lines 13 through 17 both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "B. The Supreme Court shall review the apportionment plan and in accordance with its rules shall permit adversary interests to present their views and within thirty days from the filing of the review shall enter its judgment. A judgment of the Supreme Court of the state determining the apportionment to be valid shall be binding upon all the citizens of the state. Should the Supreme Court determine that the apportionment made by the legislature is invalid, the court shall not later than sixty days after receiving the plan file with the Secretary of State an order making such apportionment."

And Mr. Derbes would like an amendment to delete the Avant amendment to that paragraph B.

Motion

Mr. Derbes Mr. Chairmen, members of the convention, there is a substantial defect in this amendment. There is no provision regarding the determination of the court to a final decision in the absence of legislative action and therefore I will withdraw it and redraw it with leave of the chair.

[Motion to withdraw amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendments

Mr. Poynter By Senator De Blieux, Amendment No. 1. On page 4 delete lines 18 and 19 in their entirety including Amendment No. 2 proposed by Delegate Lanier and others and adopted by the convention on July 25.

Amendment No. 2. Page 4, line 18 add the following: "C. The procedure for review and petition shall be provided by law."

Explanation

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Chairman, and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, when the Lanier amendment was adopted it struck out the words on line 18 the words "for review". There has been some question and criticism about how we could get a petition to the Supreme Court, the procedure and so forth for that. I certainly think that the legislature ought to be in a position to provide that and to provide for an orderly and expeditious review of any reapportionment plan as passed by them. Or upon the failure of the legislature to reapportion itself. And this is just merely a provision to allow the legislature to provide for the expeditious procedure for initiating a review or a petition for reapportionment and I ask for adoption of the amendment. In other words it leaves it as it came from committee.

[Previous question or letter.]

Mr. Poynter Mr. De Blieux did you intend? This would delete one amendment of Mr. Lanier's but did you intend to delete the other amendments and leave the language contained in lines 9 through 12?

You said that it was your intent to leave it as the committee had proposed it and your amendment would still have the effect of leaving in the Lanier amendment which struck the last sentence in Paragraph A which begins on line 9 and...

Mr. De Blieux No... Mr. Chairman, this will not affect any of the Lanier amendment except that on line 18 where that out of line the words "for review" was taken out and I certainly think that the legislature ought to provide for some orderly review of the proposals as submitted to it. And that is all this does. It just provides for the legislature setting up an orderly review. That is the only portion of this section that it affects.

[Amendments adopted: 53-24. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Motion

Mr. Newton I have talked to quite a few of the lawyers and most of them seem to agree that the Avant amendment proposes unconstitutional questions and I therefore move to recommit [recommit] this article to the committee on the legislative for further study..

Mr. Henry To recommit the entire... you can't recommit a section, the whole article would have to go.

You can move to recommit the entire proposal if you want to. You can move to pass it over then rather than recommit it?

Mr. Newton It seems as a matter of parliamentary procedure I should move to pass over the final consideration of this section. And I so move.

Mr. Henry Gentleman has moved that we pass over final consideration of Section 5.

[Substitute Motion for Previous Question on the entire subject matter. Previous question ordered on substitute motion: 46-45.]

Closing

Mr. Newton I hate to keep coming back up here on this but I am most concerned about the constitutionality of this article as it now stands and I would like to at least have the opinion of some research done by the staff on the question of this constitutionality and allow us time to think about it and if it turns out to be unconstitutional or the staff considers it to be then we can possibly make some amendments in it that would satisfy a majority of the members of this convention and I urge you to pass over final consideration of Section 5 now, let's get some research done on it by the staff and then come back to it.

Questions

Mr. Weiss Delegate Newton, isn't it the purpose of Style and Drafting when they review this... to decide on such matters?

Mr. Newton I don't believe so.

No, sir, I don't. If I did I would not make this motion.

Mr. Weiss If it is unconstitutional they would certainly report it back to this body so are we listening to a small group or are we listening to our researchers and Style and Drafting Committee?

Mr. Newton I think they are two separate questions and I don't think it is up to the Committee on Style and Drafting to change the substance of these pro-

Motion

Point of Order

Mr. Avant Would we not have the right if the staff were to tell us that one word in this section had to be changed to remove a possible constitutional question to wit the word "elector" must be changed to "citizen" or "person." Don't we have a right... can't we vote on this again, can't we make that amendment again without just [...] the whole subject matter at this time?

Mr. Henry Well, it is my appreciation... I am sure it is going to be extremely interesting to see what happens when it does come time to see what happens, Mr. Avant. But it is my appreciation that once we adopt this proposal it will go to Style and Drafting and then will be resubmitted to us from that committee to either accept or reject the proposals or the amendments that they would make to the proposal. Now I think I have answered your question, I may not have, but I think I have, have I not. Or do you know?

In other words, I think you are right.

Mr. Avant You answered it.

Point of Information

Mr. Jack What is the situation regarding say two motions from now if we haven't finished the whole thing by then. Which I doubt we will. Could we resurrect something that we have already passed. Is there anyway of doing it? It would seem there would be some way if two-thirds or something.

Mr. Henry Then we will adopt... we've adopted it Section 6 and Section 7 and reconsider the vote and lay the motion on the table.

Then we get in to October and we find out that we've done something terribly wrong, we can come back with a two-thirds vote of this body and call from the table the motion to reconsider and go through the procedural mechanics of undoing what we have already done, yes, sir.

Mr. Jack That's what I thought, and I wanted to be assured so everybody else will be reassured.

[Section 6 read and approved. Section 7 voted after objection. Section 8 adopted. 20-20. Section 9 adopted by unanimous consent and a quorum. Section 10 adopted. 20-20. Motion to suspend rules tabled.]

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter "Section 6, Judging, Qualifications in Election, Procedural Rules, Discipline, Officers and Clerks. Each House will be the judge of the qualifications and election of its own members, determine the rules of its procedure, and may punish its members for disorderly conduct or contempt and, with the concurrence of two-thirds of its elected members, may expel a member. Expulsion shall create a vacancy in the office.

B. Each House shall have the power to compel the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of books and papers before such House as a whole, before any committee thereof, or before joint committees of the Houses; it shall have the power to punish for contempt those in willful disobedience of its orders.

C. Each House shall choose its own officers, including permanent, presiding officer selected from its membership. He shall be designated in the Senate as the President of the Senate and in the House as the Speaker of the House of Representatives. The clerical officers of the two Houses shall be the Clerk of the House of Representatives, and the Secretary of the Senate, each of whom shall have the power to administer oaths.

Explanation

Mr. Blair Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen,

19th Days Proceedings—July 25, 1973

this revises the present provisions providing for the House to judge qualifications, elections and returns of its own members by deleting the word "returns". It clarifies the powers to expel by stating that expulsion creates a vacancy. It retains provisions relating to compelling attendance and production of all types of papers and documents, and it authorizes the legislature to punish for contempt those who disobey its orders.

Removes Lieutenant Governor as presiding officer of the Senate and provides that each House is to choose its officers from its members.

Probably the biggest change was a unanimous vote of the committee, probably the biggest change is the removing of the Lieutenant Governor as the presiding officer in the Senate. And the committee felt, and I believe the Executive Committee felt, that if we are going to strengthen the legislature, then we should let the Senate, as the House now is privileged to do, elect its own officers.

And Mr. Chairman, unless you have amendments, I move for adoption of this section.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [By Mr. Avant] on page 4, line 25, of the same amendment, immediately after the word, "contempt" insert a period and delete the remainder of the line and delete line 26 and 27 in its entirety.

Explanation

Mr. Guarisco The amendment is to delete, "with the concurrence of two-thirds of its elected members may expel a member. Expulsion shall create a vacancy in the office", and I rise in support of the deletion of that section for the simple reason that I think that the people who elected a delegate or a representative or a legislator as it may be, are the persons who should expel him from office, either by the next election or by a recall election or some answer by the people, not the legislature from which he serves with his peers.

Or if we allow this, I think that we are going to have a constitutional crisis and that the judiciary is going to be ruling on what the legislature may or may not do with its members. I think that you are responsible to the people who elected you and not to your co-legislators.

For that reason, I feel that we should delete that section.

Further Discussion

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and members of the convention, I rise to oppose the amendment advanced to delete that part of the paragraph which permits legislators in each House, whether it be the Senate or the House of Representatives, to expel their own members. I would like to point out to you that the language of Section 6, even after that language is deleted, will have language to this effect that each House shall have the sole of the qualification and election of its own members in addition to determining its rules of procedure. Unless you leave the language, in beginning on line 25, "with the concurrence of two-thirds of its elected members may expel a member", unless you leave that language in, the first two lines, lines 22 and 23 have absolutely no meaning whatsoever.

Now you do have in a later section, also, a procedure established for impeachment of public officers or public officials which is analogous but somewhat different to the method by which members of each House can expel their own members if they determine that they have cause to expel them. All this does, is give to the legislature, and this is a right, it is a right which now exists under the present constitution, there is no change whatsoever. It is a right, in addition to the procedure for impeachment, that permits a House, whether it be the House of Representatives or the Senate, may for the reasons that it deems appropriate, to expel one of its own members...a person, for instance, who may not be for some reason deserving of a seat in either the House or of the Senate. He may be guilty of gross misconduct, may be not performing his functions properly, may be guilty of malfeasance or nonfeasance. You may have a member of the House or of the Senate which is elected but doesn't even attend the meetings of the legislature. In those types of situation, if a member of the House did not bother to carry out his duties or attend the meetings of the House of Representatives or the meetings of the Senate, that particular body may then expel its own members. Gentlemen, I urge you to retain that language. The proposal as we are submitting it to you presents no change in the present status or present constitution whatsoever, and I think gives to the legislature a right which it should rightfully have, and that of determining the qualification and election of its own members.

Questions

Mr. Avant Mr. Casey, over on page 11, Section 24, which says "All state and district officers whether elected or appointed shall be liable to impeachment for felonies, incompetency, corruption, extortion, oppression in office, gross misconduct or habitual drunkenness." Under that section, would not a legislator who was guilty of any of those particular charges be subject to removal by the impeachment process?

Mr. Casey Any member of the legislature would certainly be susceptible to removal under those provisions. But the question I submit to you, are there other violations which a legislator could commit, that he possibly should be expelled for by his own House, whether he be a member of the House or the Senate. And that's all we are doing. We are retaining that right.

Mr. Avant Now, under the section under discussion, if this amendment is adopted, will remain the judge of the qualification and election of the members of each House even if the amendment is adopted that is before the convention at this time. Is that not correct?

Mr. Casey Well, I would submit to you that each House shall be the judge if you are indicating by your question that the House or the Senate could refuse to seat someone, I would say that possibly they may still have the right to refuse to seat. But when you determine, when you go into the qualification of its own members, there is no specification that the...judging the qualification of its own members is at the time of swearing in two years after election, three years after election?

And so I submit to you, that's surplus wording if you are going to leave that wording in and then delete...

[Previous question order.]

Closing

Mr. Guarisco The issue boils down to simply this. Suppose that two-thirds of this delegation decides that someone here is unpopular so we vote to send him home...simple as that. I don't think...I think the people sent him here. I think the people should take him back, or take him away, or recall him, but not his co-legislators.

[Amendment returned to members to reconsider tables.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [By Mr. Casey] on page 4, line 24
After the comma, insert the following: "excuse me, following the word "procedure," and before the word "and," insert the following
"Not inconsistent with the provisions of this constitution," page 4, line 24.

Explanation

19th Days Proceedings—July 25, 1973

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates, the request amendment is strictly technical to indicate that in each House determining the rules of its procedure that those rules will not be inconsistent with the provisions of this constitution and that's all that this amendment does.

Questions

Mr. Burns Mr. Casey, I'll take advantage of asking you the question now that I wanted to ask you before when your time ran out.

In expulsion of a member of the legislature under the provisions of the section that we are now on, is it...do you contemplate any method of hearings, or just expel a member arbitrarily without giving him a chance to defend himself.

Mr. Casey Well, first of all under the rules of procedure of both Houses, it is required and possibly later on in...I'm not sure what section but under a section referring to passage...a final passage of bills, there's general requirement that any proposal whether it's resolution, joint resolution, concurrent resolution, bill of any kind must be referred to a committee and there would be a requirement that a hearing...a public hearing, be offered...the opportunity be there on any matter that is submitted to the legislature.

Mr. Denney Do you believe that this...I notice you said that you were...apparently were requested to introduce this amendment. Is there a reason for it? If the rules of the House and Senate are inconsistent with the constitution, wouldn't either a member of the House and the Senate or a citizen have the same right without this clause as he would with it?

Mr. Casey Mr. Denney, I can appreciate your question. However, I can appreciate the concern of those that felt maybe this should be cleared up because of the fact that under this particular paragraph or provision, the legislature is given the right to determine its own rules of procedure and it was feared that they would have some unlimited or unrestricted powers and rights which might be in conflict to other provisions of the constitution and in interpretation by a court at a later date, possibly may give the legislature more power than what we intend in the constitution.

That's about as best an explanation I can give you. I don't have any strong feelings, very honestly, on this. Possibly there would be no problem whatsoever. The only intention here is just strictly clarification.

Mr. Denney Thank you, sir.

[Previous question ordered. Amendment adopted. 76-3. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Mr. Henry Read B, then, and let the gentleman explain B.
You've read it, let the...Senator, you going to handle it? Explain Section B, please. If it one more time, please, sir.

Explanation

Mr. Blair Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the Convention, B, we retain provisions relating to the compelling attendance and procedure of all types of papers and do not authorize the legislature to punish for contempt those who disobey the orders...its orders.

It's just about the same as we have at the present time.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendments posed by Mr. Tobias:
Amendment No. 1 on page 4, line 1, immediately after the word "punish" and before the word "for" insert the word "by imprisonment".
Amendment No. 2, page 3, line 1 at the end of the line change the period to a comma and add the following:

"Such imprisonment shall not exceed ten days for each offense."

Explanation

Mr. Tobias Mr. Chairman, this particular...these amendments are aimed at putting back into our constitution a provision which has been in every constitution since 1845. In 1845 it was Section 24 of that constitution.

Basically it is to protect the citizen who comes before a committee from being put into prison by the legislature for an indefinite period of time. Recently, the legislature has acted, for example, in the James Strain case which the Louisiana Supreme Court upheld the procedure finding him in contempt.

Historically, the legislature...well, back in the '50's they threatened one member of the press although they did not actually put him in jail, they threatened him because he called the citizen...the legislature a bunch of trained seals. There has been in the history of the...in history back in...around 1868...one time a person was...found in contempt of Congress, put in jail for three months. Nothing that he could do...a very indefinite sentence.

In history, there has also been one time when a person was in jail for three years for contempt, and I think that this particular provision should be continued in our constitution from now on.

Further Discussion

Mr. Blair Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in opposition to the amendment. We took it out because the legislature does not have the authority to put anyone in jail. That's handled through the courts. We thought it was obsolete language so we removed it.

[Previous question ordered. Amendment rejected. 15-70. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous question ordered in the Section. Motion passed. 9-4. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter Section 7. Privileges and immunities. Section 7. The members of the legislature shall in all cases, except felony, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the sessions and committee meetings of their respective Houses and in going to and returning from the same.

No member shall be questioned in any other place for any speech or debate in either House.

Explanation

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates, Section 7 is pretty much the same as the provision is as it exists today in the present constitution. The only change is that the word "treason" is used along with felony. That is deleted as just surplus wording because treason would also be a felony.

And also the words "breach of the peace" have been deleted from the present constitution and I urge final adoption of Section 7.

Questions

Mr. Stinson For what reason was breach of peace deleted?

Mr. Casey Mr. Stinson, the members of the committee apparently felt that in line with the thinking of a completely independent legislature, and to avoid the possibility that a strong governor who controls the police department, might be in a position to arrest certain members of the legislature going to and...you might note the wording...going to and from sessions of the legislature and any committee, thereof.

Mr. Stinson In other words, it would be alright for him to be drunk and you couldn't arrest him for drunken driving and reckless driving and endangering the lives of the public just because he is going to and from the legislature? He ought to wait and get drunk when he gets there.

Mr. Casey Well what...I have to submit to you that you are correct if that is really the case, if it would really occur.

Mr. Stinson Isn't drunken driving a breach of the peace? The only time it would be a felony would be if he were a third offender?

Mr. Casey DWI is breach of the peace.

Mr. Stinson And he couldn't be arrested...any member of the legislature going to and from and while attending?...

Mr. Casey Could not...right, going to and from a session of the legislature or any committee meeting ...

Mr. Stinson Or in attendance. In other words, for sixty days, if he got drunk here in Baton Rouge, he couldn't be arrested for drunken driving or disturbing the peace.

Mr. Casey I would submit to you, Mr. Stinson, that on a certain day, when the legislature adjourns, and you are not conducting your business of the legislature but you happen to be in the lounge of the White House Inn, and you drive out onto one of the streets here and you are absolutely, without a doubt, guilty of a DWI, I would submit to you that you are not in session, and you are not in a committee meeting and you are not going to a committee meeting and you are not coming from a committee meeting.

Mr. Stinson Well, in the past it's been held, though, that during the entire sixty days they were exempt except for felonies and breach of the peace, wasn't it?

Mr. Casey Well, my understanding of the various interpretation by various courts, have indicated that breach of the peace apparently applied generally to any misdemeanor. Now I don't know what period of time during the legislative session a person really might be exempt or might be susceptible to arrest.

But I would think, Mr. Stinson, that only if you are attending to the official business of the state would you, in fact, be exempt from arrest. If you ...

Mr. Stinson In other words, your committee unanimously felt it would be alright for a member of the legislature to be drunk and drive all the way from Shreveport to Baton Rouge and not be subject to arrest...

Mr. Casey Mr. Stinson, I notice you use the word unanimous. I was one of the members on the committee that opposed deletion of the words breach of peace.

Mr. Tobias Mr. Casey, could you tell me whether this, by omitting the provision breach of the peace, would this permit a person to go free if, for example he was arrested for driving while intoxicated under your provision since that is a misdemeanor?

Mr. Casey I would suggest to you that that would probably be correct, but only if he was in attendance ...in attendance...at a legislative session or a committee hearing, or going to or from that session. And that is the wording of this particular section.

Mr. Tobias Do you agree with that?

Mr. Casey That's what I said. I agree that he would be exempt if he was going to and from...exempt from arrest...

Mr. Tobias Do you think that is a correct result. Is what I mean?

Mr. Casey Yes, I'm not saying it's the correct result, I think that will be the result. Whether you agree with it or not is another matter. That's up to the members of the convention to decide.

Mr. Stinson Mr. Casey, now that you have continuous sessions, members of the legislature are going to be exempt for four years then, aren't they?... continuously.

Mr. Casey Ford, I think that is sort of a loaded question. Don't you think so? I think...

Mr. Stinson I think the continuous session was a loaded passage, too.

Mr. Casey I disagree with your interpretation of the word continuous.

[Previous Question ordered. Section passed: 67-26. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter Section 8, Conflict of Interest
Section A, Legislative office is a public trust and every effort to realize personal gain through official conduct is a violation of that trust. The legislature shall enact a code of ethics prohibiting conflict between public duty and private interest of members of the legislature.

Explanation

Mr. Juneau Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this provision, the initial sentence, therein, is a new sentence in the constitution. It was an expression on the part of the committee that the legislative office is a position of public trust and it also ...the second sentence is a mandate to the legislature that they will enact a code of ethics in statutory law prohibiting conflicts between public duty and private interest.

I would move for its adoption.

Questions

Mr. Denny Mr. Juneau, do you understand the second sentence in that section to mean that the only thing that can be contained in such a code of ethics is one which prohibits conflict between public duty and private interest?

Mr. Juneau No, I do not interpret it that way. It merely mandates that they will at a very minimum enact such a code of ethics.

Mr. Denny If the section on code of ethics which is included in the Executive Department report is adopted, would there be any necessity for this sentence?

Mr. Juneau Obviously the answer would be no, if the language would be the same. But it's like getting the cart before the horse. We didn't know what would occur at that time. It would be no necessity if that language would be encompassed in the Executive Department. The answer would be no.

Mr. Denny Would it then require, if we adopt this section as presently written and subsequently adopt another section which provides for such a code of ethics, to come back and get a two-thirds vote of this body in order to delete the sentence as being unnecessary?

Mr. Juneau I think that would be a matter which would address itself to Style and Drafting because we wouldn't be talking about anything in substance. We would only be talking about a duplication of language in the constitution.

19th Days Proceedings—July 25, 1973

Mr. Denney Thank you.

Explanation

Mr. Burson Mr. Juneau, I noticed in the source material you list Section 29 and 30. Article 18 (1) of the present constitution as the source from which you departed on this article. I would ask you with regard to Section 30, which provides that a member of the legislature shall forfeit the office which he holds if he is convicted of giving or offering to give or receiving anything for his vote in the legislature, if you have made any recommendation with regard to Section 30 that it be placed in the statutes or otherwise?

Mr. Juneau It was our intention, Mr. Burson, that that matter would properly, the mechanics of which and the particulars of which, would address itself to statutory law. I might add in further explanation to your question there was or is in the present constitution a provision wherein the legislators disclose their personal interest in bills and refrain from voting thereon. It was the consensus of opinion of the delegates that that was language which was just not technically enforceable in the constitution. For example, someone who is in the insurance business could not vote on an insurance bill. Someone who is a farmer, conceivably, would not vote on agriculture bills. We thought that by putting in the provision that a code of ethics per se could be enacted if that would take care of that particular problem.

Mr. Burson So, it would be your thinking then that rather than recommend that the specific matter dealt with under the present Section 30 be put in the statutes that you would simply believe and hope that it would be covered by a code of ethics adopted and put in the statutes.

Mr. Juneau Yes, that is why the mandate was on the legislature.

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Juneau, in your language you say that the legislature shall. What happens if they don't?

Mr. Juneau Of course, I guess that's a problem we would have in any one section. The alternative to that, Mr. Anzalone, would be that we set forth a meticulous article dealing with code of ethics. The same thing would apply in the executive branch. I would think that it would be subject to court litigation. Of course, you can't require. I don't have the answer to that question. It's going to come up throughout this convention. It's just not susceptible to an answer.

Mr. Anzalone You would agree, however, that the words "the legislature shall" is not going to be subject to a mandamus?

Mr. Juneau Yes. I move for its adoption.

[Previous question withdrawn, section 4, paragraph 92-4. Motion to amend is tabled.]

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter Section 9. Quorum, Compulsory attendance, Journal, Adjournment, Consent of the House. Section 9 Paragraph A. Not less than a majority of the elected members of each House shall form a quorum to transact business, but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day and shall have the power to compel the attendance of absent members.

B. Each House shall keep a journal of its proceedings which shall be published from day to day in which shall accurately reflect the proceedings of that House including all record votes. A record vote is a vote by yeas and nays with said yeas and nays being published in the journal.

C. Whenever the legislature is in session neither House shall adjourn for more than 3 days or more than any other place in which it has been meeting without the consent of the other House.

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates, Section 9 is the latitude that exists at this section now existing in the constitution pertaining to certain mechanics in establishing the legislative attendance and the keeping of journals and whatnot. Paragraph B merely establishes the requirement for a quorum. Paragraph B sets forth that each House shall have an official journal and establishes the type of record votes that exist and Section C is also presently in the constitution and is probably more necessary now, than ever, which indicates that neither House can adjourn for more than 3 days without the consent of the other House. I would urge adoption of Section 9.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Blair]. On page 5, delete lines 29 through 32 in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following, also the second amendment strikes out line 1 on page 6.

B. Each House shall keep a journal of its proceedings and cause the same to be published immediately after the close of each session. The journal shall accurately reflect the proceedings of that House, including all record votes. A record vote is a vote by yeas and nays with said yeas and nays being published in the journal.

Explanation

Mr. Blair Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, we had this right at the last. We had finished up and rather than to reopen everything, we agreed we'd enter this as a technical amendment on the floor. So if you have, don't have any questions, objections, I ask for approval.

Questions

Mr. Derbes Senator Blair, this requires that the journal be published after the close of the session. Is that correct?

Mr. Blair No, after we have finished our proposal, that's what I was talking about. I'm giving your attention, I'll tell you who brought it, David Poynter brought this to our attention. That this is tied down a little better, the day to day proceedings.

Mr. Derbes Now, I'm referring to your amendment which says each House shall keep a journal of its proceedings, and cause the same to be published immediately after the close of each session. Now that changes the requirement from a day to day requirement to a requirement permitting the journal to be... to a requirement specifying that the journal be published at the close of the session.

Mr. Blair Well, we have day to day publications, but I understand the official journal, when it's official, is when it's printed and that's at the end of the session.

Mr. Derbes I see. But this takes no distinction and doesn't seem to provide any latitude. I mean I'm not against this, it's fine, but it seems to me that the journal shall be published immediately after the close of the session and doesn't give you any latitude to publish anything in the interim.

Mr. Blair We will have that latitude to do that, and this is making it official, as I understand it, at the end of the session, Mr. Derbes.

Mr. Derbes Okay, but there's not distinction made that way in your proposal, in your amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. DeBlieux Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen, I just want to be sure that this particular amendment does not do away with the daily journal.

19th Days Proceedings—July 25, 1973

because I think that any member of the legislature and as you members of this constitutional convention can realize, that you daily journal is very much of an assistance to you ...

Mr. Henry Senator, I think Mr. Casey has a question which might clear up your problem there.
Would you yield to a question from him?

Mr. De Blieux I just want to be sure of that.

Mr. Henry Yes sir.
He yields.

Question

Mr. Casey Senator De Blieux, do you know that the purpose of this amendment, first of all, is to establish this particular paragraph exactly as it exists in the constitution of today and the problem that is attempting, we're attempting to cure is that first of all, errors do occur in the journal in the day to day publication. If the official journal were the day to day publication then we might be prohibited from correcting those day to day journals. The idea being that the only official journal, and that's all we're establishing here is the official journal of the legislature, and that is what must be published after the close of the session. It has nothing to do with the day to day publications whatsoever. I can assure you that we will continue to do that in the future.

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Chairman, if that's correct, then I withdraw any objection. I just want to be sure we don't eliminate that daily journal.

*[Amendment adopted without objection.
Previous question ordered in the section. Section passed: 96-1.
Motion to reconsider tabled.]*

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter Section 10. Legislative Auditor.
Section 10. There shall be a legislative auditor who shall be elected by the consent of a majority of the elected members of each House and may be removed by the consent of two-thirds of the elected members of each House. The legislative auditor shall be responsible solely to the legislature and shall serve as fiscal advisor to the legislature. He shall perform such duties and functions relating to the auditing of the fiscal records of state and local government as are provided by law.

Explanation

Mr. Blair Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, as you know, the legislative auditor belongs to the legislature at the present time. About the main change that we made here, we elect him by a majority vote and we dismissed him in the present constitution by a majority vote. When Mr. Burns appeared before our committee, he was not pushing for the two-thirds vote, but we thought it would give him a little more security by making it a two-thirds vote for his removal. We removed some of the long language in that and I think made it more specific that he was, his duties were to be performed for the legislature. Now unless there are questions, I ask for the final approval on Section 10.

Questions

Mr. Nunson Senator Blair, does the legislative auditor have the staff, or in a position to have the knowledge to be fiscal advisor to the legislature?

Mr. Blair Yes, we had that provision in here also, that he would be staffed to where he would handle, or be our advisor for the fiscal part.

Mr. Dennery Senator Blair, what is the present provision, where is the present provision in the constitution?

Mr. Blair Article 6, Section 26, I'm advised.

Mr. Dennery Section 26.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. West n]. On page 6 at the beginning of line 9, delete the word "two" and at the beginning of line 10, delete the word "thirds" and insert in lieu thereof the word "majority." That's line 9 and 10 delete the word "two-thirds" and insert in lieu thereof "majority."

Explanation

Mr. Newton Well, it's very simple. I feel that the legislative auditor is an employee of the legislature and they certainly ought to be able to get rid of him by the same vote that it takes to hire him. I don't think it requires extended debate. I ask your favorable support of the amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates, Mr. Newton is absolutely correct that it certainly does not require extended debate. However, I would like to set forth the reasons why the Legislative Committee used two-thirds rather than a simple majority. The thinking of the legislature at this time is that some time in the future, the legislative auditor will not only perform post auditing and merely audit existing records, but also will go into a field which the legislature and many legislators feel quite strongly about. That is the theory of performance auditing so that the legislator, through the records that are available to him, can make recommendations to the legislature to determine if certain programs or branches of the executive government are performing their functions, not only properly accounting for funds, but also performing their functions effectively and are properly carrying out the program effectively so that if the program is not functioning properly then that would be an ideal subject for elimination. Whether it be in an area of the executive government or a particular program or something of that type. Now, under that thinking the auditor is going to make a lot of people awfully mad. We want to get rid of the legislative auditor a feeling of security so that he can properly feel that he can criticize any and all public officials and programs that are not functioning properly. If a simple majority of the legislators really probably want to get rid of him and he's not that dedicated of a public servant, all they have to do is cut off his salary or eliminate that from the appropriation bill. The fact remains to remove him. It was strongly felt by many members of the committee that if this man is going to be subjected to criticism by other state elected officials, not just for post auditing, but whether these officials are performing their job properly, that we should afford him some extra protection. That's the reasoning of the committee.

Questions

Mr. Burns Mr. Casey, this seems to me a mighty important position and carries with it a lot of responsibility and a lot of ability and experience. Yet I notice there's nothing in this section that states, outlines what qualifications whether he should be a C.P.A., a licensed auditor, it just said they should select an auditor. I know a lot of people that keep books just by word of mouth, so to speak and what they picked up just from being around offices. Don't you think there should be some qualification in here for a position of this kind?

Mr. Casey Well Mr. Burns, I initially agree with you that this is probably one of the most important positions that we will, and do have in state government. The committee felt strongly also, while I'm just mentioning some points, that he should be completely independent and we very much wanted to retain him solely under the legislative branch of area of government. We did discuss the question that you are mentioning now, but felt that it should be up to the legislature, who has the tools available, to find the most qualified person that might be available and rather than itemize and define many details of what his capabilities ought to be, that we possibly really couldn't cover everything in the constitution. Just under the theory that we should not have too much detail in the constitution, that's why we did not include it and we can do this by statute.

Mr. Tapper Mr. Casey, I'm a little concerned about the fact that there is no set time in this provision, for the legislative auditor. It would seem to me, or my interpretation of this would be, that once he is appointed by a majority of the legislature, then he is appointed for life unless two-thirds decide to replace him. I'm wondering why not specify a term say concurrent with the legislature that appoints him?

Mr. Casey Well, Mr. Tapper, in line with the explanation I've already given that in order to make him as independent as possible, and not susceptible to political approaches, so to speak, that a term might just do that type of thing, and that he does serve at the pleasure of the legislature, regardless of whether it be 4 years or 6 years. Somebody had mentioned to us if you really want to get rid of him and he's not that dedicated of a public servant, all you have to do is cut out his salary...

Mr. Tapper That's true, but don't you think it would be better for the protection of the public to give him a specific term and only allow the legislature...

Further Discussion

Mr. Jack Mr. Chairman and members, I rise to speak against this amendment. When you have a legislative auditor, you're going to give him instructions like to check out sheriffs, clerks, assessors, numerous accounts and things and I can visualize in parishes where different office holders would be powerful and they would resent being checked out or what the legislative auditor found, and put that Representative, that Senator on the spot and ask him to get rid of him. This is an exception to the ordinary rule of a majority hires and a majority fires. I do not believe you would get a real good bull dog legislative auditor if you can fire him with a simple majority. I do not believe you could get a good one if you said he had a term for this number of years or that number of years. This is one time where you have an exception. Ordinarily I'm for having terms of office, but I'm not in this case because this is really a qualification for your legislative auditor. It's not a term you're setting or a life thing. It's just the qualification. If you don't require two-thirds to get rid of him, you are lowering the qualifications of the man you're employing, you're tempting him to go easy so he can satisfy a majority. So I think this amendment is bad, and leave it requiring two-thirds. Thank you.

Questions

Mr. Denney Mr. Jack, under Rayburn's rules of order, I was unable to ask this question of Mr. Casey so I therefore ask you. Do you see anything in this provision which provides for the appointment of a legislative auditor in the event the one who has previously been appointed dies between sessions of the legislature?

Mr. Jack Well sir, I don't know what you're talking about Rayburn's rules of order...

Mr. Denney The 5 minute rule.

Mr. Jack Oh, Senator Rayburn's rule. You get fifteen here and ask him.

Mr. Jack The 5 minutes is nearly up and I like to be brief. Get along.

Mr. Nunez Mr. Jack, according to your reasoning a simple majority can get rid of a good man if he had enough pressure from back home, etc., if he had written some bad audits. On the other hand, a simple one-third of the legislature can keep a bad one there if he was so inclined to be. Thank God we haven't had many in the past, but we're looking to the future. One-third of the legislature can keep him there if he's issuing bad reports, bad fiscal reports, and he's not advising the legislature properly. So your argument for a simple majority getting rid of the good one, I think applies more to a one-third not keeping a bad one, than a simple majority keeping a good one.

Mr. Jack You're not asking me a question, you're making a speech.

Mr. Nunez I said don't you think...

Mr. Jack I'll tell you, your arithmetic is perfect, but reasoning is bad.

Mr. Casey Mr. Jack, Mr. Denney had a question about the situation if an auditor died between sessions. How can we solve that? Well aren't those the type of details that we can easily resolve by statute? So did you also did you know that there is a joint legislative audit advisory committee which oversees the functions of the legislative auditor and hears with the auditor, various matters which are of controversy on very serious audits in the state where there are some serious legal problems involved?

Mr. Jack I don't think you have to spell out everything in the constitution. I thought we were going to make the constitution brief. The first thing to do with the auditor when he dies is in a reasonable time, have his funeral. Then get you another auditor. I don't know why we have to go through all these other details. The legislature will provide for that.

Further Discussion

Mr. Flory Mr. Chairman and delegates, I rise in support of the amendment. At the present time the constitution provides that he shall be hired by a simple majority vote of the legislature and that he shall serve at the pleasure of the legislature. Now let me suggest to you that given to him in the proposed section, are the responsibilities as a fiscal officer or fiscal advisor to the legislature. I would think that if, should the occasion arise that the legislature by a majority vote deems that the advice on a fiscal nature that he's been giving them is not the best advice available, then certainly they ought to be able to get some better advice and they ought to be able to do it by the hiring of a new legislative auditor. Secondly, let me say to you that nothing contained herein would prohibit the legislature from establishing his salary at $1 per year, thereby forcing the man to quit. So you have not corrected the problem that you attempted to correct if he gets into performance trouble. The legislature can still set his salary at the point to which the man would be forced to quit. I just believe that if, in the majority rule of the legislature that he ought to be hired and fired if they deem it advisable by a majority vote and would ask that you concur in the amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Staggs Mr. Chairman and delegate to the convention, I rise to oppose the amendment of Mr. Newton. I think the matter has been talked about sufficiently. This man is going to cause himself some built-in problems if he does the job or which he is charged with accomplishing—that is to audit all parts of our state government and to do it severely. Where fault is found, to say so. I urge that the delegates oppose the Newton amendment and Mr. Chairman if I am in order to do so, I move for the previous question.

[Motion for the Previous Question
rejected: 29-66.]

Further Discussion

Mr. Nunez Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in support of the amendment. I think the simple majority to expel the auditor, if the simple majority is needed to hire him, makes a lot more logic and is a lot more sensible than allowing, having two-thirds to get rid of him just in the simple event that he's not doing the job that he's hired to do. I think it's much more reasonable and much more logical to assume that if he isn't doing that job it would take only one-third of those members elected that could hold off getting rid of him. I think this is the danger that we are facing when we say it shall take two-thirds. We have a two-thirds provision to get rid of legislators and they're elected by the people. Now here we're putting the same provision to get rid of an individual who is hired by the legislature. I don't know if Mr. Burreis is still in the chambers, he was here just recently, I don't think the legislature has been so bad that they would get rid of him for doing those things he thought was necessary, but if he is, I certainly mean nothing against him and if he is here talking for the two-thirds I can understand that also. I think it's a bad provision to leave two-thirds in the constitution that two-thirds of the legislature, it shall take two-thirds to get rid of an individual that they have working for them if he is not doing the job. Because the bad part about it, it takes only one-third to keep him. I think this is where the danger lies and the inherent danger lies in the constitution.

Questions

Mr. Chatelair Delegate Nunez, is it not true sir that it took only one-third of the legislature to fire this man, the argument that the legislature, through the years and possibly in the future is not too popular at times, would it not be that the people would be left out of this deal if you had a two-thirds vote?

Mr. Nunez Well, it's always been my opinion you're leaving out a certain portion of the electorate that sent the legislators here if you allow one-third of them to control the vote in the House or the Senate.

Mr. Chatelain It seems to me that the people would be cheated in this deal because they may not want to get rid of this man.

Mr. Nunez That's correct.

Mr. Womack Mr. Nunez, in view of the fact that the attitude has been, or the general approach has been up here that the legislature might be bad and might have a problem with the man and give him a hard time if you didn't put the two-thirds. Isn't it a fact that the legislature has set up a legislative audit advisory committee to further support the hard-nose attack on the legislative auditor and that's in process at this time?

Mr. Nunez And I think you might add, Mr. Womack, that I think they're doing an excellent job.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

Mr. Newton It seems to me that the big problem here is that some people fear that if he's doing a good job, some people are going to want to get rid of him. I think it's a two edged sword. I think if he's not doing his job and say 13 Senators like that, then you've got him locked in there and you can't get rid of him. I urge that you pass the amendment so that the legislature can function. Thank you.

[Amendment introduced: 19-61. Motion]

THE RECORDED JOURNAL

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [of Mr. Weiss], page 6, line 7, immediately after "Section 10" and before the words "there shall" add "a".

Amendment No. 2, page 6, between lines 15 and 16 add the following: "B. The legislative auditor shall conduct an audit annually of all compensation paid from state funds to all persons except in the classified service of the state."

Explanation

Mr. Weiss Fellow delegates, this proposal is intended to account to the public for the expenditure of state funds. The civil service section of our state already has this, I understand, in their public accounting system and this would mandate the legislative auditor to conduct an annual audit, and therefore make it available for public use, on the amount of compensation paid to state officials other than the civil service. Basically, the intent is to provide the public with the knowledge of the income from public sources, that other members of the state receive other than civil service employees. With the computer system, and this is a futuristic amendment, there should be no problem whatsoever to put on computer the manner in which these funds are spent and in which they are received, and, by simply programming a computer, there would be no problem in obtaining a list of the state employees other than civil service that are receiving funds from the state and how much they are receiving annually. That is the purpose and the intent of the amendment and I think in the future there would be no problem with computers to do this in a very simple fashion.

Further Discussion

Mr. Womack Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, in my opinion this is what you get into when you have hastily drawn amendments that don't cover and don't take into consideration all aspects of the amendment. I rise in opposition to this proposal and I give you several reasons. No. 1, the legislative auditors job is to audit not only the state funds but to audit local funds, and to audit and to readit these state funds as they travel from the state into other entities of state and local government. This would exempt state civil service employees but state appropriation going to the police jury would not exempt the police jury employees. So, the amendment just does a portion of what was proposed. The second thing wrong, it says it shall have an annual audit. I don't know whether he has got to perform that audit annually or whether he's got to perform it on an annual basis and he can't get a year behind. I don't know what that would mean. The reason you can't tie him down is because there are certain departments and certain small agencies that have never been a problem and if you say he has got to have staff enough and has got to audit that annually, you don't know how much staff he's got to have. In a number of those where very little money is involved, they don't go to the expense of auditing annually, they check them out every so often, just as a matter of routine, and then in other cases they find major agencies with many millions of dollars involved and they get bogged down in it and quite often send additional auditors in, and where normally it would take two or three or four weeks to perform an audit, they may be on it for three months. When you once appropriate an amount of dollars for an auditor to run an office on and he has "X" number of employees which is set forth by his annual appropriation, his table of organization, he can't be flexible enough to be mandated to perform an audit on an annual basis. He has got to do it as he can get to it and put the first thing first. Keep in mind that you have a one and one-half billion dollar appropriation each year, there is a good chance that the legislative auditor will be auditing approximately four billion dollars a year because in many instances he audits the same dollar as many as three or four times, so that's a field of its own. Now notice in there they have the wording in this also, not necessarily in this, but I will call your attention to it while I am here. It says there shall be an advisor, or he shall serve as the advisor. If that is the only one you are going to have you might not like anything he does. Right now the legislature has any number of advisors, namely, before you start preparing the budget, you call in about six of them including the legislative auditor, the state treasurer, the department of economics of L. S. U., the same thing of Southern of New Orleans, L. S. U. N. O., and any number that you can call in, PAR for example, comes in and you counsel with them. Then you wind up between that and the Division of Administration taking the one that you feel best represents and if you come out to within two, three or four million dollars, you have been awful lucky when you start your estimates, because any little change will change it. I am very reluctant...while I am here I am going to touch on that until I run out of time, in setting this up as a before the fact position. This is a big enough job to be an after the fact to check the legality of what has been done. Checking into the advisability and the wisdom of how money is spent should be left to the executive branch, the legislative branch, and the administrative branch of the many departments, and if it is not left to the legislature then to appropriate and to see that the proper job is done as far as the wisdom is done, then one man as a before the fact auditor, you are putting him in a very powerful position to say whether you wisely spent your money. In short, I think this is a bad amendment and I think it should be defeated.

Further Discussion

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates to the convention, I also rise to vote defeat of the amendment. My honest opinion is that this is the type of detail that really does not belong in the constitution to start with; that the legislature in developing its statutes to set forth what the functions of the legislative auditor shall be. This is the type of thing that would ordinarily appear in the statutes and I would hesitate to approve this amendment because I think it would tend toward developing, I think a trend in this convention, that it would not be appropriate. That is merely containing in our document too much detail. This can be accomplished without being in the constitution. It can be accomplished through the legislature.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

Mr. Weiss Fellow delegates, in this convention we will be frequently faced with the concept of whether to include, and we have already discussed many times whether this is statutory or constitutional. I think that those who feel that it doesn't belong in the constitution really don't want the measure and say it is statutory. Certainly this argument, to me, is without merit and furthermore, this certainly does not require anything more than a realistic thinking in the here and now problem at the present time with the computers now available to the civil service people to put this information on those who are not members of the civil service and by simply pressing a button after proper programing, the outcome is very simple. I think that this is a type of archaic thinking that is representative of some people in the group and that we must look to the future and that this is an example of looking to the future and obtaining information that the people of the state deserve. We have given blank checks many times and I think the time has come where we should at least put a maximum or a limit. If there is a two million or billion dollar expenditure, I think the people of the state are entitled to know how these funds are spent and the legislative auditor would have no problem because he himself would not be involved so much directly as, at present, the civil service people who are keeping the computer for this purpose. So, it is simply a matter of programing into these computers the facts, then obtaining them and reporting them to the public. I think that a bad amendment or I would not have proposed it as a constitutional amendment. I think that we owe it to the people of the state to make an accounting to them. True that this, as Delegate Womack pointed out, is only an early beginning and only a portion of what should be done, but at least this is a beginning of what should be done and I hope you will vote favorably and include this for the people of the state to know how their funds are being spent. After they are spent then it is up to them to decide whether they think, by election or other alterations in the process through their elected official, that these funds are being properly allocated. It is simply a matter of accounting to the people of the state and I urge you to vote in favor of this amendment.

[Amendment rejected: 27-79. Motion to reconsider tab.ed.]

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1, sent up by Messrs. Alario and Munson, on page 6, line 11, immediately after the word "and" delete the word "shall" and insert in lieu thereof the word "may".

Amendment No. 2, on page 6, at the beginning of line 12, between the word "as" and the word "fiscal" insert the word "a".

Explanation

Mr. Alario Mr. Chairman and members of the convention, all this simply does now on page 6, starting on line 10, the sentence would now read "the legislative auditor shall be responsible solely to the legislature and may serve as a fiscal advisor to the legislature." My only reason for this is that presently when we get the fiscal advice or the estimated revenues from various agencies, we get it now from the Conservation Department, we get it from the Revenue Department, we get it from the state treasurer, we get it from various agencies who are involved on a day to day basis with the fiscal affairs, with the actual revenues and with the actual revenues that are being collected. I feel, and Mr. Munson feels, that the present language as written in by the committee would mean that we would restrict solely to the legislative auditor that responsibility of being the fiscal advisor to the legislature. During this past session of the legislature, since I have been here, there has been much talk of us having a fiscal officer who is responsible solely to the legislature to give us the advice we need in preparing our budgets. We don't feel that the legislative auditor is presently staffed, or has the capacity at this time to do this type of thing because he is not involved in it on a day to day basis. We are in favor of strengthening the legislative auditor in the auditing process, not in the means of giving us the sole revenues and possibly being involved in the legislative end of it. That is why we are offering these amendments at this time.

Questions

Mr. Derbes Mr. Alario, since we really are not setting forth the responsibilities of the legislative auditor, doesn't this give further discretion to the legislature in determining the scope of his responsibilities...your amendment?

Mr. Alario My amendment would. That is correct.

Mr. Derbes Do you see any danger there, in having the responsibilities of the legislative auditor quitted through the operation of your amendment?

Mr. Alario Mr. Derbes, I think possibly it may...the way the proposal is written now, the legislature would still have the sole responsibility of being the fiscal auditor. We don't feel that the legislative auditor should be the only sole one responsible for that particular action. We are all for him being strong in the auditing process but not in that section of it.

Mr. Derbes That is not exactly the point. If you had put in your "a" on line 12 that would have the effect of the legislative auditor being one or one among several fiscal advisors, but because you have changed "shall" to "may" you have made it discretionary within the purview of the legislative act as to whether or not indeed the legislative auditor shall be a fiscal advisor, isn't that correct?

Mr. Alario That's true, and of course we are looking here, I think it is a decision the legislature should meet. If they want to seek advice from other agencies then they can do just that.

Mr. Derbes Then I ask you finally, Mr. Alario, why not just delete all of Section 10?

Mr. Alario Section 10, then you would be eliminating the legislative auditor's office if you deleted the whole section.

Mr. Derbes But, if the legislature can prescribe fully the functions of the legislative auditor, and since those functions are not set forth in the constitution, the entire scope of his responsibilities may be defined by the legislature.

Mr. Alario Of course, Mr. Derbes, if he is an employee of the legislature, I think the legislature should dictate to him what his responsibilities and duties might be.

Mr. Arnette Mr. Alario, it seems that you have two different questions. First, your amendment one says that the legislative auditor won't have to be an advisor, and your amendment two says that he may serve as an advisor. He doesn't have to be the only advisor. I would particularly be in favor of amendment two but not of amendment one. Do you see the difference in the two amendments that you are proposing, sir?

Mr. Alario The only thing, in the package it gives the legislature the right to decide if that is where they want to place the responsibility. That is the only thing I do by both of them. Now, if you are in favor of one and not two then you may ask for division of the question. I would think you could do that.

Mr. Arnette Well, I shall move for that.

Mr. Roemer John, does your amendment deal with the auditing of the legislature itself and its funds.

Mr. Alario I don't think it does, but...

Mr. Roemer O.K., you didn't mean...that wasn't an oversight? You didn't mean to address that at all?

Mr. Alario No.

Mr. Roemer As I understand it now, even as you would have amended this proposal, there is no clause in here or provision in this article as amended, assuming yours passes, that would have some other firm or person that the legislative auditor audit the legislature. Is that right?

Mr. Alario No, I don't say that.

Further Discussion

Mr. Hewton I want to rise in support of the amendment primarily because it allows the legislature a little more flexibility than what this present article provides. I personally am against having Section 10 in the constitution at all. I would rather leave the matter up to the legislature. This amendment does allow the legislature some flexibility and I think particularly in view of having kept the requirement for two-thirds to remove the legislative auditor because of his functions in auditing local, parochial, etc. affairs. I think that if he were doing that job well but were not serving properly as the fiscal advisor for the legislature it might be wise to get someone else and I urge the passage of the amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Arnette There are actually two basic proposals here. I don't know if Mr. Alario pointed this out fully and I don't know if my question brought it out fully. First of all, the first amendment, if you put "may" instead of "shall," you are allowing the legislative auditor to refuse to advise the legislature as a fiscal advisor and you are also preventing the legislature of compelling him to advise as a fiscal advisor. I would definitely be against the first amendment. However, the second amendment I think is good because it allows the legislative auditor to merely be one of the fiscal advisors and I think this is a good idea. I think we ought to vote against the first amendment and for the second amendment and I therefore move for division of the question.

Further Discussion

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates to the convention, I think Mr. Arnette has made a very good point and has made a valid request in asking for a division of the question. I would submit to you that it is better to retain the word "shall" at the end of line 11 so that he is directed to be a legal advisor, but on line 12, after the word "as," insert the word "a" to take care of Mr. Alario's question to permit other people, such as the state treasurer and many other people to be a legal advisor in addition to the legislative auditor. So, I therefore recommend killing Amendment No. 1, but accepting Amendment No. 2.

[Previous Question ordered. Division of the Question ordered. Amendment No. 1 reread and rejected: 26-76. Motion to reconsider tabled. Amendment No. 2 reread and adopted: 99-5. Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 103-1. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter Section 11. Salaries of public officers, change

Section 11. Except as otherwise provided in this constitution, salaries of public officials may be changed only by a two-thirds vote of the elected members of each House of the legislature, provided that the salaries of public officers shall not be reduced during the term for which they are elected or appointed.

Explanation

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates, Section 11 exists in the constitution today but does not exist exactly as defined in today's Section 11. Under the existing constitution, the salary of public officials may be changed only by a two-thirds vote of the members of each House present and voting. Now, the wording is not exactly like that but that is as it has been interpreted by the court decisions. Some of the members of the committee felt strongly that it should be by a two-thirds vote of the elected membership of each House. There was much disagreement on the committee and I was one of those who voted against the provision as is. I was in favor of retaining the provision, but an amendment was changed only by a member of a committee. The committee also added on line 20, that the salaries of public officials shall not be reduced during the term for which they are elected or appointed. That is what has been added.

19th Days Proceedings—July 25, 1973

Questions

Mr. Dennergy Mr. Casey, why is there in one part of this public officials and in another part public officers? Is there any distinction between the two?

Mr. Casey No, I don't think there was intended to be any distinction at all.

Mr. Dennergy Under the law, is it possible for a classified employee to be a public official or officer?

Mr. Casey I don't know the answer to that. You might know better than I since you are very well connected with...

Mr. Dennergy Shall I ask the question this way, is it not true that certain classified employees could well be officials or officers?

Mr. Casey I would assume that you know that the answer is yes, so I would say probably yes.

Mr. Dennergy Well, under those circumstances, wouldn't this conflict with the provisions that will presumably be found in the civil service section which provide for uniform pay plans, increases in salary and so forth, which would not require a two-thirds vote of the legislature.

Mr. Casey I would assume it would be in conflict. However, I would assume that those civil service employees, provisions pertaining to their salaries would be interpreted under the civil service law.

Mr. Dennergy Thank you.

Mr. Perez Mr. Casey, is it possible that this provision could be construed to mean that the legislature would establish the salary of the Mayor of New Orleans?

Mr. Casey I don't think that is intended at all. I think this provision is pretty much as it is worded today and apparently it was decided that which ever salaries the legislature today has the right to change and under the constitution and laws of the state in the future would have the right to change, that those are the only salaries that we are talking about, not the mayor of New Orleans, or the president of any police jury, or any form of local government that we do not now set the salaries for.

Mr. Perez Do you have a definition of public official, then, so that we will know what it means?

Mr. Casey I don't have one readily available, but I would ask the research staff if they have one available.

Mr. Duval Mr. Casey, also you use the word salaries. In the event of public official is not on a salary, such as presently a legislator, would this apply to legislators?

Mr. Casey I would assume it would apply to any public official or officer whose salary or income or compensation is set by the legislature.

Mr. Duval So you don't feel the word salary restricts it to only public officials who are actually salaried?

Mr. Casey I would assume it refers to whatever forms of compensation they receive.

Vice Chairman Miller in the Chair

Mr. Derbes Mr. Casey, to elaborate just for a moment on Mr. Duval's question which was essentially my question, why did your committee use the word salary rather than compensation? If indeed you mean salary then to me salary means something that is paid on a regular basis and not on a per diem basis and it does not include compensation for expenses.

Could you elaborate on the committee's thinking in that regard?

Mr. Casey I could not honestly tell you that they had any particular formal thinking on the use of the word salary as distinguished from compensation. However, it is apparent that they intended to use the word salary as those forms of compensation that are paid monthly or annually, but usually monthly, to a particular public official whether he be a state elected official, a legislator or what have you. And I don't think really the problem was necessarily those forms of expenses that a public official should be reimbursed for.

Mr. Derbes In other words, compensation for mileage could be increased subject to the provisions of this section by a simple majority vote but compensation for salary would require a super majority vote.

Mr. Casey I would say that possibly your interpretation could be correct. However, unless the Supreme Court has already interpreted the word salary to include travel and lodging and food and things of that type, I would say that maybe it could be increased by a simple majority.

[Motion to pass over Section 11.
Motion withdrawn.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter The first set of amendments is sent up by Delegates De Bieux and Weiss, amending the reprinted measure.

Amendment No. 1, on page 6, line 18, immediately after the portion of the word "tion," delete the remainder of the line and delete line 19 in its entirety, and at the beginning of line 20, delete the words "the legislature" and insert the following: "during the regular session of the legislature immediately preceding the election for the governor, the legislature shall fix the salaries of all elected officials whose salaries are fixed by law which shall be the salaries of those officials until changed by the next regular session immediately preceding the next election for governor";.

Explanation

Mr. De Bieux Madame Vice-President, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I have noticed ever since I have been a member of the legislature that it seems that immediately following the election we always have a lot of bills in the legislature increasing elected officials' salaries. I feel like this is absolutely the wrong approach and I don't know of a single elected official who has ever run for office with a provision in his platform that as soon as he got elected he was going to try to get an increase in salary. I did know of one person who ran for office who was going to abolish the job if he got elected, he was going to try to do that, but that is the nearest I've ever seen anybody come to a plank of what I am speaking of. I believe that this particular amendment would meet Mr. Champagne's position with reference to elected officials. Now, my particular amendment would apply only to those elected officials whose salaries are set by the legislature. It will not prevent the legislature from fixing any appointed official's salary. Furthermore, since it is going to be done during the session of the legislature immediately preceding the election for governor, it will not require the two-thirds rule, because the legislature will not be setting the own salaries during their term of office and they will not be setting the salary of any elected official during his term of office. It goes for a period of four years except possibly that with reference to the judiciary because as a general rule judiciary members are elected for six year terms or longer under our present provisions and therefore they would be subject to the same rule. If you other elected officials with reference to having their salaries checked and seeing whether or not they are adequate and setting them at that particular time. I feel that the setting of elected officials salaries once every four years would be sufficient. I can't help but feel that when a person offers himself for a job as an elected official he is telling the public that he is willing to serve for the salary which that office has at that particular time, and as a result of his coming in and immediately after getting elected asking for an increase in salary. I cannot help but feel that he is somewhat breaking his contract with the public and asking the legislature to aid and assist him in that violation of his contract with the public. Somehow or other it seems that if some of those officials when they get elected they have a little bit more political flap and therefore they can get the legislature to go along with them at that particular time. I feel that this is a good amendment and therefore I ask that you adopt it.

Questions

Mr. Duval Delegate De Blieux, you use in here all elected officials whose salaries are fixed by law. Now, would law only refer to statute law and would it exclude those elected officials whose salaries are fixed by local government charter or ordinance?

Mr. De Blieux If they are fixed by the local governing ordinances, this will not touch them. When I speak about law, I mean by the legislature.

Mr. Duval By law, you mean statute law. Is that correct?

Mr. De Blieux That is right.

Mr. Munson Senator De Blieux, are you in favor of any elected officials ever getting an increase in salary?

Mr. De Blieux Any elected official? Yes, I'm in favor of it if he runs that platform that he is going to get it increased or if he gets a salary increase for the next term of office. I don't want to see him come in and get an increase in salary immediately after he is elected.

Mr. Munson Well, if your amendment is adopted and the legislature has to vote on increases of elected officials salaries six months before the next election, what do you think his chances are of getting that increase?

Mr. De Blieux I think it is all right because they won't be elected immediately, it will be for the next term of office. I think the public will approve of that. I have talked to enough people in my district that they think that's right. They don't think that an elected official should have his salary increased during his term of office.

Mr. Munson I have no objection to that philosophy. The point I am making is that it is very difficult, or would be very unusual, for the legislature is going to vote increases in salaries for anybody six months before they run for reelection.

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Munson, if a legislator hasn't got the courage to do what he knows is right he shouldn't be serving in the legislature.

Further Discussion

Mr. Womack Madame Chairman, fellow delegates. I wholeheartedly agree with the intent of the question that Mr. Munson was trying to get out. The fact that he was trying to get out by asking his question. Shortly before an election this says the legislature shall fix salaries of all of these officials whether there is any need for adjustment or not. The thing that scares me is that we are fast getting to the point to where only the rich and the special interest can afford to serve and if you think otherwise you're kidding yourself. I can understand why Senator De Blieux wouldn't be to much in sympathy for compensation for legislators.

He's a member of the Senate that hasn't meet two much compared to what the House meets. He lives in Baton Rouge where he has only five minutes from the Capitol. He's only a matter of a few minutes from the State Agency or Quillient head and he gets the same compensation for five days a week that that individual that lives 300 or 325 miles from here, drives eight hours to get here and go back, spends the night, all the extra expenses added to it with no compensation for it and no consideration. There's another small item in it. Senator De Blieux pays no telephone bill for long distance calls. His is local, everything is local and it has run the for reelection but whereas in the district I represent, the various majority of the population is long distance to my phone today. Where a private line... today I'm paying in the neighborhood of $40.00 a month private line, an additional $100 to $125 a month legislative expense for long distance telephone. He has none of that. And then what is the next thing when the special interest individual runs on a platform that I am willing to cut and I am going to start the reducing of salaries and just before the election we're going to have a reduction in the first place there won't be any governor succeeding himself because he's not going to slim a salary raise. He could be required to sign a salary reduction. I question very seriously if that's the best interest of the everyday man in this State if this amendment is going to be in his better interest. We're going to go just straight forward further everyday toward what I have feared over a period of years that the reluctance to pay compensation, just compensation is going to eventually lead to the special interest and the rich being the only ones who can serve and I question very seriously whether that's in the best interest of the state. Yes, I'll answer a question.

Questions

Mr. Weiss Delegate Womack, do you use the centrex line?

Mr. Womack Do I use one. When I'm in Baton Rouge and can get a centrex line I quite often use one. I sit around sometimes...in my hometown we have no centrex lines. We were offered one. I was offered one I believe for $160 a month out of my pocket.

Mr. Weiss Well, it's available in most sections of the State and perhaps you can get that.

Mr. Womack I can get one in the city of Monroe and put it in Monroe, which I live sixty miles from and drive to Monroe to use it. I would be able to use one from that standpoint.

Mr. Weiss How long have you been in the legislature now sir?

Mr. Womack Well, I think about 15 or 18 years.

Mr. Weiss Would you say the legislative compensation has grown about four times since you've been in the legislature?

Mr. Womack I would say the responsibilities and expenses have grown far more than that.

Mr. Weiss And you still got reelected?

Mr. Womack Yes, I've been reelected.

Further Discussion

Mr. Casey Madame Chairman and delegates. I would urge the defeat of the amendment submitted by Senator De Blieux. I think this is just another violation of another detail that we would be adding to the constitution where we're merely re-termining the prerogatives of the legislature to establish salaries of public officials and why a salary of a public official would have to be reset every four years and that's what this very amendment would do, that apparently every four years we'd have to re-evaluate whatever election it might be held that year.

19th Days Proceedings—July 25, 1973

would then have to establish salaries. How why do you have to do it every four years? Why can't you do it just during one year at some certain time and maybe that particular salary might be good for a ten year period or an eight year period or a six year period. To me there is no logical reason why this has to be done and I would urge your defeat of this amendment.

Questions

Mr. Alario Mr. Casey, under the De Blieux amendment, maybe you could tell me just how this might work. The legislature would have to pass a bill to raise the salaries, is that right? That would be the instrument in order to do this six months before the election. Is that right?

Mr. Casey The way I read this is that first of all under our new constitution you will have a regular session every year so that whatever is the last session of that administration, this constitutional provision would require that you establish whatever salaries are going to be paid to these particular elected officials and why it has to be done at that time on a regular basis every four years I'll never understand.

Mr. Alario Mr. Casey, if the legislature then had to follow the instruction Mr. De Blieux has here, pass a bill to raise the salary of, say the sheriff's, and then the governor wouldn't sign that bill then where would that sheriff be for a salary for the four year term.

Mr. Casey I would assume Mr. Alario, that he would receive the salary as the law prescribes at that time that the governor vetoes that particular bill. You are correct that if...

Mr. Alario But if the legislature says it shall set it every four years and if they set it and the governor doesn't sign it then there is no salary. Am I correct?

Mr. Casey Well, what you are pointing out is a hiatus in this particular provision that maybe or maybe not certain elected officials might not be receiving a salary so that's certainly possible under your interpretation.

Closing

Mr. De Blieux Madame Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I think that the arguments used by Mr. Womack have no bearing upon this particular amendment as to what the expenses are of being a legislator as compared to, you might say myself being here in Baton Rouge or his being in north Louisiana. That's not the issue. Not the issue at all. The issue is whether or not you want to take a reasonable view point with reference to setting the salaries of elected officials. Whether or not you want to be interested in the welfare of the elected officials rather than the public or interested in the public rather than the elected officials. That's what it amounts to and that's what is involved in this amendment. Certainly elected officials want you to raise their salary immediately after they are elected rather than the year before the election because they are hoping that during that three year period of time that the public will have time to forget. I think this, that the best time to raise the salary of elected officials is before the election so that all officials and all candidates will know what the office pays for during the period of time. I think this is one time you can determine whether or not you are going to be with the people or you're going to be with the elected officials. That's what it amounts to because you will be able to tell the elected officials exactly what the office is going to pay before they run for the office and certainly if they are not interested in the job, I think salary, they don't have to be a candidate. I certainly feel like it's absolutely wrong to the public to raise the salaries during the first year and not raise the salaries during the last year of the office and that's what it amounts to and I ask you to vote for the amendment and Madame Chairman I ask for a record vote.

[Referred to the calendar. Amendment rejected by a majority vote. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Next set of amendments is sent up by Mr. Asseff sends up the following amendments.

Amendment No. 1, on page 6, line 18, immediately after the words "maybe" and before the word "changed" insert the following:

"set by a majority of the elected members of each house of the legislature but may be"

Amendment No. 2, page 6, line 21, immediately after the words "not be" and before the word "during" delete the word "reduced" and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"increased nor diminished".

Amendment No. 3, on page 6, line 22, place a period immediately after the word "elected" and strike out the balance of the sentence.

Explanation

Mr. Asseff Madame Chairman, delegates, the purpose of the amendment is to clarify Section 11. There is nothing said about setting the salary and I object to the word reduced. I prefer increased nor diminished and I feel that if you are restricted to elected officials and appointed officials should be left out. Now if you adopt the amendment it will read as follows: except as otherwise provided in this constitution, salaries of public officials may be set by a majority vote of the elected members of each house of the legislature but may be changed only by two-thirds vote of the elected members of each house of the legislature. provided that the salaries of public officers shall not be increased nor diminished during the term for which they are elected. Madame chairman, delegates, in the event that this amendment fails I shall offer an amendment to strike the entire section leaving the matter for determination by the legislature but I feel we should not leave the term for which he is elected. We should put either increased nor diminished. Now if you do not like that then I will move to strike it all in its entirety as I did before and that will mean that it will be left to the legislature? I will yield to any questions.

Questions

Mr. Tapper Dr. Asseff, is it my understanding that your amendment would prohibit the increasing of the salary of an elected official during his term?

Mr. Asseff It means, that is correct, that a salary official not appointed may not be either increased nor diminished during the term for which he is elected. He may at any time during the session, the first regular session make it effective with the next legislature or with the next elected official whoever he may be.

Mr. Tapper Well, let me ask you a [.. hypothet...] then, Dr. In connection with your amendment, assuming that you could not get two-thirds of the legislature at any given time to increase the salaries of an elected or an appointed official and let's say it went on for about twenty years that way. Do you think that would be proper?

Mr. Asseff Mr. Tapper, that is the recommendation of the committee and I did not change it. Frankly, I would prefer by majority vote and as I indicated to you, if this amendment is rejected then I shall submit an amendment to strike the entire thing and leave it to the legislature which will mean that it may be done by majority vote.

Mr. Tapper But isn't it a fact that the proposal of the committee now provides that there can be an increase during the time of the official.

Mr. Asseff Because it may be changed, it may not be reduced. I have offered that.

Mr. Tapper But it may be increased, according to your proposal submitted. So you in effect are changing that to prohibit the increasing during the time.

Mr. Asseff That is in keeping with Section 3E that we struck that the salaries may not be increased nor the next and I felt that was proper if we are going to adopt it at all.

Mr. Tapper But if two previous legislatures refused to increase and there was a dire need to increase during a particular time that salary of that official could not be increased during his term.

Mr. Asseff That's correct. May not be increased. I am frank in saying, though I do not trust the legislature, I feel the people elected them and they are accountable to the people, not to me. They can account for their actions to the people not to me and with rare exception I will favor a majority vote so if this amendment is rejected, as I said, I will offer an amendment to strike the entire thing. Yes Mr. Munson.

Mrs. Miller Would you yield to a question to Mr. Triche?

Mr. Asseff I yield to anybody. As long as he asks a question and doesn't make a speech.

Mrs. Miller You yield solely for the purpose of a question.

Mr. Asseff I yield automatically.

Mr. Triche Well now Madame Chairman, I'm going to reserve the right to control my own remarks. Serious Doctor, under the present constitution and some of the laws it states, salaries of some public officials are set by the governor. For example, any number of appointed officials, in agencies created by the legislature, the law provides to serve at a salary fixed by the governor. Under your amendment I that would no longer be possible, the salary would have to be set by the legislature.

Mr. Asseff Correct Sir.

Mr. Triche Also, let me ask you another question Dr. Under the proposal as advanced by the committee and also under your amendment, those officials whose salaries are now set by the governor would no longer be able to be changed by the governor, they would have to be changed also by the legislature?

Mr. Asseff No sir. The appointed officials, Mr. Triche, are left out. Therefore, it was whatever is done will be within the discretion of the legislature. My amendment is restricted to elected officials only.

Mr. Triche But isn't there some provision in this article which provides that change of salary shall only be by two thirds of the legislature?

Mr. Asseff That was the committee's recommendation and I did not change it. That is correct.

Mr. Triche Let me ask you a question about that. Wouldn't that also prohibit the change of salaries of those officials whose salaries are fixed by the governor?

Mr. Asseff No sir. I have restricted it to elected officials. I struck the word appointed. That is the way it will now read. For which they are elected so that anybody that is appointed will be determined by the legislature.

Further Discussion

Mr. Rayburn Madame Chairman and fellow delegates, I wanted to ask Mr. Asseff a question but we ran out of time and I'm going to be very brief here but I'm trying Dr. to analyze exactly what you're trying to do. If I read your amendments right the first amendment allows the legislature by a majority vote to fix salaries, however, if they are changed it will take a two thirds vote. The language in the amendment is identical to what Senator De Bieux and Dr. Weiss attempted to do if I read the language right. It says your salary cannot be raised during your term of office. Maybe I'm not reading it right but you have a right to close and I wish you would go in depth in the few minutes you have to explain it. If I read the amendment right it states that your salary cannot be increased or diminished during the term of office. Now let me say the only thing that I'm fearful about there, you have some people elected for six year terms, you have some elected for twelve year terms and with the cost of everything and increase of things we have today it might be necessary to get the type of people to stay in office or run again for office to give us a decent salary to live on and I don't think we should tie it down in the constitution as to what we're going to pay them, particularly during their term of office. I think we should take the [...] but... of that. When I say we, I mean you and I or anybody else that might serve in the legislature. If we think a person is underpaid I think we should have the right to give him a reasonable increase or her or whoever it may be and I just don't feel like we should tie down in the constitution what salary a person is going to make. I'm afraid you might eliminate some good people from running for office if you do that. I was here when the constitution said we would make ten dollars a day. We got around that language and I didn't think we couldn't make no more and we finally got it up, twenty dollars a day, thirty dollars a day, fifty dollars a day. But I really believe you could do more with ten dollars a day when I first came to the legislature than you can do with fifty now. I got a room for two dollars a day when I first came here. I had eight dollars a day and I could do a lot on eight dollars a day. Now you know the cost so the ten dollars in my opinion when I first came to the legislature was worth just as much as fifty dollars is today and I don't want to tie anybody down for twenty or thirty years from now here we'll say we can't raise their salary if we think they are entitled to a raise.

Question

Mr. Bergeron Mr. Rayburn, you've more or less taken the wind out of my sails but as I read this proposal if I'm reading it correctly if I were supreme court justice elected for fourteen years I couldn't have an increase in salary for fourteen years, could I?

Mr. Rayburn No sir and I'm not necessarily in love with the judges and I guess they could quit like any time I don't make enough I could quit but I get awful dedicated every four years when I go to run, maybe I sometimes forget it after I get elected but you could not increase no public official's salary regardless of his length of term of office if I read the amendment and its similar to Senator De Bieux's. I heard Senator De Bieux say if you're not strong enough to do what you think is right you don't have any business here. Well, maybe I think it's right to give somebody a raise but under his amendment I can't do what I think what's right but you didn't, thank the lord.

Further Discussion

Mr. Duval Follow delegates I think on this issue I rise in opposition to the Asseff amendment and to the committee proposal for the following reasons. We have not defined what a public official is. There's been questions raised but no one has specifically said what a public official is. Are you the officials salaries are not fixed by the legislature presently. Is a public official a member of the school board, member of a local parish police jury, a mayor, a city councilman? When does one become a public official? What is a salary? Some of the legislators, are we going to deal with what salaries are, emolument, compensation or what. I think the proposal is a front, with non...secutive... and are ill defined and I think we will have to delete this entire provision or else someone's got to come up with an amendment that makes sense because "public official" can apply to anybody in a local government. You mean to say that a local government now cannot fix the salary of a mayor, or school board etc. and the legislature has to do it. I think it's adding increased burden to the legislature and I seriously urge that you defeat this proposal and all other proposals until these problems are cleared up or else delete the entire provision.

19th Days Proceedings—July 25, 1973

Further Discussion

Mr. De Blieux Madame Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I just want to clarify something since Senator Rayburn referred to my amendment and this amendment as being the same. I want to say there is a lot of difference in this amendment and my amendment. My amendment would allow the checking of the salaries at least once every four years. It didn't necessarily mean that they had to be the same for each year thereafter but at least during the four year period you would know. We have district attorneys, judges elected for six years, we have judges elected for twelve years, we have judges elected for fourteen years. If this particular amendment is adopted it means that those particular individuals could not have their salaries changed during that period. My amendment did not do that. It had a whole lot more latitude in there. I thought my amendment is a good one and I think this is a bad one.

Mr. Blair Madame Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I believe that we've made up our mind more or less on this and unless Mr. Arnette would insist, personally for time service, I believe it would be good if we vote on the whole thing rather than divide it.

Closing

Mr. Asseff I chose to disagree but I am raising no objections and we may vote on them by division. Now, I want to make this clear. I agree with you that Section 11 is not clear. I did not draft it. In the event you fail to adopt this, the clerk has another amendment that will repeal it all and leave it to the legislature. However, I would like to answer Senator Rayburn's question. First, the Senator knows, I have known him for more than twenty years and I would much rather have him on my side than against me. However, this provision does not do what the Senator said. It simply means that this legislature could not increase nor decrease the salary, but it could make it effective for the next term of office. Second, Mr. Duval stated that he was concerned about local officials. The first part of Section 11 says this; except as otherwise provided in this constitution, which means that if we adopt home rule charters, which I assume we will, the municipalities, the parishes would be excluded from the provisions of Section 11. I will stop since I have made clear my position and will be glad to yield for any questions.

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [See Mr. ...]

[Amber] on page 6 line 10, after 100 words, "salaries of," and before the word, "public," insert the words, "appointed and elected."
Amendment No. 2, on page 6 line 20, after the words, "salaries of," and before the word, "public," insert the words, "appointed and elected."

Explanation

Mr. Drew Chairman and members of the convention. This is a rather simple amendment that clarifies this provision as written. In the last sentence in the section, it refers to elected or appointed and what this amendment does is just insert appointed and elected before public officials and appointed and elected before public again on line 20.

The reason I think that this is necessary, and of course I think the major objection to this entire section is the definition of the term public official. This is not intended to apply to your normal, unclassified employees, but we have seen recently, and we have seen in the past, occasion upon occasion, where department heads and other top public officials who have been appointed, have had tremendous salary increases without any say-so from anyone responsible for providing the funds for that increase. And I think if the legislature is going to have to provide the funds, I think the legislature should have some say-so in determining these increases.

I yield.

Questions

Mr. Stinson I am not an authority on grammar and punctuation, but instead of "and," shouldn't that be "or", or, appointed or elected instead of appointed and elected?

Mr. Drew That is correct, if you might make that technical change, Mr. Clerk.

Instead of "and," it possibly should read, "appointed or elected." It will make a technical change there in both places.

Mr. Poynter Fine, Mr. Drew. If there is no objection, we won't have it reprinted or re-xeroxed.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Mr. Gravel Mr. Drew, do you understand that this section would apply to the salaries of appointed and elected officials from throughout the entire state whether or not they would be state-wide officials, district officials, ward officials, mayors, councilmen, et al?

Mr. Drew That is not the intent of the amendment, Mr. Gravel, and I think the first clause where it says, "except as otherwise provided in this constitution," I think that you will find that the information I have is that the recommendations and proposals of the Committee on Local and Parochial Government will make provisions, there in.

It is not the intention of this to apply to other than state appointed and elected officials.

Mr. Gravel Just as a matter of clarity, you would agree that unless something else is done elsewhere in the constitution, that this provision including with your amendment, would apply to all public officials regardless of the grade or classification.

Mr. Drew Not unless you ignore the first clause, Mr. Gravel. I don't know exactly what order these other proposals are going to contain. But I think...

Mr. Gravel I don't either, and that's...

Mr. Drew I think if the home rule that I understand is in there, then there will be... this clause will take care of your local officials, they would not be included.

Frankly, I think that the whole problem with this section is the proper definition of public officials.

19th Days Proceedings—July 25, 1973

Mr. Gravel My problem, too. Thank you very much.

Mr. Drew I don't know, I had inquired, in answer to your question, from Judge Tate, if possibly a separate section was made to provide the definitions...we've run across this on several occasions, or if it could be handled in scheduling, or what would be the proper way of handling it.

But I think that the intent, and I think that will be important, the intent of this is to clarify what it already says. The last sentence says, "whether elected or appointed."

So this is to clarify that we are speaking of elected or appointed.

Mr. Gravel And until there is some other provision in the constitution to modify that, would apply to every elected or appointed public official...

Mr. Drew If there is no provision for local officials, it would apply.

If there is a provision, it absolutely would not apply.

Mr. Gravel Well, the provision with respect to local government would not apply to appointed state officials, would it?

Mr. Drew No, sir, of course.

If there are no other questions, Mr. Chairman, I move for adoption of the amendments.

Mr. Flory Mr. Drew, is it your intention by the amendment to add the word "appointed" in the upper part of the sub-section to include among the people that the legislature shall set their salary?... Those eleven thousand employees in this state are non-classified, many of whom are common laborers?

Mr. Drew Absolutely not, Mr. Flory, and I do not think under any interpretation they would be included as public officials.

If there are no other questions I move for adoption of the amendment, Mr. Chairman.

Further Discussion

Mr. Alario Mr. Chairman, members of the convention, I stand to support the Drew and Lamber amendment as it is drawn. I think he has a very good amendment here to serve, to take care of abuses that we have seen even as recently as two weeks ago.

During the last year, we saw a raise given to the college presidents of this state that amounted to some eight thousand dollars apiece.

We saw recently a four thousand dollar increase granted to the Director of Corrections and we saw just recently a ninety-seven hundred dollar raise, ninety-seven hundred dollar raise granted to the director of the health agency.

Question

Mr. Drew Is that per year or per month, Mr. Alario?

Mr. Alario These various boards and agencies have been granting these increases without worrying once where these funds are coming from. They come before the Budget Committee, before the Appropriations and Senate Finance Committees and tell us that their budgets are tight, they need additional funds to run their agencies. Just as soon as their budgets are approved, the first thing we see come out, and particularly in these three instances I am talking about, they find in there all of a sudden in the 101 category we call it in the budget, the salaries category, that they do have a little slack now to provide an increase for the top echelon employees.

Eight thousand dollars for college presidents, ninety-seven hundred dollars for the directors of the other agencies. I wonder, I wonder what the employee and the common laborer working for this state who makes three hundred and fifty dollars to four hundred dollars a month must think when we tell him we can't give him an increase. But all of a sudden these boards and commissions find enough to give the top man an increase.

I wonder what the school teachers of this state must think when we tell them we can't give them, we can't give them a 3.3 percent increase in salary. But we can grant a ninety-seven hundred dollar raise for one employee.

I think Mr. Drew has an excellent amendment here and I would ask that you support it.

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Mr. Fayard and Mr. Juneau send up amendments at this time.

Amendment No. 1, on page 6, strike out lines 16 and 17 in their entirety and insert in lieu, thereof, the following:

"Section 11. Salaries of legislators and other public officials; change

Section 11A. The members of the legislature shall be paid an annual salary and such expense allowances as may be fixed by the legislature. And the salaries so paid shall be in lieu of all per diem.

B Except as otherwise provided in this constitution or portion of the word "constitu-

Amendment No. 2, on page 6, at the beginning of line 19, delete the word "two-thirds" and insert in lieu thereof "majority." Page 6 beginning of line 19 delete "two-thirds" and insert "majority."

Explanation

Mr. Juneau Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I won't go into great length. We discussed this matter at some detail the other day. I think there was a lot of confusion concerning the mechanics. There were three or four provisions tied together, and I thought the matter was of such importance that we should isolate the specific issue at hand and vote, thereon, more specifically.

What this provision would do, would mandate that the members of the legislature would be paid an annual salary as opposed to what you may have now in the system of per diem.

The argument was made during the deliberations of the other system that will some legislators do more work than others? And for that reason maybe there ought to be a distinction.

Well, in answer to that comment I might tell you that I think that what I am seeking to do is achieve equality in the legislative body and preclude per diem clubs in the legislature which I submit we have had for several years.

I think if a person runs for the legislature, his salary is fixed, he should be content if he has the ability to be chairman of a committee that the salary should be commensurate with his ability and he should be satisfied in that regard.

I think that what it will do, will preclude the possibility of perpetuating what we now have in the per diem systems. I think by putting these two articles together, we eliminate the possibility which...the objections were raised the other day with regard to per diem.

This specifically states that there shall be no per diem and to the contrary, they should be paid solely on the basis of an annual salary and such other expense allowances as are deemed necessary by the legislature.

That succinctly is what the issue is. I think it's of vital importance. I might add that most of the state constitutions which have been enacted recently have found this to be a necessary thing in the constitution.

I would move for its favorable adoption, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Juneau, Mr. Lantz Womack brought up a very important point a while ago concerning the expenses of legislators who live far distant as from Baton Rouge. Does your amendment provide for extra expenses for these people who necessarily have to incur extra expenses in the representation of their people?

Mr. Juneau It certainly does, Mr. Anzalone.

Mr. Landry Mr. Juneau, you used an expression that I would like to have some clarity on. You said per diem clubs. I need an amplification of what that means.

Mr. Juneau I would define that word being, and this is not directed to any one individual, Mr. Landry, it has shown through the history of the past twenty or thirty years of the legislature that perennially there are a certain select group of the legislature that are in this high per diem category and it's the same ones every year, every year, every year. It seems to be that it's hard to break that trend, of who are the chairmen of the respective committees.

And because of that system, I call it a club for lack of a better word, I guess it would be more appropriately put, certain select individuals in this state legislature have received substantially more per diem than have other legislators.

And I don't necessarily attribute that, I might add, Mr. Landry, to the fact that some legislators are more capable and work harder than others. I say that the opportunity at the time was probably more of a reason.

Mr. Chatelain Delegate Juneau, as I appreciate this, you are going to pay the respective legislators an annual salary. Right?

Mr. Juneau That is correct, sir.

Mr. Chatelain And that salary shall include the per diem. In other words what we know as per diem today would be in the form of a salary.

Mr. Juneau That is correct, sir.

Mr. Chatelain All right, if a legislator is appointed to numerous committees, the committee work would not come into play, is that right? He would not get paid any more for committee work.

Mr. Juneau He might get an expense allowance, but, for example travel, Mr. Chatelain, but he would not get a per diem for attending that particular committee hearing. That is right, sir.

Mr. Chatelain In other words what you are saying here is that we are going to go to an annual salary for the legislature, is that right sir?

Mr. Juneau That's absolutely correct, sir.

Mr. Gravel Mr. Juneau, wouldn't a consequence of this amendment be that if a legislator spends a hundred additional days in the service of the state, that he would be paid exactly the same amount as the legislator who didn't perform any additional work by way of committee assignments and things of that nature?

Mr. Juneau That's correct, Mr. Gravel, by the same token I think it will encourage a disbursement of committee assignments and chairmanships in the legislature.

Mr. Gravel But all committees that might... don't have the same amount of work to do or the same burdens and same tasks to perform. Isn't this basically a rather unfair provision in that it is going to overly compensate the lazy legislator and under compensate the legislator that's willing to dedicate a substantial amount of his time to public service?

Mr. Juneau Mr. Gravel, if that would be a correct theory, it would apply to the United States Congress and that has not turned out to be the case.

Mr. Gravel The United States Congress, though is in convoluted session at all times.

Mr. Juneau We are a continuous body...

Mr. Gravel Well, that's not the same thing and you know that, don't you?

What I am saying is this, as a matter of fact isn't it true that under what you propose, that no matter what he does, a legislator is going to be compensated just exactly as much as every other legislator and that one legislator can be working every day in the service of the state, another legislator might not be doing anything in the service of the state and they are both going to be paid the same amount of money?

Mr. Juneau I would answer the question by saying this. A legislator, for one reason or the other who may not be favored with a committee appointment who may be doing work at home, in my opinion is equally entitled to compensation as someone who is attending a committee hearing here in Baton Rouge.

Mr. Planchard My question is this. As presently this section stands, it is my understanding that the legislature presently can do the very things that you are saying for them to do here. In addition, they can pay themselves on a per diem basis. Is that correct?

Mr. Juneau That's right, sir, and I submit to you the chances of that occurring are a thousand to one if we don't put it in this constitution.

Mr. Planchard My next question is, in your amendment, is there any provision for these other public officials who have staggered terms to be taken care of?

Mr. Juneau I am not sure I understand the question, Mr. Planchard...

Mr. Planchard To be able to increase or decrease the salary.

Mr. Juneau This would apply equally to both. The provision is that it now addresses itself to an annual salary. It does not change that.

Further Discussion

Mr. Roy Mr. Acting Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, looks like once again we are back on that merry-go-round about not trusting the legislature and what have you.

I understand what Mr. Juneau and them are trying to do and I am against it. I do not believe... let me say this. If you are going to allow the legislature to fix an annual salary and freeze it into the constitution, then you are going to accomplish exactly what I think Mr. Gravel was pointing out. Those guys who are going to work hard and have to be down here or anybody who looks to the future and has to be away from his business and be down here a lot on committee assignments, are going to have to take care of an extremely high salary just to take care of the fact that they may be losing on a per diem basis a lot of money that they actually need.

Now, it's no comparison to say that we can compare to the United States Congress because those fellows make forty-two thousand dollars a year. So there is no problem with them.

Mr. Poynter And they get another quarter of a million for expenses, Mr. Roy.

Mr. Roy I didn't know that, and plus they get all other kinds of fringe benefits.

This amendment, in my opinion, if we pass it, is going to allow mediocre, lazy legislators, if there are any, to make just as much as the person who sacrifices and comes down here because the person who comes down here will have to do it out of his own pocket. He makes the same amount every month as the guy who is sitting home.

However, he does not get anything other than an expense allowance which may be his mileage down here. But if he's down here ten days a month out of each month of the year,...

Questions

19th Days Proceedings—July 25, 1973

Mr. Tapper Mr. Roy, question number 1, I think you infer that they would be putting this in the constitution...the salary in the constitution. Now that isn't what you meant to imply, was it?

Mr. Roy No, I'm opposed to saying that we have to put...I'm opposed to making the legislature say that they are paying themselves a salary. I think we have all along said that we want an independent legislature. We trust and let them handle things the way they want to, and I don't think a salary is a constitutional thing that should be fixed on the legislature.

Mr. Tapper But you didn't mean to imply...you did not mean to imply that the salary would be in the constitution, only the requirement that there be a salary in the constitution.

Mr. Roy Yes, yes, they can do what they choose, Mr. Tapper.

Mr. Tapper The second question is...You said something about mediocre legislators. Now, you know, who is to determine whether a legislator is mediocre or not? Is it not those people who elect him or whom he represents?

And the reason I ask that question is that I am...did you know that I am for a set salary and not for all of the per diem and not for the so-called clubs, or what have, which I don't think they have those. But I don't understand who could determine whether a legislator is mediocre or not. I think it would have to be his people.

Don't you think we should have them all equal?

Mr. Roy I didn't mean to imply that as poor usage. But what I meant to imply was that the fellow who works a lot harder and because of his committee appointment has got to be down here ten days a month more than somebody else makes no more money. In other words, he's got to...he got to...unless the salary is fixed high enough, he is going to be reluctant to devote the time that maybe he should do. That's all I meant.

Mr. Tapper But did you not know...

Mr. Derbes Mr. Roy, how do you answer the charge, I'll choose my words carefully, how do you answer the charge that under this provision, and I think it has a considerable amount of merit, under this provision the committee work of the legislature will tend to be allocated among those who were perhaps not as confident as those among whom the work would be allocated under the present system?

Do you understand what I mean? Which is to say...

I'm trying to re...

Mr. Roy I don't understand what you mean, I'll tell you that...

Mr. Derbes Well, what I'm saying is I would think that those who are more experienced and more successful in private life would tend to be less attracted to committee work under the amendment than they would be under the present system.

Mr. Roy Well what was that?...Well, so what?

It means to me that you would maybe have a bunch of less experienced and intelligent people down here when you should have someone more intelligent doing it. That's what it means to me.

Mr. Derbes No, no...Did I make my question clear, Mr. Roy? That, which is to say, it seems to me that under the amendment, those people who will be attracted to committee work will tend to be those who are not as...I should say...not as well compensated from their private life activities as those who might be otherwise.

And in this basic economy, those who tend to be more competent are those who tend to be more successful.

Mr. Roy I understand your question. But my point is that I think we should have the best men serving us at the best possible times we can have them. And your point seems to obviate that occurring.

Further Discussion

Mr. Burns Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I made a pledge over the weekend to myself that I was going to try to shorten this convention proceedings and getting along with the work by not getting up here unless I thought, perhaps I would have something to add to the question before the convention.

It seems to me that when this question of legislator...compensation was up last week that we discussed and rediscussed and argued and debated every possible angle or facet of it. And here we are, it looks like to me, getting the machinery under way to get back into exactly the same thing that we voted on last week.

Now I, personally, I can't go along with the proposition of a flat salary for every legislator. It's already been brought out very clearly that there are certain committees that the legislature sets up and which apparently are needed in the legislative process. Now the question seems to be advanced by one of the delegates that he was not so much against that system of the per diem pay for those members who had to come up there and put in extra time, but he was against the policy or the tradition of it being the same members all the time. Well, that is no concern of this constitutional convention. It's the question of whether those men are necessary in the state government and whether they are doing the job to which they are assigned.

And I think that if we are going to have those committees, I think they are definitely entitled to more pay than those members of the legislature who when the session adjourns, they go on home and don't come back down here until the following two years or one year as the case may be. It has been said and told to you that they thought those particular men, perhaps, should be entitled to their expenses.

But what about the time they are away from their jobs? What about the days they are away from their work? There is no compensation under this amendment to provide for that. And I respectfully submit, members of the convention who have considered this, I thought, very thoroughly, and I don't think this is a fair method of compensating legislators and I ask defeat of the amendment.

Questions

Mrs. Warren Mr. Burns, what I would really like to know how our legislators are appointed or are assigned to committees.

Mr. Burns Not being a member of the legislature any more, I couldn't answer that question.

Mrs. Warren This is why I wanted to ask anybody that knew then...Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Wall Wait just a minute Mrs. Warren. You have asked Mr. Burns a question. He didn't answer it.

Mrs. Warren I want anybody...

Mr. Wall Now you are recognized to ask the question that you ask. I'll answer it for you.

Mrs. Warren That's exactly what I'm getting ready to do is ask you.

Mr. Wall All right, in most all cases, there's a few exceptions, members are appointed to committees by the speaker or by the lieutenant governor, and of course it was changed in the last session to some extent, but sometimes as acts, or resolutions or rules that say certain people of a certain position serve on certain committees like the speaker or the chairman of the appropriations committee, and so forth.

But in most instances, the presiding officer appoints the gentlemen to the committees or (4484) whichever one it may be.

Mr. Warren May I ask you another question?

Mr. Wall Yes, Mrs. Warren.

Mrs. Warren How are they appointed? According to their qualifications or something set up or some political appointment?

Mr. Wall Mrs. Warren, I am not the presiding officer and I can't answer for this gentleman and I rule that question out of order. But I would, in my opinion...

Mrs. Warren Mr. Chairman, I'm a little naive, but I don't accept that. Now I asked you a question. If you couldn't answer it, then you should refer me to the staff or either to the chairman. Thank you very much.

Mr. Wall You are welcome, Mrs. Warren, and I am sure everyone else is glad that you have finished.

Further Discussion

Mr. Alario Mr. Chairman, members of the convention, I stand to oppose this amendment and ask that you defer it. I think what the intention here and what they are trying to do is that the legislature would get a salary and set it high enough to take care of committee meetings.

I submit to you that when the legislature is going to be faced with that problem, that it is not going to be politically feasible for us to raise our salaries any higher than what they are now. All of us are going to do is to be eliminating the per diem.

Now I wonder if it is fair and would it prevent a man who is paid by the hour on the job, and the only time he gets paid is when he works, of being a member of a committee or even being a member of the legislature if you tell him he's got to serve a committee and he'll take care of... and it says such expense allowances, I take that to mean that you would take care of his hotel bill and maybe an allowance for meals and possibly travel allowance, I would take it.

But I wonder if you have taken care of the expense that he loses in income to his family in trying to meet their needs by saying that you shall come down to a meeting now and you will get no pay on your job at home, and you will come down to Baton Rouge and receive no pay to compensate you for that.

I think that would be grossly unfair, and I think we would be allowing and opening the door for only the wealthy and the rich to serve in the legislature. I think that is a serious mistake.

I think all people in this state ought to have an opportunity to serve and it ought to be limited to only those who have financial means to do so.

There has been an argument in some other section that would... the argument there, too, was that when we had split sessions a person could go home and take care of his constituents, how they could inform him as to how he stands, how they feel on particular bills and the intent there was partially that a person would be more at home with his constituents.

Now if you don't compensate members to serve on committees, I submit to you that that particular legislator may find himself in such a financial bind that he will not be able to come down to this legislature to serve on a committee to take care of the state's business, not necessarily the business of his district, but at the same time he would probably be neglected because he would be home with his family and living with them.

I think that argument if he doesn't come to Baton Rouge and serve in a committee, then his proposals will run away, and we will not have an argument. We will come the whole year and be with my people and be popular enough to come back. I don't see any other argument either.

I would ask that you defeat this amendment.

Mr. Wall Mrs. Tapper, do you mind standing the floor a minute for Mrs. Taylor for personal privilege?

Mr. Tapper Not at all.

Personal Privilege

Mr. Taylor Mr. Acting Chairman and delegates, I am a little disturbed at the actions of the acting chairman. I certainly believe that any delegate has the right to raise the questions he or she so desires. I do not feel it was proper, Mr. Acting Chairman, for your comments before Mrs. Warren took her seat, or in reference to, everybody would be glad when she had finished her question. I for one, wasn't glad when she finished, because I was concerned about the question she was asking. And Mr. Acting Chairman, I would hope in the future that any personal remarks, that you would keep them to yourself and not project them to this convention.

Mr. Wall Thank you, Mrs. Taylor.

I did make any remarks that hurt anyone's feelings. I apologize, but I feel like there were some personal remarks made and I answered them. I'll save my personal remarks for personal privilege in the future.

Mr. Tapper has the floor.

Further Discussion

Mr. Tapper Ladies and gentlemen, I rise in support of this amendment, and I will give you several reasons. I do not subscribe to the theory that only the best qualified and only those who know more about government and those who can do best about government are necessarily the ones that serve and the ones that are appointed to the committee. Nor do I believe that those that are on the committees and those who serve on more than one committee are any less qualified than those that are not on the committee. But I believe that you would make for a better legislature if all of your legislators were paid an equal salary and if all were required to perform the duties and responsibilities. This can be done. Of course, some men can't do two or three or more on his duty. But if he has enough guption to run and get elected by the people of this district, he should be able to receive the same compensation as anyone from any other district. Now if he doesn't do the job, here we're looking at this from a different, and I think a wrong approach in some instances. We're looking at it, some of us are looking at it, I think, from the wrong position. This is a position not of the state as a whole, but of that particular district from which this particular legislator runs and represents. If he does not do the job, if he does not earn his money, then those people are the ones to get rid of him. Now let me tell you something else about what Mr. Alario says, you know, about staying home; some of them staying home and not coming to Baton Rouge to sit on these committees. Well a lot of them come to Baton Rouge and sit on the committees and accomplish exactly nothing. The report is made and the report may not have anything good in it, but if it has something good in it, it may not be adopted by the legislature. But the man who stays at home also works. You not only have to work in Baton Rouge, I know more of my problems are solved and handled and brought up to me at home than here in the state capitol. And it isn't only here. Ninety percent of the work of a legislator, I believe, is with his people. Finding out what they need and attempting to solve it, the only way to do the best that he can. He doesn't have to be in Baton Rouge to do that. He may have to come every now and then to do that, but he doesn't have to serve on all these committees. But we would have, and I think we're going to have, according to the proposals, is with his people. Finding out what they need and everybody will be put on the committees in an equal fashion. I hope that's the way it will be, because I don't think that any legislator is needed, and if there is one, I don't believe that any one of us is qualified to say who is and who is not

19th Days Proceedings—July 25, 1973

I urge your adoption of this amendment.

Questions

Mr. Abraham Elmer, I support your position on this. Do you see anything in here that prevents the legislature from reimbursing members for actual expenses for committee meetings?

Mr. Tapper Nothing whatsoever. As a matter of fact, there's a specific provision which provides for that.

Mr. Abraham Right. Now, don't you think that an annual salary would assure, or would not necessarily assure, but would tend to promote all of the members serving equitably on committees?

Mr. Tapper I think that would be so because then there wouldn't be any one member who would want to serve on more committees than another member because he won't be wanting to do more work than the other fellow.

Mr. Abraham Right. Now one other question. Don't you think that by being paid an annual salary that this would encourage people of lesser means to run for the legislature and to be members of the legislature rather than people who have, who are well off being in the legislature? Knowing they will be able to get an annual salary and can be reimbursed...

Mr. Tapper There's no question about that Mack. Right now a person who is working from day to day, week to week on an hourly wage, unless he's working for a company that will allow him to come up here and continue to pay him, he can't afford to do it.

Mr. Drew Mr. Tapper, as I recall, under Section 4 E that we adopted, can't the legislature go to annual salary if they see fit, under that provision?

Mr. Tapper I don't have that provision before me. Mr. Drew If you don't know what it says, I'll be glad to agree with you. I don't know that to be a fact, but I don't see where that would be in conflict with this provision either, Mr. Drew.

Mr. Drew Well do you not believe then, Mr. Tapper, that by putting this amendment into the constitution to lock in an annual salary when we find out that it might not work, would be bad?

Mr. Tapper Well, Mr. Drew, we're going to find out that we're locking in a lot of things in this constitution which necessarily in some, in the opinion of the majority of this convention that are necessary to be in there. If those other things turn out to be bad, we'll have a problem with that too. Yes, if it's bad, we'll have a problem with it.

Mr. Drew One more question, Mr. Tapper. If we can do this under 4 E, would you still support the amendment you are now supporting?

Mr. Tapper Yes, because I don't see any conflict in it. I don't know that 4 E will do it, Mr. Drew, and that's the reason for this amendment. I think that 4 E does not spell it out specifically whereas this particular amendment does.

Further Discussion

Mr. Faward Thank you Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates. The reason for this amendment is the fact that 4 E was eliminated from our proposal earlier. I speak in favor of this amendment and co-authored it because I believe that it is one of the best things that this convention could do for the legislature today. I do not distrust the legislature. I had the privilege of serving on the Legislative Powers and Functions Committee with 4 legislators and the terminology that was used here today by some of the legislators such as "stay home," as opposed to those who come here and get the work done such as "part-time legislator," such as "medi-cre" and "quof-offs," and what have you, those terms are unfamiliar to me and my committee, because the legislators that I was associated with proved to me that they could be trusted. They proved to me that they were gentlemen, they proved to me that they were men of the highest integrity and I do not propose to set this amendment because I don't know or because I have anything to say bad against them. I think that the amendment merely puts forth to the public a disclosure of what the public deserves and needs to know. Legislators in this state receive a salary. They receive payment for their services and I submit to you that they receive a certain amount whether they come to Baton Rouge or do not come to Baton Rouge under the present provisions of the law. I've heard an argument to the effect that this is not politically feasible and I would submit that this is probably the prime reason that most legislators oppose this amendment. Because they do not want to vote themselves a raise, they do not want to vote themselves an increase in salary. I can understand their predicament in this, but I believe that most of the legislators in the legislature as composed today, deserve an annual salary. I think this would encourage more legislators to become active and more active in committee meetings and in the sessions themselves. This is one of the prime reasons for this amendment, to mandate the legislature to set a salary; to set a salary for most every other state official in this state and every other public official... Once you get the salary set, then the public would know, the public would know what to expect of their legislators. I think that they deserve to know, and I think the legislators individually deserve to have a salary fixed and know what he can expect to receive for his efforts. I don't hold with the term of part-time legislators. I have not heard one member admit that he served part-time. He receives a monthly expense allowance, to my knowledge, at home. Now if he's sitting home doing nothing, why does he receive this allowance. He receives certain other compensations for secretary and what have you. If he's working part-time, why does he receive that? I would say that the majority of the legislators work more at home than they do while they're here in Baton Rouge. There's a lot more to be done. There are a lot of people to see, they have to get out and study the needs of their particular localities. And when bills are proposed, perhaps under our new concept of 60 days in an 85 day session these bills would be brought to be done, much more study to be put forth prior to making a determination on how the individual legislator would want to vote and how his people back home that he represents would want him to vote. We have a concept here that as far as I am personally concerned, and I think I speak for Mr. Juneau, is that we are proposing sections of our committee which will enhance the work of the legislature. Which will give the legislature more independence. I don't advocate tying the legislature down. I want to put it on an equal branch with the other forms of government, other branches of government, on the equal level with them. I believe that this mandate, however, is something that if you talk to your present Representative or Senator he will privately admit to you that he deserves an annual salary, would like to be compensated by an annual salary, but that it's not popular. Perhaps it's not politically feasible in his eyes. But should the constitution mandate that a salary be set, I think that then through their wisdom they would set a reasonable salary and be satisfied with it. I believe also that the people and the public back home would accept this salary and would vote confidence in their individual legislators because of this reason. Further...

Further Discussion

Mr. Newton I reluctantly rise in opposition to the amendment. I think that today we've seen on both sides of the question, that reasonable and honorable men have differences of opinion. I think that the amendment would lock in an opinion and not leave room for contending forces to operate. And in the same manner that we finally decided to allow the legislature to meet for 60 days during an 85 day period so that the contending philosophies would split sessions and for straight sessions could operate within the political arena. I think that this amendment should be defeated for the same reason. It still allows the ideas to compete and it does not foreclose anybody from urging before the legislature who after all, are responsible to the people, his particular philosophy. I urge defeat of the amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Acting Chairman and fellow delegates, I too kind of had the same thoughts Mr. Burns had, but since I couldn't ask a question, I'm going to make this statement and sit down. I wonder, and I want you to think of this, how many members we would have had since our committees have been meeting under the rules of this constitution, how many members would we have had present if they had only got their gasoline and maybe their meals for being here? I had a pretty hard time getting a quorum with them getting that $50 a day, and I'm afraid that if all they got, is they were working people and had to leave their jobs or leave their businesses with just their gasoline down here and one meal, I'm afraid we might not have had enough in attendance to hold our committee meetings that we've been having.

Vice Chairman Miller in the Chair

Question

Mr. Weiss Senator Rayburn, many years ago I'm sure you remember one of our governors said that Louisiana has the finest legislature money can buy. Do you think that if this were to pass that we'd now have the most expensive legislature that money can buy?

Mr. Rayburn Well, Doctor, I've probably heard more than that said about them since I've been over here, and probably going to hear worse things than what's been said. But that's just something that happens that you have no control over.

Further Discussion

Mr. Jack Madame Chairman and members, I've already expressed myself earlier on this in an earlier section. This doesn't belong in the constitution. The legislature has the right to set a salary, they have the right to set a per diem, they have a right to set an expense account, to hire secretaries, whatever they want. Now, I don't know the motive back of this, but it looks like it's an attempt to get a mandate from this group that they must set a salary. That's their business about setting it. I don't see why we should say in this new constitution, they shall, meaning must set a salary when they already have that right. And they are the ones, if they want a salary, and as I said before, they probably should have one. But they're in a better position to know than a lot of us. I know one thing, this amendment is not going to be fair, in my opinion, to people that do a lot of extra work. It's not going to be fair to people that have to come from the far ends of this state. It would be maybe fine for the people right here. Now those are things that the legislature can work out for themselves. I think a member of the House and Senate should be paid and be paid pretty good because it certainly does interfere with any type of business, and the state's business is the biggest business. But I don't see the logic in this applying it all to them. And I talked before when this very question came up earlier. And we killed it. Then here it comes cropping up again in the section that doesn't even concern it but concerns salaries in general. So I say in closing, we should defeat the amendment just like we said no to the same thing earlier in this same material. I forgot the number of the section. Then the legislature can take it up. In conclusion, they can fix the salary. They can fix their expense fund, they can fix the inequities that would exist under this amendment against people say from north Louisiana. So I say, let them tend to their own business on it. Thank you.

[From the Question Period.]

Closing

Mr. Juneau Madame Chairman, I'll make my remarks very brief. The issue has been adequately discussed. The whole intent of this thing is to make the legislature independent. As I indicated, the sole intent of this thing is to make a more independent legislature and make it where equality can be achieved. Secondly, a good argument in support of this amendment that a salary provision was brought up as recently as the last regular session of the legislature and it was rejected. That's what would occur if you don't adopt this amendment in the future. For that reason, I would move its favorable adoption. Thank you.

PROPOSALS ON SECOND READING AND REFERRAL

[Journal 210]

Mr. Poynter Delegate Proposal No. 17, introduced by Delegate Planchard.
A proposal making provisions for prohibiting lotteries.

Mr. Henry Should be referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.
Under the rules.

Point of Information

Mr. Casey Point of information, Mr. Chairman. What was that proposal that was referred to Revenue and Taxation?

Mr. Henry Had to do with lotteries, sir.

Mr. Casey Was there not a resolution referred to the Legislative Committee last week on lotteries?

Mr. Henry I believe that you are correct, Mr. Casey, but we make the determinations based on what the rules provide and under the rules I think it should be referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation and then of course, if you object, you can make a motion to the contrary.

Mr. Casey Well is the resolution the same as the one that was referred to the Legislative Committee last week?

Mr. Henry It is probably basically the same. It is not the identically same resolution to my knowledge.

Mr. Casey Well, is it more of a revenue matter this week than it was last week?

Mr. Henry Well, last week it was a totally and completely revenue matter insofar as I interpret the rules, Mr. Casey, and that is why the chair rules that it should be under the rules referred to Revenue and Taxation. But this body in its wisdom determined otherwise that should be referred to the Committee on the Legislative Powers and Duties.

Now if the delegates are of the same matter today then you might make such a motion. But under the rules I am required to refer it to Revenue and Taxation.

Mr. Casey And is the author the same on this resolution?

Mr. Henry No, sir. It is a different author.

A different author and a different resolution.
Mr. Casey.

[Motion to refer to the Legislative Committee.]

Further Discussion

Mr. Smith Mr. Chairman, gentlemen of the convention, this came up in our committee sometime ago and I think it was killed about twelve to three. I don't see any reason to send it back there again so I think it ought to go into another committee. Cause we know what is going to happen to it in Revenue and Finance and Taxation to which I am on. So I am objecting for it to go back in the same committee and get killed again. I don't know what the contents of the amendment is but I feel like it ought to have a chance somewhere else.

Further Discussion

Mr. Burns Mr. Chairman, and fellow delegates, I was the author of the other proposal that was referred to the Legislative Committee.

I understand that Mr. Planchard is author of this proposal. And I want to say at this time that my motive in introducing this resolution or this proposal was not based on any moral question not from the standpoint of a reformer but I just took the position and I still had to take the position if this convention doesn't retain the lottery article in it we just as well pack up and go home.

Further Discussion

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman, and delegates, the only comment I have in connection with the committee referral of this matter is that I feel at this time the convention should be consistent and that is the only point I am making at this time. A proposal was introduced last week and referred to the Legislative Committee. That subject matter was assigned to the Legislative Committee by the Coordinating Committee. Now if there has never been any hearing on the proposal introduced last week and I would submit to you that if the author of last week's proposal or this week's proposal feels unhappy about the results of a hearing that he or she might receive in the Legislative Committee. Then at that time I think it might be appropriate for him or her to introduce a new proposal and hope to be going to permit this, new proposals, new resolutions, every week to be introduced and hope to refer them to different committees in the hope of getting a more favorable report then we don't even know what the Legislative Committee will report, I think we will be doing a disservice to this convention.
I urge you only at this time to be consistent.

Further Discussion

Mr. Planchard Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I proposed this proposal under delegate proposals. I wanted to propose it before it was too late. There is quite a difference in my proposal and the proposal which has been set up and referred to the Legislative Committee so far. I directed my proposal from one thing and one thing aloud, and that is to lottery as a form of finance in state government. I think it is the proper committee to consider it as being Revenue and Taxation. I have not mixed it in with a question of gambling nor dealing on that matter. I specifically cut that out because I don't think that this is one of the matters that the Revenue and Taxation Section should consider. But I do think it is very important for this convention that we do consider the question of lottery. Whether we feel that it is a proper way of financing state government. If we feel that it is or that we should leave it out then let us do so. But I do think that we would be making a grave mistake if we keep the other proposal as it has been presented all lumped into one. And that is why I tried to divide the issue to make it plain and clear to all of us. And I think we should have some stand on it.

20th Days Proceedings—July 26, 1973

Thank you.

Questions

Mr. Jack I'm going to ask this question. I didn't get to hear at the beginning and I asked about fifteen people around here and none of them know exactly what your proposal is for, or against the lottery. That is question No. 1?

Mr. Planchard My proposal is the delegate proposal pertaining to the lotteries, period. And it reads simply this.

Neither the state nor any of its public subdivisions shall conduct a lottery. That is the whole question. I think we are referring to a matter of revenues in state government and a matter of finance.

Mr. Jack What is the situation regarding a corporation?

Mr. Planchard I am sorry, I didn't understand the question.

Mr. Jack You say neither a state or a subdivision can have a lottery. I am against lotteries. I don't mind telling you. But don't you think it ought to include anybody else? Is there some gimmick here, somebody else can have a big ole state wide lottery

Mr. Planchard You are speaking of private lotteries.

Mr. Jack Yes, sir.

Mr. Planchard If you feel that this should be in the constitution then I say amend it. I think that I am referring only to the state financing in the subdivisions.

Mr. Jack All right, ok.

Now, has a bill been killed regarding lotteries one way or the other in any committee?

Mr. Planchard As I understand this amendment....

Point of Order

Mr. Dennis Point of order, Mr. Chairman.

Are we debating the merits of this proposal at this time?

Mr. Henry Whenever you are on referral of proposals or bills or resolutions, whatever the case might be, it opens the main question to debate. Yes, sir.

Questions

Mr. Jack This one please. Which committee do you want yours to go to?

Mr. Planchard I simply want it to go to the Revenue and Taxation Committee because I think that is the proper place for it.

Mr. Jack All right, I am with you. I wanted to straighten that out I had asked fifteen people and they didn't know.

Point of Information

Mr. Flory Mr. Chairman, I am at a loss to understand what they are talking about and I appreciate what Mr. Planchard has said that his proposal produces revenue to the state, does the one that has been introduced prior to this, prohibit lotteries?

Mr. Henry It is my appreciation that the regulation or proposal introduced last week by Mr. Burnham had something to do with either allowing or prohibiting lotteries in the state. I am not sure what it was but it had something to do in our opinion here with raising revenues or providing revenue. I was of the opinion that it should be referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation. The convention decided otherwise and it was referred to another committee. It is my appreciation of the resolution introduced here today. It does the same thing but there has been a motion to the contrary and of course this body will have to decide.

Mr. Flory Further point.

Mr. Chairman, you said the convention decided to put it in another committee. I understood you to say earlier that the Coordinating Committee did that.

Mr. Henry No sir, I never mentioned the Coordinating Committee this afternoon.

Mr. Flory But isn't it possible that we could take the one in Legislature now and put it in Revenue and Taxation.

Mr. Henry When it is possible, yes, sir. There is a mechanic way this could be done in convention.

Further Discussion

Mr. Smith Mr. Chairman, I made the opposition to sending this to Revenue, Finance and Taxation. I didn't understand what the subject matter is but Mr. Planchard is on that committee and so am I. Now knowing what its contents are, I withdraw my objection.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS

PROPOSALS IN THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

Mr. Poynter Committee Proposal No. 2, introduced by Delegate Blair, Chairman in behalf of the committee on Legislative Powers and Functions.

A proposal making provisions for legislative branch of government, impeachment and removal of officials and necessary provisions with respect thereto. The status of the proposal at this state is in the convention has adopted, as amended Sections 1 through 10 of the proposal, presently under consideration in Section 11 of the proposal at this particular time with further pending amendments at the desk.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment proposed by Delegate A self to Committee Proposal No. 3.

Amendment the reprinted proposal.

Amendment No. 1. On page 6 strike out lines 16 through 21 in their entirety.

Explanation

Mr. Ayeroff Mr. Chairman, delegates, I have heard the following arguments relative to the legislature which one delegates state: they are asking to who is preventing the motion or amendment. Have great faith in the legislature. Try not to live the hands, future generations, yet unborn. Avoid statutory details. We must have a short constitution. Frankly, I am not particularly impressed by the above, for in my opinion it is what is included and was left out that is important, and whether we have protected the rights of the people. We can have a short constitution which is not basic and does not protect the rights of the people and a long one which does the same thing.

However this is a democracy, and the majority rules. We permit the majority to impose the death penalty, make parole impossible and the like and you many do not wish to give the right to determine salaries by majority vote. I am quite willing in a few cases as for tax increases for example to require a two-thirds vote. Otherwise, the majority rules. There is no need to include this provision in the constitution for the legislature has full authority to act. For its actions, the legislature must account to the people. The people elected them and if the people are not happy, they can defeat them. If the people are indifferent they will have to pay the penalty for them. Though I do favor a limitation, I will not vote to shackle the legislature. If I am in the legislature and a salary for legislators is proposed, I will oppose it. And if it is adopted, I will not accept. Nevertheless, the question of determining salaries must lie with the legislature by majority vote. For in electing the members the sovereign people have spoken and the fact that I disagree is immaterial. It does not make sense to me, to permit the legislature by majority vote to take away a man's life and yet not permit it to set salaries by that same vote. So many seem to think that good structure will bring good government to Louisiana. Though structure is important, alone it will not bring good government. Good government depends in large measure upon those we elect and appoint to office for they will adopt the laws, interpret them and apply them. And the choice lies with the people. And I appeal that it is the duty of the legislature to determine the salaries of all public officials. And for what it does we must face the election at the next election. That is the democratic process, it can do that if these lines are eliminated. I therefore urge you to eliminate lines 16 through 22 on page 6. And leave the matter of salaries to the discretion of the legislature. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, delegates.

Further Discussion

Mr. Burson I speak in support of Dr. Asseff's amendment for the very reasons that we have had a similar provision to this Section 11 in our constitution since 1921 and as far as I am aware, it has never prevented the legislature from raising the salaries of its public officials when it wanted to. I think it's a vain and useless provision. Moreover in accordance with the arguments advanced by Dr. Asseff, if we really believe the majority rules then at some point our per diem is going to have to start adhering to it in the constitutional provisions that we adopt. It is one thing to say and I would agree with those that hold this position and with regard to the passage of taxes, our history would dictate an extraordinary majority as being required. But really raising the salary of appointed and elected public officials it seems to me is a day to day [...] business with the legislature. And it strikes me as in Congress entirely that you would require a two-thirds majority for this. The provision that has been proposed here is subject to the additional objection as was pointed out by many of the speakers yesterday that the term appointed and elected public officials or appointed and elected public officers is a vague and ambiguous term and it is susceptible to the meaning that it could apply to local public officials right down to the garbage collectors. And I don't think that anyone in the wildest stretch of the imagination would want to require the legislature to approve salary increases for such public officials down to the lowest local level. Therefore, for these reasons I urge the adoption of Dr. Asseff's amendment. Let's make the constitution brief by eliminating this useless order.

Further Discussion

Mr. Roy Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I just want to point out a couple of things. I completely agree with Dr. Asseff and of course with Jack Burson. I don't understand how we can take a man's life away with a majority vote, but the legislature can't raise the salaries. But I want to address myself to one other thing that I think that has not been brought up. We have to admit that as a matter of fact fourteen Senators may kill any salary raise. Now that is fourteen people out of a total body of 139 which means that you could have a unanimous vote by 105 members of the House of Representatives to vote a certain way to raise salaries. You could have twenty-five Senators vote not yet taken up, but fourteen of that 139 man body could kill it. If you want to divide fourteen by 144 members. Excuse me, 144 members in all, you come out with 9.7 percent of a legislature. Those of the House and the Senate may kill or defeat what 93% may vote for. That is not 66 2/3rds versus 1/3. It is my opinion a super minority and I don't believe in it. Under the democratic rule a majority votes. I urge you to accept this amendment.

Questions

Mr. Denberry Mr. Roy, are you aware that there are certain other proposals before the body which we have not yet taken up?

There are provisions which prohibit the reduction of salaries during a term of office. Are you aware, if there are any?

Mr. Roy Yes, I am aware of that.

Mr. Denberry Well do you know in which sections those are?

In other words, if you delete this phrase you also delete the requirement of that of the prohibition against reducing of a salary during a term of office. Now I am sure that was not intentional of Dr. Asseff. If you remove the entire article it would have that effect and I ask you if you have considered that possibly. I do certainly think you would agree, would you not, that it would be unfair to reduce an elected official's salary during his term of office.

Mr. Roy I was of the opinion, I understand what you are asking me Mr. Denberry and if it is, am I opposed to the reduction of salaries, I certainly am. I was of the opinion though that in their provisions of the constitution dealing with specific officeholders that there is a provision that their salaries may not be reduced in a term of office. These constitutional officers. If I am wrong about it, I certainly would like to see that protected.

Mr. Denberry Well I think the proposal by the Executive Committee provides that for elected officials, not for appointed officials. And I am not sure what the Judicial Article does.

Mr. Roy I don't know if either one of us has really answered the question. It was of the opinion that Dr. Asseff's proposition... amendment merely said that we leave it up to the legislature by majority vote to do these things and we take it out of the constitution and that is what I am for.

Mr. Denberry So you are for no prohibition in the constitution against the reduction of salaries.

Mr. Roy No, no. I am for no prohibition in the constitution mandating a two-thirds vote to increase salaries. Because it is not two-thirds versus one-third it is 93 in a certain case versus 7.3.

Further Discussion

Mr. Keam Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise to pursue the point which Mr. Denberry was making when he questioned Mr. Roy. The effect of the Asseff amendment would be to completely delete this entire Section which would then permit the legislature to reduce the salaries of the public officials during their term of office. And I say to the members of this convention that if we do that, that we can lead to the grossest kind of abuse, with respect to the salary of public officers at the mercy of a simple majority of the legislature. I have no objection to giving the legislature by majority vote the right to fix that but when you come to the point of permitting the legislature during a term of office to reduce salaries by a simple majority, I think we go too far. And I ask that you reject the Asseff amendment and if we want to come back and redo this section so as to make it applicable only to the reduction of the salary during the term of office, then do it, but not take that part out of the constitution where it has to be if we are to provide a first choice against reduction.

Questions

Mr. Arnette Mr. Kean, if this particular amendment is adopted, do you foresee the situation that an appointed or even an elected official such as the attorney general for instance could have his salary reduced to $1.00 a year?

Mr. Kean Yes, I certainly do.

Mr. Arnette And this would in effect make him resign his position if he was not financially independent, is that true also?

Mr. Kean That is correct.

Mr. Arnette So in effect you are letting one majority of the legislature actually impeach say, the attorney general or the secretary of state or anybody else that is appointed, is that correct?

Mr. Kean As I appreciate the amendment, and this article previously made for this section, it applies to all public officials appointed or elected. Under those circumstances the legislature by simply a majority could reduce his salary to nothing.

Mr. Burson Mr. Kean, I understand your concern, but don't you think the proper place for such a prohibition would be in the case of executive officials or administrative officials in the executive article and in the case of local governmental officials in the local governmental article as I believe Section 13 of the local governmental article that we have proposed and submitted which you and I served on would provide that the salaries of all local governmental officials shall not be reduced during the terms to which they are elected.

Mr. Kean I think you can beat the problem partially by including it in various articles but I don't know that you would cover all elected and appointed officials in that process. It seems to me that a general prohibition against the reduction of salaries during the term of office ought to be included in the constitution. For that reason I suggest that you reject Dr. Asseff's amendment and then come back and redo this section to leave that prohibition in the constitution.

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Kean, am I correct in assuming or thinking that the federal constitution only provides a restriction against the reduction of the salaries of the judges?

Mr. Kean I don't really know whether that is correct, Mr. Anzalone but even if the federal constitution did this, it would contain federal limited restrictions. I think the history of this state would indicate that it would be to our advantage to have this prohibition in the constitution applicable to all of our public officers.

Mr. Anzalone Do you have any thoughts concerning the constitutionality of the legislature picking one particular official out and reducing his salary to zero?

Mr. Kean If there is no prohibition against it, I know of no constitutional issues that would prevent it from being won.

Further Discussion

Mr. Newton I have drawn an amendment which is being printed right now that would put back in a separate Section 11 the prohibition against the reduction of salaries of appointed or elected officials during the term of office. So I urge the passage of the Asseff amendment.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [By Mr. Newton and Mr. Asseff], on page 6 delete line 17 through 22, both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof, the following:

"Section 11, the compensation of appointed or elected public officers shall not be reduced during the term for which they are elected or appointed."

Explanation

Mr. Newton I think we have had a sufficient discussion. This would in effect accomplish the purpose of the Asseff amendment by allowing the legislature to set its own compensation and the compensation of public officials, and at the same time require that the compensation of elected or appointed public officials cannot be reduced during their term of office.

Questions

Mr. Duval Mr. Newton, I think you have a real good amendment. Only one thing I would suggest a technical amendment perhaps in the title, "Section 11, Salaries of Public Officers:" to put a semi-colon in reduction rather than the word change. Would you accept a technical amendment to that effect?

Mr. Newton Yes, surely.

Mr. Henry Well, now you understand, he can't accept an amendment, but we can take care of that at the proper time?

Mr. Dennerly Mr. Newton, I just want to be sure of one thing. You said that the adoption of this amendment as you have now proposed it with Dr. Asseff will permit the legislature to fix the salaries of all public officials. Is that correct?

Well now under the present set-up that is not always true, is it? In other words, employees of boards and commissions, for example, the salaries are usually fixed by the boards or commissions. So this will not necessarily take that away from those people.

I believe you said if it was not prohibited by the legislature, the legislature could do it. Do you mean by that, sir, that the legislature can now adopt a statute which says that the salaries of all public officials shall be fixed by the legislature?

Mr. Newton I think that might be possibly, entirely true.

Mr. Dennerly Or would it prohibit the executive department, for instance, from fixing salaries within the executive department?

Mr. Newton It can save the board money.

Mr. Dennerly I just want to be sure you are satisfied that we won't have a conflict here between parts of the executive branch and parts of the legislative branch in the future.

Mr. Newton I think we are going to have a lot of conflict before this is all over.

Mr. Dennerly I mean in respect to this specific problem, though.

Mr. Newton I think there is a possibility of conflict there, yes.

Mr. Roy Mr. Newton, I see what Delegate Dennerly is talking about, but I am not opposed to the concept that you have, but wouldn't you believe that any provision in the executive branch, or the judiciary branch or local government that deals specifically with allowing raises within that particular branch will supersede the general article on the legislative powers that we are attempting to give at this time?

Mr. Newton Absolutely.

Mr. Roy So that all we are saying is that unless it is otherwise provided in the constitution at a specific point, this will prevail but it can be superseded by other sections of the constitution.

Mr. Newton That's correct.

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Newton, if I understand your amendment correctly, in the future, the only way that the legislature could interfere with the executive department would be if they passed an act providing for them to do that.

Am I correct?

Mr. Newton Yes, sir.

Mr. Fulco If we adopt this amendment, then we will not necessarily have two-thirds vote to increase salaries.

Mr. Newton That's correct.

Mr. Fulco You are eliminating the two-thirds vote to increase salaries in the future?

Mr. Newton That is correct, sir.

Mr. Lanier Delegate Newton, as this thing is drawn, I take it it's not intended to apply in the situation of, changing salaries, of officers or employees of local governmental units that have Home Rule Charters.

Mr. Newton No.

Mr. Lanier In other words, if there is a provision in the home rules, the local government article that says that the local home rule units will make their own determinations of salaries, that would not be in conflict with this provision.

Mr. Newton It would override this provision.

[Amendment reread.]

Point of Order

Mr. Thompson Point of order, I don't know who to ask the question to, there is nobody up there that has been talking about it...

Mr. Henry Well, under the rule, points of order are addressed to the chair, so we might start there.

Mr. Thompson All right, you mean if the Board of Education decided it wanted to raise all college presidents twenty thousand dollars?...

Mr. Henry That's a question really, and I suggest you turn around there and talk with Mr. Newton about it, Mr. Thompson. You might try Mr. LeBleu when he gets through. He might have some super knowledge on this.

Further Discussion

Mr. LeBleu Mr. Chairman and members of the convention. I am just wondering whether this is actually something that you want to favorably consider or not and I'm not up here to talk for or against it, but I would suggest that you think long and hard about this before you vote. And I want to cite a couple of instances why and one of them might answer Mr. Thompson's question.

If you will recall recently the State Board of Education granted the college president's over the state an eight thousand dollar annual increase. There was so much public hue and cry over this amount that the State Board came back and reduced it to four thousand.

We in the House Appropriations Committee cut it out altogether, but the Senate in its wisdom put the increase back in the appropriations bill.

Another instance is one that I read in the paper just a few days ago where Dr. Mary, who is in charge of the Umbrella Health Services was given a, I think a nine thousand eight hundred dollar annual increase which boosted his salary up to fifty-five thousand dollars a year. I would think that this is probably the highest paid official in the whole state.

There are many methods by which a legislature can make it not exactly unbearable, but not too pleasurable, for a public official if they so desire and it may not be the privilege of reducing his salary. They could cut out all of his budget which would allow an elected public official to continue in an office, draw a salary and sit behind a desk for four years.

I just wondered if you wanted to include this measure in the constitution or take it out altogether as Dr. Asseff suggested?

Further Discussion

Mr. Anzalone Ladies and gentlemen of the convention I found a little bit facetious when you tell you this, but we are faced with the section that says, "the salaries of appointed or elected public officers shall not be reduced during the term for which they are elected or appointed."

Why should we give to the higher echelon of state government this protection when we are failing to give it to the everyday working man? Why don't we include in here that everybody who works for the state shall not have his compensation reduced for the term of which he is in office?

We have never had in history yet, the proposition to reduce a man's salary to kick him out of office although there may have been occasions when we should have. But we have never had it.

Now we are writing a constitution that supposedly will last this state for many, many, many years. When the people of 1921 wrote their constitution, they had no idea they were going to be faced with the depression of the 1930's. Now suppose in the 1990's we come up with another depression and we've got a governor or a commissioner of agriculture or a lieutenant governor or somebody who is making a salary of fifty or sixty thousand dollars a year, and the rest of the people of this state who are in the throes of a depression are having to live off of ten or twelve dollars a week as they did back in the thirties, then is it going to be right to say that you can't reduce his salary? I think not. If we are going to give protection, let's give protection to everybody. If we are not going to give protection to everybody, let's don't give it to anybody.

Questions

Mr. Abraham Joe, I agree with you. Don't you think we are just being real inconsistent by saying that on the one hand we are going to leave it up to the wisdom of the legislature to raise a man's salary, and on the other hand we say we are not going to leave it up to their wisdom to reduce a man's salary?

Mr. Anzalone Mack, you have been on a committee with me for six months and you know what inconsistency is all about.

Mr. Abraham Right, and would not we be better off simply just by eliminating this whole clause from the constitution and just leaving it up to the legislature to fix salaries?

Mr. Anzalone Yes, sir.

Mr. Newton Mr. Anzalone, could you think of a situation where possibly Judge Dennis rendered a decision that was unfavorable to a majority of the members of the legislature and they reduced his salary during his term of office to one dollar a year?

20th Days Proceedings—July 26, 1973

Mr. Anzalone Could I foresee something like that?
No, sir. Because them that didn't get shot sure wouldn't get reelected.

Further Discussion

Mr. Jack Mr. Chairman and delegates, I rise to oppose this amendment. I believe in the two-thirds rule of those elected to raise these salaries. Now, let's look at the present situation. What could happen if you changed to just a majority, which you could do if you adopt this amendment.

I'm not criticizing. I think the salary in our state right now are very liberal, but probably are fair to the judges. But they are well paid and I don't think the majority should be able to raise them. A Court of Appeals Judge, thirty-six thousand. Now if a lawyer in private practice can make thirty-six thousand, he would have to gross over fifty thousand because of his overhead. The experts say in a firm the average but good firm, the members can earn in it gross to contribute is fifty thousand. You might have an unusual damage suit of this and certainly you will make more. So a judge is making probably on the Court of Appeals more than a lawyer could earn. And it's a good job. You have a clerk, you have your secretary, you've got your quiet atmosphere.

District judges vary, the ones down here make more. I don't know what they make. Ours make, I think it's twenty-seven thousand counting the police jury part.

Supreme Court, you know what they make. You know what the doctors make. Dr. Mary and all. You know what the college presidents make.

Now let me tell you, there is just a certain amount of money to go around. And there's the lobby system and pressure put on them. Now I voted to give judges good salaries, and they got them, but we then had to have two-thirds of those voting, and I think we ought to have two-thirds of those elected like this.

Now there are a lot of other people ought to get some, the State Police, look how poor they are paid. If you are going to just keep spending money to raise officials, and there's plenty of elected and appointed officials, and I say, let's kill this amendment and leave this just like it is requiring two-thirds of those elected, and of course it's got the clause in there about you cannot reduce the salary during their term of office. I don't see all the reason for arguing all the other. If you want to raise salary by a simple majority of the members of the legislature, you just go right on and pass this amendment.

If you want to try to hold a good line, then you kill this amendment. Thank you.

[Quorum Call: 9 delegates present and a quorum.]

Further Discussion

Mr. Arnette I'd just like to point out one thing to the delegates here in the convention hall and that is the law presently is it take two-thirds vote to raise the salaries as it presently is. And I think we ought to look long and hard before we accept this amendment which would permit a majority of the legislature to allow increases in salaries.

I definitely think that salary should not be reduced in office, also. But the main thing is, this system has worked in the past, it has stood the test of time, and I definitely think we do need a two-thirds vote to raise salaries, as Mr. Jack said, to keep a line on the salaries in the state. I think it's very important that we do so.

[Previous Question Withdrawn.]

[Closing]

Mr. Newton After some discussion on the floor, it appears that possibly there is a problem as far as the salaries of appointed officials are concerned, so I have an amendment that would apply to elected officials only, and I urge defeat of the amendment presently on the floor.

[Amendments rejected: 18-90. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Amendment proposed by Delegate Shannon and Tobias. These have previously been distributed.

Amendment No. 1 on page 6, at the beginning of line 6, and here's a correction that needs to be made. Your copy says 8. It should be 18. On page 6 at the beginning of line 18

After the partial word "tion" and before the words "of public" delete the word "salaries" insert in lieu thereof the word "compensation."

Amendment No. 2, page 6, line 20 after the words "has the" and before the words "of public" delete the words "salaries" and insert in lieu thereof the word "compensation."

Amendment No. 3, page 6, at the end of line 20 after the word "public" delete the word "officers" and insert in lieu thereof the word "officials."

Explanation

Mr. Shannon Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, these are in reality technical amendments and all the purpose of it is to clarify and tract the language in the present bill. I'm only substituting the word compensation for salaries in the amendment and changing the word so that the language will be tract in line 20. I'm changing officers to officials as it is on line 8, and I urge the passage of this amendment.

Questions

Mr. Flory Mr. Shannon, by changing the word salaries to compensation, don't you encompass expenses paid to state employees. You'd be having the legislature set meal allowance, hotel allowance and mileage for state employees which is now set by the Division of Administration?

Mr. Shannon These are all appointed and elected officials, Mr. Flory.

Mr. Flory But those same regulations promulgated by the Division of Administration apply to appointed officials.

Mr. Shannon In that case, yes, they would still apply.

Mr. Fulco Mr. Shannon, will you explain why we are doing this? Why do you want to change salaries to compensation?

Mr. Shannon Mr. Fulco, I think that's relatively simple. I just do not want a salary for the legislature.

Mr. Fulco Well I mean, what will be the consequences when you change it to compensation?

Mr. Shannon Well, compensation could be other than a salary. And it could be a salary or it could be other. Compensation can vary both fields.

Mr. Fulco But surely you had a purpose in using compensation for salaries. What was your purpose?

Mr. Shannon In order to eliminate salaries for the House and the Senate, in reality.

[Previous Question Withdrawn. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendments

Mr. Sawyer: Amendments proposed by Delegate Newton:

Amendment No. 1 on page 6, delete lines 8 through 11, both inclusive in their entirety.

Amendment No. 2, delete amendment proposed by Delegate Drew and adopted by the convention on July 25, 1973.

Explanation

Mr. Ansalone: Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, in our short conference that we have had up here at the desk, there are several amendments that are going to be proposed. One in particular is going to include in a prohibition against reduction in salary of all elected and appointed officials. There is another one that is going to prohibit the salary increase of just elected officials. I have proposed to leave it to the subject matter up to the legislature for these reasons. As I stated before, if we are not going to give protection to everybody, let's don't give it to anybody. At no time in history has there ever been a reduction in salary to force anybody out of office. In my mind there is a serious constitutional question if one single solitary official is picked on and his salary was reduced to the point of forcing him out of his office. I don't think that this is a matter for the constitution. If we are going to have an independent legislature we may as well begin now to think about that. We cannot have it if we are going to restrict them every time we turn around. In closing, all I want to say is it is not fair to give it to one segment of the population of this state and not to insure everybody else.

Further Discussion

Mr. DeBlieux: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I want you carefully read over that section as it is now worded and then determine whether or not you want to delete that from the constitution entirely. That is what this amendment will do. In other words, when you delete that particular section it will allow the legislature by a simple majority of votes to vote any salary that they see fit for any elected official or public official any time they wish today. There is no restriction upon when they can pass salary increases and I can tell you this, I have found during the period that I have been in that legislature, the easiest thing in the world to get is a salary increase for an elected official. Particularly if it is not the year of his election. That is the only time that they don't bother the legislature about increasing their salary, is the year in which they are running for office. I just think this is a bad amendment. I think we should oppose it.

Further Discussion

Mr. Drew: Mr. Chairman, members of the convention, I'm in opposition to this amendment. Let me go back over yesterday's deliberations and part of today's deliberations. In our concern about reducing the salaries during the term of office, we have completely lost sight of the amendment which was adopted overwhelmingly yesterday which I offered. The purpose of that amendment was to prevent, without legislative approval, any and all raises in salaries of appointed officials. I don't think the section in its best words right now, but I think it is a lot better than taking a chance in getting it. The legislature has to come up with the money to pay for these increased salaries and has nothing to say whatsoever as to what those salaries are. For that reason, I am going to defeat this amendment and unless we can improve on the present one and give the people the protection, let's leave it like it is. It is better than deleting it as proposed by this amendment.

Amendment

Amendments

Mr. Boynton: Amendment No. 1 on page 6, delete line 10 through 12, both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Section 11, Subpart 10 of elected public officers, reducing Section 11, the compensation of elected public officials shall not be reduced during the term of office which they are serving."

Amendment No. 2, delete amendment proposed by Delegate Drew and adopted by the convention on July 25, 1973.

Explanation

Mr. Newton: I won't belabor the point. This very simply means that Section 11 except in regard to the reduction of the salaries of elected officials during their term of office. I will be glad to answer any questions.

Questions

Mr. Lanier: Delegate Newton, I am asking the same questions that I asked before so that the record will be clear on this. As I understand it, it is not the intention of your proposal to interfere or be in conflict with the provisions as presently proposed by the Local and Parochial Government Committee with reference to home rule unit local government or the reduction of salaries of home rule type persons.

Mr. Newton: In no way whatsoever.

Mr. Weiss: Delegate Newton, what happens to the appointed officials?

Mr. Newton: This section was originally intended to include them as well as the elected officials.

Mr. Weiss: They would be subject to having their salary reduced by the legislature, but I think that most appointed officials do not serve a term of office.

Further Discussion

Mr. Drew: Mr. Chairman and members of the convention, I will just take a minute. This amendment does practically the same thing as the previous amendment which you just defeated and I ask that you defeat this amendment again. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Jack: Mr. Chairman, members, I'll be brief. This amendment is just a wolf in sheep's skin and there are some other ones that are just wolves in sheep's skin so I am not going to keep talking about it. When you see an amendment that says on page 16 delete lines 16 through 19, both inclusive in their entirety, that is all amendment and let's just vote it down if you are in favor of the two-thirds rule that is in this material we are handling here today. Thank you.

[The following amendments were proposed and referred to the committee:]

Motion

Mr. Blair: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, we would like to temporarily delete Section 11 and we think that we can have a good debate. We have one conflict in the Revenue and Taxation Committee and also the Local Government Committee and we are hoping to get something out of them and maybe we can have some more.

20th Days Proceedings—July 26, 1973

Point of Information

Mr. Gravel Mr. Chairman, do I understand that two or more committees are going to give further consideration to this proposal?

Mr. Henry I think so far as 12 is concerned that there might be some conflict relative to what Revenue and Taxation is proposing and they want to have a joint committee meeting as I understand it. Is that correct, Senator Blair?

Mr. Blair Not necessarily a joint committee. They could do it as a sub-committee. Whichever one would be the better. I don't know but we think we can get together as far as the conflicts are concerned.

Mr. Henry When do you plan to get together now?

Mr. Blair When we adjourn.

Mr. Henry Today, when we adjourn. Suppose we get ready to take it up tomorrow, do you think you will be in a position to discuss it tomorrow?

Mr. Blair I feel sure one way or the other. If we can't get together, then we will run with what we have.

Mr. Gravel The reason I asked that question is that I have an amendment to that particular section that is really taken from the project and it is a rather comprehensive amendment that puts certain restraints, restrictions and limitations on the legislature with respect to the passage of local or special law. I think my amendment would be germane to any consideration that you would give in trying to accommodate the concept of local and special laws and I would ask that my amendment also be deferred and that the committee that is going to give this consideration give consideration to my proposed amendment also.

Mr. Blair We would be happy for you to meet with Mr. Gravel.

Mr. Gravel I don't want to necessarily do that. I want you to look at the amendment.

Mr. Blair You are invited.

Mr. Gravel Thank you.

[Notice adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter "Section 13. Local or special laws, Notice of intention, Publication"

Section 13. No local or special law shall be introduced into the legislature unless notice of the intention to introduce such law has been published without cost to the state in the locality where the matter or things to be affected are situated on two separate days. The last day of which is at least thirty days prior to the introduction of such a bill into the legislature. The notice shall state the substance of the contemplated law every such bill shall contain a recital that the notice has been given."

Explanation

Mr. Juneau Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this provision is essentially the same as it is in the present bill. The exception we are specifically providing a time span, that is of two separate days on which the article in the local area can be run. Additionally as you will notice, it provides the thirty day provision prior to introduction. I am advised an amendment is being prepared with regard to line 2, the word "introduced" will be changed to the word "enacted by" and I've talked to several members of the committee, three of which are here. We have an objection to that because there possibly would be some technical problems with the word "introduced" as opposed to the word "enacted."

As I indicated the only other definition that was made, there is a provision in the present law that requires evidence at the time that it was introduced on the local level be attached to the bill. We thought that that was a mechanical matter that would more properly address itself to statutory law. But in substance, word and substance, basically it is the same provision you have today.

Questions

Mr. Tobias Mr. Juneau, I notice in reading this section, that you state that the provision must be published on two separate days, the last day of which is at least thirty days prior to the introduction of such bill. When is the first day? In other words, could they publish it on two consecutive days?

Mr. Juneau As long as it is two separate days. It could be one, two days and the last day of the publication has to be thirty days before it would actually be introduced in the legislature. You could have two consecutive days but they would have to be two separate days.

Mr. Tobias Would the committee consider actually spreading it out further for example, one must be for example one week preceding the thirty day period.

Mr. Juneau We considered this, Mr. Tobias, and we found in a lot of areas this applied mainly to a lot of your outlying rural areas and for that reason, most of these areas have weekly newspapers and of course it would only come up once in that period of time. We considered...there wasn't any strong feeling one particular way or another. We thought it was sufficient and worked well in the past just to require two separate days.

Mr. Kelly Mr. Juneau, we apparently just passed Section 12 which, according to your draft, is a limited prohibition against the legislature, yet in 13 we are setting out the procedure. Really, after they have this joint meeting this afternoon, is there any possibility that the procedural aspects of Section 13 might be changed. I mean, it looks like to me we are kind of putting the cart before the horse.

Mr. Juneau I don't really think so, Mr. Kelly. The reason for that is because the problem with Section 12 is the definition of special and local law but whatever that definition may be, the procedural aspects would be the same. You have your thirty day period as you now have in the present law. The only changes we are really making is specifying the two separate days which really wasn't clear to me in the present law.

Mr. Kelly So in essence what you are telling me then is regardless of what comes out of this joint meeting this afternoon, it will not affect the contents of 13.

Mr. Juneau That's right. That is my feeling.

Mr. Stinson You have partially answered my question before, but you said that the bill will have the recital that it has been published. You don't think it's best in here to put, and also evidence to be attached? If the legislature fails to pass that, I believe the jurisprudence is, isn't it, that if they pass it and it later develops that it hadn't been advertised, the fact that it recites that, that cures the defect. Actually, the purpose is so the public will notice, have knowledge that it has been introduced so don't you think maybe that as a safeguard it should be attached to the bill?

Mr. Juneau Your point is well taken, Mr. Stinson. The response I have to give you was the feeling of the committee that the whole thrust of what we were trying to do was eliminate to a large extent what we thought was mechanical in nature from though it be one sentence in subject. The thought was that we would address that to the legislative liaison to work out whatever mechanics were necessary to provide that. But, your point is well taken and I think it properly addresses itself to the legislature.

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Lanier], on page 6, line 28, delete the words "introduced by into" and insert in lieu thereof "enacted by".

Amendment No. 2, page 6, line 30, after the word "an" and before the word "the" insert "the official journal of".

Explanation

Mr. Lanier Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Fellow delegates, this is in the nature of a technical amendment but I believe it does solve what could be a substantive problem. When changing on line 28 the words "introduced into" to "enacted by." The present law which is Article 4, Section 6, uses the word "pass" and I talked to several members of the committee and they have advised me that it was not their intention to chance what the present law is. The problem here would be if you were to introduce a general law, then of course you would not be in violation of this prohibition that requires advertisement of local and special laws. But then, if on the floor it was amended into a local or special law, you could avoid the requirement of the advertising procedure. So, to avoid this loophole, I think we should go back to what the law was and put in "enacted by" which is probably a more technical but accurate term than the term "pass", and this would cure this problem. The other amendment is on line 30 which would put in the words "the official journal of the locality." All localities have official journals and this is the place where it would be advertised. If there are any questions, Mr. Chairman, I would be glad to yield.

[Amendments adopted without objection.
Previous Question ordered on the Section.
Motion passed: 103-0. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter "Section 14. Suits against the state or Section 14. The legislature may authorize suit to be filed against the state, its agencies and political subdivisions, and shall provide a method of procedure and the effect of the judgment which may be rendered therein. Any law enacted for the purpose shall waive immunity from suit and from liability."

Explanation

Mr. LeBreton Mr. Chairman, member delegates, I guess I was chosen to explain Section 14 because I'm not a lawyer. The comments from the committee are along these lines. In the original, this section made very little difference from the law that's been on the books for many years. However, it does present provisions relating to authorization of suit against the state, its agencies and political subdivisions. Authorizes legislature to establish procedure for authorizing suit and specify the effect of judgment. In the original, you give the legislature the right to set up a formula. It deletes present details and deletes specific provisions withdrawing waiver of immunity from suit of certain state and local boards and agencies. Again, you give more authority to the legislature and you curtail the Constitution's specific requirements, which seems to be the law in which we're going in. Now, lots more could be said but I think it's that simple. It's close to what we had before, we've cut out certain detail and we submit it to you as the recommendation of the committee. I might add in that, that the gentleman who gave the recommendation that all the words "introduced by" would change their recommendation, nobody would remove their amendments, so we'll invite the subject of the amendments, the TV and the radio, to be put into the hands of the judge and jury as to whether you think that way is recommended to you by the committee or whether the amendment have certain merit. It ought to have a field day for the lawyers, and with that I thank you and wait for the next action, Mr. Chairman.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Landrum] On page 7, delete lines 6 through 11, both inclusive, in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Section 14 The immunity of the state from suit and liability is hereby abolished."

Explanation

Mr. Landrum Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, in committee I just could not understand why the citizens of this state had to get permission from the legislature if they thought that they had a case against the state. And at this time, I'm still of the opinion that they should not. Since there are several of us with amendments, and some of those amendments are pretty much running along the same lines, at this time, I would like to withdraw my amendment in favor of that of Mr. Roy, Planchard, Tobias, Aertker and Conino.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Amendments proposed by Mr. Lanier, O'Gerolamo, Duval, Alario, and Perez to this proposal.

Amendment No. 1. On page 7, line 6, after Section 14 and before the words "the legislature" add the letter "a".

Amendment No. 2. On page 7 between lines 11 and 12 add the following: "B. However public property shall not be subject to seizure and no judgment against the state, its agencies or political subdivisions shall be exigible, payable or paid except out of funds appropriated for payment thereof."

Explanation

Mr. Lanier Mr. Chairman, I'd like to pass my amendments right now, if I can do that and pick up consideration of the Roy amendment.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter All right. It is an amendment proposed, single amendment, by Mr. Roy, Planchard, Tobias, Gauthier, etc.

Amendment No. 1. On page 7, delete lines 6 through 11 both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Section 14. The legislature may authorize a method and procedure for payment of final judgements rendered against the state, its agencies and political subdivisions. However, public property shall not be subject to seizure and no judgment against the state or any other public body shall be exigible, payable, or paid except out of funds appropriated for payment thereof."

Mr. Henry Now the language that's in this that is not in the amendment which is on the delegates desk is what, Mr. Clerk, and where?

All right, read the language that is inserted in this amendment that the delegates don't have the benefit of at their desk, so that they can perhaps make a note of it.

Mr. Poynter All right. At the conclusion, it should read: "however public property shall not be subject to seizure and" then you pick up "no judgement against the state."

20th Days Proceedings—July 26, 1973

Explanation

Mr. Planchard I don't believe the amendment really needs any explanation. It's simply one thing, a person would not have to go to the state legislature in order to file suit against the state. It would, however, a person would have to go before the legislature in order to get the judgement paid, and it must be paid out of the funds appropriated for that payment. This is a good amendment and I think that several have already acknowledged that this is a better amendment than they have. So I won't delay the question. So if there are any questions that you have about this amendment, I'll be glad to answer them.

Questions

Mr. Weiss Delegate Planchard, bonding authorities, don't they require, make certain requirements that this might conflict with? In other words, what security does the state offer in releasing bonds? Can someone explain that?

Mr. Planchard I'm not aware of any provision bonding firms have that we have to have this in the constitution, to be able to file suit against the state.

Mr. Weiss I mean what security does the bonding company have if they can't seize the water works, or whatever the matter is that they are securing by bond? I just wonder if this is technically feasible. That's all of my question.

Does someone know the answer to this?

Mr. Henry Well nobody else has the mike, Dr. Weiss, and they can't answer it right now, sir.

Mr. Newton Mr. Planchard, under your amendment as it should read, "public property shall not be subject to seizure," wouldn't that mean that any water works that was bonded, whether it was bonded or not, it couldn't be seized?

Mr. Planchard I think that is correct, Mr. Newton.

Mr. Newton Is it the intent of this proposal to waive sovereign immunity?

Mr. Planchard Yes, it is.

Mr. Newton Thank you.

Mr. LeBlou Mr. Planchard, since a municipality is a creature of the legislature, could this amendment be construed that any suit against a municipality, for instance, would have to be paid by an appropriation from the state?

Mr. Planchard It means that a person would not have to get permission by the legislature to sue any subdivision of political subdivision of the state. That's correct.

Mr. LeBlou I understand that, but what I was talking about is the actual payment of the judgement. Would the state be liable for a judgement against a municipality or local government authority?

Mr. Planchard No, I don't think the state would be liable, no.

Mr. Kelly Mr. Planchard, if I understand the meaning of the amendments that you and Mr. Roy and others propose, you want to waive the governmental immunity from suit, but yet you're going to come back and require a legislative act for the payment of any judgement rendered in any court in this state. Is that correct?

Mr. Planchard That's correct.

Mr. Kelly All right, sir, now in your amendments the agreement is we that you have deleted any inference to immunity from the suit itself. Is that correct?

Mr. Planchard That's what we've done, yes.

Mr. Kelly All right, would this allow the legislature to come back at a later time and insert a provision or pass a bill which would prohibit you against the state or any of its political subdivisions except by legislative act?

Mr. Planchard Personally I don't feel that that could.

Mr. Kelly Well let me ask you this.

Mr. Planchard But I don't, I can't answer it. I don't know.

Mr. Kelly You're familiar with the proposal for Bill of Rights. Are you familiar with a provision within the Bill of Rights which would affirmatively and in an affirmative sense, remove any prohibition from governmental immunity, in other words, it says the state can be sued, in other words.

Mr. Planchard I've heard about it, yes.

Mr. Kelly All right, sir. So that, do you feel that that would take care of my problem that I have in my own mind?

Mr. Planchard Yes, if that is adopted, I'm sure it would.

Mr. Kelly If that is not adopted then do you agree that possibly the legislature could come back and by act or bill institute some or pass a bill which would act as a prohibition against suits against the state except by legislative act?

Mr. Planchard I don't believe they can, but I don't know, Mr. Kelly.

Mr. J. Jackson Mr. Planchard, I think I succeeded to this amendment, but there's just one basic question that I want to ask. As the amendment is drawn now, getting on Conway's question, political municipalities and parishes are considered as creatures of state government. Although suits are filed and rendered against the municipality, do you think that our present language would make it kind of... do you think our present language is clear enough so that the state would not be responsible for payment of the judgement when it affe is a municipality or a parish?

Mr. Planchard In answer to your question, I think it's perfectly clear to me that the state would not be liable. I think that the language is ample.

Further Discussion

Mr. Burson I feel like throughout the course of the convention up till now, that we have been heretofore in one respect. I feel like that those of us who are lawyers, have been a stumbling throughout that the delegates who are not, know what the law is right now. That I would like to see the participation of the delegate at large of the convention, to tell you what the law is at the present time on sovereign immunity so that you are going to have, perhaps, a better idea of what you are voting right when you vote. Article 3, Section 35 of the present constitution, which you can look at on your desks, sets out at some length the procedure whereby the legislature can waive sovereign immunity. What is the concept of sovereign immunity. That has its roots historically in the concept that the king could do no wrong. I personally think that that concept is a extinct in the United States and has no place in modern law. But I think it is only fair that those of you who are going to vote one way or the other on this proposition be aware of what the present law is. In addition with Article 3, Section 35.

20th Days Proceedings—July 26, 1973

you should also take a look at an article near the end of the present constitution in Article 19, Section 26. This sets out special agencies of the state whereby the necessity for their consent to suits is withdrawn, and saying that they will be considered special agencies of the state of Louisiana. This constitutional amendment was necessitated because there were a number of cases which said that sub-agencies of the state, such as School Boards, did not share in the sovereign immunity of the state from suit as they would in the present case. On the point by the Louisiana Supreme Court generally holds that when the state acts in a quasi-corporate capacity such as in the case of a Dock Board or another agency which goes out and files suit, as happened in a particular case, that it is not immune from suit in return. And I think that we should be aware here, that this whole proposition should really be broken down into two questions. One question is whether or not you think that we should constitutionally say that there is sovereign immunity for any agency of the state. My own personal feeling is that most governmental bodies today, such as the one I serve on, the School Board, carry liability in insurance with exceedingly large amounts and that this is for the protection of the public at large, and that the members of the public should be just as protected from negligence by let's say a school bus driver who runs over them, because they're just as dead if he kills them than if a private citizen should. That's the purpose of insurance. That's one question. The other question, however, which demands serious consideration and which I understand the thrust of this amendment gets to is, it's one thing to say that you can bring a suit and get a judgement against a governmental entity, but it's another proposition to say that that governmental entity should have property subject to seizure. I don't think any of us want that. And I read the amendment that is being presented to the public. It would prevent the travesty of a public body, such as the Police Jury having the Courthouse seized, let's say, to satisfy a judgement against it.

Questions

Mr. Stinson. Mr. Burson, don't you think that in the past that our prohibition has served to cut down the number of frivolous and even though they are frivolous, expensive lawsuits against the state?

Mr. Burson. That is certainly possible, Mr. Stinson.

Mr. Stinson. Isn't it a fact that what they're attempting to do here would mean that Mr. Guste would have to double his staff, at least, to take care of all the lawsuits that will be filed?

Mr. Burson. Mr. Stinson, I don't really think so. I think that most lawyers, and I can speak from experience in this, I have never failed to file a lawsuit where I thought I had a valid one against the state even though it was a little bit more trouble to have to come get legislative permission.

Mr. Stinson. Isn't it a fact that a litigant wouldn't have to have a lawyer to file his own suit?

Mr. Burson. Well, that's true. Yes, sir.

Further Discussion

Mr. Casey. Mr. Chairman and delegates, I would like you to seriously consider first of all the concept of immunity of the state from suit as distinguished what would happen if you adopt this amendment. As is required at this time, those agencies that are not specifically exempted from immunity, it is now required that the legislature authorize a suit against the state or a particular agency, that is what is done at this time. There is no difficulty that I know of that has occurred in the past, or anybody obtaining the necessary permission to sue the state or its respective agencies, those that are immune from suit. Mr. Stinson is absolutely correct that it is possible that the amount of litigation could increase against the state. We don't know how much, we don't know if it would be one more suit or a hundred more suits. But the point is, the attorney general is the official legal representative and officer of the state and its agencies, and he must provide the manpower to file the necessary answers and to defend against whatever suit would be filed against the state. The attorney general's appropriation may be high at this time, and that has been a controversial appropriation with the legislature, he will, I submit to you, that his appropriation would certainly have to be increased if we would permit every type of suit to be filed against the state without obtaining the permission necessary from the legislature. Now I know there are many of you that disagree with the concept or my argument, but that's neither here nor there. I strongly feel that way. That there is no trouble in getting permission. That I think this ought to be done. The state is self-insured. We must pay whatever final judgements are finally rendered against those who are attorneys, those who are attorneys know that in a marginal case where you have to obtain permission to sue the state of Louisiana, that where you really know that you do not have a cause of action against the state, that you're not going to go to all that trouble to obtain the permission to file the suit against the state where it's really not necessary. Also, I'd like you to check the wording of Section 9. This is a very serious error, I feel, in the wording of this section, and if adopted could cause, I feel, untold problems to the state, and to the Budget Committee. In furnishing the money necessary to pay judgements not only against the state and the state agencies, but the wording in this section in the amendment says that you would have to pay a judgement against the state or any other public body. Now I know this was brought up, but I don't know what the interpretation of the wording "public body" is. But my comprehension of "public body" is any public body that exists in the state of Louisiana whether it be a state agency, a municipality, parish government, or what have you. And if it would be interpreted, granted it's open to question, but if it would be interpreted that the state would have to pay any judgement against any public body, that means that the state would pay a judgement against possibly an agency that exists solely for the parish of Orleans or an agency that exists solely for West Baton Rouge Parish, or what have you. I think this is a serious error in the amendment as proposed but regardless of this, I strongly urge you to reject this amendment and at least retain the concept of the sovereign immunity.

Questions

Mr. Stinson. Tom, isn't it a fact that under the present law when you authorize a suit, you testify that it will be filed in East Baton Rouge Parish.

Mr. Casey. Ford, I'm not even sure, but if you say that's correct, you're a good lawyer. I'm sure.

Mr. Stinson. Under this provision, isn't it a fact that the lawsuit could be filed in any parish if there is an accident if a highway vehicle in Bossier Parish, they could file it there. And also isn't it a fact that the plaintiff could file it in the federal court, if he wished?

Mr. Casey. Well, according to this, that's absolutely correct.

Further Discussion

Mr. Guste. This doctrine goes back to Essex before the Magne case and that the thing could do no wrong, he's overreacting. That has been completely eroded away to the courts to have just a little tiny vestige left in judicial decisions. The un-frivolous suits, and we're going to stop something that's dead. In another couple of years we will no longer have sovereign immunity. I think the only thing we are concerned with here today is whether or not someone is going to get a judgement against the state and seize public property. This amendment takes care of that. All we have attempted to do is that you do not have to come before the legislature prior to filing suit and ask the legislature, "May I file this suit?" Now they talk about frivolous suits. Now, whose frivolity do we want to deal with? If you ask permission of the legislature to file a suit, as I understand it, they pass it through a committee who looks over this first and then decide whether or not someone's suit is frivolous. Or there may come a day when this committee or the legislature may decide that "A's" suit is frivolous. "A" doesn't feel his suit is frivolous, he wants to have judge look at it and determine on the merits whether or not it's frivolous. That's the way that we should go today. I think Delegate Burson has covered the state of the law in Louisiana today. If I go want to bring out that the recent orders, constitutions that have recently been adopted, have adopted and done away with sovereign immunity. Montana, 1972. Illinois, Nebraska. Those states who have not done away with it, they've been doing away with it through the judicial process. So I think we're just fooling ourselves to ask someone come to the legislature before he files his suit. Hundreds of resolutions a year that the legislature shouldn't be bothered with. Now then you say well maybe I won't overlook that to see if it's frivolous. The legislature will probably tell you that, well, we pass them all. Well if we pass them all then that's not important either because they're not looking at them. Let's go along with this amendment and let's not let the decision of the state's funds, a judgement on the state's funds. Do you have any questions?

Questions

Mr. Bonney: Did I understand you to say that the present state of the law is such that I filed a suit against the state of Louisiana next week, the attorney general couldn't plead sovereign immunity?

Mr. Guarisco: I didn't say that. I think you misunderstood. I wasn't clear. What I said is that they are constantly eroding away the adoption of sovereign immunity, and the last time was in the Port of New Orleans case, the Splendor case, whereas they talked about a political subdivision, the Port of Orleans. No, sovereign immunity has not been done away with on a state level, yet, but that's the next move.

Mr. Bonney: Well don't you think, then, if this is your feeling that we should put that in the constitution, if you feel that there should be no sovereign immunity don't you think you should do state in the constitution?

Mr. Guarisco: I think, I think...

Mr. Bonney: Please understand, I don't necessarily agree with you.

Mr. Guarisco: I know you don't agree with me, but I think we'll differ that at the time that we consider the Bill of Rights article which has something to do specifically with sovereign immunity. This particular article is primarily in the legislative article insofar as authorization is concerned.

Mr. Bonney: Okay, thank you.

Mr. Guarisco: I think we'll meet it head-on later on.

Mr. Tapper: My question is, I'm in favor of the amendment, I believe, but one of the words gives me a little problem, and that is "appropriated". After the comma in the second to last paragraph, it says "payable or paid except out of funds appropriated for the payment thereof". My question was, wouldn't that be construed to mean that the legislature would have to appropriate the funds?

Mr. Guarisco: Yes.

Mr. Tapper: Well what about a judgement against a School Board, or a city, or a police jury?

Mr. Guarisco: Well, then they have to appropriate the funds for their particular political body.

Mr. Tapper: The answer to the first question was yes, and that was whether or not the legislature, if it were...

Mr. Guarisco: Legislature for state funds, local body for local funds. Yes. [...].

Mr. Tapper: [...] Can you spell that out that it will be done that way?

Mr. Guarisco: Like someone said before, I can read it for you, but I can't make you understand.

Mr. Tapper: Well I tell you what, I don't think you understand.

Further Discussion

Mr. Roy: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the Convention, I never thought sovereign immunity would cause so much trouble. Let me give you a little history of the background of sovereign immunity or the idea that the king can do no wrong. It started many years ago when the king was descended from God and what have you. Now that has been eroded to the point that the courts have been having to deal with exceptions after exceptions after exception. It got so bad that finally Section 5 of Article 3 was amended to say that the legislature is empowered to waive. When that occurred, the Supreme Court of Louisiana in Hamilton vs. City of Shreveport held that inasmuch as the City of Shreveport had the right to sue and be sued under the law setting forth the city charter, the City of Shreveport, the city of Shreveport could be sued without its permission. You see it used to go that even the local body could object to being sued without its permission. It was eroded finally that a case came out of Natchitoches Parish involving the School Board. The court distinguished it and said that you can sue because of the contract provision. Finally, in Herring vs. Perry, which was a case that I had, we obtained a judgement against the Department of Highways for $60,000. I had only $25,000 worth of coverage, so the state raised immunity, said this man was severely injured as a result of the negligence of the highway employees, but you can't be paid over $25,000. The Supreme Court of Louisiana said we incurred that when we said the Highway Department, since it's created under the laws of the state and can sue and be sued, implied, you don't need legislative authority to sue it. It finally got to the point that the only agencies, you understand, that were exempt from suit and could raise sovereign immunity were those agencies that did not sue and be sued clearly from their origin, in their creation. So the Supreme Court finally, Justice Tate is here to back me up, in the late case of New Orleans Port of Authority vs. Splendor said that we have finally got to address ourselves to the issue of sovereign immunity. Now let me tell you what happened in the Port of New Orleans vs. Splendor to show you how frivolous the state has been in the past. A vessel was operating on a navigable body of water. It ran into the bridge that the Port of New Orleans owns. The Port of New Orleans sued Splendor Shipping Company, the owner of the vessel. Splendor reinvented or filed a countersuit against the Port of New Orleans for damages, saying that the port was negligent the way it maintained the bridge, etc. Then the Port of New Orleans said no, you can't sue me, you haven't gotten legislative authority to do so. Not withstanding it had initiated the suit against Splendor Shipping. The District Court said, you're right, the Port of New Orleans has no authority to sue and be sued. Even though it is suing you, Splendor, you may not sue it. Went up to the Fourth Circuit, they affirmed. I believe, or what have you. But it ended up in the Supreme Court and Justice Dixon wrote the majority opinion. He said, it is time in this century to face the issue. The modern concept is that there is no such thing anymore as sovereign immunity, and it met it head on. And it said, sovereign immunity was a creature of the lower appellate courts and we now say they have no authority to grant sovereign immunity. So they struck it. Now what does that bring us. It brings us to Tom Casey's comment in response to Mr. Ford Stinson's comment that he's worried about the language because it appears that the legislature would have to pay funds out of... appropriate funds to pay for some damage done by a municipality. Now that's not what it says. It says, the last paragraph, or any other public body shall be exigible, payable except out of funds appropriated for payment thereof. That means simply, and everyone knows this who's a lawyer, that you can't sue New Orleans and get a judgement against New Orleans and expect the state to pay it. The state was not a party defendant to the amendment. Now if you get a judgement against the state of Louisiana, the state of Louisiana, if it chooses to, may appropriate the funds. If it doesn't, too bad. But we have to live with that. So, also, with each municipality. That is just not a valid consideration for you to worry about. Let me say one other thing...

Mr. Henry Mr. Roy, you've exceeded your time.

Further Discussion

Mr. Womack Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I'm going to vote against this for the simple reason that there has been no problem or anyone getting authority to sue the state through a legislative act. One of the prime problems I find in it is down on about line 7, which says that the legislature may authorize methods and procedures for payment of final judgements rendered against the state, its agencies, political subdivisions, however public property shall not be seized. But that says nothing about the bank account of the School Board. I don't know whether the bank account is considered public property or whether that's a cash bank account. If the School Board's payroll, if they're going to make the payroll and pay their teachers with the following month is subject to suit, then it's bad. I'm going to vote against it unless something is changed in there to give a little clearer explanation or a little clearer statement as to the cash bank account of School Boards or other agencies that's got to make their payroll. I'm not going to vote to give that payroll a wide open shot at judgements. Now I can also see the possibility of a lot of frivolous suits because today you don't necessarily have to have an attorney to go to court. You can get one furnished for you. I haven't, at any time, well I had one in my own case that I didn't file a bill for, it was in my district, and I didn't put a legislative act in authorizing a suit because prescription had run out on one of them 29 months, and I'm not fixing to vote to give anybody a right to go back and sue me and say that you didn't mop the floor clean enough and I fell, and I hit myself and it might send me to my grave in about 20 years -- 16, 18, or 40 months later come back and file a suit. I never have yet, and I'm not fixing to vote against one that gives somebody that's got a valid suit the right to sue the state. My primary objection is the fact that I think under this, the School Board's cash bank account that they've got to make their payroll would be subject to seizure.

Questions

Mr. Munson Mr. Womack, are you aware of the fact that for the past several years, I'd say the last five or six years, attorneys representing the Baton Rouge School Board have tried to get the court to declare that they could not pay it and stayed past. If you're the chairman, the president judgement against that School Board.

Mr. Womack That's right. They've had a bill in for an appropriation asking the state to pay for the judgement I believe against the School Board.

Mr. Munson Aren't you concerned at the way this amendment is drawn, that there would be a possibility that the courts would rule that we would have to pay that judgement?

Mr. Womack I think under the wording of it, it's quite possible that they couldn't pay it and stayed past. I think you'd reach the same thing you have in the Port of Baton Rouge whereby the constitution says that in the issuance of the bonds that the Port of Baton Rouge, any discrepancy in the payment of the bonds it would fall on the responsibility of the four adjacent parishes including the parish of East Baton Rouge to pay the bonds of the Port of New Orleans. They defaulted and said we're not going to pay it and the attorney general's opinion was, in that case, the state would have to pay it.

Mr. Derbes Mr. Womack, I think your criticism of the amendment should be clarified. Doesn't the amendment also say, "And no judgement against the state, its agencies or political subdivisions shall be exigible, payable or paid except out of funds appropriated for payment, thereof?"

Mr. Womack That's very questionable. But you know there are two approaches to it.

Mr. Derbes Doesn't it say that, though?

Mr. Womack Well, yes, it says that.

Mr. Derbes Do you draw from that phraseology the conclusion I draw, namely that the funds in the school board bank account would not be seizable assets?

Mr. Womack I would question it very seriously, yes.

Mr. Derbes O.k. I would also like to ask you one other question with leave of the chair, and that is is it not also a fact that in the past, many actions have been filed against the state with permission of the legislature, actions which have indeed prescribed under the ordinary requirements of the civil code?

Mr. Womack The legislature has gone back and granted the authority to sue where prescription had been caused to run out. In other words, in the case had prescribed during the interim between sessions of the legislature, but they have not gone back to my knowledge, where it has prescribed and passed two sessions of the legislature. They have given everybody the right, and it's been a standard procedure that suits against the state, there has been no votes against the authority for the suit against the state. They have been handled in mass production.

Further Discussion

Mr. Kelly Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the committee, to expound just a little further on the question that was just directed to Mr. Womack from Mr. Derbes, I can foresee where this amendment will cut down on the problem of the legislature being cast into a position of going back and because of pure political having to vote to allow some citizen of the state to enter a suit that had been possibly prescribed by one twenty-three months.

You remove governmental immunity and when the state is going to be cast into the same position as I as a private citizen, you or any corporation for that matter. They can then allege prescription aid with appropriated funds. Wouldn't probably most of these funds come from the taxes that are levied by all of the people in the political subdivisions?

Mr. Conroy, Jr., and you know, Mr. Lanier, that is part of the concept of this sovereignty immunity. It's not just to say that the king can do no wrong. It's to protect the public first, to protect the treasury. It's to protect all of us.

Mr. Lanier: And one other thing, Mr. Lanier. If you could just waive the immunity of the state, which of course includes the governor and the legislature and the judiciary, would that not leave open the door for all of these agencies to be sued by anyone that wants to come and file a lawsuit?

Mr. Conroy: I think it would be chaotic, yes.

Mr. Lanier: Whether it would be for tort or some specific performance.

Mr. Conroy: Or for questioning the wisdom of their actions, possibly even.

Further Discussion

Mr. Leloretto: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates. In the opinion of one who is not an attorney, if we were to give a name to this amendment, in my opinion the name would be, "The Rape of the State of Louisiana."

I think that this is nothing but convenience for some lawyers, some attorneys. I know of no great criticism of the twenty-four years that I've watched the judgment system of this state go by. There has been occasion, there has been one criticism, but certainly the criticism wasn't more than one or two percent. I know of no reason to change this.

Now, without permission from the legislature on whether it be a local or state agency in my opinion that will have to pass the amendment say that the local authority has to provide the fund, in the budget to pay the judgment, but at least if it may get permission, it has a warning that they are going to come before them that this may happen and they will get a chance in my opinion a better chance to defend themselves.

It seems to me that you're obviously now you point out the smaller the local, the smaller the fund of the state, the great expense that will come to it. I think the delegate who said that this would be a tremendous expense on the attorney general, I think you might even say his phrase was well deserved. I think it would be tremendous expense in the filing about hundred of thousands of dollars of money to defend suits if you have the state or a locality. And this is what we get out of it.

I further think that if this amendment passes, and we open to the state with your judgment and the state has not had the opportunity to authorize any money to go to the demands of political power that you've got your judgment said. And I like you the Lipman case in 1954 and the McReynolds case. And if you don't think judgments would pay that be a political demand, and who has the strength to get it done in the house and in the senate and then get the money approved by the State Treasurers Committee and the Finance Committee and the fact that you have to have the right to do not political, you don't have the actual receiving of it.

Therefore, I say, my opinion is that I know of no criticism, certainly not from the citizens. I know of only few complaints from lawyers. I see no reason to have a major change, hence you know the requirements of the state and I see this is nothing but a play ball for attorneys.

I ask you to defeat the amendment. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Leloretto: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, we're going to give you to vote and I will vote for you here. Thank you, a very warm thank you. I have heard a number of lawyers get up here and talk about this state as though the state was some person. Now I want to remind you that when you talk about the state, you are really talking about the people of the state. The state is not an individual and I ask you to give that some thought. Now, you talk about waiving immunity from suits. When I ask you to consider also, that when you waive this immunity, you waive the immunity presently enjoyed by every school board and every police jury in the State of Louisiana that protects them in many instances against frivolous suits, against nuisance suits. And I believe that I feel very good that in eighteen years experience as district attorney, I had occasion to defend many suits against the police juries and the school boards. And I think that they need this immunity, they should have it. And when these judgements are secured against them, it's not the state as such paying it, it is the people who pay, and I think this would be a dangerous amendment, bad amendment. I sincerely hope that you will consider well what you do if you decide to do away with this traditional immunity.

Now this has nothing to do with the king always being right. We are not dealing with a king. This is the sovereignty that the people have enjoyed traditionally and I am not one who will give up the modernistic view that we have got to throw all tradition out of the window in adopting this Constitution.

I think that we ought to honor those traditions that are valid. We have many who not only want to do away with state immunity, they want to do away with the lawyers. I ask you to vote this amendment down.

Further Discussion

Mr. Wall: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the house, we are not going to pass any perfect constitution and we are not going to pass any sections of the constitution that will be perfect.

Now there's been, there has only been one instance in the many years that this question of where this legislative approval was abused or not. There has only been one instance that it has been pointed out that there was possible legislative abuse. Now I can see that many nuisance suits being filed against political entities. Now let me say this, I feel that if a political entity, one of its employees causes damage to you or anyone else, you should have the right to recover that damage.

But there has never been but one time in the history that there was a question of whether there was abuse or not. And I can see many, many abuses if this provision is passed. We are not going to have a perfect law, a perfect section. And I don't feel like that this provision, I won't say it's a bad provision, but it would cause many more abuses of nuisance suits and political suits than the questionable instance in the past under the present law.

I'm going to ask you to vote against this, and I would like a political entity to have to bear their obligations. There is only one question that that's over, there is one instance where there's ever been questioned whether it was abuse or not. But remember, if you have it to where that lawyers can just file these suits, and I'm not saying that you may have one lawyer in each locality do that, I don't say that there's many lawyers that would do it, lawyers specialize.

But if you've got one lawyer in each locality, and I can think of two in my area, that they would make a practice of filing these suits. Now I don't mean all lawyers. But really, I don't mean to condemn all lawyers or ninety percent of the lawyers or ninety-five percent of the lawyers, but I do feel like there would be many, many abuses and I feel like this would be bad for us to pass this amendment. Thank you very much.

Questions

Mr. Leloretto: Mr. Wall, such references we made to you to what is determined as a political suit. Where do you think should really be the judge of whether or not there is merit in a particular suit? Should it be the legislators, or should it be the court systems?

Mr. Wall Mr. Kelly, the Legislature in giving permission to file these suits, hasn't made the decision whether it is a nuisance suit. They leave it to the court. They haven't tried to make those decisions.

But in most instances, I'll say that then the lawyers don't come to the Legislature and ask permission with nuisance suits which would be easy for them to file, or either a political suit if they didn't have to go through that process of getting permission.

Mr. Deshotels Mr. Wall, do you realize that none of the proponents of this particular amendment were in the legislative committee?

Mr. Wall No, I did not.

Mr. Deshotels All right.

Do you know sir whether any of the proponents of this particular amendment made any studies as to the consequences and effects that this particular amendment would cause in future finances of towns, of local governments, of school boards, etc.?

Mr. Wall Well, I just saw a couple of them were lawyers and I can see where the towns and municipalities would have to hire a lot more lawyers without any study.

Mr. Deshotels Right, sir.

Now they are talking about appropriations and they said there would be no judgment executed except upon appropriations. Do you know or do you realize that the Legislature of the State of Louisiana could direct or order a town to appropriate X number of dollars to pay a judgement against it? Do you think this could happen?

Mr. Wall Unless we have... unless the town charter is the proper Home Rule of whether we pass proper Home Rule, yes, that could be done.

Mr. Deshotels All right.

Do you also realize, sir...

Mr. Henry I'm sorry, he has exceeded his time by about thirty seconds.

Further Discussion

Mr. Tate Mr. Speaker, sister delegates and brother delegates, I'm speaking in the interest of clarification of one of the issues raised. It happens I am going to vote for the amendment, but I am speaking primarily to clarify one of the issues about which a great deal of question has been raised which is about a judgement, the effect of a judgement, once a judgement is obtained and about how it is paid.

Now Article 3, Section 35 of the present constitution provides in so far as what happens. In this Article 3, Section 35, provides "No judgement against the state or any other public body shall be exigible, payable or paid except out of funds appropriated for payment, thereof."

Now, Mr. Robert Munson was pointing out when they had a judgement against the school board, they couldn't seize any school property, they couldn't seize any payroll funds. They had to get an appropriation from the school board to pay the debt that the court had held that the school board owed.

This issue here in my judgement is somewhat fictitious in so far as worrying about what happens. The effect of the removal of a legislative judgement whether to permit someone to file a suit is simply to eliminate one step which the legislature says... they always give permission to sue the state, or the city or the school board. And it's simply to let it go to the court system, let it be determined, and then as a matter of law, having been determined, the public body pays when and if it can appropriate the money.

As a matter of fact, you know how it actually works. People get insurance just like you and I do to take care of their possibilities. Now some of the other issues raised about nondamage suits and so on, there is a whole body of law. For instance, you and I can't be sued as delegates. We are... no, we can be sued, anybody can get sued... but they can't win the suit. Because we can be sued because we don't put something in the constitution to say someone brings a suit. We have what they call legislative immunity.

Now if I write a dumb judicial decision, I've never written any, but if I had, say, nobody can sue me. It's one of the attributes of forming a judicial, or legislative, or quasi-judicial, or quasi-legislative act... an error of judgment. You're immune from liability under a long established tradition.

Now about nuisance suits. What do people bring nuisance suits for? Well, the very few lawyers, the one or two who might do it, do it to get some money for their client mostly or more or less. And why do they do it? Because they can get a settlement of something. But a nuisance suit against a public body would not be very effective, would it, because first of all, somebody has got to agree to pay it, or you will have to get the judgement, and the town council or the city... the State of Louisiana has to pay... agree to pay. A nuisance suit, in my judgement, just wouldn't be brought because you have to not only go win a suit, if you can ever win it, but you've got to go get an act.

So I'm open for destruction, now. Thank you.

Mr. Lanier.

Questions

Mr. Derbes Justice Tate, does the adoption of this amendment indeed create a new clause or right of action against political subdivisions or against public officials?

Mr. Tate No, in my judgement, no.

Mr. Derbes Does the existing provision regarding... do the existing provisions regarding sovereign immunity, whatever they are, do they indeed prevent anyone from filing suits?

Mr. Tate You can't stop anyone from suing the State for anything, you see. But he can't win... maybe.

Mr. Derbes So even if a suit under existing provisions of sovereign immunity were filed, either mistakenly or perhaps appropriately, it would still require the person sued to come in and defend it and raise arguments of no cause of action. Isn't that correct?

Mr. Tate Yes, sir.

Mr. Derbes Thank you, very much.

Mr. Drew Judge Tate, there has been quite a bit said about decisions of the Supreme Court. I would not think that your court might reconsider their decisions in view of Section 14 as recommended by the Committee on Legislative Powers and Functions.

Mr. Tate What does Section 14 say.

Mr. Drew It says the legislature may authorize suit to be filed against the state, agencies, and public subdivisions to provide a method of procedure in effect if the judgement which may be rendered, that being in the constitution. Do you think your court might reconsider your decision?

Mr. Tate I personally don't think so. The decision the plaintiff shipping just said where the court had created an immunity to a quasi-judicial status that could sue and be sued and that was suing, that the court would leave it to the legislature to provide any such immunity.

And I should mention that. The legislature can provide any immunity it wants.

Motion

Mr. Chatelain. Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this is a very, very important issue we are discussing this afternoon. I have sought the advice of several of my fellow delegates. I have seen the cases where delegates have already changed their minds. This frightens me in a lot of ways because this is very important. I'm concerned about a businessman about what will happen to the bonds in various political subdivisions. I'm concerned about insurance, the cost of insurance. I'm concerned about many, many things that I think we all should be concerned about. Mr. Chairman, if I am in order, I'd like to move that we pass over all of Section 14 until tomorrow. Give us a chance to think about it some more.

[Bretonius question ordered. Motion to pass over Section 14 rejected: 17-92.]

Further Discussion

Mr. Jack. Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen, I'm in opposition to this amendment. You read the material before you and it's very clear. If you pass it as it is in the material, in order to bring the suit you will have to get permission of the legislature. That's the law now, with one exception. Under the present law in setting up some things back, the highway department, the legislature gave permission for them to sue and be sued. So that was the exception. But as for anybody else, the present law is, you've got to get permission of the legislature and that's the way it should be. Now all this talk, and I have the greatest respect for Judge Tate, he's a personal friend of mine, one of the fine members of the bar, but anybody can sue somebody. But that doesn't mean you don't get thrown out of court because in the present law you've got to have permission of the legislature to sue the state, school board, subdivisions and those, except if you sue the highway department. Now let's watch this closely, ladies and gentlemen. How would you like a bunch of disgruntled people to come in, get under this amendment where they don't have to get permission, and you're in a little town or a little parish, and bring the suit and get to try it and put you to all that expense even if you won that suit. It's a great thing to have sovereign immunity and that's what you've got right now. You decide whether you're going to let a person bring a suit or not. To get back with what Mr. LeBreton says, I was in the legislature during that time too, and Mr. LeBreton is against this amendment. The Jefferson Island Sulphur Company got that big judgement, I forgot how many million. Now, it's no production after you get a judgement...the mere fact that you've got to get a legislative appropriation to pay it because they're going to pay it. If you get the judgement. The legislature, a lot of people thought that was wrong when they voted all that to pay that Jefferson Island judgement as I recall in three installments...after I refresh my memory talking to Eddie LeBreton. I tell you how you'll have no trouble at all in deciding to vote against this amendment. When you go home, talk to your mayor and tell him I voted for this amendment. Mr. Mayor, that lets anybody and his brother, good or bad, regardless of the merits of the suit, sue our fair city, and sue the school board and sue the police jury, and you'll see what your police jury is going to tell you, and what your school board is going to tell you and what your mayor is going to tell you. And that's a better thing to do than to pass this amendment. Let's kill any other amendment and let's get along. We were moving good the other day.... we're moving terrible. I said last week at the rate we're going it was going to take two years and eight days. I made an error. It was three years and twelve days, if we move at the speed we did last week. We've got a lot of these bills just like this.

Further Discussion

Mr. Drew. Mr. Chairman and members of the convention, I'll only take a minute to discuss their little to say that hasn't already been said. My history doesn't go back quite as far as some of the previous speakers on this issue of "the king can do no wrong." Possibly it did originate with that theory. But let me tell you what the theory behind the immunity clause is. It is for the protection of the public. Protection of the public against one individual. The question that I wanted to ask Judge Tate which I do not know the answer to and possibly someone here does. Suppose a tremendous accident happened and it wound up with a ten million dollar judgement against your school board and your school board did not have the money to pay the judgement without going into complete bankruptcy. What is their bonding position for future bond issues with a ten million dollar judgement against them? I don't know, but I think anyone purchasing those bonds would look very closely and look a second time before they bought those bonds. As I said, this is not the "king can do no wrong", but that the public as a whole should not suffer for the benefit of one individual. That's the real basis and the real theory behind the immunity clause. I am going to support the clause as recommended by the Legislative Powers and Functions Committee. We have been operating under that procedure at the present time and no one with a valid claim has been denied a suit. Let me bring this to your attention in the same light, that the legislature authorizes suits, and I don't think valid claims have ever been refused, they must, and I certainly do feel some obligation toward fulfilling payment of the judgement that is obtained. Without that immunity and that immunity having been waived by the legislature and then all of a sudden we go into session and we come up with a stack of bills and legislation in the name of the legislature doing the exact thing which you are trying to avoid. You are then saying, "well, if the state does not have the money, you the legislators decide which judgements you think should merit being paid and which should not be paid." This amendment is bad. It accomplishes nothing that can not be done under present procedure. I think that we are putting the legislature in the position then of having no knowledge whatsoever of these law suits until they should reach judgements. As Mr. Jack said, as Mr. LeBreton mentioned, when you have a tremendous judgement, you have a very ripe and fertile area for political pressures to be brought in order to pay these judgements. The one judgement that Mr. Jack mentioned I believe, was turned down by two or three administrations before it was finally gotten through for payment. I urge your defeat of this amendment and, in the final outcome, to adopt the recommendation of the committee.

Questions

Mr. Flory. Mr. Drew, under your theory of sovereign immunity, aren't you saying in effect that we put a price tag on justice?

Mr. Drew. No, I'm not saying we put a price tag on justice. Mr. Flory, I'm saying that the public, and that's the taxpayers and the people who are particularly area of a very active state, their welfare is paramount to the welfare of you or me or any other individual.

Mr. Womack. I will make my question very simple. It's something for those who feel you need a new constitution to think about. Can you foresee any area of a very active state, every school board in this state passing a resolution advising the public not to vote for this document as a result of this one item?

Mr. Drew. Very easily, Mr. Womack, very easily.

Further Discussion

Mr. J. JACKSON. Mr. Chairman, delegates to the convention, I rise in support of this amendment. Some of the things in support of this amendment have been brought out by Justice Tate, particularly, and Mr. Kelly. The opposition says primarily that they are concerned about nuisance suits. I believe that kind of decision ought to be decided by the courts whether they are nuisance suits. My apprehension is that there are what is called summary judgments whereby anybody initiating a nuisance suit before the court, can decide even before giving it a five-minute hearing that it ought not to be even entertained. We talk about it being a purge of the lawyers. What if taxpayer of the city of New Orleans or an employee of the state should not they have the right to have the same kind of consideration? Another point is people saying that this is a rape on the State of Louisiana. I know particularly that if they put there and knock down some property or take someone's property by the state and I don't have the cash money for it, they can seize my house.

I do that in a city or parish. Finally, we talk about the prescription period. As you know, the legislature meets once every year. What happens if after the legislature meets, that someone one day after... if we keep the committee amendments, you may have the problem of him fulfilling the one year prescription period to file such a suit. I think that the immunity thing has been paid by many of the people that it is eroding. If a judicial interpretation, the protections are built in the present amendment that provides that the legislature may appropriate the money and if a judgment is entered for the state in the amount of ten million, the legislature may not have to clear that million, I would twenty-five hundred... As host of you know, we had about seven amendments which attempted to do from one extreme to the other. This amendment as proposed by Mr. Roy and others represent a middle ground agreement as the best way to proceed with this problem. I understand that there are a couple of amendments that we are going to clarify some of them, you mean that state would have to pay the amount of penalties if the injury was done in the state... I would ask that we adopt this amendment because of the reasons I stated before and particularly the comments raised by Mr. Kelly and myself here. I yield to any question at this point.

Question

Mr. ROY. Mr. Jackson, this is a fairly lengthy question. You believe that with the seven hundred odd suits that were presented to the legislature each year to be killed by people. They are not to you, I know, as a legislator, a bill that would take the state... don't you think it is about two or three hundred dollar just to get those bills through authorizing just when the same thing can be achieved by just using the state without that necessity of the state to still protect the value you would have the judgment against the state and then it don't appropriate the money.

Mr. JACKSON. Thank you, Mr. Roy, I'm not asking any leading questions, personally, I somewhat agree with you and I'm somewhat concerned in the fact that what we are talking about is instituting a law that is proposed for the state that we have to do, I might to illustrate that with an example, if the state has a bill that is proposed by the legislature, I want to question to you that if the state proposed that were up here, you would have that in the next year you have to pay it if they don't agree to it, and the state can't come any more, we would have to pay it, that same kind of problem we are talking about here, I think that is the only way to handle it, we are trying to get it to be a state or service center.

Mr. BISHOP. Mr. JACKSON, I'm not the chairman here. That's the best way to let Justice Tate, myself, and other members of the committee to hear what we have to say.

against the state, would you agree that you would wish to see your amendment and so on, include tort suits against the state?

Mr. J. JACKSON. I'm not the lead speaker. I co-authored this amendment so you would have to talk to Mr. Roy. I would suggest that we adopt the amendment and try whatever number clarification we need, I would want to be prepared to give an explanation, but I think that the committee proposal with this amendment attempt to delete and substitute in place of... that the committee proposal attempts to keep things in status quo which I am definitely disagreeable with. I'm speaking to argue, Mr. Anzalone, I don't particularly understand the part about torts. It's just the basic principle of where the suit ought to be resolved.

Further Discussion

Mr. DE BIEUX. Mr. Chairman, I'm not a member of the convention, I'd like to make a few suggestions that have been raised here, particularly by one of the speakers, I would say in advance that I think I have a better proposal than the one we have before us at this particular time and if we can establish that the convention wants to waive the immunity of the state then subsequently I'd like to offer mine as the proposal that should go into the constitution. There is a provision in our code that says that "prescription against the state shall be... I mean against any person, shall be one year for tort actions." But the law as the state is concerned the constitution carries the provision that the legislature may waive any prescription or exemption which has occurred in favor of the state or other public body against any claim or claim when such prescription or exemption means that you may have an action that has actually prescribed against the state for ten or fifteen or twenty years. Therefore, as a result of that the state never knows when it's relieved from the liability of a potential claim. This way if we waive that immunity, the prescription will be the same against the state as an individual and we will have some security knowing when we are through with suits, someone gave about the liability. At the present time as a member of the legislature, I can say that the biggest nuisance we have is... through resolutions allowing someone to sue a state or a political subdivision, I would think that that probably the cost of these resolutions may exceed the value of some of the suits which we may have to authorize. But yet, nevertheless, if an individual had a right, why shouldn't he have the right to sue the state like he has anybody else, why should some public official who has done something immensely wrong hide behind the immunity to keep the state from having liability in that particular area. It's not a question of whether we should try to litigate the state or some public officials with wrongdoings by such lawsuits. Now with reference to the kind of additional provisions and so forth, I think that is absolutely absurd because at the present time we usually don't throw down any of those resolutions. So, amendments there, but going to be a problem, mainly in suits with the taking of this immunity, out of the constitution than we have already. Because those resolutions just go through a majority of both the... why things that are the majority of parties that are thrown the legislature. I don't know how to word it, maybe any damage which would be the state to be... I don't know what you think, the legislature is already doing it, and that is the principle which is the immunity of the state or political subdivisions in the constitution, now Mr. Chairman, I'll be glad to answer a question.

Questions

Mr. JACKSON. Justice Tate, I'm not the lead speaker, you might want to know that the committee here has adopted a resolution in the fact, I don't know if you are correct and have been corrected, I'm going to the committee, would it be a better way to handle it?

20th Days Proceedings—July 26, 1973

on the fact that the legislature had to ~~bring~~ authorize these nuisance suits?

Mr. DeBlieux: I think it would, Mr. Jackson. I'd say this, any attorney who would file a nuisance suit against the state, there's something wrong with him, the trouble he'd have to go through to collect any money out of it. It certainly won't be a nuisance to anybody but him before he gets through with it.

Mr. J. Jackson: Well, in fact, as I understand you to say that any nuisance suits that have been filed against the state have already gotten, in the past, the sanction of the legislature? So that the arguments about nuisance suits as to not waive immunity is not really at stake what some people have attempted to.

Mr. DeBlieux: I agree with you. That's correct.

[Mr. DeBlieux: This is the end of the session. I'm sorry.]

Further Discussion

Mr. Abraham: Fellow delegates, I've sat here for about an hour and a half or two hours and listened to all these arguments by these attorneys, judges, legislators, and the public that I have drawn is that no one knows what the effect of this amendment is going to be. There has been so much difference of opinion on it. Nobody has convinced me in any way just what will happen out of this. Now the legislative committee spent six months on this article, and I trust that they spent quite a bit of time on this particular provision, and so the question I ask is where do you stand on this amendment then? Why didn't some of these people appear before this committee, and speak to them about it so that it could be studied further in detail, and let them come up with the decision. We're being asked now to come up, within a matter of an hour and a half, to come up with a decision that everybody is going to be in disagreement with. We're asked to override the recommendations of the committee. Well I'm not a lawyer, I'm not a legislator, I'm not a judge, I'm an engineer and a businessman, and over the years I've learned one thing and that is whenever I have an area of controversy where no one is sure what the result will be, or how I can get what happens ought to be made in a particular situation, I'd better leave that situation alone. I just better leave it as it is until someone can prove to me to my satisfaction that he has a better solution. So I therefore recommend that we reject this amendment. We accept the recommendation of the committee, and I was going to have the previous question but since we have other speakers I think that we should let them speak. I think that we need to get on with our business; let's get off of this subject. Let's either say yes or no and get on to the next article.

Further Discussion

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Chairman, members of the delegation, I'm one of the co-author, and one of those plaintiff attorneys that plans to bring a nuisance suit. We've heard a lot of talk about nuisance suits and about attorneys and about school board funds being seized and this and that argument, and let's see who is bringing those arguments. And that's what all I'm trying to do is to bring it to you, let me ask you this one question: Is state government in your mind, a business? In my mind, state government is one of the biggest businesses that exists in this state, and I'll tell you the truth, I'm very proud of the way our directors here, Lencie Williams, Tom Laury, Eddie LeBreton, Wellburn Jack and Murray Brown have defended our state and stand up for everybody's liberty. They are doing their job as the owners of a big business, and I am proud to be a shareholder in a member that has interest in state government. Let me submit this to you. What if I owned the hard hat manufacturing company and I went out to visit a city and a girl fell out to somebody's negligence and somebody injured her. Would I have a right to bring a suit? Well, yes, because I'm not a shareholder definitely. I don't have to supply that right anywhere, it's automatic. The article is simply this: Is state government a business? Yes it is. Then why should they be allowed to have special privileges? And look who's arguing for it, and by rights they should be a shareholder. They are doing it. But they are wrong gentlemen. A citizen should not be denied his right of action against the state. Let's examine it a little further. There are only five states remaining that invoke sovereign immunity. Nineteen of them have done away with it judicially, ten of them by statute. Fifteen of them have waived it by buying insurance to cover their different agencies. Again Louisiana remains at the bottom. There are only five of us remaining. Let's do away with this concept. Sovereign immunity does not belong in this constitution. Thank you.

Questions

Mrs. Zervigon: Mr. Gauthier, most of the discussion on this particular amendment has been on the concept of sovereign immunity and most of us I think have either made up our minds one way or the other or will remain confused for the balance of the afternoon, so I'd like to ask you one other question about your amendment. It's been suggested by a gentleman that it makes a change in the law, is it not the case that now when a suit is brought against a school board, the state pays the judgement if the suit is successful?

Mr. Gauthier: I couldn't answer that. I see Senator DeBlieux saying no. I don't know to be honest. Pappy Triche says yes and I'll take his word for it.

Mrs. Zervigon: Is it the case....

Mr. Gauthier: He's on our side.

Mrs. Zervigon: So, you're maintaining that there is no change in law as to how local governments are treated under this amendment and under the present law?

Mr. Gauthier: Would you repeat that please?

Mrs. Zervigon: I say, is it your position that there is no change in how local governments are treated under your amendment from the way they are presently treated under the present constitution?

Mr. Gauthier: The only change would be the ability to bring the suit without securing legislative permission. The methods of payment would stay the same.

Mrs. Zervigon: Thank you.

Mr. Burton: Mr. Gauthier, in the past I've asked you questions about the numerous exceptions to the sovereign immunity doctrine that exists under the present law. Isn't it true that under the present law that if a city or school board or a city or county violate a contract that someone can sue them for violating that contract without worrying about coming to the legislature to get permission?

Mr. Gauthier: That's correct, Mr. Burton.

Mr. Burton: Isn't it true that under the present law that if a city or school board or a city or county violates state law such as the tenure law for teachers that the teacher can bring a suit against the school board without getting permission from the legislature. Is that true?

Mr. Gauthier: That's correct.

Mr. Burton: Thank you.

LEGISLATIVE BUSINESS

20th Days Proceedings—July 26, 1973

Mr. Landrum Mr. Chairman, and fellow delegates. In response to Mr. Abraham, I am on that committee, and I did raise these questions during the committee hearings because I do believe that the state should not be able to do any more to the people than what the people can do to the state. Now, I'm in love with this state. I have family to the state. I'm in this state. My mother and father and their grandparents, right here in this state of Louisiana. So I'm concerned about the state. I believe that people should be able to file a suit in the regular channels without being able to get permission from the legislature. Why should anybody have to go to the legislature to file a suit against the state? I'm not saying anything about winning a suit. I'm only speaking in regard to the fact that if I want to sue the state of Louisiana, then I should be able to go to the courts, get an attorney, and if that attorney feels that I have a good case, then he proceeds with that suit. If not, he should advise me that Landrum you don't have nothing. So don't... y'all follow through with this. Last year alone, rather this year, 17 individuals were denied the permission to file suit in the state of Louisiana. The legislature denied 17 right here in this state this year. Not last year, but this year. Now, we talked about what happens when... in order to collect. I'm not really that much concerned about that part of it, but even when considering the collection part, there are people who have sold their homes, who have mortgaged their homes to pay off suits. If the state would have to mortgage one of its buildings to pay off a suit, then so be it. But I don't think it would ever get to that point. I believe that the people are concerned about the state of Louisiana just as the legislators are concerned about it and they're not going to do anything to this state. They're not going to try to harm this state. I don't believe they will. If I should find people trying to harm it then I'd fight them too. I'd fight anybody about Louisiana because Louisiana is where I was born. I don't plan to go anywhere else to live. This is where my children are and I'm concerned about the state. Therefore, I ask that you support this amendment because I believe that it's a good amendment.

Thank you.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1: [By Mr. Tapper] On page 7, delete lines 6 through 11 both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: Section 14. A. Neither the state nor any of its agencies or political subdivisions shall be immune from suit. B. However, public property shall not be subject to seizure and no judgement against the state, its agencies or political subdivisions shall be exigible, payable, or paid except out of funds appropriated for the payment by the state, its agencies or political subdivisions against whom judgment is rendered.

Explanation

Mr. Tapper Mr. Chairman, and members of the convention, fellow delegates, there has been much debate on whether or not the state and its political subdivisions should be immune from suit. Personally I subscribe to the principle that the state, neither the state nor any of its political subdivisions should be immune from suit, and I subscribe to most of the arguments that were put forth here by the proponents of the last amendment. There was much said about the attorneys filing frivolous suits, but I ask you to think about when small suits are filed for. Suits are filed for citizens of this state and other states, but mainly if this state. In most instances, the political subdivisions have insurance protecting them from public liability. In those instances, you can sue the insurance company. The amendment will delete the immunity provision in the constitution, and that is in the case of the state or any of its political subdivisions without going to the legislature for permission. It's been said here that only one time have they ever turned down the request. Well, if that be the case then there is no necessity for the immunity provision in the constitution. However, let me bring out one basic problem, and that is in the case of prescription. Prescription is going to run while the legislature is out of session, how in the world can you get the permission of the legislature to file a suit against any political subdivision or against any state or any agency of the state? My amendment will take care of those arguments or the arguments of the people who feel that there should be no immunity. It also will take care of the argument of those who fear that public property would be seized or that a political subdivision or the state would have to put out money that it does not have, because it simply says that that political subdivision or agency or if it be the state, against whom a judgment is rendered may appropriate the money to pay that judgment. They do not have to. If they do not have the money, they don't have to appropriate it. But this takes away one step, one unnecessary step. The step of going to the legislature first for permission to file a suit, then having to go to court to prove your case, and then after you prove your case, having to go back to the legislature to ask them to appropriate the money. Now, under my amendment, one step is taken out, but the legislature can still say that we don't have the money or we're not going to appropriate it period... you don't get the money or the judgement. Unless there are any questions, I think that we've belabored this quite at length, but I would like to impress you with one final thing, we're not talking about lawyers filing suits. We're talking about people who have valid claims having to go through unnecessary rituals in order to have their claims heard.

Question

Mr. Stinson Mr. Tapper, we've seen the courts do a lot of things in the last few years that never were anticipated, but don't you think that if a suit was filed in the federal court which I think it can under this bill, and that a school board or police jury had a surplus at the end of the year and they just arbitrarily failed to appropriate it and refused to pay, can't you see that court ordering that it be paid?

Mr. Tapper Mr. Stinson, with some of the things that I've seen done in that particular tribunal, I think that they could do it right now and get away with it. Mr. Stinson, I don't believe by putting this in this constitution that we're going to do anything about that. In further answer to your question, I believe that if you file a suit in the federal court now against the state or any of its political subdivisions this immunity provision will not prevail.

Further Discussion

Mr. Jenkins Mr. Chairman, delegates to the convention, I rise to speak on this subject because I think perhaps your minds are not made up yet, because I think that this is a very important. Sometime during this convention will we pass on an issue where there is more clear cut line to be drawn, where we will decide between the rights of the individual citizen versus the arbitrary discretion of state government. That's the real question. Will our citizens be insured the possibility of justice being rendered in a case. Will our courts be open to hear them in every instance? Our present constitution tution in the bill of rights in the 1921 Constitution says all courts shall be open and every person for injury done him in his rights, lands, goods, person or reputation shall have adequate remedy by the process of law and justice administered without denial, partiality or unreasonable delay. That is the only question. Sovereign immunity is contrary to that provision. It always has been. It's something out of the dark ages, literally, which has been haunting mankind in state after state where an arbitrary government could keep him from even going before the courts and determining whether liability was due him from the state. It started with the king. The king could do no wrong and then the state could do no wrong, the politicians can do no wrong. We know they can, and I would hate to think that we would have a provision that would ever close the courts to any citizen of this state who had a grievance against this state. We can't afford to put government above the people. Government makes laws it ought to be bound by those laws. There ought to be no escape. They shouldn't be able to say, no we're above the law which we have passed, but that's what sovereign immunity does. It makes a distinction between government on the one hand and every other person on the other. There should be no price tag on either of them. That's been one of the most plastic statements made in this debate. No price tag on justice. If the state owes it, the courts ought to hear it and pay it. There is a question here too of separation of powers. The lawful separation between the judicial branch and the legislative branches of government. Disputes are to be decided by the judicial branch. They are to hear all sides of a question and make a determination. It's not for the legislature to determine whether the judiciary should even hear a given cause. If liability is there the court should be free to determine it, not barred from that determination. There is some confusion too, regarding a basic legal principle. There is a difference in right of action on one hand and a cause of action on the other. Before you can go to court and be heard you must have a right of action and a cause of action. Abolishing sovereign immunity with regard to initiation of suit only deals with the right of action of a person to go to court. It doesn't give him a cause of action. If we abolish sovereign immunity in this respect, we will not be giving anyone a cause of action against the state. They must have a cause of action independent of that. It simply means that if they have a cause of action, their right of action will not be denied them merely because the state chooses not to hear their particular suit. Someone said we must protect the state against some individual who might have a claim against it. Listen, the purpose of this constitution is to protect the individual against the state. This state has almost unlimited resources and personnel. A simple individual does not. Let's protect the individual and stand up for him. This does not give him carte blanche to run over the interest of the state. If a citizen says that he will be heard by the state, by the tribunals, and if a judgment must be in his favor, it will be rendered.

Further Discussion

Mr. LeBreton Mr. Chairman, member delegates, thought I'm not an attorney. I believe that if you would read this floor amendment very closely you will see it's very close to the previous amendment that we debated and had over 20 speakers. I think that those 20 or more speakers gave every point that was to be given on either side. I don't believe that anymore can be said on this amendment after we covered the previous amendment. The attorneys that I'm speaking to tell me that this is... the same from the point of view of the state and from the point of view of your community, maybe it's a little bit worse. So, having gone through this debate for some time and listened to many speakers, I ask you to continue to vote down this thought, and therefore vote down this amendment, thank you.

Questions

Mr. Lupper Mr. LeBreton, in the House of Representatives, I think you've been there quite a while, haven't you? Who handles the bills or resolutions that are introduced for the authority to file a suit?

Mr. LeBreton Well, the individual members and sometimes they lump them.

Mr. Tapper Well, does not it go to a judiciary committee on which there are maybe 14 or 16 members?

Mr. LeBreton That's right, sir.

Mr. Tapper Does not that committee decide whether or not to report the bill out favorably, authorizing the suits?

Mr. LeBreton That's my understanding. I... when I served on the judiciary committee we didn't have that assignment.

Mr. Tapper I see, but if you have a committee with 14 members and 8 of them say that you don't have a suit, then it's not reported favorably and you're not entitled to file your suit, is that not correct?

Mr. LeBreton Well, I don't know that I would agree with that. I would think that the... I've never heard a complaint in my years there that you mentioned, where somebody wanted to file a suit wasn't given permission if they had a legitimate proposition. I can't recall of anybody who was denied; now, maybe you're looking down my throat and you know somebody who was denied, but I don't know of anybody that had cause and was denied. In fact, I don't know anybody that was denied, but maybe there was.

Mr. Tapper Well, did you know, Mr. LeBreton, that I wouldn't take unfair advantage of you?

Mr. LeBreton Thank you very much, buddy.

Mr. Roemer You oppose this amendment, and I think that I understand your reasons. However, isn't it true, Mr. Delegate, that this amendment does not affect the power of the legislature by non-appropriation of funds if they so wish?

Mr. LeBreton Is that a question?

Mr. Roemer Yes.

Mr. LeBreton Well, if I understand the question, I would agree that it does not affect a legislator's power and that wasn't the reason that I was objecting to it if you heard my previous remarks. I'm objecting to the amendment because I think it opens the matter of suit against the state and primarily the local communities, many who can't afford it, to a point where it will be a startling amount of money that we'll have to appropriate for defense. That was my basis for moving it. I repeated that I didn't know of any large or any small amount of reason to change until I got here today, but of all the years I've been at legislature, I haven't heard of any fuss about our method.

Mr. Roemer Well, I see. The only thing that this amendment really does from the present situation then, is to eliminate the legislative screening. Is that right?

Mr. LeBreton Well, it eliminates the costs of defense, it eliminates the many suits, it eliminates the... in part, the political necessity for finding the money for a judgment when the legislators didn't have anything to do about the suit and I can give my speech over again...

Mr. Roemer No, no. I'm asking a question which I don't think you answered. I'm asking does not

20th Days Proceedings—July 26, 1973

The amendment only eliminate from the present practice, legislative screening?

Mr. LeBreton Not in my opinion, as I said in many words.

Further Discussion

Mr. Jack Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I rise to oppose this amendment. It's just like the other one and I wouldn't have taken the floor, except I wanted to mention one or two things. Now, my friend, Mr. Woody Jenkins, is talking about no price tag on justice and all those kind of things, rather surprised, like the do-gooders, but let me tell you there are things where you have to have laws on. For instance, in the 41 years I've practiced law on August 2, I've had lots of people I've gotten acquitted for various crimes. Now, you don't have a law, even with the permission of legislature, let's those innocent people that I got off, because they were all innocent, of course, doesn't allow them to sue the state, even if the state agrees to it because you can't state a cause of action under our law. You can't state a cause of action in the Union where you've been charged with a crime and you're acquitted. If you could prove the D.A. did it maliciously of course, you could sue him. So, it's not always everything you're entitled a recompense for. You think of the good of everybody. Now, there's been instances where people were convicted not to do it, but later on, in some instances where people were innocent and convicted wrongfully where a legislature has reimbursed them. There was a man who wrote a book called Errors of Criminal Justice. He was a professor at Yale or Conviction of the Innocent. It had two names. It showed numerous cases of innocent people being convicted and later on, it was found that they were innocent. Now those people, if they sued in the state, they couldn't get any judgement. Even though those states allowed suits. The only recourse they had was to go to the legislature. Many a person has been acquitted in the last few years here in federal courts, state courts, city courts and all of them. Now, if you will protect everybody, why don't you get busy, in not just the legislature and I don't believe that way that... nobody's perfect and the prosecution is going to make some errors, but you people, if you're a do-gooder and you think that everybody that's acquitted ought to be able to sue the state, you who are in the legislature get busy and pass that law and boy, you'll see some of our lawyers really pick up steam. We won't need to practice but a few years before we'll have plenty of money. Now that's just the thing that people have to, as citizens of this state, this country, take a chance on maybe being prosecuted when they're innocent and get convicted or turned loose, either way. So I just say that you've got to pass laws that are beneficial to the state as a whole. We've killed one bill. There's a lot of lobbying going on on this and let's kill this amendment. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Burson Folks, you know, you get lot in this kind and sometimes you can't see the real issues. What's the real issue in this case? It's just like Mr. Rieger pointed out. The only thing that this would change from the present circumstance is it would be necessary for a citizen of this state who was injured to come to the legislature and get permission to file a suit. Now, there has been great publicity here on the part of all the legislators who have spoken against this concept, about the poor school boards and the district attorneys. Let me tell you that I am a member of a school board and I am an assistant district attorney. So I have a little bit more perspective about these two areas than the legislators who have brought to enlighten you on this point. What do we talk about with regard to a school board? With a school board right now today, if the school board violated a contract, we can be sued. If a school board violated either a state law such as the tenure law, we can be sued by the teacher, janitor or bus driver or our parents, and there are plenty of these suits. If it is when we're talking about negligence liability, we are talking about tort damages for personal injury and personal injury means that if my school board got a school bus full of kids that hit a train as a railroad crossing and as a happened last year in our parish; that if you want to void the benefit of sovereign immunity you're telling those parents of these children that the school board is short-sighted enough to have failed to get liability insurance that they have no right of action for negligence and for the wrongful death of their children. Now, if you want to vote that way, just to maintain legislative privilege in promoting these bills to give permission to file suits, well then by all means vote that way, but I want you to know what you do when you're doing it, because what we're talking about with regard to school boards is legislative permission to file a tort suit when a school bus load full of kids gets hit at a railroad crossing. So remember that, and if the school board doesn't have sense enough to have liability insurance for that kind of accident then they ought to be sued, and I'll be sued. Now, as assistant district attorney, I am somewhat familiar with law suits, being filed right now, today, in federal court, every day, against district attorneys in this state for alleged violation of federal constitutional laws. Certainly I am much in sympathy with the district attorney on that point, however, if that's the only law on the books, we come to the issue that Mr. Jenkins raised. Are you going to endorse the state against the people or the people against the state? The United States Constitution and Amendment 14 say that no state shall deny any individual due process of law. It says no state shall deny. That's the United States Constitution. Are we going to do this? And I would point out that with regard to this immunity and police officers in cities right now you can sue any city police officer in the state who violates the rights of an individual, and you can do it in state court. You don't need legislative permission to do it because I've done it myself. That's the only suit that I've ever filed against the city. I've defended plenty of them in the personal injury at the school board and I can tell you that sovereign immunity rests with only the personal injury category, where I'm asking you do you want that school bus load full of kids to get hit by a train and the parent not to have a right of action? Or do you want, if a police jury run in a ferry boat and they're short-sighted enough not to provide maritime insurance and that ferry boat sinks, do you want the orphans, the orphans who are left because if that negligence be deprived if a right of action in the courts of this state. Now if that's what you want then you can stand and vote for this, but I can tell you that in federal court they've already ruled that they've got a right of action in maritime law which is a federal law, and is interpreted by the federal courts, and they've said in the district court in New Orleans that they've got a right of action. Any lawyer worth his salt is going to try to get that law into federal court in the state court because he wants that law, where his jury verdict is not reversible by the appellate court, and if he gets a jury verdict it will hold up when you vote, vote how you please, but know why you're voting that way, that's all I can ask.

Point of Information

Mr. Troly Mr. Assistant Attorney General, would you require it from the Chair at this time, if the Attorney is divisible, Point of the Chair?

Mr. LeBreton We'll ask the clerk if the question is divisible.

Mr. Rieger Mr. Assistant Attorney General, would you require it from the Chair at this time, if the Attorney is divisible?

20th Days Proceedings—July 26, 1973

Further Discussion

Mr. Duval Mr. Acting-Chairman, fellow delegates, I am at this time voting on the merits of the dilemma for the following reasons. I think that if all we're talking about is suits, under tort, that certainly the doctrine of sovereign immunity should be waived as it now stands because I think it's farcical, in that it's been eroded away completely. What concerns me is suits not involving appropriations of money. I think that there is plenty of protection under the Roy amendment and under the present amendment there. I'm wondering about the extent of sovereign immunity...how it exists, and I've talked to 10 or 12 lawyers and all of them had different opinions. One: if I were to sue the state alleging that under a Spanish land grant I owned the property upon which the state capital is located. Many people say that I should be able to urge that right. Well, in that instance, as a matter of public policy, I think that the rights of one individual would be diminished because of the rights of the whole. In other words, in the event the person prevailed in the courts in their infinite wisdom, held in the favor of the plaintiff, then we would have to...it would cost the state a great amount of money. What I'm saying is are all we're talking about is tort? Are we talking about other suits? Now, if someone can give me a legal opinion that there is no immunity at all, the state has no immunity at all, except in matters of tort, then I say, let's do away with it now. I agree, but if the state presently has an immunity on suits such as probate suits, etc., perhaps certain public policy decisions would have to be made that would be a political decision that should be made by the legislature and not the courts. Now, if someone can certify to me that legally the states immunity only applies to tort suits, then we've been wasting a lot of time, because we ought to do away with it. But if the states immunity presently applies to other matters, other than suits in tort where you don't have a money judgement...you're not worried about collecting money...you have a judgement for land or mandamus or for the other things, then the public could suffer for the rights of one individual. We do live in a society and we all make a social contract, and I don't think that the rights of society should suffer for the rights of one individual. It's a very difficult question and I am very torn with it, but if the law is now that there is no immunity except in tort, then, heck, let's do away with it, but I'd like for someone to inform me about the law. That's what I'd like, and I'm an attorney and I don't know.

Questions

Mr. Perez This is a proposal with respect to waiving sovereign immunity is so great, why do you think that the United States has never waived its immunity and still has the right to sue on that you must secure its consent before you sue?

Mr. Duval Well, I would assume that that immunity would apply to other things other than tort.

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Duval, are you satisfied that this present amendment does not restrict itself to tort actions?

Mr. Duval Yes.

Mr. Roy Mr. Duval, in your question about the social contract, I take it that when years ago the majority of people felt certain people should be discriminated against if that was a social contract thing, then the right of the individual should have been superseded by the right of the majority, do you agree?

Mr. Duval I think that question is phrased such that I refuse to answer it because it doesn't make sense.

Mr. Roy Oh, yes, it makes sense. Aren't you saying that irrespective of the right of the individual that the social contract mandates that the state whether it is right or wrong supersedes the individual?

Mr. Duval Well conceivably the court could say that the title to the state of Louisiana was an Alphonse Gaston and we all had to leave and be evicted. Now, should all the rights of all the other individuals be sacrificed the right of Mr. Alphonse Gaston who has got a legal claim to the state of Louisiana under the Louisiana purchase was defective?

Mr. Roy You haven't answered my question but...

Mr. Duval I am attempting to answer it in the same way it was asked.

Mr. Roy No, I thought you meant that the individual is subservient to the state alone.

Mr. Duval Of course not, that is not what I mean at all.

I say in certain instances the rights of one individual would be mitigated by the rights of all the other individuals in the state.

Mr. Roy Shouldn't that individual at least have the right and the privilege of going to a court of law to determine whether his rights supersedes that of the state or not? And isn't that all we are asking in this particular amendment?

Mr. Duval I agree with you basically, except in certain crucial instances I think that the decision is a political one.

Mr. Roy Well then the state and its judiciary system in my opinion, and I am asking you, don't you think that the state court would then say that we waive the interest of the individual against three and one half million people and we then will rule in favor of three and one half million people.

Mr. Duval Well, you boil down to where you put it on that?

Mr. Roy But I would like to know really does the immunity exist anyhow and if it doesn't?

Mr. Duval I can agree with you...

Mr. Casey I am sorry Mr. Duval you are out of time.

Further Discussion

Mr. Stovall Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, Delegate Denney has an amendment which is on your desk and which will be presented later on which seems to accomplish the purpose that many of you are concerned about, without relinquishing the rights of the state. It says in effect, the legislature shall adopt statutes providing methods of filing suits against the state, its agencies and political subdivisions. Such statutes may waive immunity from suit and liability and shall provide a method of procedure. My point is this, the present amendment which is before us is restricting this amendment that will be presented by Mr. Denney seems to be a middle of the road position which answers many of the concerned. My suggestion is that we vote on the amendment which is before us. I think most of us have made up our minds and then that we deal with the amendment that is being presented by Mr. Denney. And Mr. Chairman, if I am in order, I would like to move the previous question.

[Motion for the Previous Question.
YEAS: 12-9]

Further Discussion

Mr. Conroy I will be brief. I am opposed to this amendment and I want to try to correct a couple of misconceptions. As I mentioned before I am entirely sympathetic to those who wish to expand the state's liability for tort, for negligence, to respond in suits for such matter. The United States government enacted the federal tort...claim act. That act permits suits for negligence against the federal government, but it is limited in scope to that activity. Under the original proposal the state of Louisiana could enact a comparable waiver of liability for tort claims. And I think probably the legislature should, but we have heard some dramatic speeches about the rights of the individual in such action. The amendment here goes far beyond the rights of an individual. It opens up the state to suits not just by individuals but by large corporations as well. And there may be quite a few such suits hanging in the wind and some substantial liabilities on the part of the state. Right now when the state leases lands and royalties are paid to the state, it keeps those royalties, no matter what. Be careful what you do with this amendment. Be careful what you do in this area because you may be opening up a possibility that will bring on the state serious economic consequences.

Thank you.

Question

Mr. Avant Mr. Conroy, you partially clarified the question that I was going to ask but I just want to ask it again on this point. Any implication by any person that the United States of America still retain the doctrine of sovereign immunity to the fullest and utmost extent is not correct. It has waived sovereign immunity under the federal tort claims act. Has it not, sir?

Mr. Conroy Under a statute which would similarly be possible under the original proposal submitted by the committee.

Further Discussion

Mr. Shannon Mr. Vice-Chairman, fellow delegates, we have been arguing this thing back and forth for about two and one-half hours now seems like, maybe longer than that. And I have heard some of the attorneys get up here and say what the committee came out with was good and I have heard others offer amendments to try to change it. As I see it, the committee recommendation is good so I now move the question on the entire subject matter of Section 14.

[Motion for the Previous Question on the entire subject matter rejected: 33-63. Previous Question ordered on the amendment.]

Closing

Mr. Tapper Thank you, Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I know you are growing weary with these arguments and I'll try to make it brief. I would like to first, though point out, Mr. Burson pointed it out very, very ably about the school bus filled with children who would lose their right to sue if the legislature did not authorize it. And my amendment I am sure, Mr. Burson, he spoke in favor of the amendment and I just hope that you realize that he did because he didn't want to try to convince anyone one way or the other, he just wanted you to know what you were voting on. Insofar as the federal government, yes it is true. There is a federal tort claims act all of you lawyers know it and you can sue the federal government directly without their permission, without their consent. As far as it being a political decision which somebody said a while ago, it should be a political decision, well I don't agree with that. I think if an individual has a right of action against this state that that individual should be able to exercise that right without being screened by some eight or ten or fourteen members of one committee of one of the houses of the legislature and if you don't know the way it works, that is the way it works. There is a judiciary committee at each house to which these bills or resolutions are directed. If that committee does not report the bill out favorably it is not voted on by the house and therefore you are deprived of your right to sue when you have a valid claim. Now, yes, the only thing we are doing with this amendment is taking away the supervision of the legislature and this should not be there anyway. Now I ask you, you make the decision, do you want to stand by the sovereign for this technicality that can deprive any individual of his right of action? Not only these children in the school bus, what about a man twenty-five years old with about five or six children who is going down the highway and a garbage truck crosses a red light or a stop sign in front of him and kills him. He cannot sue unless he gets the permission of this committee of the legislature.

I am a member of the legislature, yes, and this is not one of the rights I think the legislature should have, this is not one of the authorities I think they should have. I believe you should weigh it as between the individual right and the right of the state. And don't make any mistake about it. Most of the subdivisions and the state's agencies are insured against this. So we are not doing anything here for the lawyers, we're not doing anything here to deprive the state of any of its money we're only attempting to give the individual the right to file the action if he does have an action. If he has no cause action he will lose his case in court. So at least let's give him that right and let's not put the state between us and the people we represent.

Questions

Mr. Guarisco Mr. Tapper, wouldn't you say that to allow the legislature to, in its discretion, to give or refuse permission to sue can lead to irresponsible government in that the garbage truck or the bus driver or the highway department dump truck can run around with impunity knowing that they can't be sued, is that correct?

Mr. Tapper That is absolutely correct, and I might tell you of an example of a case that came by me and that was against the federal government for a national guard truck. There was a claim against the national guard...driver of the national guard truck the state could not be sued because you had to get permission but the federal government was sued because it happened to have been called out in a national emergency and that person was able to sue the federal government but not the state.

Mr. Guarisco Mr. Tapper, isn't it also correct that if you oppose and vote down this amendment then in effect you are adopting the philosophy that it is better for an individual to sustain an injury than that the public should suffer an inconvenience?

Mr. Tapper That is exactly correct.

Mr. Stinson Your wonderful illustration about the national guard, isn't it a fact that that national guard was federalized when it was called out and it was on federal duty and not on state duty and therefore the federal government should have been sued?

Mr. Tapper Yes, sir I am glad you asked that question, because I have a similar case where the national guard had not been nationalized and the party that was aggrieved could not sue Mr. Stinson.

If there are no further questions, I will ask you to really consider this, I know you voted down the last amendment and I know a lot of you have thought about the possibilities of what would happen with this particular amendment but believe me in most instances, in all the instances on political subdivisions

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendments sent up by Mr. De Blieux. Amendment No. 1. On page 7 delete lines 6 through 11 both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Section 14 the immunity of the state and any of its political subdivisions from suit and liability is hereby abolished. The legislature shall provide a method of procedure in the effect of the judgment which may be rendered against the state or any of its political subdivisions however, public property shall not be subject to seizure and no judgement against the state, its agencies or political subdivisions shall be exigible, payable or paid except out of funds appropriated for payment thereof."

Explanation

Mr. De Blieux I might say this, Mr. Chairman, Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this particular amendment will allow the legislature to set up the procedure by which suits against the state can be authorized and how the judgement will have to be paid. They cannot be paid except by appropriations. The amendment provides that and I think it contains some of things that the other amendments were lacking. The issue of the immunity of the state has been well presented to you. This contains that particular provision, I don't want to labor the question very much longer and I think that this is a much, much better provision. I ask each one of you to read it over carefully and see if you don't think that this would adequately take care of the situation. And I ask you concurrence in the amendment.

Questions

Mr. Tobias Senator De Blieux, is this by chance the identical thing that we voted down in effect twice?

Mr. De Blieux No, it is not the identical thing because in the previous amendment there was no provision for the legislature to set up the procedure by which suits would be entered and how that they should... how the judgement would be paid anything of that sort. This particular amendment if you will take and compare it contains that particular provision. The legislature will have the privilege of setting the procedure and the amendment says that. The legislature shall set the procedure by which suits against the state and its political subdivisions can be filed.

Mr. Tobias Then other than the procedure, there is no difference?

Mr. De Blieux Other than that, I'll say that this is the main provision in this. That the legislature will have control over how the suits will be initiated.

Mr. Conroy But Mr. De Blieux this does contain the same attempt to waive all immunity that has twice been voted down by this convention, is that correct?

Mr. De Blieux Well, it does contain that, Mr. Conroy, but let me say this. At the present time the immunity you might say is perfunctory anyway because the legislature usually adopts those resolutions. You are costing the state money by having to pass those resolutions. You are making the legislature as you might say a little bit more popular with their constituents by being able to handle those resolutions and you are creating the nuisance of the individual of having to come to the legislature to get his resolution passed and costing them that extra amount of trouble. You are certainly not taking care of your constituents and the people and the private citizens by forcing them to go to that procedure. Even though you don't deny them the right to proceed because the legislature usually gives it.

Mr. Murphy All right, you are allowing Mr. De Blieux that all possible such suits have been presented to the legislature in the past and may not have been...

Mr. De Blieux Well as far as I know, I don't think we have ever had an occasion where we have denied the right of an individual to enter suit but it just causes him a lot of trouble to do that and I say why cause him to go ten miles to do something when he should be able to do it in one.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

Question

Mr. Champagne The question that worries me Senator is are you establishing, are you doing away and you are saying that absolutely, no immunity is enjoyed by the state? Is that what you are saying in no case... not in the cases of torts of anything but none at all?

Mr. De Blieux Well, the legislature will set up the procedure because it provides for that for the waiving of the immunity.

Further Discussion

Mr. Fulco Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, excuse me for taking up your time. I haven't been up here in some time but I have been motivated and inspired in talking about this suit. I have... I have hoped that it would have been resolved by now. We have heard about the garbage truck, the children in the busses, we have heard about the automobile accidents, and we have been led to believe that they have no right to go to court to sue the state. I can't conceive possibly... possibly conceive of these people being denied the right of a bill being introduced in the legislature and receiving permission of the legislature to sue the state. I can't recall anytime when the legislature has denied such type of request for suits against the state. But yet, previous speakers have appeared at this microphone and have attempted to cause you to believe that the legislature of the state of Louisiana would deny such a permission to sue the state. We have got to have an orderly manner to handle suits against the state. If we allow every individual the right to automatically go to court and attempt to sue the state for all types of cases whether justifiable or not, can't you imagine what a chaotic situation we will be faced in our courts. We are already told about the jam, the many cases that are on the dockets in the various court levels of our state. We are already been told many times that we need more judges on the district benches. We need more pay for the... to encourage more better judges to run. The judges don't have time to take care of all the cases that they are confronted with or that are on the docket. Yet, we really want to clear the dockets when by... removing this right or this immunity of our state government. I'll say in conclusion, kill all the amendments. Let's have an orderly manner in pursuing the right to sue the case. Let's leave the section as it is in the committee proposal. They studied this thing for months and months and they heard witnesses for months and months. And they decided to leave this section in the proposal as is and I urge you to vote down this amendment, vote down all amendments and vote for the section as submitted by the committee.

Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. LeBreton Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I will be very brief. I somewhat subscribed totally to what Mr. Fulco said and I particularly want to point out that the objection that I have to this amendment is A. It is 80 to 90 percent the same of what you have defeated previously and secondly and most important as I presented to the committee, in speaking for the... hopefully for the committee, that what we have done is studied the matter we have made few changes. We present to you a rather proven and tried method that has existed and with the few improvements that we have recommended under our comments that I have mentioned to you earlier, will give us a good rock bottom system to work from. And I repeat again, I know of no reason to change, except that I appreciate the wisdom of the attorneys that have come up here. But outside of that, I see of no reason to change. There is certainly no request from the people of the state of Louisiana and I hear everybody talking about representing the people in Louisiana, they haven't asked for a change. So let's vote this amendment down and other amendments and hopefully we can go on and pass this section.

Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mrs. Warren Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I asked Mr. Roy about helping me to put this amendment together and I noticed on it my name was spelled wrong but that doesn't matter. The Mr. LeBreton mentioned that none of the people really wanted it this is why I asked for it because it has come up in my district from a number of people and this is one of the things that they wanted. So I could not sit there and say that no people wanted it because when I go back home they are going to be challenging me on it and I just want to take this privilege of letting them know and letting you know that I am representing them and what they want. I ask you to vote for this amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Roemer I will make it real brief. I support this amendment as I also have supported the previous two amendments that tried to do in substance the same thing. The issue at hand to me is clear and it was better said by a man far wiser than myself, Benjamin Franklin. He said that those who give up liberty to purchase a little security will soon find that they have lost both, liberty and security. Now that is the issue, the liberty, the right of a man to sue if he feels that he has been wronged. What is the security involved? Those legislators here and others who want that security blanket of screening themselves want to deny some liberty so they can keep that security. Now that is the issue and it is a good issue, if it is a basic issue in a new constitution. I don't think we can do anything less than put this amendment through.

Further Discussion

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman, and delegates, I will be very brief. I believe I would like to urge first of all that you defeat the amendment and at least retain the concept of sovereign immunity whether it be the proposal that the committee is submitting to you or one of the other proposals that may be submitted at a later time. Senator DeBlieux by the wording of his amendment says this. The immunity of a state and any of its political subdivisions from suit and liability is hereby abolished. My understanding of a case that was annunciated in 1970 indicates that the doctrine of governmental immunity in Louisiana is not an affirmative constitutional guarantee. So to my way of thinking this language doesn't even belong in the constitution to start with. Because it is not a constitutional guarantee that immunity exists. So I would submit to you if you adopt an amendment which does in fact abolish the sovereign immunity that it is not necessary to specifically have the wording that Senator DeBlieux contains in his amendment. I would urge you for the reasons I have stated many times before that you reject the amendment but also for the fact that I believe, contains superfluous wording.

[REVISION QUESTION ORDERED.]

Closing

Mr. DeBlieux Mr. Chairman, and ladies and gentlemen men of the convention, it is going to be very brief. I just want to say this, that the individual citizens have lost a lot of their rights. This is giving them back one of their rights that they should have had and should retain. I ask you to at least one time, let's vote for the citizens of this state and adopt this amendment. I ask your concurrence. Thank you very much.

[Amendment rejected; 43-57. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment proposed by Mr. Denney. Amendment No. 11. On page 7, delete lines 6 through 11 both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Section 14, Paragraph A. The legislature shall adopt statutes providing methods of filing suits against the state, its agencies and political subdivisions. Such statutes and the word is 'may', I believe it has already been changed from 'shall' to 'may' on your copy but if not, you should make that correction. Such statutes may waive immunity from suit and liability shall provide a method of procedure and the effect of their judgements which may be rendered thereon and may waive any prescriptive or preemptive period. Paragraph B. Except when it may have been pledged or hypothecated to secure payment of any debt or obligation, public property shall not be subject to seizure and no judgement against the state, its agencies or political subdivisions shall be exigible, payable, or paid except out of funds appropriated for payment by the state, its agencies or political subdivisions against whom judgement is rendered."

[4 coauthors added.]

Explanation

Mr. Denney The purpose of this amendment is to permit the legislature to waive immunity if in its judgement it deems proper to waive the immunity. But it does not bind the state forever and ever or until another amendment to the constitution in order to get back its immunity. I feel that if the legislature wants to try the immunity method, I mean the waiver of immunity method, let the legislature try it. If it is not proper and it finds it not to be proper it can always remove the waiver and go back into the state of immunity if such exists. The balance of the amendment I believe is self-explanatory and I request the delegates to please support it. I will be glad to answer any question.

Questions

Mr. Conroy Mr. Denney, I am just a little bit confused because of the copy I received. The second sentence does read, such statutes may waive immunity, is that correct?

Mr. Denney Yes, sir. That is correct. There was a typographical error and it was corrected in the original.

Mr. Conroy There is no automatic change in it?

Mr. Denney No, sir.

Mr. Conroy In what way does this, do you feel differ from the committee proposal as such...

Mr. Denney The committee report as I understand it says that any law enacted for the purpose of authorizing suits shall waive immunity. It doesn't say waive immunity. It shall waive immunity from suit and liability. My amendment says it may waive immunity from suit and liability.

Further Discussion

Mr. Jack Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, after reading Mr. Denney's amendment and noticed in the word was "shall" still there. I wasn't for it, and I discussed it with him and it has "may" in it. So I became a coauthor. I like this better than the regular material because under the regular material we have there for this section, of course, the legislature can waive it in any and all of them. This, of course, will be the same, but it goes further. They can set up some guidelines. During the time I was in the legislature, we nearly always authorized a suit, but I thought, and I think you can do it under this, that on certain suits we should have had a set up where we could have at least require affidavits as to how something happened, especially a number of the suits that I saw like at Angola and all. So this will be left up to the legislature, so that, to me, is better than in the material we have. So I ask that you pass this amendment. Good.

Further Discussion

Mr. Roy Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, Mr. Jack and all the others have been talking about snakes and I'll talk about tad-pocoquets but this is one. This is much worse than what the present amendment is in what the legislative committee came up with. At least the legislative committee provides on line 10 that if the legislature chooses to waive its immunity, that is to authorize the suit, it shall waive its immunity. Under this thing, since Mr. Moise Denney has changed the word "shall" in line 4 to "may" the legislature may authorize you to sue it and then after you go through all the process of suing and all, it may not waive its immunity. So you haven't done anything. This is very very important. We've been talking about something, and y'all have been beating me down and I've been voting the other way. But this is much worse, than the present legislative provision, because although it may authorize a suit, it may not authorize or waive its immunity. Well, what a fine thing you are in. So, you get to sue the state, or the political subdivision, but the immunity is not waived and your judgment is not worth the paper it's written on and you can never execute on it, and by that I mean you can't even present it for payment, because then the defense says we didn't waive our immunity. Now how silly are we going to get on this thing. Now if y'all are opposed to the concept of suing the state without its authority, although any public agency can sue and be sued, may be sued right now, and its immunity is automatically waived, that's one thing, but for God's sake don't come up here with something that allows the suit to be filed but does not permit the waiver of immunity. We are nowhere. I'll answer Mr. Womack's question, if he's got one on it.

Questions

Mr. Wollack Mr. Roy, I gather from what you're saying is that you don't trust the legislature in good faith to go ahead and authorize a suit, and that you feel that they would be stupid or irresponsible enough to authorize a suit for a man, saying you've got a legitimate suit, you're entitled to go to court, but we're not going to give you anything. Is this what you're saying?

Mr. Roy I'm saying that in the past I have not always been confident of what the legislature has done. But I'll be darn if I want the legislature to authorize the filing of the suit but may not waive it's immunity, because we got into that before. Mr. Womack, in several cases in the past and the supreme Court had to straighten it up. Let's look. This thing is now about 20 lines long. If we're going to go with conformity and clarity and shortness and brevity in the constitution, let's keep what the legislative committee has done. It's a lot shorter and it amounts to a little bit more than what Mr. Denney has proposed.

Mr. Drew Chris, in addition to what you just said with which I agree, can you see any purpose in the first sentence? Doesn't the Code of Civil Procedure already provide methods of filing suit?

Mr. Roy That's right and that statute is all it about no jury trials, etc.... I just think now we've gone into 20 sentences of saying less than Senator Blair said in about five, and we have less than Senator Blair and them gave us which I don't think was enough a long time ago.

Mr. Avant Mr. Roy, as I read this I want to see if it means to me and you the same thing. Doesn't it mean that the legislature shall adopt general statutes... shall adopt general statutes waiving immunity from suit and liability in certain classes of cases, yet other classes of cases you've got to get a special act if you want to sue...?

Mr. Roy No, it doesn't say that to me, because it says they shall adopt statutes providing methods of filing suit which is a procedure but the next sentence says such statutes may waive immunity. If they don't waive immunity, all you have is the right to sue, but the immunity has not been waived. So you can't win on the merits, because they then raise the issue of sovereign immunity with respect to liability.

Mr. Champagne Mr. Roy, you and I are not always together, but would you believe me if I told you that I thought this was the sorriest amendment of the day?

Mr. Roy I would certainly agree.

Further Discussion

Mr. Burson I imagine by now everybody here is just about as tired as I was when the legislators filibustered the split session to death back about a week ago. I just want to point out to you that this amendment does do one thing. It protects the rights of all the big corporations who buy bonds from any political subdivision of the state. It does that in Section B when it says that except as they may otherwise be subject to seizure, public property shall not be subject to seizure. In other words, if my hypothetical bus load full of children all get killed by that train at the railroad crossing by all means let's not let their parents file suit against a governmental subdivision where they might get a judgment because we've hypothesized to secure payment of any debt or obligation public property shall not be subject to seizure. But on the other hand if we've got a big corporation that happens to own bonds of that same political subdivision apparently under this amendment it's all right for them to sell the courthouse. That's the way I read it. If it doesn't mean that, I'd be open to explanation, but it simply states as far as I can see that public property can be subject to seizure if and when it's pledged to hypothecate. Now I submit to you again, you do what you want to do and I'm going to do what I know is right. If you want to vote to protect the rights of the big corporations who buy bonds in this state but at the same time leave the private rights of the individual citizen under the whim of the legislature then you, by all means, vote for this amendment. But I can tell you that I'm going to vote against it.

Questions

Mr. Derbes Jack, in the language of the original committee proposal, section 14, isn't it possible for the legislature to adopt a general provision permitting and authorizing an entire class of suits to be filed without an individual screening process?

Mr. Burson This is possible and under the revised statute you could sue the state highway department, and most of the tort suits filed against the state are against the state highway department. So I don't see what all of the turmoil has been about in the first place. I don't believe that an individual citizen should have to go to the legislature to get permission to file a suit just because he's been aggrieved in tort by a servant of the state rather than by somebody else.

Mr. Derbes So, just like the Federal Tort Claims Act has been recognized by the federal Congress, that type of legislation could indeed be undertaken under the provisions of the original constitution proposal. Isn't that correct?

Mr. Burson It is not required however, I have a subsequent amendment that is coming that would require it because it says that the state would waive its immunity in tort. We've had a lot of speakers tell us they didn't mind waiving immunity in tort, so we'll give everybody a chance to vote on it.

[Motion for the Previous Question on the entire subject matter rejected: 34-6. Previous question ordered on the amendment. Amendment rejected: 29-71. Motion to reconsider failed.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Mr. Avant sends up amendments. Amendment No. 1, on page 7, line 7, immediately after the word "subdivision" and the "and" before the word "and" insert the following: "may waive any prescriptive or any preemptive period".

Explanation

Mr. Avant Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I'm going to be very brief. I know you're tired. I'm not trying to get you to waive immunity. The only thing that I want to get out: the present constitution permits the legislature in these special acts to waive the immunity from suits, to waive immunity from liability and also permit the legislature to waive any prescription that may have accrued. Now, in many cases it's impossible to get an act passed by the legislature to allow you to bring the suit within the one year prescriptive period which follows the date of the accident. That is not included in the committee's draft. There is no authority in the committee's draft, specific authority, for the legislature to waive prescription. So since it was in the constitution now, if you take it out I'm afraid that the logical inference is that it was omitted for a reason. That therefore the legislature cannot waive prescription. In which case, if you were not able to get in according to the timetable of when the accident happened and when the legislature meets and so forth and get your act passed within that one year you'd just be blown up. So I ask you to vote favorably for this amendment. It just puts back something that is in the present constitution and it doesn't affect any other phase of the committee's proposal.

Questions

Mr. Derbes Mr. Avant, you're an attorney, is that correct?

Mr. Avant Yes, sir.

Mr. Derbes Let's take the prescription in Article 2315, for example, the one year prescription on causes of action for negligence. That's a civil code matter isn't it.

Mr. Avant Article 2315 is in the civil code but it doesn't contain any prescriptive period that I know anything about. The prescription is in some other article of the civil code.

Mr. Derbes Isn't it true, Mr. Avant, that, as far as I know, there are no prescriptive articles anywhere in the Louisiana Constitution? Isn't that correct?

Mr. Avant I don't know.

Mr. Derbes Well, I don't know of any, so I don't know why it's necessary to put this in the constitution in order to give the legislature the authority to waive prescription.

Mr. Avant I will try to explain it to you. The civil code says that the prescriptive for an action in tort is one year. That means that you've got to file the suit within one year after the accident happens. The present constitution expressly states that the legislature may waive the state's immunity from suit, its immunity from liability and may waive prescription. So, they frequently do waive prescription, and create a prescriptive period in the act itself. In other words, say you've got to bring a suit by a certain date. Now if you leave that out of the new constitution the inference is that you did it because you don't want the legislature to be able to waive prescription, which I don't know if that was intentionally done. All I'm doing is asking you to eliminate any possibility that the courts could so interpret it and make it clear that there is no change in the law. The law is just what it's always been. You've got to get the act from the legislature authorizing the suit and waiving the immunity and if prescription is a problem the legislature would have the right to waive prescription. It's just as simple as that.

Mr. Landry Mr. Avant, I'm not going to give up. I'm going to continue to listen to every proposal; I'm going to listen to every explanation. I want to ask you a question.

Mr. Avant Yes, sir.

Mr. Landry It might be a bit difficult for you, but I believe lawyers have been talking to lawyers, and independent people and maybe some back home, but I've been listening. I don't know whether we're on radio or not but somehow, somehow I've got to explain, just in ordinary language. Now, I want to give you a difficult problem. The question is can you explain to me what is meant by "may waive any prescriptive or any preemptive period." Can you in ordinary language, everyday language, not legal language, explain what that means?

Mr. Avant I will try to do so Mr. Landry. The law provides a period in which a suit may be brought on various types of claims. A suit on an open account, I think, you have to file suit within three years. I think it's three years. I think the account became due or the last payment was made on it. A suit on a note has to be brought within a five year period after the note became due and demandable. A suit for damages for tort must be brought within one year after the act that caused the damages occurred. In other words, if somebody runs a traffic light and runs into you while you're proceeding through an intersection on a green light and breaks your leg, you have by law one year in which to file a suit. If you do not file the suit within that one year you can't bring it later, it will be dismissed. Now, the present constitution says, in Article 11, forget the article but it is Section 35, in outlining this procedure the legislature may waive any prescription or prescriptive period which may have accrued in favor of the state or other public body against any claim or law on which suit is so authorized. Now if you delete that language from this proposal the clear inference to me is that you no longer want the legislature to be able to waive prescription, and I don't think that that was the intent of the committee. I agree it was. I don't know, but I just don't think it was. All I want to do is put it back like it was.

Mr. Landry Thank you Mr. Avant. Thank you.

[Previous question on the entire subject matter rejected: 34-6. Previous question ordered on the amendment.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1, on page 7, line 7, immediately after the word and punctuation "and" insert the following sentence: "may ther the state nor any of its agencies or political subdivisions shall be immune from suit" and in your copy this may not be included "or liability in tort".

Explanation

Mr. Burson We've had a number of speakers today on this issue who had, I think, good faith doubts about the extent of just a blanket elimination of sovereign immunity. They were worried about things like suits involving state land, which might adversely affect the whole policy of the state of Louisiana. We've had a number of speakers who expressed doubts in that area who said that they had no objection to an individual who was involved in an accident bringing a personal injury suit without permission of the legislature. This is what the amendment says. You will note that my amendment does not substitute for the committee proposal. It would simply be an addendum to the committee proposal. The committee proposal provisions, which would permit the legislature to set up the means by which the individual would exercise his new-found right in tort could be done in a state tort claims act. You've already had previous speakers up here tell you that we have a federal tort claims act now. So, I am simply telling you that this amendment, the purpose of this amendment, would be to provide for a state tort claims act. Instead of breaking down into different categories or classes and removing the immunity from the state highway department and then maybe in another piece of legislation removing the immunity from school boards and maybe in another removing it from the police jury, I would say let's go ahead and have one state tort claims act which would permit a citizen if he's injured in tort to act in the same legal capacity as he would against any other defendant in a tort suit, and let's let the legislature provide the means of how this could be done in a tort act.

Questions

Mr. Denney Mr. Burson, why would the state have to authorize a suit to be filed if it has no immunity?

Mr. Burson The only thing that I'm adverting to there is the legislature may authorize suits to be filed against the state and the effect of judgements which may be rendered therein. I have not affected that last clause the effects of judgements which may be rendered therein. It is certainly my intent that you would be able to file a suit without having legislative permission. I'm open and above board about that, if you were involved in a personal injury situation. If my hypothetical examples of the ferry boat that sunk or the school bus hit by a train at a railroad crossing were involved, you would not need legislative permission to file a suit in those instances or in any instance when you had suffered a personal injury at the hands of a servant of the state.

Mr. Denney In other words, sir, the first part of this sentence in the committee report where the legislature may authorize really has no meaning any more...

Mr. Burson It would be negated insofar as it referred to tort claims. However, we have been... in the course of the debate introduced to other areas such as property rights that would still, as I interpreted it would still be left to the legislative act.

Mr. Denney Thank you, sir.

Mr. Jenkins Delegate Burson, in other words, this would simply put us in line with the federal government and waive immunity to the same extent that the federal government has.

Mr. Burson It would be my interpretation that we would do this by this amendment, yes, sir.

Further Discussion

Mr. Conroy Certainly this amendment is not as bad as some of the others, but it still is bad. The proposed amendment does not do anything that the legislature could not do under the committee proposal. The legislature could enact a general tort claim act. Reference was made to the federal tort claim act. I'm not the fanatical type. I know that it exists. My impression was that it had certain limitations and restrictions in it. I'm concerned again about the possibilities of the kind of suit that we're opening up for the state. Suppose for example, a major property damage suffered not by an individual, but by a major corporation whose property is flooded due to the negligence of a levee board employee, or something like that. There are many types of things that come to my mind that this could open up, that you can't close the door on again. Again I say, leave it to the legislature, that's what the committee proposal does. These sort of things can be handled. They've been handled in the past and I think that we should adopt the committee proposal and reject this amendment.

Questions

Mr. Abraham David, the proposal by the committee said that the legislature may authorize a suit and that to me means that they could enact a general law which says that people can sue the state for liability claims for personal damages or something without having to come to the legislature. All right, the last sentence says then that any law enacted shall waive immunity. So this language right here is simply superfluous to what's already here, is it not? If they're going to enact a law stating that a person can sue the state then the second sentence here says that they shall waive immunity, and that law would have to contain that would it not?

Mr. Conroy I'm confused about the thrust of your question, Mac...

Mr. Abraham What I'm trying to say is that the amendment is not necessary because the provision of the committee takes care of that.

Mr. Conroy The thing that the amendment hopes to do, the legislature can do under the committee proposal, yes, but the legislature would have to do it. This is a blanket waiver that the legislature, I think, if it attempted to waive liability and tort would probably put certain limitations on what it was doing, rather than exposing the state to multi-million dollar suits.

Further Discussion

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates to the convention, the more amendments that we have seen presented on this subject matter, the better and better I personally like the committee proposal. First of all, in the amendment as submitted by Mr. Burson, the word tort is used. I do not know where the word tort is used in the revised statutes, even, or in the code... the civil code, the word offense and quasi-offense, is used to my knowledge in the area of tort. The word tort certainly has legal significance, but it is more a word coined for colloquial, everyday usage rather than for to be contained in the constitution, and this point was very intelligently pointed out by one of you up on the floor here just now. Secondly, a proposal of this type doesn't belong in the constitution. Why are you going to waive immunity just for a certain one kind of suit and leave all other types of suits alone. I submit to you ladies and gentlemen, that this has no place in our constitution. Either you're for sovereign immunity or you're against the concept. Vote for or against the concept, but don't make special itemized exceptions such as this type if you adopt this amendment. As Mr. Conroy was very well pointed out, the legislature itself by act can waive immunity from tort actions and liability therefrom if it deems appropriate and I can assure you gentlemen that under no circumstances will any widow of a truck driver or an ice truck or a milk truck with its children have they been prohibited from filing a suit against the state of Louisiana, and I would urge rejection of the amendment.

Questions

Mr. Landrum Mr. Casey, now you have been in the Legislature for some time.

Mr. Casey Six years, Rev. Landrum.

Mr. Landrum Six years. Well, all right, probably a little before your time even when one-third of the requests were turned down. Do you know that?

Mr. Casey One-third of what requests were turned down when, Rev. Landrum? I don't quite understand your question.

Mr. Landrum I believe it was 1965 or 1964, when in about 29 applicants' appeals to file suits, ten of those were turned down.

Mr. Casey Reverend, I don't know. It is possible ...

Mr. Landrum Mr. LeBreton, I wish you were right up there beside him because you were there.

Mr. Casey Reverend Landrum, I assume that the question was directed to me...

Mr. Landrum Yes.

Mr. Casey ...and I'm willing to say this. First of all, that it is possible requests for suit have been rejected, but do you know that as far as I know that when authorization is requested what the legislative committee, the judiciary committee, looks for is the determination first of all to see if prescription has run? Now if prescription has run, the person couldn't file a suit even if sovereign immunity was waived, and that's to my knowledge, all that the judiciary committee looks for, Reverend Landrum.

Mr. Landrum And I think that's really the cover you're really hiding behind, that prescription.

Mr. Casey Reverend Landrum, I'm not hiding behind anything. I feel very strong about the concept of sovereign immunity and I don't believe that we would automatically waive it.

Mr. Landrum Mr. Casey, I'll pass, thank you.

Mr. Jenkins Mr. Casey, under what circumstances and what facilities would the legislature have to determine the meritoriousness of a given case, as to whether or not it should be allowed to be entered into the court system? Is the legislature set up to do that sort of thing?

Mr. Casey To my knowledge, the legislature does not determine the merit of a case, to determine whether it is meritorious or not, because then in fact, you would really virtually have to have a trial and present the evidence, and I think, you know and I know that the judiciary committee, in fact, does not go into that. That all it does look for is to determine if the claim has or has not been waived.

Mr. Jenkins In other words, it does not look into the merit of a case...

Mr. Henry Mr. Jenkins, he's exceeded his time, Mr. Henry.

Further Discussion

Mr. Stinson Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, there are certain dangers of speeches of this in

...that are not pointed out. In some of the other amendments there was a safeguard as to how such a judgment would be paid and the need for the safeguard was to see that regular procedure in the state and others would not be disrupted by a judgement. Now when we speak of judgements now days, it's not a few thousand dollars, if you get judgements, oftentimes it's a hundred thousand and two hundred thousand dollars. Can you imagine this school board that has been used as an example when the school bus was run into a serious problem, as tied in with the recommendations of the committee, they wouldn't have to get... authority from the legislature to sue, they would not have to get a legislative act to collect the judgement. All they'd have to do is go out and seize the school buses, any property that the school boards own, that the police juries own, or any property belonging to the state of Louisiana. There would be no exemption whatsoever, from the execution of a judgement, and I think that that could result in very serious items. Result in a lot of things, welfare funds, school funds, anything that they wanted to execute on could be executed on if this is adopted and tied in with the amendment or the provision as recommended by the committee. Now it's all right to say that the individual will be protected, but there are a lot of school children and other people that could be injured if this is adopted as in here. Now, if they wanted to do what is right and protect the majority of the people, we holler about the majority all the time and now we're talking about one individual. Its one individual going to disrupt the entire school operation in a parish because he has a judgement of maybe two hundred thousand dollars and seizes everything belonging to the school board; not to the school board but to the citizens of that parish that live in that school district. We've got to have some safeguards. If you don't we're going to really run into serious problems on execution on judgement. When they get a judgement against it, it's not going to be necessarily the parent of some little school child. As they say, it can be a corporation; it can be anyone that has sued on a tort action, whatever a tort action means, and get judgement. They can at any time seize anything that you want to sue. That is dangerous and anyone that forces that on our different public bodies is not doing a good service to the citizens of Louisiana. I'd like to caution you, this is not needed; under the provision of the committee, it can be taken care of, and I think we're going to get into serious trouble if you adopt this amendment.

Questions

Mr. Burson Mr. Stinson, do you know that my amendment in no way affects the language of the committee proposal which provides that the effect of the judgements which may be rendered in any lawsuit would be provided by the legislature?

Mr. Stinson But you're going... the provision as I read the law, maybe I'm not as good a lawyer as you are, Mr. Burson, but as I read the law, this is an exception to what the committee has said. It says that there will be no immunity from tort. That means that this provision of the committee will apply to other torts and that as far as torts you can sue anytime, execute anytime that you get a judgement. And I think the courts will hold that, too. To our sorrow, it will be, if this is adopted.

Mr. Burson Mr. Stinson.

Mr. Stinson And it might be that you might be an excellent district attorney by the time your School Board gets in trouble over there.

Mr. Burson Mr. Stinson, if this is your opinion do you know that I would be happy to join with you in another amendment which would clarify this, although I disagree with you.

Mr. Stinson Well I think that the other amendment should be put on first, Mr. Burson, because our

20th Days Proceedings—July 26, 1973

School Boards are having more and more problems over being financed now as we know. Bond issues are being voted down. Soon, I'm afraid, we're going to almost have a passed issue as to School Boards, so maybe we won't even have to apply to them.

[Quorum Call: 96 delegates present and a quorum.]

Further Discussion

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I'm going to make my remarks very short. I think that Delegate Stinson has made some remarks up here that he doesn't believe in himself. If he had read the provision, it says the legislature shall make the rules for the enforcement of judgement. So therefore, there's not any possibility of seizing any school funds, or buses, or anything of that sort. I want to make that very clear. I would say this, he made reference to some $100,000 judgements. If there is any judgement obtained in that amount, you can be sure that the person was entitled to something because as you well know, the courts very, very seldom ever allow judgements to take care of the damage that was actually done. If you take some individual that has 5 or 6 children, in the youth of his life and making a good living and he gets killed, who is going to take care of his family? That's where you get the $100,000 judgements, if one is rendered for that sum. And that's very, very seldom. You can sue the School Board or you can sue the parish or you can sue the state on a contract, but you're going to deny the individual the right to sue unless he comes and gets the right from the legislature. The legislature is not equipped to determine whether or not that individual has a merit to his suit. So if they are not equipped to determine the merits of the suit, why should you get permission from them to render the judgement in the first place? It should be the courts function and why not go directly to the court to start with for your remedy? I ask you to vote for this amendment since we are only limited to the person who has been injured through damages by tort action. Somebody that's entitled to a suit upon his claim. It's a good amendment and I ask your approval.

Questions

Mr. Tapper Senator De Blieux, isn't it a fact that in order to get permission from the legislature, some legislator must file something for that individual and that he cannot do it himself, can he?

Mr. De Blieux That's right, exactly correct.

Mr. Tapper And if he can't get a legislator to file it for him, then he can't file his suit, can he?

Mr. De Blieux That's exactly correct. You are making the legislature his errand boy to do something which he ordinarily should be able to do by himself.

Mr. J. Jackson Just in line with what Mr. Tapper said, let's say based on arguments that were given to us by Mr. Stinson, let's say if a legislature, and usually if someone wants to file a suit he gives it to a legislator from that particular district, and that if this legislator is concerned maybe about the political ramifications of introducing the suit against his school Board, then the possibility does exist that the citizen could not get that legislation introduced. Right?

Mr. De Blieux Because of the political consideration involved the legislator may not introduce the resolution. He may lose the suit, at least it's postponed until he finds some other legislator which will do that for him. I just don't think that's right.

Further Discussion

Mr. Kilbourne Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I won't delay you long. But I am concerned about this word "tort" in this amendment. Now all we've heard about "tort" and I'm sure what you think it is, as when a train hits a school bus or something of that kind, or a school bus runs over somebody, or a garbage truck runs over somebody. But I'll tell you this, tort can mean a whole lot of things. Anything that a person feels that he is damaged by in an act of somebody else is a tort. For instance, to give you an extreme case, and you know you have professional litigants in Louisiana, to give you an extreme case, somebody inadvertently or maybe accidentally reads a prayer in a school. Well there would be somebody that might say that their children were damaged by that, and that would be a tort. So I ask you to watch what you do here.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

Mr. Burson I don't want to pass it because frankly I don't want to lose the vote because of a misunderstanding. I may not get many.

The word "tort" is a word which is backed by historic meaning which antedates the Louisiana Civil Code and goes back to the very origins of law, and I don't think that a court would have too much trouble in defining it. It does include more than accidents caused by negligence. It does also include intentional wrongs to the individual such as an assault and battery. So if you happen to be a servant of the state should be able to assault and batter a private citizen and that private citizen should have to come to the legislature to get permission to file a suit for that assault and battery, vote against my amendment. If you believe, as I do, that that citizen should be able to file that suit without getting permission, then vote for my amendment. Now, it's a matter by Mr. Casey, for whom I have the greatest respect, that the legislature is not going to turn down widows and orphans I think that that's true. I have the greatest respect for the legislators who are delegates here, and if I had any doubts about their political acumen, they have long since been gone since we began these deliberations. I am not proposing that I take away anything from the legislature that I think the legislature ought to have. If the legislature is going to permit these suits anyway, then why not let's say it here and now and not leave it an open question in the future. I put it to you, ladies and gentlemen, why else reserve the prerogative of approving these suits if you don't want to be able to say no to some of them. Now other than that, it just doesn't make any sense. If you don't want to say no to the citizens' right, then let's say it in the constitution and make it plain and let's not burden the legislature every time with five or six hundred bills, most of which are passed pro forma, but each of which costs the taxpayers money and that could better be served on other legislative business. And if the suits are going to be denied, then frankly I don't think the legislature ought to have that prerogative because that prerogative belongs in the courts under our system. I ask you in the end, consider whether you want to place this new constitution backward to an anachronism of spay-eright immunity that has been abolished in 11 but five states, or whether you want to move forward into a new era and let our citizens have the same rights as citizens have in 45 other states of the union. The decision is yours.

ROLL CALL

[105 delegates present and a quorum.]

PRAYER

Mr. Burns Our heavenly Father, Thou greatest of all law makers and law givers we pray that Thou would pass on to us enough of Thy knowledge and wisdom that we may draft a new constitution that will not only meet Thy divine approval, but with approval of the voters of the state of Louisiana when it is submitted to them. We pray that Thou would give us clean hearts, free from any animosity, hostilities or any personalities that we may proceed to draft this constitution in the spirit of friendship and cooperation. We ask these things in Jesus name. Amen.

READING AND ADOPTION OF THE JOURNAL

Personal Privilege

Mr. Armentor Mr. Chairman and delegates, I hope that this is the appropriate time for us to pause a moment and examine the progress of this convention as of this date and make at least an attempt to find ways and means of expediting the work of this convention. We have been debating and rehashing many subsections, many amendments to each subsection for more than three weeks on Article III which I don't think anyone considered highly controversial. According to Act 2 of 1972 the final draft of the proposed constitution must be completed by January 4 of 1974. If we are to meet that deadline, we have to turn over to Style and Drafting Committee at least a tentative draft of the entire constitution several weeks before January 4. Then they must come back to this convention for approval, and then it must go to the printer and be in the governor's hands by January 4. That's why I think that we have to go back and see what we've accomplished thus far, and try to expedite the work of this convention. I don't have any solutions to the problems but I think it may serve us well to try to analyze it as shortly as possible. You will remember that on July 6 we started with the election of legislators and it was proposed that they be elected from single-member districts. It appeared quite obvious that every delegate was in favor of single-member districts. Merely, there were some who were opposed to including that in the constitution and some who wanted it in the constitution. If my memory serves me right, at least 12 to 15 delegates came up to this rostrum and gave identical reasons why it should be included in the constitution. Another dozen or so delegates came up here and gave identical reasons why it should be left out of the constitution. This repetition is what's bogging down this convention as I see it. Our chairman has no power to eliminate this repetition. If he were a trial judge he could tell us, "I don't want to hear any more corroborative evidence." That would be the end of that. But this is a democratic convention and he does not have the power to eliminate unnecessary repetition on every proposal and every amendment to every proposal. The only way we can accomplish this is by voluntary self restraint. Now no one wants to cut off debate. Everyone wants to hear all valid arguments for and against every amendment to every proposal, but I don't think anyone would find himself on December 1, with the job half done. I think every delegate wants to complete the job. The five minute rule apparently will be a help, but it will take more than that because if on every amendment to every proposal we have say ten delegates on each side, 20 delegates, talking three minutes only, we're talking about the loss of one entire hour. As I recall, the very first day that we took up the proposition of the election of legislators, we consumed about three or four hours. Now, I don't have to remind you that we have many highly controversial issues. For example, property tax assessment, homestead exemption, industrial exemptions; based on our present rate of progress we could spend six weeks on that one issue alone. Not to mention the governance and coordination of higher education, civil service, judicial system, dedication of funds and many others. Therefore, I have no desire to get involved in a debate as to how to do it because I have no solution to the problem, but I sincerely hope that every delegate here will exercise some voluntary self restraint seeking to expedite the work of this convention. Thank you.

RESOLUTIONS ON SECOND READING AND REFERRAL

[I Journal 207]

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES LYING OVER

[I Journal 207-208]

PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

Mr. Poynter Committee Proposal No. 3, introduced by Delegate Blair, on behalf of the Committee on Legislative Powers and Functions, a proposal making provisions for the legislative branch of government, impeachment, and removal of officials and necessary provisions with respect thereto. The status of the proposal at this date, Mr. Chairman, is that the convention has adopted Sections 1 through 13 as amended of the proposal and it now has under its consideration Section 14, suits against the state. Correct, Section 12 was passed over, or action postponed, so Sections 1 through 11 and 13 have been adopted. Action on Section 12 has been postponed and presently under consideration is Section 14.

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Lanier], on page 7, line 6, after "Section 14" and before the words, "the legislature", add the letter (A).
Amendment No. 2, page 7 between lines 11 and 12, add the following: "B. (your copy probably will begin "however public property", it has been changed to read as follows: The word "however" has been stricken and it begins: "except as otherwise provided in this constitution, public property shall not be subject to seizure and no judgment against the state, its agencies or political subdivisions shall be exigible, payable, or paid except out of funds appropriated for payment thereof."

Explanation

Mr. Lanier Thank you, Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates yesterday we had many proposals submitted to us that had similar language to this in it. However, these proposals also contained provisions dealing with the issue of sovereign immunity, which have been so controversial. These issues were not severable. This amendment isolates the issue. This issue is the simple issue of the manner of execution of judgments against the state. The purpose of it is to exempt public property from seizure and to provide that no judgment against the state, its agencies, or political subdivisions shall be exigible, payable, or paid except out of funds appropriated for payment thereof. This does not make any change in the existing law. We have codal provisions in jurisprudence that support this proposition, and this language is presently contained in Article III, Section 35 or [of] our present constitution. We...the public money behind this, of course, is that if someone was to seize the general fund of a public agency they could stop all of the operations of that agency and, of course, deprive the public, which is a part of the people, the benefits of these services. I added in the clause "except as otherwise provided in this constitution", because there are instances in our present constitution and what is being proposed for our future constitution that authorizes the pledge of public property to secure certain types of indebtedness [sic]. Specifically, I would direct your attention to the proposed sections 42 and 43 of the local and parochial government provision. I feel fairly certain there will be somewhat similar provisions in the revenue, finance and taxation proposal where public property can be pledged to secure revenue bonds, local assessments or certificates of indebtedness, and that also is the present law. That is the reason for the "except as otherwise provided in this constitution" to accommodate these security devices, without which you could not sell these types of securities. I believe that the amendment is fairly self-explanatory. In order to accommodate the remarks of Mr. Armentor, with which I concur, I would at this time yield myself to any questions from the floor.

21st Days Proceedings—July 27, 1973

Questions

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Lanier, I didn't hear all of the debate yesterday. What... would you briefly tell me the purpose of the language in this amendment which says that no judgment shall be paid unless the money is appropriated by the legislature.

Mr. Lanier Yes, sir. That is the present law. It's not appropriated by the legislature. It would be appropriated by the legislature with reference to state agencies or state subdivisions or the state itself. With reference to others it would be with reference to that particular body. That's the present law, Senator.

Mr. Rayburn Well, there's no change in that provision.

Mr. Lanier No sir, that's Article 35... Article III, Section 35 of our present constitution and the jurisdiction as it exists under the civil code.

Further Discussion

Mr. Tapper Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I don't have a copy at my desk but I read a copy that someone else had and I don't want to oppose the principle of not being able to seize public property, like the Capitol, or the courthouse in a particular parish, but the way I read this amendment, it says that no judgment shall be paid except out of funds appropriated by an instrumentality or the state. I believe that this amendment is faulty in that it will also preclude a judgment being paid by an insurer of a political subdivision or an agency of the state. If Mr. Lanier wants to ask the question, Mr. Chairman, I'd like to answer it because I don't want to be opposed to his amendment but it does give me a problem.

Questions

Mr. Lanier Mr. Tapper, is it not true that under the law of the state of Louisiana, a plaintiff would have a direct action against an insurer?

Mr. Tapper That is true, but that law could be changed, Mr. Lanier, by a simple act of the legislature.

Mr. Lanier Is it not true that at the present time in a case where you might not necessarily be able to sue the sovereign, you can file a direct action against the sovereign's insurer and collect under the insurance policy and this has been ruled by the courts to be a judgment against the insurer and not against the sovereign?

Mr. Tapper That's true, but we're writing a constitution here, and if this constitutional provision provides that there can be no judgment paid or that there shall be no judgment paid except out of public funds appropriated, then I think that the insurer would have the... the insurance company would have a good exception in that suit that is being filed, and that's the only problem that presents itself to me.

Mr. Singletary Mr. Tapper, I agree with you that the principle of protecting public property from seizure is good but is this amendment really necessary or is this something that could be accomplished just as well by statute?

Mr. Tapper It could be accomplished by statute and anything that is not prohibited I understand that we are going to finally... of course this will be within the prerogative of the delegates of this convention... but I understand that we are going to allow the legislature to do anything that is not prohibited... It could be provided by statute, yes. Ladies and gentlemen of this convention, I don't want to oppose Mr. Lanier's amendment insofar as the principle of not being able to seize public property. But we are going a little further here and we are providing that under our constitution in this state that there can be no judgment paid unless it's paid by an appropriation, either by the legislature or political subdivision. I think that this is not what Mr. Lanier wants and this is not what this convention wants. Certainly if we are going to pay for insurance, our agencies are going to pay for it and our political subdivisions are going to pay for it, those insurance companies should have to pay the judgment if there is a judgment rendered against them. I urge that you defeat this amendment. Maybe we can put another one in and explain that a little bit more in detail. I'll answer any other questions.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: 55-40. Motion to reconsider.]

Personal Privilege

Mr. Tapper I understand that Mr. Roy voted no, and it registered green on the board. I would ask for a five minute recess to check the machine to make sure that it is recording properly.

Personal Privilege

Mr. Burson I attempted to change my vote just to see what would happen and it didn't change. I think that machine is fouled up.

Personal Privilege

Mr. Stovall I was just about fifteen steps over there talking to Mr. Blair. I moved immediately but we didn't have time to get over to vote.

Personal Privilege

Mrs. Dunlap Mr. Chairman, you just shut these machines down so fast. We don't even have time to find out what is going on, much less get up here and vote. Now, I don't see any big emergency in getting this machine shut down.

Mr. Henry We have had amendments which were adopted, after which Mr. Lanier moved to reconsider the vote by which the amendments were adopted and to lay the motion on the table. To which objection is urged. Therefore, when the machine is opened, if you are in favor of tabling the motion to reconsider and don't want to fool with these amendments any more, then you will vote green. If you were against Mr. Lanier's amendments, you will vote red.

[Motion to table resumed: 52-02.
Motion to reconsider adopted: 60-40.]

RECONSIDERATION

Mr. Poynter The copies of the amendment which were typed have just arrived and they are going to be passed out now so everyone will have a fresh copy retyped with the correction made by Mr. Lanier in the amendment.

Explanation

Mr. Tapper Mr. Chairman and delegates to the convention, this is not a joking matter. I'm not really opposed to the principle that Mr. Lanier is trying to put forth here, but if you read the amendment when you get it, you will see that it says that no judgment can be paid—I think it says shall be paid—except by funds appropriated. This will preclude the payment, in my humble opinion, of any judgment by any insurance company that has been paid premiums by any political agency, political subdivision, or agency of the state. This is the only thing that I am trying to straighten out and I hope we can straighten it out. I'll yield...

21st Days Proceedings—July 27, 1973

Questions

Mr. Duval Mr. Tapper, perhaps you can clear up something for me. Couldn't you bring a direct action against the insurer under the Louisiana law?

Mr. Tapper That question was asked a while ago and I don't know if you were here, Stan. Yes, you can but that authority is set forth by statute. That statute could be amended or repealed. We are talking about a constitutional provision here which precludes the payment of any judgment except by appropriated funds.

Mr. Duval But if you didn't name the state and named the insurance company, you wouldn't have any problem would you?

Mr. Tapper I beg your pardon.

Mr. Duval But if you didn't name the state and merely named the insurance company under the direct action statute, you would have no problem, would you?

Mr. Tapper No, you wouldn't. But if you didn't name the state, you would have the problem, Stan. I have never filed a suit and not named the party against whom I'm suing in addition to the insurer. You know that too, don't you?

Mr. Anzalone What's the provision of the law now as to the payment of judgments against the state?

Mr. Tapper What is the provision of the law.

Mr. Anzalone Yes, how are judgments paid at the present time?

Mr. Tapper The money has to be appropriated by the legislature against the state. The money would have to be appropriated by the legislature in order to pay that.

Mr. Anzalone That's the way it is being done now?

Mr. Tapper Yes.

Mr. Anzalone That's what this says too.

Mr. Tapper No, no, Mr. Anzalone. If it is a direct action against... if the suit is filed against the state and against the insurer today, the insurer will have to pay up to the coverage of the insurance of the policy. But under this provision this prohibits the payment of judgments except by appropriation. Read the amendment, Mr. Anzalone.

Mr. Anzalone Does not this provision prohibit the state from paying any judgment except by appropriation of funds? It does not say that somebody else who's got insurance can not do it.

Mr. Tapper Yes, it does. It says that no judgment shall be paid except by appropriation, Mr. Anzalone. If it would say that the state shall pay no judgment, that's why that we should withdraw this amendment and resub it with that provision in it. It says that no judgment shall be paid except by appropriation.

Mr. Anzalone Would you classify Travelers Insurance Company as the state?

Mr. Tapper No, they are not.

Mr. Conroy Mr. Tapper, are you aware that the present constitution, Section 35 of Article III, says, "No judgment against the state or any public body shall be exigible, payable or paid, except out of funds appropriated for payment therefore

Mr. Tapper Yes, I'm aware of that but this amendment does not say... have anything to do with a judgment against the state. It says that, "No judgment shall be paid." Have you read the amendment?

Mr. Conroy Yes, I have. I was trying to clarify exactly what your objection was.

Mr. Tapper At this time, Mr. Chairman, I move to table the amendment.

[Motion to table the amendment rejected: 46-62.]

Further Discussion

Mr. Lanier Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I can understand where there was some confusion over the votes on this thing. In that regard I can understand why you want to reconsider this thing at this time. However, I just can't understand some of the arguments that have been presented here. I would like to read specifically from Article III, Section 35. It specifically provides, "No judgment against the state or any other public body shall be exigible, payable or paid, except out of funds appropriated for payment thereof." This amendment makes no change in that. The law will remain the same. This particular constitutional provision has been supplemented by R.S. 13:5801 which gives further explanation as to how you execute judgment against the state or political agencies. This business of, you can't sue the insurance company and collect a judgment against it, is baloney. You can do it. Under the Louisiana direct action statute, you can file a direct suit against the insurer and get a judgment that is not a judgment against the state and you can execute upon it. So I really don't know what all of this is about. This only maintains the status quo of the present law as supplemented in the statutory law, and for that reason, Mr. Chairman, I move the re-adoption of this particular motion.

Further Discussion

Mr. De Bileux Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I hate to see Mr. Lanier get upset about this but let's take this situation. Suppose, and most lawyers will do that if they're worth their salt, they'll sue anybody they think could be liable on a matter. Suppose the state and the insurance company are both sued because that would give them the right to sue under the direct action statute. Suppose you get a judgment against both of them and the amount of the judgment is a little bit more than the insurance company is liable to pay. If Mr. Lanier used the words in his amendment of out of public funds, it would be one thing, but he does not use those words. He says the judgment shall not be paid and it means that the insurance company and nobody else could pay that judgment until the state appropriated the money to do so. I think it might be holding up some person who needs to get his money a long time until the state appropriates its portion of the money before they could be paid. I feel like we ought to reject this amendment and adopt one which would accomplish what he wants to do. This amendment in my opinion does not do that.

Questions

Mr. Tapper Senator De Bileux, is it not a fact by a majority vote of the legislature the direct action statute can be repealed?

Mr. De Bileux Oh yes, that's true.

Mr. Tapper In that case, Senator, the suit would have to be then against the state or its political subdivision or its agency and the insurance company if a judgment were rendered under this provision of this amendment, it could not be paid except by appropriation? Isn't that true?

Mr. De Blieux That's the way I read it. Now if he limited it to public funds...and furthermore I'd say like under our present law and statutes, I don't think this amendment would be necessary anyway.

Mr. Juneau Senator De Blieux, I'm a little confused. As I read the amendment and the present constitution, there is no change. Isn't that correct?

Mr. De Blieux I think that if you read the first part of that amendment, Mr. Juneau, it says out of public funds.

Mr. Juneau I don't see the distinction between the two. The point being, Mr. De Blieux, the problem that is raised by the execution of the judgment has not been a problem in the past.

Mr. De Blieux That's true, because most of the time the judgments are obtained where there isn't any insurance. But if those bodies to where that they do have insurance would be allowed to go ahead and pay their judgments. I'm just afraid that it could be interpreted that way. Under our present law I don't see the need of this particular amendment anyway.

[Previous question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendments adopted: 58-54.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Casey], On page 7, line 9 after the words "any law" and before the word "enacted" insert the word "or resolution".

Explanation

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates to the convention, this is merely a technical amendment because at this time the legislature uses the resolution method in order to permit filing suits against the state. This would merely allow the status that exists today--that is the use of resolutions.

Questions

Mr. Kelly Mr. Casey, you are not taking out the word law, though? Is that correct?

Mr. Casey No, that's correct. We use resolutions now. All I'm doing is making sure that if the legislature wishes that it would have the prerogative or the right to use the system that it uses today--that is resolutions.

Mr. Kelly That is resolutions. Now for our purpose in the legislature what is the difference between say a law and a resolution.

Mr. Casey The governor would have the right to veto a law. He doesn't have the right to veto resolutions.

Mr. Kelly But this amendment...you did not take out law. You just added resolution.

Mr. Casey We added resolution merely to insure the right...I think we could probably do it anyway...but this is merely for clarification. That's all.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Roy, et al.], on page 7 delete lines 6 through 11 both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Section 14. The doctrine of sovereign immunity is abolished; however, public property shall not be subject to seizure except when it may have been pledged or mortgaged to secure payment of a public debt and no judgment against the state or any public body shall be exigible, payable or paid unless funds are specifically appropriated therefor."

Mr. Roy, I presume you would want a technical amendment deleting all the previous amendments. Is that correct, sir? Thank you.

Explanation

Mr. Roy Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I know I have been up here a lot and I apologize for it but I've got some pretty strong feelings about certain things. I want to thank Mr. Landry yesterday for reminding me that the great majority of you are not lawyers. We lawyers who get up and speak in terms of [...] we're making a mistake. We're not...Mr. Landry pointed out a real fine thing and I've just gone over it, that we lawyers tend to be a little presumptuous. Not that we want to hide anything but we speak in terms of art that some of you are not familiar with. This amendment does three things, and it meets the issue head on. One of them, in my opinion, is a "good" issue and I hate to use that term but that's what it is. Its the notion that an individual of the State of Louisiana should be allowed to go into court and ask the court to regress against the sovereign. That's the period. It doesn't mean he can win. It doesn't even mean he can collect if he does win. Let me give you a good example. A foreign corporation that is in the State of Louisiana and injured by a Louisiana Department of Public Officials' employee may go to federal court because it's got diversity of citizenship and doesn't need authority to sue the Department of Highways or the Department of Public Works. Yet, we, our own citizens, would need that. That's one great hiatus that shouldn't be. Let's go further. It does another thing that yesterday I hadn't prepared for. It tracks the language of Mr. Denney's amendment with respect to protecting companies that have issued bonds and that have been financially obligated by the state to secure those bonds. Those properties may be seized if the state doesn't pay its debt or the local communities. Therefore, there will be no effect with respect to bonding companies not doing business in the state. The third thing it does, it says that in other respects, public property cannot be seized and that's really the only way you can collect your money after you would get a judgment, and a court would rule on it, is if there was specifically appropriated money to pay that. Now ladies and gentlemen, that's about as plain as it can be made in the English language. You'll notice that the co-authors are people who yesterday generally were opposed to the other stuff because of the reasons I said were not covered. This amendment covers it all. It merely says that a citizen of this state does not have to go to the person against whom it seeks to sue and say give me permission to sue you. That's all it does.

No cases have been brought up whereby people can show there are a lot of municipalities suits filed against the state. It's just not. If you talk to any attorney who's in the business, they'll tell you frankly that. I urge you to pass this bill and let's get on. Thank you.

Questions

Mr. Triche Mr. Roy, I wanted to get your explanation of the difference in the language between your amendment and Mr. Lanier's amendment regarding seizure of public property. Mr. Lanier says except otherwise provided in this constitution public property shall not be subject to seizure. Your amendment says public property shall not be subject to seizure except when it may have been pledged or mortgaged to secure public debt. Is there a difference between your amendment and Mr. Lanier's amendment? Is there a conscious difference?

Mr. Roy Mr. Triche, I'm not exactly certain. I would think that mine may be limited to, and I was specifically trying to protect bond and bond in-sued in the state, and I don't know what Mr. Lanier thought. The legislature may broaden that thing or the constitution may come up with something that would be a lot different. But I specifically wanted to protect the bonding industry of this state so that we would not have to worry about people... communities... being able to borrow money. That's what I was trying to protect because yesterday it was not protected in my original proposition.

Mr. Sinsley Mr. Roy, if an attorney is representing a client on an hourly basis, wouldn't your amendment actually save a client some money?

Mr. Roy Certainly it would because you wouldn't have to go through the formalities—the proforma formality of getting a bill through the legislature, which is a formality. The legislature, incidentally, my friends, never sees the suit. It never passes on the merits of the suit. Some friend merely gets a bill up that eight out of fourteen say, "let it go."

Mr. Burns Mr. Roy, the first line in a [...] the doctrine of sovereign immunity is abolished. Isn't that exactly the same question that we voted on yesterday?

Mr. Roy No, Mr. Burns. I'm going to be perfectly honest with you. Yesterday my amendment didn't say anything about abolishing it. Today and last night after I thought about what Landry said and I realized that this is a constitutional convention. I want our citizens protected as much as a foreign corporation in here that could sue in federal court. I decided to meet it head on and I want to tell you honestly that this will abolish sovereign immunity. But sovereign immunity is based on an erroneous concept that the king can do no wrong. All we're asking is permission to sue without having to ask for it.

Mr. Burns You're not answering my question. I'm not questioning the rest of your amendment or the method of payment and collecting judgments and appropriated funds and bonding companies and all that. I'm asking you is did we not vote on the correct question of removing the immunity that the state now enjoys from suit?

Mr. Roy In my opinion, no. Because it was strictly up to the legislature whether to keep it. Now we're saying that we don't.

Further Discussion

Mr. Blair Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in opposition to this amendment. If you will recall we had four similar amendments that carried most of this yesterday that you voted against. I urge you to vote against this so we can move along.

Further Discussion

Mr. Jenkins Mr. Chairman, delegates to the convention. The reason this amendment is being offered, and it is not too much different from those offered before and the reason I am up here again is because I think the success or failure of this convention is going to be decided to some extent on whether or not we can take an issue and discuss it, think about it and maybe change our minds about it, if we come to realize we made a mistake in the first place. Most of the delegates to this convention can do that—can weigh the arguments and consider the issues and maybe come to a new conclusion. What is sovereign immunity? It is the doctrine that the state need not entertain a petition alleging certain grievances from a private citizen that lives in that state. That's the first aspect of it. The second aspect is, that the state need not pay a judgment if a judgment is rendered pursuant to a suit being entered with its permission. So there are really two basic protections the state has. The first is that it doesn't even have to listen to any suits under the doctrine of sovereign immunity and then if it does give permission it need not pay if a judgment is rendered. There's still one other protection that the state has, a protection that would not be allowed in a other respect of society and that is the man who makes the decision, the judge is paid by the state. He's an instrumentality of the state. He's paid for by one of the litigating parties. Now how much protection does the state need? I contend that the fact that the judge is a state employee is one pretty good protection for the state. The second thing that no judgment can be paid unless funds are appropriated for it is another good protection for the state. But the idea that a person can't even go into court to tell what his grievance is, is an abuse of state authority. There's no justification for something like that. You won't even listen to the grievance, the state says. That doesn't even make sense. Prosser, who is an authority on tort law had this to say, "Just how this feudal and monarchic doctrine ever got translated into the law of the new and belligerently democratic republic in America is a bit hard to understand." It was introduced by judges, gentlemen, ladies, not by the legislature or by the Congress or by the U. S. Constitution but by Chief Justice John Marshall. He's the one who introduced it, a court usurpation. The issue here is different from every other issue we've considered so far at this convention. We've been dealing with the lengths of sessions, payment of members. Reasonable men can disagree about things like that. But I think we are now dealing with, not basic constitutional, but a kind of issues that make or break a constitutional convention. The issue is the right of the individual citizen, for whom the state is established, to go into court and having his grievances listened to. That's the issue here, or whether government can be all powerful and completely arbitrary and not even listen to the grievances that he put forward. How would it be if the legislature started to try the cases in the legislature? What if the legislature wanted to weed out the so called frivolous cases? Started calling witnesses, taking testimony... you can can certainly see that that would be an abuse of the legislative power and interference with the separation of powers. It would be unjustified. The only way sovereign immunity can be used to stop the state is if that's done, is if some suits are kept out. To keep it out would be a usurpation. It doesn't make sense. If it is going to be proforma in the legislature, then we ought to abolish it and if it's not proforma, it would be unjust. Let's go on and abolish this outmoded anachronism. Let's give the people the right to go into court and at least list their grievances. That doesn't mean a right to win. That's no guarantee of success. That doesn't mean if they win the suit the judgment will be paid, but let's give them that right to go into court. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Deshotels Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I have been sitting like most of you and listening to the debate and waiting until I had something to say, to get up and say. Some people have been talking on everything that comes up before the floor. I haven't done that. Mr. Dwyer called this the race of the state of Louisiana bill. I had rather call it a thirty-three and one-third to forty-five percent bill. That is what it is. All the people that are proponents over here are really talking about that thirty-three and one-third to forty-five percent. Do you realize the way that this particular bill is drawn up. This amendment. That if you have public property secured to pay back bonds that the equity on that public property could be seized. Why don't you read it. It says public property shall not be subject to seizure except when it may have been pledged or mortgaged to secure payment of a public debt. All right, you have got a water works that is three-quarter paid. You have got equity in that water works. That water works is pledged, it is hypothecated, it is mortgaged. It could be seized. Now they are talking about appropriations, about no judgment being exgible until you have a specific appropriation and they are telling you that there is no such thing as sovereign immunity. One person says there is just a little bit of a vestage of sovereign immunity left. Why have we fought for four and one-half hours yesterday on this little ole bitty bit, except for that thirty-three and one-third and forty-five percent. Now they are talking about no appropriations now, can you imagine me getting in this court as an attorney and going with a right but no redress? Now I get to the Supreme Court and I say gentlemen they gave me the right but they didn't give me any right to collect on it. I want a mandamus these public officials to appropriate that money. Maybe I could do that, I don't know, that is the question. The group of people that was before you and proposed this amendment, did they study this. Second thing, suppose you have got a seizure of funds in escrow, is that public property? It may be but it may be that it would be interpreted differently. Now what about future bonds? What about the town that wants to borrow money and improve itself, put in a sewerage? A small town I can talk about, but the town can take care of itself in most instances but I am talking about that town that has 1500 people, 2000 people, 3000 people, they can't afford the public liability insurance policy. I live in a town like that. If I have got a policeman that goes in there and beats somebody over the head and breaks the law and then my town gets sued, I don't believe I should pay for that. Let them get that policeman and make him pay if they can. If the town can afford a public liability insurance policy I am sure they will get it, but some of them can't. They are operating on a marginal basis of profit. They can't pay that thirty-three and one-third percent or that forty-five percent they are asking for. Now this is another thing we have talked about, the legislature has been talking about no-fault liability insurance. I am just wondering how many insurance premiums and how many insurance policies are going to have to be sold if we pass something like this. Think about that they won't argue it before you and ask you to vote for something for four and one-half hours on one day and come back and turn it around fifteen different ways, up and down, sideways for no reason. Don't let them pull that on you. It is not true. They are thinking about that attorney's fee, by and large, that's it, they are not worried about those small children in that bus, they are dead. It is a shame that it should happen. But that is not their concern. That comes in and out of their offices everyday. Why don't we just face it, call it what it is and then let's vote on it. That's all, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

Mr. Burson Mr. Deshotels, are you imputing to all of the attorneys who have argued on this case the motivation of a contingent fee?

Mr. Deshotels Mr. Burson, I am telling you that thirty-three and one-third to forty-five percent does have a lot to do with what we are arguing right now.

Mr. Burson Are you aware sir, that as a proponent of an abolition of sovereign immunity that I at the present time am defending thirty suits against state agencies and have not one suit as a plaintiff against such state agencies?

Mr. Deshotels Mr. Burson, I have been thinking about that since yesterday and I just can't understand how

Mr. Burson All right. I was just wondering if your contention about the contingent fee was based on what you would be concerned with in a similar case

Mr. Deshotels Not at all.

Mr. Burson Well, then why do you impute those motives to others sir, would you tell us?

Mr. Deshotels Well, that is the only understanding that I have for people advocating something so strenuously and forgetting about all the other facts and aspects to it.

Further Discussion

Mr. Tapper Mr. Chairman, and fellow delegates, The gentleman exceeded his time and therefore I was not able to ask him a question. I am rising and I think every lawyer here resents the insinuation that we are here representing ourselves and not the people that we were sent here to represent. I don't believe anyone here is here to represent himself. And that has been the problem with this particular subject since we began with it. The imputing to the lawyers that this is a lawyers provision, forgetting who lawyers represent. Lawyers represent people and you ask the people in everyone of your districts...

I will not yield to a question.

If we are going to continue on this particular premise that everyone who approaches this microphone and everyone who submits an amendment is submitting it for personal gain. Then ladies and gentlemen of this convention, I suggest that we move to adjourn sine die because this is not what we are here for. And you have seen me time and time again. I have had some of the legislators tell me why have you voted against my proposal. I haven't been with the legislators on all of the proposals and I am a member of the legislature. And I don't question their motives in what they present here and I don't think anybody else should. And I don't think that they should be intimidated or it should be insinuated or that the people of this state should be told that there is a possibility that there is nothing but personal interest here. And I resent what the gentleman said and I know that everyone of you do also. And I hope that we can keep that out of this convention. Now it is a simple, simple thing, this amendment, simple. I don't know who that gentleman represents or where his interest lies but I will tell you where mine lies and that is with the people that I represent. And I believe that all of you are here in this same position, it is the same way. And I hope that we can continue to present our positions, without being intimidated or questioned about our motives. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Asseff Mr. Chairman, delegates, first let me say I am imputing nothing to anyone. I don't want to get involved in that. However, the issue has been hashed and rehashed and thrashed and rethrashed until I am sure that all of us, unless we are morons, are aware of the issues that are involved. We are hearing the same thing over and over again. Mr. Chairman, delegates, we are slow, not because of any time limit or lack of it. But because the issue has been hashed and rehashed, thrashed and rethrashed, and it has so many facets that I don't know which facet I am on. I know that I am completely exhausted and I believe every delegate here knows the issues. And I feel that it is wasting our time and the money of the taxpayer to repeat the same thing over and over again. I'll rarely move the previous question and I rarely vote for it. But I think the delegates do know, and I wish before I move it that the delegates will simply present their resolution, explain it briefly and then let us vote, or, Mr. Chairman, if you will forgive me, we will be here until the second coming of Christ. Therefore Mr. Chairman, delegates, move the previous question.

[Motion for the Previous Question rejected: 34-74.]

Further Discussion

Mr. Jack Mr. Chairman, and members, I'll be brief. Now this is another instance of the wolf in sheepskin. And like little red riding hood, I see you Mr. Wolf Yesterday, Mr. Roy you had almost identical this bill strike out page 7, line 6 through ll, get rid of all that. Then you didn't use the words a few there and you put some extra periods, and commas and those things. Now it is more confused than ever the latter part of it. We beat that wolf bill yesterday, Roy against it, 49 for it. I say let's get along with this, defeat this amendment, go on, stay here tomorrow if necessary, let's finish this material. All the legislative work, then numerically we will have finished one-eighth of all the committee work. We can tell our people we are making progress. We are not going to be able to tell them that unless we finish this material I hold up before we go home. I don't know how many other amendments there are, but this is one subject matter in this section and so after the last speaker, if it is in order I would like to, Mr. Chairman, to move the passage of the entire subject matter that will cover the whole thing after the next speaker, I believe there is one more, isn't it?

Mr. Henry We will just have to get you up here and recognize you at the proper time, as we have several other people on the list, Mr. Jack.

Mr. Jack All right, ok.

Further Discussion

Mr. J. Jackson Mr. Chairman, delegates to the convention, I rise in support of Mr. Roy's amendment. I think what we are dealing with here is basic fundamental principle about state's rights versus the individual rights of a citizen. You hear the opponents of this amendment talking about when such a resolution is introduced in the house, all the judiciary committee talks about is prescription. But everytime they get up here and talk, they talk about the merits of certain suits that are filed against the state. I begin to wonder very seriously what is behind our position for taking this authorization from the legislature. I want to suggest to you that it is not only the matter of prescription but it is a matter of the legislature, members opposing this amendment, wanting it in effect to become...I rise again and I say I rise in support of this amendment because I think this amendment provides citizens of the state not to be sued if they don't have a favorable legislature that they can get suit redress from the state from actions that they feel that they have a just grievance against. I think that you know the only major question is, whether we are going to let the legislature authorize or whether we are going to let people file suit in a proper court. Those in favor of maintaining the legislature's authorization says we need this. Not because we want to judge the merits of particular cases, but we need it only to judge that prescriptions have run out. And I want to suggest that most of the arguments they have presented tends to lead me that they are beginning to judge the merits...of it, of the particular suit rather than the fact of the prescription. I think in a political area we are going to see a number of legislative propositions that are going to have to be amended, or molded into some sort of compromise. But I think that there is one issue before this convention that this is one issue that we can't afford to compromise. I don't believe particularly and I am a member of that legislature that I don't believe particularly that we ought to be about the business of making judicial interpretations of whether a suit is valid or not. That is why we have got the courts. I don't see any rationale other than the fact that you know we want to maintain the sovereign immunity of the state. I want to suggest to you that certain segments of the state feel that that sovereign immunity has particularly been added to the disadvantage of their development. I think that this amendment, as proposed by Mr. Roy attempts to address itself to the arguments about the seizure of the courthouse or the seizure of public property, or the styling of a public firm. I would ask that you seriously vote in favor and give your serious consideration, I remember one amendment by Mr. Riecke, where we had to go almost three days and it finally came up with something that we felt that people could live with. So I don't have any problem if we have to Lump up here over and over again in a different form to accomplish the kinds of necessary reforms that we need in our state and I suggest that this is one problem that the legislature does not need. And Mr. Chairman, I just want to finally say that I want to bring up an example. If I wanted to file a suit against the state for a damage done against me I have to first locate a legislator that would do it. If that suit is against let's say a public or political body in the parish in which I am from. There are political ramifications for a particular legislator to do that. So which means that I have to find someone possibly outside of my parish to do it. And I can see a legislator going down to the judiciary committee saying he is handling something for a parish that he has no business in and of no concern about. And I want to suggest to you that I am not suggesting that this has been a patronage system like in the past because I don't know that. But I want to suggest to you that there is no reason whatsoever that the legislature must first give you the authorization to sue them. I think that is why we have got our courts and for those reasons and the real political reasons enumerated by Mr. Jenkins, I would ask that you adopt this amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Burns Mr. Chairman, and fellow delegates, my main reason in getting up here at this time is because there seems to be a misunderstanding in the question that I asked one of the former speakers.

Had we not voted on this identical question yesterday? And the gentleman answers no. I am not talking about the method of recovery on judgments or how the judgments are to be paid about bonding company. My question was addressed solely to the removal of the immunity from suits for the state now enjoys. I am much and favorably impressed with Mr. Armentor's speech at the beginning of this afternoon session. When he appealed to the delegates for restraint on their part and not to keep repeating the same thing over and over. And we even went so far to show our appreciation and our ratification and confirmation of what he said by applauding him. And I would behold, right on the heels of that, we now find ourselves voting on the same issue, that is the immunity from suit that the state now enjoys. Not once yesterday, but I am later told we voted on the same questions at least two other times. So I say to you gentlemen, there is nothing I could add or detract, have my own opinions and my own views. But I am not at all impressed with this business of picturing the state as some far off monster. These buildings over here, the state Capitol and all the other buildings, that is not the state, that is merely buildings in which employees and the governor of the state occupy. Any more than a church building is a church. The congregation is the church. And you, me, and all of the citizens of Louisiana. That is the state. So let's not be misled and sidetracked and hoodwinked by representing that the state is some monster ready to engulf all its people and take advantage of the poor individual. This is not taking away any rights of the individual to sue the state. They have had the right to sue the state and the legislature and you heard the gentleman say yesterday that that right has never been denied us. So, fellow delegates, this is just one place that we have heard this debated, we have heard it argued, and we've voted on it, I know once. The first time on the amendment by Mr. Planchard and others which started this debate into motion and it was then and at that time it was voted exactly on this issue as to whether the state should continue to enjoy its immunity or whether it should be taken away. So I say to you, let's once and for all, whether you are for it or against it. But let's bring it to an end. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Miss Perkins Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of this convention, I rise in opposition to the amendment. The reason that I rise in opposition to the amendment is that the Lanier amendment as adopted by this convention provides that legislature can provide this immunity that has been beaten to death before the floor of this convention. The first paragraph in the initial committee proposal allows legislature to take this immunity under consideration and provide not only for the immunity where necessary but provide the procedure by which the immunity can be enacted. I would also like to point out that this proposal accomplishes the purpose of the general provisions that have been argued before the convention but in addition, it allows the legislature to take the necessary time to study the entire consequences of the particular immunity or the extent of immunity that is granted. I feel that Mr. Deshotel's earlier made a comment which was pertinent to this convention though there were delegates who took issue with this statement. He said that he called this amendment the thirty-three and a third, forty-five percent amendment. Pointing out to the convention that on the basis of contingent fees, a lawyer normally receives thirty-three and one-third to forty-five percent of the total amount collected. I would like to say that I think that Mr. Deshotel's position is well made. He did not accuse any lawyers in this convention of being guilty of this being primary consideration, insofar as his stance on the amendment was concerned. But merely pointed out to those people who are not lawyers that this is the way a lawyer's fee is set on this type thing and every lawyer in this convention has already thought about that and if they hadn't they weren't thinking. In addition, I would also like to take issue with what Mr. Tapper said.

No, sir, I will not yield to a question. And that was to the effect that every lawyer in this convention took personal offense by Mr. Tapper's statement. Ladies and gentlemen I am only a lawyer but I took no offense to it simply because I know what my legal and ethical standards are and if this would not have crossed my mind to consider when I was asserting a cause of action, why should I take offense to it. So I do feel that if anyone has taken personal offense to it, it is most unfortunate. But I don't think that it was intended that way and I think there are no reasons you know your personal standards and live up to them.

At this point in closing, I would like to again say that I urge that you defeat this amendment, it has been back doored to death. The provision provided by the Lanier amendment gives the legislature to give the immunity wherever they feel it is important and necessary. Thank you for your attention.

Personal Privilege

Mr. Tapper: Well, Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, far be it from me to chastise the lovely lady who just left the podium and I will not do that. And of course I am not going to take issue with what the lovely lady said. However, if what she said is true then let's find out and this is something that I don't really want to happen but I know there are many insurance agents in this delegation there are many public officials, there are many contractors, people in all walks of life, representatives of labor, now if we are going to talk about the thirty-three and one-third. If we are going to talk about a percentage that a lawyer may get, well let's talk about the commission the insurance company gets, I don't want to mention Mr. LeBreton's name because I don't think he is here. But he was here fighting this thing too. Well let's find out who the gentleman that I was talking about awhile ago, who chastised the [...], who he said, he said the political subdivisions. Let's talk about everybody.

Point of Order

Mr. Stovall: Mr. Chairman, I think the rules also make reference to the prohibiting of personal references. I really have the feeling that we have not done this adequately and I think that the rules do prohibit personal references and my point of order is that we proceed with the business and get beyond this.

Mr. Henry: Wait just a minute, gentlemen.

Now there is a rule which prohibits delving into personalities. There has been entirely too much of this sort of business going on up to this point in this convention. I do not have the authority nor the intention or desire to keep anybody from talking but it is just about time that we get down to the business at hand and just because somebody says something that somebody might take offense to, we don't have the time here to get up for personal privilege at all day. But I am not going to invoke any rule because it is sort of loosely drawn and hard to construe, but we are all grown adults supposedly mature people and it is about time that we begin using some restraint on ourselves.

Proceed Mr. Tapper.

Personal Privilege

Mr. Tapper: I would like to reiterate what you said Mr. Chairman, and Reverend Stovall and I agree with both of you and this is the reason that I have approached this rostrum at this particular time.

Regardless of what our particular professions are, regardless of whom we may represent individually, let us keep personalities out of this convention and let us not suspect someone when he presents an amendment or when he makes a talk because he happens to be in a particular profession or happens to represent a particular company or happens to be a plumber, a fisherman, a laborer or what have you. And I will not attack anyone on that basis. I do hope that we can refrain from that. I think the lady that was here before kind of tried to drive it home because she was an attorney that this is paramount in the minds of some of the attorneys. The gentleman before, emphatically... he didn't imply he stated it emphatically that this was the purpose of some of the attorneys supporting this amendment and I think we should be out of this convention. We don't need it here and I hope that we can from now on. Thank you.

Recess

[Quorum Call: 106 delegates present and a quorum.]

Further Discussion

Mr. Kean: Mr. Chairman, and fellow delegates, I rise in opposition to this amendment for one rather significant reason in my opinion. As I appreciate the doctrine of sovereign immunity, it goes further than immunity with respect to suits in tort action. Suits in negligence actions are the type that we have spent so much time in discussion here about. I would not necessarily be opposed to a limited waiver of sovereign immunity limited to tort actions if that matter were before the House. But when we say that we will abolish sovereign immunity, I don't think there is a lawyer in this chamber who could tell us where we would be in that point of time. I sight to you for examples the present doctrine of legislative immunity. In my opinion legislative immunity is merely an arm, a part of, an element of sovereign immunity. Judge Tate spoke yesterday about the fact that there was a quasi-judicial immunity in my opinion if that is not quasi or in fact judicial immunity it is but an arm of sovereign immunity... and element of sovereign immunity. Under the law at the present time, good faith administrative action is immune from suit. That good faith administrative action immunity is but an arm of sovereign immunity and therefore, I say to you all sincerely that if we proceeded to abolish sovereign immunity as the royal amendment would seek to do, I don't think there is a delegate here today who could intelligently analyze and say to the people of this state where we stand now that governmental immunity without any restriction has been abolished. Under these circumstances I think we would take a dangerous and precipitous and precipitous step if we proceeded to abolish governmental immunity when what we are talking about negligence actions, tort actions, suits in contracts which it seems to me could be put together in the form of some kind of sensible model, some kind of sensible section which would deal with that limited action. But not leave us dangling out here wondering where we are under circumstances where sovereign immunity is abolished in its entirety without anyone having any real conception of where we would be under those circumstances. Now I understand Mr. Burson has an amendment, has a proposal to amend this section which would be in line with authorizing suits in connection with torts and contract action. And it seems to me that that is sufficient to meet the problem that has been so well discussed here today. But I implore this delegation not to be swayed by emotional discussion about the necessity for people to file suits to protect their tort rights when this can be handled in a separate and distinct manner and to otherwise simply abolish sovereign immunity would leave us in an untenable situation. One that none of us could attempt to tell any member of this delegation or the public where we stand insofar as other suits are concerned. For these reasons, I think that the amendment should be rejected and we proceed to other matters before this House.

Further Discussion

Mr. Hayes Mr. Chairman, and members of the delegation, I would like to see that each person in this delegation has much time as he would like to take on this particular subject. I have been here and I am willing to stay as long as the people who want to talk on this particular subject because it appears to be one that is important to a lot of people. It seems we have had more speakers on this than any other proposal we have had so far. It appears that this is a solution through a solved question. Any judgment regarding liability insurance in the political subdivisions are the people who are afraid that they might be sued could solve their problem by simply carrying some type of liability insurance. The right to sue, and be sued should not be abridged by anyone. You would abridge that right by running through some hopper that is going to sit through and not let others. Any type of abridgement of that right I think should not be permitted. I would assume that this building here probably has some type of liability insurance on it against everything except raining on your desks. And I figure everybody in here carries some type of insurance... liability insurance, we have a good insurance agency in here that I believe could solve everybody's problem. We had a problem here of...with the tax problem of theft where the sheriffs didn't have but say a $5,000 dollar bond and we lost about a half a million dollars. Well now the taxpayers had spent this money, no recourse. Now if the state would keep better house or was compelled to keep better house, these things wouldn't happen. Now the state is now almost one large community and we are going to run from parish to parish from city to city with political subdivision after political subdivision not to require to do anything and anything can happen and I think each one of these political subdivisions should be required to have some type of liability insurance to cover the action. You might have if a jailhouse is no good to keep prisoners in they should be required to put them in one that has the right facilities. You see a person can put a person in a jail that is not fit to put a person in and should meet health standards. Now, you will hide under the sovereign immunity of the state and go along and do things you are not supposed to do, hiding behind sovereign immunity. I don't think the right to sue and be sued should be abridged by this constitutional convention. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mrs. Warren Mr. Chairman, and fellow delegates, I am standing here because I believe we should have the right to sue. I don't believe we should have to go to the legislature to get permission to do it, I think that we should have that right. I know you are glad that I don't feel like standing here talk ing, because I am a little bit hoarse and I am not going to stay here and talk and talk. But one thing that I think I must mention, I was a little bit disturbed when I heard a gentleman say that attorneys didn't care about children. And I hope I don't ever hear that again. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Arnette I think we have talked about this problem enough. I think we have had enough amendments brought up on it, I think we have got a set of amendments that has probably got everything in it that has been proposed before and for that reason I move the previous question on the entire subject matter so we can move on to other things. If you don't like what this amendment says you have got amendments before you that we will consider right after this one that has something that you probably like or you can go back to the original proposal. But I think it has been talked about far too much.

[Motion for the Previous Question on the entire subject matter rejected. 40-65. Previous Question ordered on the amendment: 66-40. Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected: 54-59.]

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Amendment proposed by Delegate Burson, a reprinted bill
Amendment No. 1. On page 7 delete lines 6 through 11 both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "the legislature shall provide by general offer the prosecution of tort claims against the state or its political subdivisions. Any judgment rendered against the State of Louisiana or one of its political subdivisions shall be exigible, payable and paid only out of funds appropriated by the legislature or the political subdivision concerned." And Delegate Burson, would you prefer a technical amendment here striking out the previous amendments to the section?

Mr. Burson Yes, sir.

Explanation

Mr. Burson Ladies and gentlemen, I ask you, especially those who have voted against the prior amendments, to pay special attention to the point that I want to make. I, first of all, urge you to consider that this is not in any way, shape or form a rehash of what I offered yesterday. The amendment that I had yesterday would have abolished by its terms immunity and tort for the state or any political subdivision. What I am proposing today I propose to you in all humility after doing what I should have done before to the same extent as I did yesterday. That is doing a little homework this morning. I read the federal tort claims act. Now this opening sentence of the federal tort claims act says...this is 28. U.S.C.A., Section 2674... that the United States shall be liable respecting the provisions of this title relating to the tort claims in the same manner and to the same extent as a private individual under like circumstances. So that is very broad and makes the United States susceptible to suits in tort just like any private person. But on reading the act on further down, you find some exceptions and those exceptions are primarily in the area that we've had concern voiced in by Mr. Keane and Mr. Stinson and others, that an exception would be the most important one would be that any claim based upon an act or omission of an employee of the government who is exercising due care or what Mr. Keane called good faith... in the performance of his duty even though it is a discretionary duty under federal law that you do not have a tort claim. That would get to the problem that I think has concerned some of the delegates, that you would have suits simply to harass agents of state or local government in the performance of routine duty. Now, my amendment does not offer any such exception because that is really a statutory matter. All my amendment does it mandates the legislature. that the legislature shall provide by general law...now how do I say general law? I am using the term general law as distinguished from the present system which requires a special law or resolution for each and every suit. I'm saying that by general law, hopefully, a Louisiana tort claims act or torts and contracts claims act, that the legislature would provide a procedure whereby citizens of this state could bring their suits in the courts of this state without having to first come to Baton Rouge and get permission. Now, the second sentence of my amendment that is proposed today takes language directly from, and I left the book on my desk, but it's Louisiana Revised Statutes 13:5801, which presently provides that judgment rendered in any suit filed against the state of Louisiana or one of its political subdivisions or any compromise reached in favor of the plaintiff or plaintiffs in any such suit shall be exigible, payable and paid only out of funds appropriated by the legislature or the political subdivision concerned. Now, I eliminated the language of compromise because I think that is implicit; that if you say an amendment has to be paid by appropriation I think you can take care of that by statute by the same tort claims statute that I'm thinking about the legislature enacting by the general language that I've used. I have encountered in the debate today a problem raised by Mr. Tapper, are you talking about insurance companies? Frankly, I don't think that's a problem, but just in case I would like to have Mr. Tapper's support on this. I eliminated the language about suits filed against the state and I said judgment against the state, or a political subdivision and I think that clearly does not mean a judgment against an insurance company or any other tort party. I urge you, if you are talking about I deem to be a reasonable compromise between those of us who are concerned with the rights of citizens of this state to bring claims for personal injury in a court of law in this state without undue delay. Now, I should have made the point yesterday and didn't because sometimes you get carried away with your own rhetoric and forget to make the logical points, but the biggest disadvantage of the present system is the delay by which a person has to wait until the next term of the legislature until he can get a bill or a resolution through both houses of the legislature before he can file a suit. Even though his cause of action may have accrued ten months previously, and in some country parishes like the one I come from, in ten months you can have a law suit tried, heard and on appeal if there's an appeal on it. I think it would eliminate an unnecessary delay and inconvenience.

Further Discussion

Mr. Womack Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I have two questions, I wanted to ask a question to Mr. Burson, and he'd exceeded his time. Number one is what if the legislature fails to reach an agreement. We had, I don't know how you'd value them but I guess several million dollars worth of no-fault bills introduced into the legislature. We recessed; we called joint sessions; we waited until the end of international figures in; did everything in the world, but the legislature refused to reach an agreement. I don't know what would happen. If the legislature fails to reach an agreement would a suit be filed for a declaratory judgment and either the state or the federal court be asked to set up a complete set of guidelines. The first number one. In number two, does not this proposal mandate indirectly the same repeal of immunity that you have failed to pass directly. To me it does.

Further Discussion

Mr. Abraham As I read Section 14 as presented by the legislative committee, with the amendments, I see nothing in here which prohibits the legislature from passing a general law allowing the claims or the suits that it will accept against it without the necessity of coming to the legislature prior to the suit being filed. So, I see no need for this amendment. Now, I think that this is permissible enough; it does anything that we need to do.

Further Discussion

Mr. Landry Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the delegation, really it is a privilege for a person of my type to sit here and listen to the legal mind of the state of Louisiana and the representative people speak in terms of "I'm trying to understand". I have come to a conclusion. I've asked a few questions. I'm going to ask another one, if it's possible to ask a question at this point. I can answer it with no, I can ask it but you don't have to answer it. The question is this: what is the meaning of the word exigible? Now, I...I asked 15 people just a moment ago...I made a survey of 15 people in my area...and only two knew the answer. I'm also aware of the fact that many writers lately have tried to express in language matters that people could understand. Exigible...what does it mean? I'd like to find out how many more people in this audience doesn't know...what it means. I'm better positioned to ask a question because of having found out what the word means, but this vote in just a few minutes is going to be decided by a few independent people. The lawyers are locked, and the decision is going to be made by people on the outside of the fringe of lawyers. I'm completely satisfied after research with the word and the meaning of the word, and I finally written in this document, completely satisfied that it provides for me and my constituents everything that needs to be in this constitution. I wanted you to know about it. I wanted you to know my concern. Sometimes we're influenced one way or the other by what we hear. I've enjoyed everything that was said by every person in this delegation, especially the words spoken by Miss Perkins.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

Mr. Burson Gentlemen, I'm not going to waive my right to close because I'm naive enough to believe that the process of debate while at times is very hard on the rear end, sometimes can be good for the brain. I know that there're some issues that have been brought out in the course of this debate since yesterday that I frankly had not thought of when I began, and they may come only once in a great while, but they do come in the course of the discussion that we're having here. I'd just like to point out in answer to the points that were raised in opposition here; Mr. Womack asked if the legislature could be mandamus or compelled to reach an agreement. I think under the general law of separation of powers no other agency of the government can mandamus the legislature to do anything. But I have enough confidence in the legislature to believe that if we have this mandatory language in the constitution that they will do something about the problem. Now, the second question was: whether or not this mandate indirectly would have the same effect of repeal of sovereign immunity? To that I would urge you the answer is no. Because the amendment that I had yesterday would have repealed sovereign immunity root and branch. This does not preclude reasonable exclusions such as the one for an administrator in the performance of his duty, and that's very, very important to your decision, here. Mr. Abraham pointed out that Section 14 could urge you my amendment would do. That's true. I agree with that. The only difference between Section 14, it might be done. My amendment says it shall be done and that's a very important difference. As far as the meaning of the word exigible, I haven't looked it up in the dictionary but it's my understanding that the meaning at law and the context that it's used in Louisiana Revised Statute 13:5801, which is where I got the word, the legislature put it in at some time past, meant that judgment could be executed upon it in that manner. Finally, Mr. Landry said that the independent people would have to decide this, and that's the way it ought to be just like in criminal juries. The law says that the guilt or innocence of an accused is too important to leave to lawyers. So with that, I urge you to pass this amendment. I think that it would be a reasonable compromise.

Questions

Miss Perkins Mr. Burson, I have a series of questions. First of all, I think that you may have clarified this. Would you agree that the power authorizing the legislature to give immunity with reference to torts claim is a limited authority of legislature which would be included in the Lanier provision which gives a general authority? In other words, would legislature under the Lanier amendment have the power to do what you have provided in your amendment?

Mr. Burson It would have the power under the committee proposal, Miss Perkins. My amendment would make it mandatory that it be done with regard to tort claims...That specific issue.

Miss Perkins So the only difference between the Lanier amendment and the amendment that you now propose is that the Lanier amendment is broader rather than specific in scope and it does not mandate as does your amendment, is that correct?

Mr. Burson No ma'am. As I understand the Lanier amendment, it related only to the issue of seizure of property and how judgment was to be paid. I don't believe Mr. Lanier's amendment had anything to say about sovereign immunity one way or the other.

Miss Perkins All right. The last question, in reference to the second to last sentence of your amendment, you state that funds appropriated by legislature. So would this mean any funds appropriated by legislature, or specific funds appropriated for the payment of the judgment?

Mr. Burson As far as I'm concerned and I urge you to notice that it says by the legislature or the political subdivision concerned, that that would have to mean the one concerned in the law suit and I took this language, I think, from the constitution which has been on the books in Louisiana since 1960 when this whole statute was passed regarding how judgments were to be executed against the state.

[Record vote ordered. Amendments rejected: 52-64. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Landrum], page 7 delete lines 6 through 11 both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Section 14, the immunity of the state from suit and liability is hereby abolished," and Rev. Landrum would need to add that other amendment deleting previous floor amendments.

Explanation

Mr. Landrum Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this amendment is to try to amend the final status of this state from the way that board's been showing here all morning. We're going to try to get some green into it rather than the red. So, I would hope that you will support this amendment. It has been stated that the legislature never denied a request to be sued. Now, even if that was so, I would still be opposed to the idea that an individual would have to go to the legislature to be able to file suit. But, if we would just look at some of the records, in 1959 there were two request denied. In 1961, ten were denied. In 1962 one was denied. In 1965 two were denied. In 1966 five were denied. In 1968 four were denied. In 1973 seventeen were opposed to the idea that should an individual be denied to file a suit against the state? I just cannot understand why some delegates are opposed to the idea of an individual filing a suit against the state. Now, my amendment does not go into the idea of what happens after the suit is filed. I'm not concerned with whether or not the individual wins the suit or loses the suit, or how it's to be paid... what I am concerned about is that you have the right to do it, to file that suit without getting permission. Now under the due process of law, and I'm not an attorney, everybody is supposed to have their day in court. What we are saying here is that you can be denied your day in court. And I don't think that we really want to do that. I don't believe that we really want to deny an individual the right to have his day in court. Just as we get beat down on amendments here, then give that individual the right to get beat in the court. That's all I'm saying. I would ask that you support this amendment, and I believe that all your constituents would be more than happy to know that their delegate supported such an amendment. Thank you.

Questions

Mr. Drew Rev. Landrum, do you have any knowledge whatsoever of why those suits were not allowed?

Mr. Landrum Mr. Drew, I have been told that in some cases prescription...now...

Mr. Drew Well do you know Rev. Landrum that I am a member of Judiciary A and in 1973 the cases that were denied had prescribed because of the negligence of attorneys in many cases, and only because of prescription?

Mr. Landrum Mr. Drew, if an individual had the right to go to court, then the legislature...you wouldn't have had to worry about that at all. That's all I'm saying. That we go to the regular procedures, through the judicial department of our government.

Further Discussion

Mr. Stagg Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, with all the respect that is due them, to Rev. Landrum who just spoke, to Mr. Roy who were previously, to Mr. Burson who was here previously with all due respect to those delegates, who believe that sovereign immunity ought to be dispensed with, I would like to point out to you that on eight separate distinct amendments the concept has been voted down by convention. We are faced with yet another amendment seeking the same object. This may be the way this convention is supposed to run, but it surely is not a productive manner of proceedings. You have lost, gentlemen, on vote after vote, and it's time for this convention to get on with its business and I move the previous question on the amendment.

[Previous question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendments rejected: 38-72. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Amendment proposed by Mr. Kelly to the committee proposal. Amend the reprinted as engrossed proposal. Amendment No. 1 on page 7 delete lines 6 through 11 both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof, the following: "Section 14, A. Neither the state nor any of its agencies or political subdivisions shall be immune from suit (and there's been a typographical error) and liability" should be inserted in your copy... from suit and liability... and contract or for injury to person or property. Paragraph B. In other cases the legislature may authorize suit to be filed against the state, its agencies and political subdivisions and any concurrent resolution enacted for the purpose shall waive immunity from suit and liability. Paragraph C. The legislature shall provide for a method of procedure and the effect of the judgments which may be rendered in all cases against the state, its agencies and political subdivisions. Paragraph D. Public property and funds shall not be subject to seizure and no judgment against the state, its agencies or political subdivisions shall be exigible, payable or paid except out of funds appropriated for payment by the state, its agencies, or political subdivision against whom judgment is rendered." And, Mr. Kelley, we need to add an amendment deleting the previous floor amendments.

Explanation

Mr. Kelly Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, we've been here for many, many hours on this particular subject and I have tried to come up with what I consider a true compromise in this particular area. As it has been stated many times here before what we're really talking about is whether or not you're going to have legislative screening. Now, many of the objections that have been made have been made to the extent that, well, under some of these other amendments you do away completely with the doctrine of immunity. I have not done that. I've simply restricted the abolition of the immunity to contract cases, which under the present law there is no immunity anyhow, for injury to person or property which is not a property claims. Now, I've instilled and kept the concept that in all other cases which have been bothering some of the delegates here, in all other cases the legislature still must authorize the suits to be filed against the state. Now in answer to one of Mr. Stinson's objections yesterday concerning the providing of a procedure in the concepts of judgment and so forth, we've added a Paragraph C, which simply applies both to the A and B sections above, which quite frankly just states that they shall prescribe the method of procedure, effects of judgment against the state, its agencies and political subdivisions. We have retained the concept of the latter amendment. Public property claims subject, and Mr. Womack, I've even tried to take care of school board funds or anything else, so there would be left no judicial interpretation as to what is the meaning of property, because we specifically placed the word "funds" which means that no funds, no school board can have their funds specifically taken from them. It simply says that the legislature or the political subdivision against whom any judgment is going to be rendered, before that judgment can be paid, you might say you've got to get the approval of the governing body in question against whom the judgment was rendered. I think that this is a true compromise of the entire situation. I've gone from one extreme to the other, and I hope that I have presented something to this convention which will satisfy the majority of the delegates at this particular time.

Questions

Mr. Drew Don, with reference to your statement as to all other actions, would you tell this body what those all other actions which you are not covering include?

Mr. Kelly Well, Mr. Drew, I don't think that really it would be incumbent, and I can't describe and particularize all other actions, but as I understand it, I have come with an exception first, and any and all other actions against the state would require the approval of your legislative body. The only thing that I'm saying that we do not need your approval to institute is suits in contracts, suits for personal injury and suits for property damage. All other suits would require the old legislative approval method. Now, what those might be, I can imagine titles to land; that was raised here, yesterday. Obviously that would be covered before anyone could contest the title to the property upon which the State Capitol rests, well, they would have to seek legislative approval in order to institute and file such a suit.

Mr. Trihe That's the point I wanted to raise, Mr. Kelly, and I wanted to ask it of you. Maybe we could clear it up and make sure we understand I have in mind the Miami Corporation Case and the Amarado Petroleum Company Case and those similar cases which were suits against the state involving the ownership of alluvial lands. In those cases the doctrine of sovereign immunity was not invoked and I gather didn't hold not to apply but was thought not to apply so that the litigants were able to litigate against the state the question of ownership of lands now under your amendment, then, the doctrine of sovereign immunity would be enlarged to apply to those situations, is that correct?

Mr. Kelly Representative Triche, I'm not sure whether or not it would be enlarged to that extent but I will say that that would certainly be left to judicial interpretation, and the only thing which is specifically set forth where there is no immunity would be the contract suit, the suit for personal injury or the suit for property damage. All other suits would, of course, have to go to the legislature and seek the legislative approval before filing that suit.

Further Discussion

Mr. Guarisco I rise in support of the Kelly amendment. It reminds me of a story of a fellow who took his young son on his first hunting expedition. They went out in the swamps and they had two ducks swimming in the water. The father told his son, watch me kill these ducks, and he shot at them a couple of times and the ducks got up and flew. He said you know son you've seen sitting there but you can't kill them. You've seen two dead ducks get up and fly. I think that's what we're doing here in this convention. We're holding on to some dead ducks. Sovereign immunity is a dead duck. It's caught in the cross-fires all over this country. It's hit in every direction. Now, we're here at the Constitutional Convention of 1973 are coming here to say we're going to give it open heart surgery and revive it. We can't do that. We're probably going to pass an equal protection of the laws clause in our bill of rights. I'm pretty sure that this convention is going to pass such an act. Once we do that, and once the legislature in their wisdom refuses someone the permission to file a suit, when you file a suit under the equal protection of the laws and when the legislature can deny it to one and give to the other the right to file a suit, then that is a denial of the equal protection of the laws. So, it's not going to last very long even if we pass it today. Montana in 1972 did away with sovereign immunity. Illinois is 1970, Nebraska did away with it, the courts are doing away with it. Our courts are doing away with it. Various legislators are doing away with it, yet we're going to come back and say we're going to keep it. We're going to pass something that is not going to last. We all pledged ourselves to come here and try to find new solutions to old problems and then we want to keep the old solution. I'll yield to a question, sir.

Questions

Mr. Lanier Delegate Guarisco, we were told by the previous speaker that Subsection D was intended to preserve the principles of the Lanier amendment. Would you agree that the words "except as otherwise provided in this constitution" are not contained in this language?

Mr. Guarisco Yes.

Mr. Lanier And without that language do you think that if this thing passed, then put this proviso in possible conflict with provisions of revenue finance and taxation and local and parochial government with reference to the pledge of public property to secure revenue bonds, certificates of indebtedness and local assessments?

Mr. Guarisco I haven't seen anything from revenue and taxation.

Mr. Lanier Have you seen anything from local government?

21st Days Proceedings—July 27, 1973

Mr. Guarisco Yes

Mr. Lanier Would you agree that that would put this in possible conflict with Sections 42 and 43 of the local government proposal?

Mr. Guarisco With the proposal, yes.

Mr. Lanier Now, one other thing with reference to your remarks about the dead ducks flying. Have you ever had to kill a snake seven times?

Mr. Velazquez Mr. Guarisco, at present there is no requirement that a political subdivision of the state carry liability insurance, is there?

Mr. Guarisco It would be wise to do so.

Mr. Velazquez No, I'm asking you is there now a law saying that they must carry it?

Mr. Guarisco I don't know.

Mr. Velazquez Then, it seems to me then that we should have some protection in here to make sure the insurer at least pays up to the maximum limit that the subdivision already has. This is what worries me about it. Shouldn't you have something in here saying something to the effect that provides that nothing herein shall be construed to release any insurer of the state, its agencies or political subdivisions from liability to the extent of coverage provided by any policy of insurance which may have been purchased by the state, its agencies or political subdivisions?

Mr. Guarisco No, I don't think so.

Mr. Velazquez You think this thing, as written, already makes sure that before the state has to pay out anything on the insurance coverage will have to pay what they have been paid premiums through the years for.

Mr. Guarisco Those public officials are vested with the responsibility of their subdivisions and they'll take care of that, I assume.

Mr. Velazquez Well they maybe have the responsibility but there is no requirement that they have to have sufficient insurance.

Further Discussion

Mr. Blair Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I'll make mine very brief. I rise in opposition. This reminds me a little of what, as Mr. Tom Staqq brought out, this is about 7, 8, or 9 times that we've considered the main concept, these same things coming up. If you saw the race between Shamm and Secretariat, does it remind you anything about it? You remember they almost beat poor old Shamm to death for twice, but he still didn't win.

Questions

Mr. Alexander Senator Blair, as a member of the legislature what happens to a poor individual who lives in the back wood and who hasn't the political clout to get a member of the legislature to introduce legislation to permit him to sue the state? What happens in that individual under present law?

Mr. Blair Reverend Alexander, he should be represented by someone that would introduce it. I've introduced bills for this type, for people on the opposite side politically, but I felt it was my duty to introduce such legislation.

Mr. Alexander But suppose he lives in a rural area 50 miles from nowhere in a large district, geographically? He doesn't have political clout, he doesn't even know who represents him. What happens? He's injured by the state. I've known of instances like that.

Mr. Blair Reverend Alexander, I feel sure that he'd have to get an attorney and I feel sure that the attorney should know who the Representative or Senator is.

Mr. Landrum Mr. Blair, do you know how many times we tried to go to the moon? Many times we failed and tried, yet we continued to try.

Mr. Blair Reverend Landrum, I can answer only for myself. I don't believe that I have ever refused to introduce a bill in a suit bill for anyone in my parish or my district that I represent.

Mr. Landrum Now may I ask you one other question? When every state but 5 have abolished this law, do you feel that the people in Louisiana are so much worse than in other parts of the country? That they are going to abuse this type of law?

Mr. Blair Reverend Landrum, there is so much noise I didn't understand your question. Do you mind repeating it?

Mr. Landrum What I'm asking you is all but 5 states have abolished the immunity law. Do you feel that the people in Louisiana are so much worse than any other state in this country that they would abuse this law?

Mr. Blair No, but I like the way we've been operating a long time in Louisiana, and I think that we've improved and I think we are going to continue to improve.

Mr. Landrum Well that's why we are here now, because what we've been operating on for a long time. Otherwise we wouldn't be here, wouldn't you say? Something was wrong that the people...

Further Discussion

Mr. Roemer Fellow delegates, I'd like to address a few remarks about the idea of snakes and how many times we have to deal with them. You see there, that's a good issue, particularly when it's not your snake. You remember last week and the week before when we talked about how many days the legislature should meet and whether we should have split sessions? Oh yes, the other side came back time and time again. They finally won it. You see it wasn't a snake then, cause they owned it. The question is not whether it's a snake or how many times we talk about it, it's who owns it. I think this snake, if you want to call it that, is owned by the people. Not be a special group whether they be legislators or cotton farmers, it's our snake, and this is a pet snake. It's a good one. The people who fight this kind of amendment probably believe in the Queen of Canada. Oh yes, Virginia, there is a Queen of Canada. She lives in England and she is the sovereign head of the mighty nation of Canada. Has no power, has no authority, that's what they're talking about here, the Queen of Canada in the legislature of our state. You see, they just told us time and time again on we allow all these suits, we just want to review them. They don't turn any down, they allow them all. They said it time and time again, why should they have the right to review? Queen of Canada, window dressing, patronage, giving up our rights to them. I'm against that sort of thing. I've had problems with every prior amendment because they were so broad in fighting sovereign immunity. This, I think is, as Mr. Kelly stated, a true, accurate, progress on this particular proposition. I think sovereign immunity and yet allows the people to have redress, have their case heard where it ought to be, not in the legislature, but in our courts. Now I respect and have respected and hope will continue to respect every man and woman in this convention's right to speak and I've heard some good thoughts on this particular proposition. I think we've finally arrived at a point, I hope, that we can take a step forward. I urge you to adopt this amendment.

21st Days Proceedings—July 27, 1973

Further Discussion

Mr. Conroy While this has been a long discussion, it has been interesting and we've seen a lot of different versions of how to do something. The present amendment before the convention, is certainly the best effort made by those who wish for the state to incorporate in the constitution a waiver of immunity. I still fail to understand those who feel that it is necessary to incorporate in the constitution, such a waiver of immunity. There is nothing in Section 14 of the Committee Proposal that incorporates or states anything about sovereign immunity. It says the legislature may authorize suits to be filed against the state. It's a delegation to the state, to the legislature, of the authority to do what I thought this constitutional convention was intended to do, was to indicate the areas in which the legislature could act. Those who have spoken for a flexible constitution, those who have spoken for giving authority to the legislature find themselves in this case, speaking for requiring the legislature to do certain things or removing from the legislature the authority to review certain things. I don't understand the concepts or their desires in that regard. I think that the committee proposal as written is sound and should be adopted by this convention. I continue to be opposed to the amendments that are proposed to it.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

Mr. Kelly Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I think that it's obvious that you've heard much less objection to this particular amendment as has been stated up here and I have stated on several occasions, that is a good amendment. If we pass this, it will give the people of the state of Louisiana the protection yet it will give the state the protection that it needs. It will give the cities the protection that they need. It will give the villages, the incorporated villages, the protection that they need. I earnestly solicit your support, and let's get this behind us and move on to another subject.

[Be ordered to be ordered. Amendments adopted: 50-51. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous Question ordered in the entire subject matters: 81-26.]

Point of Information

Mr. Flory It's my understanding that the majority cannot pass this section unless the majority is 67 votes. Isn't that correct?

Mr. Henry Sixty-seven people will have to vote for this section before it is adopted. You are correct, sir.

[Referred passed: in 15. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poyner Section 15. Continuity of Government. Section 15: The legislature shall provide for the orderly and temporary continuity of state government in periods of emergency until such time as the normal processes of government can be reestablished in accordance with the constitution and laws of the state. It shall also provide for the prompt and temporary succession to the powers and duties of public offices, the incumbents of which may become unavailable to execute the functions of their offices.

Explanation

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegate, the provision pertaining to continuity of government is now contained in the present constitution in Article II, Section 3. The provision submitted to you under the section designated in Section 15 (in substantially the same with a few exceptions. First of all, that part of the continuity of government pertaining to local government was assigned to the Committee on Local and Parochial Government so this section is intended to apply only to state government. Secondly, the wording as contained in today's constitution to provide for continuity of government in case of emergency resulting from disasters caused by enemy attack has been changed to periods of emergency so that it will not be strictly confined to enemy attack, but also to epidemics, natural disaster, etc., which certainly could occur in addition to attack by the enemy. Unless there are some questions, I would move for the adoption of Section 15.

Questions

Mr. O'Neill Mr. Casey, you remember the discussions in our committee about this provision, and would you agree that in line 14, "provide for the temporary continuity of state government," that that is sort of a vague mandate? And don't you agree that they could provide for any form of government under this provision?

Mr. Casey Well, obviously it's confined only to periods of emergency and I would assume it would be in accord, and it does, I think, imply that it would be done in accord with the constitution and the laws of the state insofar as the type of government is concerned. It's strictly during periods of emergency. It's on a temporary basis and I think the design of it is certainly intended to be flexible so that the detail of it could be left entirely to the legislature to itemize and define.

Mr. O'Neill Well this flexibility is what concerns me a little bit and it implies that the legislature would have to go by the constitution, but it doesn't really say it. Another question, isn't it true that we had a very hard time determining what a period of emergency would be?

Mr. Casey You're absolutely correct. That's why I think the committee that both you and I were a member of, did not attempt to define that which is the definition of emergency. So that's why that vague term was used. Because there are many situations other than enemy attack.

Mr. O'Neill Well I just hoped that we could clarify it a little. Thank you.

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Tom, I hate to ask you a "do you know" question, but your second paragraph, "that shall also provide for the prompt and temporary succession" etc., in the Committee on the Executive Department we have taken care of a great number of the officials that hopefully are going to be in the executive department. What I'm concerned about is again, do you know, that there is a possible conflict between this article and the article that we would have to provide for the succession into office based on inability, unavailability, death, or something of that nature?

Mr. Casey I would assume that when an interpretation is requested, and I would expect it would be from the judiciary, that where the constitution is specific on this point, I would think that the legislature certainly could not overcome or override those positions specifically designated in the constitution as to the method of succession in case of emergency.

Mr. Vick Does this give the legislature the power to suspend the writ of habeas corpus? Implies?

Mr. Casey I do not see that implication here, but I'd be it from me in my humble interpretation to say that it does or does not.

Mr. Vick All right. As a constitutional scholar, wouldn't you agree.

Mr. Casey Thanks for the compliment.

21st Days Proceedings—July 27, 1973

Mr. Vick Wouldn't you agree that this provision is vague, over broad, and therefore unconstitutional on its face?

Mr. Casey I would suggest that it's not. It's broad, yes, when we use the word emergency. I don't think it's vague though.

Mr. Vick And over broad. That this is constitutionally infirm because of overbreadth and is therefore unconstitutional on its face.

Mr. Casey Well, I merely disagree with you. I don't think that it is. You are entitled to your opinion and I'm entitled to mine.

Mr. Triche Mr. Casey, under the committee's proposal would the legislature determine the emergency?

Mr. Casey I would assume that the legislature could, in whatever statutes are enacted, attempt to define emergency. But I would say even there that it is possible that they could not cover every possibility.

Mr. Triche Well if the legislature wouldn't determine the emergency, who would?

Mr. Casey Well, the idea is that the legislature would.

Mr. Triche All right. Now in addition to that, it talks about until such time as normal processes of government can be resumed or reestablished. Would the legislature also determine that?

Mr. Casey I would say under the interpretation of Section 15 they certainly could, Mr. Triche.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment proposed by Delegate Jenkins. Going to the reprinted bill.

Amendment No. 1. On page 7, strike out lines 13 through 20 in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Section 15. The legislature, in order to insure continuity of state government in periods of emergency caused by enemy attack, shall have the power to provide for temporary succession to the powers and duties of public offices, whether filled by election or appointment, when the incumbents become unable to carry on the powers and duties of such offices."

Explanation

Mr. Jenkins Mr. Chairman, delegates to the convention, if you'll study the committee recommendation, you'll be troubled by the first sentence. I want to call it to your attention again. The first sentence of the proposal by the committee says: "The legislature shall provide for the orderly and temporary continuity of state government in periods of emergency until such time as the normal processes of government can be reestablished in accordance with the constitution and laws of the state." The implication of that sentence seems to be, in my view, that there will be certain times, because of emergencies, and the word emergency is not defined, when the legislature might choose to act contrary to this constitution. They might do things contrary to what we have laid down here. Now that, to me, is a very dangerous power. It could mean in times of emergency that all the protections that we've built-in, could mean nothing. Look at some of the words. What is temporary continuity of state government? What is an emergency? Who declares it? Is a hurricane an emergency? What can happen in emergencies? Let me ask you these questions. Can first amendment rights be suspended, freedom of speech, freedom of assembly, habeas corpus, the right to keep and bear arms, due process of law, property rights be deprived, grand juries? Can ex post facto laws be passed in these periods of emergencies until the constitution and laws can be reestablished? Bill of attainder, will access to courts be closed? Will there be still a prohibition against cruel and unusual punishments? Will there be laws impairing obligation of contracts? Will the judiciary remain independent? Will there be changes in jurisdiction and venue of the courts? Will officials be chosen by the legislature or whom? Will the civil authority be still superior to the military in such situations or will the military become supreme? All of these issues have to be faced and the door is open under this language in this first sentence for all of these things to be taken away with. Now, it seems to me that the very time when we need our most protection under our constitution, is in periods of emergency because that's when government tends to become most abusive. That's when tyrannies set it, dictatorships control, corruption becomes most rampant. And if we're so naive to think there will never be such times, then we haven't thought much about history because they have happened over and over in the past. They will undoubtedly happen many times in the future. The only thing that my amendment provides for is this: as in the case of the current constitution, provides that there shall only be a so called emergency declared in case of an enemy attack. That the present constitution provides, and it provides only one thing contrary to the constitution that we would adopt. That would be that the legislature could provide for the temporary filling of offices which, when the incumbents may become unable to serve. In the amendment, the words emergency and continually take on the significance that they do in the committee's proposal because they're not part of the powers that would be exercised. The only power would be this one, to fill vacancies in office. What this really would do would be to allow the legislature, under the legislative committee's report, to do things which are not permitted by this constitution when it declares an emergency. That is a dangerous proposal. Remember, too, that under the previous provision which we adopted, we said the legislature can be called into session in periods of emergency without notice of any sort, without time periods, without delays of any sort, by the governor. Supposedly the governor, I guess, could call the legislature into session without any notice to the legislature at the top of the moment. They could, I guess, declare an emergency and then provide to act contrary to this constitution. That doesn't make much sense. And so to protect us against such possible abuses which might occur, this amendment is offered. It would provide that in emergencies caused by enemy attacks, there could be succession to offices when the incumbents became unable to serve, but that other constitutional protections would not be violated or infringed. So I urge the adoption of this amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates to the convention, I think Mr. Jenkins intends to reinstate and certainly does by the wording of his amendment, the use of the words enemy attack. All the committee has submitted to you or intends to submit is a flexible, workable proposal realizing that there are other things other than enemy attack which could cause great confusion in our state and could erode the continuity of government and that is all that we are talking about in this particular section, is to provide for the orderly and temporary, and I must emphasize the word temporary, continuity of state government, and for the succession to power of public offices. I would like to remind you, if you go back to Section 15 as submitted by the committee proposal, that all this does is require the legislature, it requires the legislature to pass a statute or an act after the passage of which is subject to review by our courts, to a declaratory judgment, is susceptible to being declared unconstitutional, and if it is unworkable, unrealistic, completely improper, it would certainly be so declared by our own Supreme Court. We haven't had here affect as we have been referred to by Mr. Jenkins, any rights that we might have under the Federal Constitution. We can't affect a legislature against the Federal Constitution here. All we're talking about is the mechanics of succeeding to office in case of emergency, and I must emphasize the word emergency, rather than enemy attack. There are many more things other than enemy attack. And to provide for the orderly and temporary continuity of state government, I think we're making a mountain out of a molehill, and I would urge defeat of Mr. Jenkins amendment.

21st Days Proceedings—July 27, 1973

Questions

Mr. Alexander Mr. Casey, I think you almost answered my question when you alluded to many other emergencies other than enemy attack. Maybe if you would just mention one or two of them, I don't want to say them myself, but this amendment, to me, restricts emergencies to enemy attack, per se. No more and no less, isn't that right?

Mr. Casey Well that's absolutely correct. But if we sat here for the rest of the day we could think of a hundred examples, but I would submit to you that an example is widespread flooding, widespread epidemic, sickness from various causes, many of which could be inflicted on the entire citizenry of our state.

Mr. Alexander Would you also agree that to enact this amendment would in itself be an emergency?

Mr. Casey Well I'm against the amendment and judging by your comments, I think you are also, Reverend Alexander.

Mr. Avant Mr. Casey, as I understand this provision, the legislature could only so provide with respect to some emergency situation in which the normal processes of government had become disestablished, because they can only provide until those processes have been reestablished. So that is a limitation, is it not, on the power of the legislature? The normal processes of government have to be completely disestablished before you can institute this legislative succession procedure. Is that the intent of the...

Mr. Casey You are certainly correct, Mr. Avant. We would have to detail this method in a statute. And if it's improper, it could be declared unconstitutional.

Mr. Avant And if the normal processes of government have become disestablished because of some emergency, it is of little consequence what that emergency is. Whether it is an enemy attack, a flood, an epidemic, a hurricane, or what it is.

Mr. Casey An enemy attack always sounds like the best thing to talk about, but I think there are a lot better chances of something else occurring other than enemy attacks.

Mr. Kilbourne Mr. Casey, doesn't the Federal Constitution guarantee every state a republican form of government, and wouldn't that protect the state against the kind of things that Mr. Jenkins has talked about on his amendment?

Mr. Casey It certainly does, Mr. Kilbourne, and I really don't envision that as a problem at all.

Mr. Stinson Mr. Casey, the recommendation of the committee and also the amendment both, is only as to state government. Isn't it a fact that our parish government and city governments, they take care of themselves. This is only state government, isn't it?

Mr. Casey That's all we are dealing with here. The present constitution deals with local and state government and we'll discuss that under the local government area.

Further Discussion

Mr. Perez Mr. Chairman and delegates, I've thought long and hard about this particular provision and as you know I hesitate to come up to the mike except when I feel that there is a subject matter which is of such importance that it deserves special consideration. The present provision in the constitution was adopted during the time when we were so concerned about the fact that our state may be subjected to nuclear attack and that there would be wholesale loss of public officials so that they could not continue to operate government because of the death of so many public officials. What concerns me so much about this amendment is that you might have and probably would have a lot of your elected officials or most of them still alive, still able to carry out their functions, but the legislature might decide, in their wisdom, that because of an emergency that some other procedure or process should be followed in the operation of government, and that they would suspend the local governmental officials' duties and responsibilities and put them elsewhere. I might call to your attention, that under federal laws Louisiana or parts of Louisiana have been declared to be emergency areas time and again. Take for instance, just during this last high river flood fight which we have had, the entire state of Louisiana along the Mississippi River and many other areas were declared emergency areas. Does this leave the possibility that the legislature could adopt laws which would provide for the suspension of the operation of government during those emergencies? I am very much concerned over the fact that the word emergency has not been properly and adequately defined and that we are leaving the possibility that Pandora's box could be opened wide. I suggest to you that if we need a provision like this in the constitution it is only under the condition when wholesale death of public officials comes about. And the only condition that I can conceive of when that would ever happen would be in the event of nuclear attack. That's the reason the present constitution provides for emergency caused by enemy attack. And that is the only case that I can conceive of when such an emergency provision would be necessary. So I therefore suggest that the Jenkins amendment is better than the provision which has been submitted by the committee, and I would urge the adoption of the Jenkins' amendment.

Questions

Mr. O'Neill Mr. Perez, didn't you come before our committee and express the same concern to us and didn't we amend our provision somewhat, but not completely to your liking to take care of part of this?

Mr. Perez I appeared before your committee on behalf of the Committee on Local and Parochial Government and only in that capacity, and the committee was good enough to insert the word state on line 14 to hopefully make it clear that this provision would apply only to state government and not local government. But the purpose of the amendment today concern the general provision itself as it applies to state government.

Mr. O'Neill Thank you.

Mr. DeBleux Mr. Perez, I'm thinking about a situation that could take place that I don't believe the Jenkins' amendment will allow for. Suppose the legislature should be in session sometime in the capitol, and of course the governor and everybody's there, and we should have an earthquake, let's hope that never happens, at least while I'm there. But suppose that does happen, and the whole legislature and the state officials are wiped out. Wouldn't that be an occasion where that the particular provision like this would come into effect?

Mr. Perez My only answer to that, sir, is who has ever known or heard of an earthquake of that kind in the history of this state? We can only provide for those things which are reasonably foreseeable, not something which we might speculate up as some remote, ultra remote possibility.

Mr. DeBleux Well, I hope, we haven't had any in the past, I hope we don't have any in the future. But let's don't say that something like that can't happen. I've seen some things happen that I never would have thought would have happened this day and time. Even in this convention.

Mr. Perez Senator, to answer your statement, the question is which is the worse of the two evils. As the committee proposal now stands, it could declare what an emergency is. There is no definition of an emergency and it would strictly be left to the whim of the legislature to declare that word constitute a sufficient emergency in order to suspend the operation of state government by the duly elected officials and put that responsibility possibly in other persons hands.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

Mr. Jenkins Mr. Chairman and delegates to the convention, there are many procedures in our law that allow the government to act in times of emergency. In fact, time and time again I think in the legislature we pass things to allow certain flexibility of the governor, the legislature, local public officials to deal with emergencies, and certainly many of the procedures that we adopt in this constitution will allow local officials, state officials, the legislature and the governor to deal in emergency situations. But, in every such case, we want to limit those officials to the confines of this constitution and the protections built therein. And so the only purpose of this amendment is to provide that as, in the same context and with the same feeling as the 1962 amendment to the constitution which originally put this provision in, we allow for temporary succession to public officials, to public offices, in case of an enemy attack. We have many natural disasters but there's no reason in such cases to suspend basic constitutional protections. I fear without this amendment that such a suspension will be possible. We need much more of a definition of emergency than is in the Legislative Committee's proposal, and certainly we need some protection. We need not go to the trouble of writing a constitution with a Bill of Rights, with many procedural safeguards, if at the whim of the legislature or the governor or someone else all of these things could be done away with. And so for that reason I urge you to adopt this amendment.

Questions

Mr. Juneau Mr. Jenkins, of course one of the controversies is whether we want a limit to enemy attack or not. I notice one thing that you deleted from your provision which is now in the present constitution. That is, in times of emergency even in the case of an enemy attack it says to adopt such other measures as may be necessary and proper for insuring the continuity of governmental operations. That is deleted from your provision, is it not sir?

Mr. Jenkins Yes, that is, and that's because we have sufficient flexibility right now to handle those situations. I can't imagine what procedure might be necessary in the case of an enemy attack that the legislature, the governor, doesn't already have the power to accomplish that they couldn't do.

Mr. Juneau Don't you think though it's possible to be construed to be self limiting the fact that you have specifically what they shall have a power to do and nothing more in the case of an emergency?

Mr. Jenkins Yes.

Mr. Juneau The normal processes we have forbidding every other procedure you may need for a prompt, efficient service at that time. Delay periods that could be accomplished under your amendment.

Mr. Jenkins No, you see the thing is the legislature under our provision adopted earlier can come into immediate session, the governor can declare a particular provision an emergency provision, it can come into effect immediately. They can pass laws on a moments notice, practically. They can deal with situations as they come up, so there's no need to allow them to act contrary to this constitution, because the constitution gives them sufficient flexibility.

Mr. Juneau Well then, what would occur, we'll get to the legislative article which requires that a bill, for example, be read on three separate days? And that's in the constitution, the legislature couldn't change the constitution.

Mr. Jenkins No, it couldn't change that...

Mr. Juneau Well, do we have to wait 3 days in an enemy attack to find out?

Mr. Jenkins But it can pass resolutions, concurrent resolutions and things of this nature to deal with emergency situations.

Mr. Juneau Now that's all, thank you.

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Jenkins, I'd just like to ask you this question. They said that my illustration about the earthquake might not be proper. But suppose, and I've got two questions to ask you. Suppose that we should have a bomb during the time the legislature is in session in which about half or most all of the legislators and the governor is killed. Your amendment wouldn't take care of that, would it?

Mr. Jenkins No it wouldn't, and neither does the Legislative Committee's proposal. You notice that it says the legislature shall provide, and if the legislature doesn't exist, then even under the Legislative Committee proposal it can't provide for it.

Mr. De Blieux Well haven't you appointed a successor to your office under the present provisions of the act of the constitution and the act of the legislature doesn't exist every legislator had done that. I know I have.

Mr. Jenkins Yes. And that's in case of enemy attack under the present law.

Mr. De Blieux Well, now aren't we broadening this to take care of a situation as I've illustrated to you?

Mr. Jenkins No, because we have procedures for special elections to fill those vacancies.

Mr. De Blieux If half the legislature is wiped out you don't have that, though. You have...

Mr. Jenkins You could still have a special election.

Mr. De Blieux You have that you have an emergency or more that can happen

Mr. Jenkins You could still have special elections to fill the vacancies in such instances.

Mr. De Blieux Now, another thing. With reference to the definition of emergency. Since no legislators are wanting to give up their position, don't you think they'd restrict the type of emergency which that would take over?

[Revised Question ordered. Amendment considered. Motion for recess after roll call.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Delegate Staag and Abraham send up amendments as follows: Amendment No. 1, Page 7, line 17, immediately after the period and before the word "shall" delete the word "it" and insert in lieu thereof, the following: "except as otherwise provided in this constitution, it".

21st Days Proceedings—July 27, 1973

Explanation

Mr. Stagg Mr. Chairman, and delegates to the convention, this is in the way of a technical amendment and I suggested it to the legislative committee, Mr. Casey, and they found it to be non-objectionable to them. The reason for the amendment is that in the executive article which I hope some day we get to, it is provided in a very particular way how a declaration of inability by a public official can be determined which will involve all three branches of the state government. In this particular case, I would like for our language not to be frozen out of the constitution by the way that this one is written and the amendments provide that flexibility by saying "except as otherwise provided in this constitution, it shall also provide for the prompt and temporary succession to office."

Questions

Mr. Stinson Mr. Stagg, don't you think your amendment, now this is going to be when the bombs are dropping and the earthquakes are happening, don't you think in there, you should put a limit on debate and the number of amendments that can be offered in those sessions?

Mr. Stagg Mr. Stinson, I'll honor that if you will.

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Stagg, I'm wondering if you're not placing your amendment in the wrong place. I know what you want to do, but I think that if you'll notice, the "if you had placed the amendment right after the word "succession" in line 18, wouldn't it be a better place to put that amendment, than where you have it?

Mr. Stagg Senator De Blieux, I would suppose that the Committee on Style and Drafting could do that. It does not change the substance of my amendment at all. We're just trying to allow the convention to accede to the possibility that this language would freeze out other languages coming in in further amendments, in further sections.

[Previous question ordered. Amendment adopted: 88-2. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous question ordered on the question, section passed: 86-1. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter Section 16, style of laws, enacting clause. Section 16. The style of laws of this state shall be "be it enacted by the Legislature of Louisiana." It shall not be necessary to repeat the enacting clause after the first section of an act.

Explanation

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates, this very provision is in the law today. We even discussed the possibility of the necessity of it, the possibility of deleting it. It was found that all states have something of this type. Most have exactly this wording. It's felt that something is necessary to specifically designate some special wording to indicate that when the legislature passes a law that specific wording be used that it is a law enacted by the legislature of Louisiana. I urge adoption of Section 16.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Casey]; on page 7, line 22, immediately after the word "laws" and before the words "of this state" insert the following: "enacted by the legislature."

Explanation

Mr. Casey This is strictly a technical amendment with the possibility of this convention adopting other provisions referring to initiative and referendum. This is intended to imply only to the style of laws that are enacted by the legislature. I request adoption of this amendment.

[Amendment adopted without objection. Previous question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 97-0. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Recess

[Quorum call: 96 delegates present and a quorum.]

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter Section 17, passage of bills. Section 17, Paragraph A. The legislature shall enact no law except by a bill and shall propose no amendment to the constitution except by a joint resolution which shall be processed as a bill. Every bill except the general appropriation bill and bills for the enactment, rearrangement, codification or revision of a system of laws, shall be confined to one object and shall contain a brief title indicative of its object. Paragraph B. Every bill enacting, amending or reviving laws, shall set forth completely the provisions of the laws enacted, amended or revived and no system or code of laws shall be adopted by general reference to such system or code of laws. Paragraph C. No bill shall be amended in its passage through either house so as to make a change not germane to the bill as originally introduced. Paragraph D. Every bill shall be read at least by title on three separate days in each house. No bill shall be considered for final passage until it has been reported on by a committee. Paragraph E. No bill which has been rejected by either house may again be proposed or considered in the same house during the same session without the consent of a majority of the members elected to the house which rejected it. Paragraph F. No amendments to bills by one house shall be concurred in by the other nor shall any conference committee report be concurred in by either house except by the same vote required for final passage of the bill. The vote thereon shall be by record vote. Paragraph G. No bill shall become law without the concurrence of at least a majority of the members elected to each house. Final passage of a bill shall be by record vote. At the request of one-fifth of the members elected to either house a record vote shall be taken on any other measure or for any other purpose.

Explanation

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates, Section 17, I would title colloquially as the mechanical part of the constitution pertaining to the passage of bills through the legislature. Paragraph A indicates that the legislature shall enact no law except by a bill or joint resolution; it must be confined to one object; and, it must contain a brief title. Paragraph B is in our constitution today and specifically indicates that no law or systems of codes or laws can be adopted by a general reference. Paragraph C indicates that amendments must be germane. Paragraph D retains the concept that a bill or joint resolution must be read by title on three separate days in each house. That still restricts or confines a bill which will eventually become law to a minimum of five days to be processed through the legislature in order to become law. Paragraph E sets forth the mechanics to avoid duplication of multiple bills on the same subject matter which would indicate that once a bill is rejected it can only be again heard by a majority vote of the membership of the house which originally rejected it. Paragraph F indicates that once a bill passes the House, for instance and I'm giving you an example, and goes over to the Senate, and is amended there, the House must then concur in those amendments by the same vote that was required for final passage; so that, for instance, in the case of a bill which passed the House by a two-thirds vote of the elected membership of the House and goes over to the Senate and is amended and let's say is increased and comes back to the House for concurrence, the House still then would have to concur by a two-thirds vote of the elected membership of each house. Paragraph 6 indicates that for a bill to become law that you must have a favorable vote of a majority of the elected membership of each house and it must be by record vote. All these processes and paragraphs are pretty much what is contained in the constitution today, however, it was assembled in a more orderly fashion and we tried as far as possible to make it as brief and as intelligible as possible.

21st Days Proceedings—July 27, 1973

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Perez]: On page 7, line 28, immediately after the word "bill" and before the word "insert" the words "introduced during a session of the legislature". Amendment No. 2: page 7 line 29, immediately after the word "resolution" and before the comma insert the words "introduced during a session of the legislature".

Explanation

Mr. Perez Mr. Chairman and delegates, I know that there has been a great deal of confusion concerning the provision which we adopted early in our deliberations with respect to the meaning of "a continuous body". We have said that the legislature is a continuous body. If you would refer to the notes which were prepared by the staff and apparently adopted by the committee in connection with this, it would provide or permit the legislature to manage its own operations when not actually in session by allowing, among other things, formal introduction of bills prior to convening in regular or extraordinary sessions, the assignment of such bills to committees and the pre-session committee hearings and determination of reports. Now what a bill means is that all during the ten months of the year in which the legislature is not in session that the term "continuous body" would mean that bills could be formally introduced into the legislature, could be assigned to committee and final report made by that committee to the legislature so that on the opening day of the legislature a bill would be ready for final passage in one house thus making it possible to finally pass a bill within a three day period within the first three days of the session of the legislature. I know that we were divided with respect to the question of having a split session in order that the public might be informed on the bills which are presented. Under the present posture of the provisions which we have adopted, not only would the public not have the five days, which is the minimum time in which a bill can be now passed, but would have only three days after introduction of a bill, before that bill could be adopted, finally adopted, into law. In order to avoid that possibility and in order to avoid the possible interpretation of what is meant by a continuous body, we would make it clear by this amendment that the legislature shall enact no law except by a bill introduced during a session of the legislature and shall propose no amendment to the constitution except by a joint resolution introduced during a session of the legislature. I submit to you that with this amendment that we would have a congress of the state of Louisiana. We would have a twelve month session of the legislature in the sense that legislation would be formally processed all year round. Now, nothing in this amendment would prohibit the legislature from pre-filing bills, from moving forward with hearings and from making recommendations to the legislature. All this amendment would do would be to require as is now the practice that at the beginning of each session and for the number of days allowed that those bills would have to be formally introduced.

So, I move the adoption of these amendments.

Question

Mr. Avant Mr. Perez, we're considering your amendment that has only two amendments and it starts on page 7, and you insert certain language between lines 25 and 26 relating to the passage of bills...

Mr. Perez No, sir. There were two amendments which I had proposed. The one which we are taking up now is the one which would insert only the words "introduced during a session of the legislature" which would require every bill before it could become law to be introduced during a session of the legislature. That's all this particular amendment does.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Casey]: On page 7, line 32, immediately after the word "and" and before the word "shall" insert the words "every bill".

Explanation

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates, this is strictly a technical amendment to clearly indicate that every bill or joint resolution shall contain a title and as drafted there was some question as to whether a joint resolution would have to contain a title.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Jenkins]: page 8, at the end of line 1 insert the following: "no action on any matter intended to have the effect of law shall be taken except in open public session."

Explanation

Mr. Jenkins Mr. Chairman and delegates to the convention, we were subjected to some criticism by the Public Affairs Research Council recently because of an inadvertent omission. We haven't anywhere in the article provided that our sessions are going to be open to the public, that the general public can come and sit in the chambers and that there can't be restrictions on that, at least, while action is being taken. So, all this amendment does is provide that when we actually take some action on a bill in the legislature that the meeting has to be open to the public at that time. Now, frankly it would not altogether prohibit executive session, but it would prohibit any sort of action being taken during such a session. This gives the public I think, most of the protection we need and so I'd like to move the adoption of this amendment.

Questions

Mr. Casey Mr. Jenkins, I have two questions. I'm not in opposition to your amendment, first of all. Is there some distinction between the wording "open public" and I'm just curious why both of those words are used.

Mr. Jenkins I don't know that there is any real distinction. It may be a redundancy. Perhaps we could just say public.

Mr. Casey The other question I have refers to the process that the Senate uses, particularly, for executive sessions to hear personnel matters such as appointments that are recommended by the governor and must be concurred in with the advice and consent of the Senate. There is no prohibition to that, I would assume, is that correct?

Mr. Jenkins No, that's correct.

21st Days Proceedings—July 27, 1973

Mr. Henry Do you mind withdrawing it and making it "public meeting" rather than "session"?

[Amendment withdrawn and resubmitted with correction.]

Mr. Poynter It would read: no action on any matter intended to have the effect of law shall be taken except in open public meeting.

Questions

Mr. Triche Would this require committee sessions open to the public?

Mr. Jenkins No, sir. I don't believe that it would. I think that it's talking strictly about the actions of the body as a whole, but amendments will be offered later on to make sure that committee meetings are held in public. At least, insofar as actions on bills are concerned.

Mr. Jackson Woody, I'm basically, you know, for your amendment, too, but you start off by saying no action and someone raised the question of executive session. Would action be interpreted to mean that if in the executive sessions you were just discussing it but you were not taking any final action or no formal action as a vote? Does no action mean no formal action? Does that prevent in executive session people discussing certain things?

Mr. Jenkins I think that it means no formal action, so it would not prohibit discussions in executive sessions, and if we can pass such a provision I'd be glad to vote for it if someone would propose amendments even to do away with those but I'm trying to get something that we can pass here, so that's why that is provided in this manner.

Mr. Tate Mr. Jenkins, we're all in favor of open public meetings, etc., but is there any danger by spelling it out in the constitution that after a bill is passed we're going to have law suits saying that you have to take evidence that they were not in an open public meeting and things like that.

Mr. Jenkins Well, I think that there is always the possibility that if the legislature doesn't conform to the procedural safeguards in the constitution that it would be subject to attack. This would be true with regard to three readings and things of this nature and certainly if they did not hold a public meeting, they voted on it in executive session, it should be subject to attack.

Mr. Tate You've answered my question. Of course, the three readings, generally the journal proves it, and I guess, we'd say the open meeting would be proved by the committee resolution that said... the committee minutes that said that it was open, I guess is what you mean.

Mr. Jenkins Well, I'm sure it would be subject to attack if there were contrary evidence, but probably the presumption would be that it wasn't an open public session.

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Jenkins, I think, and I'm not opposed to this, but this is going to at least cut out the executive sessions of the budget committee or any committees like that as I can see it here. Because it says no action shall have the effect of law and of course, the budget is a law as you well know, and I'm wondering about the executive appointments that the governor has to submit to the Senate. The action that we take on those are usually are taken in executive session and when they are confirmed that's law. I know what you're driving at, but I feel like that it can be read into this... now I know that you may not intend it, but after all, the court is going to have to pass upon this, not just you and I. I just want to throw this out so that you can think it over, and you might want to clarify it to be sure and reword it. I know what you're driving at and I'm in accord with that.

Mr. Jenkins Well, Senator, I don't see that any way the actions of the budget committee could be construed as actions, because they do not act on a proposal. They don't even report it favorably or unfavorably.

Mr. De Blieux On the budget, sure they report...

Mr. Jenkins They prepare it, but they don't take action that... on anything as I appreciate it.

Mr. De Blieux Maybe you ought to change your word action to vote. No vote shall be taken. When you say action, that's different.

Mr. Jenkins Well, I'm hoping that action will be a little broader. It certainly wouldn't mean debate and discussion or preparation or agreements or things like that.

Mr. De Blieux That's what kind of concerns me is the broad nature of the word action.

Mr. O'Neill Mr. Jenkins, isn't it true that the rules of this constitutional convention are basically the same and that our executive committee can discuss personnel appointments but no final action can be taken except in open session? Isn't it basically the same as this.

Mr. Jenkins Yes, that would be the same in this case. Now the final vote, of course, in the Senate would have to be open but they could discuss it in private.

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted; 90-6. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter This goes to Paragraph D, Mr. Chairman.

Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Flory], on page 8, line 11, after the word "unless" and before the word "it" insert the following: "and until a public hearing has been held on such bill and".

Explanation

Mr. Flory Mr. Chairman and delegates, this is now consistent with the rules of both houses of the legislature and also the rules of this convention. What it does is prohibit the process of round-robin. That's all it does.

[Amendment adopted without objection. Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed; 96-0. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter Section 18. Appropriations. Section 18, Paragraph A. No money shall be withdrawn from the state treasury except through specific appropriation and no appropriation of money shall be made for contingencies or for longer than two years. Paragraph B. All bills for raising revenue or appropriating money shall originate in the House of Representatives but the Senate may propose or concur in amendments as in other bills. Paragraph C. The general appropriation bill shall be itemized and shall contain only appropriations for the ordinary operating expenses of government, public charities, pensions and the public debt and interest thereon. Paragraph D. All other bills for appropriating money shall be for a specific purpose and for a specific amount. Paragraph E. Any bill appropriating money in an extraordinary session of the legislature convened after final adjournment of the regular session held in the last year of the term of office of a governor except for expenses of the legislature shall require the approval of three-fourths of the elected members of each house.

Explanation

21st Days Proceedings—July 27, 1973

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates to the convention, the provisions of Section 18 are basically contained in various areas of the constitution today. Paragraph A specifically indicated that no money can be withdrawn from the state treasury except through appropriation, and that an appropriation...no appropriation shall be made for contingencies or longer than two years. That is in there today. All bills to raise revenue or appropriate money in Paragraph A are to originate in the House of Representatives. That is the law today. Paragraph C.. the general appropriation bill must be itemized and shall contain only appropriations for the ordinary operating expenses of government, etc. That is contained in the constitution today. In Paragraph D., that wording is in the constitution today. All other bills for appropriating money shall be for a specific purpose or a specific amount. Paragraph E. is also contained in the constitution and refers only to a specific situation, where during the last year of the term of office of governor, after the regular session of the legislature money can only be appropriated by a three-fourths vote of the elected membership of each house. Apparently, there was an unhappy situation in the past, I don't know how many years ago. Twenty, thirty or forty years where apparently, a governor, shortly before the termination of his term of office, convened the legislature, appropriated a tremendous amount of money, and left the state broke for the next incoming governor and the next incoming legislature. That was specifically designed to take care of that situation.

Questions

Mr. Triche Mr. Casey, I'm referring to 18 A. where you talk about appropriations of money shall...no appropriation of money shall be made for contingencies. As I appreciate it, the present constitution prohibits contingent appropriations. Isn't there a difference between appropriations for contingencies and contingent appropriations? If there is, what is there, and what's the reason for the change?

Mr. Casey Mr. Triche, all I can say is that I'm not sure what is the difference if any. It was a rewording that was attempted for simplification and if you feel that there is some question about it I, personally, do not have a question; maybe an amendment would be in order, but I don't have any hesitation about it.

Mr. Triche Well, it just appears to me at first blush, Mr. Casey, and I didn't have the benefit of the committee hearing, but it just appears to me at first blush that you did make a change. Because the prohibition against contingent appropriations would be a prohibition against making an appropriation if and when a certain event occurred. Whereas, an appropriation for contingencies is a time if different, it seems to me. Because it seems to me that we make appropriations for contingencies all the time. We make appropriation of X number of dollars to an agency, let's say X plus Y number of dollars for an agency, X for budgetary expenses plus Y for certain contingencies which may or may not arise, which is not a contingent appropriation. It seems to me you are outlawing appropriations for contingencies rather than contingent appropriations. I don't want to belabor the point, I just wanted to hear some explanation from you.

Mr. Casey Mr. Triche, I think that it would be appropriate to examine Article 4, Section 10, which reads in this fashion. "Each appropriation shall be for a specific purpose and for a specific amount, and no appropriation shall be made under the head or title of contingent, nor shall any officer or department of government receive any amount from the treasury for contingencies or for a contingent fund." I would say the intent is similar and I would hope we are not complicating things. I don't believe we are, but I think that we have attempted to simplify that wording.

Further Discussion

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen, I think that Representative Triche has raised a very important point, and I think that we ought to revise this particular section. I know what Mr. Casey has reference to, and I know that we in the legislature cannot have an appropriation which we label contingent, or something of that sort...that it must be a definite appropriation. But we do very often make appropriations contingent upon the happening of certain events, and I feel like the way that this is presently worded you will not be able to do that. I certainly think that we ought to carry the same provision that is in our present constitution that does permit the making of contingent appropriations but denies the right of the legislature to make appropriations which are labeled contingencies. Contingencies are just unlabeled and unexpected expenses which may be dreamed up or you might not know about. I certainly think that we ought not to have those type of appropriations, but not for things that we may feel like that may happen that we need the appropriation for if it's definite for that particular subject matter if it happens.

Questions

Mr. Flory Mr. De Blieux, by the prohibition against the appropriation of funds for contingencies aren't you in effect prohibiting the appropriation of monies to the Board of Liquidation?

Mr. De Blieux Yes, I'd say that Mr. Flory, because that's what the Board of Liquidation is supposed to take care of.

Mr. Roemer Senator, I fail and perhaps you can explain it to me, the difference between the contingency appropriation and the appropriation for contingencies. Is there any difference or anything that may or may not happen, is that true?

Mr. De Blieux No, there's a difference in this respect, Mr. Roemer, insofar as making state appropriations. Now, let me read you the exact words that's now our constitution, which I think that this provision is meant for and show you the difference in it. The present constitution says this: "Each appropriation shall be for a specific purpose and for a specific amount, and no appropriation shall be made under the head or title of contingent, nor shall any officer or department of government receive any amount from the treasury for contingencies or for a contingent fund". Now that's what I think that the provision is supposed to take care of, but you can see the difference in the wording. What they're saying, no appropriation shall be made for contingencies. There is a lot of difference.

Mr. Roemer Maybe my question should have been, and I'll ask it now, your position is in opposition to the proposal as we have it here, is that correct?

Mr. De Blieux As it's presently written, because I think that it's going to...it's certainly going to have the effect that you can't have any Board of Liquidation sum or anything of that sort. In case of any emergency you'd have to have a session of the legislature to take care of it. There's no way around it.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Rayburn], on page 3, line 30, after the word "than" and before the word "years" delete the word "two years" and punctuation two years and insert in lieu thereof the words "one year". It's got a technical mistake in it. It should be, on page 8, line 30, after the word "than" delete the remainder of the line, and insert in lieu thereof the word "one year", to make it read a little better.

Explanation

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, in the present constitution you have the language of

21st Days Proceedings—July 27, 1933

"make appropriations for a period not to exceed two years." That was placed in there in 1921 when the legislature met every two years. I'm merely changing that and inserting in lieu thereof, in the place of two years, one year. The Revenue and Taxation Committee adopted the one year proposal along with several other proposals that's really not mentioned in this particular bill that we're discussing at this time, but we will have it in our proposal, and this is the only thing that I've seen that is in conflict with our recommendation. Therefore, I move the adoption of the amendment deleting the two years and inserting in lieu thereof, one year.

Questions

Mr. Denney In the other committee's report, do you provide for the Board of Liquidation similarly to the way that it is now?

Mr. Rayburn We made no change to my knowledge at this time. On the Board of Liquidation, I don't believe that we made any change of it.

Mr. Denney Do you think that this section, whether it says one year or two years, is not in conflict then, because it provides that you can't appropriate any monies for contingencies? Don't you presently appropriate monies to the Board of Liquidation?

Mr. Rayburn Yes, sir. We do to the Board of Liquidation, but we do it every year.

Mr. Denney But, it's for a contingency, isn't it?

Mr. Rayburn That's true. But, we've been operating with that. The present constitution has that language in it, Mr. Denney, and we've had no conflict to my knowledge.

Mr. Denney O.K. Thank you.

Mr. Roemer Just to clear up, Senator, didn't we not, in fact, make a few changes in the Board of Liquidation?

Mr. Rayburn We made some. I'm not familiar with the specific changes, Mr. Roemer, but we made some suggestions, I believe. One of them, I think, was that we tried to tie down where if any requests had been denied by the legislature, the Board of Liquidation couldn't come back in thirty days like we've been doing for the last 20 years and approve it.

Mr. Roemer Exactly, didn't we also say that we had to have a vote of the legislature when it was out of session to approve a specific expenditure of money.

Mr. Rayburn We have to have that now. That has nothing to do with contingency.

Mr. Roemer It does in this respect, because we further went on to say that the legislature would in the next session following the expenditure out of session appropriate the money necessary then, right?...to cover the deficit.

Mr. Rayburn That's true, to cover the deficit, and that would be considered in their next year's budget as an amount of money that they received in that particular fiscal year, yes sir.

Mr. Roemer So, wouldn't you agree in a very real sense, we did cut out the contingency expenditure of the Board of Liquidation. We certainly attempted to do that.

Mr. Rayburn Well, I guess you could say that we did recommend that they be cut out, if you want to call it cut out. Under the present laws of this state any agency who has an appropriation, at the end of the fiscal year if that's not obligated it comes back to the general fund...any balance that's left in that fund at that time.

Mr. Roemer Right, but we don't require, we didn't, Senator, at least in our committee, require an appropriation of a sum of money in the current fiscal year for the expenditures of the Board of Liquidations in that year. That's the difference.

Mr. Rayburn That's exactly right, and that's been the history of the Board of Liquidation since I've been serving on it.

Mr. Roemer Exactly, we tried to eliminate that.

Further Discussion

Mr. Casey It's difficult to oppose Mr. Rayburn's amendment to change the requirement that no money be appropriated for any period in excess of one year rather than two years as contained in the committee proposal.

I would like to point out that that is contained in the constitution today, but that's not any good reason to use it. The reason that the committee stayed with the two-year period is that there may be a time, and I've been in the legislature for six years and I've never seen an appropriation for two years. Every appropriation I have ever seen is for one year. But I could envision that there could be a time particularly in the area of federal funding, that the state may be required to commit itself to an appropriation to designate, to set aside certain monies for a two-year period in order to possibly benefit. And all I can say is perhaps, maybe, possibly I can only use that wording. And in the interest of flexibility and having a real workable constitution, I would hope that we would stick with the two-year period rather than the one-year period that Mr. Rayburn is attempting to go with.

So in the interest of flexibility, please stick with the two years.

Questions

Mr. Schmitt If you are worried about that, why do you make it simply two years? Why don't you make it twenty years? You don't know what the federal regulations are going to be.

Mr. Casey Mr. Schmitt, that's absolutely correct. All I said was, though, that that is what exists today. We know that you want, not you personally, we know pretty well that the convention would not agree to a twenty-year appropriation or a ten-year appropriation. We felt that we could not expand it beyond two years.

But, Mr. Schmitt, as you may know after a three week period here, that I am a very strong believer in a flexible constitution and I would like to keep it as flexible and workable as possible.

Mr. Schmitt But isn't the only real reason that you have it in there is that it was in the other constitution...the 1921 constitution...

Mr. Casey Well, the reason that it was in there, and as I recall historically, the legislature met every other year and had to appropriate funds for a two-year period. And maybe some of the legislators who have more experience than I can better answer that. But historically, that was the reason for it. But I would like to retain that language as one individual delegate.

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Casey, you might not know, but we do have as our recommendation that the legislature may enact legislation to enable the state, its agencies, boards or commissions or political subdivisions of this state and their agencies to comply with federal laws and regulations and to...in order to secure and preserve federal funds. We placed that language in there in lieu of the two years to be sure that we tied it down where you could keep the money in compliance with federal funds.

Mr. Casey Well, I think that shows a lot of foresight on the part of the revenue committee and I am glad they inserted that provision. I still would like to retain the two years.

Mr. Denney Mr. Casey, in view of Senator Rayburn's statements both as heard to the Bureau of the Board of Liquidation and the federal funding, don't you think you should insert in here a quote, "Except as may otherwise be provided in this constitution?"

Mr. Casey An amendment to that effect is being prepared, Mr. Denney.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I don't know exactly where I'm at. I'm almost as confused as I was earlier when I was listening to the lawyers of this august body. I'm certainly not qualified to compete with a lawyer. I've never hired but one in my life and that was to draw a deed on some land I bought and he found out I was in the legislature and didn't charge me. So they can't say that they've gotten along too well off of my income. I listen to talk about court procedure, I'm really not qualified to talk about court procedure. I've never been to court but one day in my life. I went as a character witness for my neighbor. His wife had, so they tell me, eloped with a man, and he was trying to get the children and they got me out there and they swore me in to tell the truth and nothing but the truth, and they asked me about this lady who had been my neighbor and what I knew about her.

I said, well, they tell me she left here with her sweetheart. And that lawyer jumped out of his seat and said, "Your honor, we are not interested in what the witness has heard, we are interested in what he has seen."

The judge said, "Confine your remarks to what you have seen, not what you have heard."

I said, "Judge, she's a fine, honorable lady." And I left court and haven't back.

But I'm really confused. [...] I checked this out with the chairman of the committee, Mr. Blair. I told him what we had placed in our proposal and he said he had no objection to removing the two years and placing therein one year, and my purpose for the one year is because I know this. You've got some department heads that would like to get appropriation every thirty days, and they'd like to get it doubled every sixty days and tripled every hundred and twenty days, and just before you left there they say give me a little more, I might run out before you get back. And I've walked them roads and I know what they'll do. And that's why I think we should tie it down as much as we can possibly tie it down. This two years was placed in the constitution in 1921 when they only met two years.

And just between me and you, we might be a little better off, the people might, if we were meeting about every three years now.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Casey], page 9, delete lines 8 through 13 in their entirety.

Explanation

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates of the convention, I know that I will certainly not be too popular with the other members of my committee in the legislature for submitting this requested amendment to you to specifically delete Paragraph E. But this was discussed in committee, and the members of my committee knew that I was against including this particular paragraph in Section 18 on Appropriations. I merely think it's worthy of your discussion. If you are for retaining it, fine. If you are for deleting it, fine.

But my only position in the committee, and I reiterate it here, that I have a great amount of trust in the legislature to do what is the right thing. I am basically against the use of super majorities and in this case, this is a super, super majority. The concept of a three-fourths vote of the elected membership of each house in order to appropriate money during the last year of an administration is ridiculous because there could be a special session of the legislature convened for emergency purposes to take care of flood assistance in certain areas and possibly it could be controversial.

But you could not grant that assistance unless you obtained a three-fourths vote of the elected membership of each house. And I just don't think that is the type of provision that should be included in the constitution. And I think that is being somewhat over-protective. I would recommend deletion of Paragraph E.

Further Discussion

Mr. Juneau Mr. Casey, you are not...you and I have gone a long way on the provisions with flexibility, but I am afraid the rubber band broke on this provision.

This, gentlemen, is the provision which is now in the present constitution. The thrust of it is not necessarily in the last year of the administration, because it is only activated at the end of the regular session of the last year. The purpose of it, of course, is to preclude the possibility of a complete draining of the funds of this state before a new administration comes in. I think it's a necessary safeguard and I don't think it does harm to the flexibility doctrine we now have.

Questions

Mr. Roy Mr. Juneau, I hate to ask this, but couldn't you call this special session and then by two-thirds vote go ahead and have the legislature would want to do with this three-fourths vote?

Mr. Juneau This provision specifically provides, Mr. Roy, that at the end of that regular session of that last year, you could not have an extraordinary session by the governor.

Mr. Roy That would amount to I think point...I mean 6.99% of the total body could negate something being done. Is that right?

Mr. Juneau That's absolutely correct. The only year I have, Mr. Roy, that if the governor would be so powerful at that time, with...we are talking about an awful lot of money, I'd hate to stick out that temptation.

Mr. Velazquez Basically, isn't the purpose of this particular provision is to prevent another Watermelon Bill at the end of the session, the governor wants to renege all his budget and drain the state of everything for reelection and make sure all the boys are going to be in line when it comes time to go around getting sponsorships?

Mr. Juneau I don't know if it would occur like that. It might be a Waterpatch Bill because it would be bigger than that to drain the state in that period of time. That's correct.

Mr. Velazquez So the key thing of this is to make sure that there isn't a complete raid on the treasury every four years or every eight years?

Mr. Juneau Well, the intent is only for that limited period of time at the end of the regular session to the time the governor goes out. I would refer to it as the lame duck period to preclude the possibility of an extensive appropriation at that time.

Mr. Roemer Delegate Juneau, do you know that we have the two-thirds provision now for such passage, right? We would only raise it to three quarters. Is that correct? I see

Do you also realize that the Revenue, Finance and Taxation Committee will recommend to this body

21st Days Proceedings—July 27, 1973

we put a limit on state debt? Are you familiar with that provision in our proposal?

Mr. Juneau Yes, sir.

Mr. Roemer Don't you think that a two-thirds vote protection and a limit on state debt protection is adequate protection without tying our hands with almost an absolute unanimity vote?

Mr. Juneau Under the circumstances that are presented within this limited time span, I don't think so, Mr. Roemer. I think that the requirement that has been in the constitution is there for a specific purpose and I think it's the safeguard that's needed, personally.

Further Discussion

Mr. Stovall Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I want to agree with Mr. Casey and support his amendment. It seems to me that on the basis of what Delegate Roemer has just said, and many other considerations that Section E is completely unnecessary. It seems to me that in this general provision we are going in to more detail, unnecessary detail, and certainly this is something which is covered by other provisions.

It also, I think, indicates a lack of faith. It's treating the legislature, and I think the government, almost in a childish way. We do need certain checks and balances, but these are provided for in other places, and I encourage you to support Delegate Casey's amendment and delete Section E.
Thank you.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [By Mr. De Blieux] on page 8, line 29, after the word "made" and before the word "contingencies," delete the word "for" and insert in lieu thereof "under the heading of."

Explanation

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this is just a technical amendment to be sure that the provision that is there...that they have does what I think the committee intended it to have and that is to prohibit contingency appropriations. It will still allow those appropriations which we have to make sometime, based upon a contingency, but it will not allow headings of contingencies where there is no specific reason for their appropriation and I ask for concurrence in the amendment. It is strictly a technical amendment.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Amendment proposed by Delegate Womack, Committee Proposal No. 3.

Amendment No. 1, page 8, line 28 immediately after the word "and" and before the word "no" insert the following "I," except as otherwise provided in this constitution.

Amendment No. 2, page 8, line 21 immediately after the word "contingencies" place a comma and delete the word "or" and insert the following "nor shall any appropriation be made."

Explanation

Mr. Womack Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this amendment is technical to the extent that it only protects the Board of Liquidation Proposal. It's in another section of the constitution to be sure that there is no conflict.

Question

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman, this is more a point of information. I am just curious how this ties in with the amendment adopted by Senator De Blieux.

Mr. Womack There is no problem there because Senator De Blieux's amendment fits in just prior to the position that this one, there is still a word in between it and it doesn't sever it at all.

[Amendments adopted without objection. Previous Question ordered on the Section.]

Question

Mr. Triche Mr. Casey, Article 4, Section 1 of the present constitution says that "money shall not be withdrawn from the state treasury except by appropriation made by law." And I notice your Section 18 just simply says that money shall not be withdrawn from the state treasury except by appropriation.

Now I wonder why you left out the language or did you consciously leave out the language "appropriation made by law?" There is a distinction in my mind between acts of the legislature which are laws and have to be signed by the governor, and actions taken by the legislature which are not laws and don't have to be signed by the governor and published and follow the other procedure set out in the constitution for enacting laws.

What...the point I want to...the question in my mind I'd like for you to clear up is whether or not when you say money shall be drawn by appropriation, are you contemplating action of the legislature which does not have to be signed into law by the governor and does not have to be published in order to take money out of the state treasury.

Mr. Casey Mr. Triche, I feel we should refer, to answer your question properly, refer back to Section 17, Paragraph A where specifically Paragraph A expands on the word "bill" and specifically uses the word "general appropriation bill."
So I think that would indicate that, well of course the appropriation bill would be a bill which is something that would have to be enacted into law.

And C and D in 18 you might refer to also, where under C they use the word "general appropriation bill," and D says "all other bills for appropriating money shall be."

I think that my interpretation feels...I feel it would be quite clear.

[Section passed: 95-0. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter Section 19, Paragraph A.

A bill that has been passed by both Houses of the legislature shall be signed by the presiding officers of both Houses and shall be submitted to the governor for his signature or other action.

Delivery to the governor shall be within three days after passage.

8. No joint, concurrent, or other resolution shall require the signature or other action of the governor.

Explanation

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates, Section 19 is basically contained in today's constitution with two exceptions. The present constitution requires that the presiding officers of both Houses must sign the particular bills while in open session.

This deletes that requirement because that causes much delay as far as I am personally concerned and as far as the committee was concerned, in the legislative process.

Also, it allows the presiding officers three days within which to deliver these bills to the governor. And of course under later sections you will see that the governor has adequate time to examine the bills even in spite of these three-day periods.

Questions

Mr. Triche Mr. Casey, I notice in this legislative article which the committee has drafted, there is no reference to the Legislative Bureau. There is no more requirement that bills go to the Legislative Bureau.

In my mind, the Legislative Bureau is sort of like our Committee on Styling and Drafting. If a bill originates in the Senate, for example, when it gets to the House, before it comes up for final passage, it goes to the Legislative Bureau which is a staff with lawyers and technical people who give the legislature advice on the styling and drafting and constitutionality of the bill. You have left that out of this proposal. I assume that was consciously done and I'd like to know the reason for that.

Mr. Casey Mr. Triche, you are absolutely correct. It was left out. It was consciously left out because it was felt that we can adequately do that by statute and the styling of that type, that mechanical process is not absolutely required. And that's the only reasoning that the committee had, that that was the type of thing that was not necessary to be contained in the constitution.

Mr. Triche Apparently then, the committee is of the belief that the legislature would do this regardless and it's not...

Mr. Casey Yes, this would be a matter for the transitional process.

Mr. Triche Let me ask you another question. I notice that you left out the language, "requiring that bills be signed in open session by the lieutenant governor and speaker of the house, and I assume that was consciously done. Can you tell us the reason for that..."

Mr. Casey That was absolutely consciously done because as you know from practical experience, the crush of business that the legislature has particularly on the last day and the delay that we have in closing down the session, that was the only purpose for that...to allow adequate time that bills can be properly completed and retyped for signing. It's strictly a mechanical process.

Mr. Tobias Mr. Casey, I am a little concerned about the words "other action" on line 21. What I am concerned about is suppose the legislature by joint resolution proposes a constitutional amendment. Would this allow the governor, when you say shall require the signature or in effect shall not require the signature or other action of the governor, could he then call an election on the basis of this provision?

Mr. Casey I don't think he could, Mr. Tobias, refuse to call an election, and of course, joint resolutions do not require the action of the governor, anyway, as far as I know. Of course you are concerned about him calling an election on those, huh?

I don't know, I don't think it would eliminate that...or give him the prerogative not to call an election. I would assume that requirement would be contained under the executive article, anyway.

Mr. Stinson Mr. Casey, Pappy Triche asked you about the signing in open session. Of course in the past that meant that the presiding officers would have to sign all bills before we adjourned sine die. Now under this, there is no...nothing set up as to when they will have to sign them. And also at the end, you say deliver to the governor three days after passage. Is passage when it is signed by the presiding officer or when the last vote in the last House that took action.

Mr. Casey Mr. Stinson, my interpretation of passage would be that passage by both Houses of the legislature, signing by the officers of both houses is just a formality that is certainly required by the constitution. In my interpretation of Section 19, Paragraph A, would be that their signatures would be required within this three-day period after passage.

Mr. Stinson Well isn't...do you know why it was required to be signed in open session in the past?

Mr. Casey As I had indicated before, it was merely the last minute crush of business, particularly on the last day, that causes great difficulty in the mechanics of preparation of the bills for signature. And it is quite an administrative problem and that's all we were trying to eliminate.

Mr. Stinson In your service in the legislature, have you ever seen when it was presented to the presiding officer for his signature, and at that late date, an error was found and it was corrected before they adjourned where if you waited and signed it afterwards, the error could not be discovered and it would be too late to do that?

From past experience, do you know that some of us have had to do that, and it saved some important legislation where you wouldn't have that opportunity under this.

Mr. Casey I think the only problem is on the last day and on the very last bills to be...as far as I can see...Ford I am sure maybe you have seen that...I don't recall that I have and I would envision a situation where that probably could arise. But of course the governor could then veto it, too, if it is a serious problem.

Mr. Stinson This three-day deal is giving the governor an extension on the period within which he has to veto, too, isn't it?

Mr. Casey It is, yes, that's correct, you're right. That is added to the period of time for his veto because he has ten days to veto from the time he receives it. And in further answer to Mr. Tobias's question, the governor has no prerogative but to call a constitutional amendment. The joint resolutions automatically come up in the following General Election, Mr. Tobias.

Justice Tate Mr. Casey, unless I missed something Section 19B is new and expresses, though, the law that the joint resolutions concurrent doesn't require the governor's signature.

But what I was concerned with, what's the need of "or other action" in there? The present law just says "it doesn't require the signature." I thought. Maybe I am wrong.

Mr. Casey Justice Tate, I'd have to refer to Article V, Section 17, which I think contains this language, but I don't know if it contains, "or other action." But it is in the constitution today, Article V, Section 17.

Further Discussion

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I have been at committee meetings and I have heard our Secretary of the Senate, and I am sure that the Clerk of the House can tell you of sometimes the difficulties they have had of trying to get bills enrolled and ready for the signatures of the two officers before the legislature adjourns.

And in fact of the business, if Mr. Roberts' representations are correct, I've even heard him say that they have had to sign bills after the legislature adjourned because it was just not physically possible to get the bills ready and enrolled for them to sign.

This three-day period of time will allow them to prepare the bills properly after they have been passed and enrolled and sent to the governor for his approval.

Now that other action just merely takes care of this provision that you presently have in your constitution. It says "every bill which is passed by both Houses shall be presented to the governor. If he approves it, he shall sign it. If not he shall return it with his objection to the House in which it originated which House shall enter the objections as lodged in the Journal and proceed at once to reconsider the bill. If, after such reconsideration three-fourths and so on, this allows for that particular action."

21st Days Proceedings—July 27, 1973

If the other action is whether or not he vetoes the bill, or if he doesn't veto it, he just allows it to become law.

Further on in the provision if you approve it, there is a provision that the governor will have ten days during the time the legislature is in session to enter his veto and return it to the legislature. If the legislature has adjourned, he's got twenty days from the time it's presented to him.

As those of you who are in the legislature know that the last few days of the legislature are pretty hectic and that's the time that most of the bills are passed. And it's just about physically impossible for the governor during that short period of time, to adequately pass upon all the bills that have been submitted to him. I think that this provision allowing three days for them to get the bills in order then present it to him is a good provision in the constitution.

In the fact of the business, my complaint about it is that it is a little bit too short a period of time, particularly for him to catch all the errors that may have been committed if we pass legislation as we have done in the past, at such a rapid pace in the last few days.

Questions

Mr. Flory Senator De Blieux, isn't it a fact that the true purpose of signing the bills in open session was to attest to the actual validity of the actions of the legislature after the Enrolling Room, etc., had finished it to be sure that what was being signed was what was actually done by the legislature, and if it was not, they had an opportunity to correct it before adjournment, sine die. Wasn't that the purpose of it?

Mr. De Blieux And if I am not mistaken, Mr. Flory, there is a provision in the present constitution that that bill shall be read in full before it is signed, but you know we don't do that. We don't read the bills in full at one session unless it is absolutely requested by somebody...not in the Senate. I don't know about the House.

Mr. Flory Senator, are you saying to me that you were violating the law intentionally?

Mr. De Blieux I can't say that we are violating it intentionally, but you know we have violated the law a lot of times. And after we were supposed to report that the legislature is in violation and we had to have a suit to do it. We violated the law in that respect.

Mr. Henry No sir...Mr. Flory, Senator De Blieux misread the constitution...if five members request it you have to read it in full and so forth. We've been complying with the law in the House and I'm sure they have in the Senate.

[Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 96-4. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter Section 20, par...Signature of Governor on Bills Vetoed.

Section 20, Paragraph A

A bill, except a joint resolution, shall become law if the governor does not sign or veto the bill within ten days after its delivery to him if the legislature is in session, or within twenty days if the legislature is adjourned.

Paragraph B. If the governor does not approve of a bill, he may veto it and return it to the legislature with his veto message within twelve days after its delivery to him if the legislature is in session.

If the legislature has adjourned before the governor vetos or returns one or more bills, he shall return them with his veto message to the legislature as provided by law.

Any bill thus returned by the governor and subsequently approved by two-thirds of the elected members of each house shall become law.

C. The legislature shall meet in veto session at the seat of government at twelve o'clock noon on the thirty-fifth day following the sine die adjournment of the most recent session of the legislature for the purpose of considering all measures vetoed by the governor except that if such day falls on Sunday, the session shall convene at noon on the next succeeding Monday. No veto session shall extend five calendar days in length, and any veto session may be adjourned sine die prior to the end of the fifth day upon the vote of two-thirds of the elected members of each house. No veto session shall be held if a simple majority of the elected members of either or both Houses indicate in writing that a veto session is not necessary. Such written notice must be received by the presiding officer of the respective Houses at least two days prior to the day on which the veto session is to convene.

Explanation

Mr. Juneau Gentlemen, there are several changes, one of which is a significant change in this provision. In particular, I'll go through the dates.

If the governor were to take no action under this provision and if the legislature is in session, it would become law within a period of time of ten days.

If it's out of session, if he does nothing, it would become law twenty days, thereafter, after delivery.

In the event of a veto, in session he would be granted twelve days, and out of session we provided that that particular matter could be provided for by statute.

The difference, of course, between these provisions and the present law, the present law provides that he has ten calendar days upon which to take action. We thought, and it was the consensus of the committee at that time was not sufficient, especially when you are out of session. For that reason, we substantially changed the provision out of session to twenty days to allow sufficient time for that action to transpire.

The significant and more important provision relates to the Veto Session itself. As you know now, unless the majority of elected members of both Houses submit in writing to the Secretary of State that they want to have a Veto Session, or that is to consider one or more specific bills, there is no Veto Session. What we have provided in this provision, is that there will, in fact, be a Veto Session not to exceed five days on the thirty-fifth day after final adjournment unless a majority of the elected members of the Houses respond to the Secretary of State presiding officer that they do not want a Veto Session.

What this is is the reverse of what you now have. The thinking in that regard was this. Historically, it is my understanding that since 1921 we have never had one Veto Session. The thinking was, and by the way I might add that Louisiana's provisions as they are now in the present constitution are unique and alone in that respect. I term this as the presiding officer stopping or the passing of the buck provision. You know it is very easy to vote for provisions you pass it on and the governor will veto it.

The legislature, I submit to you, we have extended them a lot of authority and a lot of flexibility in this constitution. This provision, I think, will mandate upon the legislature that they be presiding conscious when they vote the bill at the time it comes before the legislature. It won't be so easy at that time to say that well we can shirk it and the governor might veto the bill, because you are going to have it come back up again unless the majority of the delegates say we don't want to have the session.

Some of the arguments in opposition, therefore, were that well you may just be falling a Veto Session for nothing.

Well, I submit to you that that won't occur that easily if it's the consensus and the issues are such that you want to have a Veto Session, it's not very hard to get a majority of them to say we don't have it. I think this provision is consistent with what we've done in the past nineteen or twenty sessions. It puts the responsibility where it belongs. And I think it brings it in line more with what the other states have done with regard to Veto Sessions. I move for final passage.

21st Days Proceedings—July 27, 1973

Questions

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Juneau, do you feel that absent a provision which is going to require the legislature to submit to the governor a balanced budget, that you are going to have as a matter of course a Veto Session just about every time the legislature meets?

Mr. Juneau I don't think so, Mr. Anzalone. My answer to the question would be that if the legislature by a two-thirds vote during the course of the legislature feels that strong about a particular bill, it would be my thinking that they would vote the same way on...at a Veto Session and would require them to have a Veto Session.

Mr. Anzalone Then you don't think that a provision which would require the legislature to submit a balanced budget would help at all.

Mr. Juneau Oh, I think so, Mr. Anzalone, but... I think that you are limiting...your questions are purely financial matters. There are matters other than finances which subject themselves to a Veto Session.

Mr. Tapper In Paragraph B of Section 20, it says "if the governor does not approve a bill, he may veto it and return it to the legislature." My question is, should it not read, "he may veto it and shall return it to the legislature."

The way it reads now is it not true that interpretation would be that he may veto it and he may return it to the legislature. He may not return it to the legislature if he doesn't want to.

Don't you think we should amend it to put shall, to require him to return it to the legislature if he vetoes it?

Mr. Juneau I don't really think that would necessarily be the case, Mr. Tapper, but I wouldn't have any objection to such an amendment because I think that's the intent of it.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment proposed by Delegate Kilpatrick.

Amendment No. 1, page 10, delete lines 5 through 20 both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu, thereof the following: "C. The presiding officers of both Houses shall convene the legislature in Veto Session upon the written request therefor by at least a majority of the members elected to each House on the thirty-fifth day after final adjournment of each session for the sole purpose of reconsidering the bills vetoed by the governor. The veto session shall not exceed five consecutive days."

Explanation

Mr. Womack Mr. Chairman and members of the convention, this reverses the position as taken in this proposal as is and doesn't automatically call a Veto Session if the members of the House and Senate don't want one, it leaves it to them to call a Veto Session if they do want one.

I don't know what you would do. I sat in this House some years ago and I believe seen one governor veto a hundred and thirty some odd millions dollars worth of appropriation bills. And I don't know if you automatically call a Veto Session down for the last year and you are worried about an appropriation in a special session immediately after you hold the last regular session before an election and then leave it as wide open as this is to go in and override a governor's veto when you didn't even have to call your own session, just put you down there and put the heat on you to vote for those things back home that the people want and throw a budget out of balance...I'd just like to know whose blame it would be on.

I'd call it an irresponsible legislature and to call a five-day Veto Session which I agree under the provisions that proposed here, they could adjourn at the end of one day. They probably wouldn't. They would argue over one or two bills and would finally adjourn at midnight the last day. You're talking about a sizable sum of money for a special session whether anybody wanted one or whether they didn't.

I just think it's much better and in the public interest to let the legislature call themselves in, if they feel justified in having a Veto Session.

Questions

Mr. Roy Mr. Womack, I agree with you. I just want to point out and ask you if you don't agree that from line 11 to 14 of what the committee has recommended, we come up with this old two-thirds vote again and actually if the veto session is in existence and a majority of the legislators want to adjourn and go home, they may not do so unless they get a two-thirds vote. They have to stay there five days and you know if a majority don't want to do anything to override the veto, you're still sixty-six and two-thirds percent short of what you need to do it. Isn't that correct?

Mr. Womack I would agree to that, yes.

Mr. Roy So actually you're keeping people there who are not possibly going to override the governor's veto and they can't go home unless two-thirds of them agree to go home.

Mr. Womack That's what I'm contending all the way through. It looks to me like it is far better if the legislature wants to call a session, let them call it. Let me tell you what happens when legislators quite often get through with one of these hard sessions. The first thing they want to do, if they can as the result of a majority of the legislators, is to go off and hide for a few weeks and rest and try to get over it. Because usually you wake up a little bit, your blood pressure's up a little bit and you're literally beat to death. As the usual rule, you do like the Speaker does, your family comes in and just sits on the front door, waiting with their head kind of down so you can get through and take them on a vacation which is rightfully so. It's one that has been well earned and well deserved. So you go and leave and stay two or three or four weeks, a few of them every once and awhile go to Europe, and they don't come back in order to vote against having the veto session. So it just passes on over and the next thing you know they get a notice we're going to have a veto session. What I'm trying to do is avoid that and let the legislators themselves, if they deem that the urgency is sufficient and that there's an item that needs overriding, that they can come back, call themselves into session, and go ahead and do business. If they call themselves into session, then you can rest assured that they will have sufficient votes, most likely, to pass one of the veto bills--override it.

Mr. O'Neill Mr. Womack, when we were drafting this section the main objection that we heard from several members of the legislature themselves was that the veto session had to be called by all bills instead of one. Does this differentiate that any from the present constitution. This amendment?

Mr. Womack Certainly in the present constitution, if I remember right and I think I do, that you specifically vote for the veto session and you vote for the particular bill that you're interested in. If there's ten or fifteen bills vetoed, you may have as many as seventy-five, eighty or ninety members of the House and maybe thirty-five members of the Senate that would like to override the veto on one particular bill that affected his particular area, but when you put the composite down, none of them would get more than a twenty, twenty-five or thirty percent vote.

21st Days Proceedings—July 27, 1973

Further Discussion

Mr. Duval I rise in support of the committee proposal and against the proposed amendment. I think if this section is carefully read, it can be seen that a majority of the legislature can agree not to have the veto session, but it puts the emphasis on them not to have it. In other words, if they don't affirmatively say, we don't want to have it then you will have an automatic veto session. I think this is a very good idea for the following reasons: The veto power of the governor is the most awesome power that any state official has. In the history of Louisiana I don't know of any veto session that has ever occurred. Because under the amendment all the legislators are scattered throughout the state and they have to then affirmatively say we want one. They're scattered throughout, there's no discussion, no ventilation of the issues. Many of them don't want to irritate the governor and say, yes, I want a veto session. Under this provision they would have to affirmatively say we don't want it and a majority says they don't want it, it won't occur. But if they don't affirmatively vote not to have a veto session, then you will have a veto session--an automatic veto session--and I think this enhances the viability of the legislature. We've been talking about increasing the powers of the legislature commensurate with the powers of the executive branch. If you're going to do this, you're going to have a veto session feature. You're going to have to have this automatic veto provision because the governor could very well make a mistake either intentionally or not and veto a bill. I guarantee you unless you have an automatic veto session that veto will never be overridden. Because there's never been a veto session. Everybody's scared throughout the state, nobody can discuss it and politically they don't want to disagree with the governor or irritate him. Under this there would automatically be one and I think it is a very good provision. It's one that really makes the legislature a true and viable body. Right now with the veto power, the governor can kill anything and he can be assured of its remaining killed. This provision is complimentary to the separation of powers theory where we have equal branches of government. It is a provision that has been adopted in many other states. I can certainly work mechanically because, simply by a majority vote the legislature can agree not to have such a veto session. I think it is a very important provision. It will certainly strengthen anything else we have done to increase the legislative power to be commensurate with that of the executive as it should be. I urge you to defeat this amendment because this amendment puts us right back where we were in 1921.

Further Discussion

Mr. Tapper Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in opposition to the amendment and in support of the proposal of the committee. Mr. Duval has said most of what I wanted to say except one very vital thing. I don't know whether you can remember but I'm forty-four years old and I cannot remember when that the last time we had a veto session. I think that the thing that we should all think about here is not so much the convenience or inconvenience of the members of the legislature but the interests of the people who will be affected by the legislation that is vetoed. If we don't have this automatic veto session, I'll guarantee you that you will never have a veto session. Because it is very hard to get a majority of both houses of the legislature to vote to come back into session whether it is for a veto session or anything else--especially for a veto session. They don't want to go on record but once they get here, they may very well vote to override the veto. I urge the defeat of the amendment and your adoption of the proposal submitted by the committee.

Question

Mr. Champagne Mr. Tapper, would it be rather difficult to override a veto?
Doesn't it take a super majority vote or something to override a veto?

Mr. Tapper I don't know what you would call a super majority vote but I think it takes a majority vote. Yes, sir, Mr. Champagne. I mean a two-thirds vote, not a majority.

Mr. Champagne Two-thirds.

[Motion for the Previous Question rejected: 26-60.]

Further Discussion

Mr. Fontenot Fellow delegates, I'm not speaking too much today and we have had some very controversial issues. It's getting late. We ought to get over this thing and try to meet here again tomorrow. I rise in support of this amendment. I only regret that Mr. Kilpatrick is not here to defend his own amendment. It seems that something has kept him away the last two or three days. When I looked at his amendment I said well, exactly what is he trying to do? I looked at the present proposal then I looked at the amendment and I studied it. I looked at it very closely and in my interpretation I think the amendment is better than the committee proposal. Now, concerning what we have just stated as to make it an automatic veto session, the way I see it, if you can't get a simple majority to request in writing a veto session, then what makes you think you're going to get two-thirds to override a veto? I think you ought to have a request in writing by at least a majority to override a veto by the governor. Sitting back and let it be automatic...if a member of the legislature doesn't have the guts to request in writing a veto session, then he shouldn't be in the legislature. I don't think you ought to make it automatic. I think you ought to make him request in writing. Like I said, I'm no expert in the legislative field but I think the present wording of the amendment is a little bit better than the committee proposal. I don't like statements such as on line 15 through 17, "No veto session shall be held if the simple majority of the elected members of either or both houses indicate in writing that a veto session is not necessary." Why do you put in the constitution negative language? I think we ought to put positive language in there. I understand the reason for it but I don't think it's necessary to put it in this constitution in that terminology. I think you ought to make it positive words. For this reason I rise in support of the amendment. I'm no expert in the legislative field but I think it is a little bit better than the committee proposal.

Questions

Mr. Duval Mr. Fontenot, you just said that you like positive things rather than negative things. Don't you realize how negative the law is presently and how negative the amendment is when you understand there's been no veto sessions in the last fifty years?

Mr. Fontenot You're telling me that. I don't know from my own personal knowledge but I'll take your word for it.

Mr. Duval You further understand that in order for there to be a veto session, legislators scattered throughout the state must then affirmatively take the action and it is not automatic. Don't you?

Mr. Fontenot Yes, I understand that.

Mr. Duval You understand automatic is certainly much more positive than something that is not automatic. You understand that also?

21st Days Proceedings—July 27, 1913

Mr. Fontenot No, I don't understand that.

Further Discussion

Mr. Jenkins Mr. Chairman, delegates to the convention, I think this is a very key proposal. We've been talking so much about having an independent legislature. We've allowed them to meet longer periods. We've taken off certain restrictions, most of which have nothing to do with creating an independent legislature. We've become more independent just by meeting longer. I'll tell you where the independence is going to come from and that's independence from the executive branch. Unless you have that you're not going to have an independent legislature. Since 1921 Louisiana governors have vetoed more than two thousand bills. Do you know how many times those vetoes have been overridden? None, not once has gubernatorial veto been overridden by the legislature. Why? It's not independent. The procedures are not there to facilitate overriding vetoes because of the time situation, because you have to come back into session. You have to get a majority to go along with it. Now this amendment just perpetuates that practice. The committee's proposal is superior in that it requires a veto session unless a majority don't want it. That will make us have veto sessions, I think. It will provide a check on the governor. Now let's do have an independent legislature. Let's make it possible and let's facilitate overriding gubernatorial vetoes when the legislature is so inclined. I urge you to defeat the amendment.

Questions

Mr. Fontenot Woody, I will agree that there has not been a veto session since 1921. That's the fact that you just stated. Concerning the reason for not having a veto session, nobody has explained to me exactly why. People have been saying, well, the governor has so much power that nobody wants to override him. I think that if a legislature is an independent body like they should be, they're elected and they serve the people, if they don't have the guts to override the veto, if they don't have the guts to resist in writing a veto session, what makes you think they would override the governor when they get here by a two-thirds vote?

Mr. Jenkins There's this difference. In order to require a veto session under this amendment and under the present system, it takes an affirmative act by a legislator contrary generally to the actions and the will of the governor. Whereas under the committee proposal, no act is required by a legislator contrary to the wishes of the governor. If he just remains quiet, if he doesn't act, he doesn't have to do anything contrary to the governor, but a veto session will automatically come up. It just makes it easier and I think we're going to have veto sessions. I remember not only have we not had veto sessions, even during the session we never had a veto overridden, even when the legislature was in session and bills were vetoed during the session. It's not just a question of not coming back.

Mr. Bollinger Delegate Jenkins, Delegate Woodack was speaking of the legislator going on vacation when they got out of session. Don't you think that this would make it more difficult to call a veto session if they had to affirmatively act to have a session, since many of them would be on vacation and not be in accord?

Mr. Jenkins Yes, I do. I think this amendment would make it more difficult, whereas, the committee proposals are real steps forward.

Further Discussion

Mr. Jannau Mr. Chairman, I'll make my remarks very brief. I want to strenuously oppose the amendment and let me just put it in these words. If you vote for this amendment, you're voting for what we've had since 1921. It hasn't worked. It isn't going to work. It never will work. The reason for it is because of the imbalance between the executive and the legislature. I believe that if you vote for what hasn't worked and I would rather try something that has worked in other states and I am confident will work in this state. I say let's put the burden where the burden belongs--that's on the legislature. I urge your defeat of this amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Nunez Mr. Chairman and members of the convention, the provision as provided by the committee, I think is a good provision. I rise against the amendment and for the committee proposal. I'll be brief and tell you of a personal experience that our delegation had in the last session. We had a local bill that dealt with the Twenty-fifth Judicial District. It dealt with the state-wide statute that deals with assistant district attorney's pay. But we didn't raise the pay of assistant district attorneys, we just provided that one provision in there that was put in there years ago was deleted. Well evidently when it came up to the fourth floor and the bill was read, I remember the title of the bill which dealt with that statute that deals with the state wide provision--pay for assistant district attorneys. Thinking it was a local bill none of the delegation called and asked not to veto the bill, but the bill was vetoed. A simple, local bill that took out a provision that dealt with the Twenty-fifth Judicial District which was a limitation by the police jury paying them additional salaries. Now, let me tell you what happened. We met down in the area delegation with about thirty-five or forty legislators, down in Jefferson, Orleans, St. Bernard, St. Tammany, Plaquemines, etc. and we tried to get a determination as to what we would... should we seek veto to override the veto. One of us called a special session. The prevailing thinking was... I presented the case and the other legislators did on the local provision or our local bill that was vetoed, which should not have been vetoed. We had disagreement among ourselves whether to call a special session on that particular provision. It was justified, but legislators are not going to vote for a veto session, regardless of what kind of bill it is... particularly a local bill that should not have been vetoed. Had this provision been in effect we would have had an automatic veto session. There were a number of others that a number of people would want to call such as on the teachers' pay raise, etc that they didn't call. I think it's a good provision that the committee has provided because you have an automatic veto session. The bill passed, by the way, Mr. Fontenot, you questioned about two-thirds, the bill passed by a hundred percent, the bill that I'm speaking of. No votes against it in the House. No votes against it in the Senate. So here's a bill that passed with a complete majority of both Houses and yet vetoed. Inadvertently, but it was vetoed. It should not have been vetoed. I know that there are probably a number of cases like this and a number of instances where bills are inadvertently vetoed that should not be vetoed. What the group said when we met, to get back to the problem I'm talking about, well, what about next session. I ask you why should we wait until next session? I think if you want to strengthen the legislature, if you want to give the legislature the power to just do what they should do, allow them to have this automatic veto session. I think you'll be doing something that the legislature needs because they're never going to go ahead and call a veto session. They never have and they never will.

If there's an question, I'll sit down. I think I tried to make the case for the veto session as against the amendment.

Question

Mr. Rayburn Senator Nunez, you spoke briefly about a particular local bill that had been vetoed. I'm just wondering, I think the teachers' salary schedule which was going to cost roughly eighteen million dollars passed both houses with a pretty substantial vote. However, when the governor vetoed that bill I noticed there weren't many people who wanted to come back and override his veto. What do you think would have happened if we had had an automatic session on that particular bill?

Mr. Nunez I'm getting a lot of advice up here. I think Senator Rayburn, that we would have come back and done the same thing that we did before. The sentiment of the legislature was to give the teachers that pay raise but I just think legislators as such are reluctant, and you know why, Senator Rayburn, they are reluctant to override the governor's veto. I don't have to tell you that, but they are just reluctant to do it.

Further Discussion

Mr. Jack Mr. Chairman, Members, I rise in support of this amendment. I believe this is about the first amendment I've spoken for. I've been usually opposing amendments. This language of what you are trying to put in the constitution sounds to me like one of these high-falutin', technical, fast thinking, Harvard combination Oxford graduate or something like that. If people are going to override the governor, it takes two-thirds. It takes to begin with usually the governor is right, not always, but usually the governor is right when he vetoes the bill. I just can't see an automatic veto session. A five-day session, I don't know what it costs but it's bound to cost fifty to seventy-five thousand dollar minimum. This amendment is proper. If people are going to want a veto session and you expect to get two-thirds, they are going to have to have gut enough to ask for the thing. So I say this is a good amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Triche Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the delegation, I rise in opposition to this amendment and in favor of the committee's proposal. The only fault I find with the committee's proposal is that it's not liberal enough. If my personal view would obtain here, we'd have an automatic veto session and we'd have to come here and we'd be forced to sit here for five days and face the governor and face the issue of how and why certain bills were vetoed. This veto session will do more to strengthen the independence of the legislature than anything else we do. It will also have the effect of encouraging responsibility on the part of the governor in his actions on veto or whether he signs or vetoes proposals passed by the legislature. Unfortunately, not all governors have acted wisely in the use of their veto powers and not all governors have acted wisely in the use of the information available and proper understanding of the bills before they have acted. I think when faced with a real possibility of another legislative hearing over the bill as to whether or not the governor's veto would be overridden, would force the governor to study the bills more closely, get the information before they enact it, act without gamble, without reservation and without tongue-in-cheek and it would give the legislative action more meaning. Let me suggest to you some things that have happened. We've never overridden the governor's veto since 1921. We never had any opportunity to override the governor's veto until 1966 when Article III, Section 82 was put in the constitution providing for a veto session. That's just a recent creature. Since 1966 the legislature has never called itself into veto session and why hasn't it called itself into veto session. I don't think it is because the majority overwhelmed the majority of the legislatures have approved what the governors have done in the exercise of the veto power since 1966. I just don't see that's the case. I just think what's happened is that the mechanics of the Article III, Section 82, the way it's written now, I think the mechanics are such that it doesn't lend itself to a decision of a group of the legislature. The legislature goes home and the ballots are mailed out and each legislature independently, without the benefit of consultation, without the benefit of discussion, without the benefit of advice makes a separate determination as to whether or not he wants a veto session. I submit to you that's not the way bodies act in unity. The only way bodies act in unity is when they are in session, when there is discussion, when they get the benefit of the attitudes of the other members of the legislature. You just can't do that when you mail out ballots to be acted upon privately by each individual legislator. That's why we never have veto sessions. That's why we never will.

Let's talk about these bills that we passed in the face of the threat of a governor's vetoing it. It's been suggested to you that the legislature passed a pay raise, the governor vetoed it and what would happen if it came back in veto session. I predict to you, ladies and gentlemen, that if we have the procedure for a meaningful veto session, the legislature is going to act responsible. I suspect, seriously, that many members of the legislature voted for the teachers' pay raise with tongue-in-cheek knowing full well that they wouldn't get it, with full realization that the governor had declared publicly and openly and announced to God and the world that he would veto the teachers' pay raise. Many members of the legislature voted for the pay raise, put the heat on the governor, knowing they wouldn't come back in veto session. I predict again that that same legislature will know it had to face that teachers' pay raise again in a veto session, would act more responsibly the first time. Veto sessions, meaningful veto, lends itself to responsibility in the legislature and responsibility in the governor's mansion. Allowing the governor to veto without meaningful veto sessions gives the governor the authority to write the laws for the people of this state. How you cannot have an independent, authoritative, meaningful, responsible legislature if you give the governor the right to write the laws. I suggest to you, gentlemen, that we should vote this amendment down and adopt the committee's proposal.

Further Discussion

Mr. Flory Mr. Chairman and delegates, I rise in support of the amendment for two reasons. I must say that I concur with a great deal of what Mr. Triche has just said, yet I can't arrive at the same conclusions. First, my objection to the proposal by the committee is that it does not restrict the sessions to only veto matters. You've already provided for sixty days annually. I think this is nothing more than to allow an additional five days for a legislative session. Secondly, I would assume that it would cost somewhere in the neighborhood of a hundred thousand dollars to hold a five day session. For all practical purposes, and in speaking more in a practical way, whether the legislature call themselves into a veto session or whether you make it automatic, it just ain't gonna happen. If a governor can't get and prevail upon a third of the Senate or a third of the House, then I submit to you, he has no business sitting in the governor's seat as a practical matter. So that the net result is you're holding a hundred thousand dollars. Simply that. Therefore, I support the amendment.

Questions

Mr. Tapper Mr. Flory, you know that there are only one hundred and forty-four members of the legislature, don't you?

Mr. Flory Yes, sir, I'm aware of that.

Mr. Tapper And you also know that they get only fifty dollars a day for meeting, don't you?

Mr. Flory That's correct.

Mr. Tapper If you multiply fifty dollars times a hundred and forty-four, what do you come up with, Mr. Flory? Not a hundred thousand dollars, do you?

Mr. Flory The legislators are not the only ones that get paid, Mr. Tapper. As you well know, the staff, the desk, the printer, all of the expenses of the legislature and I was speaking as a total figure.

21st Days Proceedings—July 27, 1973

Mr. Tapper Yes, sir, Mr. Flory, but you're talking about a complete veto session. But if the governor is so powerful as you say he should be if he's governor, which I disagree with, I don't think he should be that powerful, but however, if he is...

Mr. Flory I didn't say he should be. I said as a practical matter.

Mr. Tapper But don't you believe that if they can't get enough to veto anything that they're only going to be there one day and you're going to pay the staff for one day, and you're going to pay the legislators for one day. Isn't that a fact?

Mr. Flory No, sir. As I appreciate the practice at the present time in the constitution, it provides for the legislature to meet for sixty days. The legislature is paid, according to the constitution, for sixty days. I presume that if this constitution provides for a five day session, they would be paid accordingly as they should be.

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Flory, under your reasoning about if the governor can't get a third of the legislature to go with him, well he shouldn't be governor. Under that reasoning, shouldn't we just take out the veto part of the constitution altogether because there will be no need of a legislature ever considering a bill that the governor has vetoed? Isn't that correct?

Mr. Flory As a practical matter since 1921, what's happened, Senator?

Mr. De Blieux As a practical matter, hasn't about ninety-five percent of the bills been submitted to the governor after the legislature, you might say, adjourned... that is he vetoed it before the legislature adjourned with no opportunity for the legislature to pass upon those bills. Isn't that correct?

Mr. Flory I don't know. I had four in one session he vetoed and sent it to the legislature at the same date. Of course no action was taken before they adjourned.

Further Discussion

Mr. Champagne This is very brief and I wasn't going to get up here. I just want to tell you that I thought this debate was very informative. I was against this measure completely. I am now for it and not because I think there will ever be another veto session anymore than you had before, but simply if anything will make these legislators face up to the facts and say I don't want that and I'm not going to put it on the governor's back or vice versa. We're going to kick this thing around and make them decide what they want to vote on. Then I'm for it and I see in this thing not more sessions, not the possibility of more sessions, but forcing the legislators to say, I am or am not in favor of this and not passing the buck to the governor or the governor passing it back to the legislature.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

Mr. Womack Mr. Chairman, members of the convention, during the last session of the legislature a publication was passed out by a member who spoke about the responsibilities of the legislature and how bad we needed a veto session, and on the back of that he said in these words "your family, your home, nor your property can be safe while the legislature is in session." So Mr. Jenkin, I am trying to save your family, your home and your property for at least five days and make it a little better. Now, let me tell you now, during this time and I join Gordon Flory in saying that many bills have been submitted back. None of them yet have ever come close to getting enough to be passed. Let us assume that the ten million dollar bill that was passed this year to pay the teachers a raise had been overridden, and it would have been. And Mr. Triche, you say that they would have acted responsibly, they would have responded to the pressure of the teachers, that is right, they would have been very responsible. The net result was that this next year you would have had a built-in cost of government, ten million dollars bigger than it is today in recurring revenue... I mean recurring expenses. It is estimated by the brains of this state, some six different agencies, that have estimated revenues of this state, that the net growth factor this year over last year is going to be eight million dollars to the general fund. But keep in mind that each year you are going to come back and not start from where you finished this past year but as a result of the bill being vetoed, you are going to start with a new total each year. So if you maintain it, it takes ten million this year, the next year if you maintain the deal it takes twenty million over the previous year, the next year thirty million and consequently you are going to get new taxes. Now with reference to the district attorney bill. If I had a local bill and I thought there was any question about it, I believe I would have asked the governor and been certain he understood it. If he didn't understand it I would have tried to help him understand it. But if it is going to cost us seventy to seventy-five thousand dollars this year to save that little local bill that might be just a little bit expensive to the taxpayers. Just a little bit expensive. And can tell you now I have seen ten million every little bit and I'd be running for reelection started back with his budget appropriation. And I can remember just a few years ago, when Governor McKeithen said I am not going to worry about it, go ahead and pass it I'll red ink it. He decided at the last that he wouldn't red ink it. And what happened, there was a lot of stuff signed into law against the general appropriation bill that year that should not have been and everybody agreed basically that it shouldn't have been but said let him veto it. I'll protect myself. I am not going to agree, if you want to protect the state treasury you leave the constitution like it is today, require the governor to submit a balanced budget and require him to sign a balanced budget. What protection is the taxpayers going to have if the governor is required to sign a balanced budget, the legislature is turned loose to vote any kind of a deficit spending on the taxpayers they want to and there is no prohibition against it. Just go ahead your last term of office, vote for what will make you look good, if it won't elect me, let the fellow that replaces me catch the []... I don't know how many votes we are going to get, but I tell you right now this is a very important approach and I think everybody has their mind made up. Mr. Chairman, the only thing I can tell you, as you vote your conscience, I am voting mine, and what I think is in the best interest of the taxpayers and the people of this state is the reason I am supporting this proposal.

[Record vote called. Amendment rejected: 4-82. Motion in recesses tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1. this is by Delegate De Blieux.

Amendment No. 1. On page 10, line 19 immediately after the word "leased" and before the word "days" delete the word "two" and insert in lieu thereof the word "five"

Explanation

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Chairman, and ladies and gentlemen, as you read in the present provision it says that the ballots must be in to the presiding officers at least two days before the session convenes. I do not feel like that is sufficient time for the presiding officers to let the legislators know that there will be no veto session. Because if you put those notices in the mail it takes more than two days sometimes for them to reach and be delivered. I merely changed that period to five days so that the legislators will have to get in their ballots a little bit early so that the presiding officers can properly notify the ballots. It is just a technical amendment. And I ask for concurrence in the amendment.

21st Days Proceedings—July 27, 1973

Question

Mr. Juneau Just to make sure, Senator, I just want to make sure whether I am mistaken. You are suggesting that we change from two days to five.

Mr. De Blieux Five days prior to the time that the veto session is to convene. You see because the presiding officers must notify the legislators and if those ballots come into him just two days before they are supposed to convene, he has no chance to let them know that the session has been called off.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted; 86-3. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Tapper]. On page 9 [The 29 after the word "and" and before the word "return" insert the word "shall".

Explanation

Mr. Tapper Mr. Chairman, and fellow delegates, The only thing this does as it is worded now. I understand the committee has no objections...the chairman of the committee has no objection to it. The only thing I am doing is saying that if the governor does veto it that he shall return it to the legislature. The way it is worded now the "may" applies also to the returning to the legislature and he can either do it or not do it. I think we ought to say he shall return it if he vetoes it. That is really what the amendment does.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. De Blieux]. On page 10 line 14 after the words "vote of" and before the words "of the" delete the words "two-thirds" and insert in lieu thereof the words "a majority".

Explanation

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Chairman, and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I feel like this is a little technical amendment because if you have a majority of the legislators who want to adjourn there certainly isn't enough votes there to override any veto. So therefore, I think the majority is sufficient and we should not require two-thirds.

Questions

Mr. Rayburn Senator De Blieux, in other words if we get over in a veto session and the governor can get hold of majority of us and convince us we haven't got any business over there a majority of us can go...send us home?

Mr. De Blieux That is exactly right, because you can't override a veto with a majority of you wanting to go home.

Mr. Rayburn Well, I know that but then after all it would take two-thirds to go home without that. We would have to convince two-thirds of us to go home, and under your provision he would only have to...and I am trying to streamline this thing now, everybody wants good government and I know how good it is, I have been there before. He would just have to convince fifty percent of us and then not worry about the rest of us and we would all go home.

Mr. De Blieux That is exactly correct. Because after he has convinced fifty percent of us there is no need for the rest of us sticking around.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment rejected; 31-55. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. De Blieux]. On page 10 line 6, after the word "the" delete the word "thirty-fifth" and insert in lieu thereof the word "fortieth".

Explanation

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, as you may recall of the previous provision we adopted, the bills can be submitted to the governor three days after the legislature adjourns. He has twenty days after the bills are submitted to him if we have adjourned in order to veto the bills. That gives you a total of twenty-three days. It certainly is going to take at least two days to get the notices out to the legislators, that is twenty-five days. And then if we have to be notified five days before the session begins that is thirty days. I just feel like that the time for the legislators to get their notices back to the presiding officers is not going to be sufficient time in thirty-five days. So therefore I just want to extend that period of time to forty days to allow us sufficient time to get the ballots back.

PROPOSALS ON SECOND READING AND REFERRAL

[1 Journal 222]

UNFINISHED BUSINESS

PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

Mr. Poynter Committee Proposal No. 3 introduced by Delegate Blair, Chairman on Behalf of the Committee of Legislative Powers and Functions, and Delegates Casey, Fayard and others

A proposal making provisions for the legislative branch of government, appointment, removal of officials and necessary provisions with respect, thereto.

Its status so far is the convention has adopted his amendment as amended, Sections 1 through 11, postponed consideration on Section 12 an thereafter adopted as amended Sections 13 through 20, the next Section in order would be Section 21, Effective Date of Laws.

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter Section 21. Effective Date of Laws
Section 21. All laws shall be published as provided by law and shall take effect on the sixtieth day after final adjournment of the session in which they were enacted.

However, any bill may specify an earlier or later effective date.

Explanation

Mr. Blair Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, we changed this section to give more time for the Secretary of State to publish the acts. The usual thing is about twenty days, or twenty days has been in effect for many, many years unless it was specified otherwise.

We also gave the protection if you wanted to have a bill, or if you had a bill that you wanted to specify time, maybe sometimes at the first of the year or earlier than the sixty days, then you could do so. It just gives more latitude and especially for the publishing of the bills, so we ask for your approval unless you have some questions.

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Amendments proposed by Delegate Jenkins to the proposal as follows:

Amendment No. 1, on page 10, line 22 immediately after the word "published" and before the word "as" insert the words, "in the official Journal of the State."

Amendment No. 2, page 10, line 23 immediately after the word "and" and before the word "shall" insert the word "thereafter."

Explanation

Mr. Jenkins Mr. Chairman, this is really just a technical amendment. The present constitution provides this same sort of protection that the publication will have to be an official journal so that it will be readily accessible to the public. And also, since the committee has provided a sixty-day period for publication, it would provide that the publication would be a prerequisite for enactment, final effect of the law. I understand the committee has no objection, so I move adoption.

[Amendments adopted without objection.
Previous votes recorded on the Section. Section passed: 87-0.
Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter Section 22. Suspension of Laws
Section 22. No power of suspending laws of this state shall be exercised except by the legislature and then only by the same vote required for final passage of the law proposed to be suspended. The vote, thereon, shall be by record vote.

Explanation

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates, Section 22, Suspension of Laws is contained in the constitution at this time in Article 19, Section 5, and is basically the same today as is proposed in the Section 22 submitted to you at this time, but has been merely reworded in order to be somewhat more brief and succinct and I would urge final adoption of Section 22.

Questions

Mr. Abraham Tom, what is the history of this, or the necessity of it. Why do they have to have something like this? Why do laws need to be suspended? I am ignorant of this fact.

Mr. Casey Well, now, I think it's a good process to have available to the legislature where a law has been passed which could be detrimental to a certain industry, and the most recent example of this was the Lead Paint Law which was passed, I believe, during the 1972 session of the legislature. And of course the intention of that law was particularly good. But the way it was worded and the effect it would have had, would have put many paint companies out of business.

So, in the interest of being fair with those people, it was fortunate that we had a special session of the legislature shortly after the regular session in 1972 and that particular law was suspended. That's merely an example of one thing.

Mr. Abraham It has been used...

Mr. Casey It has not, to my knowledge, been abused, it's a good mechanical process to have available.

Mr. Abraham It has been used then?

Mr. Casey Oh, yes, definitely.

Mr. Abraham What happens when you suspend it after that? What do they do with it then? It just stays suspended...

Mr. Casey Well, it could either stay in a state of limbo, you could suspend it for a period of two years, and of course the other process that you have is an outright repeal of the law. So there are two methods of procedure.

Mr. Abraham Well, this is what I was going to ask. Is it better to suspend it, or better just to go ahead and repeal it or what?

Mr. Casey Well, as a legislator, I would prefer to have the process of suspension available because in the law as drafted, and in the law as it exists today, it does not require the approval of the governor. He cannot veto the suspension.

22nd Days Proceedings—July 28, 1973

Mr. Abraham But if you were to repeal it, the governor would have to approve the repeal?

Mr. Casey No, under as drafted, he does not now and never has had to approve the repeal. I'm sorry, the repeal, the suspension. He would have the prerogative of vetoing the repeal.

Mr. Abraham That's what I mean. If you were to repeal a law, it's the same as passing the law. The governor has to approve the repeal, also.

Mr. Casey Right. Correct.

Mr. Nunez Mr. Casey, how long does a suspension remain in effect?

Mr. Casey There is no period stated at all so I would submit to you my interpretation would be that it could be an indefinite suspension until acted upon at a later time by a legislature.

Mr. Nunez Well, who would be aware of the suspension in the event that the attorney or the people who used the statutes regularly went to check a particular law?

Where would he know, or how would he find out that that law has been suspended, as such?

Mr. Casey Mr. Nunez, I don't know that the publishing companies, whether they do or don't. Mr. Triche indicates that it apparently...no it's not. O.K.

I don't know if it's reported in the annotations on particular law or not. I have heard one delegate complain that in a particular instance it was not reported in annotations that the law had been suspended. We will have to call on some legal counsel in...

Mr. Nunez That's why I'm calling on you. If a law is suspended and a judge, in particular, or a lawyer or anyone who was interested in that particular law went to West's or went to the statutes, and they read that law, they would have no knowledge unless they serve in the legislature or were there when it was suspended, that that particular law is suspended and no longer in operation.

Mr. Casey Mr. Nunez, I was informed by the staff that it is reported in West, and under all circumstances, an attorney checking the statute would have this information reflected during his research.

However, in a particular instance, maybe it happened that West did not properly report a suspension. And that could occur in any situation.

Mr. Riecke Mr. Casey, if a law is suspended during a fiscal session by resolution, is it necessary to introduce a suspension in a later, or pass a bill suspending it in a later session?

Mr. Casey My humble opinion would be that you would need a later act or resolution, as long as you had permission of...three-fourths of the elected membership of each House to introduce that suspension, that would be in a fiscal session you could introduce any legislation if you obtain permission of both Houses to do that even though it is a fiscal session.

Mr. Riecke This was done by resolution. Now...

Mr. Casey It is done by resolution, that is correct.

Mr. Riecke Does that have the effect of law or do you have to go into the next regular session.

Mr. Casey In effect it has the effect of law inasmuch as you are suspending a law, I guess you could say it has the effect of law. But as long as you obtain the required permission to do that, I would submit to you that that would be adequate, regardless of whether it's a fiscal session or not.

But of course under the concept a proposal that we have in our legislative proposal, there is no fiscal session so there is no problem. So that is really a moot question here.

Further Discussion

Mr. Womack Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, the real key to this is not the suspension...the real key to it is that if it takes two-thirds to pass an act, then it would require two-thirds to suspend it. If it takes a simple majority to pass it, it will require a simple majority, and the same thing about three-fourths. If there would be anything that it took three-fourths to pass, then it would take three-fourths to suspend. That's the real key to this section.

Questions

Mr. Gravel Mr. Womack, don't you think that that particular provision, however, should incorporate in it some fixed period of time within which the suspension would expire? Otherwise, as it presently reads, the legislature could by suspension, actually affect the repeal of a law by just suspending it without stating the time within which the suspension would expire.

Mr. Womack Mr. Gravel, if it took 65 members to pass it and 65 members wanted to repeal it, they could. But if they wanted to suspend it for a period of time, then they could suspend it. You've still got the same number of votes and I don't see that putting a special time on it would change that.

There is one other situation that Tom... I only gave one case. I can think of any number of cases where you would have a situation related to federal regulations, or safety and those kind of things where it would be necessary to suspend the law for a given period of time so that you would qualify under other conditions. And this is basically what it is for, but as I said, the key to it is that it would require the same amount to suspend it as it did to pass it. So that gives a safeguard on the preference on...privileged vote.

Mr. Nunez Mr. Womack, you say that it takes the same amount to suspend it as it does to pass which I agree with. Would you say that it takes the same amount...it is usually done, a suspension is usually done with a simple resolution or concurrent resolution. Would you say that that resolution would get the same hearing, the same public notice, the same hearing and the same attention in the legislature that the original law took to enact? Especially if it were a controversial law.

And usually to suspend...these laws that have to be suspended are somewhat controversial or that we have done something that we should not have done or you wouldn't have to suspend it. Would you say that that resolution to suspend the law would get the same public scrutiny and legislative scrutiny as the original law took...the original attention that it got to pass?

Mr. Womack Mr. Nunez, under the House rules, any rules that has the effect of law, any resolution that has the effect of law must go through committees, must go through the same readings and everything else as the regular proposed bill. You can't show it any haste or any preferential treatment. It must make the same route.

Mr. Nunez Is that...you are saying that a suspension. If I had a simple or concurrent resolution to suspend the law and I move to hear it on the same day, the Senate or the House would not...it's mandatory that that go to committee? I'm not quite sure. I don't think it is. That's why I am asking.

Mr. Womack It's mandatory that it go to committees, yes.

You can't suspend the law to advance it in the same way that you...I mean the rules...just in the same manner that you can suspend the rules to advance any other bill.

But the bill would go to committee and it must be heard in hearings.

22nd Days Proceedings—July 28, 1973

Mr. Drew Mr. Womack, although it's not limited to that, isn't the usual reason for the use of this law to suspend the effective date as we did on the requirement of ninety hours classroom for realtors before they took the examination?

Mr. Womack Surely it is, Mr. Drew, but I can think of any number of times and this, as Mr. Casey said, it's just a safeguard and something for you to use. I think it's very necessary in there.

Mr. Drew I'm with you, Mr. Womack. What I am saying is that in this case an injustice was done to a great number of people because the act became effective twenty days after we adjourned. And so at the extra session we suspended the effect of the act until the first of the year so that injustice would not be done. Isn't that correct?

Mr. Womack That is right, that is right.

Mr. Arnette Mr. Womack, it's my understanding that according to this constitution, we don't require resolutions to be read on three different days, that the rules could be suspended. It wouldn't have to go to a hearing or anything like this, and it could be adopted that same day. Is that true?

Mr. Womack The House rules that we operate under require that it must go to committee, it must take the same route as the bill took, that is, same amount of votes in respect to the same majority that it took to put it into effect. And I don't really think that the intent of rewriting the constitution is to spell out in every detail. I think it's properly taken care of. It's never been a problem. We have used it any number of times, and there are going to be times it is going to be necessary to use it again...

Amendment

Mr. Poynter The first set of amendments is set up by Delegate Avant.

Amendment No. 1, page 10, line 30 at the end of the line, add the following:
"Any such suspension shall be approved in writing by the governor before becoming effective."

Explanation

Mr. Avant Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates. I do not say that this particular provision has ever been abused. I respect the views of those who may disagree with me. But I say this, that this is a provision that is capable of permitting the grossest kind of mischief. It is completely inconsistent and at odds with the theory of checks and balances that is incorporated into the constitution. We have gone at great length to provide a manner by which legislation shall be adopted. We have provided a system of checks and balances between the legislative branch and the executive branch by providing that legislation must be approved by the governor. We have further elaborated on that system of checks and balances by providing that in certain cases after a gubernatorial veto, a manner and procedure by which that veto may be overridden.

This provision is completely at odds and inconsistent with everything that we have done. This provision permits the legislature by a simple majority in most cases, because most of the laws of this state require only a simple majority of the legislature for their passage. We have permitted the legislature, by a simple majority, to effect repeal a law. They cannot repeal a law permanently and irrevocably without it being by act, subject to a veto by the governor.

But this provision permits the suspension of a law which means that it is no longer the law, for an indefinite period of time with no limitation on it, simply by a concurrent resolution. Now it is a fact that laws have been suspended by concurrent resolution in one day. By concurrent resolution introduced in one House, concurred in by the other House in one day, completely outside of the legislative process which requires three separate and distinct readings in each House on three separate and distinct legislative days.

So, I think that this may be a handy device. It may be a device which can be used in certain cases to permit, to prevent injustices or other undesirable consequences. Certainly, certainly no harm can be done by a simple requirement that in those cases, the chief executive, the governor of the state must concur in the suspension of the law in writing before it shall become effective. That's all this amendment does. We are not trying to take away the right and the power of the legislature to suspend the law in those severe cases such as were described by the speakers who spoke for this section. The only thing we are doing is we are asking that that right be also made subject to the system of checks and balances which we have incorporated into the constitution by the simple requirement that any such suspension shall be approved in writing by the governor before becoming effective.

And I want to point out to you that there is no limitation on the type of law that can be suspended under this provision. Any law, it may have been on the books for fifty years or more, it may be in the Civil Code, any law, it could be the drivers license law, it could be the financial responsibility law, it could be any other law, can be suspended by concurrent resolution concurred in by both Houses of the legislature, can be done in one day with no limit on to how long it shall be effective without any check, without any hearing, without any reading three times as required by this constitution.

So that's all I can say on the subject. I think that the amendments will simply subject this process to the system of checks and balances that is traditional in this state and in our system of laws. And certainly no harm can be done by subjecting this procedure to the system of checks and balances.

While that is being passed out, though, for the benefit of the delegates, I will tell you what it does. It simply adds at the end of this section, after the last word in the section as it has been submitted by the committee, the following sentence:
"Any such suspension shall be approved in writing by the governor before becoming effective."

Questions

Mr. Champagne Do you think, Mr. Avant, that it would be also advisable that a limitation on this thing might be possible?

Mr. Avant I think that might be advisable. There may be another amendment that would suggest that.

Mr. Champagne I have a question for you. I was informed in my Committee on Revenue, Finance and Taxation, that according to the present constitution at one time in the past, a tax, for instance, had been passed by two-thirds majority and remitted or put off by a simple majority. Now I don't know if that existed or not. Are you aware of that, sir?

Mr. Avant I don't know whether that's true or not.

Mr. Champagne But this as written would abolish that. In other words it would be the same for both cases.

Mr. Avant Oh, yes, this section provides that it takes the same vote to suspend, as it takes to enact the law. But it doesn't take any approval by the governor and there's no time limit on how long it shall be suspended nor is it subjected to the ordinary legislative process.

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Avant, I just, I'm seeking information. Would this apply to the veto cases if the governor, if the legislature so desires to suspend the law for six months and the governor didn't concur, would we have any recourse or would the legislature have any recourse?

Mr. Avant Mr. Rayburn, I'll be honest with you,

22nd Days Proceedings—July 28, 1973

I don't know. I would not object to that. I think the suspension should be subjected to the same process that it takes to repeal or to enact legislation, except as to the fact that it can be done by concurrent resolution.

Mr. Rayburn I don't believe, Mr. Avant, your amendment provides for any recourse to the Legislature.

Mr. Henry The gentleman has exceeded his time.

Further Discussion

Mr. Asseff Mr. Chairman, delegates, though I rise to object to the amendment simply because I do not feel that it puts sufficient limitations on the suspension of law. There is great detail on the passage of a bill and yet we permit a suspension with no restraint, whatsoever. I am quite familiar with legislative procedure. The fact that it may be sent to committee under the rules, which it normally is, does not alter the fact that it need not be sent to a committee and such suspension may be passed on the day it is introduced.

I, therefore, urge that you reject this amendment. Mr. Perez will offer a more acceptable amendment and at this time, Mr. Chairman, I will waive while they are presenting my amendment in favor of Mr. Perez's amendment. I suggest you reject this amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates, I won't belabor the point, I would urge rejection of the amendment. I guess the worst reason I could give you for rejection is that it's basically worded as it is the law today.

But I would submit to you that a better reason would be, that I think as was pointed out by the late Rayburn, that the way that this amendment is drafted, is that any suspension would require the approval of the governor in writing.

Well, suppose the governor refused to give his approval in writing, there is no provision here by which the legislature could override his refusal to give the approval in writing. If Mr. Avant would use some reference to the fact that it would follow the same course of action in the preceding section referring to the veto process so that the legislature could override his veto, I think his amendment would be much better.

But this amendment, I would certainly urge rejection.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment rejected: 19-82. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Next set of amendments are sent up by Delegate Perez.

Amendment No. 1, page 10, line 30, after the word "and punctuation suspended, period." And before the word "the", insert the following:

"No law suspended after the effective date of this constitution shall remain in effect beyond the time of adjournment sine die, of the next succeeding regular session of the legislature."

Explanation

Mr. Perez Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, the purpose of this amendment is to limit the effective time of a concurrent resolution which would suspend a law, and it would limit it to the time of adjournment sine die of the next succeeding, regular session of the legislature.

This would afford the legislature the opportunity to suspend the effect of a law until the end of the next session and then give the legislature the opportunity... to give a member of the legislature the opportunity to introduce a bill in the next session to repeal or amend that law instead of suspending it.

I may have some technical problems with respect to the amendment itself, and I'd be glad to have it cleaned up. But the purpose of the amendment is to limit the time for the effectiveness of a concurrent resolution to suspend a law.

Questions

Mr. Kelly Mr. Perez, you may have explained it already concerning some defective language, possibly, it looks like to me that possibly this thing would be better phrased if you said no suspension of law after the effective date.

Quite frankly, I think the amendment is not going to do what you want it to do the way it is presently drawn.

Mr. Perez I'm in agreement with you Mr. Kelly, I must apologize that the amendment is not artistically drawn and unfortunately I prepared it hurriedly. But the purpose of the amendment and I'm sure we can take care of it with Style and Drafting, if necessary, unless someone has an amendment to it, the purpose of the amendment was to limit the effective period of time of a suspension which could extend only until the end of the next regular session of the legislature.

Mr. Asseff Mr. Perez, I have no objections to your amendment. However, I am concerned about this. Under your amendment, would it not be possible for the legislature at the expiration of the time, by following the same procedure to continue the suspension?

Mr. Perez Yes, sir, that could be done, there is no question about it. But at least each year you would have to go back and get both Houses to agree to suspend year after year, and I just don't believe they will continue to do it. But I do think we have to leave the way open for suspensions to the legislature.

Point of Information

Mr. Stagg Mr. Chairman, my remarks are directed to the chair in a point of parliamentary inquiry.

I think that Mr. Perez has an effective amendment for the purpose to which it is introduced except the words need to be transposed.

Is there any way, by leave of the chair, Mr. Perez's amendment could be perfected while he is at the microphone simply by saying "no suspension of laws," rather than no law suspended. A mere changing of the words.

Mr. Henry Well, he would have to withdraw the amendment and we could accomplish that right quick like if he wanted to withdraw the amendment. But that...

Mr. Stagg Can I direct a question to...

Point of Information

Mr. Perez Can I ask for a unanimous consent to amend the resolution to read, "no resolution suspending a law after the effective date" and so forth.

Mr. Henry Mr. Perez, you can't ask for them to vote... we can withdraw it and put it right back in if nobody objects to that.

Question

Mr. LeBlou Mr. Perez, if I'm not mistaken, the whole law or even a portion of the law can be suspended under the provisions, and of course, your amendment, I believe would suspend the whole law and give the legislature time according to your limits to reenact that law in the corrected fashion. I believe that is your idea.

Mr. Perez The purpose is to give the legislature the opportunity, or a member of the legislature the opportunity at the next session to be able to offer a bill which would either repeal the law or amend the law, but would give the legislature the authority during that interim period, the authority to suspend

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter From the same place [by Mr. Perez], page 10, Line 30, after the word "suspended," and before the word "they" insert the resolution suspending a law or part of a law after the effective date of this constitution, etc. No resolution suspending a law or part of the law after the effective date, etc.

Explanation

Mr. Perez I believe that we've...I've cleaned the language up, hopefully, and if there are any other questions I'll be glad to yield.

Further Discussion

Mr. Riecke Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen, I speak in opposition to this amendment. You've heard Mr. Casey say earlier that there was a law passed affecting the paint industry which would have put the paint industry out of business had it not been suspended.

I have another specific case that happened in the construction industry in which Senator O'Keefe introduced a safety regulation affecting glass doors. And the intent of the regulation was good, but it was so broad that it made it impossible for the retail lumber dealers and the millwork manufacturers and the construction industry to comply with the law because the type of glass specified was not available.

Senator O'Keefe very kindly agreed to amend or withdraw certain portions of the bill. It received the unanimous consent of both Houses, and it was immediately suspended.

Now in that case, in that case, if it had been necessary to bring it up again, you would have tied up the legislature, both Houses to reenact or to suspend it again or to kill it which was absolutely unnecessary because everybody in both Houses recognized that they had made a mistake, and I think Judge Perez does not realize some of the things that can happen. All legislators are not familiar with all the problems in connection with every item. Actually, Senator O'Keefe was not familiar with this problem in the building industry and he recognized immediately he had made an error and he was a big enough man to introduce a resolution correcting it.

Questions

Mr. Willis Mr. Riecke, isn't rectification for a bad statute...the best rectification would be its repeal? Isn't the best rectification for a bad statute its repeal?

Mr. Riecke Yes, but in this case the new law we're talking about now you don't have a fiscal session but in this case there was a fiscal session and we had to have action immediately.

Mr. Willis Well, I understand your hypothet, but we're changing that. We have sessions every year. Why should you suspend something that's no good? You're just holding the public in suspense.

Mr. Champagne Mr. Riecke, do you understand that this amendment doesn't do away with that right? It simply says that it does away with the right indefinitely. All the amendment is doing is saying that you can still do this but you can't do it forever, only for one year at a time.

Mr. Riecke Well, I fail to see the purpose in suspending it if you have to suspend it and go back to the next session of the legislature to repeal it. Why not repeal it in the very first instance?

Further Discussion

Mr. Smith Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in support of this amendment. I served in the legislature four terms. I think this is a good amendment and it's needed. We have emergency laws. I remember one time we had an act that had a section that was unconstitutional. We used this suspension and it's necessary, just like a board of liquidation. You've got emergencies you've got to provide for. So, I say let's adopt this amendment and have a good well-rounded legislative function proposal here.

Questions

Mr. Weiss Couldn't this particular section, sir, be included in statutory laws. Is it necessary to constitutionalize suspension of the laws that the legislature passes?

Mr. Smith No sir, I think it should be a safeguard and I think that it should be in the constitution.

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Smith, I concur with your thoughts that the suspension provision is needed and has in my opinion served very useful purposes. However, I'm a little concerned over the cost. I have seen the time when the legislature made a mistake, constitutionally, legally and otherwise, and maybe suspended one brief section of an act, and suspended it indefinitely. Under this provision, if I read it correctly, in the event we've done that, at the next session we would have to come back and outright repeal this act and reenact it, go through all the expenses of reprinting it, repealing it, reenacting it, and so forth, and I just wonder, have you thought of that factor?

Mr. Smith No, sir. I don't think that would be necessary.

Further Discussion

Mr. Asseff Mr. Chairman, delegates, I see the need for a suspension of the law. I can see where it can serve a useful purpose. However, I am unwilling to vote for Section 22 as it is now. However, I feel that Mr. Perez has submitted a reasonable compromise which will meet the requirements in my opinion of both sides, and I therefore urge the adoption of the amendment.

[Previous Question Ordered. Amendment adopted: 94-16. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. DeBlieux], page 10, Line 29, immediately after the word "and" and before the word "vote" insert the following: "committee hearing and".

Explanation

Mr. DeBlieux Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the Convention, I just feel like that because of some of the objections that were raised here before that you have a public hearing on any resolution to suspend the law. You know as a general rule, since we would have annual sessions, if the bill could be introduced, if you could do it at a time that you could go ahead and repeal the law or amend it or change it or whatever you wanted to do. But suppose it's close to the end of the session and you find out that some error has been made. You don't have time to correct it that particular session by repealing or amending the law; you want to do it by resolution. This would permit a public hearing on the resolution before it could become effective suspending the law. I think that that's what we need for protection before we can do something like that. I think that it's necessary sometime that we suspend laws, but certainly we should do it at that public hearing and not just by a vote on the floor of the House or the Senate.

Questions

Mr. Casey Senator DeBlieux, whether or not I'm in favor of your amendment, I think it was errone ously prepared. Where the words "committee hearing and" are inserted between the words on line 29 "same" and "vote", I think it's somewhat disconnected and has little meaning and it really not properly worded if those words were added at that point.

22nd Days Proceedings—July 28, 1973

Mr. De Blieux Well, Mr. Casey, where would you add them to insure that you had a public hearing on it? That's the only place...the only thing...I just want to be sure that we have a public hearing on an amendment through committee action before we pass it. I thought that's where you would do it. You'd have your hearing before your vote.

Mr. Henry I think that Mr. Poynter is trying to draw it where it will sound like what you, I believe, meant, Senator De Blieux because there is some confusion on the thing.

Mr. Womack Senator De Blieux, under your proposal here, you want to guarantee the hearing, and you're going really to put it in the constitution now that the public is going to be protected to the nth degree. Assuming that you're going to adjourn sine die at midnight under the constitution on the final day and at 11 o'clock you find a flaw and you want to correct it and you guarantee a public hearing and between 11 and 12 you can do every bit of that. You can hold two public hearings. You can recess, call a one minute public hearing and there's nothing to keep the committee that you assigned it to from having a one minute public hearing, and then pass it out real quick, go right back, send it to the Senate and they can hold a one minute public hearing. So, in effect, in this what have you done to safeguard the public other than what's already in it.

Mr. De Blieux Well, Representative Womack, we have done this. There might be somebody around on the floor of the Senate or the floor of the House that would like to put in a bill about a law before it's suspended. It would give them their chance to do that. I don't care whether it's a one minute or a ten day hearing. At least, you've accorded the public the right to be heard on it before you do it.

[Amendment withdrawn and resubmitted with correction.]

Further Discussion

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates, I would like to urge you to consider the possibility of not adopting this amendment in preference to a subsequent amendment to be submitted by Mr. Flory, which I think is more specific and would indicate that any measure to suspend a law or a portion of a law shall be adopted by using the same procedure as for a bill. He would add the wording in there referring particularly to Section 17. That procedure, I think, would be quite specific where it would have to be read on three days in each house, would have to have a committee hearing, would have to be heard in public, and all of the mechanical processes that any other bill would have to follow.

Questions

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Casey, if you went through that procedure you'd still be able to appeal the repeal or amend the law, because if you say the same procedure, then you would have to introduce the resolution in the time limit for the introduction of bills. You would have your three days reading on the floor and so forth and so on. Therefore there would be no need for that if we do it that way. No need for that provision in the constitution. Now, the only thing is, as the amendment that I have proposed to it, it would allow a resolution to be passed through possibly both houses in maybe two days time. Otherwise, it would take at least five days to get a suspension of a law, and sometimes you might find out that it's not possible to do that. I say that if we're going to follow the same procedure as outlined here in Mr. Flory's amendment, we could repeal the law or amend the law and it would not be necessary to pass a resolution for suspension. That's the difference. Now, you can take your choice.

Mr. Casey Senator, you make a very good point. I understand the position you're taking.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment rejected: 41-52. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter [by Mr. Flory]. Page 10, line 30, at the end of the line add the following: "any measure to suspend a law or portion thereof shall be adopted by the same procedure as for a bill." That's been passed out. Mr. Flory has added another sentence that reads as follows: "however, such measures shall not be subject to gubernatorial veto nor time limitations with respect to introduction."

Read that last sentence again?

He's added this sentence at the end of it. "However, such measures shall not be subject to gubernatorial veto nor time limitations with respect to introduction."

Explanation

Mr. Flory Mr. Chairman and delegates, what the amendment purports to do is to require the same procedure for the suspension of the laws that it requires in order to pass it. However, there was some question as to whether or not the language would be interpreted to require or at least submitted or subjected to the possible veto of the governor, and also, the fifteen day limitation for the introduction of bills. It was not my intent, nor do I think it wise to put it in that light. Consequently, what I think we have done here is to require the same process for the adoption of a measure suspending a portion of a bill, a date set forth in the act, or the act itself for a specified period of time and require that same process through the legislature which guarantees a public hearing. If a public hearing is necessary in order to adopt a law, certainly a public hearing ought to be required for the suspension of that law or any portion thereof, and I would ask for the adoption of that amendment.

Point of Order

Mr. Conroy I don't understand the procedure we're following now, where whole sentences are being added to amendments which have been passed out. In the past, I think by consent of the convention, we have on occasion allowed one or two words to be changed, but I'm not familiar with the procedure we're following now where a great deal of material can be added without distribution or without...

Mr. Henry Well, Mr. Conroy, what we're trying to do is save time, really, and it's been a long and complicated section and we didn't feel that you could have followed it or anybody could have followed it. We would have pulled it out and passed it out, but since there was no objection and it was a sentence, to save time that's the reason we've done that sir.

Point of Information

Mr. Willis A point of information, Mr. Chairman. Mr. Perez's amendment passed and his commences on line 30. Now, so does Mr. Flory's. Which precedes?

Mr. Henry Well, if these amendments are adopted and they eliminate the other amendments, these would take precedent.

Mr. Willis Well, they are not inconsistent as I view them. Mr. Perez has an amendment commencing after...

Mr. Henry Look there, Mr. Clerk. You've got the Perez amendments?

22nd Days Proceedings—July 28, 1973

Mr. Poynter His amendments were added after the portion of a sentence on line 30 that says "be suspended", and he inserted a new sentence and then this one is to go at the end of line 30 and it would be after the words "the vote thereon shall be by record vote". So, I think that we're straight, and I believe you're correct. They're not in conflict in terms of substances, at least.

Mr. Willis Which sentence would precede?

Mr. Poynter It would read... Yes, the Perez would go first and then you would have the sentence "the vote thereon shall be by record vote". Then you would have the two sentences added by Mr. Flory's amendment if it is adopted by the convention.

Mr. Willis Much obliged.

Questions

Mr. Tobias This particular provision would require the governor's signature?

Mr. Flory No, sir. The added language specifically states that it would not be subject to the governor's veto.

Mr. Tobias Now, that's the veto, but... O.K.

Mr. Kean Mr. Flory, with the additional sentence that you've now put on your proposal, what is the difference between your proposal and the one that Mr. De Blieux just had up before the delegates?

Mr. Flory Well, the difference between my proposal and the one that Senator De Blieux had was that this requires the same readings, the same requirement for possession of both houses and a public hearing and a committee report. His did not.

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Flory, one of the main differences is that under your proposal it would take at least five days at the very minimum in order to get a resolution suspending a law through the legislature. Is that correct?

Mr. Flory That is correct. It is in the same posture that a bill that would have the effect of law takes now. Under our proposal, in order to pass that law in order to suspend it would take the same process.

Further Discussion

Mr. Arnette I'm in favor of this amendment and the reason that I'm in favor of it is for two basic reasons. If we don't put this safeguard in there, first of all, any suspension of a law could be virtually secret, and I'm against secret laws. It's not reported by any official journal. It doesn't have to be put in the official state journal. The only way that you would know about it is if West Publishing Company, a company from out of state, would decide that they were going to put it in their annotations, and West can make mistakes, and they have done so in the past. So, therefore, it might be that there is a law on the books that is suspended and no one would know about it unless you happened to be at that legislative session, and I don't see how we can have laws that are suspended in this manner. The second point is if we don't put it subject to any time limitations, like the five days required for the passage of a bill, then this could be done in a very short amount of time. It's been pointed out to me by a legislator that one particular law was suspended in less than an hour, and I think that we need these hearings. Besides needing the hearings, I think we need this five day time so that everyone knows that it's coming up so that they can talk either for it or against it. So definitely I think that we need to adopt Mr. Flory's amendment.

Question

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Arnette, with reference to the knowledge of it, don't you know that all resolutions are printed in the journal of the respective houses at this particular time?

Mr. Arnette Yes, but they aren't printed in the official journal of the state. So you would have to look up that particular day's proceedings to know whether a resolution had been passed. But it becomes effective without any printing whatsoever in the official state journal, whereas a bill is required to be printed in the state journal before it can become effective.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: 66-30. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section as Amended

Mr. Poynter Bear with me a second, Mr. Jenkins, so that I can make sure that I'm getting all of these in the right spot.

It will read as follows: "No power suspending laws of this state shall be exercised except by the legislature and then only by the same vote required for final passage of the law proposed to be suspended. No resolution suspending a law or part of a law after the effective date of this constitution shall remain in effect beyond the time of adjournment sine die of the next succeeding regular session of the legislature. The vote thereon shall be by record vote. Any measure to suspend a law or portion thereof shall be adopted by the same procedure as for a bill." Last sentence... provided... and I don't have the copies... there we go. "However, such measures shall not be subject to gubernatorial veto nor time limitations with respect to introduction."

Motion

Mr. Jenkins Mr. Chairman, I think we now have the Section like we want it analytically, but we've got about three sentences too many, and some of it is repetitious. So I move that we pass over this section, go to the next one, and give the committee the opportunity to shorten this down and include all this information in about two sentences, because it can be done easily.

Mr. Henry Well, of course, your motion is in order, but is not that the purpose of Style and Drafting, Mr. Jenkins?

Mr. Jenkins Well, I thought that their purpose was with regard to punctuation, spelling, capitalization and things of that nature, rather than elimination of complete sentences and such. I may be wrong.

Mr. Henry You're moving then that we pass over The Section...

Mr. Jenkins Yes, and I think at the end of the next section, by then we'll have the committee come up with something that would be sufficient.

Point of Information

Mr. Weiss A point of information. Isn't it the purpose of Style and Drafting to revamp and shorten the constitution that we provide without changing the content? So this is one place where we may vote on the subject matter and allow Style and Drafting to go about its necessary changes.

Mr. Henry That was my understanding, but still...

Mr. Weiss We will revote on the matter again, and if there is any displeasure the convention can so decide.

Point of Information

Mr. Tapper Point of information, Mr. Chairman. Dr. Weiss made the statement that we will revote on it after, but my question is will we have an opportunity as the convention as a whole to redo these sections if we disagree with the Style and Drafting?

22nd Days Proceedings—July 28, 1973

[Motion to pass over Section 22 rejected: 27-04.]

Further Discussion

Mr. Triche Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in opposition to Section 22, and I would urge that you seriously consider rejecting the entire section. If you will look at the 1921 convention as it deals with suspensions of laws you will find that that section is not contained in Article III of the constitution which deals with the power and authority of the legislature, but is contained somewhere else in Section 19 of the constitution in Section 5. I would suggest to you that the original intent of that Article was not to grant the legislature any specific authority to suspend laws, but the original intent of that section was quite the contrary. It was a prohibition and a limitation on what the government could do. The section originally read: "no power of suspending laws in this state shall be exercised except by the legislature and that what the people in the convention of 1921 were trying to tell us was that laws should not be suspended, and they were trying to guarantee, I believe, the people of this state against rule by executive edict, to prevent the governor from declaring emergency or martial law, to prevent the executive from suspending laws by executive order and by me, I think that's all it meant. As time progressed and we found ourselves in biannual sessions and the legislature was called into special session, it could only consider matters limited in the call. The legislature used this procedure to suspend laws that were erroneously written or onobnoxious at the time, and they would resolve on a resolution, and they couldn't otherwise do it by act or resolution because the call didn't contain that specific reference to repeal of laws. Then, when we went into fiscal session, the legislature sometimes found itself with the desire to repeal laws during a fiscal session, but since the repeal was not a fiscal matter it used the vehicle. I think we have through the years subverted and misused Article 5, Section 5 of the constitution. Then we came with the reform in 1966, I think it was, when the two-thirds vote rule was popular and we've changed to provide that laws could be suspended by statute or resolution and only by the same vote required for the passage of the original law. For the life of me, I can't understand why we should require a two-thirds vote to repeal or reduce a tax, it seems to me that a simple majority of the legislature should be necessary. For the life of me, I can't understand why we should require a two-thirds vote to reduce the salary of a public official in the next term of office. We should be able to do that by majority vote. The provision requiring suspension of the law be required or the same vote required for passage, to me, doesn't make any more sense. In short, what I'm suggesting to you is that Section 22 as it is presently written and as it's been watered down by amendment simply should not be in the constitution. There are procedures which we have written into this constitution to guarantee deliberation by the legislature before laws are passed. They have to be printed, they have to be read on three separate days, they have to go through committee hearings. After they are passed by the legislature, they have to be signed by the governor, and they have to be published in the journal before they have the effect of law. Now the whole purpose of that procedure and limitation here is that we've placed in the present constitution, most of which are in the constitution of 1921 and have been in the constitution of this state since its admission into the Union, the whole purpose of those procedures is to assure ourselves that the laws passed by the legislature are, in fact, the solemn expression of the legislature. If they come back and say in an off-handed manner that bills can be suspended by resolution, I understand Mr. Womack's point when he says but by rule now all of our resolutions are required to be heard by committee, etc. But that's only by rule of the legislature. It was only adopted just a few years ago. For many, many, many years we operated without that rule, and I don't think that anybody can guarantee you or predict how long that rule will stay in effect. The only protection we have of the laws, will be, in fact, a solemn expression of legislative will or the procedures that we write into this constitution, and when the people speak through their constitution, and they say bills must be read three times, bills must go before committees, bills must be signed by the governor, and published in the official journal before they have the effect of law, that's what we must do. I suggest to you that to suspend the law is as serious as a matter as enacting a law. It's as serious a matter as repealing a law and we ought to assure the people of this state that a suspension also is, in fact, a solemn expression of the legislative will.

We ought not to allow cursory, ill-thought-up and hasty suspension of laws. For that reason, ladies and gentlemen, I would urge that you vote against Section 22 in its entirety. I think the original purpose which was a limitation on the authority of government has been subverted and changed.

Further Discussion

Mr. Tapper Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I too rise in opposition to this section. Mr. Triche has so ably pointed it out to you that I cannot add to the bill except as he has said. However, I would like to go into this business of the style and drafting. I think the way it is worded, Style and Drafting will have to do something with it. I don't believe that under the rules that we will have a reengrossed bill when it comes back from Style and Drafting. I'm not certain about that. However, I believe that the bill is a misconception of the part of some of the delegates as to what authority Style and Drafting has. I believe that Mr. Jenkins pointed it out ably and that is that to change a comma or a period or to begin a paragraph or to end a paragraph, this is basically what their function is, in my opinion, according to the rules. If we're going to give them a mumbo-jumbo of words and let them redraft them to bring back to us as some have said, well then I believe, that we're wasting out time here. We just turn it over to Style and Drafting. Now, I believe that we should pass over this measure because the length of it and the number of sentences, as Mr. Jenkins said, does not lend itself to proper interpretation. I would hope that since you've already decided to go ahead with the consideration of this matter that you do not adopt this section. I don't think it's necessary, as Mr. Triche said. I think that it's much too important to hit it in an off-handed fashion the way that we're doing it now and turn it over to Style and Drafting. We're giving them the authority to decide how these things are going to be done.

Questions

Mr. Lanier Mr. Tapper, would you agree that under the type of government that we have in the United States that the residual grant of power under the tenth amendment to the United States Constitution gives all powers not given to the United States to the states?

Mr. Tapper I would think that's correct, yes.

Mr. Lanier And would you also agree that specifically the power is vested in the legislature of this state except as limited by the constitution of that state?

Mr. Tapper Yes.

Mr. Lanier Now, that means that the state legislature can do anything not prohibited by the United States Constitution and that it is limited in its own constitution. Is that correct?

Mr. Tapper Well, I'm not so certain that it is,

22nd Days Proceedings—July 28, 1973

Mr. Lanier. That is a question of contention. I believe that we're going to get to that somewhere down the road with this convention. There's been some thought on the part of many delegates to provide that the legislature can do anything that is not prohibited, and there's a thought that if you don't put any prohibition that the legislature then can do it. I'm not so sure that is a fact...that it's true. I can't answer your question because I'm not certain about that and there's a big question about it.

Mr. Lanier. Well, let me ask you this. If we knock out this section that provides limitations on the manner in which the legislature can suspend laws, would that not, in effect, mean that the legislature can handle that particular item any way that it wishes.

Mr. Tapper. I just answered that with the last question. I don't think that's necessarily true, Mr. Lanier. I did I wouldn't be up here opposing this proposal.

Mr. Lanier. Is it your position that in order for the legislature to suspend a law it has to have a grant of authority to do so in the constitution?

Mr. Tapper. I believe that the constitution, yes, is the basic law of the land. Of this particular land, Louisiana, and if we don't provide something in this constitution, my opinion of the theory is that if we don't give the authority...and I don't agree that if we don't put it in there they're entitled to do it. I think that if we don't grant the authority to the legislature, they won't be able to do it.

Mr. O'Neill. For those people who are not lawyers let me ask the question point blank and you can answer it again, what will the effect be of not placing this in the constitution?

Mr. Tapper. What will the effect be of not placing it in the constitution?

Mr. O'Neill. I know you've answered once, but I want the question understood more than the answer.

Mr. Tapper. The effect of not placing it in this part of the constitution in the present terminology will be that you will not have a mandate as to the procedure to be followed. I think that's the answer that you want.

Mr. Tobias. Mr. Tapper, is it not your understanding that this provision is not in any other state constitution?

Mr. Tapper. I don't know that it is, Mr. Tobias. I don't think it is.

Mr. Tobias. Are you also aware that this provision is not in the model state constitution?

Mr. Tapper. I was not aware of that, but if you say so, I agree with you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Drew. Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the Convention, I rise in support of this section as amended. I must confess to you that I do not have the legislative experience of Mr. Triche or Mr. Tapper. I have been in the legislature since the session of 1972 and in these two sessions, one 60 day session, one fiscal session and one extraordinary session, I have seen the power to suspend laws used to the advantage of the public. To the advantage of the public and not to the detriment of the public. One of the questions that I asked Mr. Womack was in 1972 the legislature passed an act, and as I recall with my poor memory, it required 90 class hours of instruction before you were eligible to take an examination for real estate broker. It became effective the same day that all other laws, 20 days after the legislature adjourned. It was found after that law was passed, that there were many people who had already filed applications to take those tests, were ready to take those tests and a great injustice would have been done to them. And in the extraordinary session in August, if my memory serves me correct and I could stand corrected, there was a resolution offered to suspend the operation of that statute until January 1 of 1973 which protected the rights of those individuals at that time. You heard the point law discussed. It was found, as I recall, on that particular act that was passed for the benefit of the protection of the children at that time, that it would have possibly put most of the point in the contraband category and it was suspended. I have not seen this power used except in the manner in which it would protect the people, not hurt the people. And in these three sessions of my short tenure in the legislature I have not seen it abused and I do not expect to see it abused. As far as the safeguards, I think with Mr. Flory's amendment, with the other amendments that have been put on this section, the public has ample safeguards. No one is going to be surprised by something. As far as the question of whether the public and whether the lawyers and whether the judges know of this, they say West Publishing Co. may make a mistake. Certainly they may make a mistake, they are human too. But let me tell you, gentlemen, they are making mistakes now and not just on resolutions. There are other mistakes. This is something that serves the benefit of the people. I trust that it will never be abused. I have not seen it abused to this date and I urge your adoption of the section as amended.

Questions

Mr. Burns. My question is more in the nature of obtaining information. In view of the Flory amendment which I believe provides that the passage to suspend a law has to go through practically the same legislative process as the passage of a bill. As I understand the purpose of suspension of the law is to take care of some situation that develops between sessions of the legislature. But in view of the Flory amendment, which as I say is just as time-consuming, is there any real necessity for this section being in the constitution anymore?

Mr. Drew. I think it's necessary for this reason, Mr. Burns, you take your Real Estate Brokers' Act, it's a good act. It's something we needed, but we needed to suspend the effective date of it. And that's the primary use of this section that I've seen. I don't think there is any abuse.

Mr. Champagne. Mr. Drew, don't you think with the fact that we have provided more time for the legislature, more time to study the bills, more time in which to digest them, that in all probability if we didn't have this that it would encourage the legislature possibly to make a better, take a better look at the bills and possibly have fewer errors in passing it?

Mr. Drew. Mr. Champagne, your inference is that we do not look at the bills as we should. We have not been able to, I can assure you that the legislature has done everything within their power to look at the bills as much time as they've had. I'm sure we will have more time, but it does not take us out of the category of being human.

Mr. Champagne. I understand and I didn't intend that as a criticism but what I'm trying to say, sir, if we're going to provide all of these safeguards with all of these amendments, I think, and I'm just asking you, I think this is a repetition of the same question but really and truly don't you think possibly that since we are going to have to go through almost the same procedure we might just as well have a procedure by which we can repeal those laws which were made wrong? You don't agree with that?

Mr. Drew. The point there, Mr. Champagne, is that most of the laws do not need repeal. They may need suspension for a definite period of time, but not repealing.

Further Discussion

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I believe there is a dire need for some provision to allow the legislature to suspend laws or parts of laws. I think it's worked well in the past but I'm a little confused as to how far we are going. If I understand one of the amendments adopted by this body that was offered by Delegate Perez, it says no resolution suspending a law or part of a law after the effective date of this constitution shall remain in effect beyond the time of adjournment, sine die of the next succeeding regular session. I know in many cases where maybe we passed a bill and stated in the bill the effective date, and Representative Drew just explained that to you. We suspended that date when we found out we had made a mistake, for a further period, the effective date that that particular act would go into effect. Under this amendment, if I read it correctly, any suspension we made, I have seen the time when we passed the law and at the next session the Legislative Bureau told us we had to change a period or a comma or maybe take out one particular section or one sentence to make the law constitutional. We have suspended that particular section indefinitely. If I read this amendment correctly, in the future, if we suspend any portion of a law, we have got to come back at the next regular session, reenact, re-establish, rehear, and re-pass that entire subject matter. Now maybe you want to do that, I don't know. I really see no need for it. I do want to read one provision that I think the people who put this in the constitution even had to be, be, be, "21. "No power of suspending laws of this state shall be exercised except by the legislature." If you did not have that language in there, I'm of the opinion that you might have some governor that thinks he could, under his power, executive order granted to the chief executive of this state, he could suspend the law. Executive orders have broad powers. We've got many a commission in this state today that is now a state agency that was created by executive order many years ago. Later they came back and got a $5,000 appropriation, next year, $25,000, today they are up to a half a million dollars. They were created not by the legislature, but by executive order. I think the opinion is, if you don't tie down some language, either under the Executive Department or the Legislative Branch, to spell out who has the right of suspension, we might be doing something we might regret. That's the only reason that I do hope we preserve that language as who would have the power, and the legislature only, somewhere in this constitution. Other than that, I think we're doing nothing. I think we're doing nothing but wasting a lot of paper and a lot of time.

Further Discussion

Mr. Stovall Ladies and gentlemen, I'd like to emphasize the point that Mr. Champagne made here in a question a moment ago. That we are granting the legislature more time to study bills, to consider them and it seems to me if they have this greater period of time, they can eliminate some of these inadequacies in some of the bills which need to be corrected. It will encourage them to be more careful in their study of whatever is passed and will eliminate this need for suspension. Also, this provision is not in other constitutions, it's not in the model constitution and I encourage you to eliminate this from the constitution.

[Quorum Call: 100 delegates present and a quorum. Previous Justice readed on the Session.]

Closing

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates, Section 22 is so different now from when we started off that it's very difficult to be enthusiastic about it. However, I think we do need some provision some what relative to suspending of laws. My personal preference was that Section 22 be adopted as proposed, I think it was a valid reasonable power given to the legislature to take care of difficulties immediately in certain areas, on certain laws. It's very watered down from the way that it was originally submitted. It's unfortunate that the amendments were adopted, I think that's an indication on the part of the delegates of their hesitation to have a great amount of faith in the legislature and I'm surprised that some of the delegates have advanced opposition to this particular effort on the part of the legislature to retain the power of suspension of laws. I would like to see the final decision up to the delegates themselves as to whether they will adopt this provision as amended or not.

Questions

Mr. Nunez Mr. Casey, in lieu of the fact that we now have 95 day continual sessions, five day automatic veto sessions, committees, we have at any time to consider bills, to hear bills, to all but act on bills, a simple majority of the legislature to call us into special session, do you really believe this is needed?

Mr. Casey Mr. Nunez, I would say in nine hundred and ninety-nine thousand times out of a hundred thousand, you probably don't need this, but there's that one small, little, minute instance where it would certainly be helpful to have available.

Mr. Keam Mr. Casey, if this section is deleted, would it not be necessary that we come back and place somewhere in the constitution some bar against suspension of laws, in order to insure against the contingency that Senator mentioned a moment ago of the governor suspending a law...

Mr. Casey That's absolutely, you're absolutely correct, Mr. Keam. That if this is rejected the Legislative Committee would certainly have to advance some proposal to require that laws could only be actually suspended by the legislature in order to prevent the possibility of the Executive Department itself attempting to suspend laws, let's say, if martial law is declared or something like that. So if this is rejected by the convention, some positive action would certainly be in order on the part of the Committee on the Legislature and on the part of the convention.

Mr. E. J. Landry I don't know whether I'm correct in the question that I'm going to ask Mr. Casey, but Mr. Casey, would you have any power at this time to make it possible for me and the other delegates to have the materials on the bills that were expressed by all of the different people favoring some form of expression? You see, I haven't seen that. It came in parts. Would you be able, as the leader or the person sponsoring this particular section, would you have the power of making it possible for me, as a delegate, to see these expressions put together before a determination is made? I think I've spent a lot of time listening, Mr. Chairman, to all of these people and I think all of them have had something valid to say. But at this particular time I'm left without the complete summarized expression of what these people tried to say and I know a lot of people have had experience and they know what they are going to do, but it would be to me as a delegate not to have that material put together in order for me to make a determination. I'm appealing both to the Chairman and to the leader of that subsection. Can you help me?

Mr. Casey Mr. Landry, various avenues are certainly available and I share your problem. I can understand your problem. There are various possibilities that are available to you. First of all, initially, you could request the Clerk, just from a point of information, to read thoroughly the entire proposal as it has been amended. Secondly, I think other methods would be available. I know the previous question has been called, but I think it would be in order for you or for someone to request a suspension of the rules in order that you could make a motion to pass over this section in order to accumulate or combine all the amendments that have been adopted in order to give the delegates time to intelligently analyze everything. Other motions would certainly be in order, and I hate to act as a parliamentarian here, to have it referred back to committee or any other motion that you think might be available, but I think that...

Point of Information

Mr. E. J. Landry Thank you. Now that answers my question.

Mr. Chairman, would you, and I'm appealing to the delegates, would you give me the privilege of suspending the rules to ask for that permission? In all justice to me and the other members of this convention, I think we ought to see the summary of what this thing looks like before any action is taken. Now...

Mr. Henry Mr. Landry, rather than setting a precedent of just going in right now and saying we're to this point, let's suspend the rules, we do have the mechanics to accomplish what you want to accomplish. Let me suggest that you move to reconsider the vote by which the previous question was just ordered, and that will get us back into posture to do what you want to do, I think. You do make that motion don't you?

Mr. E. J. Landry I sure do. Thank you.

[Motion to reconsider the vote by which the previous question was ordered adopted: 88-10.]

Point of Information

Mr. Burns In the interest of expediency, could not the amendment as completed, I mean the section with all the amendments, be typed out quickly and furnished Mr. Landry?

Mr. Henry Let us get through the procedural mechanics if you will, please sir, so we can get to that point. Then we'll work on how we're going to solve it, Mr. Jim.

[Motion for the Previous Question rejected: 11-87. Motion to pass over the Section.]

Point of Information

Mr. Singletary Is this motion debatable?

Mr. Henry Very definitely it is, yes sir.

Mr. Singletary I'd just like to have an explanation of why we should pass over this thing.

Further Discussion

Mr. Perez Mr. Chairman and delegates, the only purpose of my motion was to try to put together the various amendments and to clean up this particular article and we wanted a little bit of time within which to do it before it's finally submitted to the delegates for a vote. The only purpose of passing over it was to give us that time.

Point of Information

Mr. Sutherland If we pass over this section as we passed over Section 12, we've got to come back to these before we finally adopt this whole article?

Mr. Henry You are correct, sir.

[Previous Question ordered on the Motion to pass over the Section. Motion adopted: 72-60.]

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter Section 23. The legislature may authorize the organization of corporations for perpetual or indefinite duration. However, every corporation shall be subject to dissolution or forfeiture of its charter or franchise, as provided by law. Neither the state nor any political subdivision shall grant a perpetual franchise or privilege to any person or corporation.

Explanation

Mr. Juneau Fellow delegates, this provision is substantially the same provision that we now have in the present constitution. There is some rewording... It's the committee's position that the rewording was not substantive in nature. It was the feeling, we correspond with the Law Institute on this matter, and they thought it was necessary to put in the constitution a provision that the legislature may authorize a corporation for perpetual or indefinite duration. The balance of the language, of course, relates to franchises which may not be granted the privilege to any one given individual. We respectfully submit that there is no substantive change in the law and we would move for its adoption.

Vice Chairman Alexander in the Chair

Questions

Mr. Gravel Mr. Juneau, what was the reason given why this provision, and I'm talking about the first 4 lines of Section 23, would be required to be placed in the constitution? This seems to me just to be simple language authorizing the legislature to do something that it certainly can do. It's not prohibited from doing it. Please explain it a little bit more to me.

Mr. Juneau Yes sir. This was the initial thinking of the committee, Mr. Gravel, but as an abundance of caution we corresponded with the Law Institute, and as I understand it, they said that if we did not have such a provision that conceivably they could come into the Corporation Act and enact legislation which would preclude the possibility of having what we did before the new Corporation Act was amended. As you might recall, I think there was a provision of 99 years and they wouldn't go beyond that. They thought as an abundance of caution that it should be put in the legislature and retained. There was just a feeling of concern in that regard and I want to reiterate that the committee shares your thought in that respect. We deferred to the Law Institute comments in that regard.

Mr. Gravel Well isn't it true, though, that if we're going to adopt that policy then we've got to do a lot of things in this constitution to take precautionary measures that are just going to tend to enlarge it and to make it probably as cumbersome as the constitution that we presently have?

Mr. Juneau I share your remarks in that regard, Mr. Gravel. The only statement I can make, there was a tremendous concern by a great many lawyers in the state that the effect it could have. And for that reason we left it in.

Mr. Gravel Was there any particular concern that you had of among the lawyers who are delegates to this convention?

Mr. Juneau My answer would be I don't know, Mr. Gravel.

Mr. Kelly Mr. Juneau, I understand your explanation to Mr. Gravel concerning the first 4 lines of this section. Would you explain why it is necessary to have any of it in the constitution to me?

Mr. Juneau Well I would definitely construe the last portion, Mr. Kelly, that it's an absolute prohibition on the part as to the legislature that neither they nor any political subdivision thereof shall grant a perpetual franchise or privilege to any person or corporation. I think that that's a very specific limitation in the constitution. I would deem that absolutely necessary, I would think so.

Mr. Kelly Would you give me an example of where, if that is not in there, I meant some abuse. Apparently this is placed in the constitution to cover the abuse of the legislative power or the power of some political subdivision regarding perpetual franchises and privileges.

Mr. Juneau Well, my answer would be this, Mr. Kelly. As you know, it's precluded or what we do not prevent the legislature from enacting under the preliminary plan they could enact. The word that neither the state nor political subdivisions shall grant a perpetual franchise to me is a limitation on the preliminary power of the legislature to enact such a provision. It precludes them from doing, if we do not say in that fashion, they could obviously, to me, enact such a privilege or franchise.

Further Discussion

Mr. Gravel Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, the only point that I would like to make in this regard is that I don't see any necessity whatsoever for lines 1 through 4 that are contained in Section 23. To permit this kind of language to go into the constitution would suggest that similar language relating to other areas in which we might act should also be incorporated in the constitution. This adds nothing to our basic document. I think it's a plussage, the legislature clearly would have the authority to act in this regard after we adopt the constitution without this language. I would oppose the adoption of Section 23 insofar as it contains the first four lines.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

Questions

Mr. Champagne Mr. Gravel, as far as the last part, it says you cannot issue a perpetual franchise.

Mr. Gravel I'm not...

Mr. Champagne Well I have a question on that. They could issue one for 999 years, though.

Mr. Gravel Under the first 4 sentences, the constitution is authorizing the legislature to do that, that the legislature would have that authority unless this constitution would prohibit the legislature from exercising that authority.

Mr. Champagne What I'm saying now, in reference to the last two lines which you said, you know, you'd allow. I'm wondering about those lines. In other words, a perpetual corporation would be a questionable thing. Ninety-nine years or maybe 999 years they could do that. So you're not really limiting them that much, is my question.

Mr. Gravel That's correct, but the sentence at lines 5 and 6 say something else to me, as an attorney, and might be a prohibition that this convention may want to put into the constitution. That possibly has some merit. My whole problem is with the first four lines that I don't think belong in the constitution. I have an amendment prepared where I request that those four lines be deleted.

Mr. Abraham If I understand you correctly, what you're saying that there does not need to be any prohibition against an organization or corporation being organized indefinitely but what you're saying is that there should be a prohibition from granting a perpetual franchise. For instance grant a company a franchise for the utilities of a city for a perpetual, indefinite duration. Is that correct? And that's what lines 5 and 6 mean, does it not?

Mr. Gravel That's not what I'm saying but that's the result. In other words, I think lines 5 and 6 address themselves to consideration by this convention as to whether we should or should not have such a prohibition in the constitution. I have no problem with that being a legitimate matter for consideration by this convention.

Mr. Abraham But the prohibition you're talking about is granting a franchise say to a bus line within a city, or something like that and not prohibition against a corporation being organized indefinitely.

Mr. Gravel That's correct, Mr. Abraham. All lines 1 through 4 do are to say that the legislature may do something and the legislature can do that whether we have such a provision in this constitution or not.

Mr. Jenkins Mr. Gravel, though, wouldn't your amendment really bring us back to the old law with regard to the existence of corporations because if you, if the state can't grant a perpetual privilege to anyone as they wouldn't be allowed to do under lines 5 and 6, which you retain, then how could they allow perpetual corporations?

Mr. Gravel Mr. Jenkins, you misunderstand me. I'm not retaining anything at this time, I'm just deleting the permissive language in this section. I think we will then consider under the provision that's set forth in lines 5 and 6, whether or not we want that particular prohibition in the constitution. All I want to do is to delete lines 1 through 4.

Mr. Jenkins Well isn't it true that under the 1921 constitution before the amendments passed in 1968 the language read "perpetual franchises or privileges shall not be granted to any person or corporation by the state or by any political subdivision thereof"? It was on the basis of that language that perpetual duration of corporations was not allowed. Isn't that true?

Mr. Gravel That may be the reason for it...

Mr. Jenkins And if we adopted this amendment, then, wouldn't that be the effect again?

Mr. Gravel We're talking about a new constitution, not the old one.

Further Discussion

Mr. Conroy The questions which Mr. Gravel had asked have been asked by other delegates and I think that the confusion occurs here simply by the organization of this particular section, not by its content. Mr. Jenkins has touched on the problem and referred to it and I want to make sure that everybody understands what the problem is. The prohibition contained in lines 5 and 6 says that neither the state nor any political subdivision shall grant a perpetual franchise or privilege. This was construed to mean that the state of Louisiana could not authorize a corporation to organize on a perpetual basis, and the state law so provided. It was not until the constitution was amended to authorize the organization of a corporation on a perpetual basis as an exception to the prohibition contained in 5 and 6 that this was possible. A corporation charter is a franchise as witnessed by the fact that we have a Louisiana franchise tax imposed on corporations for the right to exercise this existence, this franchise granted by the state. I have no objection to the deletion of this entire section, but please don't delete lines 1 through 4 which have enabled this state to come forward with the corporation field and enact a general comprehensive modern corporation law which it could not do with lines 5 and 6 still in existence.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [By Mr. Keen], page 11, delete lines 1 through 6, both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the fol-

22nd Days Proceedings—July 28, 1973

Following Section 23. Neither the state nor any political subdivision shall grant a perpetual franchise or privilege to any person or corporation; however, the legislature may authorize the organization of corporations for perpetual or indefinite duration. Every corporation shall be subject to dissolution forfeiture of its charter or franchise as provided by general law."

Explanation

Mr. Poyner Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this is principally a redraft of the section as proposed by the committee to give it better style and drafting and to add that with respect to dissolution or forfeiture that it could only be done by general law. It was the consensus of those who were concerned with this section that all the provisions contained in it as recommended by the committee should be retained and under the circumstances we suggest that the amendment as now drafted would meet all the points that were raised and I ask a favorable consideration of the amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Reeves Mr. Engineer and fellow delegates, my dad worked for the railroad at one time which I was growing up and I was always told to get out. As I was growing up one of the main things he told me was to get out from in front of trains and off the railroad track or you will get run over but I sometimes don't follow that advice. But in all honesty, this does not belong in the constitution. I feel that it is not necessary, I feel that is on a personal basis. I feel that the attorneys, a number of attorneys and I respect them very much but I didn't come here as an elected delegate to represent attorneys. I beat one pretty bad and I feel very strongly that we should not have a constitution representing special interest groups and this particularly does. I think this represents a portion thereof that really is to a large extent oriented around special interest legislation and I'm not for it. I realize that it was a compromise piece of legislation and I understand this but I would appreciate you voting with me and voting this down. Thank you.

[Previous version of this Amendment adopted by the House on 7/27/73. Deleted from the Constitution. Reprinted from the Minutes of the House, July 27, 1973.]

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poyner Section 24. State and District Officers, Impeachment, Conviction; Affect Section 24. All state and district officers whether elected or appointed shall be liable to impeachment for felony in office, gross misconduct or habitual drunkenness. All impeachments shall be by the House of Representatives. It requires the favorable vote of at least a majority of the elected members thereof. Impeachment shall be tried by the Senate. Two-thirds of the members elected to the Senate shall be necessary to convict. The Senate shall sit for said purposes whether or not the House is in session and may adjourn as it thinks proper. C. Judgment of conviction in impeachments shall remove and debar the person from holding any office under the State, but neither conviction nor acquittal shall prevent prosecution and punishment otherwise according to law. Impeachment shall suspend any officer except the Governor or acting Governor and the appointing authority shall make an interim appointment until a decision of impeachment.

Explanation

Mr. O'Neill Ladies and Gentlemen of the convention, the impeachment article as we have drafted is basically the same as contained in the old constitution the changes we have made are as follows: Our provision revised the present provision relating to grounds for impeachment by replacing the phrase "high crimes" with the word "felonies" and deleting "wisdemeanors, in office and favoritism." This deletes the disqualifications from practicing law if you are a judge, district attorney or an attorney general convicted. It changes the method of filling the office of a suspended official from appointing authority to Governor. The other changes that we have made is this eliminates the requirement that senators take the oath of affirmation. It removes the chief justice or associate from presiding over the trial. We felt that this was statutory material and that it could be handled by statutes. The impeachment provisions are a traditional power of the legislature and I think the section that we have drafted is coherent. I believe that it implies the power of the legislature and I believe that it is a good section and worthy of favorable adoption.

Amendments

Mr. Poyner Amendment proposed by Delegate Stagg to the proposal as follows: Amendment No. 1, page 1, at the beginning of line 8, delete the words "impeachment and".

Amendment No. 2, page 11, delete lines 7 through 26 both inclusive in their entirety.

Point of Information

Mr. Arnette This is a point of procedure. According to the rules of our convention the Committee on the Executive Department was to study impeachment according to Rule No. 49 1/2 and I don't think the Legislative Committee has a right to introduce anything now without leave of the convention.

Mr. Henry We attempted to resolve that through the Coordinating Committee on several occasions and were not able to resolve it but Mr. Stagg has his amendment here this morning which he is going to explain which could resolve it and I don't know of anything for us to do. We're going to have to vote on it one way or the other, Mr. Arnette.

Mr. Arnette Well the only thing I was wondering about. This wasn't a thing that the Coordinating Committee could even talk about because it is a definite rule. The Coordinating Committee can't suspend our rules.

Mr. Henry We're going to get a chance to vote on it so if you think the Legislative Committee was wrong then you support the Stagg amendments. Explain the amendments Mr. Stagg.

Explanation

Mr. Stagg Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this is not anything other than a matter of abiding by the rules. If you will look in your volume of the rules, in Rule 49, it is set up in Section A2, a Committee on the Executive Department which shall consider the offices comprising the Executive Department, reorganization, term of the governor and other elected officials and impeachment. The rules as I read it therefore can clearly be understood to place the impeachment article in the Executive Department Committee. The Executive Department Committee has prepared an impeachment article which will be taken up at the time that the bill on the Executive Department is before the House and I move a favorable adoption of the amendment in order to keep within the rules of the convention.

Further Discussion

Mr. O'Neill Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in strenuous opposition to this amendment. At a coordinating meeting of the Coordinating Committee in New Orleans, the minutes show that Mr. Stagg had no objection to the Legislative Committee handling this article. I submit to you that the model state constitution and almost every other state constitution had the power of impeachment in the legislative article, not in the executive article, and I submit to you that the executive article

22nd Days Proceedings—July 28, 1973

... it doesn't belong there. This is the power of the legislature. I believe that our committee has proper jurisdiction because it was given to us by the Coordinating Committee and I feel you will sustain us in our work. I think that by a valid effort on our part to write the impeachment article that you sustain us, and I feel that delusions of grandeur have no place in this convention and that by obstructing our work, we're keeping ourselves here longer today than is absolutely necessary. I ask you to let us pass this impeachment article and move on to the final sections of our draft and continue our work as we're supposed to be doing today.

Point of Order

Mr. Roy It makes me no difference personally whether we take this up in this legislative section or the executive but I think that allowing us to go ahead and start arguing who's going to take it... rather than arguing the merits of Mr. Stagg's amendment is dodging the issue. I think the convention as a whole ought to determine whether today we want to take it up right now under this section or whether we just want to boot it out and take it up when the executive thing comes up. I'm not for a lot of back and forth discussion on it.

Mr. Henry Your point is well taken but Mr. Roy I would remind you that is exactly what we are doing is determining whether or not they are going to take it up in the legislative proposal or in the executive proposal.

Mr. Roy It appears to me that by allowing Mr. Stagg to amend this particular section is going into the merits of the section itself and not the issue of who should take it up, whether the legislative section or the executive.

Mr. Henry Mr. Roy, it appears to the chair that it is six of one and half a dozen of the other. Mr. Roy, I'm not going to argue with you on the thing now.

Mr. Roy I don't want to argue. I want to make a motion because I want a joint issue on it and get it over with one way or the other. Can't I move that we, move that the matter be passed over and taken up in the executive session?

Mr. Henry You're going to have to delete it one way or the other because it's in the proposal Mr. Roy and that's what we're doing with the amendment. If you adopt the amendment then in effect you're saying we're going to pass over it because we're deleting it and then we'll take it up somewhere else. Mr. Arnette, why do you rise?

Point of Information

Mr. Arnette I was just wondering if it would be required for the Legislative Committee to move for suspension of the rules to allow us to consider this since it is against our rules.

Mr. Henry It is not against the rules Mr. Arnette. The rules say that the Executive Committee shall consider impeachment but the rules don't say that no other committee can resolve it and we have tried to resolve this problem between the Executive and Legislative Committee for about three months and we're going to have to do it by a vote of the convention.

Point of Information

Mr. Roemer Point of information Mr. Chairman. Is it your opinion from the Chair that the Legislative Committee had the right to examine impeachment?

Mr. Henry You're asking for an opinion. Under the rules I would think they did have the right to because we met in New Orleans and attempted to resolve the problem of impeachment and it was my impression at that time that the Legislative Committee was going to take it up.

Point of Information

Mr. Blair Point of Information or point of order: On May 2nd, 1973, Mr. Stagg was present at the Coordinating Committee in New Orleans, Louisiana, at the time the Executive Department was considering it, the Legislative Powers and Functions was considering it and the Judiciary Department. It was decided in that meeting that it would be assigned to Legislative Powers and Functions and that's how we have proceeded with it up until this time.

Point of Order

Mr. O'Neill Mr. Chairman I believe I was on the floor when Mr. Roy made his motion therefore it would be out of order.

Mr. Henry I never even recognized a motion Mr. O'Neill.

Point of Information

Mr. Schmitt I see before me and I believe you have a copy of Delegate Abraham's amendment and I believe this amendment is the total of the executive articles in its entirety, therefore by us considering this amendment, won't we be in effect considering the proposal of the Executive Committee and if we should defeat this and adopt yours we would be deciding it so I think we're really... wouldn't you consider this arguing about a lot to do about nothing?

Mr. Henry Are you addressing that to Mr. O'Neill or to the chair? I agree with you. I don't know who you are addressing the question to. Gentlemen we've got to proceed one way or the other. Why do you rise Mr. Stagg?

Mr. Stagg I rise in order to withdraw my amendment. I agree with Mr. Schmitt. The Abraham amendment is the language from the executive article and both articles can be considered...

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Gravel, et al.]. This is the amendment that has Mr. Gravel's name on it first. Amendment No. 1, page 11, delete lines 7 through 26 in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Section 24. Impeachment. Section 24 A. Any State and district official whether elected or appointed shall be liable to impeachment for commission or conviction of felonies or malfeasance during his term of office or for gross misconduct. B. All impeachments shall be by the House of Representatives and shall be tried by the Senate whose members shall be upon oath or affirmation that for that purpose, and a vote of two thirds of the Senators elected shall be necessary to convict. The Senate may sit for said purpose whether the House be in session or not and may adjourn as it thinks proper. Conviction upon impeachment shall result in immediate removal from office and shall prohibit the official from holding any office under the government of this state or any of its political subdivisions. Nothing herein shall prevent any other action, prosecution or punishment authorized by statute."

Explanation

Mr. Gravel Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this proposed amendment is placing in the legislative article of the constitution the exact provision that the Executive Committee had drafted to be inserted in its article. Frankly, insofar as Section A is concerned, I think that all it really does is in setting forth the grounds for impeachment that we come up with definable, discernible concepts so that there won't be any question as to what basis we have when an effort is made to impeach a public official. We have deleted some of the obsolete, archaic language that was in the 1921 constitution and provided that the grounds for impeachment shall be the conviction of felony or malfeasance during the term of office of any public official or gross misconduct, and frankly that could cover I think every area of culpability on the part of any public official. Yes, I yield to Mr. Drew.

22nd Days Proceedings—July 28, 1973

Questions

Mr. Drew Mr. Gravel, as written, would this apply to judges? There is no exclusion.

Mr. Gravel As written, it would unless there is some modification in the judiciary article that would be applicable to judges.

Mr. Drew The Executive Committee has provided means of removal of judges. Do you not think it would be advisable to exclude judges from this impeachment proceedings?

Mr. Gravel I think that probably there is going to have to be some provision made depending upon what other provisions are adopted in the constitution insofar as they might specifically relate to certain public officials.

Mr. Drew But I mean as your article is written it does not provide for any exclusions, does it?

Mr. Gravel Not at this point.

Mr. Kelly Mr. Gravel, in the third line of Section 24 A in your amendment, it says impeachment for commission or conviction of felonies. Would you give me your interpretation as to the distinction between commission or conviction?

Mr. Gravel That was one of the problems that we had in the committee. Some persons in the committee thought if a valid case could be made, even though there had not been any conviction of a felony but if a valid case could be made that a felony had been actually committed by the official, that was not absolutely essential to await the possibility of a court conviction which might not be obtained for a long period of time or might not be obtained at any time. In other words, if a charge could be made that a felony had actually been committed and if the felony was committed, that could form the basis for impeachment even though there hadn't been a judicial conviction of the public official.

Mr. Kelly Let me ask you this. In other words, assuming a man was under indictment and yet the legislature decided he hasn't been convicted but we're going on with impeachment proceedings, they in essence would be in a position more or less to determine, they would be doing the judging instead of a court. Is that correct?

Mr. Gravel That would be correct and one of the reasons for that Mr. Kelly, would be that if you didn't have that provision then you could permit perhaps a public official to be indicted and that indictment could be held for a long period of time so it could prevent the impeachment process from being undertaken, and this was a deliberate judgment and I think a good one made by the committee because the committee should be able to make that determination if otherwise the wheels of justice are not moving fast enough so as to accomplish...

Mr. Roemer Delegate Gravel, I notice, perhaps I'm incorrect, but it seems to me in the original committee proposal, Paragraph C, lines 23 to 26, they address themselves in the following manner to impeachment: "shall suspend any officer except the governor, acting governor, and the appointing authority shall make an interim appointment until decision of impeachment." Your amendment does not address itself to that problem. Could you explain why not?

Mr. Gravel It does not address itself to that problem because we felt that no one should be judged guilty simply because a charge had been filed against him. Consequently that's why it was deleted from the article as we prepared it.

Mr. Asseff Mr. Chairman, I simply wanted to call to the attention of the convention that we had eliminated that though I do agree with Mr. Gravel.

Mrs. Warren My question is real brief. I noticed in the proposal for the legislative branch, they mentioned drunkenness, habitual drunkenness, and in this one you do not. I would just like to know why, for the record.

Mr. Gravel Well, for the record, we left that out.

Mrs. Warren I mean why?

Mr. Gravel Frankly because we didn't think that it was easily ascertained whether or not a person might be drunk or whether or not that might interfere with the proper discharge of the duties of his office and so forth. I would think that habitual drunkenness in such a way as it would prevent a public official from performing the duties of this office would be covered generally under the malfeasance article of the code of, criminal code.

Mrs. Warren Thank you, I just wanted some information.

Mr. Conroy Mr. Gravel, as you know I had amendments proposed to the legislative article dealing with the problem of disbarment of impeached officials. Disbarment from practice of law. There was considerable concern in the Bar Association. I had received letters requesting that these amendments be made. Now I understand that it is the intention of this section with the reference to action as well as prosecution and punishment that an impeached judge for example, could be disbarred by proper disciplinary proceedings being brought against him by the Bar Association under this proposal. Is that correct?

Mr. Gravel That's correct Mr. Conroy. That's the reason we put in the word "action" in the second to last sentence.

Mr. Burns Mr. Gravel, inasmuch as impeachment is such a serious type... affects the person's whole life and so forth, especially an official... this word "commission" worries me in this respect. Suppose an official was impeached and he was later brought to trial and acquitted and exonerated by a jury. What position would he be in there?

Mr. Gravel I think those are two separate concepts completely. In other words I think there is that possibility Mr. Burns, but I think that always existed and always will exist whenever you have the impeachment process as part of the basic law. It's always possible that...

Mr. Burns I could, and this is not an assumption, I could very easily foresee this a lot of times in a trial of a criminal case, defense as an alibi. He wasn't even there. He didn't commit the crime. What would you do in that case, where the official that you have impeached and thrown out of office and disbarred, ruled on the trial of the case that he wasn't even the man that committed the offense? I mean, you've ruined his life.

Mr. Gravel Your contention there is just against any concept of impeachment.

Mr. Chairman, if I may, just a technical matter in the first line. The word "and" should be "or", "any state or district official". I ask permission to make that technical change. Should be "any state or district official" rather than "any state and", "there's no objection." I would like permission to make that technical change.

Further Discussion

Mr. O'Neill Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in support of the amendment and stress to you that our objections in the previous discussion was to placement of the section and not on the merits of the section itself. This amendment corresponds very nearly with what we had done and if I offended the Chairman or the members of the Executive Department Committee with my comments, let me assure you that because our committee felt so strongly about the placement that we felt like we had to argue strongly, and it was not on the merits of impeachment or the demerits. Thank you.

22nd Days Proceedings—July 28, 1973

Questions

Mr. Grier Mr. O'Neill, the term malfeasance here, does this interpret to include both misfeasance and nonfeasance in office?

Mr. O'Neill Let me ask my legal advisor, Mr. Grier. I assume that it does but let me check. I retract that statement, I'm advised it does not. It's malfeasance as stated.

Mr. Grier Could we have a definition of malfeasance. Exactly what does it include?

Mr. O'Neill Let me find my Black's Law Dictionary and I'll give you one. Mr. Grier, malfeasance is where an officer or official has committed a wrong in office. A malfeasance is interpreted as not doing something or not performing his duties.

Mr. Grier That's nonfeasance, nonperformance.

Mr. O'Neill I would say that nonfeasance and misfeasance are about the same, sir.

Mr. Gravel Mr. O'Neill, is it correct that under the provisions of Article 134 of the criminal code that nonfeasance and misfeasance are incorporated in the statutory offense of malfeasance in Louisiana? Malfeasance covers nonfeasance and misfeasance under our law, does it not?

Mr. O'Neill Yes sir, and I can answer that truthfully because I just studied that in law school.

Further Discussion

Mr. Landrum Mr. Chairman, delegates, I'm concerned about this impeachment proceedings. I really wonder just what power does the Senate have or the House of Representatives or the combined houses to really do anything other than expulsion. Many things that the felonies, malfeasance... it would appear to me that if a person goes to court, if a charge of this nature is committed, a crime rather of this nature is committed and the charge is filed in the courts, then the court would automatically find him guilty. I would think and he would automatically be removed from office. It just disturbed me to see something with many names of people are brought out unnecessarily. Now, I am very much concerned about whether or not we do the thing right. Maybe the impeachment proceeding is the correct way but I certainly wish I could be convinced more than I am now.

Questions

Mr. O'Neill Reverend Landrum, is it your understanding that an impeachment in the Senate is appealable to an appellate court? Appellate jurisdiction?

Mr. Landrum Mr. O'Neill, it would be appealable but the idea, you have exposed yourself before the entire public in an impeachment proceeding. I wonder whether or not the evidence could be used in a court of law. You are a student of law, I am not and maybe you can answer me on this.

Mr. [J.] Jackson Rev. Landrum, would you agree that the possibility does exist whereby a person is indicted, that you could have impeachment proceedings whereby the Senate and House confirms impeachment but that through the court process and due to the judicial process that this man is not guilty of the alleged offense which would be grounds for impeachment, so in effect what happens is you have a body of people trying someone before the court has actually found him guilty. Could you see even with the present situation that exists within our state relative to some state officials that, you know we could have basically started some impeachment proceedings without the courts rendering a decision. Further, would you also agree that the method of indictment which is primarily by grand juries have, in some cases, been abused and that grand juries have been utilized with some D.A.'s as a matter sometimes bringing some political pressures on candidates who were maybe in opposition political views. Would you agree? And that as the article presently is written suggests that maybe we all have in mind the things we feel that we ought to do, but maybe the way it is written is not the proper way or proper method in going about this. Would you agree?

Mr. Landrum Mr. Jackson, I certainly agree in part with what you are saying. It just seemed to me that if we have these branches of government then we should use those three branches of government. That's all I'm saying.

Mr. Schmitt Assuming that someone, as an example, a judge has been caught in the act of committing some type of a crime but through some type of legal technicality he should be found not guilty. Do you understand that in a criminal law you have to prove beyond a reasonable doubt and that certain evidence in certain situations can be excluded. As an example, in a narcotics case, it might be possible to exclude the hypodermic needle which is being used to be injected into a person's arm and in certain possession of heroin cases that the actual heroin itself can be excluded so that you don't have anything to go to trial with even though an individual might be caught with these things on him, and they have witnesses that this person had them on him but for purposes of criminal law he might not be able to be convicted. Would you feel that this person should have the right to decide the guilt or innocence of other people who are charged with these types of crimes?

Mr. Landrum Well, are you saying to me then that in an impeachment proceeding you don't have to be found guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

Further Discussion

Mrs. Warren Mr. Chairman, and fellow delegates, I sat and I listened. At one point I was blind but the light is beginning to come through. I am against this amendment because I don't believe that the legislature should have the right to impeach its fellow members; if they committed this, then let them go before the bar or just let me ask one of our fellow delegates concerning this, and he said it did not mean that this person would be imprisoned. I am sure that most of you will agree that one does not have to be behind bars to be imprisoned. As I listened to many of the legislators speak and talk about the disadvantages of being legislators and the hardships that they go through and on the other hand there are some of them that are still delegates here and seem to be dedicated and love their jobs very much. I think to give this into the hands of the legislators to do such damage to each other because on some instances legislators don't trust each other and then again they do. I don't trust them, I am not one of them. I don't trust them to hold in their hands the balance of someone else's political future. I am going to ask you to vote against this amendment.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: 88-9. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment proposed by Delegate Drew is as follows:

Amendment No. 1 In floor Amendment No. 1 proposed by Delegate Gravel, et. al.

22nd Days Proceedings—July 28, 1973

And adopted by the convention today on the 3 of that amendment, after the words "impeachment for" and before the words "conviction of felonies" delete the words "commission of".

Should be "commission or", I believe.
"commission or" instead of "commission of".

Explanation

Mr. Drew Mr. Chairman, and members of the convention, what I am doing is deleting the words "commission of". I don't know what "commission of" amounts to. If that means indictment, if that means bill of information, if that means affidavit, then I think we are going against the entire principles of our judicial system in convicting a man before he is entitled to a trial. On the second argument against leaving "commission of" in there is this. As I understand it, what an impeachment would amount to would be a hearing before the Senate and with a two-thirds vote of the Senate he would be convicted of a felony. We have separation of the branches of government, and by an impeachment it certainly can amount to conviction of that felony. It is something that rarely ever, and may never come up and I don't want to make a big issue of it. It has come up only one time that I can recall in the history of this state on an impeachment proceeding. But I do see where there could be considerable abuse. If we are going to use the indictment, the bill of information without any conviction as the basis for grounds for impeachment, I think it leads to political chicanery and I think it should be deleted. I don't think it's any major issue but what "commission of" means, I don't know and I think you can explain the definition of "commission of".

Questions

Mr. Arnette Mr. Drew, do you realize that impeachment and removal from office as the result of being convicted of the indictment is something entirely different from conviction of a crime?

Mr. Drew Technically, Greg, yes.

Mr. Arnette Well, it's not technically because in an impeachment you merely are removed from office. If you are convicted of a crime, you go to jail.

Mr. Drew And are barred from any further office.

Mr. Arnette That's right.

Mr. Drew Which could very possibly be much more severe than a conviction or sentence under a conviction. I don't think you can explain to me what the term "commission of" means. I think it's too vague.

Mr. Arnette "Commission of" is simply if the Senate thinks that a crime has been committed. If two-thirds of the Senators think a crime is committed, that should be grounds for impeachment.

Mr. Drew Have they not then taken over the files of...

Mr. Henry Mr. Drew, please let him ask the questions.

Mr. Avant Mr. Drew, can you envision a situation where a public official has been indicted and impeachment charges were brought against him and the criminal charges were still pending. He would have to either prejudice his defense of his criminal case or else not defend the impeachment proceedings because he could be compelled if he was to defend himself before the Senate, to disclose evidence that his attorney and people representing him really shouldn't be disclosed until the trial of the criminal case. Isn't that right?

Mr. Drew As I understand it, Mr. Avant, that is exactly right and I know of no provision of rules of evidence that are applicable to the hearing before the Senate.

Mr. Weiss Delegate Drew, could you envision a situation where a criminal offense is so serious the man was under indictment but not yet convicted and if this was beyond a reasonable doubt, couldn't he then be impeached on a gross misconduct charge?

Mr. Drew I think that is very possible, Doctor.

Further Discussion

Mr. Gravel Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I believe that if Mr. Drew's proposed amendment is adopted that we may as well just drop the impeachment article. I don't believe there is anybody in this convention that feels more strongly than I do about the protection of the rights of persons who are charged with offenses. But if we do not leave in the impeachment article the word "commission of a felony," then for all practical purposes we are not going to be able to make this article effective for two reasons primarily. Number one, a person could not be removed from office even though he might have admitted his guilt and admitted that he committed a felony unless and until he was actually convicted of the offense. Now the span of time between even an admission of guilt and an ultimate final conviction in the event there is a court contest or a prosecution may be 1, 2, 3, or 4 years.

I had a case one time for a public official that was indicted every time the grand jury met and he stayed in office for over four years. And under the provision as suggested by Mr. Drew, he never could have been impeached in the event the legislature failed to prefer to do so. Since the constitution of this state have held that where the use of the word "conviction" as it is contained both in our present constitution and in this proposal here exists... where that word is used that means a final conviction. And you may very well have the serious question as to whether or not any impeachment proceedings to be instituted under every appellate course had been run by the person charged with a criminal offense. All I am saying to you is this, that if you don't use the word "commission" then you are not going to have an effective article. Impeachment, the concept of impeachment means only the charge that is made after due deliberation by the House of Representatives. After that charge has been made there has got to be a full hearing by the Senate, an open and a public hearing by the Senate and two-thirds of the Senators are going to have to agree that grounds for impeachment exist. And I submit to you that all of the safeguards that are necessary to protect the rights of a person so charged are ingrained in and made part of this proposal. So I simply close by saying, either this provision should be adopted as it is contained in the amendment that was agreed upon by all of those who proposed amendments except Mr. Drew or we are not going to have any effective impeachment procedure in the constitution. That to me ladies and gentlemen is the choice we have got to make.

Questions

Mr. Weiss Delegate Gravel, could you envision some trumped-up charges against the legislator that might be so perfected that they would be then tried before a legislative hearing such as the Senate and not a judicial body whereby decisions are made that might exclude that party and make him impeachable?

Mr. Gravel No sir, I couldn't conceive of that possibility coming about in the state of Louisiana. As a matter of fact when you get right down to it, I can't recall where we have ever had any impeachment proceedings anyway. And this really is more a threat, a sort of [...] so to speak over the head of the public officials rather than it is a reality. And that is really I think all it's worth in the new constitution. But I think it is important to have this provision in the constitution so that that threat does exist.

22nd Days Proceedings—July 28, 1973

Mr. Lambert Mr. Gravel, let me ask you this, under your amendment, I want to read it right quick under Section 24-A. Any state and district official whether elected or appointed shall be liable to impeachment for commission or conviction of felonies or misdemeanors during his term of office or for gross misconduct. If the word commission would be removed would not "or for gross misconduct" still serve the same purpose, possibly?

Mr. Gravel It would serve no purpose, because you can't be convicted of gross misconduct. There is no such offense.

Mr. Lambert It says "or".

Mr. Gravel Well, if I understand your question correctly, I don't believe you could have any conviction...oh, I see what you mean, yes.

Mr. Lambert Your answer is yes.

Mr. Gravel Yes, that is correct.

Further Discussion

Mr. Burson I am against this amendment for two practical reasons and the reason. Historically, the power of impeachment has resided with the legislature in this country and that is set out in the United States Constitution. The power of impeachment resides with the Congress. And remember when we talk about the process of impeachment, just because you are impeached does not mean that you are successfully ousted from office. Impeachment procedure is simply a method of trial as it were. Where the House decides whether or not the trial should be held and the Senate holds the trial. Now this is a historic procedure in the United States and I think it is historically justified and vindicated. There are two practical reasons why I would be against this amendment of all, practically speaking, if you look at Section 1 of Article IX of the present State Constitution. It provides for impeachment for high crimes and misdemeanors in office, it does not say for conviction of high crimes and misdemeanors. So we have had a situation since 1921 at least which would have permitted the abuses that the proponents of this amendment fear and they have not happened and as a practical matter, I cannot conceive of trumped-up charges against a member of the legislature which would successfully pass the House and get a two-thirds vote of his fellow legislators in the Senate to have him ousted from office. That is just very difficult if not impossible for me to conceive. The final practical matter is, that the process of conviction involves not only the appeal procedure that Mr. Gravel talked about but it also involves the willingness of the district attorney to prosecute the case in the first place. I don't know whether you people who are not lawyers in here realize the power the district attorney's office has in determining such matters. It is entirely possible that a person could be indicted by a grand jury and the district attorney, for one reason or another decide not to prosecute that indictment and just let it sit there in his files forever. Even if it involved a manslaughter or a murder or some other serious felony charge. So that you might not ever get to trial in the first place and I think that is practical consideration that you simply can't ignore in this incidence.

Questions

Mr. Drew Mr. Burson, could you tell this body any rules of evidence or protection of a defendant's rights that are applicable to an impeachment proceeding?

Mr. Burson No, Mr. Drew, I can't no more than I could that the president of the United States would be protected by rules of evidence if he were tried by the Senate. But I think that that is a historic exception to the rules of evidence and we know that the rules of evidence change all the time too. The federal courts have just come out with a sweeping change of all federal, civil and criminal rules of evidence.

Mr. Drew And hearsay evidence would be admissible to no end?

Mr. Burson Well in federal court now, hearsay evidence will be admissible if I understand the new rules correctly.

Mr. Drew I am not talking about the federal courts, I am talking about the state of Louisiana. I wanted to ask this question to Mr. Gravel because he is a defense attorney and you are an assistant district attorney I understand.

Mr. Burson Yes, sir.

Mr. Drew But if a man was impeached, because of a pending bill of information or indictment on a serious crime the indictment was on, what chance do you think you would have of getting a fair trial which may subject him to life or twenty years in the penitentiary if after he had been impeached?

Mr. Burson Well, I think certainly the justice in the question of the president's possible impeachment, that that impeachment would definitely have an effect on a trial. I am not sure that a trial might not be precluded because he would not be able to get a fair trial, but that would be a problem for the criminal prosecutor to worry about, not for the legislature.

Mr. Roy Mr. Burson, there is nothing in this provision that prohibits the Senate from setting up or the House from setting up rules of evidence and procedure and what have you which would guarantee to the person charged with the gross misconduct or what have you, due process of law, or both with respect to substantive and procedural, is that right?

Mr. Burson That is correct, Mr. Roy. And I can't conceive of the members of the Senate or the House denying to one of their fellow legislators, let's say or any public official due process of law on the subject.

Mr. Roy And if they did, don't you think that a federal court could step right in and quash the whole matter because the substantive and procedural due process of law was denied to the person?

Mr. Burson I personally have no doubt about that.

Mr. LeBlew Mr. Burson, if a public official were impeached by the legislature, before his trial came up in court he would be out of office, is that correct?

Mr. Burson Yes, sir.

Mr. LeBlew If when his trial in court came up he was found to be not guilty of what the legislature impeached him on, would he be reinstated in office or would he be out for the rest of his life as this paragraph suggests?

Mr. Burson I don't see where the finding of the jury in the criminal case that he was not guilty would abrogate the legislative action. I think he would be out.

Further Discussion

Mr. Hayes Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, reluctantly I voted for the immunity of the delegates to come to and from the convention or the only reason I thought maybe somebody might be picked up and not be able to vote on certain issues. The history is ok, but it appears to me that every crime committed would be committed and settled in the district in the state where you would have a district attorney. I can't see any need for impeachment at all. It appears that we are trying to take over the judicial process and maybe somebody to the legislature to have trials. People would have a right to appeal all of this to a court of law in the first place. And if a trial is committed in a district, how do I like the person to be tried of would be the district attorney, if he didn't prosecute. And I think you already have a procedure for that being handled by the state attorney general's office. So I think the person to remove there would be the D.A., if he didn't prosecute a crime that was committed in his district. We have investigations going on now in some malfeasance, they claim in the agriculture department which is being handled by the district attorney. So if you convict a man of a crime, he is going to be serving a jail sentence. He doesn't need the time in the legislature, I think the entire section should be wiped out.

22nd Days Proceedings—July 28, 1973

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment rejected: 38-56. Motion to re-consider tabled.]

Amendments

Mr. Poynter The next amendment is offered up by Delegate Roy.
Amendment No. 1. On page 11 delete lines 7 through 26 in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Section 24. Impeachment. A. Any state or district official whether elected or appointed shall be liable to impeachment for commission or conviction of felonies or malfeasance during his term of office or for gross misconduct. B. All impeachments shall be by the House of Representatives and shall be tried by the Senate whose members shall be upon oath or affirmation for that purpose and a vote of two-thirds of the Senators elected shall be necessary to convict. The Senate may sit for such purposes whether the House be in session or not and may adjourn as it thinks proper. Conviction shall result in immediate removal from office. Nothing herein shall prevent any other action, prosecution or punishment authorized by statute.

And with your leave Mr. Roy, I have added Amendment No. 2 to strike out the Gravel amendment.

Explanation

Mr. Roy Well, Mr. Chairman, and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I of course supported Mr. Gravel's amendment but I feel that it is just much too stringent in what the effects of it are. I simply am taking out of the Gravel amendment the notion that one who is convicted or impeached rather, one who is impeached would be forever barred from holding any public office thereafter. Now I am for him being removed immediately from the office that he has been holding upon conviction of impeachment. But let me tell you what this amounts to. You could have a judge who would, let's say, hit the bottle a little too much and ultimately get impeached for being essentially an alcoholic and then ask the cure or any public official take the cure. And that man could never hold public office again, appointed or elected. Now, I just and I have said it before, I just happen to be a Jacksonian Democrat and I believe the people in their wisdom have the right to select who their leaders will be, good or bad or whether I agree with it or don't agree with it. But that is how I must stand because philosophically that is what I believe in. That is what I think has made this country great. That a person may run for office and be elected by the people and certainly a person may be rehabilitated for any particular crime. Now for illustration, if Huey Long had been convicted of the impeachment proceedings brought against him, he would have been forever barred from holding any public or appointive office thereafter under Gravel's amendment unless it is amended further by mine. I just cannot accept that as a human being who believes in the right of people to choose their own leaders nor can I believe in it as a person who believes that people may rehabilitate themselves. For that reason I offer up this amendment.

Questions

Mr. Vick Mr. Roy, what if the governor granted a full pardon?

Mr. Roy Apparently he still couldn't hold office again, it is not excluded in this matter and I just don't...and in Gravel's it is not at all so I really don't know whether that would help out or not.

Mr. Vick Are you sure?

Mr. Roy Well, I am not sure, but I don't want to take a chance because it says the conviction of impeachment forever precludes. That is what it says. I don't think the governor's pardon could do any good for the guy.

Mr. Vick Well, basically it would have to be resolved by the courts though, would it not?

Mr. Roy Well, it may be, but I want mine to go further than that. I don't want a man to have to get a pardon. I want the man if he has been impeached for some reason and is later a citizen and earning his pay and doing his work, I don't see why the people can't elect him if they choose to.

Mr. Avant Mr. Roy, let's suppose in the heat of political passion the Senate or the House or the legislature felt the man had committed a crime, at the same time some district attorney somewhere thought he had committed a crime, he was indicted, he was impeached and he was removed from office and then say a year or a year and a half elapsed the man was tried, he was completely exonerated, he was found not guilty and then the public, everybody in the state of Louisiana, said you know that man really didn't do those things that the House and the Senate said he did. Would that man ever again be able to hold public office in this state?

Mr. Roy Not under Gravel's amendment, but under mine, he would.

Mr. Chatelain Mr. Roy, would this...the amendment as it now stands, the Gravel amendment. If an attorney or notary public was convicted by the legislature, could he go back home and practice as an attorney or a notary public?

Mr. Roy I don't think Mr. Gravel's precludes him from practicing law, all it does, is that it says he may never hold office again.

Mr. Chatelain All right. Thank you.

Mr. Stovall Mr. Roy, in the case of the extreme case that Mr. Avant, the delegate, Jack Avant just raised, that situation could be corrected could it not by a constitutional amendment?

Mr. Roy Yes, Reverend Stovall, if you could get enough people to amend the constitution for a specific individual but I would think you would be in favor of rehabilitation Reverend...you know, the sinners coming back to the fold.

Further Discussion

Mr. Abraham Mr. Chairman, and fellow delegates, the question was just asked that suppose a person in the heat of political passion were convicted or impeached by the Senate and then the courts exonerated him, so you are prohibiting him from holding an office. Well, let's look at the other side of the coin. Where there is no doubt but that...rather there is very little doubt that the man has committed an offense. And the Senate did deliberate carefully. But through some technicality he may have been acquitted by the court. And what do we do in that situation there. I think the thing to consider here, is that this is the threat to make the public official toe the line, always. Even though there is a question and there is a possibility of a person being an alcoholic and he being rehabilitated, this is a threat to him to keep from becoming an alcoholic. If you remove the provision that he can't hold future public office, let's look at the possibility of a person being impeached. And then simply being reappointed the next day, right back into an office or a similar office. You have got this to consider too, that this could work against it. I think that the amendment as originally written, and as submitted by Mr. Gravel is correct. That we must have some threat to hold over all public officials in order to make them perform properly in office which includes conduct, drinking or committing any kind of an offense that would say that you can be removed from office. And I would be against the Roy amendment and I think we should leave the Gravel amendment as it is.

22nd Days Proceedings—July 28, 1973

Questions

Mrs. Warren Senator, wouldn't you say that it would be better...

Mr. Abraham Thank you Mrs. Warren but I am not a Senator.

Mrs. Warren Well, I am sorry, I apologize. I still would like to get to the point, wouldn't you think that it would be better to have one guilty man go free than to have an innocent man convicted?

Mr. Abraham Say that again, now.

Mrs. Warren What do you believe would be worse-- to have one innocent man convicted or one guilty man go free?

Mr. Abraham Well, I would hate to see any person who is innocent convicted. But this is a double-edged sword too. It works both ways you see.

Mrs. Warren Which one...

Mr. Abraham Which would you rather see, ten guilty people go free...

Mrs. Warren I would rather see ten guilty people go free than to see one innocent man suffer.

Mr. Abraham It is a double-edged sword, Mrs. Warren.

Mrs. Warren If you asked me my opinion, I would rather see twenty guilty people go free than to see one innocent man...

Mr. Tapper Mr. Abraham, isn't it a fact that if a person commits murder, that...and he is convicted, and sentenced to life imprisonment, that he can be pardoned by the Pardon Board?

Mr. Abraham Yes, I think so.

Mr. Tapper And in that instance could he not run for public office?

Mr. Abraham If I understand the law, when you are pardoned you are completely exonerated.

Mr. Tapper And he is restored his citizenship and he can run and be elected to public office. Where as here a man may be guilty of misconduct in office of public drunkenness or what have you and then he could never again run for public office, isn't that a fact?

Mr. Abraham I think you are missing the point though, the intent of this is a threat over the man to make him toe the line in office.

Mr. Aertker Mr. Abraham, you actually believe that we ought to have laws that once a man does something that destroys his political life, that he never has an opportunity to hold public office anymore, is that correct?

Mr. Abraham Say that again, Bob.

Mr. Aertker That once a man does something that causes him to be impeached, that he never has another opportunity in his life to ever represent or be in public life again?

Mr. Abraham I think under the impeachment proceedings that is as it should be. If he is impeached, then he should not run for public office again.

Mr. Aertker Even though the majority of the people that he represents think that he should be given that opportunity, you still think that he should be denied that?

Mr. Abraham I think we should consider that fact that we have already said previously in this article that public office is a trust and it is not to be violated. And I think when that man violates that trust he should not be allowed to hold office.

Mr. [A.] Jackson In response to Mr. Avant's question, Reverend Stovall says that possibly to correct that kind of situation is to institute a constitutional amendment. Now it would seem to me and would you agree that if the House and Senate impeached him, and that any amendments to the constitution must be made in the regular resolution in the House and Senate that it would be almost impossible to get a constitutional amendment to correct that problem?

Mr. Abraham That I couldn't answer.

Mr. Juneau Mr. Abraham, I don't often agree with Mr. Roy but I think his point is a valid one. Are you aware of the provision in the executive proposal with regard to pardon and so forth where it says, "except in the cases of conviction upon impeachment, the governor may reprieve". Which would mean that if you would have an impeachment proceeding you couldn't pardon, commute the sentence or anything of that nature?

Mr. Abraham Yes, that is right.

Mr. Juneau Well, then would you still favor your provision, what you are advocating in view of the provision that is going to be advocated by the Executive Committee?

Mr. Abraham If I remember the language that it says that except in cases of impeachment you can have pardon.

Mr. Juneau That is right, because in other words, if you have an impeachment proceeding, you will never be pardoned, you will never have a commutation of sentence no matter what the circumstances may be.

Mr. Abraham You will not be able to hold office again.

Further Discussion

Mr. Jack Mr. Chairman, and members, I was one of the co-authors of Mr. Gravel's amendment and I am for leaving it like that and I am against Mr. Roy's amendment. Now I want to correct one thing, and that is why I couldn't ask the question, different things came up. Now Mr. Roy is talking about the drunkard or alcoholic. Now that is not in Mr. Gravel's. In the original material for this you had a number of things for impeachment. You had for felonies, incompetency, we took out incompetency because that is too hard to define. We took out corruption, we took out extortion, we took out oppression in office, we used gross misconduct and we used a new one we put in malfeasance, that is not in the regular material. Now the reason...and we came down here as a group to discuss it, I suggested they take out this habitual drunkenness, that is recognized in most instances as an illness and we have other ways of removing those people. We are leaving here three very serious types of things commissions or conviction of felonies, malfeasance during the term of office and gross misconduct. Now we have got to try to keep public office as good and as clean as possible. And if a person is the felon he should not be there. If he is guilty of malfeasance in office he should not be there. If he is guilty of gross misconduct he shouldn't be there. Now, the privilege of serving the people has certain reservations in the way I look at it. If you serve the people, they trust you, they give you these positions of trust, of honor, and of carrying out their destiny then you should not commit a felony, you should not be guilty of malfeasance in office and you shouldn't be guilty of gross misconduct. If you do those things you are not fit to serve, you have been given your chance, you should not serve again. Now as to being innocent, this thing bothering you, we can't always wait for a trial on those things. The next thing you can be convicted by a jury and hanged when they used to hang you and turn out innocent. Nothing is fool proof, you read of people convicted by juries with prejudice, serve twenty, thirty, to forty years and then found to be innocent. But those are unusual and exceptional cases. I think that if a person was convicted upon an impeachment and it was later discovered he was entirely innocent and it could be proven, your courts could go back into it and set aside this conviction. They set aside other types of convictions in and day out after many, many years. So that little far-fetched chance does not bother me a bit. Impeachment and conviction is a criminal law and that is why it is narrowed to three things that I have named. And incidently, I like this little football system of having a get together, call the signals and anybody, like I wasn't asked down, I didn't have an amendment but I came down here so I could discuss it. And I think these huddles will do good for anybody that has a question and Mr. Chairman, I think that is a good thing you suggested and speeds it up. So I ask you to turn down these amendments. Thank you.

22nd Days Proceedings—July 28, 1973

Vice Chairman Alexander in the Chair

Further Discussion

Mr. Arnette I can't tell you how much I do oppose this amendment. The reason is, that we are not talking about Joe Blow or John Q. Public, or somebody else out there that maybe has committed a crime when he was in office and pardoned, can come back and run for office. We are talking about a person who is in a position of public trust. A public official who betrayed that trust to the people and then he decided that he wants to run again, there is no way that we ought to let someone who has betrayed the public trust once to ever even run for office again. And I definitely oppose Mr. Roy's amendment. And I think this is something everyone ought to consider, we're not talking about just one particular individual, that's an individual citizen. This is a public officer.

Questions

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Arnette, do you realize you said that this person is in the public trust, well do you realize that he could be convicted on a felony or some kind of gross misconduct that has nothing to do with his representing his people? I mean you can be convicted of a felony in Shreveport, Louisiana that has nothing to do with representing your people yet you discuss it. I still might want you to represent them. Do you see where this public trust issue doesn't necessarily apply to every conviction?

Mr. Arnette I think it does, I think that all public officers have a duty to obey the law and if they disobey the law they have violated the public's trust.

Mr. Anzalone Well you may... I respect your opinion but I feel that don't you think that possibly a conviction of a felony or some kind of misconduct that has nothing to do with his representing the people, that should not affect the trust in his people at all, can't you realize that?

Mr. Arnette I don't agree with you.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

Further Discussion

Mr. Newton I rise in support of the Roy amendment principally because I believe in the right of the people to decide for themselves who they want to represent them. And I would like to point out just very briefly, that impeachment could be totally and completely politically motivated, as I believe was the impeachment efforts in the case of Huey Long. And if such an impeachment which did not involve any crimes but somebody was impeached, say my district attorney and the people in my district still wanted him to be the district attorney, I think it is the right of the people to have whom they want to represent them. And I don't think we ought to deny the people this right, for all times. And I urge you to accept the Roy amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Gravel Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I just want to make one point clear and I am authorized to say that the position that I am stating also is that of Reverend Stovall's. I think that in view of the fact that we do have a provision in the proposed Executive Department Article that deals with pardon to the effect that there shall be no pardon by the governor or commutation of any kind in cases where there has been conviction upon impeachment. That the concept that Mr. Roy has in his proposed amendment of course is a valid one and one that we should either accept now or that we are going to have to consider further on it during the convention as to whether we want to eliminate the language that I have just stated as in the pardoning article. In other words, I want to make it clear that some of us definitely do have the view that there should be some method by which a person convicted upon impeachment is granted pardon or release if proper rehabilitation of course has been made.

Questions

Mr. Schmitt I've prepared an amendment to this section which would limit the period of time the person would be prevented from holding office either by appointment or election to a period of ten years from the date of removal. Do you think that this would satisfy some of those problems?

Mr. Gravel Well, I really think that the best way to handle it would be under the pardoning authority that the governor might have because in effect the conviction upon impeachment is in the nature of the conviction of a crime, in my judgment.

Mr. Schmitt In other words, after they had a conviction by the Senate, then the governor would have the right to come back and release the man and let him go back and hold office again. Is that what you're saying?

Mr. Gravel Just like he could do right now in the case of conviction of crime. Absolutely.

Mr. Schmitt Do you think that this is correct that the governor should have the right to override the conviction of a crime in the case of the public trust case even though a person might have been convicted of say, a murder or some other type of serious crime, that the governor should have the right to come back and allow this man to hold office and that the next day that he would have the right to go ahead and appoint this man to office? That's what Roy's amendment would do.

Mr. Gravel Well, I don't think that Roy's amendment has anything to do with the governor.

Mr. Schmitt Roy's amendment would allow this man to remain in office.

Mr. Gravel No, Roy's amendment requires that he be removed from office.

Mr. Schmitt But, that the next day the governor could appoint this man to another position of public trust. There's no prevention in here from the gov-error doing that.

Mr. Gravel I just made the statement, Mr. Schmitt, that I thought that either we would have to adopt this provision to maintain the concept, or that we should adopt this provision to maintain the concept, but that we were going to have to modify the article on pardoning. I think that every person convicted of an offense or convicted upon impeachment should have the right to rehabilitate himself and to be pardoned.

Mr. Schmitt But doesn't the Roy amendment allow him to rehabilitate himself overnight? And let the governor appoint the person to another position, maybe even making more money than he was making the day before.

Mr. Gravel The Roy amendment would permit that to be done, but I don't think the governor would ever do that without committing political suicide. I think that we need to deal in realities and not speculation of that kind...

Mr. Arnette Mr. Gravel, are you aware that the present constitution prevents someone forever from holding office once they're impeached?

Mr. Gravel I am aware of that.

Mr. Arnette So in other words, this amendment would change the present status. Is that correct?

Mr. Gravel That is correct. It also changes the grounds for impeachment.

Mr. Nunez In your opinion, Mr. Gravel, would it minimize the present stipulation in the constitution that he shall not hold office any longer? It would be a lesser degree...

Mr. Gravel Well, as I understand it, the proposal by Mr. Roy would result in a person who is convicted upon impeachment would be immediately removed from office, and it does not say that he shall thereafter be prohibited from holding office, except of course, that the Roy amendment does not remove from the language that has been adopted the authority of the legislature to prescribe punishment or the actions that might be taken upon the public official. It still leaves other possibilities with the legislature.

Mr. Nunez Can you recall how many impeachments we've had in this state since 1921?

Mr. Gravel I can't recall any. I don't believe there have been any.

Further Discussion

Mr. Stagg Mr. Chairman and delegates, I rise in opposition to the Roy amendment. Impeachment is a serious charge. It is such of a serious nature that it is rarely used. But it is a remedy possessed by the people of Louisiana against misgovernment and against possible crooked public officials. Do you believe that a public official owes to the people of this state a higher order of trust than the man on the street? Do you for instance believe that a public official who quietly and surreptitiously steals from the public treasury has been guilty of a higher crime than the man who robs the corner grocery store? Normally, in the grocery store you can accurately obtain an estimate of what was taken. From the public treasury you rarely ever find out what was taken. Examine carefully the proposed amendment by Mr. Roy. This amendment is wrong. The language as adopted originally places all public officials on notice. It places all candidates for office on notice. It says this very clearly: "Watch your conduct while you are dealing with the public's business". And this impeachment article as now in the draft of this constitution says loudly and clearly, "If you violate the public trust you will not thereafter hold public office again". That is as it should be.

Further Discussion

Mr. Schmitt I rise in opposition to Mr. Roy's amendment. I feel that Mr. Roy's amendment takes the entire guts out of everything that we've done this morning. The one important effect which we had before, and one thing which is probably the greatest penalty which could be given to an individual who has desires to be in the political field, is the denial of this right to go into that area. I am not sure whether I'll go along with the concept of forever because, as the song says, forever is a long, long, time. I've proposed an amendment which would place the period of time between the date of removal from office rather than forever. I believe that it is possible for a person to become rehabilitated. I don't believe in the Roy amendment because I believe that the Roy amendment allows for instant rehabilitation whereby a person is removed from office one day and the governor or a mayor or a police jury can appoint this person to take from the public trough the very next day. That is one of my primary objections to Roy's amendment. I'm sure that Roy's amendment was very well intentioned, but I don't believe that it accomplishes what he hopes that it does. I feel that one of the strong weapons which we presently have under the original amendment is that it prevents a person from attaining a desire of which they might have had during their entire lives. It keeps them from being in the forefront of the public. It prevents them from holding themselves out in this position of trust. Many people have devoted their lives to politics. Many people have devoted their entire energies to politics. I feel that the denial of this right to run for office or to be in a position of public trust for a period of ten years under my amendment is a reasonable one. I do not feel that the denial of this position of public trust forever is one insofar as you might have a young person in their 30's or 40's who maybe at some later date might want to run for office and perhaps after this position... would something desire to be in this and they should not be denied this right forever. But I do feel that just to allow them to run within a short period of time would be very detrimental to our entire intent. I have very strong feelings about this and I feel that each and every one of us should consider this matter very thoroughly before we go along with the Roy amendment, which upon its face seems very well intentioned but the effect of it may be to remove the entire guts, the entire teeth, from everything that we have done this morning. What's to prevent this man who's immediately removed from office from being one of the candidates for that same office when they have the new election and because he's in a position of strength, suppose he's a senator, his name would be very well known as Senator XYZ. His name would be very well known. He would have the greatest chance of being elected, even though he had been just ejected by his particular house of the legislature. Therefore, I feel that we should reject the Roy amendment and I'd appreciate your consideration of my amendment when it comes forward.

Questions

Mr. Burns Mr. Schmitt, you said that you think that a person, after he's once been impeached, should be entitled to rehabilitate himself but you think he shouldn't have that right until after ten years?

Mr. Schmitt I'm saying that it should be some type of reasonable period of time. I don't believe that it can be something instantaneous where a person is impeached one day, and the governor could have the right to appoint that person to another position of public trust the next day.

Mr. Burns What if it should develop like has been brought out in previous debate and questioning, that after he was impeached it was determined in a criminal trial that he was absolutely innocent of the charges. Would you think under those circumstances he should be disbarred or prohibited from running for office for ten years after his innocence had been completely established?

Mr. Schmitt In a criminal trial you do not establish a person's innocence for the purpose for which we're talking about right now. In a criminal trial you're talking about a proof beyond a reasonable doubt, and you have a lot of evidence which is restricted and not allowed in a court of law which would be allowed in an impeachment proceeding. Number one, hearsay information which would not be allowed in a court of law but would be allowed in here. Number two, evidence which was obtained by ...

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

Mr. Roy I want to bring up just three points with respect to this public trust notion to Mr. Stagg and others. There's nothing in Mr. Gravel's amendment or Stagg's amendment, whatever have you, that says that the person impeached and found guilty of violating his public trust can ever hold office again. That is if he stole out of the treasury. The fact of the matter is that the person better make darned sure he doesn't accidentally ever commit a crime negligently, for instance, negligent homicide. Now, that has nothing to do with public trust. A man is driving his car and accidentally runs into another car and somebody is killed. That has nothing to do with the public trust that he may have as a legislator or senator. He hasn't stolen anything out of the till, and the choice goes against my grain to think that we can be so sanctimonious that we would say that an impeachment conviction means never, never any court looking into it and saying he was innocent, and you can't come back and undo what you've done, that is, he may never serve the public again. Notwithstanding, it's the choice of the public to make and the choice of this convention as far as I'm concerned. I just want to say one other thing. There is nothing in my amendment that prohibits the legislature, nothing that prohibits the legislature from then imposing any other restrictions on holding office as it presently does. All my amendment does is to take out of the constitution the notion that the legislature may never deal with this issue because we have decided in our own little self secure way that a person who does a wrong even if it's not connected with his job and he happens to be impeached, erroneously or not, may never serve office again against the wishes of the people who have the choice to make.

Questions

Mr. Abraham Mr. Roy, I'm sure that you recognize that impeachment is a very serious thing and do you really believe that a person would be impeached for accidentally committing a wrong?

Mr. Roy It can very well be if he's politically unpopular at the time.

Mr. Abraham Do you think that it would actually happen? Has it happened?

Mr. Roy Well, Andrew Johnson who became President of the United States was almost impeached, convicted of impeachment by one vote because of political reasons, because of the radical Republicans in Congress. Like some of the others, I know.

Mr. Jenkins Mr. Roy, if a politician was stealing from the public and was caught and convicted in a court of law, would he be allowed to continue serving in office?

Mr. Roy No, he would be impeached...he could be removed from office for that particular reason.

Mr. Jenkins No, but the mere fact that he was convicted and sentenced, and a felony would prevent him from being in office, wouldn't it?

Mr. Roy That's right. That's the inconsistency in this whole thing. He could be convicted in a court of law for stealing from his own office and still serve the rest of his term.

Mr. Jenkins No, what I'm saying is that once you're a felon, you can't hold office. Isn't that correct?

Mr. Roy Well, yes...

Mr. Jenkins Well, all right, well what the point seems to me people keep saying that if you're impeached you can continue serving in office at some later time. But if you are also convicted of a felony you cannot, isn't that correct?

Mr. Roy That's true.

Mr. Jenkins So there is no reason to give this permanent bar against serving in office simply for impeachment when if you are convicted of a felony that will happen anyway.

Mr. Roy That's right.

Mr. Schmitt His point was that once a person committed a felony he could not run for office. Can't the governor pardon this individual whether he's a public official or not?

Mr. Roy Yes, the governor has the right to pardon anybody but someone who's been impeached.

Mr. Schmitt And then he would be an elector once again and have the right to run for office, wouldn't he?

Mr. Roy If he's been pardoned. Yes. But if you convict him of impeachment he may never run again whether he's guilty or not. That's the whole point.

[Amendments adopted: 62-37. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter [By Mr. Bergeron and Mr. Champagne]. If Floor Amendment No. 1, proposed by Delegate Roy and others and adopted by the convention on July 28, 1973, delete lines one through five and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Section 24, Paragraph A. Any state or district official, whether elected or appointed, shall be liable to impeachment for commission or conviction of felonies, malfeasance or for gross misconduct during his term of office."

Explanation

Mr. Bergeron Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I've talked to Mr. Roy about this amendment, and simply what it does it clarifies the matter. It just puts gross misconduct before during his term of office. So, therefore, if a public official at the time of 18 may have committed acts which might be considered gross misconduct, he would not be held liable for those acts while he was a public official. So, it's just, more or less, a matter of clarification and I would urge your adoption. Thank you.

Question

Mr. Annette Mr. Bergeron, maybe you could answer a question for me. I seem to be having a problem understanding. Does this imply that if a person is convicted or committed a felony before his term of office, because the language seems to say that?

Mr. Henry Mr. Annette, he's going to read it again. Maybe that'll help you.

[Amendment retried.]

Further Discussion

Mr. Champagne I can't see why there would be any questions on it. It's just putting it in the proper form. It's saying exactly what you mean. That this would have had to have been during his term of office, and the other way it could be misconstrued, and Mr. Bergeron and I noticed it, and we brought it to the attention of Mr. Roy and for that reason we have it as an amendment.

22nd Days Proceedings—July 28, 1973

Questions

Mr. Arnette Well, it seems like the clause "during his term of office" only modifies gross misconduct and does not modify felonies or malfeasance. It seems like you've got a problem there because you're now saying that a felony before he entered office would be grounds for impeachment.

Mr. Champagne That's not the intention and really or not, I think it's clearer this way, in my mind, than it was before.

Mr. Deshotels Mr. Champagne, suppose it was found out that the attorney general had embezzled a million dollars immediately prior to his going into office. Do you think this ought to be grounds for impeachment?

Mr. Champagne No, I don't think so. Because you could go on other grounds, but it had not been done during his term of office, and this is the point. In other words, the people had elected him and they honestly brought him to office, and that's why.

Mr. Deshotels But sir, possibly, don't you see the situation where this might not be known until after he's elected?

Mr. Champagne I realize that. The question in my mind is could he have been done for something he did 20 years before in the case of the last time which had nothing to do during his term of office?

Mr. Kelly Mr. Champagne, in return though, if you place it in the proper order as Mr. Bergeron is trying to do, let's assume that the attorney general did embezzle before he went into office. We'd have to assume that he had not been convicted before he went into office, and yet, under the very language if he was later convicted during his term of office he could be impeached under that provision. Is that correct?

Mr. Champagne I would imagine so.

Mr. Gravel Mr. Champagne, if I understand your amendment correctly, and it was a little confusing when it was read, what you've proposed to do is after the word "for" on the third line in Mr. Roy's amendment is to insert there the words "gross misconduct" and delete it from the end of the paragraph so that the provision would be as follows: "any state or district official, whether elected or appointed, shall be liable to impeachment for gross misconduct, commission or conviction of felonies, or malfeasance during his term of office." Is that the way it reads?

Mr. Champagne That's correct. That's the way it reads.

Mr. Poynter No, sir.

Mr. Gravel Well, if it doesn't read that way are you willing for it to read that way because I think that's what everybody had intended.

Mr. Poynter It reads: "shall be liable to impeachment for commission or conviction of felonies, malfeasance or for gross misconduct".

It does place the gross misconduct in order, but the order is after malfeasance and not in front of ...

Mr. Poynter Section 25. Removal on address by legislature. Section 25. For any reasonable cause, whether or not sufficient for impeachment, upon the address of two-thirds of the members elected to each house of the legislature and after a public hearing by the Committee of the whole in each house, any officer except the governor or acting governor may be removed from office. Any officer so removed shall be ineligible to succeed himself, the cause or causes for which such removal is made, shall be stated at length in the address.

Explanation

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates to the convention. Section 25 pertains to removal of public officers on address of the legislature from the office which they hold. This has probably been one of the most controversial matters that the Legislative Committee has handled. It was included and then amended out, then included and amended out, and after vacillating back and forth various times, it really just depended which members of the committee happened to be present at the time the votes were taken. One of the members of the committee indicated to me or rather asked just now if I enjoyed being on a suicide mission because I don't feel that way at this time. Sensing the feeling of most of the delegates to the convention, I feel that most of the delegates have apparently already formulated their opinion on this matter. I realize it's a very controversial point. I feel that everybody pretty well knows how they are going to vote on this. The real issue is an amendment to particularly delete Section 25 from the provisions of the constitution. I can certainly understand the feeling of those delegates who have advanced this position. I see no point in having any emotional debate on this whatsoever. I feel it, however, my duty merely to point out the feeling of those committee members that voted to retain it. On the basis of their decision, I would say generally was merely two-fold. One, that there was a question, and I feel a very honest and sincere question, when discussing the area of impeachment, which indicates that impeachment shall originate in the House and shall be tried by the Senate. The term trial implies due process which includes or requires notice to the defendant. If a public officer, whether it be state or parochial or what have you who deals with public money, embezzles that money and goes to Brazil, technically they are...well, or some other South American country...is not available for trial under the technical terms or intention of impeachment. Whereas, under address...the address provision that persons could be addressed out of office after public hearing. Now you might note, if you would refer to the present proposal on address out of office as compared to the old proposal, the present proposal requires a public hearing whereas the old proposal does not. I would say that was probably the main argument as to why the address out of office was even retained in the Legislative Committee proposal. The other feeling, I would say merely generally, is that the legislature is the board of directors for the state of Louisiana and should have some prerogative to fire the employees of the state of Louisiana. I know that that privilege given to the legislature under the existing constitution has been abused in some cases in the past. Certainly, I don't think that it was any intention on the part of any members here to condone that past activity whatsoever, and for those reasons, I realize it's probably the most controversial area that we're dealing with under the legislative article. All I can do as a member of the committee, submit this proposal or section to you for your own decision and your own determination as to what you'd do.

Questions

Mr. Fontenot Mr. Casey, how many times has this particular provision in the present constitution been used before?

Mr. Casey Mr. Fontenot, I honestly don't know how

[Previous question ordered. Amendment adopted: 11-13. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous question ordered in the Section. Section passed: 8-7. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

22nd Days Proceedings—July 28, 1973

many times. I do know it has been used in the past. I couldn't tell you how many times.

Mr. Fontenot Do you have some idea what...

Mr. Casey Mr. Blair indicated that it was some time around 1960 was the last time, or between 60 and 64, but I couldn't tell you from my own experience as to when it was used or how many times or how long ago or...and I might mention this, we have some distinguished delegates to this convention that this was attempted to be used against and I think that it was wrongfully used at that time. There's no doubt about that, and so I'm sure those gentlemen have very strong feelings on this provision also.

Mr. Fontenot Do you have any idea of what...on line 28...for any reasonable cause...What would be a reasonable cause?

Mr. Casey Mr. Fontenot, that's within the discretion of the legislature. It's up to their interpretation.

Mr. Fontenot In other words, suppose you could not impeach a person on the grounds of the previous section that we just adopted, then you could rely on this to get a man out of office?

Mr. Casey This has nothing to do basically with the impeachment proceeding insofar as the basis or the cause of action. I would say if you go into the interpretation for any reasonable cause it would be a much, much less serious offense and possibly no offense at all except that the person charged might, for instance, be politically on the opposite side of the fence, or philosophically may have some different views. It could be even something as frivolous as that and I think that probably those were the situations that were most publicized where it was wrongfully used.

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Fayard, et al.], on page 11, strike out lines 27 through 32 in their entirety and on page 12, strike out lines 1 through 4 in their entirety. Amendment No. 2, page 12, beginning on line 5 and at the beginning of line 7, strike out Section 26 and insert in lieu thereof Section 25. Amendment No. 3, changes Section 27 to Section 26.

Explanation

Ms. Zervigon Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I think that Mr. Casey is probably right. Most of you have your minds made up, but for any who may be wavering I'd just like to make a few points. I think Mr. Fontenot's questions are well taken. What is reasonable cause? Why should the legislature remove someone from appointive or elective office for cause that's not sufficient for impeachment? This section as it's drawn, in addition, could apply to any officer in the state. Aside from the fact that that's not what we intend to apply to police officers or something like that. In addition to that, it's very sweeping so that representatives of Caddo Parish might be asked to vote on whether to remove for a cause less than an impeachable cause the officer of a municipality in St. Landry Parish. The other thing that I would really like to bring to your attention at least in connection with this section is that there are many other remedies for an elective or appointive person not doing the job. There's the impeachment section that we just worked on for a considerable amount of time, there will be a recall procedure if we adopt Section 26, and that's also covered in the local government article. Section 27 of what is now numbered as the present section 27 will ask the legislature to establish a procedure for removal by suit. There's always, if a person is not doing his job and is an elective person, defeat at the following election. In addition to that, in the executive article for elected officials there is the declaration of inability to serve and for appointed officials there is removal by the governor. If the governor can appoint unilaterally, he may remove unilaterally. It seems to me that there is adequate remedy for someone not doing the job, that we don't need this section, that it is not well drawn and could be abused. I ask your favorable consideration on the amendments.

Further Discussion

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I have been in the legislature on two occasions when this particular provision for removal from office was exercised. I might say this, it was one of the hardest votes I've ever had to cast since I've been in that legislature. I think that we have adequately taken care of removing people who shouldn't be in office by the impeachment process or through the other two provisions which come below this section. I certainly feel like that in the previous occasions that it has been used for purposes more than for anything else and therefore I support this amendment and hope that you will delete it from the constitution. I just don't feel like that this is a proper way to take care of the affairs of the state. Whether it's a state officer or whether it is a district officer or whoever it may be, we've got other methods by which we can remove a person from office other than bringing a resolution before the legislature to do that. I feel like that this is a political resolution and we should not use it.

Questions

Mr. Newton Senator De Blieux, wasn't it your experience during your tenure in the legislature that the only time this provision was used it was, in fact, abused?

Mr. De Blieux That's correct, absolutely.

Mr. Flory Senator, explain to me, if you take this out, what happens in a situation where a person is confirmed by the Senate after appointment by the governor and let's say he has a responsibility as a member of a board, welfare board, who has a responsibility for making rules of eligibility which cost the state money, which could, in effect, bankrupt this department, how could he then be removed if he refused to resign?

Mr. De Blieux We can remove him under the provision of impeachment for gross misconduct, because I feel that would be gross misconduct as far as I'm concerned.

Further Discussion

Mr. Aseff Mr. Chairman, delegates, there has been much question of when the first address was prepared. It was my most unfortunate duty to be the first person to prepare two addresses for a governor of the state of Louisiana, and there were several threats used also. We have a number of people who refused to include an address. It is a powerful political weapon, and it has been used exactly as that. I was asked by the governor, since I directed the council, to prepare the address. This was the reason he gave me, that he was elected by the people of the state of Louisiana, and he had a mandate. Therefore, those members of the highway department were appointed. They were not there with a mandate from the people, and consequently they were addressed out of office on the same day, the same day. The same thing was tried in 1960, and it was used several times as a threat, and the members resigned rather than face an address out of office for which there was no reason and have their character and everything else besmirched. Maybe there's a little penalty for removing it, but there are other methods, including impeachment, and I urge you to support the amendment to delete this from the constitution.

[2:14:3.]

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter Section 26 which has just been amended by the previous amendment to now read, of course, Section 25.

Removal by suit. Officers subject, commencement of suit, Section 26 amended to be Section 25.

For the causes enumerated in Paragraph A of Section 24 of this article, the legislature shall by general law provide for the removal by suit of any state, district, parochial, ward or municipal officer except the governor, lieutenant governor and judges of the courts of record.

Explanation

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates to the convention, Section 25 pertains to removal of public officers by suit. At the present time, Article IX, Section 6 and 7 of our present constitution itemize in great detail the removal by suit.

The intention of Section 25 as proposed to you sets forth that there will be a method for removal by suit, but the mechanics and the detail and the itemization is left strictly to the legislature to provide this by law where the true detail really belongs and I would request that Section 25 be adopted.

Question

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Casey, in the Executive Department Article that's going to reach this floor sometime next week, hopefully, there are provisions in there for the appointment of certain department heads by the governor.

Also, in that article it provides that the governor may remove them at his pleasure. And of course all of this is speculative, but my question to you is that do you think that under this particular article the legislature could enact legislation whereby if they wanted to remove an appointed department head, they could under this article institute action to do so and they would not have to rely upon the wishes of the governor to keep him?

Mr. Casey Well, I would certainly hope that the legislature under this provision could provide for removal by suit for any public officer in that that sole discretion would not be left to the governor under the executive article to do it himself. The mere fact that he has made the appointment does not mean that he should be the only one to effect the removal.

So I would think that whether a person is elected or appointed that he could be properly removed by suit in our judicial process and I would think he would read both of those articles together. This and the article under the executive.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Casou], on page 12 at the end of line 5 immediately after the word "subject" delete the semicolon; commence - " At the beginning of line 6 delete the portion of the word "ment of suit," deletes commencement of suit in the title.

Explanation

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates, this is strictly a technical amendment. The staff felt that inasmuch as the legislature shall provide for the method of removal by suit, that technically you did not need the words in the title "commencement of suit."

That's all this amendment does.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Questions

Mr. Stinson Mr. Casey, I noticed you limit what the legislature shall do, and in the present constitution it provides for appeal. Now you don't say that the legislature...you are just saying for removal, and don't you think we should put in there and for appeal from such decision?"

Mr. Casey Mr. Stinson, the fact that appeal is not specifically contained in Section 25 does not mean that we have eliminated it as far as my humble interpretation would be. I think under the judicial process, the appeal certainly does rest or remain with the defendant, whoever might be accused.

Mr. Stinson But if you provide for suit for removal, are you sure that takes care of the appeal of the person that's being removed?

Mr. Casey Mr. Stinson, the best answer I can give you is that I am sure. If you are not sure, I would certainly respect your opinion if you submitted an amendment.

Mr. Kelly Mr. Casey, is this provision in the present constitution?

Mr. Casey It is contained but not in these words. The present constitution has removal by suit. But it is quite lengthy and very much itemized as to the procedure and the number of days and things such as that.

Mr. Kelly Was any research done to see if this type of provision is made available in other state constitutions?

Mr. Casey I cannot honestly answer that, but I would think most states would have this procedure. I feel that any public official ought to be removed through some judicial process and that should be available to the people of whatever state it is that this public official would be serving.

[Previous question referred on the Section. Motion passed. 72-0. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter Section 27, recall.

Section 27, the legislature shall provide by general law for the recall by election of any state, district, parochial, ward or municipal officer except judges of the courts of record. The sole issue at any recall election shall be whether such officers shall be recalled.

Explanation

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates, Section 26 proposes a recall of elected officials there...this provision is contained in Article IX, Section 9 of today's constitution. There's a change of only two words from today's constitution. One is the word "may", was changed to "shall", and the word "parish" was changed to "parochial".
Request adoption of Section 26.

Questions

Mr. Fontenot Mr. Casey, I don't want to appear ignorant. I was not on the committee. I have a question.

Why in the previous Section we excluded "Judges of the Court of Record," and this particular time, we are excluding "Judges of the Court of Record" again? I mean, could you explain to me why? I'm an attorney and maybe there are other delegates around here that don't understand exactly why the judges of the Court of Record cannot be recalled.
Do you follow my question?

Mr. Casey Wait, I'm trying to tie the two together. Would you repeat that?

Mr. Fontenot O.K. The present language in Section 27, excuse me, Section 26 now:

22nd Days Proceedings—July 28, 1973

"The legislature shall provide by general law for the recall by petition of any state, district, parochial, ward or municipal officer except judges of the Court of Record."

Now in section... the previous section, we excluded the governor, lieutenant governor and judges of the Court of Record.

Why are we excluding governors... I mean judges? I don't understand. Could you explain to me?

Mr. Casey In Section 26, it was felt that in a suit by removal, the Judges of Record theoretically could be hearing not really their own case, but cases of Judges of the same court. Also in 27, Judges were excepted because it was felt that this matter would be handled under the judicial article and that was my understanding... the intent of this that the committee on judiciary would specifically handle this problem.

Mr. Henry Justice Tate has a question and I believe he can resolve this. He's an expert on judicial recall, I understand.

Further Discussion

Mr. Tate Well, you don't want to recall judges because they are good. But aside from that, I think the reason it's in the present constitution is that when you amended Article IX of the present constitution, you provided for a removal procedure for judges under the judiciary commission. And in fact, as you may remember, at least one judge has been removed and one may have resigned because charges were about to be brought, and so on...

Mr. Henry Isn't that right?

Mr. Fontenot That's absolutely correct, sir.

Questions

Mr. Drew Mr. Casey, if judges were subject to recall, wouldn't we be subjected to decisions based on political expediency rather than the law, quite often?

Mr. Casey Does that require an answer, Mr. Drew?

Mr. Drew I would think so.

Mr. Dennis Mr. Casey, are you aware that the Judiciary Committee has already adopted provisions continuing the Judiciary Commission?... a method for removing judges, and we think that this will be adopted by the convention.

Mr. Casey Judge Dennis, I understand that has been very well handled by your committee and that the Judicial Commission is being continued.

[Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 83-0. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Mr. Henry We have some amendments that would add sections to this proposal which we will dispose of in the order that they are up here, sir.

Point of Order

Mr. Perez I've had some serious questions as to whether or not a delegate could offer on the floor an amendment, an additional or new section and I'd like to have it clarified at this time. I'm not particularly objecting because I have no idea what the content of the particular provision is, but the question is can a delegate introduce an additional Section as an amendment?

Mr. Henry Yes, sir, Mr. Perez, and in the opinion of the chair a delegate could but it's going to take 67 votes to adopt that because it's in effect a new section to the provision and the amendment cannot be adopted as in the course of normal amendments by a majority of those voting.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Drew], on page 12, line 18, insert the following:

"Section 28, Taking Office

Section 28A. Members of the legislature shall take office on the same day as the governor and other officials elected statewide.

B. A person elected to fill the remainder of an unexpired term shall take office within thirty days after the Secretary of State promulgates the election returns.

Explanation

Mr. Drew Mr. Chairman, members of the convention. It's just an amendment as was read to fix the time in which the legislature would take office.

I found that when I was elected the duties began immediately and I think you will find that if the legislature can take office at the same time the governor takes office, which will be prior to the convening of the legislature, you will have a much better session... initial session of the legislature.

The Section 8 of it would provide that if a person is elected to fill a vacancy, they would take office within, which means they could take it immediately upon promulgation of the returns.

And I move adoption of the amendment.

Questions

Mr. Stinson Mr. Drew, unless you have changed it, how are you going to take the Oath of Office unless you are in session? You going to each one to take it before a Notary Public back in your respective districts?

Mr. Drew I think that could be worked out, Mr. Stinson. That was raised and discussed when I proposed this amendment.

Mr. Stinson Well, with reference to Subparagraph B. When it's an unexpired term, why make a man wait thirty days?

Mr. Drew It doesn't. It says "within." It doesn't make him wait thirty days. In other words, he can take it immediately so he might not have to miss the thirty days in a session or any period of time.

Mr. Avant Mr. Drew, I don't mean to be argumentative, but the piece of paper which was given to me says, "B. A person elected to fill an unexpired term... legislative term, shall take office thirty days after the Secretary of State promulgates the election returns."

Mr. Drew That is the wrong amendment, Mr. Avant, that was withdrawn.

Mr. Abraham Mr. Drew, would it be advisable to put an hour in here, at exactly which hour he would take office rather than just saying the same day.

Mr. Drew I think the provision for the governor provides an hour and I am sure that would be a detail that would not cause any controversy. Mr. Abraham.

I mean I would have no objections, but I don't see that it presents a problem there.

Mr. Jack This gives me pleasures. I've been hearing this mispronunciation of technical amendment. I notice here it's got section 28, we killed one section. Shouldn't this be 27?

Mr. Drew You are correct, Mr. Jack, I think.

Mr. Jack Make the technical amendment.

Mr. Henry Thank you, Mr. Jack. We have done it up here.

Further Discussion

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates to the convention, I rise to oppose the amendment at this time. I'm not against the concept and something like this probably has to be done someplace in our constitution.

22nd Days Proceedings—July 28, 1973

The only point that I would like to make here, I would hope or would think that this might be better handled through a delegate proposal, properly heard in committee, to determine if this is the correct time when the legislature should take office. And I think it would be fine if Mr. Drew, himself, submitted that delegate proposal so that we can properly and intelligently handle this subject matter in committee. And if any change is necessary after a proper consideration and hearing in committee, I think we can make whatever changes are necessary.

The other concern I have is, that it's something that is sort of stuck in at the end of our Legislative Article and probably properly belongs under maybe, Section 3, 4 or 5. So I am not against this per se, but I think we should delay consideration of it at this time and I would urge rejection.

Questions

Mr. Willis Mr. Casey, wouldn't Mr. Drew's additional Section be antagonistic to Act 11 of last year convening this convention? Wouldn't that shorten somebody's term?

Mr. Casey Mr. Willis, I have heard that argument advanced in connection with the time of office and you may be certainly correct. That's something that I think would better address itself to a committee hearing and consideration of a proposal of this...

Mr. Willis Yes, sir, I am in complete adherence.

Point of Information

Mr. Roy Are we now dealing with essentially delegate proposals to the...

Mr. Henry We are dealing with delegate amendments to the Section, Mr. Roy.

Mr. Roy Well, is it out of order to ask whether that should not go to the committee itself, first, and get a ruling...

Mr. Henry No amendments go to committee, sir. These are amendments to the Section, Mr. Roy.

Mr. Roy I thought this was a total new section.

Mr. Henry It's an amendment to the proposal, I beg your pardon. I said the section. But it's an amendment to the proposal adding a section to the proposal.

And it will take 67 votes to adopt it, sir.

Point of Order

Mr. Conroy Point of order. How would we proceed? Previously when we were dealing with amendments to particular sections, if we adopted an amendment to that section, we could then further amend that amendment to get it in line before we passed on the final vote on that section.

What will we do here if we adopt a section, we can't then vote on amending the adopted section? What...

Mr. Henry Yes, sir, the same procedure would follow, Mr. Conroy, if, suppose this amendment adding a section were adopted. Then you could come up with an amendment to amend the new section, you see.

Mr. Conroy Then there would have to be another vote on the section before it was adopted.

Mr. Henry That's right. It could go on and on and on, yes, sir.

Point of Order

Mr. Drew If this amendment is withdrawn, and the section, the entire article is adopted, then what is the procedure for amending it?

Mr. Henry We would have adopted the proposal. And if there was a motion made to reconsider the vote by which the proposal was adopted, then that motion to reconsider was laid on the table, it would take a two-thirds vote of the convention to call from the table the motion to reconsider so that you could get in and amend, add to the proposal itself, sir.

But, if, when we get through with this proposal there was no motion to reconsider the vote and lay the motion to reconsider on the table, then you could come back and amend by a majority vote, is my appreciation of the proposal.

Mr. Drew The reason I am asking that, Mr. Chairman, the reason this was offered in this matter, I was trying to expedite matters.

Mr. Henry Well, now we have several...two or three amendments up here that would do just exactly what yours are doing. It would be my opinion, and if I were...I don't believe your amendment is going to get 67 votes, quite frankly, I don't believe any of these amendments are. You gentlemen, and I am sure you are, genuinely are sincere in adding sections to this, then the thing to do is when we get through adopting this proposal, is to not lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

Mr. Drew With that, I withdraw the amendment, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Henry Well, I'm just saying that would be my suggestion, but we are still going to go by majority rule.

Point of Order

Mr. Arnette ...and when we adopt each section, we are not going to go over and adopt the whole proposal, are we?

Mr. Henry Mr. Arnette, if somebody moves to adopt the entire legislative committee proposal and this body adopts it, then we would have adopted it, yes sir.

Mr. Arnette Well, this isn't absolutely necessary, though, is it?

Mr. Henry No, sir, it's not. And I doubt that's what is going to happen. That's what I am saying.

Mr. Arnette So in other words, we can probably go back and add sections later on if we want to.

Mr. Henry Yes, sir. Yes, sir.

Point of Order

Mr. Perez A point of order, Mr. Chairman. I am still trying to clarify the matter. As I would understand it, what we will be doing only is adopting a proposal. There would be nothing to preclude a delegate from offering another proposal which may properly eventually belong in the legislative article because I do know that, for instance, we may in local government have some provisions which eventually may be adopted and we may determine should belong in legislation.

Mr. Henry You are absolutely correct, sir.

Mr. Perez So I just wanted to make the point of order that even though we adopt this article, it will not preclude the offering of additional articles on the subject matter of legislation.

Mr. Henry Not at all, no, sir.

Personal Privilege

Mr. Blair Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen, it is the consensus of our committee that we will not try today to lay this motion on the table, but if that will put at ease.

22nd Days Proceedings—July 28, 1973

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Point of Order

Mr. Burson Point of Order, Mr. Chairman, I believe it would be correct, would it not, for us to finish the articles proposed by the committee before considering any possible new articles. I raise that point because I would like to suggest that we return to Section 12 which we have passed previously since the committee did propose a Section 12 and the subject matter, thereof.

Mr. Henry But let...you are in order. We are just trying to get some idea what these people want to do who have proposed sections.

Now Reverend Landrum had offered an amendment which would add an additional section.

Reverend Landrum, are you willing to forego introducing that at this time?

Sir? You are not willing to forego it? Then your motion would be in order, Mr. Burson.

[Motion to take up section 1, previously passed over. Substitute Motion to take up Section 22 previously passed over adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter This is as the section presently stands with the previously adopted floor amendments. Section 22. Suspension of Laws.

Section 22. No power of suspending laws of this state shall be exercised except by the legislature and then only by the same vote required for final passage of the law proposed to be suspended. No resolution suspending a law or part of a law after the effective date of this constitution shall remain in effect beyond the time of adjournment sine die the next succeeding regular session of the legislature. The vote thereon shall be by record vote. Any measure to suspend a law or portion thereof shall be adopted by the same procedure as for a bill. However, such measure shall not be subject to gubernatorial veto nor time limitations with respect to introduction.

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Triche]. Page 10, line 26, at the end of the line, delete the word "laws" and insert in lieu thereof the words "laws; prohibition."

Amendment No. 2. Page 10, line 27, at the beginning of the line, immediately after Section 22, delete lines 28 through 30, both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Subsequent to the effective date of this constitution no law shall be suspended."

We need to add a technical amendment there at the end deleting previous floor amendments, Mr. Triche.

Explanation

Mr. Triche Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention. If you'll follow on page 11, excuse me, page 10 at line 26, we changed the title of Section 22 to read this way, Section 22. Suspension of Laws; Prohibition, and that makes it very clear that Section 22 deals with the prohibition of suspending laws. Then starting with line 27, Section 22. "Subsequent to the effective date of this constitution no law shall be suspended." That makes it a prohibition against suspension of laws. Therefore, any law that needs to be changed or suspended will have to be amended by legislative process or repeal. The legislative process would require then, the introduction of a bill for publication in your journal, the reading on three separate days in the legislature, hearing by committee, final passage by record vote, signature by the governor, then publication on the effective date after the effective date stipulated in the act. And as we said when the matter was first discussed, that prohibition against suspension of laws at all was first in the constitution of 1921 just simply said that no law of the state shall be suspended except by the legislature. I think the whole intent of that article as originally written and what the people of this state were trying to say when they adopted it and adopted the constitution was that laws made by the legislature should not be suspended by anyone else. I don't think it was meant to allow the legislature to suspend laws by a process other than the procedure outlined in the constitution for the enactment of a bill. With the passage of time and, I think with a perverted use of that section we have now come to accept it as a grant of authority to the legislature to suspend laws without following the procedure prescribed in the constitution for the enactment of bills which would repeal or amend and modify the laws. I think there is no necessity anymore to act in the fashion that we have in the past. I don't know of any law that was suspended by way of abuse or misuse but I have seen the suspension used as threats. I have seen it used in political maneuvering. I don't think it's proper. I don't think that's what the people of this state were intending when they adopted it. After, is going to be a continuous body. We're going to meet in plenary session every year and there is just no need for it. We've discussed all of this before, Mr. Chairman, and I don't wish to belabor the point any longer. The choice is clear. Whether you are going to allow the legislature to suspend laws or you're going to suspend laws from suspending laws with this amendment of mine it prohibits the suspension of laws altogether. Now the amendments that have been previously adopted by this convention, I must confess to you, the amendments as adopted and are now promulgated or done again in another amendment which was advanced by, I think Delegate Perez, really doesn't make much difference between my amendment and what we've already adopted. The amendment to come after this one says that laws shall be suspended by the legislature but they must follow the same procedure. The only difference is that under my amendment there shall be no suspension of laws except by an act of the legislature passed to repeal or amend a law. Under the new amendment that I've proposed but they would have to follow the same procedure. The only difference is there would be no limitation on when the bills could be introduced and they wouldn't require the signature of the governor and publication as required for the enactment of laws. I think this is a safer procedure, I think it's just better constitutional law to affirm the proposition that law is a solemn expression of the legislative will and shall not be changed except by another solemn expression of the legislative will. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Jenkins Mr. Chairman, the right to suspend laws plays an important part in the system of checks and balances among our various branches of government. If we take away from the legislature the right to suspend laws, then what we will do is even to a greater extent give the executive complete control over the ultimate legislative product. Remember we've already talked about the fact that no veto has ever been overridden under the 1921 constitution. But there has been a way whereby the legislature could circumvent the governor's will and that is by suspension of laws. In the last 52 years no law has been enacted unless the governor either actually or tacitly approved it except in the case of suspension of laws. That's the one area that the governor has no authority. And it's important that the legislature have this power. Now I don't know whether we're going to have veto sessions or not. I certainly hope so because of the new procedure which the Legislative Committee very wisely built into this proposal. But I think it important that we have some means whereby the legislature can act independently of the governor. The main defect with regard to suspension of law has been cured by the proposal that we have already adopted, and that is that there must be a definite duration as to any suspension of the law, namely one year. Now Mr. Perez will offer an amendment a little later to simply take the language that we've already adopted, take those various amendments and make them much more concise. You have that in the amendment by Mr. Perez, Mr. Flory, and myself on your desk. That takes all the language, puts it together, boils it down and I think gives you a workable instrument there. But the right to suspend laws is something the legislature must have. There are eventualities that arise where we need to act, we need to postpone something, we need to delay it. This happened in the lead paint poisoning bill this last year. There was certainly an argument put forth this year with regard to suspending the effect of the Super Board Bill. And while we did not act on that, that certainly should be a prerogative that we might want to have to delay the final going into effect of something of that nature. We need this authority. Let us have this check over the Executive Branch. So I urge the rejection of the Triche amendment.

Questions

Mr. Nunez Mr. Jenkins, I tried to follow your argument that the right to suspend laws gives additional power to the legislature. Naturally it's in the hands of the legislature and the repeal or the amending process. Do you recall last session where we passed, I think it was the Severance Tax or the gas rebate and subsequent to that or consequent of it we had to suspend the law because of several provisions affecting several companies? That cost the state about four or five million dollars. They are still in suspension. How those laws were executive suspensions. Naturally the legislature did it, so I don't quite follow your arguments that this gives the power to the legislature and not to the Executive Department because those were their suspensions. Those suspensions were at the request of the executive.

Mr. Jenkins But the executive has no power to suspend laws, as such. Only the legislature now has that authority.

Mr. Nunez I realize that and I think you do also, but I know you also realize when it's much easier if the administration wants to suspend a law to get the votes to do it than possibly the legislature itself acting through the legislature.

Mr. Jenkins But he still must, of course, have the votes in the legislature that it would have taken to have enacted the law initially. But the point is that suspension of laws allows you to do something in the legislature even though the governor may not approve of it, but only on a temporary basis.

Further Discussion

Mr. Perez Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I was just about to begin my remarks by saying I know that we are awfully tired and we want to go home as soon as we can. I just wanted, one more time, to put the issue clearly before the delegation. With the Triche proposal would there be an absolute prohibition against the suspension of laws, the other which would include the amendments which have already been adopted would give the legislature, with very strict provisions, in a very limited way, the right by concurrent resolution to do so? I think the choice is very obvious, and Mr. Chairman, how many other speakers do we have on the list? Again I might ask that if they're willing to waive, I think we understand the issue. Then we understand the issue if you vote for the Triche amendment under circumstances that are very limited, suspended and if you feel that the legislature should, under very limited circumstances, have the right to suspend a law, then you would vote against the Triche amendment and for the amendments that have already been adopted. We do have an amendment which will clear up and to state in much better terms that which has already been passed. Thank you.

[Previous Question suspended. Amendment requested: 15-41. Motion to recommit tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Mr. De Blieux wants to add his name as co-author

Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Perez, et al.]. Page 10, delete lines 27 through 30, both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Section 22. No power of suspending laws of this state shall be exercised except by the legislature and then only by the same vote and, except for gubernatorial veto and time limitations for introduction, according to the same procedures and formalities required for enactment of the law proposed to be suspended. After the effective date of this constitution every resolution suspending a law shall fix the period of the suspension, which shall not extend beyond the effective date of the laws enacted at the next regular session of the legislature."

Mr. Perez, if it's all right with you to tag on an amendment deleting previous floor amendments?

Mr. Perez Yes.

Explanation

Mr. Perez This is simply a rewording and a rephrasing of the amendments which have previously been adopted. It would give the limited authority for the suspension of laws not to exceed one year. It would not have a retroactive effect because of the fear that some have that it may affect some laws which have already been suspended by the legislature and would require the same procedure for the passage of laws. The only exception would be the time limitation for the introduction of bills and the veto by the governor. I move the adoption of the amendment.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Previous Question taken on the section. Section passed: 79-1. Motion to reconsider tabled. Motion to take up Section 12 adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter Section 12. Local or Special Laws. Section 12. The legislature shall pass no local or special law when a general law is or can be made applicable.

Explanation

Mr. Juneau Fellow delegates, I thought it would be in order to give you just a short background of what a lot of the controversy about this specific section is. We discussed this matter at length and it's very difficult to determine whether or not you have achieved the ultimate. As you know, in the present constitution in Article IV, Section 4, there is a very detailed and specific list which states that the legislature shall not pass any local or special law on the following specified subjects. It goes on for about almost two pages itemizing what those are. In an attempt to put this constitution in brief, concise terms we came up with the language which appears on page 6, which says that "the legislature shall pass no local or special law when a general law is or can be made applicable." This is the provision which is in the model state constitution. It is a provision which has been enacted by some states. We took a great deal of testimony, this is a very important subject, on this particular subject. It was the consensus of a lot of people who had legislative experience and in particular, Mr. Robert M. Minto, the Senate, who expressed our great concern over the generality as we have it in the present committee proposal. He said that brevity for the sake of brevity was not necessarily good. He said that the provision which we now have in the present law, even though it is long, has worked well. It was his recommendation that we retain the provision as we now have it. On the other hand, there is a large consensus among a lot of delegates and a lot of people that that language can be put in more generalized terms. We came up with what you have before you. There will be an amendment, and I just want to give you this background, that was prepared by Mr. Burson and several others to expand the general language that we now have. Mr. Burson will present that to you and you can take it for your consideration. I thought that I would give you that background so that you could understand what the divergent views were on this particular subject. For purposes of procedure I would move for the adoption, Mr. Chairman.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment proposed by Delegates Burson, Kean, Perez, Tate, Casey and Lanier.

Amendment No. 1. Page 6, strike out in their entirety lines 23, 24, and 25 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Section 12. Local or Special Laws.

Section 12. The legislature may pass local or special laws, but no such law shall be valid if its effect is to exempt a particular person from a general law or if its effect is to grant to a particular person any personal or real right uniformly limited or denied to all persons by general law or if its effect is to limit or deny to a particular person any personal or real right uniformly granted to all persons by general law. As used herein, the word "person" includes an individual, partnership, unincorporated association of individuals, joint stock company, or corporation but shall not include a political subdivision of the state."

Explanation

Mr. Burson Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, the problem was well delineated by Mr. Juneau. This is an area of constitutional law with regard to state government that plagues people in trying to define what you're talking about. But generally, the idea is, just as the committee proposal said, that if a subject is capable of being defined in a general law you should do it. The way you will all look in your books at Article IV, Section 4 of the present constitution it will help you a lot to understand what we're talking about. The present constitution Article IV, Section 4, prohibits the legislature from doing a whole lot of things by special law. Like granting divorces, changing the law of wills or successions and so on and so forth. The reason for that, I think, is obvious. The feeling is that those areas should certainly be governed by a general law and that everybody ought to be treated the same way, and just because someone might have the political clout to come here and get a special law favoring him passed, he shouldn't be permitted to do it. Now the problem we had with the committee language was a lot of us felt that it was a little bit too general and might leave some loop holes that would not cover all of these specific prohibitions in Article IV, Section 4. So what we did was work for two or three days, a number of people, on trying to come up with language that would be broad enough to cover all of these specific prohibitions in Article IV, Section 4, but would be specific enough to be limited to the field of private law and criminal law and would not get into public law in the sense of the many special laws that you need to come to the legislature to get for specific local problems. We don't want to prohibit that and that is why you will notice in the last sentence of this amendment we say "As used herein the word person includes..." and we go on to say everything it includes under the present code of civil procedure. That is corporations, partnerships, jo on and jo forth. "But shall not include a political subdivision of the state." The reason why we excluded political subdivisions of the state is the local and state government Committee has some rather detailed provisions which set out how that committee feels the legislature should be able to enact special laws affecting a limited area or a limited political subdivision. But now is not really the time to get into all that because we may have a lot of disagreement on that point. I think the intent of this amendment is primarily to cover the area of prohibition of special criminal laws, special laws regarding taxation, let's say, or all of the other specific prohibitions contained in Article IV, Section 4. Now I can see where individuals might feel that our language for some reason or another is not broad enough. If you feel that way, I would not ask you, please, let's pass this amendment and then if you want to add specific words or clauses to it we can consider them at that time. I think it would work better that way. I'm asking you to vote favorably on this amendment. Not because it's mine because I had really very little to do with the phraseology. But it's the joint effort of a lot of people that have thought about this problem a whole lot. I'm not saying that it's foolproof. I'm not real sure on this topic that you can come up with something that's foolproof, but it's the best effort that we can make on it and it's the opinion of Judge Tate, who is the only Supreme Court Justice here, that it does cover the specific prohibitions that are set out in Article IV, Section 4. It's the opinion of all of the coauthors that it does this.

Questions

Mr. Avant Mr. Burson, I just want to be sure about one thing. As you know, in the criminal code in the area on criminal trespass, the law as to what constitutes a criminal trespass varies from parish to parish in this state. I think that there are at least a half dozen parishes where the law of criminal trespass is defined differently from what it is in some other parish. Now what I want to ask you is what language in this amendment that you have, I'm not against your amendment I mean, just want to see, can you point to me any specific language that would, in effect, say this? That any law enacted by the legislature defining a crime shall be of uniform application throughout the state.

Mr. Burson No, Mr. Avant, we have no specific language. However, I think that certainly the language in the first sentence which says that no such law shall be valid if its effect is to exempt a particular person from a general law, could be subject to that interpretation. Now I admit that would be straining it some though, and you probably need the additional language that you're talking about. I have no objection to it, sir.

Mr. Avant I'm afraid that it would be straining it and I will offer an amendment.

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Burson, Article IV, Section 4 at the present time prohibits the legislature from changing the law of dissent of succession. Do you feel that the proposition that you have proposed here does that?

Mr. Burson This is why, one of the main reasons why, Mr. Anzalone, we used the term personal or real rights. We tried to use civil law terminology feeling that personal or real rights ought to cover just about any right established by the Civil Code.

Further Discussion

Mr. Tate Mr. Speaker, I just learned a lesson, is not to sit in one of these little groups and say it looks all right to me because you'll end up as a coauthor. But in general I agree with what Mr. Burson said in informal opinion was that this covered almost all, if not all of the special laws regulated in the present constitution. My main purpose in coming here is to say that I will probably, if this does pass, prepare a little floor amendment on the last sentence which is, as used here, and the word "person", it incorporates a very technical definition about individual partnerships unincorporated association etc. etc. but shall not include a political subdivision. Well, the intent of the amendment, as I understand it, was to satisfy our allied state of Plaquemines Parish...I want to take out all the words except "shall not include a political subdivision." I'm just saying this as long as my name appears there, I want to say that in connection with that that I think there would rise questions having this sort of a detailed definition which does not, for instance, include trusts. It doesn't include a number of other entities that are considered persons, for purposes of local and special laws. Now I'm open for questions because I can... Okay, Mr. O'Neill...

22nd Days Proceedings—July 28, 1973

Mr. Henry Wait now, Justice Tate. I'm the one who recognizes the people for questions and Mr. Tobias, I'd promised, would be number one.

Questions

Mr. Tobias Judge Tate, in other words you do not believe the definition of person is needed? In other words the last sentence is not needed in this section?

Mr. Tate I would think it is not needed unless, as I understand Mr. Perez has substantial reasons or substantive reasons to say that it shouldn't include a political subdivision. If that is the intent of the local and special law provision, I think it should be included to say that the person does not include a political subdivision of the state.

Mr. Tobias Do you know of any case or law that says that a political subdivision would be a person?

Mr. Tate I really didn't think there were any, but there are, apparently Mr. Anzalone told me there were.

Mr. E. J. Landry Judge Tate, since your name is on the proposal or the amendment, does a sentence have to be that long to explain something? Does it really have to be that long?

Mr. Tate It probably does not, Professor Landry, and possibly it could be taken into shorter sentences as a matter of style and drafting. This proposal resulted from a great deal of informed input adding and subtracting things and trying to get away from what is it, two pages in the present constitution, a listing of kinds of local and special laws that may not be only one page.

Mr. E. J. Landry There is so much included...

Mr. Tate Two pages.

Mr. E. J. Landry There is so much included in that sentence. By the time you get through with it you... Really and truly, I just wonder if a sentence has to be that long to make the meaning understood?

Mr. Tate I have to agree with you that any sentence longer than 17 words, someone said, the mind boggles before you get to the end of it.

Mr. E. J. Landry I mean that's what it did to me.

Mr. Tate On the other hand, we're substituting this for two pages of detailed details, if the convention wishes. We're substituting this for two pages of very detailed illustrations.

Mr. E. J. Landry I'm wondering about the people who have to try to understand this. I mean, I know the lawyers will understand it, but how about people like me and others who can hardly read?

Point of Information

Mr. Flory Wouldn't it be much wiser if we delayed the consideration of this section until Wednesday in view of a short House, and the real seriousness of the provision that we have under consideration? We're talking about the vital functions of the whole state in this one section, really, and I just think with a snrnt House we ought to at least delay it and have time to read what was presented here and to study it. They've had time to study it and its ramifications, but the other delegates have read.

Mr. Henry Mr. Flory, in all probability, of course you're just asking me what I think, yes sir, I think probably you're right. Because while everybody wants to serve in the convention, everybody doesn't want to work on Saturday afternoon and we've got a short House. Since they have imposed the imposition on us, perhaps it would be better if we took it up next week, but I would hope that in the future when we have to work here on Saturdays or Sundays or whatever the case might be, that those delegates who wanted to serve will continue to work with us.

Personal Privilege

Mr. Perez I wanted to suggest at the proper time. That it might be a better procedure to reject this entire article and request the Committee on Legislative to reconsider the matter so we could go ahead and adopt the entire proposal other than this article. At a later time we could take up and consider this particular section under a new proposal which it may submit, or some other committee may submit.

Mr. Henry Well, Mr. Perez, of course you can make whatever motion that you desire and we'll dispose of it with the people that we have here. But in view of the short House that we have, we're going to have to do something one way or the other.

Personal Privilege

Mr. Abraham Well, while I'm not disagreeing with what's been said and deferring action on this and things like this, but for the sake of the record and for the future, I think that, by golly, whether we have a short House or not if these people don't want to stay here and work and there are some of them who are wanting to work and can get some things passed, I think we ought to go ahead and pass them and don't worry about whether these people who aren't here have had time to read what is being presented. I agree with doing what we're doing today, but I think that in the future and for the record, we ought to consider this.

Mr. Henry Mr. Abraham, I want you to know that the Chair agrees completely with what you're saying, but I'm afraid we're to the point now where it would be difficult, if not impossible, to get 67 votes if there are some people who are not in favor of this to even adopt the section.

[Motion to adjourn to 9:30 o'clock a.m., Wednesday, August 1, 1973. Record vote ordered. Motion adopted: 78-4. Adjournment to 9:30 o'clock a.m., Wednesday, August 1, 1973.]

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

READING AND ADOPTION OF THE JOURNAL

INTRODUCTION OF PROPOSALS

[2 Journal 230]

UNFINISHED BUSINESS

PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

Mr. Poynter Committee Proposal No. 3, introduced by Delegate Blair, Chairman on behalf of the Committee on Legislative Powers.

A proposal making provisions for the Legislative Branch of Government, impeachment and removal of officials and necessary provisions with respect thereto.

The status of the proposal is that the committee have adopted the entire proposal except for Section 12 thereof as amended.

Section 12 is before the convention at this time, the time of adjournment.

Delegates Burson, Kean, Perez, Tate, Casey and Lanier had introduced amendments to the proposal which are now pending.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter [Amendment by Mr. Burson, et al.]. Section 12. On page 6, strike out in their entirety lines 23, 24 and 25 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Section 12. Local or Special Laws.
Section 12. The legislature may pass local or special laws but no such law shall be valid if its effect is to exempt a particular person from the general law or if its effect is to grant to a particular person any personal or real right uniformly limited or denied to all persons by general law or if its effect is to limit or to deny to a particular person any personal or real right uniformly granted to all persons by general law. As used herein the word 'person' includes an individual, partnership, unincorporated association of individuals, joint stock company or corporation but shall not include a political subdivision of the state."

Explanation

Mr. Burson The problem which this section is concerned with, is the problem primarily of local or special laws. Obviously the legislature has the power to pass general laws. But the problem with local or special laws really has two aspects. One aspect is the local law which is very often required in the legislative process and the Committee on Local and Parochial Government has a rather detailed provision dealing with how and under what condition it is proposed that a local law shall become effective. If you will refer to your committee proposal there you can find that and you will find that primarily it purports to limit the application of such local laws if it applies to less than six local, political subdivisions. However, that is not the aspect of the local or special law problem that the amendment which is proposed deals with. The amendment which is proposed deals with the problem primarily of the special law. In the constitution of 1879, the convention proposed a rather detailed listing of subjects which the legislature would not do by special law. Such as, that the legislature could not grant a divorce by special law and all of the other provisions which are detailed in Article 4, Section 4, of the present constitution. And it is this problem, this area of problems that this amendment purports to deal with. And the amendment has been made in the language of this amendment to frame in a general way a prohibition which would prevent the legislature from doing the things that Article 4, Section 4, prohibits it from doing. Therefore, the proposed amendment begins by saying that no law shall be valid if its effect is to exempt a particular person from a general law. An example of that would be in the case of a special grant of a divorce or separation in such a fashion as it would be contrary to the general law of the state. Another example would be which is covered by the present Article 4, Section 4, grant of special rights to an individual in succession or estate proceedings in a manner contrary to the general law of the state. And this amendment would prohibit such a grant. It goes on to say or if its effect is to grant to a particular person any personal or real right uniformly limited or denied to all persons by general law. Well a personal right as distinguished from a real right would be primarily in the areas of, for instance family law. Real rights would deal with property rights or succession rights. The term is used uniformly limited or denied to all persons, because it is possible that the particular rights that would be involved would not necessarily be denied to everyone by general law but could very well be limited in some fashion. And the effect of the law that we seek to prohibit might be to remove such limitations with respect to a particular person or a particular class of person. And we go on to say, the opposite, that while we would not want a special law to grant someone rights which are limited or denied to other persons under the general law, by the same token we would want to prohibit a special law which would have the effect of limiting or denying to a particular person any personal or real right which is uniformly granted to everyone under the general law of the state of Louisiana. Now, in the last sentence which includes language primarily taken from the Code of Civil Procedure, we say as used herein the word "person" includes an individual partnership, unincorporated association of individuals, joint stock company or corporation but shall not include a political subdivision of the state. Now the reason for excluding political subdivisions here is because later on, as I have already mentioned, in the local Government Article, we have a rather detailed setting out of the fashion in which it is proposed that local or special laws apply to local political subdivisions. And it is felt that this is not the place in the constitution to deal properly with that subject. So there is no attempt made to do that here. We all know that we need on occasion, in the legislature, laws which apply only to a particular locality for various reasons. For instance, you might need for special circumstances a law which would set out certain terms applying only to coastal areas in the state of Louisiana, and this would not attempt to deal with that situation in this amendment. Now you will recall Saturday, those of you that were here, that we have an amendment which I think is still pending [...] proposed by Mr. Avant dealing specifically with the problem of the application of general criminal law and I would not argue against any amendment to this proposition that would for one thing, style the language better. But I simply ask you to adopt the basic proposition because I think we need it in this article.

Further Discussion

Mr. Conroy rise in opposition to the proposed amendment by Messrs. Burson, et al. My problem with the proposed amendment is that I don't understand what it says. I have tried to ascertain from those delegates who recommend this particular proposal what it does mean. So far I have not really received a satisfactory explanation, or at least an explanation that satisfies me as to exactly what the effect of this new provision would be. It reverses what the committee proposal was in that it really generally prohibits local and special laws in broad areas and I am afraid it may be too broad. I think that the best way to tackle this problem is the way the present constitution does which is also in line with what the project of the constitution did some years back, what they proposed. For these reasons which I want to read you briefly, "Prohibitions against special legislation in state constitutions have generally been motivated by the attempt to secure uniform legislation wherever possible. And also by the attempt to prevent legislation for private purposes." This comment goes on and mentions how in a number of states there are similar long lists of specific prohibitions against special laws. California's constitution of 1879 had thirty-three, Pennsylvania of 1873 had twenty-eight, forty-two constitutions contained at the time this was written, some restrictions, a Missouri constitution contained thirty. The Louisiana Law Institute that worked on this project considered that the limitations in the present constitution represented attempts to correct abuses that had actually occurred in Louisiana and therefore, considered it wise to retain them. That is my position too. There has been distributed a proposed amendment by Delegates Fayard and Juneau which I think best tackles this problem. I urge you to vote against the Burson amendment and to vote favorably for the Fayard and Juneau amendment when it comes up. Thank you.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

Mr. Burson I would not really contest anything that Mr. Conroy had to say insofar as pointing out the purposes of the list of specific prohibitions in the present constitution and in many other state constitutions. I would only make the point that if it is possible to do something with general language, and accomplish the same purpose, then certainly this would be better constitutional drafting. I feel that the general language that had been here is certainly sufficient to broad to accomplish the same purposes as that long list of prohibitions similar to the one of the amendment that has been passed out. And if we can do it with brevity even if it might be necessary in subsequent amendments to clarify the language or to restyle it, and I think that that is the way we ought to proceed. And I have had a number of suggestions on restyling the amendment which unfortunately have not been able to put together sufficiently to incorporate it. But I do suggest to you, that the general ideas and the general scope of the ideas in this amendment is sufficient to cover the problem and I think it would be poor constitutional drafting to again repeat that long list of specific prohibitions when it is not necessary.

Questions

Mr. Lanier Mr. Burson, looking at the Fayard and Juneau proposal it has the same language as the committee proposal in that it says the legislature shall pass no local or special law when a general law is or can be made applicable, is that correct?

Mr. Burson Yes, sir.

Mr. Lanier In your opinion, in view of this language, would it be your opinion that this type of language would and general law is ever to say that the legislature passes a local law or a special law to determine whether or not a general law could have been passed in its place?

Mr. Burson Mr. Lanier, I don't think there is any question about that. In other words, that phrase is so broad and general in my view here to say that the legislature shall not pass a special law where a general law is, or could be made applicable it seems to me leaves open and almost every law that the legislature would pass, the question of whether or not a general law is or could have been applicable to the situation. It seems to me that the possibilities for litigation there are multitudinous and obvious. I don't think that the amendment that I proposed has such possibilities, although I will confess that this has been a much litigated topic.

Mr. Derbes Mr. Burson, isn't it a false assumption to assume that the Fayard and Juneau proposal indeed defines all the special categories which indeed defines local and special laws? It seems to me that does not, that it merely sets forth categories but it doesn't really reach the problem of defining what a local and special law is.

Mr. Burson This, would I think be an additional objection. As I read this amendment it does much what Article 4, Section 4 does at the present time. That is, it simply prohibits you from doing certain specified things. But really doesn't get to the problem of defining what in general terms a prohibited special law would be. Which I think our amendment does.

There are no further questions, I urge you to adopt...

Mr. Avant Mr. Burson, this provision that you referred to in the Article on Local Government begins by saying "except as otherwise provided in this constitution," does it not, sir?

Mr. Burson Yes, sir.

Mr. Avant The one that says that the legislature may classify municipalities in parishes on any reasonable basis and they pass laws applicable to a class, but it begins by saying except as otherwise provided in this constitution.

Mr. Burson Well of course the problem we had there at the time that thing was drafted, Mr. Avant, was we had no idea what the Legislative Committee or maybe some other committee might propose. I understand Revenue and Taxation has some articles which will deal with this question.

Mr. Avant All right, now, my next question is this would be one of those exceptions that that article is referring to.

Mr. Burson Yes, sir.

Mr. Avant Now, when the word "person" is defined so as to not include a political subdivision then this thing in effect means that the legislature may pass any kind of local or special law it chooses with respect to political subdivisions, does it not, sir?

Mr. Burson Under the conditions hopefully that would be adopted in the Local Government Articles and of course with the Article... Section 13 that we have already adopted here which sets out the way in which it has to be advertised and so on.

Mr. Avant All right. Now, isn't it a fact then that if you put this in there, this last sentence that you in effect negate all the rest of the language that precedes it because if you give to a particular political subdivision certain powers or duties or immunities or privileges that other political subdivisions in the state do not have then those exceptions will be transferred upon the people who happen to live in that particular area or who happen to be there even temporarily, just passing through, isn't that so?

Mr. Burson No, sir, that is not the intent here. The intent here is simply to refer this question to where we thought it properly belonged, which was in the discussion of how local or special laws applied to a particular municipality or parish in the Local Government Article.

23rd Days Proceedings—August 1, 1973

Mr. Avant So, I take it you do not agree with me then that when you put this last sentence in there you have in effect negated everything that goes before it.

Mr. Burson No, not at all. Because the prohibition here is for the legislature and of course in the Local Government Article we also discuss in setting forth the general powers of local governments, a long list there of things that local governments cannot do, such as pass criminal law.... general criminal laws defining a felony, so on and so forth.

Mr. Avant But you do agree that under this section as written, the legislature may pass any type of local or special law that it wants and limit it to one municipality or one parish under the language contained in this section.

Mr. Burson As I understand it, Mr. Avant, it is necessary in many special situations for the legislature to do just that and therefore, that problem has to be dealt with, it is our contention, the people that are sponsoring this amendment, properly in defining the relationship between local government and state government, which is really all covered in the Local Government Article. And the attempt here is not made by any kind of indirection to permit local, political subdivisions to do anything in derogation of the general law of the state. The attempt is simply made to exclude that topic from this Article. And that is the only intent of that 'but' clause at the end.

Mr. Drew Mr. Burson, the general effect of this amendment is to grant authority rather than prohibit its authority to pass them with exceptions, whereas, the committee proposal has a prohibition with the general exceptions.

Mr. Burson I would say that would be correct.

Mr. Drew Well, don't you think that under the way this amendment is worded and particularly where you go down to any real or personal right uniformly granted by general law, aren't you saying go ahead and pass the laws and then the courts will decide whether they are valid or invalid?

Mr. Burson No, that is certainly not the intent. The thought there is that in the areas that it dealt with, in the classic prohibitions that we have had in our law such as divorce law, succession law, that the rights of the general citizenry are well set out in the Civil Code or in the Statutes.

Mr. Drew The point I am making, Mr. Burson, you are giving the legislature a blanket authority to pass any law they see fit but it would possibly be invalid rather than a prohibition against passing this type law, you are changing it from a prohibition to authorization to do something that may be invalid.

Mr. Burson I see, I think that is a legitimate distinction and the wording probably could be better there.

[Amendment rejected: 17-7]. Motion to re-open order tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Mr. Conroy and Mr. Newton are going to offer these amendments with this change. Delete (A) which has one sentence in, which is the sentence: The legislature shall pass no local or special law when a general law is or can be made applicable. Delete that sentence and delete then the (B) and it would read:

"Section 12. Local and Special Laws; Prohibition Against Enactment.

Section 12. The legislature shall not pass any local or special law: (1) for the holding and conducting of elections, or fixing or changing the place of voting. (2) Changing the names of persons; authorizing the adoption or legitimation of children or the emancipation of minors; affecting the estates of minors or persons under disabilities; granting divorces; changing the law of descent or succession; giving effect to informal or invalid wills or deeds or to any illegal disposition of property. (3) Concerning any civil or criminal actions, including changing the venue in civil or criminal cases, or regulating the practice or jurisdiction of any court, or changing the rules of evidence in any judicial proceeding or inquiry before courts, or providing or changing methods for the collection of debts or the enforcement of judgments, or prescribing the effects of judicial sales. (4) Authorizing the laying out, opening, closing, altering, or maintaining of roads, highways, streets, or alleys; relating to ferries and bridges, or incorporating bridge or ferry companies, except for the erection of bridges crossing streams which form boundaries between this and any other state; authorizing the construction of street passenger railroads in any incorporated town or city. (5) Exempting property from taxation; extending the time for the assessment or collection of taxes; for the relief of any assessor or collector of taxes from the performance of his official duties or of his sureties from liability; remitting fines, penalties, or forfeitures; or refunding moneys legally paid into the treasury. (6) Regulating labor, trade, manufacturing, or agriculture; fixing the rate of interest. (7) Creating corporations, or amending, renewing, extending, or explaining the charters thereof; granting to any corporation, association, or individual any special or exclusive right, privilege, or immunity. (8) Regulating the management of public schools, the building or repairing of schoolhouses and the raising of money for such purposes, except as otherwise provided in this constitution."

Explanation

Mr. Conroy These amendments simply regroup what is presently in the constitution and carry forward the same provision essentially that is in Article 4, Section 4. The only thing deleted, as I understand it from the staff, is the last sentence of Article 4, Section 4 which dealt with legalizing unauthorized or invalid acts of an officer, servant or agent of the state or any part of the government thereof. That was omitted on the basis that that would be an illegal act anyway, or an unconstitutional act as an ex post facto law. So except for that one omission, this provision simply regroups and restates the present prohibitions in the constitution. I think there has been a genuine concerted effort on the part of those on the committee, on the part of a number of delegates to come up with appropriate general language to cope with this problem. We have been unable to do so. Despite every effort and the amendment that you will see each of them opens new problems, causes new concerns; and we, those of us who have worked on this, really feel that the wisdom of the constitution in this case that we have is correct, is regrettable. I think it is but I think that it shows what has happened historically in the state. This enumeration was placed in the constitution prior to 1921 goes back to the 1898 constitution, the beginning of enumerations began even before that in the present long list goes even back to 1898. And we recommend the adoption of this amendment as proposed.

Question

Mr. Duval Mr. Conroy, I realize this is basically the same thing we have been having for a good many years, but what worries me is that when you specifically attempt to enumerate situations, all those situations not specifically enumerated would then ... would not then the legislature have the right to pass local or special laws?

Mr. Conroy Yes, the protection there is in the next section which we have approved on the Notice and Advertising on Local and Special Laws. I think that generally, at least my feeling would be, that you should not restrict the legislature anymore than is necessary to correct or prevent abuses that may have happened. And these are ones that apparently the legislature was faced with problems on over the years and that this particular listing was felt dealt with the problem.

Mr. Duval Don't you think that there are an infinite number of situations that you could put here though? I can think of several right now that are not listed here that are special or local in nature involving the whole spectrum of what can come up in...what the legislature can do, the whole spectrum of human relationship.

Mr. Conroy If you think of any that are serious enough that ought to be added to this list, then I suggest that you propose adding them by amendment.
Mr. Duval.

Mr. Singletary Mr. Conroy, in Paragraph 5, why do you use the words "assessor or collector of taxes" why not...why shouldn't that section apply to all public officials?

Mr. Conroy The only answer I can give you to that Mr. Singletary, is that those are the phrases used in the present constitution.

Mr. Singletary I would like to ask you one other question then, the very last sentence, except as otherwise provided in this constitution. Does that just modify Paragraph 8 or does that...?

Mr. Conroy Yes.

Mr. Singletary Why shouldn't that modify then all of the sections, all of the paragraphs?

Mr. Conroy This question comes up from time to time in this convention and frankly I think that that is always understood that one provision of a constitution is not going to override another one. When you have a specific dealing with a subject in the constitution that is going to take precedence over a general statement elsewhere in a constitution.

Mr. Singletary Well, I still don't...

Mr. Conroy In other words, I am saying do you think you could start off every Section in the constitution with the phrase "except as otherwise provided in this constitution" and it wouldn't really add anything.

Mr. Singletary Well, why did you add it to Paragraph 8 if it doesn't add anything?

Mr. Conroy Again, as I said, I didn't add it. This is just picking up the language from the present constitution. No attempt to edit, just regrant it.

Mr. Denny Mr. Conroy, it is purely technical. In the fourth word from the end of the third Paragraph, I noticed in the present constitution that it is plural "effects". Was there a reason to delete the "s" from the word "effect".

Mr. Conroy No, I would dare say, it is totally unintentional. I think it is typographical. I think it should be "effects" if that is what is in the present constitution. If there is no objection, can we make this technical amendment?

Mr. Poynter Where are you, Mr. Conroy? I am sorry.

Mr. Conroy Paragraph 3, next to last line, second to last word,...

Mr. Poynter ...prescribing the effects of judicial sales...

Mr. Willis Mr. Conroy, Mr. Duval's question started me. Did you mean to strike out, Paragraph A and just leave B as A?

Mr. Conroy Yes.

Mr. Willis Well, then my next question which is prompted by the first, then similar to Mr. Duval's is that what is not listed is permitted. Is that correct?

Mr. Conroy That is correct. The only response after that Mr. Willis, is that those of us who are working on this felt it better to present the specific listing now, those who feel that in addition to that, there should be a general prohibition we felt that that would be the better subject of a subsequent or separate amendment rather than putting them both. We debated up here as to whether we should put it all before and divide the question or take this procedure. But we felt this would be the better procedure.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: 52-46. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment proposed by Mr. Drew.

Amendment do 1. On page 6, between lines 25 and 26 add the following: The legislature shall not indirectly enact special or local laws by the partial repeal of a general law.

Mr. Drew, did you want to make this a separate paragraph designating it as "B".

Mr. Drew Mr. Clerk, I initially had that drawn that way and then I did not know what was going to happen to the first part. I think if we could designate it as Paragraph B, it would be better.

Mr. Poynter Thank you, sir.

Explanation

Mr. Drew Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, under Section 5, Article IV of the present constitution we have another prohibition which reads "The legislature shall not indirectly enact special or local laws by the partial repeal of a general law. But laws repealing local or special laws may be passed." Now I have deleted the second sentence because this is an inherent right, to repeal laws that the legislature passes. I think the first sentence is very necessary as a further limitation and works hand in hand with Section A which was just adopted. What this would do, would prohibit the legislature from passing a general law, coming right back and repealing it except insofar as it applied to an individual or a group of individuals. So what it does, it prohibits the legislature from coming the back door with something they couldn't come in the front door with. I move for the adoption of the amendment.

Question

Mr. Champagne As the amendment was originally proposed it was to be part of what the committee proposed. Now would this be...are you proposing to eliminate what has just been adopted?

Mr. Drew No sir. This has no effect on what was just adopted. This is in addition thereto, Mr. Champagne. I think this is very necessary and I hope you will see fit to adopt it. Thank you.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [By Mr. Duval]. Page 6, line 25, at the end of the line add the following:

C. Any law enacted by the legislature defining

23rd Days Proceedings—August 1, 1973

a crime shall be of uniform application throughout the state.

Explanation

Mr. Avant Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this is a simple amendment. It simply says that if the legislature enacts a statute defining a crime, or making certain conduct a crime that that statute shall be of uniform application throughout the state. Now, for those of you who might think that the language in the amendment that you just adopted, which says "The legislature shall enact no local or special law concerning any civil or criminal action," would cover this, I just want to point out to you that that language is in the present constitution and in spite of that language, the legislature has adopted statutes defining crime which vary from parish to parish throughout the state. Where certain conduct in a certain parish will be a crime whereby state law in another parish it wouldn't be a crime. So the purpose of this amendment is to make it abundantly clear that if the legislature, by statute, makes certain conduct a crime and attempts to define that conduct, that that statute will be of uniform application throughout the state of Louisiana and will not vary depending upon what parish you might be in.

Questions

Mr. Roy Mr. Avant, I'm very much for your amendment and to just make it clear, this would not prevent police juries and municipalities from enacting legislation pertaining to their own problems in that area only? Is that correct?

Mr. Avant No sir, it would not. If the police jury or the city council or the local governing authority wants to make certain conduct a crime in that particular area in the field in which they are authorized to legislate, it wouldn't affect that at all. This simply says that a state law defining a crime, a state crime, will be of uniform application throughout the state.

Mr. Blair Mr. Avant, what would happen in a given case, say in posting of land? Some areas you post land without any fences and others throughout the state you have to have fences in order to do it. Now what effect would that have? Would everybody have to have a uniform...

Mr. Avant That's exactly what I'm getting at, Mr. Blair, because the legislature has passed acts defining criminal trespass that it varies from parish to parish.

Mr. Blair That's what scares me.

Mr. Avant Now, if it is a matter upon which the legislature feels that it cannot act in a uniform manner throughout the state of Louisiana, then it should abandon that field and leave it up to local governing authority. But to be protected in a State District Court under a state statute then it should be of uniform application throughout the state of Louisiana because it's in the Criminal Code. People know that the laws governing trespass are governed by state law. The average ordinary person would think that state law is the same all over the state. If the legislature can define one crime and make it vary from parish to parish they can define another crime and make it vary from parish to parish and it gives you a far-fetched application. They shall say that the crime of burglary in the parish of East Baton Rouge shall consist of this and so. Whereas in the parish of Rapides it's something else. And in the parish of Webster it's something else.

Mr. Schmitt Do you have any other examples besides this one particular problem that you have with reference to fencing and grazing land and so forth?

Mr. Avant I'm not talking about fencing and grazing land. I'm talking about the crime of criminal trespass. In certain parishes, if you're in a boat on a navigable stream and you get out on the bank you will commit a criminal trespass. In other parishes, if you do the same thing you don't commit any crime. In certain parishes there has to be a fence. In other parishes there doesn't have to be a fence. In certain parishes it has to be posted in a certain manner. In other parishes it could be posted in a different manner. In some places a simple painting of a line through the woods is sufficient. And if this is going to be a matter on which the legislature is going to act and pass a state law defining a state crime, I respectfully submit to all of the delegates, it should be of uniform application throughout the state or else the legislature should get out of the field and leave it up to local governing bodies.

Further Discussion

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I still haven't received a copy of the amendments, but before we take action on this amendment I would just like to say that I think this is a real bad amendment. I know now in some areas and in some parishes they want to have a trespass law with no fence by marking the trees, but in others they don't. So to say here that it's going to be applicable to every section of this state whether or not you want it, I think, is real, real bad. We talk about local government, we talk about home rule, the way we've been operating in the past is home rule. If you've got a community that wants to have a trespass law and they pass it in the legislature, they have it that way. But if you're representing an area that doesn't want it, I certainly wouldn't want to be saddled with a provision in this constitution that would say the people that I represent would have to be saddled with the provisions of this act whether they want it or not. And let me say here and now to all you people in the metropolitan area that's got children and grandchildren that like to come out and shoot squirrels, I certainly wouldn't want to be able to do that in a year or two. The larger part of the land in my area owned by just a few people or one or two corporations and I don't want to see something happen in this constitution that will say if you've got a hunting club in Tallulah and those people want to have that hunting club and they want to mark those trees and keep people off, I'm for letting them do it. But don't saddle me down in my section where my people may not want it. I think, Mr. Avant, that your amendment tends to do that. I may be wrong, I still haven't received a copy of it, I just got... somebody gave me one, I haven't had a chance to read it. But I think you better look at this long and hard before you vote for it.

Questions

Mr. Avant Senator Rayburn, isn't it a fact that the legislature either has or may pass a general state law which will leave it up to local governing authorities and say that the police juries in the various parishes, the governing authorities of the various parishes may define the crime of criminal trespass and fix the penalty therefore and then it becomes a local matter rather than a state crime?

Mr. Rayburn That has been done in some cases, Mr. Avant, but in other cases it has not been done generally but if I read your amendment right, and I'm just now looking at it, you said that any law enacted by the legislature defined a crime shall be uniform throughout the state, which means that if some police jury passed a law relative to trespassing that that law would have to be uniform throughout the state or it would not have... it would not be a law, if I understand your amendment right.

Mr. Avant Would you believe me, sir, that that is not the amendment and that if the police juries do it under proper authority from the legislature that it will be permissible? What we are talking about is a state crime, a state act defining a crime in different manners in different parishes. Not local government defining things in different manners in different localities.

23rd Days Proceedings—August 1, 1973

Mr. Rayburn Well you have a state law now relative to trespassing. What would happen to it?

Mr. Avant It would have to be changed. They'd either have to leave it up to the local governing authorities or they'd have to make a law which was uniform throughout the state.

Mr. Rayburn Well I think it's been working pretty good in my area, Mr. Avant. That's the only thing I'm concerned about.

Mr. Drew Senator Rayburn, I have so much of the same concern you do although I agree in principle with Mr. Avant. But by using the phrase "defining a crime," that if the statute defined a crime, as I appreciate this amendment, there would be no exceptions. It would have to be statewide.

Mr. Rayburn That's exactly, Mr. Drew, my opposition to it. I read it the same way.

Mr. Drew If we did not define the crime then we would be subject to twelve different definitions of the same offense or maybe sixty-four different definitions.

Mr. Rayburn That could be possible, yes sir.

Mr. Burns Senator, you know over in our section we have a world of open marshland in the lower end of St. Tammany Parish which is not susceptible or practical to being fenced. But yet in the upper land of our parishes they have a different law with reference to enclosing land. It has to be fenced besides having been posted. Don't you think, Mr. Avant's motion would effect that way we have of operating over in our area?

Mr. Rayburn Well I'm sure it would, Mr. Burns, and that's one reason I'm opposed to it. Right now we operate like the people of that area and the police jury want us to operate. But this would be general for everybody.

Further Discussion

Mr. Stinson Delegates, I wish to join Senator Rayburn. Burglary is the same any place but now trespassing is not. As you know, there's a lot of difference between South Louisiana and North Louisiana and I think that was the reason... First parish, as I recall, with legislation was Jefferson Davis Parish, passed one just for the parish. Later passed one for Bossier Parish and a number of others have joined because there're not the same physical land determinants in each section of the state. In these special acts it also gives the authority to the police jury to change at any time that they thought it was adapted to that particular locality. So I think that we either should leave it like it is or else say that the police juries shall designate trespassing. After all, it is the need of the people that own the property that are in different businesses. In some places that they're not in the cattle business, well it's entirely different from where there is a large cattle business because they go out there and a lot of people from the city of New Orleans don't know the difference between a deer and a cow. Especially with the value of beef now, there're going to be more cattle killed. So I think we should leave it up to the local police juries and these special acts and this would prohibit it. As the same, murder, burglary, robbery or anything is the same statewide, but criminal trespass is not. So I'd like to urge you, let's defeat this amendment of Mr. Avant's.

Questions

Mr. Willis Mr. Stinson, it appears that what was very transparent to me is not translucent. Isn't it clear that the legislature could classify the lands and prescribe the procedures and the punishment and be uniform throughout the state?

Mr. Stinson Yes sir, that's right.

Mr. Willis Then we would have uniform laws and what's good for the goose is good for the gander and it would be applicable all over the state to each Louisianian alike. Isn't that correct?

Mr. Stinson But...

Mr. Willis Now, let me ask you this second question which I anticipate at this time...

Mr. Stinson Let me finish answering... let me finish qualifying my answer. But there are different physical features of the property that need... a difference between South Louisiana and North Louisiana and different parts of the state.

Mr. Willis Well, it's still the state of Louisiana and isn't the legislature able to classify and correlate lands and types of lands and how to post them and have a uniform law that's No. 1 and No. 2. If there's a problem with localities why don't you pass a law and say the police jury of each parish shall prescribe?

Mr. Stinson That's what I would agree on. I think it should be...

Mr. Willis Well, then you are arguing in reverse. You should be for this.

Mr. Stinson Well, but the legislature hasn't delegated it to the parishes though, and if we do this we'd cut off and we'd nullify those that already have that protection.

Mr. Willis Very well. We have heard time and again how the legislature wants its hands untied. There's one way to untie the knot, it's the dearest of this thing if it is to be for the localities to prescribe the procedure.

Mr. Stinson Mr. Willis, I was in the legislature for 24 years and I think the people benefit when the hands of the legislature are tied.

Mr. Willis I don't deny that but that begs the question.

Further Discussion

Mr. Jack Mr. Chairman and members, I want you to follow this closely, it's the first time it's been mentioned. Now I'm very much against this amendment. Now recently, the Supreme Court of the United States, on a pornographic decision, has decided that what might be against the law as to pornography in one locality, might not in another. Now if anybody's got eyes they've seen these illicit pictures, terrible things on the newsstands in drug stores, all other ones lots of places. Children of all ages see them, they're not fit for anybody, morally decent, in my opinion, to be looking at. Now, remember the Supreme Court of the United States has said under these laws against having pornographic material, I may not pronounce it right, you can have in one place one yardstick of what is pornographic, in another, that isn't. Now different sections of the state do these things differently. I know, in the area I live in Caddo Parish, and in District 3, that's in the city of Shreveport, those people do not want pornographic material. Now, whether they do another place, that's a matter I cannot speak for. But I'm saying this, this law, if passed, this amendment is going to make you use the same yardstick everywhere. It's going to probably be unconstitutional because of the Supreme Court's decision. In addition to that, Senator Rayburn has mentioned about posting and you also have it will interfere with hunting, closed seasons, and I don't know what all else. Let me tell you, the legislature, merely because it says defining a crime, if they pass it on to a city or parish, that may not be constitutional for them to try to circumvent it. But even if they did, remember state laws can be felonies, very severe penalties. Parish ordinances and city ordinances are not even misdemeanors. They are in the parish and city ordinances in a very limited penalty. What goes in the constitution in our clause you know is a pretty permanent thing. People don't pass constitutions any amendments much anymore, and that's one reason we're here. So, you think a long time before you put something in the constitution that's not going to let pornography run wild or get declared unconstitutional this day or the other. I feel confident if you defeat this the legislature, with the Supreme Court decision, will pass proper laws so that we can do all we can to stop pornographic books and that. Thank you very much and I suggest you defeat it.

Mr. Kilbourne Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, this is really a simple matter in my opinion. What Mr. Avant is driving at, primarily, is the trespass laws, as he has said. And the way that has been done in the past, it is somewhat of a problem. I've dealt with it quite often when I was district attorney because in the Criminal Code, the only place there is a specific article that defines criminal trespass. But then they go on and they've got several amendments or several sections to that article which would define criminal trespass or seek to define it in Jefferson Parish, for instance, another section which would define it in Bossier Parish, and so on. And it's very confusing and I thoroughly agree that a criminal law should have uniform application throughout the state. Now to answer to that, the problem that Mr. Jack and Mr. Stinson have raised is for the legislature to delegate this authority to the police juries. And as far as trespass is concerned, the legislature has done that. You may have a different trespass law in say all 64 parishes, but that is what you have different problems in different localities and it should be handled on a local basis. The legislature, I suppose, got tired of fooling with it and finally in about 1969 or '70 they did pass an act which allows the police juries to enact ordinances which define trespass in those parishes. I think that's the way it ought to be handled and as far as the law on pornography, I think that would be a good idea too, because if the legislature is going to define, seek to define pornography all over the state, it might not suit people in one section and it might want something else. I think Mr. Avant's amendment is a good amendment and I suggest that it be passed.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

Mr. Avant Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I certainly agree with Mr. Kilbourne that this is an area in which the legislature cannot pass a uniform statute, uniformly applicable all over the state of Louisiana. Then they should withdraw from that particular field and leave it up to local government as they have done in many other instances such as closing laws, speed limits on city streets, and a hundred other instances that I could cite to you. But I want to read to you, and in five minutes I couldn't read it except in bits of very small print, so I'm just going to summarize for you certain provisions of the Louisiana Criminal Code. That's the criminal code which defines crimes in this state from murder, to rape, to burglary, to arson, to any other thing that the legislature has made a crime under state law. It starts over first, Criminal trespass, except in the parishes of Allen, Assumption, Beauregard, Grant, LaSalle, Livingston, St. Helena, Vernon, Winn and Sabine is the following... Then they go over and they have many many minute details as to what that crime consists of. Then they make a special provision for Jefferson Davis Parish. That crime is defined differently in that parish, that criminal trespass in Bossier Parish. Criminal trespass in Terrebonne Parish, criminal trespass in St. John the Baptist Parish, criminal trespass in Jefferson Parish, criminal trespass in Caddo Parish. Then there are another group of parishes such as Union, is one, where they said well we're not going to get into it in this parish. We're going to let the police jury define it in this parish. The point that I am trying to make, I care not whether they leave it up to local government. There are many things as you travel from one part of this state to the other that as a citizen, you know, are governed by local ordinances. And you know before you go into the parish of East Baton Rouge and open a meat market that you have to comply with local ordinances. You know if you are going to go into the city of New Orleans and build a swimming pool in your yard, you've got to comply with local ordinances. But you have a right to expect that a state crime, defined by the legislature, for which you can be prosecuted in a State District Court will be uniform all over the state, and not that if you go into one parish the crime of theft shall consist of a certain thing whereas if you go into another parish it is something else. If the legislature can do this in respect to the field of criminal trespass, they can do it with any crime. Any crime. We are a highly mobile population. The people of this state journey all over the state every day and they have a right to expect that the criminal law of this state, now I'm not talking about the criminal law of the city of Opelousas or the criminal law of the parish of Jefferson Davis as enacted by those duly constituted ordinances. But I'm talking about state law. The laws of the state of Louisiana. So when you come into court the charge reads "the crime of Louisiana vs. Joe Blow". It should be the same and uniform all over the state of Louisiana. I have no more to say.

Questions

Mr. Lanier Mr. Avant, I am concerned about your opinion as to what effect this proposal would have on some of our wildlife laws, like on shrimping, for example. You have different rules for inside shrimping and outside shrimping. You also have different rules on things like dove seasons or duck seasons and where you can get what different types of things. Is this intended to affect that type of a law?

Mr. Avant No sir. That doesn't have any effect on that, Mr. Lanier.

Mr. Stinson Mr. Avant, your amendment says that uniform application throughout the state. Now what do you mean by uniform application?

Mr. Avant That means that a state criminal statute will, defining a crime, that that crime will be uniformly defined everywhere in the state of Louisiana and it won't consist of one thing in one parish and something else in another parish.

Mr. Stinson Mr. Avant, we've talked about the hunters and the fishermen and so forth, this also would apply to pickets and labor union disputes and labor problems too, wouldn't it?

Mr. Avant If it defines a crime, it will be of uniform application throughout the state.

Mr. Stinson I know, but criminal trespass would not just be the hunting and the fishing it would be a picket with a sign...

Mr. Avant It would be anybody who commits a crime of criminal trespass.

[Reader Note: 2-48. Amendment added; 2-48. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Mr. Casey has a set of amendments. Amendment No. 1. On page 6, delete lines 23 through

23rd Days Proceedings—August 1, 1973

25 both inclusive in their entirety, and we need to add, and to strike out the floor amendments which have been adopted today by Mr. Conroy, Mr. Drew, and now Mr. Avant.

Explanation

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates, I'm not sure that anybody really needs a copy of the amendment to properly understand it. A mere explanation would indicate that it's quite obvious and the intention of my amendment is to delete Section 12 in its entirety, at this time. Of course that's all we can do at this time, but the intention is this, that it's such a complicated area and even the great legal minds in this convention differ, in all honesty, as to the proper method of handling this problem. The intention would be that either the Legislative Committee or individual delegates submit delegate or committee proposals in order to properly resolve this problem after proper committee hearings. I think proper study should be given to this problem in its relation to two other proposals in the convention. First of all, the Committee on Local and Parochial Government, does in itself solve some of the problems on local laws. That's number one. Number two, in the area of special laws, that is certainly affected by the Equal Protection Section of the Bill of Rights. So those things taken into consideration, I think, will acquire a much more intelligent, in depth, thorough study of this particular problem. And although as a member of the Legislative Committee I personally would like to feel the satisfaction of having completed everything, I think to do the right kind of job, this particular section requires further study. All I'm urging now is that we delete Section 12, that we adopt then, after deletion of this, it would be in order for us to adopt the entire Legislative Article and at a later date we could certainly add a committee proposal. I would urge adoption of this amendment.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted; 88-15. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Motion

Mr. Blair Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I move approval of this proposal as amended.

Further Discussion

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, there is one particular section which we have approved which bothers me quite a bit. Now let me see if I can explain it to you. That's the Veto Session. If the principle of the Veto Session is an automatic Veto Session, I think, is very good. But where you require two-thirds of the elected members of the legislature to adjourn sine die prior to the end of the five-day period I think is going to cause us some trouble and possibly will make that particular section of our constitution the laughing stock of the state if we should have a Veto Session in which there is no real possibility of overriding one of the governor's vetoes, then we cannot adjourn even though we decide that issue on the first day, we cannot adjourn because a short session, that is the shortness of the House or the shortness of the Senate.

If this should happen, for instance let me give you an example, and this is very much possible. I hope you will listen. Suppose one of the governor's vetoes show up. Only thirty show up and that's a good possibility. If five of those Senators say that that they will not vote to override a veto under any circumstances, then the rest of the legislature is just spinning its wheels. We will not be able to accomplish a thing in the world. And yet in the same session, if we have five Senators to say that they will not adjourn sine die, then we have to wait until the end of the five day period before we can go home. And what are the papers going to say? What are the people going to say?

We have written it in the constitution. Now I think that we ought to be able to allow the adjournment sine die with a majority of the legislature, because if we cannot get a two-thirds majority on any bill, we are wasting our time. I just ask you that because when I get through with this, if the chairman will let me, I'm going to ask that we take from the table that particular section so we can change it.

If this stated two-thirds of those present and voting, that would be alright. But it says two-thirds of the elected members which means that if it's the Senate, you've got to have at least 26, and the House, you've got to have at least twenty before you can adjourn.

If you have a short House, or you have a short Senate, you are going to be in trouble and we are going to be spending about ten thousand dollars a day of the taxpayers money...

Mr. Henry Now, Senator, Senator, your motion is not debatable so you have already made it, I'm going to have to ask you not to...

Mr. De Blieux I haven't made it yet, I'm just...

Mr. Henry I'm sorry. Well, it looks like you are going to and in the interest of fairness, I think you've made your point so don't over-state your case.

Mr. De Blieux Well, that's the only point I want to make, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Henry Thank you, sir, and did you make your motion?

Speak into the mike. I'll recognize you, sir.

Motion

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Chairman, now if I'm in order, I'd like to make a motion that we take from the table the vote by which we reconsidered that particular section so that we may be able to revise it and get something that we can work with.

[Motion to reconsider rejected: 40-58.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Reverend Landrum insists on his amendments which were passed out the other day.

Amendment No. 1, page 12, line 18 add the following, "Section 29." That number probably needs to be changed to correspond now.

"Statement of economic interests." Section blank.

Each member of the legislature shall file a sworn statement of his or her economic interests. This statement shall be filed annually with the Secretary of State and shall be a public record.

Failure to file a statement within the time prescribed shall be cause for forfeiture of the office.

Explanation

Mr. Landrum Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I guess this section could be referred to as "restoration of confidence," or we could look at it even in another sense of national security. If anything this state needs and this country needs, is for the people to have confidence in their elected officials.

In 1921, the delegates of that convention thought it was wise to put this particular provision in the constitution. At that time, I would think, the people had more confidence in elected officials than what they have today [...] not that I am saying that our elected officials today are not worthy of confidence because I believe many of our elected officials are worthy of confidence. But there are those who have spoiled their influence. And that's why I think it is wise to put this particular provision back into the constitution. Let the people know that you really have good intentions of serving them. That you are going to be honest and above board in your doing? Now maybe some of you have so much that you don't want to divulge. That's why, maybe why you don't want to hear me, but I'm a preacher and many people don't want to hear the gospel. But nevertheless I preach it anyway. But I think it should be in the constitution. Certainly it will not hurt for it to be in the constitution.

If it was wise back in 1921 when the confidence was far greater than what it is today, then I would think that it would be wise to put it in now to help to restore that dwindling confidence in our government. This is our government and we've got to do everything in our power to keep the people loving our system of government.

And they are getting to the point where they are so disenchanted with elected officials that they won't even take the time out to vote. Then anybody could be president, governor, legislator or any other position.

Thank you.

Questions

Mr. Rayburn Reverend, I don't have a copy of your amendment, I was one of those that left early Saturday, but does it apply to legislators, only, or to all elected public officials?

Mr. Landrum Mr. Rayburn, since we are dealing with the legislature, then I would assume that I can only speak in the area of the legislature. I would be in favor of it for all elected officials.

Mr. Rayburn Well, that's what I thought. I now have a copy of it and it says "members of the legislature only." I thought that since in the spirit of I know you are talking...you are looking for all the sinners, not just one or two.

Mr. Landrum Right.

Point of Order

Mr. Denney As I understand it, this is an original suggestion, proposition or draft and therefore it is defined as a proposal. It has been introduced, however, as an amendment.

Under the rules, No. 37, it seems to me it is a delegate proposal and therefore it should be referred to the committee.

Ruling of the Chair

Mr. Henry It's...we looked at the rules a while ago. It was my considered opinion prior to looking at the rules that you are right, that this is a delegate proposal that should be committed to the proper committee. However, it is not, as such. While it is, it isn't. It's really an amendment to the proposal.

Therefore, I think that this body will have to dispose of the amendment either by adopting it or by rejecting it, at which time it could be submitted to the Legislative Committee.

But under our rules, the procedure with which Reverend Landrum is proceeding I think is correct.

Mr. Denney In other words, Mr. Chairman, if I want to bring up an entirely new subject, I can bring it up in the form of an amendment?

Mr. Henry The way our rules are drawn, I think they can be circumvented in this manner, yes, sir.

Mr. Denney Even under Rule 37, Mr. Chairman?

Mr. Henry It is my opinion that they could be, yes, sir.

Question

Mr. Burns Reverend, will you tell me just what you mean by economic interest? In other words, does that mean that every legislator has to give a full report of how he earns his living, or if he's in different types of businesses. Or is that just with reference to his income?

In other words, just what do you mean by economic interest? It's such a general, far-reaching expression.

Mr. Landrum A full disclosure, Mr. Burns, a full disclosure.

Further Discussion

Mr. Casey Mr. Chairman and delegates. It's certainly difficult to argue against what might appear to be motherhood and what is certainly possibly a motherhood amendment to the legislative article.

But I must submit to you that it would do well for each delegate first to refer back to Section 8, Conflict of Interest, which we have already adopted in this convention as the Conflict of Interest Article pertaining to the legislative office which requires the legislature to enact a code of ethics prohibiting conflict between public duty and private interest of the members of the legislature.

It was intended by the committee, and I would hope by the delegates to this convention that all matters pertaining to the ethics and conduct of public officials...of the members of the legislature, would be covered in Section 8 and I submit to you that the legislature itself would be the authority to make the requirement that is being proposed in this amendment.

The Committee on the Legislature discussed the ethics area and the conflict of interest area, I think at length and thoroughly. If you would also refer to Article III Section 29 and 30 of today's constitution, you will note that today's constitution does contain certain specific provisions pertaining to the personal interest of legislators have in bills to the sale and trade of votes and conduct of that type. It was intended by the committee on the legislature not to in any way have in our constitution an itemization of specifics or matters affecting specific conduct of legislators. This is a matter of general nature, it should be set forth in statutes and the regulation of the conduct of individual legislators could be more thoroughly and properly contained in statutory material. We are certainly concerned, for instance, about what is the definition of economic interest. We don't know that, and I think would instigate, certainly a certain amount of litigation just to interpret that particular word.

I am not against the concept, but I think it properly belongs in the statute and we should leave that matter to the legislature.

I would urge defeat of this amendment.

Appeal from Ruling of the Chair

Mr. Arnette Ladies and gentlemen, it seems, I'm not going to argue the merits or demerits of this particular proposal, but it seems to me that this is an entirely new subject that is not germane whatsoever to the proposal that was proposed by the committee.

And it also seems that if we are going to allow delegate proposals introduced in this matter, that there is no point in having committees and I think what we need to do is overrule a ruling of the chair and say that this is not a germane amendment and, therefore, it should be referred to committee as a delegate proposal and I so move at this time.

Further Discussion

Mr. Roy Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention. I rise in support of Mr. Arnette's motion, I'll tell you for two reasons.

One, we will never get any proposal even close to being finalized if we allow delegate proposals to come to us for deliberation in a helter-skelter manner when maybe if that proposal had been presented to the committee at a proper time, the committee would at least be able to give us some input as to what it may have heard, or not heard with respect to that idea.

23rd Days Proceedings—August 1, 1973

Now, this, in my opinion would not prevent the delegate who, after the vote has been proposed and submitted to the committee and rejected, it would not prevent him from then coming to the committee as a whole, which is the body as a whole.

But all it appears to me, without singling out Reverend Landrum cause I know he didn't mean to, is that now for three weeks we have been dealing with this section. There never was any such provision in the section. Obviously, that was known to anyone who had read the section. Therefore, it appears that this particular proposal could have been submitted several weeks ago, committed to the committee for their consideration, and then if they had rejected it, we would have at least the right to discuss it today, and I certainly would like Reverend Landrum to have the right to bring it up.

But that's not how it has come about. At the last minute, we are asked to discuss something that none of us have any idea about what the Legislative Committee may or may not have done on it. All I am saying is that I certainly want every delegate to have the right at any time that is in an orderly fashion to bring up whatever proposal he or she wants. But I want that proposal to first go to the committee that should have heard it and then if that committee refuses to give the redress that the delegate thinks is necessary, let him bring it to us as a whole.

For that reason, I think that we should overrule the chair, and we should declare that in the future if any amendment comes up that was not a part of the original proposal, that it should be initially relegated to the committee that heard the matter and thereafter, if the delegate is not satisfied, it should then come on up to us for consideration.

Point of Order

Mr. Kean Is it in order to offer a substitute motion to the motion that is now on the floor?

Mr. Henry The motion to appeal the ruling of the chair?

Mr. Kean Yes.

Mr. Henry I don't believe so, no. What would your motion be?

Mr. Kean My motion would be to commit this proposal to the Committee on Legislative Powers and Functions.

Mr. Henry No, sir. That would not be in order because the chair has ruled that it's an amendment rather than a proposal, sir. And amendments are not susceptible to being committed.

Mr. Kean An amendment would not be susceptible to being committed back to a committee?...

Mr. Henry The whole proposal could be, but not the amendment. No, sir. We have no mechanics for that.

Point of Order

Mr. Nunez Would it be in order to table the motion to overrule the ruling of the chair and then vote on the original motion?

Mr. Henry It would be in order to move to table the motion to overrule the chair, but then you would have to make another motion which would have to be made pending the outcome of that motion, Senator. So it would be rather confusing, to say the least.

Mr. Nunez Well, I don't want to make it any more confusing, but I am just trying to find...

Mr. Henry I'm going to try to stay with you as long as I can...

Further Discussion

Mr. Off Mr. Chairman, delegates, whether I like the rule or not immediately. It is my opinion that the chair is correct in its ruling and that we should proceed to consider the amendments in the event that you do not like this procedure. It would seem to me that you should amend the rules and not seek to overrule the chair.

Even though I do not like the prolonged debate, and though I may not like and I may agree with the arguments presented by Mr. Roy, I must disagree with him in the interpretation of the rules. I agree with the chair. I hope that you will sustain the ruling of the chair and then let the member proceed to amend the rules and we will end it.

Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Flory Mr. Chairman and delegates, I rise to call to your attention something that I think is extremely important and involved in the question as far as the interpretation of the rules this morning.

Let me suggest to you what you are about to do, is to give up the right of our delegates to present to this convention, by amendment, their views as regards those things which a committee may have left out in their proposal.

Now I received this morning this xeroxed copy of all of the articles and sections that have been left out of the Executive Proposal. And I suggest to you that the only way that you think that one of the sections that have been left out should go back in the new constitution, that the only way you can do it, is by amendment on the floor, by adding a new section to their proposal. So that I suggest to you that if you don't sustain the chair, we are going to meet ourselves coming back on this thing in the days ahead. And to give up each delegate's right not to submit, by amendment, a section that has been left out in a committee proposal, I think would be a very dangerous precedent.

Now it's unfortunate that the question arises at this time. But I suggest to you that the chair is correct in deciding the point of order that is raised and I would ask that you sustain the chair in his position.

Further Discussion

Mrs. Warren Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I think if you will just go back a little bit and you can remember what our chairman said in the offset of this convention, he said you're going to make the rules, you make them like you want them, and when you make them you are going to live with them.

I think today we should start living with them. I think that we could have saved time if we had gone on and supported the chair and let Reverend Landrum put his amendment through. If you didn't like it, all you had to do was vote against it. If you wanted it, you voted for it.

If you didn't like the rules, then send the rules back to the committee and then let it come back to the floor.

I'm in support of sustaining the chair's ruling.

[Previous Questions Ordered.]

Point of Information

Mr. Singletary Was there a motion made to overrule the chair?

Mr. Henry Yes, sir, Mr. Arnette, I believe, moved to overrule, or appeal the ruling of the chair.

Chair ruled that the Landrum amendments were in order, that they were amendments to the proposal and therefore could be considered now rather than being committed to the Legislative Committee to which ruling an appeal was made of the chair...To which ruling of the chair, an appeal was made by Mr. Arnette.

[Rolls are called. Chair sustained.]
9 - 10.]

Further Discussion

Mr. Schmitt This is one of the few times of which I have come before the committee to speak and I feel this is of grave importance.

There has been some issue as to whether or not the term economic interests would instill litigation in the State of Louisiana.

I'd just like to suggest to you that the passage of any parts of a new constitution... or a total new constitution will definitely be the hallmark of many... much litigation for the next 25, or 30, 40 or 50 years. Some sections of our present constitution which were adopted in 1921 haven't even been ruled on up to the present time.

The purpose of this amendment is a very honorable purpose. I believe what it does requires those who represent various interest groups to make those facts known to those whom they represent.

Now, there will be many objections to this and the primary objections would be to those who would feel that they have something to lose by the adoption of this amendment. I feel that a Senator or Representative who claims to represent the poor people, should be able to have these facts bared so that others can examine them and see whether or not their real economic interest is with the poor people or whether they have got millions and millions of dollars worth of property in oil or in some other type of area.

And I also feel that someone who claims to represent some particular type of business should have these facts bared to the people because he doesn't really represent that interest. Perhaps he represents the poor people.

But I don't believe that the people of the state have anything to lose by the adoption of Reverend Landrum's amendment. My father is a state representative. I'm sure he has nothing to fear by the disclosure of what his economic interests are. And I'm sure that all the legislators, Senators or Representatives here have nothing to fear, either.

I would suggest to you that this will be one of the greatest steps forward that the State of Louisiana can make. This will be one particular proposal, or one amendment which will cause the legislators to be more responsive to their people. The people will be able to see... does that man represent me, or is the reason that he voted on this particular bill or resolution for some other type of interest... for some other type of economic group.

I believe that you should lay the facts on the table. I don't have anything to hide and I don't think any of the other delegates here have anything to hide. If I was worth millions and millions of dollars, I'd have no qualms about letting this be known to the people. And I don't feel that those who are worth that much money or do have these different diversified interests should have anything to fear.

I rise in support of Reverend Landrum's amendment. I believe this economic amendment is a good amendment, and it is good amendment, and I would request your support for this amendment.

Questions

Mr. Bollinger Delegate Schmitt, you stated that you thought if a legislator was representing the poor people, in effect he should be poor?

Mr. Schmitt I never said he should be poor... let me answer the question, please, he should have the guts, he should have the morality to let his people know where his economic interests lie. I believe that a person, even though he is worth five, ten, fifteen, twenty million dollars can still represent the poor people. At least they will be able to evaluate whatever type of legislative bills that he passes in the light of what the true facts are.

Mr. Burns Mr. Schmitt, I'm a little confused about this, especially in view of some of your statements. Do I understand this economic amendment to mean that before a legislator voted on each individual bill, that he would have to make a disclosure or declaration of some sort as to whether he had any economic interest in that particular bill?

Mr. Schmitt No. The amendment itself states that this statement shall be filed annually. As an example, if a person owns some stock in a certain corporation, he would have to divulge which corporations he owns stocks in. If he owns land, he would have to divulge where the land is located, how much land he owns, what is the fair market value of that land.

Let's lay the cards on the table.

Mr. Guidry When you say economic interest, would that also include if you own a life insurance policy where the insurance company invests say on the stock market which covers any and everything that the legislature ever votes on regardless of the subject...

Mr. Schmitt I'm not saying that they couldn't vote on any particular subject, and that's now what this amendment says.

Mr. Guidry I realize that, but it says economic interests.

Mr. Schmitt Well, what's the matter with you having to say how much life insurance you have? I don't see anything wrong with that at all. I don't mind telling how much life insurance I have.

Mr. Guidry Well, I don't know who the... business it is other than my own personal.

Mr. Schmitt Maybe this can divulge how much you are worth and that might be one of the things that people would take into consideration of whether or not you represent their interest.

Mr. Guidry Well, in other words you are covering in this anything, that is... economic interest could cover just about anything, is that right?

Mr. Schmitt Economic interest would cover anything in which you have an equitable interest.

Mr. Guidry Well, that changes from day to day with maybe fifty members of the legislature. Does he have to file from day to day?

Mr. Schmitt You know and I know this doesn't change day to day, but it would change periodically and you would have to file amendments.

Mr. Guidry In other words every day the stock market changes, you've got to reevaluate your stock...

Mr. Schmitt It says annually.

Mr. Guidry Annually.

Mr. Schmitt The statement shall be filed annually with the Secretary of State and shall be a public record.

Motion

Mr. Newton Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I think this is a serious proposition. I think it deserves the full consideration of the convention and a full hearing and I, therefore, move to suspend the rules to refer the amendment to the Committee on Legislative Powers and Functions.

Substitute Motion

Mr. Duval I really don't know if it's in order, but I would like to make a substitute motion to table this particular thing rather than to get into suspending the rules. I think it ought to be tabled, and I think that's what I'd do to all amendments adding to the section.

Mr. Henry As a substitute you move that the... to table the amendments?

23rd Days Proceedings—August 1, 1973

Mr. Duval Rather than to start suspending the rules we have, I move to table it, yes, sir.

[Substitute Motion to table rejected:
40-68. Motion to suspend the rules rejected: 52-51.]

Further Discussion

Mr. Weiss Fellow delegates. I speak very briefly to say that I am opposed to this present amendment although it appears to be motherhood, it is much more complicated, and I think that we should vote on this and get it over with.

The point being that this is well taken care of in the Section A of the present article which cites the conflict of interest and, therefore, I think it's well taken care of in that respect. It's not at all intended to find out how much people have in their possession as to how they vote.

Some of our famous national senators are some of the most wealthy people in the nation and vote for the poorest of the people as well as some of the resolutions before the Congress. But nonetheless, I think that this is not the issue right now.

I'd like to spend a moment citing a very important thing that has happened at this convention at this time and that is as regards to procedure. I'm happy that we did pass the motion to support the chair and I think we should get this matter behind us because we are going to be bound up here in procedure if we are not.

In 1945 Justice Frankfurter stated that the history of American freedom is in no small part the history of procedure.

This has been paraphrased to state that the history of successful state constitutions and modernization is in no small measure the history of procedure. We must get this procedure under way, support the chair, and vote on this issue. I would only ask that the delegates who are delaying this convention would more seriously consider their amendments and try and bring these amendments to the committees which have spent long periods deliberating this and not to bring up an amendment at the tail end of a proposal which confuses the entire convention. I think this is the issue we must face.

At the present time I think this amendment will be voted down, but I hope in the future that the delegates, and we are the ones that are responsible for delaying this constitution, I can assure you it is not the chair nor the members of the research staff or others who have helped us a great deal, but rather our own procedural inadequacies, and I plead with you to go directly if you have an amendment, to the people who have deliberated on this for six months, and discuss it with them before bringing it before this convention.

I think Reverend Landrum's amendment is clearly indicated in Conflict of Interest, Section B, and I ask you to vote against his amendment.

[Previous Quot. on ordered.]

Closing

Mr. Landrum Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I think some of you may have had the cog idea to this amendment. I'm not concerned really about how much you have but I believe, as I stated earlier, that the people we must try to restore their confidence in government. And in the minds of many people every elected official has an awful lot of money and all this money has been obtained through illegal means. And so I would think that it would be wise, even for you who mean well, to try to clear yourself of this type of thinking. It was in the early constitution and I'm not for just changing things just to be changing, some things are very good about the old constitution. Certainly the preamble of the old constitution was a very good one. I think this particular section is a very good one. Therefore I urge that you support this amendment.

Questions

Mr. Reeves Reverend, what are, in your terminology, what are economic interests? Are they the entire assets, both liquidated, and entire assets of an individual?

Mr. Landrum I would think all of your assets, Mr. Reeves. Someone mentioned earlier about insurance policies. Certainly there is nothing wrong with disclosing insurance policies but I wasn't really too concerned about insurance policies. But now, if you are representing an insurance company then I would think that you have a conflict there. Mr. Casey mentioned about Section 8. I believe most of those words are mine, in that section.

Mr. Reeves Let me ask one other question. Do you feel that this section completely discriminates against legislators in that it does not involve itself with other members of public officials including assessors, governors, clerks of court, etc., sheriffs, and go on down the line? I mean if we're going to make folks like Bubba Henry put down how much money they make and where they get it from, let's do the same thing to Lawrence Chehardy.

Mr. Landrum Mr. Reeves, we are dealing, at this time, with the legislative proposal and so I addressed myself to the legislative proposal. Now when we get to the assessor's section or any other section, well then we'll deal with that section.

Mr. Reeves Lastly, I'd like to ask how will this be enforced? I think you have, in my opinion, of course, you have something unenforceable. But if you have the answer, lay it on me.

Mr. Landrum How would it be enforced?

Mr. Reeves Yes sir.

Mr. Landrum Well how do we enforce all our laws?

Mr. Reeves Well see Reverend, I don't think you understand the impossibility and the impracticality of enforcing this particular section. For instance, let me address this in a question. If I had a large sum of money, for instance, $100,000, one of the easiest ways to, in cash money, one of the easiest ways to circumvent this would be simply to put this money in my child's name and make me the entire and total controller over this. This would be my assets because my little boy is only four years old. He couldn't do anything with it, but what I'm saying is you've got an unenforceable...

Mr. Henry Mr. Reeves, your time is out now by about 10 seconds. I'm sorry. I'm sorry, Reverend Landrum. Go ahead and make your...

Mr. Landrum If your child's $1,000 multiply into $1,000,000 next year or two years from now, well then, we're going to know about your child.

[Amendment rejected: 24-84. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Mr. Drew, with your amendments, sir? Amendment No. 1. On page 12, line 10, insert the following:

"Section 28. Taking Office.

A. Members of the legislature shall take office 30 days prior to the date for convening of the first session of each term for which members are elected every four years.

B. A person elected to fill an unexpired legislative term shall take office within 30 days after the secretary of state promulgates the election returns."

Mr. Drew Mr. Clerk, we are confused again on amendments. The amendment that I am offering at this time reads: Section A. Members of the legislature shall take office on the same day as the governor and other officials elected statewide.

23rd Days Proceedings—August 1, 1973

Do you have a copy of that?

Mr. Poynter I know these were passed out last week and we xeroxed some more copies and they apparently grabbed the wrong set, Mr. Drew, but I can certainly get more copies of that amendment.

Explanation

Mr. Drew Let me read the amendment to you, if you will, Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention. This is a new section. It possibly should have been offered as an amendment to Section 2, dealing with the annual sessions and convening of the legislature. But due to the time that we spent on that, I felt it inadvisable at that time. The way this section reads: "A. Members of the legislature shall take office on the same day as the governor and other officials elected statewide." Now the date is provided under the article on the Executive Department. The purpose of this amendment is to let the legislature go into office prior to the time of the convening of the legislature. Having only been elected in the fall of the previous taking office when the legislature convened in May of 1972, I saw what a burden it was to not take office until such time as the legislature actually convened. For that reason, I feel that if other elected state officers are going to take office earlier, and I believe the present Executive Article provides for the second Monday in March, that that's correct. Then I think the legislature should take office on the same date. The second part, "B", reads as follows: "A person elected to fill the remainder of an unexpired legislative term shall take office within 30 days after the secretary of state promulgates the election returns." Now there has been a suggestion that possibly this section should read "within 30 days after the election," in order to expedite the matter so that one who is elected to fill an unexpired term could immediately take office. I did not change it. I would have no serious objections except I rather question the advisability of allowing them to take office before the returns are promulgated. I believe that would have to be done before they would be entitled to take office. What this would do, by using the word "within", it would permit a legislator who was elected to fill an unexpired term to take office immediately upon the promulgation of the returns so that there would not be an indefinite period of time in which that particular district had no Representative in the legislature. Now there will be the same questions raised on this that have been raised on other amendments pertaining to the fact that it violates the act which authorized this convention as to the reducing terms of office. It is very probable that when this think is worked out in the final by Style and Drafting or taking into consideration our acts authorizing this convention to draft a new constitution that it will be something before this provision could become effective, due to the prohibition against reducing terms of office. But we are not looking for this year or for next year or necessarily 1976. We are looking at a long time project and I think the people of this state will be much better served by having their legislators take office at the same time as other elected officials. For these reasons I ask your adoption of the amendment.

Questions

Mr. Weiss Do you know what the opinion of the Committee on Legislative Powers is in regard to your amendment, sir?

Mr. Drew No objections. I've talked to Senator Blair, he has no objection for himself, not for the committee. I have not discussed it with the committee.

Mr. Casey I have two questions. First of all, Mr. Drew, what is the requirement for the period of time within which the secretary of state must promulgate the election returns?

Mr. Drew I don't think that there is any particular time. The secretary has always been very prompt as soon as he has the returns. Now you are talking about returns from a Representative District or a Senatorial District, not statewide returns, so it should be a very brief time, in my opinion.

Point of Information

Mr. Casey The other question I have, I'm not sure if this should be a point of information addressed to the Chairman and to the Clerk, Mr. Chairman and Mr. Clerk, or whether Mr. Drew would be the one to answer this. I'm concerned about the mere technicality of the location of this matter in Section 28 which I think Mr. Drew had indicated that possibly more properly belongs in another section or should be placed in another area of the Legislative Article. Under the duties assigned to Styling and Drafting, is it possible that Section 28 could be more properly placed in an orderly fashion in an order where it rightfully belongs?

Mr. Henry It's the opinion of the Chair that that is one of the functions of the Committee on Style and Drafting insofar as location and putting it into an orderly fashion, Mr. Casey.

Question

Mr. Abraham Mr. Drew, would you be in favor of amending the Paragraph B simply to state that the person elected to fill a vacancy, the remainder of an unexpired legislative term, shall take office 30 days after the election? That fixes the actual time that he would take office as related to the date of the election rather than what time.

Mr. Drew I think if you put it 30 days, you might very well deprive that district for a period of time of having a Representative, Mack: that's the reason I'd rather leave it "within". I think "within" makes it as early as the returns are promulgated, he can immediately take office. I ask for the adoption of the amendment.

Point of Order

Mr. Dennyery Mr. Chairman, for the sake of the record, I would raise the same point of order with regard to this "amendment" as I did with regard to Reverend Landrum's. I assume the Chair will make the same ruling.

Ruling of the Chair

Mr. Henry: The Chair would have to rule in accordance with the ruling on the Landrum Amendments, yes sir.

[The speaker's question related. Amendment adopted. 27-14. Motion for reconsideration tabled. Proposed passed. 27-14.]

Personal Privilege

Mr. Blair Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I want to thank all the committee members for all their help. Thank you as delegates, I appreciate your patience and I hope we didn't keep you here too long. Thank you for everything.

Mr. Henry Thank you, Senator, you and your committee. Now you'll get back and have your shot at everybody else, as you did the other day, I believe.

[The speaker's question related. Amendment adopted. 27-14.]

RESOLUTIONS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

23rd Days Proceedings—August 1, 1973

Reading of the Resolution

Mr. Poynter The first resolution is Committee Resolution No. 8, by Delegate Stovall, which was reported with amendments, which amendments were adopted by this convention on July 20, 1973, and has been reprinted, and is in your book in the same color now, but it is reprinted. You'll find that "reprinted as engrossed" should be at the top of the copy. A resolution, amended by Delegate Stovall, amending Rule 40 of the standing rules of the convention, to clarify the requirement that each committee proposal shall bear the signature of a majority of the members of the committee.

Explanation

Mr. Stovall Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, we have several procedural matters to deal with. It is my hope that we might deal with them as expeditiously as possible, and I'm sure that with your cooperation that we can do just that. Committee Resolution No. 8 simply changes the word "signature" to "name". The meaning here is that each person of a substantive committee does not have to sign the resolution, but it simply carries the names of those delegates voting for each such proposal which in each case shall be at least a majority of the members of the committee. I encourage your support for this somewhat technical resolution.

[Previous Question ordered. Resolution adopted: 105-3. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Resolution

Mr. Poynter The next resolution is Committee Resolution No. 9, introduced by Delegate Stovall, Chairman on Behalf of the Committee on Rules, Credentials and Ethics. Resolution, to adopt standing rules to regulate the use of duplicating equipment and the distribution of materials to delegates while in session. Now, this one was reported with amendments which were also adopted by the convention on July 20, is reprinted in a blue copy on your desk at the top "reprinted as engrossed".

Explanation

Mrs. Corne Mr. Chairman, delegates, Resolution No. 9 is self-explanatory. It deals with the abuse of using the materials of the convention or having materials printed without the sanction of the Chairman or his designee to the convention. It also prevents the passing around of material to the delegates that does not designate where these materials come from. We have already discussed this. We've discussed it in committee. We've discussed it with the convention, and I move the approval of this resolution.

[Previous Question ordered. Resolution adopted: 106-8. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Resolution

Mr. Poynter The next resolution is Delegate Resolution 26, introduced by Delegates Juneau and others. A resolution relative to amending the standing rules to provide for regulation of lobbying before the Constitutional Convention. Now, this resolution was reported by the committee favorably, and was engrossed and passed on July 20, it was not reprinted since there were no committee amendments. So, as introduced, the resolution is in the appropriate form in your books. Delegate Resolution 26, pink copy.

Explanation

Mr. Juneau Yes, Mr. Chairman. Fellow delegates, briefly, I can explain this resolution very simply. It is in essence the same provision which you now have in the House of Representatives and in the Senate. It's the provision which now controls our legislative body in the state of Louisiana. I made a few changes to conform to the language from a legislative body to a convention body. Additionally, I took out the provision with regard to a photograph, and I took out the provision with regard to putting up the ten dollars. Additionally, the only major change which I consider of any significance is the fact that I took out the provision which calls for a five hundred dollar fine in the proposal which is now enacted into the law in the state legislature. The reason for that, to me, is obvious. I just don't believe that we have the authority under law to impose that kind of sanction. What this provision does, though, is to require lobbyists to register, and if they register it will be kept by the Clerk for the inspection by the public. I submit to you that abuses of that would be readily known by the delegates of this convention. Your weapon in that regard would be the microphone. There was some controversy about the words used so far as definition of who is a lobbyist, and specifically, it defines any person who engages himself for pay or any other consideration. Gentlemen, that's the exact same language which is now in effect in the House of Representatives and the state Senate. I cannot see... I think it's a workable solution. Experience has shown that it works. It's not a hardship on anybody. But the one thing that I've found over the past two weeks, the public wants a registration of lobby bill. I think it accomplishes this. I think that it's a workable, sound solution to the problem, and I would move for its favorable adoption.

Questions

Mr. Jenkins You've explained it to us, Pat. Can you tell us what the reason for it is?

Mr. Juneau I think, Woody, it would make available to this convention a ready, accessible list, if we wanted to ascertain what particular person... what group he is representing. It would be easier for me to know that I could go to the Clerk's office, pull the list, and find out who he is working for and by whom he is employed.

Mr. Jenkins Have you had any problem finding out who any of the lobbyists are when you've inquired of them or someone else?

Mr. Juneau There are about three people that I really, frankly, Woody, don't know who they work for, to tell you the truth.

Mr. Jenkins Have you had any trouble finding out? I mean, when you asked, or asked them?

Mr. Juneau I'll put it this way. I find it sometimes would make it somewhat awkward in a group of people to address that question to a person under the circumstances. I find it very easy for me to go to a record, ascertain the individual's name and look it up and find it. I think that it would serve a useful purpose in that regard.

Mr. Jenkins With regard for the public demand for this, do you know that none of my constituents have requested such a thing or shown any indication that such a proposal would be desirable?

Mr. Juneau Well, my only answer to that, Woody, is according to your votes and my votes, I know that we are not representing the same people.

Mr. Roemer Delegate Juneau, I read your proposal hurriedly twice. I didn't see anything that dealt with delegates themselves who are paid by an association or a group or a permanent employee and have either gotten themselves appointed or elected here. Does this pertain to them in any manner? Do they have to register?

Mr. Juneau The provision, as it's written, would equally apply to delegates, Mr. Roemer, as it does in the current House of Representatives and the Senate, and to be very candid with you, I would have no serious objection to deleting delegates, because I think we all know where you're from, who you work for and whatever your associations are with. But the point I wanted to make, it's identical to the bill that's now enacted into law.

23rd Days Proceedings—August 1, 1973

Mr. Roemer I understand that, and let me see if I understand what you just said. It does apply to delegates, as now written?

Mr. Juneau Yes, sir.

Mr. Roemer I see.

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Juneau, I'm kind of puzzled now about the answer you gave to Mr. Roemer...say about delegates. If, for instance, suppose that a delegate...well, like for instance attorneys, let's say they're probably employed by corporations or organizations or something of that sort. Now, would you say that they would be necessary for them to register and disclose the clients that they represent, whether they vote in their favor or not in their favor here on this floor. If they actually represent those people, wouldn't they be subject to the same rules as any other lobbyist?

Mr. Juneau The provision, to answer your question, Senator De Blieux, the provision states that if you are paid for the purpose of advocating the defeat or passage of any proposition then you are to be registered as a lobbyist. My answer would be, have you found it necessary, for example, to register in the current Senate chamber? If you haven't you wouldn't find it necessary in this chamber. I wouldn't think so, unless you're being specifically paid by any group or client to advocate a defeat, the passage of any particular proposition.

Mr. De Blieux Well, don't you think that that's kind of hard sometimes to determine exactly when a person is lobbying for it, because I go up and down these convention floors here a lot of times, asking people to vote for or against certain provisions. Am I lobbying?

Mr. Juneau Well, Senator De Blieux, does anybody pay you to do that?

Mr. De Blieux The state of Louisiana has paid me.

Mr. Juneau No, I'm not talking about the state of Louisiana, and this bill doesn't apply to the state of Louisiana. Does any group pay you to advocate or to convince me or anyone else here about any particular...if they don't you don't have the problem.

Mr. De Blieux Well, I guess I don't have a problem.

Mr. Henry You've exceeded your time, Mr. Juneau. Mr. Jack, do you want to speak?

Let's go ahead and try to dispose of this. We've whipped it two or three times already.

Mr. Jack, I'm sure that you have some words of wisdom to impart here...import.

Mr. Jack The words of wisdom are "let's kill this thing and get along".

Mr. Henry Is that your motion, sir?

Mr. Jack That's my whole thing.

[Previous question order/d. Resolution adopted 88-21. Motion to rescind is tabled.]

Reading of the Resolution

Mr. Boyner The next resolution, Committee Resolution 10, introduced by Rev. Stovall, Chairman on Behalf of the Committee of Rules, Credentials, and Ethics, and other delegates. A resolution to amend and readopt Rule 30 of the standing rules of the convention to provide for limitations of debate.

Now, this resolution was reported with amendments, which were adopted on July 27, 1973, and for some reason beyond me, was not properly reprinted, and as a result the pages are right now passing out a copy of the actual engrossment as it is here...the official engrossed copy. The pages are coming that way. You can amend this copy. If you want to propose an amendment, an amendment can be drafted to the engrossed copy.

Going straight to the language, Rule No. 30, Limits on debate. Delegates shall not speak more than once to the same question nor more than ten minutes without leave of the convention, except that the mover, proposer or introducer of the matter pending and/or his designee shall be permitted to speak and reply for ten minutes, but not until every delegate choosing to speak has spoken except when the previous question or previous question on the entire subject matter has been ordered. When the previous question has been ordered, the mover, proposer, or introducer shall nonetheless have the right to close as provided in Rule 76, and the time for closing shall not exceed the total of ten minutes.

Explanation

Mr. Bollinger I think it's obvious that we want to adopt an amended rule to speed along the business of the convention. Senator Rayburn had proposed a five minute rule, and in my opinion, and in favor of the other delegates' opinion, this was a little too short of time for individual delegates to ask questions, to present their views, to discuss and debate the matters. I think what the committee has proposed here is a happy medium of ten minutes. It allows for the delegates to ask more questions and probably would develop into less of a gaggle taking the floor, since they would have time to ask a question. I don't think there's any major objection to it. If there is, I'd like to hear it. I move its adoption.

Questions

Mr. Roemer Boysie, as I read it, the proponent or his designees have thirty minutes to speak.

Mr. Bollinger No, Buddy. I think you are wrong. The resolution was amended. The resolution as originally offered to the committee had a five minute rule with a ten minute rebate, which was in addition to closing. In the amendment I presume that reply should have been deleted, but it wasn't. It's interpreted by the committee to mean that the proposer would have a total of twenty minutes, ten minutes opening and ten minutes closing.

Mr. Roemer Well, that's your understanding, but it doesn't seem to read that. It says that the delegates shall not speak more than once to the same question nor more than ten minutes, all right, in the first two lines. Then you say, and/or his designee shall be permitted to speak in reply for ten minutes, and then you get to close for ten minutes. Now, I can conceive of a ten, ten... thirty minutes on behalf of the proponent.

Mr. Bollinger When I read the resolution, as amended, I had the same question, and I asked a few of the members of the committee what they thought, and they did not seem to think that it would go thirty minutes. So, I would think that it would probably be in order to amend it if it is a serious question.

Mr. Roemer Right. Well, your answer is that they didn't seem to think that it would apply, and I'm not saying that I don't care what they think, I do, but I'm just saying what it reads. It reads thirty minutes.

Mr. Bollinger Possibly it does. I think that it would be an interpretation.

23rd Days Proceedings—August 1, 1973

Amendment

Mr. Poynter ...By Rayburn and Stovall, Amendment No. 1, page 1, delete lines 13 through 24, both inclusive. This goes to the printer and a copy which is on your desk...in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Rule No. 30. Limits on Debate. Delegates shall not speak more than once nor more than 5 minutes to the same question without leave of the convention, except that the mover, proposer or introducer of the matter pending and/or his designees shall be permitted to speak for a total of not more than ten minutes for purposes of opening and closing. The mover, proposer, or introducer shall not be recognized to close until every delegate choosing to speak has spoken except when the previous question or the previous question on the entire subject matter has been ordered, but when so ordered, he shall have the right, nonetheless, to close."

Explanation

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, These amendments simply say that the person who is handling the particular proposition shall have a total of ten minutes or a period not to exceed ten minutes. In other words, if he desires to take three minutes in his opening remarks, he can't have over seven minutes to close. It further provides that no one else can have only five minutes. I think that this has worked real well in the last few days. I think that we've made progress, and the only thing it does over and above the rules that we have been temporarily working under, it does allow the person, who is the prime mover, a limit not to exceed ten minutes, if he so desires to use that much time.

Questions

Mr. Roemer Senator, you don't differentiate in your amendment between the period of proposing and the questions that follow. Do you not? There is no differentiation there, is there?

Mr. Rayburn No, sir, I do not, but we've been doing the Chairman has said when a man has exceeded his time, if he wants to take it up in questions, he's exceeded it. If he doesn't want to yield to a question and wants to go ahead in his debate, that's up to the person who's handling the bill.

Mr. Roemer Well, as a delegate who is not up that often at the mike that you're at, I've listened carefully to those who are, and have often been persuaded either by the opening or the closing, and I think that they are very important. I think that you would agree with that. However, there are legitimate questions that arise on the floor after either the opening or closing that need to be asked. It seems to me that under any of these amendments that put a time limit and don't differentiate between the statement and the questions that follow, that we have the problem of a man needs to take a stopwatch up to the microphone with him to keep up where his time is. Don't you see that as a problem?

Mr. Rayburn Well, certainly, Mr. Roemer, but I also see any rule that we would adopt, could be a problem. Because if you're going to allow a person unlimited time to answer questions...if I wanted to prolong the debate, I would try to get eight or ten of my friends to engage in a question and answer deal until I could get the proper amendment prepared or probably persuade a few people to change their mind. And I think we'll have a problem regardless of how hard we try to tie that down, but I do think, and I hope the majority of the delegates here feel, that the rule that we have been operating under for the last several days has worked successfully. I know that they are not perfect, and I don't think that we could adopt any that would be letter perfect.

Mr. Roemer Well, I agree with that. I don't think we could adopt any letter perfect. I think that the rules that we have been under have been too restrictive quite frankly. I just wish that we could come up with an amendment that differentiated between the statement and the questions because I'll turn your example around. If I wanted to defeat something, I would make sure that we had a list of questions that use up all the ten minutes at the initial opening statement and give him no time at all to close.

Mr. Rayburn Well, that would be up to him, and if he realized what you were doing I think most of them around here would know that. He wouldn't have to yield.

Mr. Roemer Well, would you go with me in offering a suggestion to the Chair that we buy everyone a stopwatch so he can keep up with where he stands.

Mr. Rayburn No, sir. I've got one that keeps pretty good time, and anytime that I'm up here and they don't want to listen at me, I want to sit down anyway.

Mr. Staggs Senator Rayburn, in the third line of your amendment you say "without leave of the convention". Suppose a man was presenting a bill and the questions were coming thick and fast; how do you obtain leave of the convention to continue to allow questions to be asked? What's the mechanical means for doing that?

Mr. Rayburn That is if the convention so suspends the rules, as in the present rules. If you suspend the present rules, then this convention will have to grant him that extra time by suspending the rules.

Mr. Weiss Delegate Rayburn, in your proposal, if the mover of a proposal so desires to present his argument in two or three minutes and refuses questions, isn't it possible for those that have questions to ask them from the podium by accepting the podium and then at the conclusion the speaker can answer any questions that were unanswered due to questions that came up in the course of discussion?

Mr. Rayburn Well, doctor, that would be up to the speaker. You have the right to refuse to yield to questions at any time, and certainly that would be up to the person who was handling the bill. If he refused to yield, he would just refuse to yield. Then, if there was something you wanted to bring out you would have to attempt to get recognized and maybe bring out what the question you wanted to ask him during the time you had been recognized to speak on the issue.

Mr. Weiss My point is...the question is any delegate could come to the podium and ask the question before the convention and therefore the concluding remarks would probably answer any questions. Is that right?

Mr. Rayburn Yes, sir. If he got recognized, he could.

Further Discussion

Mr. Bollinger Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, the Rayburn amendment is basically, in fact almost exactly, what the original committee proposal was. The committee voted to amend it to the five minutes to ten minutes, and they thought that the five minutes were not enough. I know that a lot of you, like me, are not attorneys, are not informed of the laws of the state, and need the debate to make up your mind. I think that the debate is essential, and I think that it has been proved that five minutes is not long enough for any opponent to voice his opinion on the bad sides of each proposal. Likewise, if there are good sides, it's very possible that five minutes is not enough time to open and five minutes might not be enough time to close. We've seen almost every speaker up here run out of time. I think that it is obvious that five minutes is not enough. I move the rejection of the amendment.

23rd Days Proceedings—August 1, 1973

Further Discussion

Mr. Asseff Mr. Chairman, delegates, I oppose the amendment for the following reasons: I speak like a streak of lightning so it doesn't really make that much difference to me. I can say more in five minutes than the average person can in fifteen. However, some members here speak very slowly. Many of the delegates are not familiar with the problems, and I think that it would be most unfortunate if we put a gag rule such as this. I feel that at least we should permit the mover of the motion to have ten minutes to explain his proposal and at least ten minutes to close. I have no objection to the other speakers having five minutes. I would suggest perhaps, as a compromise that we permit the mover to use ten minutes to explain his amendment and then the last ten minutes, five to explain. He may have an additional five if he permits himself to be questioned. I get more out of the questioning than I do out of the rest. So I would suggest that we not adopt so restrictive a rule as five minutes. We are here to debate the basic law and I would rather abuse speaking rather than to not let the members say what they want to say. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mrs. Warren Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise to oppose Senator Rayburn's amendment. He said in speaking that the amendment, five minutes had worked well last week. Well, it did probably work well for Senator Rayburn because he's familiar with all of it. He's been in the legislature for a number of years. There are things that I come up with that he will know about, where some of us will not know about. We have eight substantive committees and I have been able to be on one. If you write a proposal, I should be able to ask some questions, and any other delegate should be able to ask questions as to your intent as to what it's all about so we could really vote intelligently about it. So for that reason, I'm going to ask you to oppose Senator Rayburn's amendment and give us a chance to ask some questions that we might be able to deliberate honestly in the interest of our people. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Chatelain Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I too rise in opposition to Senator Rayburn's amendment. I feel there are many of us here who are qualified speakers, many of us who are not. I feel that the professionals in this delegation know when to strike and where to strike. You'll notice they'll strike from all sections of this room. I feel that many of us need more time. I think ten minutes is reasonable and I urge that you defeat the Rayburn amendment.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I'm not going to stand here and tell you that I think this particular amendment is perfect. But I do think it is an improvement. I'm sorry Mrs. Warren, Mr. Wall did not see fit to recognize you. I had nothing to do with that the other day. I do suggest that we try this. If it does not work, we can amend it from time to time as we go on. But I suggest we try it and see. Anytime under our present rules if you want to suspend the provisions of this rule, if you have the votes, you can do it. Let's try this and see if it works. Maybe it won't work. Maybe you'll want to amend it and give them all ten or fifteen minutes. I don't know. But I suggest we try it, and if at any time it proves a hardship, I think we can amend it. We can change it and try something else. I would just offer this amendment, along with Reverend Stovall, in an effort to expedite matters. Certainly, I'm not here to hamstring anyone. I'm not here to keep anyone from talking. If it proves that this rule as adopted, if it is adopted, is working a hardship on someone, I'll certainly be happy to revise it or do something to it to comply with the majority of the wishes of this delegation.

Question

Mr. Weiss Delegate Rayburn, with everyone in such a hurry to get this convention over, don't you envision your proposal cutting it in half almost, to the time that would be spent otherwise?

Mr. Rayburn Well, I think it will have some reduction on it, Dr. Weiss. I don't know how much.

[Amendment adopted: 66-42. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Mr. Henry Are there further amendments, Mr. Clerk?

Mr. Poynter I have none at the desk. Delegate Roemer had indicated that he was preparing amendments. I don't know if he wishes those, or if they are here or what.

Mr. Roemer Mr. Chairman, I will do it at the parliamentary procedurally correct time. All my amendment is designed to do is to add five minutes for questions at the opening. I personally learn more from the questions sometimes than I do from the statements. I just specifically limited the questions to five minutes. That's my only change. They are being prepared now. They should be prepared in a few minutes. If you want to...I'll do it tomorrow if the time comes up tomorrow. It makes no difference to me.

Mr. Henry The problem is, Mr. Roemer, that if we wait until tomorrow, you've got to introduce a separate resolution. Let me see if I understand what your amendment would provide. Your amendment would provide that the proponents would have five minutes to answer questions after he used his ten minutes to open?

Mr. Roemer Yes. My amendment would only guarantee five minutes for questions, if necessary, in addition to Sixty's opening and closing time limit.

Mr. Henry In other words the proponent of an amendment or a proposal would have in effect a total of fifteen minutes, ten to talk and five to answer questions.

Mr. Roemer That's correct.

Mr. Henry We don't have those amendments, but is there any objection by anyone to us going ahead and...

Mr. Roemer I'd rather them see them, Mr. Chairman. I know how I feel...

Mr. Henry I just wanted to find out. Apparently there is objection.
Senator Rayburn.

Mr. Rayburn I was just curious to know if you are going to let the proponents have five minutes for answering questions, what would happen to the opponents, if somebody wanted to ask them a question?

Mr. Roemer I make no provision for that, Sixty. That's true. My only desire was in the explanation of a proposal, it originally hits the floor. I know in our Committee, Mr. Chairman, Revenue, Finance and Taxation, ten minutes to explain these proposals is going to be pretty hairy.

Mr. Henry Well, in as much as we don't have the amendments and it's not the disposition of the body to consider anything of this sort, then we are going to have to proceed unless you want to take a recess. a five minute closing.

23rd Days Proceedings—August 1, 1973

Mr. Roemer No, I'm not asking for any undue time period. I'm just saying that my amendment is ready. They're being prepared now. Do with them what you want.

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Chairman, I'm also concerned about the question period. I just wondered if it might not be possible that we could go on to the next resolution. If we can just lay this on as side for a minute or two while it's being prepared and go to the next resolution.

Mr. Henry Do you want to move to return it to the calendar?

Motion

Mr. De Blieux That's what I'd like to do. Return it to the calendar for the time being, Mr. Chairman.

[Motion to return the Resolution to the calendar rejected: 44-57.]

Recess

[Quorum Call: 96 delegates present and a quorum.]

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1, Page 1, delete lines 13 through 24, both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Rule No. 3D. Limits on Debate
Delegates shall not speak more than once, nor more than five minutes to the same question without leave of the convention except that the mover, proposer or introducer of the matter pending and/or his designees shall be permitted to speak for a total of not more than ten minutes for the purpose of opening, plus five minutes for questions. The mover, proposer or introducer shall not be recognized to close until every delegate choosing to speak has spoken except when the previous question, or the previous question on the entire subject matter, has been ordered, in which so ordered they shall have the right nonetheless to close and shall be limited to five minutes for closing."

We need a second amendment, Mr. Roemer, to delete the Rayburn amendment.

Explanation

Mr. Roemer The amendment would have our rules of speech-making work as follows: That is we would each be limited to five minutes in our discussion of a subject matter except the proponent or the introducer of the proposal who would be limited as follows: Not more than ten minutes in his opening remarks, an additional five minutes for questions in those opening remarks, and five minutes maximum on his close, but he would be guaranteed five minutes at the close regardless of how much of the ten minutes he took at the beginning. This is what I'm trying to do. Similar to Senator Rayburn, I am not trying to tell you this is a perfect amendment. It is not. Some subject matter will not require the ten minutes opening, and yet, some delegates, myself included perhaps, will abuse the privilege and take the full ten minutes. However, that doesn't bother me nearly as much as those subject matters which might require ten minutes and we would limit ourselves to five. Second point...I personally learn oftentimes as much in the question and answer session as I do in the opening and closing statements. My amendment would insure at least a five minute speech period of questions and answers if needed. In addition I think a man or woman who has given the time and consideration enough to present a proposal or bring a proposal for our consideration ought to have the right to close for five minutes on that proposition. My amendment would do those three things--allow an adequate time for opening, set aside a specific time for questions, and guarantee

Questions

Mr. Thompson Mr. Roemer, you're going to have ten minutes to open, five minutes for questions and five minutes to close. That's twenty minutes.

Mr. Roemer That's correct.

Mr. Thompson In other words you're raising the fifteen minutes.

Mr. Roemer That is correct. By the period of five minutes of questions, Richard. Now my point here, and I want you to understand it. You might disagree with me. Questions can be very important and the subsequent answers to those questions can be even more important, particularly on the proponent's other resolution. For example, in Revenue, Finance and Taxation we dealt some five or six months with that question. I don't know just half of the subject matter. Many of you probably know even less because you haven't been privileged to hear either the members of our committee or the testimony that we have had. I think you ought to give Revenue, Finance and Taxation the time and consideration necessary to explain a three dollar license plate, necessary to explain ad valorem, necessary to explain things that the people find at the heart of this constitution--their taxes. That's just one example. I could go on and on--Local and Parochial, Bill of Rights, etc., etc.

Mr. Hunez Mr. Roemer, evidently we haven't had a scarcity of speakers in this convention. Evidence from the number and from the time that we have taken and evidence from the fact that we do need to put a limitation on the amount of time each speaker can take. I don't recall where a speaker was denied the right to ask a question. Maybe of one speaker, but we have had speakers to follow that speaker that that same question could be asked too. It seems to me that we are opening it to a broader time spectrum than we have had. I thought that the questions...and don't you agree...that the questions that were asked and the number of people who wanted to ask question, I know of no time where a speaker was denied or a person who wanted to ask a question was denied that time. Maybe from the original speaker, but somewhere down the line someone got up and spoke if the subject was pertinent. Don't you agree?

Mr. Roemer I do agree with you, Sammy. Let me say this. Often times the questions are directed to a remark of the speaker, not necessarily a remark that is in the proposal itself. If you have to confine yourself to asking the next speaker the same question, he doesn't know what the first speaker said. Now understand, all I'm asking is for three hundred seconds. Three hundred seconds, not indefinitely. I've still got limits here.

Mr. Hunez Three hundred seconds times a hundred and thirty-two delegates is how many seconds?

Mr. Roemer Well, I don't open it to a hundred and thirty-two. You don't understand the amendment, Senator.

Mr. Hunez I think I understand it very well. You don't understand your amendment you're proposing is going...

Mr. Roemer I open it to one speaker for five minutes a question, Sammy. Not for a hundred and thirty-two.

Mr. Chatelain Wasn't it a fact, Delegate Roemer, less than the total time used, you would do away with the very thing you are discussing now. There would be less speakers parading to the podium rather than have just one man do it right. So we would all understand what's going on. A lot of us are not professional speakers. A lot of us are not skilled in the art of politics. Would it give us a better chance, sir?

Mr. Roemer No question about it. I've found myself being guilty of coming to this microphone when really all I wanted to do was ask a question of the first speaker. I was denied the right under these rules and so I had to come up here and parade for three or four minutes. I think we can do away with that. The heart of this issue is the discussion of the issues. I agree with limitations. I only ask for three hundred more seconds for questions.

Further Discussion

Mr. Duval Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise in support of the Roemer amendment for the following reasons. I think the most viable portion of the Roemer Amendment is guaranteeing five minutes to close. If a committee has studied this matter for six months, gets up and makes a five minute presentation, under the Rayburn amendment he cannot answer any questions because he's precluding his right to close. We all want to get to the truth of the matter, to the salient issues and so he is not going to be able to answer any questions at all because he has got to close in five minutes to close. I think that it is essential that we give the proponent, the committee, a five minute right to close. Under the Rayburn amendment either he waives...he doesn't answer any questions which automatically weakens the committee's position if you don't answer any questions, and if he does answer questions, he's forfeiting his right to close. I think all of you know how important it is to at least have the right to close, to be able to at one time, one person answer all the arguments that have been made and present his position after all speakers have spoken. I hope all of you do understand that this rule would only apply to the proponent, one man out of a hundred and thirty-two. Everyone else would be limited to five minutes. It's quite simple as Mr. Roemer said, it's only three hundred seconds. I think it's three hundred seconds which would benefit the convention. All of us, even though we are all extremely knowledgeable, don't know everything. I think this particular provision gives us a chance to find out a little bit more. If you are interested in seeking a little more knowledge, getting a little more facts, then you will vote for the Roemer provision. If you are interested in ignorance and not ventilating the issues, then you'll vote against it. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. A. Jackson Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise in support of the Roemer amendment because I believe that it is important that the delegates are aware of the work of the committees. Now we have referred these very important matters to committees and they have studied them. When you allow only five minutes to deal with some of the very tough issues that will come before this convention, there's certainly not enough time for delegates to become aware of some of the reasons why we have certain ideas being expressed by way of sections and by way of overall proposals. We are going to be dealing with some really tough points of law, especially in Bill of Rights Proposal. I think that it is important that the individual rights of citizens of this state be protected by way of some of the sections in the Bill of Rights Proposal. I know that they will be controversial. I know that there will be no way for the delegates to understand all of the issues unless we have time to explain it, unless we have time to address ourselves by way of answering questions that will be posed by members of this convention. Therefore, I believe that it is very important that we would adopt and support this amendment in order that we can get at some of the tough issues that will come before this convention.

Question

Mr. Mire Mr. Jackson, did you know that I feel that it's a very good amendment also.

Mr. A. Jackson Thank you, sir.

Further Discussion

Mr. Stinson Fellow delegates, I want to rise in opposition to this. We've all assumed something. First assumption is that the only proponent is going to be the committee, the person representing the committee. Well, of all the time we've wasted, it hasn't been the committees. It's been other people. This applies to everybody. I'm sure all of you believe in fairness. Why should the proponent have more time than the opponent? I don't see any reason for that. Next is, Mr. Duval says that if you vote against this, you're voting for ignorance. That it keeps the people ignorant. We don't have any ignorant people in this convention and we are not here for the purpose of giving a law course to anyone. When we get through, I think if we're ignorant now, we're going to be ignorant when we get through. If we are ever going to get through with this convention, I would like to urge let's go ahead and leave, as Senator Rayburn said, try his proposal. I don't see where it's been any hardship in the last few days that we have gone under the five minute limitation. If we hadn't had that we would be here still in the legislative section. Can you imagine what it would be if we didn't have any limit at all? How many years would it take I wonder? So I'd like to urge you, let's try it like it is and defeat this amendment.

Questions

Mrs. Warren Would you say that people could be intelligent and still ignorant on some matters?

Mr. Stinson No, I don't consider that ignorant. I think it's better to say maybe uninformed.

Mrs. Warren Well, this is what I'm trying to say. Don't you think that these delegates who have not had a chance to be on these committee hearings would be better informed if they had a chance to ask questions?

Mr. Stinson No, now I'm not referring to you, I'm referring to myself. Not if we do our homework like we should and know what's coming up the next day. We have a chance to ask other people that are next to you and so forth, and we can't hash everything out here on the floor. We can't go into great, great detail on every issue that comes up. We've got to some way get along and get through by January.

Mrs. Warren I didn't say hash things over. I said just ask a simple question. This is what I'm trying to find out.

Mr. Stinson I think we can do that without having to extend the time on each item that comes up.

Mrs. Warren Would you think that a hundred and five plus the twenty-seven delegates here should have the opportunity to ask a question if they wanted to?

Mr. Stinson Yes, and I certainly bend to help you everytime that you tried to get up there. I voted for you a thousand percent.

Mrs. Warren Well, I thank you very much for that but I'm also thinking about the others here that would want to speak. So if you've got a hundred and thirty-two delegates that would like to speak, how long do you think five minutes would give them to ask a question? And if everyone spoke how long do you think it would take them to speak? I think we are really saving time.

Mr. Stinson A lot of times on the question, a question is not from the opponent or someone who is trying to find out. Often times to help an issue you ask questions to bring out a point maybe the speaker has not. I really think the proponent has more here than the opponent.

23rd Days Proceedings—August 1, 1973

Mrs. Warren I'm only asking for a point of information for myself. When I ask a question I want to know what is happening.

Mr. Stinson I do too.

Further Discussion

Mr. Dollinger I rise in support of the Roemer amendment. I think we've tried Senator Rayburn's amendment. Apparently a majority of the delegates think it was good. I don't. I think it was too limiting. I think what Mr. Roemer, Senator De Bileux and Mr. Fayard proposed is good. I think it's a half way medium between letting everyone speak and it's definitely not giving everyone the opportunity to take advantage of the floor. It's giving the proponents the opportunity. True, it does allow the proponent of an amendment the extra time. However, I think he ought to have this extra time to explain his amendment. It may be good and it may not, but the convention is going to decide. I move the adoption of the Roemer amendment.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: 77-27. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous Question ordered on the Resolution. Resolution adopted: 103-0. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Resolution

Mr. Poynter The next resolution is Delegate Resolution No. 29, introduced by Delegate Burson.

A resolution to amend Rule 45 and Rule 81 of the standing rules of the convention to provide for adoption of proposals by section or paragraph.

This was amended too, and also was not reprinted. Copies of this resolution are being passed out at this time.

Explanation

Mr. Burson I might say at the outset that the Committee on Rules was courteous enough to permit me to participate with them in the consideration of my original proposal. I wholeheartedly concur in the amendments which they suggested. I think it improved the product considerably. The purpose of the proposal is simply this. That Rule 45 as presently constituted provides only for action by sections. My proposal simply would permit the convention to act finally upon paragraphs as well as by sections. I invite you to consider the next article which we will take up, the Executive Article, and look at Section 5 there. If you will notice, Section 5 has lettered Paragraphs A through L. They deal with topics as diverse as the powers of the governor as commander-in-chief, his power to call the legislature into extraordinary session, general executive power—in other words, things that are not really totally related, except that they are all powers of the governor. It seems to me that it ought to be possible to reach a final decision on Section 5 A which deals with one power before having to go all the way through the article and come back and approve it as a whole. Now, it may be that on some articles you would not want to do this. So my proposed rule change says that this would be done only with the consent of a majority of those present and voting. Why a majority? Well, in order to change the rules, of course, you need more than a majority. But my thought was that if a majority is in favor of the paragraph, then it would presumably pass. However, of course, since the paragraph is to a section, it would still require sixty-seven votes to finally approve it. That is not affected by this proposal at all. What prompted me to submit this proposal was the course of events that transpired on our debate with regard to the length of the legislative session. You will recall that on a Friday we overwhelmingly approved Senator Rayburn's initial suggestion that we have a legislative session sixty legislative days in eighty days. Then we got into the debate on the split session and I was a proponent of the split session, but we went all around by Aunt Mary's house and after four days we came back and adopted another amendment sponsored by Mr. Rayburn which required a sixty legislative day session in eighty-five days. I submit to you that it's open to serious question whether the four days that were spent on this thing were worth it when obviously there had been or must have been a clear majority at the beginning which remained more or less constant until the end and agreed on sixty legislative in eighty or eighty-five days. This is the kind of situation that I hoped this rule change would prevent as we consider other articles. One final point that I wanted to make is the proponents of the Executive Article could easily achieve the same objective by having their proposal recommitment and going back and where they have five A through L, just giving them a section number, but they'd wind up with fifty sections maybe where they have twenty and it would be a poor deal for the majority. The mechanical way to permit the will of the clear majority of the convention to be performed and to avoid, I think, undue delay in our deliberations. Although I think we ought to deliberate until everybody thoroughly understands something. Once everybody does thoroughly understand it and once the majority has spoken, even if I may not be in the majority which I haven't been in too many so far, then I think that that's what it's all about and let's get on with our business.

Questions

Mr. Tobias Mr. Burson, you used the word paragraph. Is that to be interpreted the same as subsection? Because, for example...

Mr. Burson Yes sir, it was suggested in the Rules Committee that we should change it to subsection but then on Mrs. Duncan's suggestion, she suggested to us that paragraph was what fit with what we were doing here, so we changed it back to paragraph. The reason being that some sections have subsection A and then 1 and 2 under that and it would be difficult to decide which subsection you might be talking about.

Mr. Drew Jack, if we adopt this resolution aren't we running into though I may not be in the line where different paragraphs are interrelated in the adopting of one and changing of a subsequent paragraph may completely do away with the meaning we intended. On that ground I would have to oppose your proposal.

Mr. Burson Of course that is why I put in there, why the committee put in there the proposition that this can only be with a consent of a majority of those present and voting. In other words you have to ask for it.

Mr. Drew My question is, does the majority have that much foresight to know what might happen three paragraphs later, Jack?

Mr. Burson Well, I don't see where that's a whole lot different from the problem you have if you adopt one section finally and I know in the Local and Parochial Government Committee all of our sections are interrelated so if you change one section further down the line you are very well do violence to the philosophy of the whole article.

Mr. Drew But won't you agree Jack, that those items in one particular section are much closer connected than possibly the sections themselves.

Mr. Burson That may be but that's not necessarily true. I don't think that the powers of the Governor as commander-in-chief and the power to call extraordinary session for instance are related at all.

23rd Days Proceedings—August 1, 1973

Mr. Fulco Mr. Burson, do you mean that we have to take up each paragraph and each section? We must, are we compelled to?

Mr. Burson No sir, Mr. Fulco. If you look on line ...well, beginning on line 13 it says "however if a section is divided into paragraphs" which is the first condition then "with the consent of a majority of those present and voting each separately designated paragraph shall be acted upon separately" and then it's still got to have 67 votes to be finally adopted.

Mr. Fulco That's all right. What I'm wondering about...worried about more than anything else is that it took us seven hours to debate or pass the section on sovereign immunity. Now what's going to happen if we have to take these paragraphs as you have outlines, A, B, and so on. How much time do you think this might require to take each paragraph or a section considering each paragraph?

Mr. Burson It is not required that it be done by paragraphs. This simply makes the option available if somebody wants to get up and move that I moved that we approve this paragraph but the motion has to be made otherwise the section approval obtains. That's a general rule.

Mr. Fulco But if they want to consider each paragraph, then we have to do it.

Mr. Burson No.

Mr. Fulco You say we don't have to do it unless the convention wants to.

Mr. Burson Unless somebody gets up and moves after it's been amended, and wants to move that I move... in other words this has to presuppose there are no amendments left up there on the section before you could make the motion.

Mr. Flory Mr. Burson, in fact what your resolution really does is to allow the calling of the previous question on a particular paragraph rather than the entire section.

Mr. Burson That in essence is what it does.

Point of Information

Mr. Robinson Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask you a question about this. If I understand the effect of this, once a vote is taken upon a paragraph, then would there be a motion made to reconsider that vote and to lay that motion on the table and then if so would it not take a two-thirds vote to go back into that subject again to take it from the table?

Mr. Henry As I appreciate the resolution, you are absolutely correct Mr. Robinson.

Mr. Robinson I think that's pretty important to know.

Further Discussion

Mr. Drew Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in opposition to Mr. Burson's amendment here. I think that as we go on we have been in rather shallow water so to speak, but when we get into revenue and taxation, when we get into local and parochial government, when we get into education and welfare, we're going to find that paragraph after paragraph is so closely related that I think we would be setting a very dangerous precedent in adopting a paragraph and then have to go back and require a two-thirds majority. I think that rules as now prescribed are adequate. It may take a little more time but I don't think that Mr. Burson meant what he said when he was speaking of the will of the majority. I think the will of the majority pretty well expressed itself in this convention. I ask that you defeat this amendment. Leave it like it is because you are going to find in those particular committee proposals a plan, interrelated paragraphs that it would be most dangerous to require a two-thirds vote to bring it back before the convention.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

Mr. Burson I invite your consideration again of Section 5 of the proposed Executive Article. Now you've got a section beginning on page 3 which does not end until page 6. It begins talking about the executive authority, legislative reports and recommendations, ends up talking about commander-in-chief, extraordinary session and so on. I submit to you that if you do not adopt my proposal what you're going to see happen and I predict it with a great deal of certainty that it will take us, according to the count that I've heard, we've got about 39 or 40 amendments pending to this one section. Now if we start considering those amendments on one day there is no way that you're never going to get through for two or three days. At the end of the third day after we've got all the way through all the amendments it's going to be possible for somebody to come back in and offer an amendment to Paragraph A that we started with unless you permit in some fashion for Paragraph A to be closed out and I submit to you that you're never going to get finished with that kind of system because there are a lot of other proposals. I'm thinking now of the ones on civil service. I'm thinking of the ones on local and parochial government that have a lot of subsections and I can see very readily that since the chair has used the procedure, which I think is wise and makes sense, of taking all proposed amendments in the order of the paragraphs, that you will find a situation where you may finish considering the amendments on subsection A of Section 5 of the Executive Article on Monday, let's say, and you will go all the way through all the other amendments and you will get on Friday or Monday of the next week you'll find out that somebody's had a brainstorm over the weekend and has come back with more amendments to Section A and you'll start all over again. I think that something like what I proposed here is absolutely necessary to get on with the business here. You know, I think of what Harry Truman said one time. It's better to do the second best thing when it's time to do it than to wait too long to do the best thing and I think if we're looking for scholastic perfection on these articles and we go to those lengths that what we're going to be doing is defeating the whole idea of a new constitution seeking perfection of a paragraph and that does not make sense to me.

Point of Information

Mr. Avant My question is, if we adopt this and then we invoke this rule and we vote on a separately designated paragraph, separately, will it take 67 votes to adopt that paragraph?

Mr. Henry Not under the rules as are presently written. It takes 67 votes to adopt a section but not a subsection.

Mr. Avant So if we vote this in and then use it we won't be changing the requirement as to the number of votes to adopt a single paragraph.

Mr. Henry I'm not sure. I didn't think it was changed in the amendments. The clerk thinks that it was.

Mr. Avant I would like to know before I vote on this.

Mr. Henry I would too, sir. Read it Mr. Clerk.

Mr. Poynter I think the rule that would apply is the proposed Rule 81 as Delegate Burson would have 81 amended which would read "on the passage or third reading of every proposal, article, section or paragraph if acted upon separately the yeas and nays shall be entered in the journal and no proposal, article, section or paragraph is acted upon separately shall be declared passed unless a majority of all the delegates of the convention shall have voted in favor of the passage of the same."

23rd Days Proceedings—August 1, 1973

Mr. Henry Then it would require 67 votes for the adoption sir. Are there other questions?

Mr. Burson I might point out that as I would read that, that still doesn't mean you don't need 67 votes for passage of the whole section.

Mr. Henry Yes it does Mr. Burson. Have you completed your remarks sir?

Mr. Burson Yes sir.

[Resolution rejected: 40-65. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Resolution

Mr. Poynter The next resolution is Delegate Resolution No. 3D introduced by Delegate Burson. A resolution to amend Rule 46 of the standing rules to require that amendments to proposals be germane. Now this resolution was reported favorably by the committee on the 26th of July and engrossed on the 27th. Since it has no amendments the Delegate Resolution 3D as you find it in the pink copy would be correct.

Explanation

Mr. Burson If at first you don't succeed...the resolution here is basically the simple proposition that amendments have to be germane to the topic under consideration which is a general rule in Mason's Manual of Legislative Procedure, page 274 and 275 is where the language used in the proposal comes from. The purpose is self-evident that the objective of this rule would be to prevent amendments which are not really germane or relevant to the topic under consideration. Now, of course, to be germane does not mean that they have to agree. An amendment may be germane even though it entirely changes the effect of the motion or measure as long as it applies to the same subject. It simply seems to me that this was an oversight in the rules as we had them adopted. Now, some delegates have expressed concern to me that the language used in my proposal did not permit of the proposal of amendments to the subject of the proposal, that is new articles or new sections rather than articles. So I have prepared an amendment to this proposal which I think would meet this objection. I don't know if it has been passed out to you or not.

Amendment

Mr. Henry Do we have the amendments?

Mr. Poynter The amendment has been passed out, Delegate Burson.

Explanation

Mr. Burson You will notice that the amendment would simply add at the end of line 14 after the comma that the amendments to every amendment proposed must be germane to the subject of the section or paragraph of the proposal to be amended and/or to the subject of the proposal itself."

I would like to offer the amendments because I do understand that some people are concerned about it.

The purpose of the amendment would simply be to make it crystal clear, although it certainly wasn't my intent to do otherwise that in accordance with the ruling of the Chair which has been upheld by the convention that you could have floor amendments proposing new sections to the proposal but they would have to be germane to the proposal. They would have to deal with the same subject matter.

This has not really come into play up until now but I would like to propose a practical problem that might arise. Later on in our deliberations if we do not have such a rule we could reach the end of our deliberations and somebody who was really dissatisfied with something we had done early could come in and propose an amendment, let's say to the section on education which really dealt with the section on the legislative which might have been finally adopted by the convention already and unless you have a requirement in the rules that amendments be germane I don't see how you could prevent such an amendment from being offered especially since it has been ruled by the Chair that amendments may propose entirely new sections. In other words, it's feasible to me that under that ruling without a requirement that amendments be germane that I could come in and offer a section doing what I wanted to with regard to any article in the constitution in December if we're still here and it looks like we will be so I submit to you that this is a necessary requisite in our rules.

Questions

Mr. Dennergy Mr. Burson, do I understand that without your amendment you believe the Chair would have to reverse its prior ruling in connection with amendments?

Mr. Burson No I don't understand that because I believe the Chair's prior ruling was under the rules as they exist at the present time.

Mr. Dennergy No I'm talking about your resolution. If your resolution without the amendment is adopted, your Delegate Resolution No. 3D, which states that the amendment proposed must be germane to the subject of the section or paragraph of the proposal. Do you conceive that the Chair's previous ruling would now have to be changed?

Mr. Burson I would think so. I think that would be...

Point of Information

Mr. Dennergy May I ask a question of the Chair on that? Well Mr. Burson's Delegate Resolution provides that "every amendment proposed must be germane to the subject of the section or paragraph of the proposal to be amended." His amendment to his proposal says "and/or to the subject of the proposal itself." My question is without the amendment if the proposal is adopted, will this change the prior ruling of the Chair about amendments?

Mr. Henry I don't think the ruling of the Chair would change in either event Mr. Dennergy.

Mr. Derbes Jack, perhaps this is a question that was just answered but take the Landrum situation this morning where an entirely new section is proposed but in the form of an amendment, your proposal has no effect on that. Isn't that correct?

Mr. Burson Not if the amendment were adopted I think obviously then you could go ahead and do that. Obviously if you adopt the amendment to the proposal and in the proposal itself, I don't think that situation would be affected at all. There were some people who felt that just the proposal alone might have that effect and that was not my intent. My intent was simply to require that amendments be germane to the subject under consideration.

Mr. Derbes But if there indeed were no subject under consideration, that is no particular section under consideration to which the amendment was in reference and if the amendment simply added a new section your proposal wouldn't affect that amendment. Isn't that correct?

Mr. Burson In what sense?

Mr. Derbes Suppose we adopted Sections 1, 2 and

23rd Days Proceedings—August 1, 1973

3 and then somebody came along and introduced Section 4 as an amendment, your proposal wouldn't affect the introduction of Section 4.

Mr. Burson It wouldn't prevent it, not if we adopt the amendment "and/or to the subject of the proposal itself."

Mr. Derbes Right. Thank you.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment reread and adopted: 85-13. Previous Question ordered on the Resolution. Resolution adopted: 93-6. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Recess

[Quorum Call: 99 delegates present and a quorum.]

Mr. Henry Now gentlemen and ladies, we're going to get started on this Executive Article in a minute and just as soon as we read the first section we'll call one of these little meetings down in front and I think if we have a meeting, we might get through with this article by five o'clock. I would like to say that we've kept up with some statistics because a lot of this is on television as you know and for our own Grammy Awards and on the legislative Article we had several personal appearances. For instance, Senator De Blieux appeared 48 times right here who was the winner. Mr. Roy, who has been sort of quiet for the last few hours, appeared only 40 times and then we had Representative Elmer Tapper who appeared 27 times. Now, we're not going with any success or failure on what happened when they spoke but we'll be giving you these statistics from time to time.

Mr. Clerk...why do you rise Mr. Stinson?

Mr. Stinson That was each day, wasn't it?

Mr. Henry No sir, Mr. Stinson, it just seemed like it.

PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

Mr. Poynter Committee Proposal No. 4 introduced by Delegate Staggs, chairman on behalf of the Committee on Executive Department and Delegates Abraham, Alexander, Arnette, Brien, Denny, Duvall, Gravel, Stovall and Tapper. A proposal providing for the Executive Branch of government for the filling of vacancies in certain public office and with respect to dual office holding, a code of ethics and impeachment.

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter Section 1. Composition. Section 1, Paragraph A. The executive branch shall consist of the governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, attorney general, treasurer, and all other executive offices, agencies, and instrumentalities. Paragraph B. All office agencies and other instrumentalities of the executive branch of state government and their respective functions, powers, duties and responsibilities, except for the offices of governor and lieutenant governor shall be allocated according to function within not more than twenty departments.

Explanation

Mr. Staggs Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I would like to first express my appreciation as chairman to those members of the Executive Department Committee who worked on this proposal for so long. Mr. Abraham, Reverend Alexander, Joe Anzalone, Greg Arnette, Dr. Asseff, Mrs. Brien, Mr. Denny, Mr. Duvall, Mr. Gravel, Mr. Stovall, and Mr. Tapper. I regret that only one member of our team got in the running on the Emmy Awards. This committee worked on Proposal No. 4 and our other assigned materials during eighteen meetings and there were twelve members of the committee so we could have worked 216 delegate days. I would like to thank the committee members for their work because out of those 216 possible delegate days, there were only 11 delegate days of absences and we had therefore an attendance record of 95 percent and I think that is remarkable and I would like to thank the members of the committee publicly for their attention to the duties assigned to them. The composition of the executive branch we have provided for five state-wide elected officers on the theory that that made for more orderly government for a lack of what we have now that is a diffusion of authority in the executive branch as presented by a permissive eleven state-wide elected officers. I might point out in passing that's the most state-wide elected officers elected by any state in this union. There are in other committee reports that of the Committee on Judiciary which has some writing about the attorney general which we will get to later, but in the Education Department Article they have provided for the election of a commissioner or superintendent of education. In the Committee on Natural Resources had provided for the election of the commissioner of agriculture and I don't know whether there was another one or not. Education, Agriculture...was there another one Mac, in another committee report? Attorney General and the judiciary. I guess that's it. It is the contention of the belief of the members of the executive department that the administrative power and responsibility of the state government ought to be concentrated in as few executive officers as possible. It is felt also that the provisions as to their powers and duties of these five executive officers ought to be placed in the constitution so that the legislature at some future date could not name some other state-wide elected officials and thereby by crippling degrees change or diminish the authority of the chief executive in this state. In our research we found that out of the 161 years of Louisiana statehood in 100 of those 161 years there have been seven or fewer state-wide elected officials. In the constitution of 1921 two additional officers were added. Those of commissioner of agriculture and register of the state lands but that provision also allowed those two officers to be merged into other departments. In 1956 the legislature proposed a constitutional amendment to make the insurance commissioner and the custodian of voting machines state-wide elected officials. This was done as history will tell you because Governor Earl Long had a falling out with Secretary of State Wade Martin who would not go on the stump and speak for the Earl Long ticket and as a matter of retribution when the governor took office he impounded the legislature to diminish Wade Martin's office by taking away from him the duties of the insurance regulation and the handling of the voting machines. In our committee deliberations we felt very strongly that the executive office of the governor having the responsibility to the people and in the people's eye ought to have the machinery at his disposal to carry out that responsibility. In other words, shall the governor be at least an equal partner with the other three branches of government? By what we have done in the last four weeks of our deliberations, we have greatly strengthened the legislative branch of government. It is fair I think to say now that the legislature is a coequal branch of government in this state. The judiciary is and will remain a coequal branch of state government. Shall we not now diminish the ten arms of the executive department to five and make four of the executive department a coequal branch of state government? I have watched a lot of elections around this state as you have. Many of you here have run for state-wide office and you know where your campaign funds came from and you know that when you were elected where some of your loyalties lie. We believe that the diminution of the numbers of executive officers from eleven down to five will yield in the executive branch of government, more perfectly functional and more responsive executive branch than one that is spread by diffusion over ten or eleven state-wide elected officers. You have in effect put those many checks against the power of the governor by giving him in the executive branch persons who do not answer to him, do not have the necessity of answering to him and are lords of their own domain. It is interesting as a statistic to note that in the offices elected through the commission of insurance, the register of state lands and the custodian of voting machines and the commissioner of agriculture spend of your money each year and in the forthcoming budget less than one half of one percent of the state budget. Those that are appointed by the governor, i.e. the director of the board of highways who's appointed by the board of highways, the department of conservation, the department of corrections, and the department of health and social rehabilitation services. Those people are appointed by the governor as department heads and they spend nine hundred fourteen million, seven hundred and twenty-six thousand dollars of your money or forty-three percent of the state's budget. In some, Mr. Chairman, is the belief of the committee that the functioning of the executive department through five state-wide elected officials we have suggested will yield an executive branch worthy of the name. It contains within it the necessary checks and balances against arbitrary executive power. We have an independently elected state treasurer, we have an independently elected attorney general, and an independently elected secretary of state who will handle the election machinery of the state so our elections and our law enforcement and our money are safeguarded by state-wide elected officials and these I think are enough of a diminution of the executive power for the public's interest and for the safeguarding of the public interest in property and laws and law enforcement. Mr. Chairman, I would be happy to yield to questions under the Roemer Rule.

Questions

Mr. Jenkins: Mr. Stagg, we have made many efforts to strengthen the legislature and make it a co-equal branch of government. Don't you feel that by further concentrating power in the hands of the governor that you will be again imbalancing that relationship and making once again the executive a more than equal, more powerful branch of government that it ought to be?

Mr. Stagg: In a word, Mr. Jenkins, the answer is no. And you must know that we spent many hours asking ourselves these same questions. We have built buttresses around the power of the governor at every hand. On the appropriation or the budget prepared by him to be balanced by the requiring of the heads of departments to receive Senate confirmation before they can be placed in office or kept in office by the capital budget which is now into this article going to be mandatory. There are numerous ways by which we have sought to continue the good work of the Legislative Article by some boundaries around the powers that are possessed by the governor under our law. We heard from many interesting witnesses before our committee that the power of the governor does not necessarily lie in this document which we are writing, but it is power that he holds by tradition. By people feeling that a governor since he is governor can do certain things that are not really prescribed in this constitution and that really is the secret of the power of the governor in our state and we think that can be reduced by an independent legislature, one with independence worthy of that word.

Mr. Jenkins: Have you in any way restricted his power of appointment or his patronage power, or his control over the budget?

Mr. Stagg: We have done so, quite measurably. Mr. Jenkins in this article as we get later on you will find in the Local and Parochial Article as well as in our article. A governor can right now, appoint some fourteen hundred to fifteen hundred people to statewide office. Under the Local and Parochial Article, he will not any longer appoint local official. Under the Judiciary Article, he will no longer appoint vacancies to judges, a quite large source of patronage power. And in forming the executive branch into twenty departments and no more than twenty, two of which will be occupied by the elected state officials, the Governor can appoint no more than seventeen department heads, eight now and those boards and commissions whose membership is not otherwise designated by the legislature. Those only can be appointed by the governor. So the provisions for cutting down his appointment power if we sat down with our pencil and our present organization table would show you where the governor could appoint maybe one hundred people or two hundred people at the most rather than fourteen or fifteen hundred. And that is a measurable reduction in the power of the governor.

Mr. Arnette: Mr. Stagg, how do some of the so-called experts in the field, such as PAR AND CABL and the Louisiana Law Institute's project, how do they feel about the elected officials and which ones do they recommend should be elected?

Mr. Stagg: I have read the comments recently published by PAR I've read those in the past and we had witnesses come to our committee from PAR and from CABL and we read the project that was prepared by the Law Institute some years ago. The arguments that we make this morning and the provision which we are placing before this convention comports entirely with the feelings of all three of those you named as to what would be an ideal executive department for a 1973 model constitution as contrasted to those provisions of the 1921 model constitution.

Mr. Arnette: So in other words, Mr. Stagg, this is not a new idea, this was proposed in the project of over twenty years ago, am I correct?

Mr. Stagg: Correct sir.

Mr. Triche: Mr. Stagg, what is the significance of designating certain officers rather as executive branches of government? Now before you answer, let me preface a little bit, this is not a rhetorical question. I am asking for information. I noticed in Section 1 of Article V of the executive department, it sets out the executive department shall consist of the following and it lists some offices. One is the commissioner of conservation which is not an elective office, which is appointed by the governor. Also it doesn't list, by way of illustration... it doesn't list superintendent of education, which is also... which is an elective office. So it seems to me that whether you designate certain offices as executive branches is really immaterial to whether they are and doesn't address itself to whether these offices are elective or not, is my understanding correct and if it is, or if it isn't also, would you explain the significance of designating certain offices as executive offices and others you are silent on?

Mr. Stagg: The provision begins with the designation of these elected officials and all other executive offices, agents and instrumentalities. In the case of the commissioner of conservation who is appointed by the governor, would continue to be appointed by the governor under this provision as we work it through. The superintendent of education we have felt is the department of education is properly a part of the executive branch of the government yet, we think that the superintendent of education ought to be appointed by an elective board of education rather than to be a statewide elected officer.

Mr. Triche: Well, let me ask you this, the fact that you named treasurer for example, as an executive officer, does it of itself mean that that office is an elective office if you fail to say in Section 3 of the article that the office is elective?

Mr. Stagg: Yes, sir, the guts of the answer to your question is in Section 3.

23rd Days Proceedings—August 1, 1973

Mr. Triche So whether we enumerate certain offices in Section 1 as executive offices, is not related to the question of whether or not they are elective or not, the legislature could provide for an elected custodian of voting machines or could provide for an elected... commissioner of agriculture in spite of the language in Article 1.

Mr. Stagg Pappy, no, I do not agree with that. The language says the executive branch shall consist of and it names those officers and then it says all other executive offices, agencies, and instrumentalities. It provides only that those five elected officials shall be considered to be part of the executive branch.

Mr. Weiss Delegate Stagg, is it not true that in some states in the union that appointed positions become so desirable and so competitive that they are actually bought from the governor?

Mr. Stagg Well, I have heard of that in some states that have a spoils system of politics but you know Dr. Weiss, we don't have that here now.

Mr. Weiss Louisiana is different.

Mr. Stagg Yes.

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Stagg, you might have it in your report I haven't noticed it though. Did you hear from the public-at-large as to the position that they had on whether these offices should be elective or appointed? I am talking about farm bureau, commissioner of agriculture and many other John O. Public, may I say, I think that we all understand PAR and CARL what their recommendations are and have been, but I am wondering if you heard from any organizations other than them and if you did, would you briefly tell us and tell us their position?

Mr. Stagg Senator Rayburn, I went around the state with you and we heard from the farm bureau that they thought that the commissioner of agriculture ought to be elected, there was some dissent, there were a few farmers who said not and in other places we heard that they would respectfully suggest to us that the superintendent of education be elected. But only on those two offices... I am sorry in New Orleans we also heard it expressed by the public to the Composite Committee that the commissioner of insurance ought to remain an elected official. Yes sir.

Mr. Toomy Mr. Stagg, you have mentioned that a number of the offices which your proposal has eliminated from being statewide elected, spend a small portion of the state budget. Isn't it true that these offices are the watchdogs, protect the interest of millions of dollars of the people of the state of Louisiana, and that these people want this money which is not spent by the state but in their pockets, equally protected as the state funds? For instance, I believe just insurance in this state, John O. Public spends approximately ten percent of his budget on that. Do you say the important these areas be protected even though it is not state funds?

Mr. Stagg I would say that that was true sir, but it is also true of a great many other areas that is the state's responsibility. The people who are interested in forestry say their stake in it is equal to that of insurance and that he ought to be elected and other people in minerals think that the conservation commissioner ought to be elected. Everybody who has a substantial stake in the economy of this state would like to have an elected official representing his economic state but we cannot carry this thing in the state say the Coir stake on the Executive Department that would be carrying matters too far and we have established after serious debate over hours and days that these were the elected officials most needed to protect the public interest and to produce a viable responsive executive department of government.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter First set of amendments is offered up by Mr. Anzalone, Asseff, Alario, Gauthier, and many others.

Constituting in essence a minority position on the Committee on the Executive Department. Amendment No. 1, Section 1, delete lines 14 through 19 both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Article IV, Executive Branch, Section 1. Composition
Section 1. (A) The executive branch shall consist of the governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, treasurer, attorney general, register of the land, officer commissioner of insurance, commissioner of agriculture, custodian of voting machines, state superintendent of public education and all other executive officers, agencies and instrumentalities.

Mr. O'Neill Mr. Chairman, I would like to request that myself, and the coauthors of the amendment which was passed around with my name be put on Mr. Anzalone and the minority report committee amendment. It is the same amendment, we are all just going with it.

[Coauthors added.]

Explanation

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Chairman, and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I don't know why we are having all of this furor about this little bitty amendment it is just to correct a typographical error. It seems that somebody forgot to put a delete official back in the constitution. The Executive Department Committee has met for a long, long time concerning the public officials. One of the great reasons that we heard as to why we should not have eleven elected public officials or ten as the case may be, was the fact that a great number of them don't have anything to do with the job that if that is the criterion by which we are to work, the first one that we should eliminate is the lieutenant governor. The only job that this convention has seen fit to give that gentleman is the job of waiting around until the governor dies. He may serve ex officio on some other boards but nobody as of yet can tell me exactly what his job really is. Not to pick on the minority party that is a part of this convention but we have heard many, many reasons why appointees are better than elected officials. I think one thing that the national news has taught us lately is that it may be that appointive officials are not the answer either. We are also assured that by the appointment of officials that we are going to get somebody qualified people to serve. But nowhere in this constitution do you see any qualifications for those people who are to be appointed. And I agree with Mr. Stagg, we are not like other states, we won't have that problem, but we might. What you have done by the elimination of five elected officials from your constitution is that you have diluted the contact of the general public with their state government. Now they only have five people to see. You are making your appointed personnel indirectly responsible to the electorate. No one can assure me that a person who is appointed is going to attend to the affairs of his constituency better than the man who is elected. There may be some but there are not many. You can call these things departments, bureaus, good government, the best thing in the world that the state ever saw but you can pronounce it bureaucracy. That is a bad word, isn't it? But that is exactly what you are setting up. You are setting up twenty departments that ten years from now the only time that you are going to hear from some of them is when they come downstairs to try to get included in the budget. Nobody is going to know who they are, what they do.

23rd Days Proceedings—August 1, 1973

or how even to contact them. In the name of good government, I can't see it.

Ladies and gentlemen the role of a delegate to this convention is just a little bit different than the role of a legislator. When you vote as a legislator you may go home and have not only your vote challenged but also you will be reelected possibly on your personality. There is nobody in here running for reelection. There is nobody in here going to be reelected to the convention on the basis of his personality. You are going home to have your vote questioned. I submit to you that the question of appointment versus election is a basic question of philosophy. There are no political arguments on both sides. You don't argue religion because that is philosophy. If you think that you are going to vote here, to vote your good conscience and your good government and you are going to vote for an appointive official and go back home and tell somebody back home that this is the best thing in the world for the state of Louisiana and that person believes in election of officials, what are you not going to convince him not one bit. You may rest well assured, that the inclusion of the five elected officials as we have called them here and as per the words of Mr. Stagg a few minutes ago who spend one-half of one percent of the state budget is not going to destroy any future reorganization of this state. If we can come up with a plan for reorganization of state government that is going to be ninety-nine and one-half percent good then I can't see where there is any harm of electing five people.

Ladies and gentlemen I have been a member of the Executive Department Committee since its inception. I am more familiar with the dealings of that department or that committee because I have served on it. As Senator Rayburn asked awhile ago, what does John O. Public think, I can tell you. In the seventy-second district of the state of Louisiana, he thinks mighty strong about electing his officials and that is the way I am going to vote.

Questions

Mr. O'Neill Mr. Anzalone, would you agree with me in that Mr. Chairman suggested that we take these one at a time but would you agree with me that if we vote for this amendment we put them all back in and then maybe we take out one or two don't you think this would be more expeditious procedurally?

Mr. Anzalone Yes, sir.

Mr. O'Neill Thank you.

Mr. Burns My question is somewhat along that same line, Mr. Anzalone. Did the group that was up there by the speaker stand just now, did they reach any agreement or are there still separate amendments to be presented?

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Burns, I honestly don't know the answer to your question. We all met up here and you are seeing the results of it now. I am sure that there are other amendments in fact I know that there are.

Mr. Burns In other words as far as you know there was no overall agreement reached between conferees?

Mr. Anzalone I would think yes, Mr. Burns, because this is what the group up here decided to do basically, yes, sir.

Mr. Tobias Why did you leave out the state comptroller?

Mr. Anzalone Max, you just asked me that question back at my desk.

Mr. Tobias But I would like it for the record.

Mr. Anzalone We are talking about a philosophical view of state government. The comptroller is not now a part of that government and the people that I represent have expressed no extreme desire in having him paid back in the constitution as an elected five officer.

Mr. Robinson Mr. Chairman, perhaps I should ask you this question instead of Mr. Anzalone, will ask both of you, maybe I will get an answer from both. If we should adopt the proposal of the Committee on the Executive Department in its entirety just as presented, would this preclude the Committee on Education and Welfare from presenting subsequently a proposal which would call for the election of the state superintendent of education?

Mr. Henry You want to answer Mr. Anzalone, it is your amendment?
What do you think, Mr. Anzalone?

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Robinson, would you throw that by me just one more time?

Mr. Robinson Well, it is just very simple, we have got a lot of committees studying a lot of aspects of government and one of them is Education and Welfare and I am sure there is a committee studying Natural Resources, Agriculture and so on. These people are considering some of the same issues that are here presented. What I want to know is, if this convention should adopt the proposal exactly as presented by the Committee on the Executive Department, would that preclude this convention then in the ordinary course of events, from taking up a subsequent proposal by say the Committee on Education and Welfare and adopting a contrary provision which calls for the election of the state superintendent of education?

Mr. Anzalone I honestly don't understand your question because we are in the process now of providing for an elected superintendent of education.

Mr. Robinson Right, we are considering the report of the proposal of the Committee on the Executive Department but there are other committees which have been studying the same issue in regards to whether the state superintendent of education should be elected or not. What I am saying is, would the Committee on Education and Welfare be directed by this convention in effect to report for the appointment of the state superintendent if they adopt the proposal of the Committee on the Executive Department?

Mr. Anzalone I think not, but I yield to the Chairman.

Mr. Henry In my judgment it is a rather academic question because I think on this Executive Article if we say we are going to make the superintendent of education elective then I would assume of resolving the question of elective or appointive superintendent of education in all probability from the time it gets down there. I think you would have good basis for argument once you got to that point since we have already resolved it in the Executive Article but of course this body might say it is it could change its mind but I would think that in this article we would be resolving that problem, Mr. Robinson.

Mr. Robinson All right, suppose the vote should be very close, Mr. Chairman?

Mr. Henry I say this body could change its mind, sir.

Mr. Robinson All right, by majority vote?

Mr. Henry Well it could adopt the next proposal by majority vote.

Point of Information

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Chairman, is it not correct that if the Committee on Education would come back with a proposal to say that the state superintendent of education were to be an appointive position that it would not be treated as an amendment to this article?

23rd Days Proceedings—August 1, 1973

Mr. Henry No, sir, it wouldn't be treated as an amendment to this article, Mr. Anzalone.

Mr. Anzalone Could not they propose it to be an amendment to this article?

Mr. Henry Well, it depends on how we adopt this article. If we adopt this proposal at some particular point and then reconsider the vote by which it is adopted and lay the motion on the table.

Mr. Anzalone Are we doing that, Mr. Chairman?

Mr. Henry Well, now we didn't do it with the Legislative Article but Mr. Anzalone, you know I can't say we won't do it with this article or we won't do it during the workings of the convention, I am just trying to answer the question honestly, sir. I would hope that we will allow some leeway in case we make a faux pas where we can easily amend what we have done but there is no guarantee that we will do that.

Point of Information

Mr. Flory Point of information. Couldn't just a simply majority of those present and voting reconsider and lay on the table which would then require a two-thirds vote to lift from the table?

Mr. Henry To reconsider and lay the motion on the table so far as a section or proposal it is going to take sixty-seven votes and then it is going to take two-thirds to call the motion from the table, Mr. Flory.

Further Discussion

Mr. Abraham When the Executive Committee or rather the Committee on Executive Branch, first began with its meetings, we made no decisions, we took no position on anything, we invited many people to come to appear before us and we listened to all these people. We had every elected state official appear before us, we had other officers of the executive branch who were appointed appear before us. We had outside...people from out of state and others who appeared before us and throughout all these meetings, never once did we ever really take a position as to how we felt the executive branch should be organized. But it began to evolve without being said that we did have too many elective state offices. It began to evolve that the executive branch of state government needs to be organized in a better way and needs to be made more manageable that with some two hundred-odd state agencies there was no way of managing this unless they were organized properly into departments or similar arrangements. It was brought out many times that because we had the number of elective offices that we had to depend on these ten or eleven people simply through their own cooperation to run the affairs of state. And then whenever we decided that we voted on concepts of how we thought it should be organized, the committee voted overwhelmingly to reduce the number of statewide elective offices and in studying the project and various other information that was available to us, all of this simply supported our position that we needed to reduce the number of statewide elective offices and we needed to gather all of these agencies into functionally...into various departments so that they could be made more manageable as any other business would. Those of you who are business people would not quarrel with the idea of organizing in such a manner that you do not have too many people reporting to any one person. And this is the intent of this proposal is to effect this reorganization of state government so that it is more manageable. Now, I have talked with many people back in my area and overwhelmingly the people are in favor of reducing the number of statewide elective offices, they're in favor of trying to organize the executive branch into departments so that they would be made more manageable. I have not had one person in my area disagree that we had too many statewide elected offices, several of these offices are strictly administrative offices and do not perform that large a job and the question I ask is how can you afford to run a statewide election campaign and spend fifty to one hundred fifty thousand dollars or whatever needs to be spent in order to get elected to a job that pays between twenty-one and twenty six thousand dollars a year. It just doesn't make sense. Right now we have many, many agencies, we have no real effective means of control when you ask for an organizational change on state government, there is none. No one knows who all these agencies are or where they are or what they do. All we are trying to do here is to gather these things into an effective organization. As far as qualifications for these various people who might be appointed as department heads, this could be provided by statute if necessary. We have provided safeguards that in the appointment of the department heads that they must be approved or confirmed by the Senate so we will have some control there. But I think the whole thing to consider here is that if we are going to get this state into a more manageable position even though it might sound good that we want to elect all of these various offices, I challenge many of you to tell me how many of these elective officials that you personally know, how many times have you seen since the time they have been in office? I will say that most of these I had never seen until they appeared before our committee. I don't know how we can come up here and say that we want to draft a new constitution for this state unless we take into account just where we stand, what has happened in the past, and where we are heading in the future. And unless we can make this state government more manageable and more accountable to the people then we haven't accomplished anything. And I think that you make state government more accountable when you reduce the number of people that you account to the people than when you have all of them elected and then one can say well, I did this, but you will have to go see this other person for this particular thing. I had rather be able to go to the governor, the secretary of state or whomever it may be and say this is what I would like to see done and if there is something that goes wrong in that particular department than that man is accountable to me. You have seen this happen many times in the past where various elective officials.

Mr. Henry You have exceeded your time, Mr. Abraham.

Mr. Abraham I ask your adoption of the committee proposal.

Point of Information

Mr. Rayburn Do we have at this time any mechanics where we might be able to vote on an alternate proposition to submit before the people?

Mr. Henry No, sir, we don't.

Mr. Rayburn I am of the opinion that it would be good for us to know the mechanics that this convention intends to adopt, I might want to vote for an alternate proposal to submit some of these propositions that is now up for consideration to the people and let them decide and I am just wondering if we have anything at this particular time that would allow us to do that?

Mr. Henry No, sir, we don't have such a procedure insofar as our rules are concerned. A motion to the effect that alternates of some description be provided of course would be in order.

Motion

Mr. Rayburn I wonder Mr. Chairman, if I would be in order, that if I would move that we temporarily pass this until we get some information as to how we could more or less go about an alternate solution.

23rd Days Proceedings—August 1, 1973

Mr. Henry You make that in a form of motion.

can go back Thank you.

Mr. Rayburn I make that a form of motion and could I state my reason for that?

Point of Information

Mr. Henry Yes, sir.

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Chairman, would there be any prohibition against the adoption of a rule to prevent an alternate to the voters that could come about after the final vote on this section?

Mr. Rayburn I am convinced on how I am going to vote on some of these and I would like an alternate to let the people decide the others but at this particular time I don't think it is fair for me to have to vote when maybe later I could vote for an alternate that I would have a different view on...on my vote that I voted today.

Mr. Henry No, sir.

Further Discussion

Mr. Henry But your motion is just to pass over this section for the time being, is that correct?

Mr. Asseff Mr. Chairman, delegates, I have no objection to submitting alternative proposals to the people. I think it would be wise. However, until we have discussed and voted on this section, how will we be able to determine the alternative proposals we will submit? There could be any of five or six combinations and certainly we would not want to submit that many to the people. I would urge that we continue discussion until we see the reactions of the delegates, decide what they want and then we can consider alternatives, but it would appear to me that at this point, it is premature. Thank you.

Mr. Rayburn Temporarily, yes, sir until we get some mechanics as to what procedure we will establish or adopt for alternate propositions to be placed on the ballot and submitted to the people for their final decision.

Further Discussion

Point of Information

Mr. Burns Mr. Chairman, and fellow delegates, I don't know how many of you that ran for this office included this plank in your platform that on all controversial questions or articles there would be an alternative submitted to the people so that they would not be limited or restricted to just voting yes or no on that particular controversial article. Now if in one article or one section, or one subject, it is going to be in this constitution that I think is highly controversial and one that gets right down to the heart of the success of this constitution when it is submitted to the people in January or February, next year, I think it is the question about these elective state officials. I am not going to argue the pro and cons of it at this time and take up any further time, but this is one matter, one subject matter that I have heard a lot of sentiment expressed on and I have heard a lot of people...a lot of people have discussed this particular question with me and I think that if we attempt to limit in this new constitution that we are drafting to eliminate four or five present elected officials I think we are going to seriously jeopardize the acceptance approve of this constitution by the people when it is submitted to them. And I would most heartily recommend that this committee set up the machinery or the mechanics to make this particular question that an alternative could be submitted and let the people decide what present elected officials they want to keep in the constitution, or whether in their opinion or in their views, they are going to be deprived of their right as citizens and voters to elect their officials. I ask you to seriously consider this matter and let us set up the machinery for an alternative on this particular question.

Mr. Burson Mr. Chairman, would the Chair be inclined to rule, in any sense, if we went ahead and voted on the amendment and someone were to make a motion to divide the question to vote on each office separately...that it would be a divisible question?

Mr. Henry It is not a divisible proposition. Now, there are a series of amendments to come on each office, but this amendment is clearly not divisible. Mr. Burson.

Further Discussion

Mr. Anzalone Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise to oppose a deferment or to defer this particular matter, for this reason. We have finished one article. We've got seven more to go. The things haven't even got to yet. I would say that it would be more likely that we should wait until we have adopted the entirety of the constitution and then, in looking at the whole document, decide whether or not we are going to go back and submit alternate proposals. If we begin now to submit alternate proposals, we're going to have at least five thousand of them on that ballot.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

Point of Information

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I was just at a loss to know what alternate we might have a chance to submit or to vote on. It's my understanding that there is a committee that's coming up with some recommendation for alternate proposals. Now, if we vote here today, and I'll just say to elect or not elect a superintendent of education, what are we going to do once we've voted on that. There is one or two of those offices, out of the ten that I might vote to let the people decide. But, at this particular moment I have no way of voting for an alternate measure where the people... I've got to make the decision. Once I make that decision, then when we come back with the procedure for alternate proposals, how am I going to vote then? I've already made a decision. I just felt out of the ten that I might vote to let the people decide, if we had the procedures outlined to us of alternate proposals and at that time we would know how to vote on these various offices. But, I feel like that if I'm required to vote on all the propositions that's going to come before us today, how would I vote them, Mr. Chairman, when maybe the committee comes up with an alternate proposition whereby if we felt we could better serve our people letting them decide how some of these offices...whether they be elected or whether they be appointed.

Mr. O'Neill Point of information, Mr. Chairman. Does Senator Rayburn have a motion on the floor?

Mr. Henry Yes, sir, he does.

Further Discussion

Mr. O'Neill Well, I would like to say right now that I would oppose such a motion simply because Senator Rayburn at this very moment has made a motion concerning alternative proposals and I believe that a majority...if a majority of the delegates concur, such a manner could be considered as an alternative. So I think that right now, this is somewhat premature in trying to delay the subject. I also suggest that the Rules Committee has had a proposal on alternative. I understand that the proposal is all but ready, I don't know why it has not come out of committee. And I feel that we should proceed on this matter right now and that if we have further complications down the line we

23rd Days Proceedings—August 1, 1973

That's my only question, and asking to get the committee's report if they have one, and I understand it is forthcoming, as to what procedure we would go about, as far as adoption of the proposals. I felt that that would be beneficial before we took an inflexible vote on the amendments and the propositions that we're going to have to vote on today.

Questions

Mr. Denberry Senator Rayburn, do I understand you to say that we cannot go back if we adopt such a rule to have an alternate provision in the legislative section?

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Denberry, my point is this, if we make some votes here today, then maybe when we get the committee's report and we decide...I'll take myself...maybe I'll vote today to say that the superintendent of education or the commissioner of agriculture should not be elected. Maybe they come back with an alternate proposal here where we can go back and maybe say let the people decide. I don't know how I could go back after I had already voted today, and change my vote.

Mr. Denberry In other words, you don't think there is any possibility of our going back, for example, and having an alternate proposal on split sessions?

Mr. Rayburn Well, my only point at this time, was this, Mr. Denberry, yes, sir, I think that but I would like to know if we're going to have an alternate proposition, before I cast my final ballot on this decision here today. It might be that if we come up where we can't have an alternate proposition, I might choose to place some of this under an alternate and let the people vote on it. That was my only point.

Mr. Denberry Thank you.

Mr. Rayburn And I was just trying to establish if there is any procedure or will there be any, and if there's some, say for tomorrow, I had rather defer this until we find out the proper mechanics of submitting alternate propositions to the people. That's my only point. I'm not trying to belabor it. I'm just trying to get a little more information where if I want to submit some of this to the people as an alternate, I don't know the mechanics to do it under at this time.

Mr. O'Neill Senator Rayburn, with all due respect and I'm not trying to ask a mean question or anything, but do you realize that right now, in a motion you could set up a procedure to submit alternatives...in a motion right this minute?

Mr. Rayburn Delegate O'Neill, they have a committee studying that, and I realize that. That's the reason I don't want to come up...they've studied and I haven't. I don't know the proper mechanics, but I felt like that since this has been assigned to a committee, they've been working on it. If they did have a recommendation, it would be good for us to know before we were called on to vote for these. Because in my opinion, and from the position that I come from, this is highly controversial. I want to represent my people. I might decide on some of these issues, I'd rather say "let my people speak in the place of me speaking for them". But in this particular moment, with this decision before me for a vote, I don't know if my people are going to be able to speak on it or not. That's the only information that I was seeking.

Mr. Stagg Senator Rayburn, wouldn't it not cure the problem you're suggesting then, if you would vote against the amendment by Mr. Anzalone and to vote for the proposition as put forward by the committee on the Executive Department?

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Stagg, I wouldn't say that because I believe there's going to be fifty other amendments. Mr. Anzalone is just one of the many. I would like to know if I will have an alternate procedure before I make a final decision. That's my only point.

Point of Order

Mr. LeBleu Mr. Chairman, I just wondered if this debate might not be out of order since there is nothing in this particular section that says anything about the election or appointment?

Mr. Henry Well, of course, the motion originated because the Senator moved that we pass over this section for the moment. Of course, the debate sort of ranged from there, Mr. LeBleu.

The gentleman has moved that we pass over section 1 of the proposal on the executive branch to which objection has been urged.

Why do you rise, Senator?

Point of Information

Mr. Rayburn Point of information. Mr. Chairman, do I understand that we're supposed to be out of here at five.

Mr. Henry Yes, sir.

Mr. Rayburn Well, it's only about fifteen minutes to five and I was just wondering if this...maybe by tomorrow this committee could give us a report?

Mr. Henry Well, we've still got time to dispose of the motion, sir.

PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

Mr. Poynter Committee Proposal No. 4, introduced by Delegate Stagg, Chairman on behalf of the Committee of the Executive Department and Delegates Abraham, Alexander, Arnette, Brien, Dennery, Duval and other members of the committee.

A proposal providing for the executive branch of government for the filling of vacancies in certain public offices and with respect to dual office holding, a code of ethics and impeachment.

The status of the proposal at the time of adjournment was that you had under consideration the first section which deals with compensation and amendments were pending to that proposed section introduced by Delegates Anzalone, Aseff, Alario, and many others who added their name by way of co-authorship, in essence, constituting a minority report of the committee.

Mr. Henry All right. Mr. Anzalone had offered up amendments. Now Mr. Anzalone, you had offered your amendments and you had opened on the amendments. You've said all you propose to say for the moment, am I not correct?

Read the amendments before we start, Mr. Clerk.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Anzalone]. On page 1, delete lines 14 through 19 both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Article IV. Executive Branch. Section 1, Composition. Section 1

A. The executive branch shall consist of the governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, treasurer, attorney general, register of the land office, commissioner of insurance, commissioner of agriculture, custodian of voting machines, state superintendent of education and all of other executive offices, agencies and instrumentalities".

Further Discussion

Mr. Duval Fellow delegates, we heard some very interesting remarks from Mr. Anzalone in support of this amendment and some of them, of course, are well taken. However, I would like to familiarize this convention with some of the facts which I think have been remiss thus far. The governor of this state is elected by all the voters of this state and is, of course, responsive to the people. He is in charge of administering the executive department. As it presently stands, not only the governor but Houdini could not administer our executive department because it is terribly unwieldy, fragmented and disorganized. One of the most crucial and vital things this convention can do is to facilitate the administering of this executive department so that it can be run properly and correctly. Since we do have to have government, ladies and gentlemen, it should be intelligent, deliberated government. Now let's take these offices one by one that we are deleting. The superintendent of education, the present superintendent of education testified before our committee. As you all might recall, he ran on a plank. One of the things he said was that the office ought to be appointed and it should be abolished. The reason why, a very good reason. We have an elected State Board of Education, and when you have an elected board and an elected superintendent you have an obvious impasse that does not properly work and does not serve the interests of the people. That is a clearly logical statement. When you have an elected board and an elected superintendent it just doesn't work. All right, that's one. Number two, the register of state land office. This very fine lady came before our committee and said that her office shouldn't be in the constitution. It wasn't necessary. This is the officeholder herself. It is primarily a clerical function which does not warrant statewide election. There are many other more viable and important positions which are appointed and again, as a factual matter, there is no real reason why they should be elected and most people don't know who what they are voting for when they vote for it or much less, what they do. They do know what they are voting for when they vote for governor. Custodian of voting machines, as you know, Louisiana is the only state which has such an office. It was created purely out of political animosity and has no viable function and is purely administrative.

The election laws are administered by the secretary of state and therefore, certainly voting machines could be placed under the offices of the secretary of state who is an elected official and who does administer the election laws. There is no logical reason to elect statewide a custodian of voting machines. Again, I say, that the people do not know exactly what he does and that's one thing of such viability that warrants statewide election. We get down to the Commissioner of Insurance.

Another one we deleted. As you all know, there is a Rating Commission appointed by the governor which fixes insurance rates, and you have your elected insurance commissioner, on the other hand. Therefore, again, you have a situation that is not logically proper. When you have a Rating Commission and then an elected commissioner of insurance, it just doesn't work. We've got to be conscientious enough in this convention to set up state government so that it will work, and it's obvious this doesn't work. Again, the governor bears the ultimate responsibility for the administration of these functions and they are not to be elected statewide. Furthermore, when you have a Rating Commission on one hand and an elected commissioner, again, it doesn't work. I submit to you and you can hear testimony from many, many people, and I'm sure even the insurance commissioner would admit that the Rating Commission doesn't work. Of course, he'd like an elected commissioner of insurance who performed the rating functions also, but then you have a czar of insurance, which I don't think we want. Now, a commissioner of agriculture. When you get down to commissioner of agriculture, I think you can look that all the duties of the commissioner of agriculture are statutory anyhow. The legislature, right now, could strip him of every function that he has. These duties are provided for by statute. Why elect a man statewide when the legislature could take away everything except his title? Again, it doesn't really make sense. So I submit to you, that the committee proposal was designed purely to facilitate the administration of state government in an intelligent, organized fashion. That the elected officials, that we have deleted serve such a function that should not be elected statewide, and I ask you to reject the Anzalone, et al. amendment. Thank you.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

Further Discussion

Mr. O'Neill Mr. Chairman, members of the convention, we've talked so much about flexibility and viability in government you'd think we were buying a pair of jockey shorts instead of setting up a government. Mr. Duval's logic, I think, is the logic that the committee took and I think that we should appreciate it. I also think that as with any other committee report we should listen, listen attentively and consider what that committee did, and if at all possible, to understand it and accept it. But I submit to you that we cannot accept the logic nor the intent of this committee's report. Just because an individual comes before a committee and says his office shouldn't be elective, we shouldn't just listen to him and say all of a sudden it's not going to be elective. I don't care if Louis Michot thinks that his office should be appointed and I don't care if someone else thinks their office should be appointed. I'm not here to listen to them. I'm here to decide for 50 more years, at least, we hope, whether that office will be elected. Not whether one person thinks his office ought to be appointed or elected. Yesterday, we heard testimony about the cost of some of these people. One delegate we heard say that someone making from $21,000 to $26,000 a year shouldn't have to run statewide. What does he get back in return? I'd like to ask that delegate whether or not he knows that the governor gets paid only $28,000 a year. What does he have to gain from running statewide? You know, this committee's proposal, one of the articles that the governor should make at least as much as his highest paid cabinet official or you know, what have you. So we're automatically giving the governor a raise up to Dr. Mary's salary of $55,000. I guess the lieutenant governor is going to have to make as much as he is, too. So we're talking about cost and what have you and then we look over the super health agency and look at the consolidation of 56 to 58 state agencies and we find that they are spending more put together than they did while they were separated. I'm for saving money and all those good things, but not when it's going to cost more to consolidate these offices than it is to operate them. We've talked, too, about accountability. You know that if you appoint someone who are not going to be able to hold the people accountable for their actions. We're going to have to chase after the governor if we think our insurance rates are too high. We're going to have to chase after the governor if we think our education system is going badly. Well I submit to you that I'd rather be able to vote out someone who heads up one of these departments than to vote out a governor, because I'm not so sure that we could have much effect there. Those of us who have submitted these amendments, and I know there are over 20 of us at least, have a strong philosophical feeling that these people should be elected rather than appointed. We don't care what other states, we're not here writing an Illinois constitution or a model state constitution. We're here writing a constitution for the people of this state, not for any other state. I submit to you that the amendment we have before us is a good amendment. I think that it is procedurally correct for us to do it this way. I think that it's going to facilitate us time-wise. If we adopt this amendment and you feel strongly that perhaps one or two of these people should be taken out, well you can draw up your amendment to take these two people out and we won't have to have the constant progression of amendments putting one, two, three or four back in. I think yesterday that the Chairman, with all good intentions, wanted to go over these one at a time. We said we thought it would make things a little faster if we put them all back in and then amended one or two out if we felt it was necessary. So I ask you to adopt this amendment, one, because we think it is philosophically correct, and two, because I think it will speed up the progress of this convention and most of all because it will make the people of Louisiana at least feel a little safe in knowing that they can elect these people. Anyone who calls it a false sense of security, well my answer to you is I'd rather have a false sense of security than having these people appointed. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Derbes Good morning fellow delegates, I rise in opposition to the amendment on essentially a procedural ground. That is, I think that each of these offices that we have discussed and are discussing is very important. Many have been with us for a long period of time in the history of our state. The people are accustomed to the offices, but I think the offices, because of that fact, deserve independent consideration. To lump them altogether in one amendment, to restore them to the committee proposal and then to argue over whether or not we are going to take them out to me, merely confuses and complicates the discussion on this very important subject matter. It serves no useful purpose to me to have to discuss the commissioner of insurance at the same time one discusses the register of state lands. To me, the clear, logical and most efficient method to handle this problem is to discuss them individually. If we can all agree that the five offices mentioned in the original committee proposal should indeed remain elective, then let's merely amend the original committee proposal to add to that proposal the individual offices which were deleted. Let's discuss them individually and independently, their merits and demerits and make that decision. I think that the most effective way to do that is to discuss the amendment and to take up the set of individual amendments which the staff of this convention has prepared and which can be introduced shortly hereafter. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mrs. Warren Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise for this amendment. I think it is good. This morning I received a mailogram, a Western Union mailogram, from the Orleans teachers saying please keep the superintendent of education elected. The superintendent was good for him to say that he would like henceforth, that the superintendent would be elected and I'm really wondering why they don't just wait until he's appointed before he starts running. I think he's doing a good job, but I do think that the superintendent of education should be elected. There are others in this amendment, as Mr. Derbes said, might not be as important, but I think they are all important because each of them have a separate function. I've had an occasion to write the insurance commissioner on matters, and in other words I would have had to go to the governor to get permission probably to go to the insurance commissioner which would have taken a longer time to get a reply from him. I think that these elected officials will be more accountable to the people if they are elected by the people. In spite of the fact that we said apathy in voting is law, we have it. I do believe that people are voting more today than they ever voted before and they are beginning to learn what each elected official owes the community as a whole. I think at this time, and this stage of the game, it would not be right to take it out of our constitution. So I'm going to support this amendment. Thank you.

[Previous session referred.]

Closing

Mr. Asseff Mr. Chairman, delegates, good men are elected and good men are appointed. In like fashion, incompetents are elected and incompetents are appointed. There is no sure way of getting the best for public office. Just as governors appoint to satisfy political obligations, the people quite often vote on looks saying, if I have to look at a crook for four years, he might as well be a good looking one. So many of us think that good structure will bring good government to Louisiana. Though structure is important, alone it will not bring good government. Even the experts do not agree on what is the best structure. It depends on which book you read or which expert you contact. Just as physicians do not agree, neither do the governmental experts. Dr. Clyde Snyder, Professor of Political Science at the University of Illinois, and a leading authority in the field of state government comments on the results of reorganization of the executive branch as follows: "In general, the principle of centralization appears to be basically sound, but that is not to say that wisest reorganization on those principles is the wisest course of action in every state and under all circumstances". It is unfortunate that as the present writer believes, proponents of reorganization have devised a reorganization formula of which they have virtually made a fetish and which they tend to prescribe for every state, regardless of local differences. As a matter of fact, what is best in an individual state at a given time will depend largely upon local conditions. The argument for appointment is that the governor is held accountable for the affairs of the state, and should be given the necessary tools. Ironically, that was the argument for addressing certain state officials out of office. Even if the arguments were valid, to appoint will strengthen the argument and under all circumstances is already, in fact, if not in law, one of the most powerful in the United States. The argument against is that it strengthens the chances of dictatorial rule in this state. Most important of all, we live in a democracy and right or wrong the people wish to elect these officials. What I think or do not think is immaterial. It is the people's government and they must decide what they want, and they have decided. I have no mandate to impose my views upon them. No one can honestly say which method is superior. Some, in their ivory towers, have urged appointment, but those who have lived in the ivory towers and also have had years of governmental experience, as I have, and involving the appointment is the answer. The answer, in reality, is the revival of public interest in their government. When elected, the official, periodically, must account to the people for what he does. This makes him more responsive to the public will which is as it should be. Appointment brings some independence but often arrogance and a floating of the wishes of the people. I favor reducing the number of executive agencies to not more than twenty, but I have watched too many governors from behind the scenes and know what they can do, and am unwilling to take a chance on dictatorship by also permitting appointments of these offices. Is your memory so short that you do not remember the political history of this state? Do you want to take a chance on dictatorship? Well I do not. I remember the era of "gold bathtubs" in this state. Do you? On my graduating diploma, the B.A. is the signature of the governor who went to the penitentiary. Too many "gold bathtubs." Also on my diploma is the signature of the president of the university who went to the penitentiary. Too many "gold bathtubs." Also I have the signature of the United States Attorney General who sent them there. And ironically for me, I was the class's valedictorian, but no "gold bathtubs" for me. The issue is crucial and the decision is yours.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

[Record vote ~~ordered~~. Amendment rejected: 53-45. Motion to reconsider ~~railed~~.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Mr. Perez sends up the following amendment.

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, at the end of line 19, delete the period and add the following: "of the state."

Explanation

Mr. Perez Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this amendment, I hope, will not be controversial and one which has been agreed to by the Chairman of the Executive Committee. The only purpose of this amendment would be to make it clear that the executive branch of the department will consist of the govern-nor, the other statewide elected officers which are specifically cited and all other executive offices, agencies and instrumentalities, and that's the way the present section now reads, and I would just suggest the addition of the words "of the state," to make it clear we are talking about state instrumentalities, offices and agencies and not any other. I move the adoption of the amendment.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment offered by Mr. Derbes; Mr. Lambert has the same amendment.

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 18, after the word and punctuation treasurer, insert the words and punctuation "Commissioner of agriculture,".

Explanation

Mr. Derbes Ladies and gentlemen, I just want to bring you up-to-date on what the product of this little gathering in the front was. My own particular feelings vary about these various state offices, whether they should be elective or appointive. I merely wanted to try to get us on the road to a swift consideration of the issues involved by submitting the offices to you separately. So the staff had prepared, and I took the liberty of authoring a series of amendments which will add each of these offices to the present committee proposal. I am not necessarily in favor of adding them all, I'm merely in favor of submitting them to you for your independent consideration. So I'm not going to waste time by speaking to each of the issues and I would ask the Chairman at this time, if he's available, to let you know in what order these various offices will come up, as presently proposed.

Mr. Henry Mr. Derbes, we are going to take them in alphabetical order. I believe that's the way you introduced them. So we are going to take Agriculture, Custodian of Voting Machines, Superintendent of Education, Commissioner of Insurance, and whatever else in that order.

Mr. Derbes I would just like to say before closing and taking up these amendments in order that I am a member of the Committee on Natural Resources and the committee did unanimously decide to retain as an elective post the Commissioner of Agriculture. I am sure Mr. Munson, who is vice-chairman of that committee, will have more to say on that subject. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Munson Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, Mr. Abraham would also like to point out in regard to your question a moment ago that there is a similar amendment, similar to Mr. Derbes' amendment that was submitted by Mr. Lambert on behalf of the Committee on Natural Resources and Agriculture which, as Mr. Derbes pointed out, voted unanimously to keep this office elective. I would like to say first in regards to a statement made by Mr. Duval a few minutes ago, when he said that there is no sense for this office to be elective... I can assure you ladies and gentlemen that it makes a lot of sense to the farmers and to agricultural interest of this state that this office be elective and I believe to a majority of the voters of this state. As all of you probably know, I'm a farmer myself. Every farmer I have talked to on this subject matter of there has been in favor of an elected commissioner of agriculture. I have here in my hand a letter from Louisiana Farm Bureau Federation which I assume all of you also received, in which at their convention in Monroe just a couple of weeks ago they voted unanimously to ask this convention to retain this office as an elective office. I was appalled that this convention by the governor of this state to represent agriculture. Let me assure you that in voting for this amendment I am representing agriculture and I would sincerely hope that all of you will go along and keep this very important office as a constitutional office and as an elective office. I might point out that I voted for the amendment just a few moments ago which was defeated because I really do believe, and I'm convinced in my own mind that the people of this state would rather have their officers elected rather than appointed.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

Questions

Mr. Schmitt In other words it's your feeling that this position should be an elective position rather than an appointive position.

Mr. Munson Yes sir.

Mr. Schmitt Then what about other types of... in other words you have one interest group, what about consumers? Shouldn't there be perhaps a state department of consumer affairs and shouldn't they have an elective person? What about an environmental control department? What about a state levee department? What about a state bridge department? What about a state department of sanitation? I think our history of the state is rampant with the number of agencies and commissions and boards, etc. that we can imagine and conjure. I really feel that if you begin allowing all of these different interest groups to have an elected person, I think we'll have certain problems there. But I'd like to say...

Mr. Casey Mr. Schmitt, is this a question. Point of order.

Mr. Schmitt Yes, sir, it's the prelude to a question. Is this position an elective statewide position?

Mr. Munson Yes, sir, at the present, it is. Those people that you have mentioned are represented in state government today.

Mr. Schmitt That's correct. Also, isn't it a trend for more and more of the population to be going towards the urban area? Is this correct?

Mr. Munson I would say that's correct, yes.

Mr. Schmitt So isn't it possible that you might have a person run who can get the support of the cities and win and become the head of the Department of Agriculture? Don't you feel that you'd have a better chance of getting someone to represent agriculture through the governor than you would by an elective process?

Mr. Munson Well, of course the same thing would be true if any one candidate for governor got all of the vote out of the urban area. Then the urban area is going to elect the governor and the lieutenant governor. But let me say this in regard to the resolution that I just mentioned from the Louisiana Farm Bureau Convention, wanted to keep this office elective. They also asked in there that we leave it up to the legislature to set qualifications for the commissioner of agriculture by statute which would take care of what you are talking about right now, if this is done. That is their recommendation.

Mr. O'Neill Mr. Munson, do you feel that the farmers are thinking about the current commissioner of agriculture when they express these feelings of keeping him elected, or do you think they're thinking about the future?

Mr. Munson Mr. O'Neill, I don't think that personalities or people should enter into it whatsoever.

Mr. O'Neill Thank you.

Mrs. Taylor Mr. Munson, would you just state some of the duties of the commissioner? What's the job description there?

Mr. Munson The duties of the commissioner of agriculture, of course Mrs. Taylor, are many and they are varied. I don't have all of those duties in front of me. The primary duty of course is to promote Louisiana agriculture, which I will say right now that, in my opinion, our present commissioner of agriculture has done a great job of promoting Louisiana products. He also has the job of regulating.

Mr. Casey Mr. Munson, I have to call time on you.

Mr. Munson Thank you very much.

Further Discussion

Mr. Burns Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, you might begin to think that I'm voter conscious, and perhaps I am. Maybe we all should be to a certain extent because no matter how hard we work to complete this constitution between now and perhaps next June or July, it's still going to have to be approved by the voters of this state and we should never lose sight of the fact. Now I do not mean by any stretch of the imagination that we should sacrifice quality in this constitution for that, but let's always keep that in mind. I have an amendment which I'm going to withdraw in the face of this procedure that we're following now. My amendment was to keep the commissioner of agriculture and the superintendent of education along with the five that the committee had set forth in their proposal. I believe that these two offices are more closely connected with the people and the voters of this state... the superintendent of schools with all the school people, the teachers, the parents, and of course the commissioner of agriculture with the farming interests and many, many other varied interests. Don't just think by the title of the office that it's just concerned with farmers. It's concerned with pasture people. It's concerned with cattle raisers. It's concerned with people in the horse industry. It's concerned with people in the nursery business, and I could go on and on and on. Those people want the commissioner of agriculture retained in the constitution as an elective office and don't you ever forget it. It's the same way, I understand, with the superintendent of education. The school people want to elect their superintendent, and I think very properly so. I can't really go along, the other three are entirely different in my opinion than the two that I have enumerated. They don't have too much contact with the people. They're more clerical and their activities are confined to the office here in Baton Rouge.

Questions

Mr. Grier Mr. Burns, isn't it true that approximately forty percent of the economy of this state is tied to agriculture and agribusiness.

Mr. Burns Truthfully, I couldn't answer that. It is...

Mr. Ginn Mr. Burns, isn't it also true that there's approximately thirty-seven thousand families that are in the Farm Bureau Association who favor the election of the commissioner of agriculture?

Mr. Burns I wouldn't say so. Just one more statement and then I won't take up anyone of your time. I can't go along exactly with this concentration of power. I've always believed that power is like fertilizer. To get the best results out of it, you've got to spread it around.

Further Discussion

Mr. Stagg Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I don't intend to answer all of the other statements that would be made by the previous speakers at this microphone. But I would like to repeat one of them for emphasis. That the voters of this state are now by the great majority concentrated in the metropolitan areas of this state, and have no knowledge of the basic problems facing the agricultural community. It would seem to me that if the commissioner of agriculture were appointed by the governor, that is by any governor worthy of his salt, he will seek out the most qualified person to represent the interests of agriculture. Yes, I agree that it is a great part of the economy of this state, but so is mineral production and in that field the governor appoints the commissioner of conservation. There are no qualifications set forth in the constitution for the job of commissioner of agriculture. A person can be elected who's first and foremost a politician, and maybe not at all acceptable to a majority of the responsible farmers or farm organizations. It was in this sense that the Committee on the Executive Department concluded that the better interests of agriculture for the distant future and for now would be served by the governor appointing a man acceptable to agricultural interests who has a knowledge of the field of agriculture and can carry out farm programs in the Executive Department. If for any reason it became necessary to replace that person, if the governor had appointed him, then the governor could replace him. When anything goes wrong in one of the major departments of government, it is the governor who also gets the blame and in these instances can do nothing about it. Those were the things which motivated the Committee on the Executive Department and we think that they are subsisting and that they are viable and important to this convention to decide.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

Chairman Henry in the Chair

Questions

Mr. Abraham Tom, don't you feel that the promotion of agriculture and the promotion of commerce and industry in this state are equally important?

Mr. Stagg Yes, I do.

Mr. Abraham Don't you feel that by the governor appointing the board to promote commerce and industry that he could do the same thing by appointing someone or a board to promote agriculture?

Mr. Stagg I think that makes very good sense, Mr. Abraham.

Mr. Shannon Mr. Stagg, is there any place in the proposed constitution, any qualifications set forth, for the commissioner of agriculture?

Mr. Stagg Not at this time, Mr. Shannon.

Mr. Shannon Is it proposed that it will be?

Mr. Stagg I have not read that in the proposal of the Committee on Natural Resources. It may be, but I have not read it.

Mr. Denny Mr. Stagg, isn't it true that under the Executive Article as presently drafted the legislature would have a perfect right to set qualifications for these appointed offices?

Mr. Stagg The present draft of the Executive Article would allow the legislature in the appointment of anybody by the governor would have qualifications set forth by statute. Yes, sir.

Mrs. Warren Mr. Stagg, you mentioned that people in the urban areas were not aware of what the commissioner of agriculture and all of this was all about. Do you think that at this stage when we are having higher prices and probably a shortage of food that people in urban areas would not be aware of what effect things have on the farmer if it is going to affect them too?

Mr. Stagg They're not only aware of them but they are quite concerned about it. Yes, ma'am.

Mrs. Warren So in that light, in the farmers needing someone that they feel that they can go to in order to provide for the people, don't you think it would be [] to have somebody that they could go to instead of having to go to the governor and then back track?

Mr. Stagg Mrs. Warren, I don't believe it would be necessary for any citizen to go to see the governor in order to go to see one of the governor's appointees. That just isn't so. Because he is appointed doesn't mean he is not accessible to you.

Mrs. Warren Mr. Stagg, I'm here just to ask you a question, but experience has taught me that this is not true.

Mr. Stagg I would hope that your experiences do improve, Mrs. Warren, as I hope the constitution does, too.

Further Discussion

Mr. Bayburn Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in support of this proposed amendment. Let me say to you here and now. I know of no better yardstick to measure anyone by than the ballot box. I think one of the reasons we're in the trouble we're in in this country today is because in many occasions the people have not had a right to speak on the people that represent them and the welfare of their neighbors, their friends, their children and otherwise. Thirty-nine thousand people, yes, Mr. Stagg, they don't live in New Orleans or Shreveport, but they provide what lets those people that live there eat, raise their children...The commissioner of agriculture has more to do in it than any other one individual in our great state. He's saying that your milk is pure, your vegetables are pure, your tomatoes, your apples, your peaches. He's saying that the fertilizer has the content that it's supposed to have and that your beef doesn't have bangs and many, many other occasions. I could go on and on and on and relate to you why a man with that much power and that much authority should be responsible to the people of our great state. Yes, if you want to build up militarism, in my opinion, you get a governor and you might get a nut. Some of you think we have had some nuts as governors. I've served under a lot of them, especially this two term deal. You give me that big chair. Let me name the commissioner of agriculture and the insurance commissioner. You couldn't blow me out of it with a stick of dynamite or talk about it with a machine, you talk about machine...all you good government people. You must not know what you're talking about. If you want to build a machine...I've got no quarrel with the present governor. I think he's made a good governor. I think he's doing a good job and I hope he continues. I have been there when they started off sweet and would up sour. I hope he stays sweet. Let me say to you, you didn't have to have any qualification so to speak of to come here. Now, you want the commissioner to have all types of qualifications. Here you are writing a document that your children and my children and their children might live with, as far as we know, for the next fifty years. Does anybody question your qualifications? No, no, no, it's all right for us to come in what we want to, third grade, fourth grade, no grade, doctor, Ph.D., everything else. Just come on down and get with it. No qualifications required of us. Just qualify. Then they say that we don't want to inject ourselves in the great political arena. I don't know how you got down here, but I did a little bit of politicking. Maybe you did. That's so, you want to say remove the politics out of everything. How are you going to do it? They'll be politicking when you and I are dead and gone and forgot about. You're not going to stop it. I found it here. I'll leave it here.

When you try to say to the people of this great state, if you want what we are doing here today to be doomed and go down, you tell them they can't elect some of their public officials. You tell them that. One of the most important jobs in this state, in my opinion, is the commissioner of agriculture. I think he should be responsible to the people of our great state and not to the governor. The governor's busy. He's got a whole lot to do now. If you throw all the other offices up on his shoulder, you are liable to run him crazy before the first six months he's in office. My Lord, he's got an awful job now. If you don't believe it, try to see him or ask him.

24th Days Proceedings--August 2, 1973

He's busy day and night, if he's tending to his business. If you had to put in a cotton farmer, every cucumber picker, every cattle dipper and everybody else under his control, then he's going to regulate your rates on the instant. Then he's going to tell you who's going to operate the vote machine. I like Governor Edwards. I don't want to load him down or no other governor with all this business. Let the people speak and you'll be doing what I think they want you to do. If they get a bad one, they know what to do with him. We've had a few bad ones, but you can't instant get the people on their day with the ballot box at the polls. I hope you adopt this amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Jack Mr. Chairman and members, I'm delighted to follow Senator Rayburn because I'm on the same side with him. Now, by maintaining these offices elective we're going to help the governor. It's like Senator Rayburn says, it's too much burden for the governor to have to find people for these most important offices that are now already elective. You just keep on...we're not going to inject personalities, who's the mayor, who holds the office, or that one. If you do away with all elective offices except the governor and the lieutenant governor and the others named, so that leaves five, the governor becomes in my mathematics one-fifth of an emperor--a king. Do away with all of them but the governor. Let him appoint everything. He becomes king or emperor. I do not see how you can argue with success. It's a hard thing. Let's just take what the commissioner of agriculture over the years has successfully spent. I'm sixty-five. It doesn't seem any time ago when they called me one of the Jack boys. I remember as a child out at that state fair, Mr. Harry Wilson was there all the time. He was the commissioner of agriculture. Whenever I went, since even then, I see the commissioner of agriculture at all these meetings. What I'm getting at...a man is not going to run for the office unless he likes it. You talk about lack of qualifications, someone, let me tell you whether it says it or not, any commissioner of agriculture is going to be a farmer. Now, let's take the governor. When Governor Edwards is a good friend of mine, I supported him after Jimmie Davis, after I voted for him in the first primary. I'm for him and he's making a good governor. This is the mistake we're always making.

Now, let's just take the difference between elected and appointed. I'm not stepping on any federal judge's foot, any U. S. Marshal, U. S. Attorney or the assistants. I've noticed this all of my life, just about my grown life, you get an appointed official. He does not go to all these civic things where you get close to the people. I've seen federal judges when they held elected offices, they were at civic meetings, but after they became a federal judge you didn't see them. I've seen U. S. Attorneys before they're appointed. They've been in the courts, they're not at these meetings...their assistants are not, the U. S. Marshal I've never seen, his assistants. But let's take the same in the state. I've seen those judges. I see our district attorney. I see the Bossier district attorneys, Webster, all those. I see their assistants at those meetings. I see the sheriff if there, you see his assistants. It proves that the elected officials and their assistants get out, get close to the people. Every commissioner of agriculture, as I started to say, was a farmer and is a farmer. To be governor, though, there's no requirement about you've got to be. You've got to be a certain age and if anybody finds out you are not alive, you can't continue serving. That's the only thing locked in getting it is good. I don't care how good an appointment a governor may make, if that fellow doesn't get out and see the people and find out what they need; he can be brilliant; he can have the highest I.Q. or she can have the highest I.Q. but it does no good. So I say let's keep this elective. Thank you.

Personal Privilege

Mr. Roemer Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, we have the honor to have visiting with us today a member of Parliament, Mr. Ernest Marples, who is a dear friend of Senator Adrian Duplantier and a number of us who visited London this past year. He is returning to the vicar here in the United States with us. Mr. Marples has been elected to Parliament eight times. He has served two positions in the cabinet of Mr. Harold Macmillan and with Mr. Winston Churchill. I am at liberty to tell you that he said he lives in London but he runs from a district that's two hundred miles outside of London and gets it. He is returning to the vicar here that's pretty good. I wish you would join me in welcoming the Honorable Ernest Marples, Member of Parliament.

Mr. Henry I asked Mr. Marples if he would like to say a few words to the delegates and he has agreed to. He wants to talk about the Watergate, Mr. Staggs, I believe

Mr. Marples Thank you so much for your kindness to me. I come to America frequently and see a number of very curious sights. I never quite know what's going to happen, but this time I went to Watergate. Before I came to Watergate I went to France. Now in France they have certain rules about what they think is a scandal. They said that they'd criticize both Britain and America in a very hostile way. For example, they said to me about the Americans--Now here the Americans are with a great scandal on their hands. They haven't handled it properly because there's no sex in it. They said this is uncivilized, because it's not giving the women a chance to say anything or do anything. Then they said about England--And here you have Jellicoe and Lambton who go out sleeping for the night, I'm told it was enjoyable and agreeable but I wasn't a witness so it's only hearsay. They went with two girls or one went with two girls and the other went with one girl. I don't know. It's rather confusing to get the facts because you can't there. Then they said about France. She sees to that. Anyway, the point is, that you said that you in England, you're even worse than America, because if that had happened in France, both Jellicoe and Lambton would have been promoted at once.

All I can say is that I hope you will get over your Watergate as quickly as possible because deep down in my heart as a politician I know that the government of the country will suffer if the Watergate affair goes on too long. We had this problem in England during the Profumo crisis. Ten years ago it dragged on and drooled on and the government of the day suffered. This last time with Jellicoe and Lambton, it was finished speedily. I would say for God's sake and the world's sake, let's hope it ends shortly. Thank you for listening to me so patiently and so kindly.

Mr. Henry We also have some other guests here today that I would like to introduce at this time. We have Senators Schwartz and Wolff and Representatives Von Dohlen and Hale from the State of Texas. If you would, would you stand up in the back and I will ask that the delegates welcome you at this time. These gentlemen are over from the State of Texas. They are about to commence a constitutional convention there where they will try and the House will sit as the convention. They are over here observing our progress and organization, or lack of it, whatever the case might be. We're glad to have you with us.

Further Discussion

Mr. Roemer Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates. I rise in support of the amendment to elect, to continue to elect, to forever elect our commissioner of agriculture. I'm a duck hunter. That doesn't make me smart, but I do like to hunt ducks. One thing I learned is when all the ducks come in at one time in the morning, if you try to hit them all at once, you're going to miss them all. So we are going to take these elective offices one duck at a time. As far as I'm concerned, the first duck and and the biggest duck and the duck that's closest to me is commissioner of agriculture. Let's talk about this duck. One of the speakers that preceded me to this rostrum said the phrase, "A governor worth his salt." Any governor worth his salt will appoint a good man, a fine man, a competent man as commissioner of agriculture. I submit to you that we've had some governors that weren't worth their salt. Chances are we'll have some more who don't measure very high on the salt scale. I would rather risk my case with the people than with a governor. I don't care who the governor is friend or foe. Now, it's true that the legislature will have the right to set the duties of the commissioner of agriculture and so they will. It's also true that the people in this state have had the right to elect a commissioner of agriculture. It's one thing to give them new rights. It's something else to take an old right away. I think that's something we need to remember here if we decide to take away the right of the people to elect their commissioner of agriculture. Some of the speakers have hinted that maybe the commissioner of agriculture is not as important as it once was. Untrue. It's more important now than ever. Go down to the store and see what the price of meat is. If you can't find a good cut down to the store and see if you can find the kind of food products that you want to find. You can't do it. More than ever we need a man or a woman, a person interested in the consumer and the agricultural interests in this state. Now, some speakers talk about the cabinet form of government. I think the form is still due to hold and elect a successful form of government or not. Look at our national government. We've got a cabinet form. Some people try to tell me that the best argument for appointing a commissioner of agriculture is Dave Pearce. I submit to you that the best argument for electing a commissioner of agriculture is Earl Butz, who's from the national government. He's the best man in that administration is why you can't eat what you want to today for the price you can afford to pay. Let's look at the facts in the situation. You know I'm familiar with the professionals, the people who get appointed, the pros. They know more about programs than they do about people. I'm not talking about people who are in the legislature. I think people elect good people. Find and let's hire some professionals to get the program together, but let's get a people man at the top—a people man. Now, I'll close with this. Most of us here have more education than we do knowledge, and I'm one of them. It becomes quite clear among the educated and unknowledgeable speakers when they speak about elective versus appointive that they don't know what they're talking about. I hear the slogan, and it's nothing more than that, cabinet form of government. Read a book by George Orwell. It's called Animal Farm. It's about slogans and people who run their life on slogans. It's about a farmer who lost his empire to the animals. The animals took it over and the animals elected the pigs to run it. The pigs ran it by slogans, seven of them. One of the slogans was, "all animals are equal but some animals are more equal than others". That's a slogan and they found out, the pigs did, that the animals couldn't remember seven slogans so the pigs gave them one, "four legs good, two legs bad" and the pigs were happy. I'm not talking about slogans. Let's look at the facts. People elect people. We can't have it any other way.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

Further Discussion

Mr. Ginn: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I too rise in favor of this amendment. For the election of the Commissioner of Agriculture. Just a minute ago, I pointed out to Mr. Burns, I asked him if there were 37,000 families in the Farm Bureau Association in Louisiana, and he said that he was aware of that. Senator Rayburn...he corrected me. He said there was 39,000 plus, and these are families, not people, 39,000 families. This is including the children and perhaps some 18 year old or older children. Just the other day on that phone over there the president of the Morehouse Parish Farm Bureau Association called me and asked me how I felt on this, and I told him.

He informed me that there are approximately 400 families in Morehouse Parish who are in the Farm Bureau Association and at their convention they passed the election of the Commissioner of Agriculture. Ouachita Parish...800 families... Parish...350 families. In West Carroll...700 and in East Carroll...350 families, and in Madison Parish...300 families and/or voters. Every single time there has been an agricultural problem in my neck of the woods, the Commissioner of Agriculture has come there and checked it out. I should think that we need an elected Commissioner of Agriculture to continue to take care of our agricultural problems. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Stovall: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention. It seems to me that if we're going to make the right kind of decision on how many elected officials we're going to have in this state, we need to consider where we have been in the past and what our history is. When we do this, we discover that in the past we have had in state government competing power structures for money, position, the loyalty of the people, the right of jurisdiction, overlapping, and by and large an inefficient system. We have not had clear lines of responsibility from the top to the bottom, and accountability from the bottom to the top. Good governors have not been able to administer the affairs of state because of these competing systems. Good legislation has been frustrated because of these competing about something better. I think, first of all, we need to look at our past. With our system of many elected officials we have not been able to bring about the kind of efficient, honest government... after all, we've had many, many indictments and convictions of public officials. We need to move from the past to a new structure that will enable us to move into the new possibility for our state. What we need is a unified structure. It is not a question of giving the governor of the state more power, but rather it is a matter of providing a structure of government that will enable the chief executive of the state to administer the affairs in a responsible way. The gentleman, is the decision... ladies and gentlemen. It is a question of whether we're going to have a unified system of administration or whether we're going to have competing structures before us. Now let me respond to some of you who say the people want to elect their officials. May I suggest that what the people of this state want is honest, efficient government. Many elected officials have not brought it about. What we need is a unified system. We have given the legislature more power. This is good, but we believe in a separation of powers. We believe the governor should have power to administer the affairs of this state. May I suggest to you that the interests of agriculture will be better served if the Commissioner of Agriculture is appointed for it will mean that the total power and authority of the state will be back of the program of agriculture presented by the Commissioner of Agriculture who has been appointed by the governor. It will no longer mean that the Commissioner of Agriculture will be in competition with others, but instead there can be a unified approach to whatever the needs of the state might be. In conclusion, I invite you to vote for the future possibility of Louisiana. Let us enable a better day... a better future. Let us get beyond the conflicts that we have had in the past. Let us vote for an appointed Commissioner of Agriculture along with his other appointed officials that we might move forward into a new day, a new future, a new possibility for our state.

Further Discussion

Mr. Kilpatrick: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise in support of this amendment. I come from the rolling hills of north Louisiana, and as state senator there I represent five parishes that are primarily farming in nature. The Farm Bureau, the Police Jury, the school boards, and many of our people there have contacted me personally on this issue. This is one of the clutch issues and one of the clutch votes that we're going to have in this convention to take to the people for their support. These people in north Louisiana want you to vote for this amendment to keep the Agriculture Commissioner elected. They don't want to give all this power to a governor. Any man who is appointed to a post can remain in that post as long as he's a good politician. If he is an elected politician he's going to have to serve the wants and the needs of the people of this great state, from New Orleans to north Louisiana and from Texas over to Mississippi. Now, our farmers that we have there...we have a good cross-section of the people there in north Louisiana. We have the cotton farmer, the soy bean farmer. We raise our corn. We have our dairy farmers, our beef cattle farmers, peanut farmers, peach, watermelon and poultry farmers. If we don't give the people of this state the opportunity to vote for this Agriculture Commissioner, I know and I've been told by the Bureau which is 39,000 plus families strong that they're not going to support this convention's charges when we support it to the people there. This is as important as any tax proposal that we're going to have and the Finance plate. I urge your support of this amendment. It's very necessary for us here to present something to the people that all of the people in the state of Louisiana want. I'll rise to the question.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

Question

Mr. Avant Senator Kilpatrick, if the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States had been elected instead of appointed, do you think that we would have sold to the Communists every last bit of reserve wheat and feed grain that we had in this country on credit...on better terms of credit than you can get at any bank, don't care what your financial statement is and then turn around and try to let them take that grain to the Communist countries in their own vessels while our vessels and our sailors lie idle in our ports?

Mr. Kilpatrick Absolutely not, and that's a good point to bring out here. In closing I would like to say this...I think that I'm qualified to speak to you on farming, after all, I'm a planter myself.

Further Discussion

Mr. Lowe Mr. Chairman, delegates to the convention, I hope that it's not often that I'll rise to speak to you. I recall that the last time that I came before you was at another occasion when I thought that the issue was an issue of independence. I think that I feel more strongly about independence than I do any other one thing, as far as state government is concerned. I often reflect to tell you some of the experiences that I've had, because I did have the experience of serving in the term and voluntarily not seeking reelection. I think that it's because of some of those experiences that I had that I did not seek reelection and I wish that each delegate here that had not had that experience could at least have had one term in the state legislature before coming to this convention. I firmly believed that the key issue to the people of the state of Louisiana in this constitution is the issue of independence. If we can give them independence in state government, we've given them a constitution that will stand the test of time. I firmly believe that the history of success in government is a history of the limitation of the powers that are given to that particular government. I'm not here because I feel strongly about agriculture. I'm not here because I feel strongly about voting machines which I'm sure will come up with a later amendment. I'm here because I do feel strongly about independence. I believe that each delegate, as we consider amendments and proposals to this constitution will have to consider a textbook approach and a practical approach. There'll be times when the practical approach is important. There'll be times when the textbook approach is important. I appeal to you now to put aside the textbook approach, to take a serious look at the practical approach of what we can do for the state of Louisiana. There's no doubt that elected officials...the elected officials that we now have in the state constitution...give us a measure of independence that is impossible for us to get if we give that power to the governor or some other body in the state of Louisiana. Now, I opposed the two term amendment, the second coming, and I opposed it because I felt that the state of Louisiana was not ready for it. Not because I opposed the concept of it. There was already too much power for the governor to have in the state constitution. Until we make some drastic changes that are going to bring about independence, I appeal to you to leave in our constitution the little independence that we now have. I hope that many of you voted against the previous amendment because all of the officers were lumped together. I hope that you are ready to consider them individually and to give us that independence that we have come here to assure the voters of the state of Louisiana that they would get from this Constitutional Convention.

Further Discussion

Mr. Schmitt I've heard many good speakers up here today...Senator Rayburn, Buddy Roemer and many others, and the more I think about it, I'm beginning to understand some of their points. Initially, I had conceived the idea that when we went through the legislative section we had granted more power and capability to the legislature than they've ever had before. After analysis of that executive section, in seeing that the powers which we have granted to them in an attempt to balance their power with the executive, I really firmly believe that we have done this. In the executive department, according to the proposal which we have before us, many of the appointive powers of the governor will be removed. This will strip him of a lot of the power which he presently has and then turn around and give him more power than any other governor in the United States and it's my understanding that he has more appointive positions available to him than even the President of the United States. However, subsequent to the adoption of the executive proposal, he will be reduced to that of having perhaps a few hundred appointments versus approximately 2700 appointments he has at the present time. One of the major reasons for being opposed to this amendment was because of the fact that I felt that this would destroy the accountability factor...that the Commissioner of Agriculture, by having an elective one, if he wanted to do something different, and if he didn't represent the interests of agriculture, that they couldn't do anything about him for four years. The more that I've thought about it, I really believe that's still true and is still the case. Also, Buddy Roemer's comments with reference to the fact that the Commissioner of Agriculture should represent the consumer and that he should run state-wide. I really feel strongly about this too, because the consumer must be represented. I feel that one person ran from the city and said that he runs for a strong consumer...he's a strong consumer advocate...and the farmer beat him...that he can win, because he can get the votes from the cities. He can get votes from the urban areas, and he can beat the country boys. If he does that, you're going to hear more from him from now on. I'd like to hear that Farm Bureau up there screaming to the governor. There's nothing the governor can do about it, because that man's in for four years. You've created one of the most powerful...or you will be creating one of the most powerful positions that this state has ever seen. If you get a person who is a consumer advocate...I'd like to see the wisdom of Agriculture, who will he be representing? Will he be attempting to promote agriculture in the world or will he be attempting to make the prices lower for the people in the cities? What's to prevent the cities from electing their own representative...from electing a man to this position? I see nothing that we've done so far...that's why I can see the wisdom of Senator Rayburn's proposal, because he's giving a chance to the cities to be elected to head this particular department. Maybe it's time for a change.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

When the people from the cities can take control and decide what the destiny of the state will be in the Agriculture Department, maybe that's what Senator Rayburn wants. For I'm sure that if you vote for this amendment that's what you're going to get, because I, for one, would be happy to run for this position. I believe that I can get the support across state-wide, at least to give the man a run for his money. I'd say, I'm a Republican, but if a Democrat did the same thing and ran for the city, shame on you country boy, because you just aren't going to make it.

Further Discussion

Mr. Smith Mr. Chairman, I don't get up here too often, but when I do I feel I have something to say. However, I'm rather reluctant to follow all of this great oratory I've heard. I might say, I'm from the rural sections of Caddo Parish. I represent farmers up around north Caddo, but I haven't had any of them to contact me on this particular thing to ask me to vote for it or against it. I'm voting for it because I'm not playing politics, but I'm voting for each one of these amendments as they come up, and I'm glad they're coming up individually so we can vote on each on its merits. Personally, I'm down here...this is my last, I guess, political job...I want to see a good constitution written. I'm sincere in that...a well-rounded constitution for everyone. I feel I'm in this particular instance we ought to uphold this committee. When I was in the legislature we had committees. We sent acts to the committees for proposals. They heard them. They heard the witnesses. They were in a better position than we were here on the floor. They've come up omitting this as an elective job. I think that we ought to stay with them. I don't think that the Commissioner of Agriculture needs to be an elective job. These men who got up here and talked for it, most of them are farmers, that's fine. I'm not a farmer. I'm a lawyer, but I feel like it's no reason to have this as an elective job just because it is now an elective job. I feel like the ones they have recommended should stay in and let the Commissioner of Agriculture be on each one of these, but I think that the Commissioner of Agriculture is a job that should be appointed. As far as giving the governor more power, I'm not caring about that particularly...this may give him more. I say let's uphold the committee on these things. I think it was a good committee. They worked hard, and I'm going to uphold them on making this an appointive job.

Questions

Mr. Munson Mr. Smith, I believe that you said a couple of times there that you believed in upholding the committee. Is that correct?

Mr. Smith That's right.

Mr. Munson Well, how will you feel about upholding the Committee on Agriculture on their recommendation which voted unanimously to make this job elective?

Mr. Smith Well, I believe you represent the farmers and that hadn't come out yet, but I'm going to uphold this committee because I think this was the right committee it was sent to.

Further Discussion

Mr. Shannon Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of this convention, you've heard a lot of oratory here for and against the appointment or election of a Commissioner of Agriculture. Much has been said that I intended to say, and one thing that I would like for you to bear in mind, this cabinet type government sounds good, but what is causing the price of foodstuffs that you're buying today. It is the outcome of a cabinet form of government. Our give-away of all of our surplus grain in this country and it was a give-away, and that is the root of the price increases that we're paying in this state and this nation today. I represent an area from north Louisiana, also...Caddo Parish. I represent a city district, which is confined, within the city of Shreveport. But I have not lived in the city all of my life. I came up on a farm, and I know what it means to be a farmer. I understand their problems, I believe more than a great number of people today. I tell you, the farmer is the backbone of this country and when we get to the point where we cannot have anything to eat, then we are in one bad shape. We are getting in that position now. In the next few years, there's going to be a shortage of food in this country; no matter how much money you have, you're not going to be able to buy it. What good is the money going to do you then? I submit to you that the people are the best judge of the people that are going to serve them that I know of. I submit to you and suggest to you that we vote to continue as we have now by voting an election for the office of Commissioner of Agriculture. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Thompson Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise in support of this amendment. First of all I want to ask you the question and let's bring it right home. There's a whole lot of criticism about the hundred and thirty-two, twenty-seven being appointed by the governor and just one hundred and five being elected. Supposed we had turned this thing around and had twenty-seven elected and one hundred and five appointed by the governor. How many of you do you think would be here, including myself? Let's bring it right home. Let's bring it to the ballot box, where Senator Rayburn brought it to you. How many of you would be here if the governor was going to appoint you instead of the people back home that knew you and elected you? That's what I want to ask. Twenty-seven of you would sure be here and maybe a few more. I'm sorry Mr. Stagg is not here, I'd like to ask him a question. How many of those people that we've been seeing on Watergate were elected? You think they'd stay there? No, they were all appointed people. The most standard government in the world is a dictatorship. How many of us want dictatorships? They don't have all the troubles that we're having in this country. They don't have all the stealing, all the controls and everything else. They just tell you to go out there and grab a hoe and chop the cotton or the corn or whatever they're doing over there. If you say anything about it, they don't know what became of you. I say let's don't saddle our good governor with other headaches and other duties. Let's keep it at the ballot box where it belongs. I urge you to vote for this amendment. As it's already been said, by Representative Munson, our committee voted unanimously, and I felt like we should have some say in this matter. They voted unanimously to make this elective. So, I urge each and every one of you to let's get on with the show and let's vote this to keep it elective.

Questions

Mr. Stagg Mr. Thompson, doesn't the present Commissioner of Agriculture have a Watergate problem of his own?

Mr. Thompson Yes, he does; he's got controls, and the people don't want it.

Mr. Kilpatrick Mr. Thompson, where do you think the man who's active in politics and business today is that doesn't make a mistake? I usually have them, don't I?

Mr. Thompson Right. All right.

Further Discussion

Mr. Alexander Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise to oppose this amendment. I was born and reared in a rural parish of the state of Louisiana known as Terra-bonna, Terrebonne. Good land. At the time when I lived there, right around me, were some 20 sugar mills. Now, those mills have almost disappeared. In 1921 when this constitution under which we live was adopted, this was an agricultural state. Agriculture was the major industry of the state. But now, is that true? Let any proponent of this proposal, this amendment, come forward and contradict that statement. Further, we put into effect, the major traffic arteries and highways of this state...was the horse and the buggy. Now, shall we or did we remain in the horse and buggy age? No. You can hardly find a horse and buggy on the highway, or even on a back street. I submit to you today, delegates, that the problem of the farmer is not the problem that it was in 1921 when he had to control insects, where there's a matter of increasing production, when there's a matter of mechanizing his farm. Sure, we needed a Department of Agriculture at that time, but now there is no more agriculture. These farmers to whom we refer now don't call themselves agriculturists. Go on to any college campus and you will see the term "agribusiness". Now, where are the agriculturists? What is the problem is? Not what the farmer produces. I don't pay high prices for spinach because the farmer's price has gone up, but I submit to you that the price between what the farmer receives for his goods and the price of what you pay as a consumer is widening all of the time, and that's where our problem is. So, we don't need a Department of Agriculture, as such. But we need it combined with the Department of Commerce. We need it combined with the Consumer Affairs Department, so that the farmer can get more for his products and the middleman will not be able to siphon-off, the processor will not be able to siphon-off, all of the money that leaves the farmer and is defeated. So I ask you let us move into the 20th century. Let us appoint the Agriculture Commissioner so that he can work with all the other agents and all the other units of government. So that the agriculturists, the Agriculture Department will not be out there alone as they have been, because the state is not an agricultural state anymore, but the farmer and the agriculturist needs the city dweller, the slum dweller, the urban dweller...let's defeat this amendment.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

Further Discussion

Mr. Alario Mr. Chairman, members of the convention, I stand to support this amendment and to support the rest of them following because I believe we're facing the issue now of whether you're in favor of elected officers, officers that have to answer directly to the people, or an office that answers only to one person. I'll never forget the day I stood in the House of Representatives on my first day and took the oath of office. I recall that you and I took here in this same convention, which in part said, "that I will faithfully and impartially perform the duties of my office to the best of my ability and understanding, so help me God." And as I sat in that plush chair in the House of Representatives, after taking that oath of office, I thought to myself, what a great state I live in, what a great country I live in, that the son of a poor fisherman could grow up in his state, be educated in his public school system, have the opportunity to work in the shrimp factories and the shipyards during the summers to get enough money to go to college, and to finish that education, and then to be elected by the people that he has used his lifetime with, to be in that great hall to represent them. As I sat in that chair, I thought about those people knowing that they are the ones that I have to answer to. Those are the only people I'm having to answer to, not to one man, I want to do the job that they called upon me to do. I wonder in this state how many sons of poor fishermen, how many sons of poor farmers, how many sons of poor laborers in this state, are going to ever be appointed to positions in this state? I'll tell you what's going to happen, and it's political reality. Who's going to make a deal to be appointed to an office to run, for instance, like the Insurance Commissioner's office? Those insurance companies are going to wheel and deal their contributions, prior to the election to make sure they have a commitment, a commitment from every horse in the race, to make sure that one of their people is there representing them. The average Joe on the street that has to pay that high insurance premium now on his automobile would not be able to put up any money to make sure he's represented there. But if he had a vote, if he had a say so, he'd sure turn a rascal out of office that wasn't representing him, just as he did this past term. I submit to you that the elected office is the best for the people of this state. If we appoint them, you're going to see an instance as we saw in this last administration, whenever the Revenue Director was accused of his department having various shenanigans going on. What did the governor of this past administration do, when the pressure was brought on him for that individual?...Promoted him to Director of Hospitals, because that was his political friend and ally. The people wouldn't stand for that type of business. They would have thrown him out on his ears. He would not have been that type of irresponsible government official. I know that he had to run in the next couple of years to answer to the people. The question is asked why would a person run for office state-wide that only paid 18 or 20 thousand dollars? Why would a person leave a job paying $42,000 a year to seek an office paying $28,000? I'll tell you why, because he's got the dedication to want to serve his people and to contribute something in his lifetime to those people that he loves. It's not the money consideration that a person seeks office for, it's that oath of office that he takes and that you and I take that says that he will perform his duties to the best of his ability and understanding, so help him God. Let's keep them elected.

Questions

Mr. Cowen Mr. Alario, we're talking about elected and appointed officials. Maybe this should be addressed to the Chair. I understood this as a question as to whether it's a constitutional office or not. Is that not what we're talking about?

Mr. Alario Yes sir.

Mr. Cowen Shouldn't we address ourselves as to whether it should be or should not be a constitutional office?

Mr. Alario Mr. Cowen, I saw this issue as the beginning of laying the groundwork of deciding whether this convention wanted to go on record as being for what the people want, and that is to let them elect their officials.

Mr. Cowen Don't you think, though, that perhaps it could be and should be a constitutional office, but the question will come up as to whether he should be elected or not may be two different things completely? Isn't that true? Should we regard them as two different things? They should be constitutional, I will agree. Maybe whether we want to elect them or not is a different thing.

Mr. Alario I saw the issue as whether you would be deciding whether it would be elective or not.

Further Discussion

Mr. Duval Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I realize that at this point people are not really listening and that this is an issue either you're for it or against it. But for those few of you who may be undecided, I would like to bring out the following points and attempt not to deal with platitudes or emotions, but merely facts which I think should be the determining fact in what we do here in writing a constitution.

Presently, the governor appoints the head of the division of administration, an extremely viable and important function and it deals with money and we can elect everybody, if they don't have any money, they can't do anything. Wildlife, and I'm very interested in wildlife, being from Terrebonne Parish, but it's functioned very properly. It's right at our economy in Terrebonne Parish. Conservation and oil, again, appointed. Forestry and collector of revenue, the man who collects the revenue, and we have a very fine one. Health and Welfare who deals with over a billion dollars in the state budget is appointed. The reason why, and these people have two feet, not four, the reason why this works is because the people elect their legislators as they should to represent the people and to make the laws. The laws are made by the legislature. They elect their judges to interpret it and the executive is supposed to be protected. The focal point of election is the governor. He is the man who has to run it, and if everybody is elected, like the people I mentioned, there is no way the governor could run the executive. You'd have a bunch of little kingdoms and total, mass pandemonium. That's a fact. This is the reason the other positions I mentioned are appointed and they have not worked quite well actually. In most instances, although nothing is utopian, and nothing we do here is utopian. But the focal election is governor. You go talk to the people we've all been talking about, now, they know who they're voting for governor. But you talk to ninety percent of them and they don't know a damn thing about what the commissioner of agriculture does. I guarantee you. I would also like to point out that in Terrebonne Parish we have a lot of farmers. We talk to these farmers and they say "I don't want a barber getting elected, the cities might elect some barber. I'd like to at least have an intelligent deliberation where a farmer can get appointed." I'd like to also point out this, that in our proposal, the executive committee proposal, we elect a treasurer who controls the money, the attorney general who is your law enforcement officer, and elections, the secretary of state. These are the basic functions of state. In order to allow the governor to properly run the state, if you elect all of these officials there is no possible way that he can't do it. If you adopt this argument for all the other files so I won't have to come up here again. But I think we should deal in facts. We should look at the present appointments that the governor has which serve a great function, equally as important as agriculture, if not more so when you're dealing with oil, all your wildlife, your money, your collection of money, your health and welfare, all these are appointed and working quite well. The governor has to administer the executive department and he cannot, otherwise. Therefore, I urge you to reject the amendment.

Questions

Mr. Burns Mr. Duval, you mention in support of your argument in favor of the adoption of this amendment that the governor had the authority to appoint the head of the Department of Health and Welfare. Is that correct? What was the salary of that head of that department when he made that appointment? Do you know?

Mr. Duval I don't recall what it was, no sir.

Mr. Burns Do you know what it is today?

Mr. Duval It's over fifty thousand dollars as I understand it.

Mr. Burns Do you know that it's been increased about three times since he was appointed last May?

Mr. Duval In order to get a competent medical doctor to do it, I think it's highly reasonable.

Mr. Burns You think that that's a good system of Mr. Duval Well just let me tell you, it'd be hard to find a doctor to run for eighteen thousand dollars a year to run it. I guarantee you.

Mr. Roemer Delegate Duval, do you mean to tell us that oil is more important than food?

Mr. Duval Sir.

Mr. Roemer You said that oil was more important than food, if I understand your speech.

Mr. Duval Well you see oil produces money which buys food, and without it you can't, you know, it's hard to buy.

Mr. Roemer What if you've got all the money in the world and there's no food to buy? What are you going to do then, Mr. Duval?

Mr. Duval Well I think by appointing the commissioner of agriculture you're not abolishing food, Mr. Roemer...

Mr. Roemer Well I hope not, but I think that's a possibility.

I have another question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Duval You elected him and now we've got a food shortage. I don't understand.

Mr. Roemer You gave us the definition of the attorney general's job and the governor's job, what's the definition of the Lieutenant governor that the committee also recommended that we elect, and the secretary of state?

Mr. Duval That's prescribed by law.

Mr. Roemer Oh, I see. That's your answer.

Mr. Duval Yes sir.

Mr. Roemer Thank you.

Mr. Duval That's the truth.

Mr. Reeves Stan, is your contention that all appointed officials are more efficient than...or appointed officials...

Mr. Duval No, that's not my contention at all. I didn't say all appointed officials...

Mr. Reeves Okay. Appointing officials would be more efficient in government than elected?

Mr. Duval Within the executive branch I think it enhances the efficiency of that department in order that the man who is the focal point...

Mr. Reeves Would you not...

Mr. Duval I'm trying to answer your question.

The man who is the focal point of that election, the governor, is unable to actually run that department rather than have a bunch of little kingdoms...

Further Discussion

Mr. Burson Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in opposition to the amendment because I have probably thought about this particular issue more than most of you here. I represent a predominantly agricultural district, but I want to tell you why I have come to the decision that I have. It may not convince anybody but some of the thoughts may interest you. I hope they do. First of all, we are not talking here about whether elected officials are inherently superior or inferior to appointed officials. I think we will all agree that in our governmental system there is room and a need for both. There are some positions that inherently require a professional expertise of the sort that may well be better served by appointing people in the executive branch, primarily, than they would by electing people. Let me give you an example of what I'm thinking about. Suppose you've got an executive position in the executive branch of the government that involves qualifications for a chemist. Certainly you would not want to leave that position open to anybody who comes in off the street. Now I think that the expertise required for a commissioner of agriculture is much the same. I will give you an example right here in Louisiana. It is my own private opinion that the L S U Agricultural Extension Service has done more for agriculture in this state in one month than the Department of Agriculture does in a year. I would invite discussion with anyone on that point. The L S U Agriculture Extension Service is peopled entirely by professionals who are lifelong career people in the field of agriculture. It seems to me that if we're really concerned about the future of agriculture in this state that we will devote our efforts to defining in the article on agriculture and natural resources, qualifications for a future secretary of agriculture. I submit to you that having a properly qualified man and qualifications perhaps set out in the constitution, as Mr. Cowen, I think, tried to raise the point in his question a while ago. You don't have to have all the office to have it in the constitution. It's entirely feasible, and I would like to see it proposed, I have not yet read the committee's proposal, that we would have qualifications for commissioner of agriculture set out. That would not necessarily necessitate that he be elected. Now, would the election to office necessarily insure that I would like to see a country boy, if you will, such as myself would be elected to this office. Not at all. As I see the present population trends in this state, it's far more likely that somebody from the garden district or some other section in New Orleans who may be a prominent man in the community and quite an able man, but knows nothing about agriculture decides that he wants a state office. If he gets out and runs for the office of commissioner of agriculture, he may very well get elected just because there are more voters that live in that metropolitan area than live out in the country. It's as simple as that. So I submit to you that maintaining this office as elective may very well, in the end, defeat what should be our aim. That is, to have someone in office who is a qualified man in the field of agriculture. That is the primary reason that I am going to vote the way that I am going to vote on this issue. Now it's been brought out that we've had cost increases in agricultural products because of poor national policy. That may be true, but let me read to you here the concerns of delegates and concerned with the rights of the consumer that we have had two milk price increases proposed in this state in the last year. We've got one of them in effect right now and another one being proposed. So I don't think that having an elected secretary of agriculture is going to say anything one way or the other about the actions of that man on price increases.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

Further Discussion

Mr. Segura Fellow delegates, ladies and gentlemen, Mr. Chairman, most of you know me as an architect and a businessman, but I was born and raised on a farm. Like Senator Rayburn, I've looked at the north end of a south bound mule. I've had to quit college three years in a row to help my father with the sugarcane harvesting. I now own and operate a sugarcane farm. I grow rice on my land. I raise cattle. I raise horses. So I'm speaking to you right now, not as a delegate, but as a farmer. I want to tell you that the farmers are the ones in wanting an elected commissioner of agriculture. I, for one, am advocating an appointed commissioner of agriculture because I can see the day, and it's coming very soon, because there are more people who live in the cities. More people who are consumers of the farm products than there are farmers who produce the products. I can foresee that someone will get elected to this important position to the farmers who does not have the interests of the farmers at heart. Just for an example, take a man like John Schwegmann, who is the hero of the consumer. If he runs statewide, and he can afford to do it, on the principle of lowering the milk prices, this man probably would get elected overwhelmingly, and has no interest of the farmers at heart. I'm asking you to think of the farmers. If this commissioner of agriculture could be elected by only people who were farmers, if only people who were farmers could vote and elect this man, then I would say he should be elected. But that's not the way out state government is set up. This position is getting in jeopardy. You gentlemen who are farmers and who have spoken for an elected commissioner, I think you should take a second look at it because if you are a farmer and you are interested in the good of the farmer, you would want this position appointed. I think you'll end up with a better man. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Drew Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I'll be very brief, but it appears that we've put this whole thing out of perspective because all debate has been on the question of whether you wanted an elected commissioner or an appointed commissioner. Section 2 deals with that problem. Now what you are doing here is determining and your vote will determine whether you want a commissioner and Department of Agriculture. I have not heard anyone who said they were opposed to that concept of having a commissioner of agriculture. The necessary insurance that I would like to see a constitutional guarantee that there will be a commissioner of agriculture and nothing more. Nothing more. When we get to Section 2 as to whether it will be elective or appointive, that will be the issue at that time. I grant that if this amendment is defeated, the opportunity to vote on appointive or elective would be denied. But right now, I don't think anyone in this convention is opposed to having a commissioner and Department of Agriculture. That is all in God's world this amendment does. I ask you to support the amendment.

[Previous Questions ordered.]

Closing

Mr. Derbes I'd like to yield to Mr. Munson.

Mr. Munson Mr. Chairman, members of the convention, I don't know of a great deal that I can add, really, that hadn't already been said by the proponents of this amendment. I would like, Reverend Alexander, you said a moment ago that you would ask someone to come forward and contradict your statement. I want you to know that here I am. I do very emphatically contradict your statement. The farming interests in Louisiana is by far the biggest business in Louisiana. There is no question about this whatsoever. I'm not going to take but just a few moments because as I said, I couldn't add much to what's already been said by better speakers than I am. A few moments ago when I was up here Mrs. Taylor asked me a question and I ran out of time. I'm not going to yield at this time, Reverend, when I get through, I will. Mrs. Taylor asked me some questions as to the duties of the Department of Agriculture or the commissioner of agriculture. I want you to know that the Louisiana Department of Agriculture, ladies and gentlemen, affects every man, woman and child in this state without exception. In that department we have the Department of Consumer Affairs. Several speakers have mentioned the consumer. Department of Agriculture does have the Department of Consumer Affairs. To name a few things, when the state regulates the composition, for instance, of fertilizer to see that the farmer, when he buys a sack of fertilizer, gets what he pays for. It regulates seeds, all seeds, to see that the analysis is proper and that that farmer, when he buys any kind of seed, gets what he pays for. And Mrs. Consumer, he gets the job of checking on every aisle in that store in this state to see that when you walk out of that store, there's not someone's thumb laying on it, and you're getting what you have paid for. Checks all the sanitary conditions and scales in all of our livestock markets. Checks on plant diseases that are hauled from one end of this state to another. Checks on meat, milk and poultry products to see that the consumer is getting a fair shake and that you are getting a good product. And as I have already said, for most Louisiana products, nationwide and worldwide, I've brought up a very good point. We have amendment to the section that says whether or not it's going to be elective. This merely puts it in the constitution. I haven't heard anybody argue against it being a constitutional office whether it was elective or appointive. When we get to Section 2 or 3 whichever it is, there will be amendments to take it to the elective offices. Mr. Burson, a good friend of mine, is opposing this. I would like to remind Mr. Burson of what someone said here the other day. That the delegates to this constitution weren't running for anything. We're not running for reelection, which Mr. Burson, may be a good thing, because the St. Landry Parish Farm Bureau is, I believe, the largest in the state. And Mr. Segura, if Mr. Schwegmann runs for this office, you have listed a lot of reasons for you to vote against him. If there are any questions, I'll try to answer them. Ladies and gentlemen, let me beg of you to go along with us and let's keep this office close to the people and let's keep it elective.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

Question

Mr. Alexander Mr. Munson, remember my statement was that agriculture is not as large as industry because when...

Mr. Munson That's where you and I differ. In Louisiana it is.

[Record Vote Ordered. Amendment adopted: 7-45. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment proposed by Mr. Derbes—Amendment No. 1. Page 1, line 18, after the word and punctuation "treasurer," insert the words and punctuation "custodian of voting machines".

Explanation

Mr. Derbes Ladies and gentlemen and Mr. Chairman, I didn't have strong feelings one way or the other about the previous issue of the commissioner of agriculture. But I do have strong feelings about this particular one. I'll dwell on it for a moment. It seems to me that the custodian of voting machines is nothing more than a technician and a glorified warehouseman. I can't see why his office should remain in the constitution. So I would certainly oppose my own amendment. I'm merely giving you an opportunity to vote on it and decide it one way or the other. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Roy Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, if I'd known that I was going to miss out on the Emmy by just 8 votes at it, I think I could have remedied that. In any event, I've heard a lot of rhetoric and I voted for constitutionalizing the commissioner of agriculture. This thing, custodian of voting machines, does not belong in the constitution in any way, shape or form. My basic notion, and I don't know how many will agree with it or not, but that when I start voting on these matters that are going to go into the constitution, that we're going to dignify with constitutional sanctity, then I want an office that develops statewide policy. If you can show me an officer or an office that develops statewide policy, then I am going to generally stand for that office being in the constitution and/or electing those people by the people's vote because I'm one of those types of democrats. But the custodian of voting machines and that office is nothing more than a ministerial type of office. He does nothing other than what the law tells him to do. It does not deserve constitutional sanctity and I wish you would vote against it and take it out of this present amendment form. Thank you.

Questions

Mr. Alario Mr. Roy, where would you have this function performed if you eliminated it as a statewide elected office?

Mr. Roy Well, it could be performed just as it is now by statutory law. All I'm saying is that it does not deserve constitutional dignity, and it could be performed under the secretary of state who in turn, really, is in charge of elections in any event. All the custodian does, of voting machines, is he takes care of them and sees that they're at certain places at certain times. He develops no policy.

Mr. Alario You don't see, then any conflict in interests in the person that certifies the results of the election also being in charge of the voting machines?

Mr. Roy Absolutely not.

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Roy, you said a few minutes ago that you would vote to keep in the constitution the people who make decisions, policy making decisions, on a statewide level. Is that correct?

Mr. Roy Generally, yes.

Mr. Anzalone Could you tell me what policy decisions on a statewide level the secretary of state makes?

Mr. Roy Well, the secretary of state, of course, is not only in charge of implementing all the election laws and what have you, but...

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Roy, you set the criteria; I didn't.

Mr. Roy Mr. Anzalone, I thought that was so obvious with the way the rest of the delegates felt you wouldn't need any enlightenment on it. But in my opinion, the secretary of state historically has been a constitutional office. That's one thing and I think tradition is an important matter. This office of custodian of voting machines was only constitutionalized some several years ago as a result of a political fracas and that's why I'm opposed to it. But that's not the issue. If you want to ask me what about the secretary of state, the issue right now is the custodian of voting machines, in my opinion.

Further Discussion

Mr. Jenkins Mr. Chairman, delegates to the convention, a few years ago I had some friends of mine from out of state who had come into the state and they had been driving through and it was at election time. They said "you know we heard a lot about Louisiana politics before we got here, and we knew you had a lot of problems. But we saw a sign on the road over here that really made us understand why you have problems." And what they had seen, they had seen a sign for someone running for custodian of voting machines. They said, "you know where we were from in elected officials, we elect the dog catcher, but not yet do we elect the custodians for the different buildings." He had seen a sign that said Doug Fowler, Custodian, and they thought we were electing janitors. Well we haven't gotten to that point, but the point that I want to make is this, the custodian of voting machines has been much criticized as an elected official. But there is merit and value to having him elected and I want to point out why. Our election process is the key to making our whole system work. If it's corrupted, if it's polluted, if it's damaged our system doesn't work properly. The custodian of voting machines, as an independent elected official serves an important function in the system of checks and balances that exist in our election process. He does that by preserving and maintaining the voting machines. In an election process, the results are tabulated by the Parish Executive Committee or the Municipal Committee or the Board of Supervisors of Elections as the case may be in the returns. These returns are sent to the secretary of state. But it is the custodian who is responsible for the machines themselves, for making sure that they have an honest count on them. So that they are preserved inviolate. If that function is put under the secretary of state, then it mixes up the whole system of checks and balances. It deteriorates under such a system because you then have within one man, the capacity not only to preserve and protect the machines, but to promulgate the returns. It destroys that system of checks and balances. There are more than 600 elections held each year which the custodian of voting machines must supply the machines for, make sure that those machines are in operable order. He is a technician, there is no doubt about that, but he plays a vital role in our election process. I haven't heard of any complaints about electing the custodian in the past. Any demonstration that it hasn't worked well, that he's been involved in fraud or wrongdoing or that in any sense putting that under the secretary of state would be an additional wrongdoing. It seems to me, rather, that it's a good protection. Perhaps even more important, I would hate to see this convention, whether it's on custodian of voting machines or any of the other offices, start taking away from the people the right to elect some of their officials. If we started here, I fear when it comes to things like insurance commissioner, superintendent of education and the other officials, I think we need to hold the line. I think the people are well satisfied to elect the people they elect now. If this convention starts here taking away those elected officials, we may end up with a document which has eliminated many of their chosen officials, and if we do that, it's going to put this constitution in a lot of trouble. So let's retain this position, let's retain our other elected officials. I don't think the other substantive changes we make in this constitution will have nearly the trouble that they might have than if we start monkeying with the people's right to choose who they desire to choose for these important jobs. I urge you to adopt this amendment.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

Questions

Mr. Abraham Woody, does the custodian of voting machines verify the returns as reported by the secretary of state now?

Mr. Jenkins No, he does not. He preserves the machines.

Mr. Abraham So your argument then that this man provides a check and balance as to what the actual count of the votes is does not hold any water.

Mr. Jenkins No, but he is the protector of them.

Mr. Abraham Of the machines, but he does not verify the count so he don't know whether the count is correct or not. The other question I'm going to ask, what's the difference in having the voting machines under the custody of John Brown over here who was elected by the people or Tim Dokes who is elected by the people?

Mr. Jenkins Well, there is no difference in that sense if you just want to create another elected office. But if you're putting him under the secretary of state, then you're having no check on the secretary of state and that's what I object to.

Further Discussion

Mr. Flory Mr. Chairman, and delegates, I rise in support of the amendment and I do so for a very simple reason. The question came up in our committee this morning in Education, as to how you judge the feeling of the public in this state to determine what the public really wants on an issue. If there is anything that we have had decided recently by the public as to whether they want a constitutional office, and whether they want a position elected it's the custodian of voting machines. I can recall when the functions of this office was under the secretary of state. I can recall when the legislature took those functions from the secretary of state, it was submitted to the people by way of constitutional amendment. And the people overwhelmingly voted to make that a constitutional office and elect him for four years. This is just recently, so I would say that you yield to the expression of the public in this state, they have spoken in my judgment, their views on this particular office, and that you retain it as a constitutional elected office in state government.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendments proposed by Mr. Derbes. On page 1, line 18 after the word and punctuation "treasurer" insert the word and punctuation "commissioner".

Explanation

Mr. Derbes Again this amendment merely inserts at your pleasure an office left out by the committee's proposal. I personally feel that the office should not be in the constitution and I urge you to defeat the amendment. I understand that the legislature has in fact abolished the office, so this was not... as I understand it this was not in any of the original amendments but I thought as a matter of completeness and thoroughness that we should give you an opportunity to vote on it. Thank you.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment rejected; 14-96. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Sent up by Mr. Derbes. Amendment No. 1. Page 1, line 18 after the word and punctuation "treasurer" insert the words and punctuation "commissioner of insurance".

Explanation

Mr. Derbes Well, of course this restores to the committee proposal the commissioner of insurance something that I think we should consider independently and that is the purpose of the amendment. I frankly haven't made up my mind on it and I would like to hear some discussion. I have nothing further to say.

Point of Order

Mr. Perez My question is whether or not a person who says he is a proponent gets up and then says he doesn't know whether he is voting for or against and a proponent has the right to close as to whether or not we are not doing an injustice to a proposal unless that party who is supporting the proposal has the right to close. My point of order is. Is the motion or the proposed amendment in order by a person who does not know whether he is in favor of that proposal or not?

Mr. Henry I think that Mr. Triche proved a long time ago, that a man is entitled to change his mind when he gets up and handles a bill or an amendment but what's happened so far Mr. Perez, is that the gentlemen introduced the one on agriculture then he allowed a proponent to close and I would assume he would do that on these.

Mr. Perez That is the reason I raised the point of order hopefully that a proponent will...

Mr. Henry I think we will have to have a proponent to close on it, and I don't think Mr. Derbes would do anything but agree to that.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

Further Discussion

Mr. O'Neill Mr. Chairman, members of the convention, I think the previous vote has proved one thing, that about fifty-four or fifty-five of us strongly feel that all of the people should be elected in the constitution. I simply want to point out to you that we are not voting on the personality. Who's in the office, at this moment, nor are we voting who is governor at the moment, nor who will do these functions. Someone pointed out yesterday that a couple of the officers combined spent only one-half of one percent of the total state budget. Well, do you know how much the people of the state of Louisiana spent on their insurance per year? They spend two billion dollars a year on insurance. That is the total amount of the whole state budget combined. Personally, I would favor abolishing the insurance rating commission and being able to elect commissioner of insurance. And I think that if the people had this as an alternate that would overwhelmingly vote to keep the insurance commissioner elected. Those of you who feel that may be this isn't worthy of constitutional status, I want you to think twice before you vote against this amendment. I think that the people of Louisiana have faith in our current commissioner and as long as they have the right to elect a commissioner they will turn out the ones they don't like. Remember two billion dollars a year for insurance in Louisiana. Do you want an appointee, then probably an insurance man taking care of these and setting rates for insurance companies or do you want someone the people want? Thank you.

Question

Mr. Stinson Mr. O'Neill, don't you think the fact that the present commissioner and the present governor due to their differences, that the people have profited and found out a lot that they didn't know about the insurance changes and that they did not have found out if the governor had appointed and thereby placed the quiet act on his appointee?

Mr. O'Neill Mr. Stinson, I agree wholeheartedly and I would like to add to that that they turned out the previous insurance commissioner because I think they found out a little more than they were supposed to know about him.

Further Discussion

Mr. Nunez Mr. Chairman, and members of the convention, I believe this position is as an important position to use the phrase that has been used on television recently in this point in time to be elected as the governor of this state. And I think the people have proven that in the past elections. I think Mr. Bernard has openly admitted the reason why he is insurance commissioner today is because his name begins with a "B" and he was the first man on the ballot. And the people voted for him because they voted for the change. And they voted for a change because they were dissatisfied with their insurance rates. Just basically that's it. Their rates are too high and they want a change.

Now I don't know whether that change and those rates will be lowered by Mr. Bernard's presence there but I think he has made an effort to do that and I think in fact the truth comes out that the insurance commissioner doesn't make the rates, that the rating commission makes the rates, then the legislature in return will have to abolish the rating commission and then the insurance commissioner will be responsible for rate making. And I think this is the ultimate goal that we should all be working to reach. I believe that this position, insurance commissioner of the state of Louisiana, right now, today, or next January when we submit this, is a vitally important position for the people of this state and I think if we abolish it and allow the rating commission and the appointed people I think we are making a mistake. I think we jeopardize and I think you have heard this time and time again but I think it should say it because I believe that it is true, I believe we jeopardize seriously the passage of this constitution that we submit to the people. I think it is vitally important that we leave this position of insurance commissioner, just as important as we just left the commissioner of agriculture and just as important as we leave the other five offices. I believe that this position is vitally important. Vitally important to the people of this state because I don't think there is any issue that I feel, and if I read the people right, and I believe I do, I think it is insurance rates. And I think the present commissioner has got the sentiment of the people that he is trying very hard to lower insurance rates and I think in time, he will lower insurance rates. But I think that the position must be made a constitutional office and it must be elected. So I would plead with you to go along with this position and keep it in the constitution. I think that the people have spoke time and time again on the proposition enquire if we take it out, we jeopardize what we are trying to do, so I would ask you to go along and keep the position in the constitution and keep it elected.

Question

Mr. Wall Senator Nunez, I variance in one remark you made about the legislative abolishing the insurance commission and rating commission, have you ever introduced any legislation as a member of the House or Senate to abolish these rate making bodies?

Mr. Nunez Yes, sir and I voted for it too. Twice in the past session, I would like to know how you voted.

Mr. Wall I am not allowed to answer.

Further Discussion

Mr. Weiss Fellow delegates. For those of you that are undecided about this position, I would like to speak favorably in the commissioner's behalf. Particularly as regards health insurance. I have had considerable experience over many years now, including the former commissioner and with this commissioner and I find this commissioner is most amenable to suggestions and is willing to work although he is somewhat handicapped as you might say, by not having both staff and funds. Nonetheless, there is no state in the union that has any regulatory controls over the health insurance industry. At the present time this commissioner is at least investigating the possibility of some type of control, so that you may have quality health insurance. At the present time the insurance companies throughout this nation are returning considerably less than many of us think they should, for the premium that you are paying. For example, throughout the nation in 1971 the average person received eighty cents back on the dollar. In Louisiana, the average Louisianian in health insurance in this state received sixty-five cents back on the dollar. They did this for their premium health insurance policy. Now these are items which require investigation and I think that the present commissioner and an elected commissioner will look into it. If on the other hand, a commissioner is appointed I find from statistical reports that approximately every two years throughout the nation on an average, these commissioners are reappointed to their office rather than being an elected commissioner which will hold the post for four years, the appointed position lasts only as long as they satisfy the governor. In fact, in some places, as I mentioned before the position is so desirable that apparently they pay the governor for this position. As you know funds are available in running for governor and transferred to the banks for the people. I think that if we select and continue to select, elected commissioners of insurance we will be doing the people of the state and you and all of us a favor. So I urge you to select and elect and vote for the elected commissioner of insurance.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

[Previous matter adjourned.]

Closing

Mr. Derbes Mr. Chairman, I waive in favor of Mr. Alario on the closing.

Mr. Alario Mr. Chairman, and members of the convention, I find myself standing before you rather hurriedly after the last talk, but I felt so strongly at that time for the agriculture commissioner; I feel so strongly for each of these offices, that I feel that I must come before you in what I consider one of the most important offices that we have in the state at this time. When I ran for office last time the big cry in this state was that the taxes had been raised on the people and they were very high and had more than they could afford. At the same time we saw an insurance commissioner thrown out of office because the people also expressed themselves that insurance rates were too high. They were having to pay too much for automobile insurance, sky-high rates. I suggest to you that if we allow this important position to be appointed that we are going to be opening the pocketbooks of our people even wider than what they are now. I am mighty afraid that these giant insurance companies through this state are going to do what many people I see around racetracks do, bet on every horse to make sure they have got a winner, to impress someone, and when they do that they are going to make sure that they have laid themselves in a position to have their man elected or their man appointed rather to the insurance commissioner's job, a job that should be responsive to the people. Presently, the people of this state are paying some two billion two hundred million dollars in insurance premiums, you know that is three times the amount of personal taxes that they are paying to the state treasury. That is more than the combined amount of sales taxes and income taxes and alcoholic beverage taxes, public utility taxes that they pay. Three times as much. I think this offer is too very important to the pocketbooks of millionaires to let it be appointed. Let's cast a good vote for the people of this state and vote for this amendment.

[Revised matter ordered. Amendment adopted.
-As. Motion not reconsidered.]

Amendment

Mr. Joynter The next amendment sent up by Delegate Derbes is as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 18 after the word and punctuation "treasurer" insert the word and punctuation "superintendent of education."

Explanation

Mr. Corne Mr. Chairman, delegates, I wish to speak to you on the election of the superintendent of education. Of course you know that education is my profession and I would be reverts in my duty to my profession if I didn't come before you and tell you that every teacher that I have spoken to and I speak to all teachers of the state in my duties with the state association, all teachers wish the superintendent of education to be an elected office. Therefore, I wish that you would consider the will of so very many teachers. Teachers who have families, teachers whose families look up to them to make decisions about their office as the superintendent of education. Thank you.

Questions

Mr. Tobias Could you tell me why this particular provision has to be in the executive department proposal. Would this not be properly be considered in the education department proposal?

Mrs. Corne Well, of course as an educator, I feel that the department of education is one of the or if not the most important department of the state and I think it should be considered at this time as well as in the Education Committee.

Mr. Stovall Mrs. Corne, are you in favor of an elected board of education?

Mrs. Corne I think that the Committee on Education has a very good plan in that the board of education would be a combination, appointed and elected board.

Mr. Stovall Are you in favor of an elected board of education, Mrs. Corne?

Mrs. Corne I am very much in favor of an elected board of education and an elected superintendent of education with the responsibilities well drawn for each.

Mr. Stovall Mrs. Corne, if you have an elected board of education, are not the people represented and do they not have the opportunity to express their wishes if you have an elected board of education?

Mrs. Corne Reverend Stovall, I do not wish to put any limit on representation of the people.

Mr. Stovall Thank you.

Point of Information

Mr. Gollinger I have a question of the Chair, Mr. Chairman.

I think it is a problem with all of the delegates that the decision is going to be made once we decide how the state board of education is going to be set up, if it is going to be elected or appointed. At least it is a problem with myself and I would like to know if it would be in order to move that we pass over this particular office until that decision has been made by the convention.

Mr. Henry Well, you would have to pass over the whole section, but you understand that it appears to me that you are just talking whether you are going to list right here this superintendent of education as one of the members of the executive branch in this particular section rather than whether or not you are going to elect or appoint, so I think your question is sort of moot there, Mr. Gollinger.

Further Discussion

Mr. Burns Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, my explanation will be very brief. You will recall I appeared here and spoke in favor of the election of the commissioner of agriculture and I mentioned at that time there were two offices that I thought was the closest to the people and that was the commissioner of agriculture and the superintendent of education. Between the two, I think the superintendent of education is much closer to the people than the commissioner of agriculture, you approved his election by more than a fair majority and I ask that you do the same thing with reference to the superintendent of education.

Further Discussion

Mr. E. J. Landry Mr. Chairman, and member of the delegation, if there ever was a time that I felt it a privilege to talk to you, this is it. I have experienced the turmoil that has taken place over the year of being in the educational field over a period of forty-six years on this issue. Every superintendent that I can remember ran on the platform of an appointed superintendent. Every superintendent to my knowledge, after he was elected, realized what a tremendous mistake it was that he made. I wouldn't be a bit surprised if you pulled the present superintendent, really pulled him from his office, he would admit to you that the elected superintendent that I can remember ran on the platform of an appointed superintendent. 24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973 in my area. And if there is one issue, one strong issue that we need to consider that is this, the elected superintendent in the state of Louisiana is the way to go.

Further Discussion

Mrs. Warren Mr. Chairman, and fellow delegates, I am going to come before you again but this is a matter that lies closest to my heart than any other thing in this convention. And there are many that touch me closely. Two ministers got up and spoke some time ago and I wish I could have said Amen. But Mrs. Corne got up here and she mentioned the teachers and her connection with them. I would like to say to you at this time that I am Chairman of Parents' Responsibilities, I am on the State Board of Management and I have contact with parents and teachers all over the state of Louisiana. We would prefer an elected superintendent and we do want it in the constitution. I am going to ask you at this time, would you think about it, I am not here representing myself and if anybody has any questions as to what I feel about it I have feelings about it but my chief concern is what the people feel about it. So I urge you to vote for this amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Sutherland Mr. Chairman, and fellow delegates, I am a little bit confused as to what we are really voting on at this time. I heard Mr. Stag when he got up here say that he was voting for these offices whether they be in the constitution and at the same time whether they would be elected. However, as Mr. Drew pointed out in the commissioner of agriculture, Section 3 deals with which offices are elected and I do not understand this provision as to which offices are going to be constitutional offices. I certainly think the commissioner or the superintendent of education should be a constitutional office, but I have a difference of opinion with some of the other speakers as to whether it should be an elected office. Our committee has proposed both, an elected state board of education and an elected superintendent of education and I believe that this has not worked in the past and it will not work in the future where you have two elected groups accounting for one particular subject. If this convention votes to support an elected superintendent of education, then I think we ought to have a state department of education and no elected board of education for elementary, secondary education. On the other hand, if you vote for an elected board of education, as has been recommended by the Committee on Education, then I think the superintendent should be appointed not by the governor but by the elected board. And I think that is the difference, the governor will not appoint, the elected board of education will appoint. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Further Discussion

Mr. Robinson Mr. Chairman, and delegates, educators and good conscience can advocate both an elected and appointed superintendent. I, myself, have in the past wavered between these two positions and two systems. And actually I do agree with one of the previous speakers that we are probably wrong in making decisions at this point, an isolation from a discussion of the entire control structure of public education. Nevertheless, the issue has been raised and we must, I suppose, resolve it. I know that the immediate issue is whether this should be a constitutional office. I am certainly thinking that the office is important enough to be in the constitution. The pattern of the basic argument in favor of an appointive superintendent goes something like this. You are going to have yourself a board of lay citizens, this board represents the public interest, and it is responsive to the people, and the board shall appoint, it shall certainly think that the officer to advise it and to carry out the policy determinations made by that board. But I think what in practice this idealized situation is most likely to break down because in truth the board is not fully responsive to the people. If it is an appointive board, as most state boards of education are, it is probably more responsive to the appointing authority than it is to the people. If it is elected, which not too many are in this country, the members are likely to be elected from overlapping districts than from districts and for overlapping terms. In either case the meetings of the board are held far from where most of the people live, the people do not know the reasoning of the appointing, they don't know the identity of their board members, and I would suspect that in Louisiana today, few people could even tell you the name of the state board of education member who represents them. Neither system will guarantee you a good state superintendent, neither appointment nor election automatically resolves a single problem which is public education in Louisiana. Neither method eliminates politics from education. They change from one method of selection to another, just change the terms of reference and the frame of reference of the politics. It doesn't eliminate it. I don't think it is either necessary or desirable to eliminate all politics from educational decisions anyway, because of fundamental issues which affect education based upon public consent all the way. The schools are the people's business, inherently. Basic decisions affecting public education from free textbooks to career education are necessarily made through the political processors. In the twenty-one years of observing state government, I cannot recall many fundamentally important issues which affected the schools which were not essentially political in their nature. Now, I think that leadership at the state's level in education necessarily involves a certain amount of political expertise and judgment. Not just professional competence and administrative expertise. And I think there is a distinction to be made between the role of the parish superintendent who functions at the operational level and the state superintendent of education who functions at the leadership level and at the state level. An elected state superintendent of education is unquestionably the head of the state public school system. An appointed superintendent is merely the executive officer of the state superintendent who discharges his duties as a distinction. A very important distinction. Because in state government we usually elect our leaders and our major officeholders. We appoint or we hire our technicians and our administrators. An elected state superintendent of education can take his case to the people, and on occasion he may need to. An appointed superintendent who disagrees fundamentally with the board or whatever authority appoints him can take his case only into retirement. Now, there are some teachers and administrators on both sides of this particular argument. But I am in no doubt as to where the great majority of the teachers stand on this issue, they favor the elected superintendent. I don't think you may be too much concerned about that insofar as what the teachers think, but in expressing themselves in our convention on this issue, I don't think they perceived any self interest in this whole proposition. I think they were expressing themselves purely as citizens or almost purely as citizens. They voted I think first as citizens and secondly as teachers. I think when it comes right down to it, what the teachers think is that they want to have something to say about who runs the school system and unless I think they are fairly represented...

Further Discussion

Mr. Jack All I have to say is I'm for the amendment. I'm for keeping on electing the State Superintendent of Education. Thank you.

Questions

Mr. Jack Mr. Smith, I'm a man of few words. Make it short.

Mr. Smith Mr. Jack, don't you think we'd get better qualified men by appointment rather than elected?

Mr. Jack No, sir. I was elected myself. You were too.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

Mr. Smith Doesn't the parish school board elect their superintendents? Aren't they well qualified? They get the best qualified men, is that right?

Mr. Jack No, sir. They do not. I wasn't for the one there now, and a lot of people that I know. I think that the people ought to get to elect them too.

Mr. Smith Regardless of whether they're qualified or not, Mr. Jack?

Mr. Jack Of course not, Mr. Smith. We both think alike. We want good, qualified people. I just believe that you get better ones electing them, and you may think better, appointed.

Mr. O'Neill Mr. Jack, isn't it true that the Executive Committee... Executive Department Committee has said that the State Superintendent... I'm sorry, the Education Committee... haven't they said that he shall have at least the qualifications of the parish superintendent?

Mr. Jack I don't know what it says.

Mr. O'Neill Well, that's my understanding...

Mr. Jack Well, I don't know what it is. I just believe in electing people to most offices. I am not voting for it on the State Land Office, and I didn't vote for it on the Comptroller. Because those offices are too minor now. But on the others, I'm for electing them.

Further Discussion

Mr. Ullo Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I just rise, for the record, to reiterate to you what some of my constituents have telegraphed to me from back home. The Louisiana Teachers' Association respectfully requests that you use your influence and vote to insure that the State Superintendent of Education of Louisiana is selected by the ballot of the people, rather than be appointed puppet of the governor. I would just like to say, I support the elective position of the State Superintendent of Education.

Further Discussion

Mr. Leithman Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, a number of questions have been asked regarding this particular proposition involving the State Superintendent. I'm not so much here to attempt to convince you to vote one way or the other. However, I think we all should be enlightened as to what is happening in our Education Committee as far as our proposals are concerned. It's simply this, we have two plans, one is a delegate proposal and the other is the committee proposal. The committee proposal for elementary-secondary education has a combination of appointed and elected people, eight and seven. Now, under this plan, the committee plan does call for an elected Superintendent. We have just one problem in this, on the qualifications that Mr. O'Neill just raised. It's a serious problem in that if we do call for an elected Superintendent and we place qualifications on this man, we certainly cannot eliminate anyone from running for public office. On the other proposal, a delegate proposal, we have the Public Education Board elected by the people, eight elected and three appointed. Under that proposal, the Superintendent is appointed by those eleven persons. So, I just wanted you all to know there is obviously a dilemma here because we know not what proposal you all will accept here on the floor, and, of course, it varies extensively. So, I just wanted you all to know where the committee stands as far as the State Superintendent. So, on one it's appointed; on the other it's elected. If there are any questions, I'll be glad to answer them.

Further Discussion

Mr. Stagg Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise to oppose the amendment. One of the previous speakers stated that in the Superintendent of Education, under the Education and Welfare Article, that the Superintendent of Education for the state of Louisiana should have at least the qualifications of a parish superintendent, and I think that point is highly significant. In the Committee on the Executive Department, we found ourselves, early on, at odds with the Committee on Education and Welfare. They have at various times during their deliberations felt that the Superintendent ought to be appointed if the board was elected, and then their final product, which is in the books on your desks, they feel that the Education Superintendent ought to be elected. In our committee, we felt that the Superintendent of Education for the state of Louisiana ought to be the highest qualified individual in these fifty states, who can be found to come to Louisiana, whose qualifications have to do with educational management. All of us are familiar with, to a greater or lesser extent, with the record of failures and the record of successes in education around this state. That point need not be belabored from this microphone. It is time we felt in this convention to chart the future of state government, and in charting the future of state government, to have an awareness of the history of this state and what it needed for the people. I think that the future in education is the strongest minded man in the field of educational management that can be found, to be appointed, not by the governor, but by the Board of Education, and responsible to an elected Board of Education so that the dichotomy that has been going on in this state for years between an elected Superintendent and an elected board can finally be brought to an end... that educational management would be centered in an office controlled by those elected board members of education who have seen to the appointment of a very highly qualified manager of education in this state. It is for these reasons that in our committee we felt that the management of education would best be achieved through this system. We differed from our brothers on the Committee on Education and Welfare and that's as it should be. The decision on the Superintendent of Education could better be met by this body after it had gone through the extended arguments we will have on this floor on how shall education be governed in this state. It is probably best to say that the Superintendent of Education shall be elected. For that reason, I urge the rejection of the amendment at this point in time calling for the election of the Superintendent of Education.

Questions

Mr. Drew Mr. Stagg, with reference to your last statement in particular, is there anything in Section 1 that mentions the word "elections"?

Mr. Stagg No, sir. The coverage of elected state officials appears in Section 3 of Committee Proposal No. 4.

Mr. Drew All right then, with that clear, then are we not then voting on whether or not we want a constitutional guarantee to have a Superintendent of Education for the state?

Mr. Stagg I think that that answer to the question is probably yes and probably no, because we have not yet got to the structure of government of education in this state. How shall education be governed? If there is going to be a fully elected State Board of Education, that could appoint their own Superintendent of Education, then I would feel that that was the proper way to achieve that person into office, not as a constitutional officer.

Mr. Drew But you would agree that that is an issue with this amendment?

Mr. Stagg Yes, sir. I do, sir.

Further Discussion

Ms. Zervigon Mr. Chairman and delegates to the convention, what we're doing right now disturbs me terribly from a procedural point of view. As Mr. Drew and Mr. Stagg just pointed out, all of the arguments that have been made up here have been made as to whether the Superintendent of Education ought to be elected or appointed. Yet, all we're really voting on is whether or not there should be a Superintendent of Education established in the constitution, not whether that person should be elected or appointed, and whether that office should be in the executive branch as opposed to the legislative branch or the judicial branch. It worries me that we are making this decision on this particular section at the wrong time, in the wrong way and for the wrong reasons. It disturbs me that those of us who would like to base, in part, our decision on whether this office should be a constitutional office and whether or not it should be elected, which we'll consider again in Section 3, must vote today and perhaps reconsider when we come to the executive department discussion on the Board of Education. So, Mr. Chairman, I would like to urge the delegates that speak after me, if there are any, to confine their remarks as to whether or not this should be a constitutional office, as opposed to whether or not it should be an elected office. In addition to that, Mr. Chairman, if a motion is made to reconsider the vote by which this vote is adopted or rejected and lay it on the table. I plan to stand and object because I would like to be able to reconsider this easily at another time when we take our position on the Board of Education.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

Motion

Mr. Burson I rise not to question but to make a motion in accordance with Ms. Zervignon's remarks. Under Rule 69, Section 10, I move that we postpone one day certain, that is, the day that we discuss make-up of the governance of education in this state, the issue of whether or not we want the Superintendent of Education to be a constitutional officer.

Mr. Henry What certain day is that, Mr. Burson? I'm not being cute with you, but...

Mr. Burson Mr. Chairman, I presume that that day will come. That may be a rash presumption on my part.

Mr. Henry I think that that's the fallacy of your motion, because we don't know for certain when that day will be.

Mr. Burson In that case, I'll move to lay the amendment on the table.

Mr. Henry You move to table the amendment?

Mr. Burson First of all, I'd like to have a ruling from the Chair, and I intend to be an expert on parliamentary procedure, but I'd like to have a definite ruling as to whether or not a day certain does not include the day as I have described it.

Mr. Henry In my opinion, it does not. No, sir. A day certain is envisioned by those rules as Tuesday of next week or Wednesday, the third Wednesday in October, but...

Mr. Burson Very well. Let me make my motion thusly, then. I move that we postpone consideration of this amendment until September 1, 1973, and then, if need be at that time, I'll move that we postpone it to a later day certain until we get to it.

Mr. Henry Will we be in session on September 1? We can be, I guess, to consider that. I'm just trying to...it's a Saturday.

The gentleman has moved that we postpone any action on the amendment. Mr. Burson, is that correct...on this amendment until September 1.

Mr. Stinson, why did you rise, sir?

Point of Information

Mr. Stinson I don't suppose he intended it, but he had a double motion and said that if he wasn't satisfied when September 1 came that he would then move further. Isn't it a fact that he's got to set September 1 with our vote, first?

Mr. Henry I think, if at all his motion is in order, that it would be proper to move that it not be taken up until September 1; however, we don't have any assurance that we're going to be able to take it up on September 1.

Substitute Motion

Mr. Gravel I was going to move as a substitute that the date be August 31. Now, whether or not we're meeting or not isn't too important under the rules because that is a date certain. I would so move as a substitute that the date be August 31.

Mr. Henry Mr. Gravel, you never cease to amaze me with the way you can put up some of these things, and I'd like to say that I'm sort of confused as to how we're going to go ahead and do whatever we're going to do with this section, or maybe this entire proposal, and then we've got this amendment dangling way off out here that doesn't have anything to do with anything, man.

Mr. Gravel Well, I disagree with you, Mr. Chairman. I don't think that anybody, any delegate to this convention can really properly analyze matters relating to the Superintendent of Education until after we've considered the Article on Education.

Ruling of the Chair

Mr. Henry It has nothing to do with whether this proposal is passed over or not though, Mr. Gravel. We've got to consider procedure in the midst of all this, Mr. Gravel.

I'm going to rule that the motion, under the circumstances, is out of order because I don't know how we're going to deal with it otherwise. I think that the motion is out of order.

Do you withdraw the motion, Mr. Burson?

Appeal from Ruling of the Chair

Mr. Burson I'm reluctant to appeal the ruling of the Chair, but I'm just trying to express in some fashion permissible under our rules what I feel to be the desire of a great number of delegates, not to decide this point until we know if we're going to have an elected or an appointed State Board of Education because I think that's going to have a lot to say about how we're going to want to decide it.

Point of Information

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Chairman, isn't the only motion that would accomplish what Mr. Burson wants to do, a motion that we pass over the entire section until that time.

Mr. Henry It is my opinion that that would be an appropriate motion, sir.

Recess

[Quorum Call: 100 delegates present and a quorum.]

Mr. Burson Mr. Chairman, I withdraw my motion since I have been convinced by you primarily that it is possible for us to make the Superintendent a constitutional officer without necessarily deciding whether he's elected in this executive article in Section 3 later on...that we can delay that decision, at least, until the education article.

[Motion withdrawn.]

Mr. Henry Just for the record, what I talked with Delegate Burson with respect to was the fact that in Section...Paragraph A of Section 1 of this proposal, what we're, in effect doing, as has been pointed out several times today, is establishing the Superintendent of Education as a constitutional executive officer in the executive branch. Now, this doesn't mean that the Superintendent of Education will be elected, nor does it mean that he will necessarily be appointed. What it does mean is that the Superintendent of Education as set out in this paragraph of this section will be a constitutional officer. Now, when we get on Section 3, one of these days, perhaps, I would assume that we will spell out who will be elected and who won't be elected, but since there is such a great deal of concern by the delegates as to what to do about the Superintendent of Education and wanting to wait until we get the report of the Education Committee, then we can very easily not do anything in Section 3 about appointing or electing your Superintendent and waiting until we get into the section, the proposal, by the Education Committee so that that committee can let us know what it's recommending relative to the State Board of Education and everything, and we can spell out in that proposal whether the Superintendent of Education will be appointed or whether he will be elected.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

Personal Privilege

Mr. Landrum I would just like to read something that I found on my desk, just now. "I feel"...well, it has my name on it..."I feel that it is my duty to report a rumor concerning your political involvement with the Muslim movement. Your room is being monitored by the F.B.I. with the aid of hotel security. I heard about this two days ago. I feel the invasion of your privacy invades us all. I will remain unknown for obvious reasons. Good Luck." May I say to whoever put this on my desk, I have nothing at all against Muslims. My philosophy of life is far different from that of Muslims, but I'm not equipped to hate anybody. Now, whatever reason...you say you put it on my desk...and the F.B.I. could monitor my room all day and all night. You have finished this by saying "good luck", but don't live on luck. Luck comes by chance. Lessons come from God, and God gives me whatever he wants me to have. So, thank you, whoever you are, Mr. Good-Luck, or Mrs. Good-Luck.

[Previous question ordered. Juror
Call: 108 delegates present and a quorum.]

Closing

Mrs. Corne Mr. Chairman, before I close, there's still a question in my mind. I don't understand the procedure here. I understand that this amendment is to place in the constitution these different departments. Am I right?

Mr. Henry It would place the Superintendent of Education in the executive branch as set out in this paragraph of this section.

Mrs. Corne Yes, sir. I seem to recall that we voted for others like the Commissioner of Agriculture with very many discussions as to whether he should be elected or appointed. It seems to me that we voted to have the Department of Agriculture in the constitution, and also, to elect the Commissioner of Agriculture. Did we not?

Mr. Henry No ma'am, we did not. We just voted to include the Commissioner of Agriculture in this subparagraph, or paragraph.

Mrs. Corne Very well, then my closing remarks to you are to emphasize, and I never will be able to emphasize too much to you, the importance of the Department of Education. I think that certainly the Department of Education deserves a place in our constitution and should be placed in the constitution. I would urge you to adopt this amendment. Thank you.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted:
88-26. Motion to reconsider failed.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [§ 3, § 3, [line 18], after the word and punctuation "treasurer," insert the words and punctuation "register of state lands".

Explanation

Mr. Derbes I'm sure you all understand the amendment. I'm not going to the words and feeling for at this time, and I would invite discussion by anyone who is in favor of it.

Further Discussion

Mr. LeBleu Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I have some reservations as to whether this office should be given the privilege of being in the constitution; however, because of the work that this office has performed in the past, I'm going to vote for it. I just want to bring this to your attention that, especially in south Louisiana where we have so many lakes, streams and rivers and water bottoms, that all of this property comes under the jurisdiction of the State Land Office. They also have jurisdiction over the deeds to various properties that the state owns. I'm not sure whether they have jurisdiction over the land that is owned by the state and used for game refuges, but no matter who controls this property it is a vast resource for the state. On a basis of what might happen if this office would be abolished or transferred to some other jurisdiction, I'm just going to go along with the way it is today and vote to keep it in the constitution.

Further Discussion

Mr. Bollinger Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I think that it's hard to distinguish between the Register of State Lands, the Chairman of the Mineral Board, the Conservation Commissioner, the Director of Wildlife and Fisheries, and I think that if you give constitutional status to one you should give it to them all. If you don't give it to them all, you shouldn't give it to any of them. For that reason, I hope you reject this amendment. Thank you.

[Previous question ordered. Amendment rejected: 48-1.
Motion to reconsider failed.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [§ 3, § 3, [line 18], after the word and punctuation "treasurer," insert the words and punctuation "Commissioner of the Office of Consumer Affairs,".

Explanation

Mr. Schmitt I believe throughout the different people coming forward today, they have shown a concern for the consumer. When Mr. Roemer came forward he indicated that the person who is the Commissioner of Agriculture was concerned with the interests of the consumer. I feel that there should be established an Office of Consumer Affairs, which is already statutory, and that there should be a Commissioner of the Office of Consumer Affairs, in order to give this person equal stature with the Commissioner of Agriculture or equal stature with certain other people who head other departments. In the past, we have seen how the legal philosophy of caveat emptor or consumer beware has prevailed in the state of Louisiana and throughout the United States. I feel that we must step forward and look to protect the interests of the consumer. We must, at least, give them equal billing with certain other types of departments in the state. We have seen the teachers come forward and request that their particular head be protected. We have seen the agricultural interests come forward and request that the Commissioner of Agriculture remain within the protection of the constitution. I've come forward to request that there be made a Commissioner of the Office of Consumer Affairs. All of those other departments which have previously been discussed were departments which existed in the past. I do not believe it is the function of the Constitutional Convention to look just toward the past. There are many cobwebs in our past which must be cleaned out, but we must look forward to a great future. We must look forward to the protection of the interests of those who cannot protect themselves. I feel that this Commissioner of the Office of Consumer Affairs could do this. One area which particularly concerns me, and I believe it's an example of the type of the L.L. and T. situation, in which thousands and thousands of people across the state of Louisiana had their life savings stolen from them, and only through the intervention of court proceedings did they get a percentage of their money back. This Office of Consumer Affairs could look out to protect people from the wholesale type of their life's earnings, and could help to protect them from industrial corporations who are not particularly interested in their best concern. One other example...I recently filed a case in federal court against certain lending institutions, particularly pawning institutions. In the investigation of this case I have found that they have charged in many instances more than 100 percent interest per year. Also, that they might confiscate and seize without any type of judicial hearing, a four hundred dollar piece of property on a loan of maybe forty dollars. I have sought the protection of the federal court and the matter is presently under determination by the federal judge but he has not issued a decision one way or the other. I don't feel that we should have to go to federal court to have our rights protected. I feel that we should have the right to go into state court. I believe that this commissioner could look out for the poor man. That this commissioner could look out for the consumer. For too long have we looked out for certain special interests who have to a certain extent benefitted the state but the consumer is not protected. I feel that we must look forward in this constitution. We must look forward to the problems of the future, and one of the problems of the future is that of the consumer. Many of you have said that you are in favor of protecting the institutions which are already in the constitution. This institution or these offices which are in the constitution in the past, but I believe that we must look forward to the future and let's give it a little protection. Let's look out for the interests of the small person. Let's not just look out for the interest of the farmer. I'm not saying that all farmers are big farmers, and I'm not saying that all of these people who have had vested interests shouldn't have their rights protected, but I believe that the consumers represent probably one of the largest bloc votes in the state of Louisiana. I feel that by putting this type of protection in, it won't do any harm, but what it will do, it would give us hope for in the future where our interests might be protected. I feel that if you would go forward with this that you will show that we're not just interested in protecting the interests of the past but we have a concept...we're looking forward to protect the interest of the future.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

Question

Mr. Shannon Delegate Schmitt, are you trying to create another office to run for in the Agriculture Department?

Mr. Schmitt No.

Mr. Henry Let's be nice.

Further Discussion

Mr. J. Jackson Mr. Chairman and delegates to the convention, I first would like to commend Delegate Schmitt for offering such a proposal. I think that the remarks that he has presented here are to be given the fullest consideration. As you know, we live presently in an age where we have numerous amounts of consumer questions and consumer problems coming up. It seems to me that this is not just a fallacious, spur-of-the-moment sort of amendment to this constitution, but more so an amendment that has been presented after thought, but particularly after hearing people throughout the state of Louisiana complain about the many abuses that have occurred to them. It seems to me if there is a need for an expansion of the various elective offices in the constitution then this very amendment as proposed by Mr. Schmitt provides us with the mechanism. I would suggest to you that the numerous amounts of complaints that have filtered through the present state office, particularly if you check with your local parish officials, would indicate that the rise and the concern around the problems of the consumer has reached great proportions. I would be one and I would hopefully suggest to you that you give some serious attention and some serious consideration for expanding our constitution to allow a new office to be created whereby we can assure that as much bigger, that constitutional officers would pursue in other areas, that we would have the same amount of vigor and the same amount of independence being fostered. For those reasons and the reasons that I firmly believe that we ought to begin to address ourselves, I guess more adamantly and more sincerely, to the people of Louisiana, that we should give favorable adoption of Mr. Schmitt's proposal.

Further Discussion

Mr. Velazquez Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I think that when we talk in terms of writing a new constitution we have to think in terms of balance. I supported the position of an elective Commissioner of Agriculture, because I feel the farmers should have that protection, and I support the position of a Commissioner of Consumer Affairs, because the urban people deserve protection. I supported the idea of an elected Commissioner of Agriculture even though the numbers of rural people are steadily decreasing and the numbers of urban people are continually increasing, because the question is not the size of the electorate involved. It's a question of fairness and of justice to those people. This will not just help the city dweller at the expense of the farmer, because the farmer himself is a consumer. If you think that you have a bad problem with your air conditioner, is it a bad problem if the air conditioner doesn't work or because your washing machine broke down, just think of the problem you would have if a twenty or thirty thousand dollar tractor broke down and you had trouble on your warranty with it...or an expensive cotton picker. The farmer himself is a consumer. He consumes gas, oil, seed, fertilizer and he should be protected in these products to make sure that he is taken care of. I think that the only way that we can have balance in this constitution is to have a Commissioner of Agriculture and to have a Commissioner of Consumer Affairs.

[Previous question ordered. Referred to the Motion Punctuator tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Kelly], page 1, line 15, after the word and punctuation "treasurer," insert the words and punctuation "Commissioner of Elections,".

Explanation

Mr. Kelly Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I am submitting to you a constitutional office which would be entitled the Commissioner of Elections. You have previously voted by a narrow margin to remove from the constitution the Office of Custodian of Voting Machines. Now, quite frankly, maybe that particular name should not be in a constitution... "Custodian of Voting Machines", and maybe the name "Commissioner of Elections" bears the dignity to the office that it should. I submit to you that this is an important function in this state. As Mr. Jenkins pointed out to you in his argument earlier today, I think that it's absolutely essential that we keep the election process as far over to one side as we can, without having it brought directly into the realms of the political arena. I would also like to remind you that we've considered many offices here today, and I'm going to refer you back to the present constitution which we're operating under right now, and this is what it says: "The department shall consist of a governor, a lieutenant governor, comptroller..." We've removed comptroller... "treasurer, secretary of state, register of land offices..." That's been removed... "Commissioner of Agriculture and Immigration, Commissioner of Conservation, Commissioner of Insurance, and Custodian of Voting Machines." Now, the point here is the latter and the last sentence in Section 1 of Article V of the present constitution, and now this is what it says: "The legislature shall have the authority to consolidate any of the about offices except that of governor, lieutenant governor, treasurer, secretary of state, commissioner of insurance, and custodian of voting machines." Now, this is in the constitution at this particular time and to me, as Mr. Flory has stated to you earlier, the people have spoken on this already. Apparently there was a constitutional amendment passed after the creation of this office, which constitutional amendment said that it could not be consolidated or merged with another office. Now, I want to remind you that you have retained each one of these offices, except that of Custodian. If you didn't want to vote for it because of the name "Custodian", I'm submitting to you that now you may refer to him as your Commissioner of Elections. But bear in mind that you have kept every one of these offices that was mentioned with the exception of this one. Now, I agree, that you have taken out comptroller, you've taken out register of land office. Those offices were not protected to that extent by the present constitution. I've heard much said here today about what the people want. I voted for the continuation of each one of these offices that have come up here today, and I'll tell you this, because that was what, in an informal poll that I ran in my community, that is what the people of my particular representative district wanted. They want to be able to elect their public officials. I submit to you and encourage you to endorse this particular amendment.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

Questions

Mr. Derbes Mr. Kelly, are you familiar with the expression "a rose by any other name would smell as sweet"?

Mr. Kelly Mr. Derbes, I do not proclaim to be a poet. I deal in rationality and on a business-like basis.

Mr. Denny Mr. Kelly, I didn't understand from your remarks exactly what duties this office would have. Would you limit it just to the duties of the present custodian?

Mr. Kelly Mr. Denny, of course, at this particular time, we can't say what the duties are going to be of any of these officers, that have been incorporated already into Section 1A. I have no strong feelings concerning the duties and responsibilities of the office.

Mr. Denny Well, what I was specifically getting at, Mr. Kelly, is are you aware that in Section 7 under the powers and duties of the secretary of state in the proposal that it provides that the secretary of state shall serve as the chief elections officer and administer the election laws, administrator the laws relative to voting machines or other voting devices?

Mr. Kelly Yes, sir. I am aware of that, and I am also aware, I assume, that if this amendment should pass then, of course, there would have to be an adjustment made in that particular article.

Mr. Denny Well, is it your idea that all of these duties should then be transferred to the Commissioner of Elections?

Mr. Kelly As I say, I have an open mind on that. I'd be willing to listen to the convention on what duties and responsibilities. If they wanted to increase them, fine. If they wanted to keep them the same, that would be fine also.

Mr. Denny Thank you, sir.

Further Discussion

Mr. Stagg Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I said when I first took this microphone this week, that the Committee on the Executive Department was very proud of Committee Proposal No. 4. I have not had occasion since we began this debate 24 hours ago to change that attitude. I think our proposal is of merit, and it is the product of a committee of your fellow delegates who labored over these same questions long and hard. I stated yesterday, and I suppose I can be borne out by you, the repetition of what I said yesterday. When Governor Lon ran for Governor in 1956 he requested the current secretary of state to speak on behalf of his ticket. This was in 1956. For reasons well enough felt by him, Wade Martin turned it down when Governor Long was elected, and the legislature met, one of the administration proposals was that the functions of insurance regulation and of voting machines should be taken away from the secretary of state's office and a constitutional amendment to have that done was passed by the legislature, and to add a clincher to it as our Chairman does each time we vote on a section, the clincher on it was that these offices could not be consolidated into any other offices. That clincher has survived for these 16 years, and I think it's time now to take that clincher off. I think it's time we move into the 1973's and that we not load down the executive department of government with a considerable plethora of elected public offices. This afternoon, the convention in its wisdom, turned down the election of a custodian of voting machines. I ask that the convention now again turn down an elections commissioner in order not to duplicate and to reduplicate the numbers of state-wide elected officers. We will, if you persist, end up with a ballot so long that we may have to alter those state-wide machines in order to accommodate the election of all these state-wide offices. I so very urgently urge that this amendment be defeated.

Questions

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Stagg, do you think that it is entirely fair to judge a man's office by the reason for which it was created or for his performance and service to the state over the years since it has been created?

Mr. Stagg Mr. Anzalone, nothing that I have said in any time that I have been to this mike would denigrate the holder of any governmental office in this state. I'm not judging the Office of Voting Machine Custodian by Douglas Fowler, and if you think I did then you're wrong.

Mr. Stinson Mr. Stagg, you referred to a clincher, but isn't the real clincher was when the people state-wide in Louisiana voted in a constitutional amendment and said that they wanted this to be?

Mr. Stagg Mr. Stinson, before I got to my feet I asked the staff to call out to the law school to the research library to get for you the number of people in this state who voted on that constitutional amendment. As they were in those days, they were adopted by about 15% of the people who voted in election, and sometimes the vote was 7% of the people or 8% of the people in favor of a constitutional amendment. Now, that has changed and people vote down such constitutional amendments in recent years for which I am quite proud, and that is also why you and I are here in this room together.

Mr. Stinson Isn't it a fact, though, that it got a two-thirds vote of an independent legislature?

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1937

Mr. Stagg No sir, it did not get the two-thirds vote of an independent legislature even if you were there.

Mr. Stinson You mean that a constitutional amendment was submitted without getting a two-thirds vote?

Mr. Stagg The word I took issue with was "independent".

Mr. Stinson In other words, you don't think the legislature of Louisiana is independent when they vote?

Mr. Stagg At that date and at that time, Mr. Stinson, I highly doubt it, and I think history would bear me out to the letter.

Further Discussion

Mr. Jack I'll just be brief on it. As to Mr. Stagg, what he said, he wasn't in the legislature then. That was an independent legislature. Now, the people passed on it and whether there was 15 or how many people went and voted on the constitutional amendment, everybody that was registered had a right to go. Mr. Stagg is going to want us to override the will of the people. The people voted that office into the constitution. Now, I want to point this out to you. We took up first, Commissioner of Agriculture. That passed. That's the main office. We took up Commissioner of Insurance. That passed. We took up Superintendent of Education. That passed. Now, I voted for all three of those. Those were heavily lobbied. We next on these... the two for Register of State Land Office is a minor office, the reason it's passed out to have it there. The comptroller... the reason I voted against those two amendments, those failed. Now, what I'm getting at is this, Mr. Douglas Fowler did not get around and pass it. He was tending to his business like he always has. He runs that department fine and I'm going to show you a couple of things. This is a slap in the face to him when he didn't get out and lobby it like that and he has the main office. Now, we started voting machines... the first time they had them in Caddo, where you have to vote for or against it. Well, you spoil your ballot, about 12 in Ward 4 there, for Police Jury you spoil your ballot and all those kind. You had to have a gadget on it. They had more trouble than you can shake a stick at, and they would have still had trouble if you had of had an appointed man, but Mr. Fowler loved that job and he went to work and he got those things going fine. Whenever you wanted people to understand splitting ballots and splitting votes and all that, like when the Republicans were up there trying to get in and did get in when Charlton Lyons ran, Mr. Fowler came up there three times and explained over radio, television and to the newspapers how you could split your vote. I'm not saying Mr. Stagg is sore because he's a Republican and didn't like it, but the fact hadn't been explained there would have been a lot of other Democrats turned out in that general election when I lost by 65 votes. Now, I'm saying Mr. Fowler has proven he knows how to handle it. If I had my way I would have him actually Commissioner of Elections and put him over all of it. The secretary of state's office and Mr. Martin is 17 years old. I don't think I know him when he was in college, his office couldn't handle all of the different things that it was getting. That was an independent legislature. He was trying to handle it, but it was too much. I say let's do not treat Mr. Fowler different from these other three major offices and let's pass this this time. Now, the count on before the close, it was 54 votes for and 60 against. Now, let's don't send that office and that man down the drain, by any six votes. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Alario Mr. Chairman, members of the convention, I'll try to be brief here.

Mr. Henry Please don't say that. Everybody goes five minutes that does.

Mr. Alario The proposal as presented by the Executive Committee on the first draft that they gave us and what we looked at, and they did a wonderful job at working at it, and they said that they were proposing it as such so that the governor might have a cabinet form of government. Well, by your votes shown today, the only form of government the governor would have now and the only meeting he could call would be with the Custodian of Voting Machines and the Register of State Land. We don't want to put my governor through that... meeting in the mansion with an oil can to look at some voting machines. So, let's keep this office responsive to the people. It's been an office that's been doing a good job. Let's keep it an elected position and vote for the amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Fulco Mr. Chairman, I'm almost embarrassed to get up here, but I am going to be brief. I say that this is big business. You have all sorts of elections. We've got to have this thing organized systematically throughout... in our state government. Ladies and gentlemen, this is an extremely important office that should be created and in our constitution. Now, the secretary of state has already an enormous amount of responsibilities. The Custodian of Machines is another division of our election system. There's a Board of Supervisors, there's a Registrar of Voters. We should consolidate all of these divisions into one department, put it into the constitution, give the people a systematic, intelligent way of handling our elections in the future and I urge you to vote for this amendment. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in support of the amendment. Mr. Stagg, let me say this to you. I've spent my adult life in the legislature. Whether you call it independent or non-independent, it's still a political office. I could say here today that I don't think that there's a touch of independence in our government, but that's a matter for the people to decide at the proper time. I was there when the Office of Custodian of Voting Machines was created. I was also there when we had a Superintendent of State Buildings, one man and one secretary. Today there's over 300 employees doing that same job that one man and one secretary used to do. We've grown in this state, and the argument that something that worked 20 years ago will work today is just not true. I wish it was true budgetwise. Our budget has increased tremendously, and it is increasing every year. I think that this is an office that deserves every consideration. A Commissioner of Elections and the people of this great state place this office regard to the process of that legislature submitted it to them... they must have had faith in them because they voted for it and placed it in the constitution, and I hope, my friends, that you leave it in the constitution, and let the people name the Commissioner of Elections in this state or the Custodian of Voting Machines or whatever you want to create. I don't want to call it a minister that was appointed, Mr. McLemore, and he got it so fouled up that about a year later the legislature came back and said to let the people elect one. Later we came back, and the people were so pleased with it until they put it in the constitution. I don't know anything all that bad about it. I don't want to create a lot of opposition to the final product that the people are going to have a right to vote on if we ever finish and I hope that we do. I think that this has worked well. I have not had one person in my political life since this office has been in effect to make one complaint to me about the office was not run right and run honorably. I was in politics when they held it out for three and four days until they got them like they wanted them, and then they brought them in, or as my grandpa said, "they fetched them in". I've been through those trails, and I say the procedure and the mechanics we have in operation in this state today are working well. I see no reason to change them. In closing let me say that regardless of what kind of legislature we had at that time, there's always those who can get up and criticize people, but I see Wellborn Jack, I see Ford Stinson, and I see several others that was in that legislature at that time, and I think that they're all fine honorable men.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

Further Discussion

Mr. Drew Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I know Don Kelly well enough to know that this is not an attempt, as Mr. Derbes would have you believe that his poetry of a rose is a rose and so on. This is the first step in what I think is one of the most important and major governmental reforms that we'll be able to accomplish in this convention, and that is the establishment of a Department of Elections and put all election procedure in one department. You say that it would be done by putting it in the secretary of state's office. I have not as of this date seen the advantage of these umbrella agencies. I think that Don is doing what you've got to do and he's done years ago. Let's create a Commissioner of Elections and it's not merely an attempt to change the title. It is the first step in creating a Department of Elections which can be major and good reform for this state. I urge your adoption of the amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. LeBlue Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I urge you to adopt this amendment for this particular reason. I just assume that since we have abolished the Voting Machine Custodian that the duties of this office will now go to the secretary of state. Of course we haven't done anything to stipulate that but it's just my assumption since the secretary of state now handles elections that these responsibilities will fall under his office. Let me tell you that I just don't believe the secretary of state has time to do all this. The reason I believe that is because recently he had to resign from the Atchafalaya Basin Study Commission which I suppose, those of you who are intensely interested in the environment, is one of the most important commissions that this state or the legislature has created in the last several years. It is one of the last frontiers in the whole United States. But he had to resign his place on this commission, and he was well qualified to serve because of his familiarity with the region and having been born and brought up in that area. Now, if we get to the point where we're going to give him more duties, it would just be impossible for him to do a good job. If we recreate this Commission on Elections, and provide later that the Commissioner of Elections also be custodian of the voting machines we can consolidate two areas that would be more efficient and better serve the people of Louisiana. I ask you to favorably consider this amendment.

Questions

Mr. Lanier Delegate LeBlue, I'm looking at Section 7 which deals with the powers and duties of the secretary of state, and it says that he shall serve as the chief elections officer and administer the election laws and that he shall administer the laws relative to voting machines and other voting devices. Is it the purpose of this amendment to take away from the secretary of state this authority and put it in this particular office?

Mr. LeBlue I couldn't say, Mr. Lanier, for the simple reason that this is not my amendment and I don't know what the proposal would be later on, but I'm sure that some alteration would have to be assumed in that particular section when we get to it. I'd consider the duties of the secretary of state and the Commissioner of Elections, provided this amendment passes.

Mr. Lanier Do you think that it might help some of us, to me, if someone later on in the discussion would say what specific duties they intend to take away from the secretary of state as proposed in Section 7?

Mr. LeBlue I'm sure, since Mr. Kelly has proposed this amendment that he has some ideas in mind as to what those duties should be.

Mr. Fontenot Mr. LeBlue, if I understand correctly, the job of the Custodian of Voting Machines at the present time is spelled out in the statutes? Is that correct?

Mr. LeBlue That's a constitutional office, Mr. Fontenot, and as I understand that's what we're considering here.

Mr. Fontenot No, but I mean the job of the Custodian in the present constitution...he's a constitutional officer, but the requirements of his job...isn't that in the statutes...the legislature controls that at the present time?

Mr. LeBlue I couldn't say.

Mr. Fontenot So, the point that I'm getting at...wouldn't it be possible for the legislature to take away from the secretary of state and give the jobs of election laws to the Commissioner of Elections?

Mr. LeBlue If we provide that when we reach the section that Mr. Lanier was talking about, we can provide that the legislature shall take those actions.

Mr. Fontenot O.K., thank you.

Mr. O'Neill Mr. LeBlue, do you feel like when we get to this section that these people who are a little bit worried about it right now that we might be taking something away from the Secretary of state, don't you think their objections would be a little more appropriate then?

Mr. LeBlue Mr. O'Neill, I have confidence in every delegate here. If he tells you something, I think he intends to do it. I think all of us have enough integrity to have that much.

Further Discussion

Mr. Schmitt It seems kind of interesting to me that Senator Rayburn would come out in favor of having elective position for the commissioner of elections, yet, he would not favor to have a commissioner of the Office of Consumer Affairs. Throughout this entire convention many people have appeared to be advocates of the poor person and have come forward and claimed that they represent the farmer and have claimed that they represent the people in a lesser economic condition than others. Why when we push forward with something which will help them out, with something which is a little bit different from the past, do they back up? Senator Rayburn and Mr. LeBlue and Mr. Chehardy and many others voted no when we had the question of whether or not there should be a commissioner of the Office of Consumer Affairs. Yet, Mr. Chehardy in our committee has continually stepped forward to help defend the rights of the poor individual. Senator Rayburn has stepped forward continually in order to protect the rights of the farmer and the man with a little bit of income, has stepped forward and attempted to protect the rights of the individual who doesn't have the economic power to defend himself. Yet, when the question was brought forward of the commissioner of the Office of Consumer Affairs, they stepped forward from this. It's beyond me to understand why these individuals would fear a change from the decrepity of the past so that in the future we might have an office which would protect the small individual, so that in the future we might have some type of constitutional protection for the person who does not have the chance to protect himself...from the man that has to deal with the big institutions but doesn't know how to deal with these institutions. I feel that we should have a commissioner of the Office of Consumer Affairs. The logic of these people to favor these offices, the constitutional protection of the commissions for elections, yet, at the same time to reject the idea of the concept of an office of the commissioner of the Office of Consumer Affairs is just beyond me.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

Question

Mr. Roemer Mr. Schmitt, don't you agree that we tread a fine line in this debate between personalities and policies? It seems to me that you might be guilty of overstepping that line. For example, don't you think by the use of name whether it be Roemer or Rayburn or Chehardy or whatever that you're not doing anything but cementing people into positions that may be better for your own? I think that your allegation that everybody who spoke in favor of the farmer and then turned around and didn't vote for your particular bill were trying to do an in-service to the state is just absolutely wrong. Don't you agree?

Mr. Schmitt No, I disagree. I think that it's an absurd position for Senator Rayburn to come forward and to claim that there should be constitutional protection for a person in the position of the commissioner of elections and then to go farther and say that he's in favor of the poor man but he does not support a commissioner of the Office of Consumer Affairs. I just don't understand this. I don't see how it fits in with his philosophy.

Further Discussion

Mr. Abraham Ladies and gentlemen, I think we've reached the point where we simply need to decide just how far do we go with naming all these offices in the constitution. I submit to you, the substance of what we need to decide. Are we going to name them all? Are we going to try to hold them down? Or what are we going to do? This is for this convention to decide. Now the remark was made awhile ago that we ought to keep these various offices, the state's running good, ought to keep things like they are. Well, if the state's running good and we don't have any questions or problems with it, then what are we doing here today? Why did the legislature create this convention to begin with if everything's alright. Those of you who say that the office should be installed because this person or that person can't handle the job. He's too busy. Well, I submit to you, then, maybe we had better take a look at the duties of the governor. Let's make a separate commissioner of public works and one for highways and one for health and welfare and one for revenue. Really, gentlemen, let's just decide now how far are we going with all these various offices?

[Previous question ordered. Passed vote recorded. Amendment adopted. R-33. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [By Mr. Schmitt and Mr. Abraham]. Page 11, after the period add the following: "The legislature shall have the authority to consolidate any of the above offices, except that of governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, attorney general and treasurer."

Explanation

Mr. Schmitt This language essentially tracks the old language of Article V, Section 1, with reference to executive offices. The purpose of this was so that in the future at some time if the legislature would decide that it would not be necessary to have these as separate offices that they might be able to be abolished.

Questions

Mr. Denney Mr. Schmitt, in view of the various amendments which have been adopted, do you think your amendment is now sufficient?

Mr. Schmitt I beg your pardon.

Mr. Denney In view of the other amendments which have been adopted today adding more offices in here, do you think your present amendment is sufficient?

Mr. Schmitt I don't think it's...I feel that it's nice to give them constitutional status, but I think that we should have the ability in the future to let the legislature have the authority to consolidate these different offices, if it should be necessary.

Mr. Denney Now, are you aware that in Section 19 of the proposal before us now that the reorganization provision specifically provides that the re-allocation of functions, powers, duties and responsibilities of all departments, etc., except those powers, duties, functions and responsibilities allocated by this constitution, among and within no more than twenty departments. Don't you think that would really cover the situation?

Mr. Schmitt No, it doesn't because it doesn't allow for the consolidation of those which you just voted on.

Further Discussion

Mr. Flory Mr. Chairman and delegates, I rise in opposition to the amendment and call your attention to the fact that what you are doing in effect is allowing and making constitutional officers by the amendment that has already been adopted, and now allowing the legislature after the people have elected the constitutional officers, the authority to abolish those offices or consolidate them. I would just suggest to you that the amendment would just undo everything that we have done this afternoon and ask that you reject the amendment.

Question

Mr. Stinson Mr. Flory, suppose someone was elected to each one of the different offices. Of course, then they're consolidated. Are you going to have two heads or half and half or none?

Mr. Flory I believe if the constitution provides for a constitutional officer, if the people ratify the document which we submit to them, we ought to keep it as a constitutional office unless the people choose to remove it by referendum ballot.

Further Discussion

Mr. Arnette Ladies and gentlemen of the Constitutional Convention, I'd like to point out one thing to you. That this particular amendment that is proposed is word for word what is in your present constitution. Since 1921 the legislature has had this power and they consolidated one office, and that was the office of comptroller. The only reason they did that was because it became obsolete. I think we need some sort of provision like this if an office would become obsolete, that we would need to get rid of it. We would not need to elect a person to an office that no longer accomplished any function. I think this is a good amendment and I think we need to have it in there. It doesn't hurt any of these elective offices. It doesn't get rid of any of them. All it does is allow the legislature to consolidate if it becomes a problem later on in the future. I urge the adoption of this amendment.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected: 21-91. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [By Mr. Jenkins]. Page 1, Line 18 in Delegate Floor Amendment by Delegate Verbes and adopted by the convention on August 2, delete the words "commissioner of insurance" and insert in lieu thereof the words "secretary of commerce".

Explanation

Mr. Jenkins Mr. Chairman, delegates to the convention, I supported the concept of having an elected insurance commissioner. I think that the people have a right to elect the person who handles that responsibility in our government, but I do feel that that is a narrow area and that someone in that sort of position could have much more responsibility in the other areas. The commissioner of insurance has little authority at present with regard to his function. I think he could handle other areas. Here are the areas that I suggest a secretary of commerce could handle. He could be in charge of the same functions that the insurance commissioner has at present, but he could have a number of other important functions as well. For example, regulation of banking, savings and loans, finance institutions; regulation and licensure of other businesses; he could have the Office of Consumer Affairs; he could have the Board of Commerce and Industry under his jurisdiction and every other aspect of state government which we might want to handle properly as well. A secretary of commerce would be a much greater constitutional dignity, I think, than a commissioner of insurance. But by substituting such a proposal we would allow the people to continue to elect a person who is directly in charge of insurance regulation, but we could also accommodate the views of those who suggested an Office of Functions. Possibly, he could be in charge of registering state lands, an office which apparently we will abolish, as well as the other vital duties with regard to promotion of industrial development in the state. I think this would be a step forward and a move in the right direction, so I move the adoption of this amendment.

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected: 28-72. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Further amendments go to Paragraph B of Section 1, Mr. Chairman.

Amendment No. 1. Page 1, line 24, this amendment is offered by Delegates Flory, Rayburn and O'Neill...

Amendment No. 1, on page 1, line 24, after the word "functions" change the comma to a period and delete the remainder of the line and delete line 25 in its entirety.

Explanation

Mr. Flory Mr. Chairman and delegates, what the amendment purports to do is to delete the language where you allocate according to function, after that delete the language "within not more than twenty departments." Let me give you the reasoning behind the amendment. First, if it is determined in the wisdom of the legislature that they should be grouped accordingly, it may be five, six or any number of departments, but you would not necessarily have, as I appreciate what the article purports to do as it is, twenty new positions created in state government. This of course is the objection that I have to the creating of the twenty departments with a department head—particularly in light of the fact that many of the agencies of the state, boards and commissions, operate on self-generating revenues which are not state funds and they are not subject to budget regulations. Therefore, I'm speaking primarily of those boards and commissions who are created by statute primarily for the purpose of licensing doctors, dentists, barbers, plumbers, beauticians, watchmakers, etc. If you had a department...one man would have all of these agencies under the same revenues, it would control budgets of those various agencies, boards and commissions. I would suggest to you that we adopt the amendment and leave it up to the legislature as to what the grouping should be and as to the number that there should be. I would yield to any question, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

Mr. O'Neill Mr. Flory, if these departments were put into twenty, wouldn't they be able to create different subcommittees and different committees themselves within the twenty? Don't you see just a mushrooming of these departments into all sorts of committees?

Mr. Flory I don't know what was discussed in the Executive Committee relative to this particular provision. However, I might say to you that nothing is spelled out as what is intended in the duties and responsibilities of those people that would head the twenty departments and what their duties and responsibilities relating to those agencies, boards and commissions under that department. I think that could best be left to the legislature in its wisdom.

Mr. O'Neill Another question; is there anything now which would prohibit the legislature from doing just what the intent of this article is?

Mr. Flory Not as I appreciate what is proposed by the various committees of this convention.

Mr. Nunez Mr. Flory, in the description of boards, commissions, agencies which operate on self-generating funds. Things like the barber board, the pharmacy board, the cosmetology board, the dental board and various other boards that are just solely for the purpose of either licensing or in some places regulating their own industries.

Mr. Flory That's correct.

Further Discussion

Mr. Arnette Delegates to the convention, I'm greatly disturbed. I'm greatly disturbed because we're going back to the 18th century instead of moving forward into the next century. We're sitting here and we're not coming up with any departments. We're expanding and expanding and expanding and making this thing totally unworkable. This is something you had maybe 200 years ago when you didn't know about management. You didn't know how to manage people and agencies and departments, but now we have no excuse for preventing a consolidation here and we're not coming up with any departments to greatly increase the power of the governor? If you do, adopt this amendment. Right now he has over 200 agency and department heads to appoint. Do you want to increase this to maybe 300 or 400? If you want to do so, fine. If you want to greatly increase the power of your governor, go ahead and do it. But if you refuse to adopt this amendment and adopt the committee's proposal you will reduce his appointments down to 20. There will be 20 department heads, not 200 or 300 or 400. This seems to be the only logical thing you can possibly do. I don't see how you can adopt such an amendment that would not limit the number of departments of the state. This would also greatly increase the business-like nature of state government. Right now the state government of Louisiana is totally unworkable. No governor can possibly know what ever

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

200 agencies are doing. We can not possibly have reports from over 200 different people. We cannot possibly keep up with that many people. It would take 24 hours a day if he only wanted to talk to them just a few minutes a day. I don't see possibly how you can accept this particular amendment. If you reduce it to 20, a person can properly organize state government according to functions as the more progressive states have done. Do you want to still be classed as one of the least progressive states in the nation? If you do, fine, go ahead and adopt this amendment, because that's exactly what it does. We're going to be right back in the horse and buggy era. We're going to be classed down there...all those stupid idiots down in Louisiana...they don't know anything...they've got a horse and buggy government. I strongly urge you to defeat this particular amendment. Thank you.

Questions

Mr. O'Neill Mr. Arnette, you've already said that you don't see how a governor could operate all these state boards and agencies. Are you saying that our current governor is incompetent?

Mr. Arnette No, I'm not saying he's incompetent. I'm just saying no human being alive, save possibly the son of God, could control that many people. There is no possible way, and to ask a person to do it is something you shouldn't ask him to do. Now, 20 is a good workable number. If you know anything about business administration you know that no one person could administrate more than 20 people.

Mr. O'Neill Well, Mr. Arnette, you've implied now that if we kill this amendment that we're allowing government to grow to 300 or 400 agencies, and I don't see it that way. I already see that the legislature has put an umbrella agency over the, you know, the welfare, medical, you know...

Mr. Arnette That's exactly right, but if you kill this amendment, you will force the legislature to get it down to a workable number, and that's what we need to do right now.

Mr. O'Neill Well, don't imply then that we're allowing it to grow.

Mr. Arnette You are allowing it to grow because you're not prohibiting it from growing.

Mr. Stinson Mr. Arnette, I understand that we have just recently had a big consolidation to reduce the number of personnel and expenses and according to the paper, we've got more now than we used to start with so is that what the new century wants or are we supposed to go back to the horse and buggy days and be...what did you say...ignore it?

Mr. Arnette Well, Mr. Stinson, how many agencies do we have right now in state government? Over 200, am I correct?

Mr. Stinson I imagine so.

Mr. Arnette Do you think that 200 is a workable number? Can you imagine yourself trying to work with 200 different people every day?

Mr. Stinson No, I'd get the legislature to reduce them, I think.

Mr. Arnette You think that you can get the legislature to reduce them. How about if we force the legislature...

Mr. Stinson If I was the governor, I know that I could get them to reduce it.

Mr. Arnette Well, how about if we force the legislature to reduce them?

Further Discussion

Mr. Champagne I thought perhaps I'd go by one day without getting up here, but I've seen them come from the dead today so I rise in opposition to this amendment. It seems peculiar to me that a governor of this state ran on a ticket of consolidation. We talk about a new constitution and then we come here and do everything we can to prevent him from carrying out his campaign promise and we see him working for the people who sent us here to this convention. It seems very peculiar to me that we vote time and time again to give the legislature more power but then when it comes to the governor we want to put him into a back position in this thing. We want to give him a back seat and we don't want him to have anything to do with the government of this state. I submit to you that this amendment that you are now...before you...would put us further back than we were with the constitution of 1921. The governor of this state ran on the ticket that he would consolidate agencies. I think that he had a mandate from the people to do that. In writing this constitution we are attempting to give him that authority, but there are those among us who would give all authority to the legislature, who would let them run this state as they see fit. They would give them more and more authority and I submit to you that we have separate branches of government. It is high time that we reorganize that fact, and vote for separate branches of government rather than putting it all in one. I say that it's time that this convention go on record as having fewer heads and more workers in this state of Louisiana.

Further Discussion

Mr. Burson Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I want to speak in opposition to this amendment because I construe the Section 1B differently, apparently, than the proposers of the amendment do. That proposition tells me that we would have written into our constitution a guarantee to the people of this state that we could not have more than 20 executive departments. I am in favor of that because I believe that the people of this state and the United States have in many ways all the government that they can stand now, and I don't believe that it is wise or good constitutional draftsmanship to leave the gate open for a multiplicity of state departments. I remind you that in the processes we've been through today we have provided for 9 constitutional officers. I presume that each one would head a department of sorts. That would leave, by my calculation, if we had the full 20 departments, which is not required by this...it says not more than 20 departments...would leave 11 other departments. At the present time in the present constitution we have some 40 executive agencies in the positions that are required. So by my calculation if we leave in here what the committee has recommended, we would be insuring the people of this state that we would cut the number of governmental departments at least in half. Of course, I am not at all convinced that the 40 executive departments that are in the present constitution are all we have. We have departments created by statute. I think that we should be for legislative power where legislative power is called for, and I have been for that in such areas as appropriations, where the will of the people should speak. But we have a tripartite system of government. We've got three branches; the executive, the legislative and the judiciary, and we have an executive, an administrative area, that the governor properly has power and should have power. We will be helping him in this instance to control this great, monstrous leviathan of government that has enveloped us in the modern era, because as things are now, sure he can go to the legislature and get some consolidation, but under the present constitution he is stuck with 40 administrative and executive agencies whether he wants them or not. We're going to say in this new constitution, if we stick with the committee, that at least he knows that he does not have to deal with more than 20. I suggest to you this would be a help to the legislature because the legislature in dealing with administrative reorganization could just tell the department heads when they come up, "well, look old buddy, I'm sorry to have to cut your department out or merge it with another one, but you know the new constitution says that we've got to have just 20 and we've already approved 18. Somebody's got to go." I suggest to you that whether you look at it from the point of view of good government or good politics, that it is a good idea to leave alone the committee proposal that we have not more than 20 departments.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

Question

Mr. Avant I've heard the statement made that you've got to leave this thing like it is because it will reduce the power of the governor to appoint people, and then they use the figure twenty in here. There are approximately twenty, maybe a few less, maybe a few more, boards that regulate various professions and occupations. The Louisiana State Board of Medical Examiners, the Louisiana State Board of Examiners in Nursing, the Louisiana State Board of Examiners in Watchmaking, professional boards that regulate particular trades and occupations according to a legislative act setting up standards for those trades and occupations. My problem is what's going to happen to those boards, or those regulatory bodies, if this amendment is not adopted? You're going to put them all under one so then the governor will only appoint that one and the doctors will be passing on people who want to be TV repairmen...

Mr. Henry Mr. Avant, I'm sorry, you've exceeded his time, sir.

Mr. Burson I would like to have the opportunity to answer the question.

Mr. Henry Well I'm sorry, but the rules are as they are, sir. You can go back there and talk with him, but the time is up.

Further Discussion

Mr. Duval I'd just like to reiterate one point that's been previously made, but I think it's very important. Our present governor ran on a platform of reorganization as did the second candidate, the person who came in second, and the people elected him governor. I think it was one of the prime issues in the campaign and the people endorsed it when they elected him. I think we should consider that if we are going to consider what the people want. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Denney The purpose of the Executive Committee is...rather the Committee on the Executive Branch. In drafting this provision may be more clearly understood if you look at the Committee Report No. 19 which provides for the mandatory reorganization of state government and provides that the legislature shall allocate within not more than twenty departments. Now not more is the important phraseology here. It is conceivable that now that we have added some more constitutional officers, if they become elective officers and therefore are required to head departments, that this must be changed in some small increase. But to do away with the limitation of the number of departments seems to me, as a member of the committee which worked on this, to be striking at the very heart of our proposal to try to provide for the state of Louisiana an efficient form of running the state of Louisiana. Now, Mr. Flory, made some statements about the self generating fund agencies. There is no problem there because right now the Department of Agriculture, for instance, has under it the Orderly Milk Marketing Commission and the Structural Pest Control Commission which net one hundred percent of their funds self generated. So I don't see that there is any real problem that. All of these commissions, right now, are under the secretary of agriculture. The purpose of this entire section, taken as a whole, is to provide for the governor of the state of Louisiana a method of operating the state's business in an efficient manner. It seems to me that if we take out the twenty department limitation, or if we amend it to many more than twenty, we are losing the whole efficacy of this entire article.

Questions

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Denney, let me just ask you this question, and my purpose for signing the amendment that's now up for discussion is I'm not clear as to what departments would mean. Do you mean, when you say departments, do you mean agencies, boards, commissions like the Television Board? That's the only reason, because I could see with twenty departments you could be in trouble in this state the minute this was adopted if you got a ruling from the attorney general that department means any board or agency. That was my purpose because it's not clear in my mind as how you define a department.

Mr. Denney Well I think the definition is contained, if you look at Proposal No. 19, Senator Rayburn, it says "The legislature shall allocate within not more than twenty departments the functions, powers, duties and responsibilities of all departments, offices, agencies and other instrumentalities within the executive branch except those allocated by this constitution." Now the whole theory of it is to put all of these various boards and commissions under a department head who can then, in a pyramid fashion, report for those commissions and agencies directly to the governor, which we believe would give the governor a little more efficacious control over them.

Mr. Rayburn Well then, Mr. Denney, really what we're doing, and nothing is the same thing when we say twenty, if we wanted to create in the legislature in the next session if this provision in the constitution was enacted, we could just create fifteen new agencies and put them under "X" department, or twenty new agencies and put them under "X" department. Am I correct?

Mr. Denney I think that's quite correct, sir.

Mr. Rayburn So really what we're doing and nothing is about the same thing then. I mean it can be easily circumvented if you so desire to do so.

Mr. Denney Well I don't think it would be circumvented, Senator. I think what would happen is that these various agencies that you would create, if you created them, would report to the governor through one particular department head. This would give the governor an opportunity, in the nature, if you will, of a cabinet form of government although we didn't specify that's what it was to be called.

Mr. Rayburn But Mr. Denney, take the Law Institute and the Barber Board. Where would they go? Could we just put them under some department?

Mr. Denney I would take it, for example the Barber Board, that you would probably, there would probably be some sort of a licensing, a department of licensing. All of these various licensing boards would report to the governor through the department head. Now the department head would not control what those boards do. The boards would remain independent.

Point of Order

Mr. O'Neill My comprehension of the new Rule No. 90 which we enacted yesterday said that all materials placed on delegate's desk must bear the name of those persons or organizations who submitted such materials. I just had this put on my desk which does not bear the name of the organization or person who placed it on my desk, and I simply want to raise that point of order.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

Mr. Stagg I would like to reply to the point of order. This material was printed long before Rule No. 90 was adopted, and it is a part of the presentation by the Committee on the Executive Department, and I'm sorry we couldn't get it reprinted in time to put Committee on Executive Department at the bottom of it.

Further Discussion

Mr. Conroy I speak in opposition to the proposed amendment. I have read through the committee proposal; I've read through the comments which we have all received from PAR on the committee proposal as a whole. It strikes me that Mr. Stagg is justifiably proud of the work which his committee did. I think they did a fine job. I did not rise to speak on Section No. 1A because to a large extent I don't think that Section No. 1A has any particular substance to it. It is a descriptive list of a lot of different offices, but it doesn't say much about what they are or where they'll go. Section No. 1B, I think, begins to get into the substance and content of what their proposal is. As I understand it, at the heart of their proposal is the concept that the executive department should be reorganized. The very purpose of the reorganization is responsibility. That's a word I hold dearly in this whole constitutional convention, is one of responsibility. I think one of the efforts here is to try to say that there are a few people in this state, that at least you'll be able to go to only a few, to find out what's happening, what's going on within various state organizations and whatnot. I think right now it's bewildering, as I'm sure that you can begin to gather from the sheet that was distributed, as to what, exactly, the executive department or what the administrative branch of this state government is and how it functions and what it does. I don't think that the Executive Committee Proposal, or the proposal the Committee on Executive Department intends to answer all these questions. It asks the executive department to propose a reorganization program. It asks the legislature to act upon this proposal. This is only the beginning. This is the framework. This is the foundation on which all these other things are to happen and I think that this is a good foundation. I urge you to reject the proposed amendments to Section No. 1B and adopt the committee proposal largely as it is. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Roy Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the Convention, I can't believe we've now come the full circle. I came here with the notion of making a more independent legislature and having it more flexible and we've done that. To make the executive branch somewhat less powerful. Now the Executive Committee has come up with something that I think is really, really good and is needed, especially when you look at the sheet that was passed out. We are now going back to where we are going to saddle the governor with the idea or the notion to have to know some possibly one hundred to two hundred different department heads or agency heads when he can hardly know twenty or thirty. We're going to make him responsible for whatever they do. Now I just sat here awhile ago and had a bunch of legislators, and there's not a wrong with it, come and talk with me about voting for the position of commissioner of elections, and to reinstate it in the constitution. I did so. Yet these same people, now for some reason, now are trying to involve the legislature in something that is, in my opinion, the executive branch. I just don't see how we're going to tolerate the idea of a three branch, separate branch, government and at the same time continue to emasculate the provisions of the Executive Committee that, in my opinion, are good. Thank you. I'm against it.

Further Discussion

Mr. Gravel Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I think there's been a real misunderstanding by many of you with respect to the purpose of this proposal. What the Committee on the Executive Department sought to do was to determine, first of all, I suppose as we all have, that there are three branches of state government. Now within the executive branch of state government, we intended by this provision under consideration to provide that not more than twenty departments, that would be major divisions or major parts of the executive branch would exist. That only, as Mr. Conroy correctly suggested, creates the substructure for the organization of the executive department. Now within that manageable structure, we think, there're certainly going to be divisions. There are going to be agencies, boards, commissions, committees and so forth that will fit into a logical, formal reorganization of state government. This, ladies and gentlemen, is at the very heart of the proposal that Governor Edwards made to the people of the state of Louisiana when he campaigned for governor. He appeared before the committee and supported in concept, the proposal that is now before you. I urge that in order that we can carry out a full and valid reformation of our governmental structure, that you vote against the proposed amendments and not for them, as it has been approved by the executive department.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

Mr. Flory Mr. Chairman and delegates, our purpose in submitting this amendment, of course, was not in any way to detract from the program espoused by the present governor when he was running for office. The amendment does nothing to his program of reorganization whatsoever. And to Mr. Arnette, let me say to you, what's proposed here does not call for the abolition of agencies, boards and commissions. It merely gives to the governor twenty more additional appointments than what he now has. My only purpose in proposing the amendment was to take care of those boards, agencies and commissions who operate under self-generated revenue. That's solely the whole purpose of the amendment. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, if I have assured that "department" does not mean those agencies operating under self-generated revenues, I'd be more than happy to withdraw the amendment. But nothing contained in this proposal makes such a definition. That's my whole purpose in proposing the amendment. After the explanation, with the approval of the Chair, leave of the convention even though the previous question has been ordered, Mr. Chairman, if I'm in order, I'd like to move that we withdraw the amendment.

Mr. Henry Mr. Flory, the previous question has been ordered.

[Amendment rejected: 13-93. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Point of Order

Mr. Blair Is there any way when a gentleman comes up and asks for his amendment even if the previous question has been ordered for him to be shown the courtesy to withdraw it in our rules?

Mr. Henry Yes sir, we could reconsider the vote by which the previous question was ordered. If we do that then and get through those mechanics, the problem is the Journal on the thing. We've gone through the process of debating it and if it is then the previous question being ordered, and in the journal it's going to reflect that the previous question was ordered and then the amendments were withdrawn and just procedurally there are no mechanics for it unless you go back and reconsider the vote by which the previous question was ordered.

Mr. Blair I wish there was some way, Mr. Chairman, that we would give the courtesy to a person, if he sees the light, he wants to change his mind, even if the previous question has been ordered, to let him withdraw it.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Lanier et al.] On page 1, line 25, after the partial word "ments" change the period to a comma and add the following: "as provided by law."

Explanation

Mr. Lanier Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this amendment may at first blush appear rather innocuous, but in fact, it goes right to the heart of the reorganization of the executive branch in the manner in which this will be accomplished. In order to understand the full meaning of Paragraph B of Section 1, you have to read this in conjunction with Committee Proposal No. 19 which is to add Article XIV of the schedule and Section 19 of the executive proposal. Now, I don't think that Committee Proposal No. 19 has been distributed to everyone yet. It was referred to by Mr. Dennergy when he made his presentation a few minutes ago. But in essence, this is what it means. As you will note, Paragraph B here says that all offices, agencies and other instrumentalities of the executive branch of state government and their respective functions, powers, duties and responsibilities, except for the offices of governor and lieutenant governor, shall be allocated according to function within not more than twenty departments. This provision does not say who will do the allocation. Now, in order to determine this, you must first go to the Committee Proposal No. 19 which is not in general distribution at this date, which would provide a schedule article on the mandatory reorganization of that government. And so that you will understand what this proposal says, since I think that most of you probably don't have it, I'd like to take the liberty of reading it to you. "The legislature shall allocate, shall, that's mandatory, within not more than twenty departments, the functions, powers, duties and responsibilities of all departments, offices, agencies and other instrumentalities within the executive branch except those allocated by this constitution. Such allocation which shall not be subject to veto by the governor shall become operative not later than eighteen months after the effective date of this constitution. Should the legislature fail to make such allocation, the governor, within six months shall effect such allocation by executive order." Now, after this has taken place, the procedure for reorganization will be as set forth in Section 19 of the Executive Article. And if you will refer to Section 19, you will see that it provides that the governor may, which is discretionary, propose to the legislature a plan of reallocation, at which time the legislature may or may not adopt the reallocation plan by the governor and cannot make substantial amendments. Now this is a deviation from our present law. Our present law is embodied in Article III, Section 32 and Article V, Section 1. If you would refer to the digest on your desk, which has been handed out, it shows what the present law is and what the proposed change is. In the thing that my amendment is designed to do by putting in the words, "as provided by law," is that the reallocation will be done by the legislature under all circumstances as is the present law. This way, when you have a reallocation of functions in the executive branch, it will be done in the form of a bill. It will be introduced, you will have committee hearings, you will go through the process of enacting a bill and this law will then be put in the statute books which are available and published by the West Publishing Company where everyone can know what that reallocation is. The problem, as I see it, with Section 19, and I hate to go into Section 19, but I think it is a necessary part of the discussion of this amendment in getting the overall picture of how the governmental reorganization should be done. The problem with Section 19 is that if the legislature rejects the plan of the governor then nothing happens and there would be no further reallocation. If you provide that the legislature will make the reallocation if the governor wishes to first introduce it, he can do so by contacting a legislator or group of legislators as he's presently done and has been doing since 1921, and they can submit his proposal to the legislature which would then be handled as a law. If we have a reallocation by executive order, the problem with the reallocation by the executive order is executive orders are not in general publication and you would not have the ordinary hearing procedure or legislative procedure that is attached to the enactment of a bill. My feeling is, and the reason for this amendment is, that the procedure for reorganization as suggested by the proposal of the Executive Committee in the schedule, should be by the legislature. The governor can introduce his bills through legislators and this will be handled in the manner of the enactment of a law. We would then go through all of these procedures with public hearings, etc., and we would have a permanent record in the statutory law and West Digest of what the structure of our executive department would be. Now, this, of course, goes to the heart of the reorganization program. To me it is a very critical issue and that's why I said these four little words don't look like much at first, but in effect, they're locking into the constitution the present law that the legislature will actually do the reorganization. Now coupled with the proposed section, schedule article, this would mean that if this is adopted and the schedule article is adopted, there would be mandatory reorganization by the legislature within eighteen months after the effective date of the new constitution. If the legislature failed in its duty, then it would be done by the governor. I'd be glad to yield to any questions.

Questions

Mr. Abraham Walter, under this language here, where you say "as provided by law", there is still nothing to prevent the legislature for providing within the law for the governor to effect various reorganizations on his own, is there?

Mr. Lanier No, not at all.

Mr. Dennergy Mr. Lanier, as I understand the legislative section which we recently adopted, when you use the language, "as provided by law," that means as provided by statute.

Mr. Lanier By an enactment of statute. Yes sir. That is my intention.

Mr. Dennergy Well now, if per chance your argument, when we get to Section 19, is not adopted by the convention, and the convention determines that it is best to let the governor do his voluntary, if you will, or discretionary reorganizations, and if we have amended up here "as provided by law," those two sections will be in direct conflict.

Mr. Lanier Yes sir.

Mr. Dennergy Then it seems to me, therefore, that you are bringing this up at the wrong time. Because if the convention, if the delegates decide that it should be by the legislature then you don't need it. If the convention decides that it should be done by the executive, then you have created an impossible conflict. For that reason, it seems to me that you, if I may respectfully suggest it, should withdraw that amendment and if Section 19 comes up. The argument is a sound one, it has merit in it and we discussed it at length, but our conclusion was that the executive should have this power after the first mandatory...

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

Mr. Lanier Well as I see it, really, we can solve the whole problem right now with this language, at this point in time. That is why, in the presentation of my discussion I brought up the fact of the provisions of Section 19 and of the proposed schedule provision. I think we can lay the matter to rest right now. If the convention, in its wisdom does not choose to do so, then of course we can always raise it at a later time. I feel we ought to face the issue now. To me, this is one of the most critical parts of the executive branch done by the right here. Section No. 1, setting forth who will be your elected and constitutional officers and setting forth the framework for the reorganization of our government. I agree with the previous speakers that there has been a mandate by the people of our state for reorganization of our state government. I think that this should be done by the legislature and I think this language will put that to rest. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Vice Chairman Miller in the Chair

Mr. Tate Mr. Lanier, if the convention adopts your amendment and if it is adopted by Committee Resolution No. 19, well then would not the reorganization be accomplished as provided by law? In other words, enactment being the schedule attached to the constitution by Committee Resolution No. 19.

Mr. Lanier Judge, as I appreciate it, I do not think my amendment and Committee Resolution 19 are in conflict. As pointed out by Mr. Denberry, and I think he was accurate, my amendment, if adopted, would be in conflict with Section 19. Thank you, Madam Chairman.

Further Discussion

Mr. Stagg Madam Chairman and fellow delegates, in the book on your desk, the large book, there is a sheet toward the rear of it on white paper called Committee Proposal No. 19. There is, in your yellow copy of the Executive Article, a Section 19, and unfortunately, those two may be confusing by both being numbered 19. Let me please try to explain to you, Mr. Lanier's amendment. In Section 18, the committee has stated that the "powers, functions, duties except for the governor and lieutenant governor shall be allocated according to function within not more than twenty departments." The question is how do you start that process? Who should lay the groundwork? The committee felt that the first reorganization of the state government ought to be done by the state legislature. So the first reorganization, the lumping of 197 or 200 agencies under twenty departments ought to be carried out by the people's direct representatives in the legislature. That's when it gets done for the first time. So under Committee Proposal No. 19 in the white paper in your book, it is in the schedule of the constitution and it is entitled "Mandatory Reorganization of State Government". That first reorganization, then, is done by the legislature and all of these 200 agencies, boards and commissions that we have will be placed by the legislature into no more than twenty departments. Fine. We get that done, it's placed into operation. Then of the functions among, if one or more functions of government or new departments are devised by the legislature and it becomes necessary for them to be allocated or reallocated, we state in Section 19 the governor may, and that is may, from time to time, propose to the legislature on or before the first day of the session, a plan of reorganization of the functions among these departments. The legislature, by a majority vote of the elected members of each House, may disapprove of such a plan and tell the governor, "heck no, you can't do it that way." But if they don't turn it down, then it becomes the new reallocation of one department or two or three agencies among departments. Now that's a relatively complicated scheme to get reorganization into effect, and that's what the committee set out to do. But the important part of it is, that the first time that it is done, it will be done by the state legislature. Then, thereafter if from age and from obsolescence, departments are put out of business by the legislature or new departments or agencies are created, then the governor may go to the legislature with a plan of reallocation. Hopefully the legislature would agree to it, but if they don't then it doesn't happen. It is still in charge of the legislature but the governor has the duty under the permanent constitutional provision of making a proposed reallocation of the executive department, which we think he properly ought to do since he is the head of the executive branch of government. I urge you to reject Mr. Lanier's amendment, and that we tackle this problem when we get further on into the Executive Article under Section 19 of Committee Proposal No. 4.

Questions

Mr. Perez My question will be fast and brief. What assurance do we have that this body will adopt the schedule?

Mr. Stagg What assurance do we have, Mr. Perez, that we'll adopt...

Mr. Perez That the body will adopt the schedule because without the schedule, this whole thing is totally incomplete.

Mr. Stagg What do we do in case the body does not adopt the article on local and parochial government?

Mr. Perez No sir. You asked me a question, so I'll answer it and that's not proper procedure. But, we would be adopting an article which would say that the respective functions, powers and so forth shall be allocated. But we do not say by whom. The problem becomes that if we don't adopt this schedule, and we may not even have schedules to begin with, the problem becomes what does this particular section mean?

Mr. Stagg Then Section 19 would become the method of allocation and then it would be the duty of the governor. I would urge the convention to adopt the schedule and to adopt the mandatory reorganization so that the legislature could have the first shot at it.

Mr. Perez But in that event, then, wouldn't it be that the total concept and the total intent of your article, that the legislature would first adopt the proposal, and if, in fact, is not put in the schedule, then the whole concept of your article would be changed. Is that correct?

Mr. Stagg I have no reason to believe that the Convention would refuse to adopt the schedule, Mr. Perez, in the first instance.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

Mr. Lanier Thank you, Madam Chairman. One of the primary reasons that I have proposed this amendment is because I understand this, and I wanted to ask this question to Mr. Stagg but we didn't have time. As I understand this if we adopt these provisions as they are and in particular Section 19 of the proposal, that would mean that after the initial mandatory reorganization, that the legislature would be locked out from taking any action to reorganize unless there was an initiating action made by the governor. That, to me, is a very drastic and substantial change from the present law, which allows the legislature to do it when it deems fit. And for this reason I think that this should be settled and that the legislature should, and with this amendment it could, initiate the action itself in the future to reorganize and it would not be mandatory that the initiating action come from the governor because at some time in the future we could have a reverse situation where the governor wanted a multiplicity of boards for some reason, or wanted multiplicity. This way the legislature would be locked out from taking action without an initiating action by the governor. For this reason I think we should allow flexibility in the system for the legislature to do this if it, in its wisdom, it deems it appropriate.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

Questions

Mr. Anzalone Walt, your statement is that following the initial reorganization of state government you feel that the legislature would be powerless to institute its own plan of reorganization. Is that correct?

Mr. Lanier That is correct.

Mr. Anzalone Is there anything in here that would prohibit that?

Mr. Lanier The prohibition, I think, would be in Article II, Sections 1 and 2, that provide for the separation of powers. Article II, Section 2 of our present constitution and of the proposal of the Bill of Rights Committee is that no branch of government can exercise any action within any other branch of government. The only way that you could do this under the present law is to have Article III, Section 35, and Article V, Section 1 authorizing the legislature to do this, because this deals with the executive branch. This is a case where the legislature is powerless to act, in my opinion, unless they are specifically given the authority to act. That is why I think this should be given.

Mr. Anzalone Well, is there anything in Section 1, Paragraph B, that would prohibit the legislature from doing it?

Mr. Lanier There is no grant. The problem here is not a prohibition, it is a grant. We are dealing with the executive branch and the legislature can't meddle with the executive branch under the separation of powers. So, unless you authorize the legislature to do this they can't, in my opinion.

[Amendment rejected: 31-69. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter The next amendment is offered up by Mr. Anzalone and Dr. Asseff.

Amendment No. 1, Page 1, at the beginning of line 23, delete the words "offices of governor and lieutenant governor" and insert in lieu thereof "statewide elective offices".

Explanation

Mr. Anzalone Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I have proposed this amendment strictly for clarification. You are going to constitutionally provide for several offices in Section 1A. Section 2 is going to provide for the departments. I do not want to confuse the powers, duties and functions of the elected officials and by any guise give any of the legislature the authority to play with a constitutional authority which is granted to an elected official. My amendment simply makes it abundantly clear that whatever constitutional authority you give to a statewide elected official, it is his and can only be changed by an amendment to the constitution.

Questions

Mr. Newton Mr. Anzalone, doesn't your amendment also have the effect of increasing the number of state departments?

Mr. Anzalone No sir, it does not because we haven't gotten to the allocation of the state department yet with these elected officials.

Mr. Gravel Mr. Anzalone, you say that the purpose of this is to make sure that the duties or functions of the constitutional officers are not adversely affected, is that the purpose of your amendment?

Mr. Anzalone Yes, sir.

Mr. Gravel Well, if we provide specifically in the constitution as to the function of constitutional officers, certainly no provision of the law could adversely affect that, could it, no provision of any statute?

Mr. Anzalone No, sir.

Mr. Gravel Well then, the purpose for which you introduced the amendment doesn't exist.

Mr. Anzalone Yes, sir. I want to make it abundantly clear, Mr. Gravel, that when these 20 departments are created that there will be no infringement whatsoever on the powers, duties and functions of an elected official.

Mr. Gravel Where is there any such infringement?

Mr. Anzalone We don't have any yet.

Mr. Denney Mr. Joe, your amendment provides, as I understand it, that the present, as we have it written now before we have made any changes in it, there are three other statewide elected officials... secretary of state, treasurer, and attorney general. Is it your intention, by means of this amendment, to provide that those three agencies shall not be within the 20 departments mentioned in the article?

Mr. Anzalone Yes, sir.

Mr. Denney So what you are suggesting then, is a considerable change in what the Executive Committee came up with? The 20 departments were to include those departments which were headed by elected officials.

Mr. Anzalone No sir, they did not. The 20 departments included three of five.

Mr. Denney Excuse me, three of the five, but now you are removing those three?

Mr. Anzalone I am removing those three.

Mr. Denney Thank you sir.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

[Previous Question 100000. Amendment rejected: 31-65. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Weis and Mr. Flory], page 1, line 23, after the words "lieutenant governor" and the punctuation, and before the word "shall" insert the following: "and boards, commissions and agencies which operate solely on self-generated funds".

Explanation

Mr. Weiss Fellow delegates, the hour is late. I won't take much of your time, but this is, I believe what Mr. Flory had in mind, and perhaps Delegate Fayburn also. This is highly significant and very personal to you no matter what's your profession or occupation in that this chart you received is confusing in this respect. I'd like to point out that we're speaking only... only of boards, commissions and agencies which have self-generating revenue. In other words, they exist at no cost to the state. Now, the reason I suggested this be included is not to reduce the power of the governor, but rather enforce the power of the governor. Please understand, if you will, as I have learned in studying the governor's appointments, that two things will happen as a result if this is passed. One is that the governor will be more powerful and go directly to the people. That is the Blue Ribbon Board, the people who are selected by you and I in any given profession or in any given work to represent you at a state level. I have learned in the funds going toward these commissions, towards these boards or towards these agencies. The other thing is that it will reward the people who serve on these boards and commissions and the like, who serve at not cost to the state. In other words, let me read to you some of these commissions and boards that now exist and then I'll explain one in particular...the Medical Examiners, for example, that concern me. But, these include such diverse boards, commissions or agencies as the barbers, contractors, cosmetology, dentists, embalmers and funeral directors, engineers, hearing aid dealers, horticulturists, liquefied petroleum gas commission, livestock brand commission, livestock sanitary board, medical advisory board, medical examiners, motor vehicle commissions, namely the dealers, nurse examiners, optometry, pharmacy, plumbing board, psychologists, radio and television boards, sanitarians, seed commissions, shorthand reporters, social workers, speech pathologists and audiology, soy bean promoters, strawberry advertising and development commissions, sweet potato boards, veterinary medicine and watchmaking board. Now, each of these boards represent, at least in the medical sense and I will use that since I know it best, the blue ribbon physicians of the state that are presented to the governor when he is elected. In other words, the physicians would select ten members and the governor would select 3 or 5 or whatever will be the number. Now, that is how the governor has his power, but not monetarily. There is no money involved and no exchange of funds in these types of self-generating revenue boards and commissions. Therefore, the governor will get to know these people better. He will be closer to the blue ribbon people and will know them better and these are the people that the governor should have direct contact with. I do not feel that an intermediary between the governor and these types of board members should exist. It would represent to me bureaucratic bungling, and this to me is unnecessary. At the present time, these members, when they have a problem, can go directly to the governor and they should be rewarded for their positions which they hold at no expense to the state to at least see the governor. My legislators back home tell me that there's all the difference in the world between an elected and an appointed official. When they write for you or for me, to an elected official, then they get an answer immediately. They are taken care of promptly. I assure you legislators appreciate it. In the other hand, if a man is appointed, frequently the problems that may arise whether it be in the plumbing or the radio or sanitation or medical division, are buried in the bureaucratic process and somewhere along the line the hierarchy man has pushed it aside because perhaps the governor wanted it that way or otherwise. I would like to feel that our government is strong by virtue of the fact that he is reaching the strongest members of the state in any given field, and I think this will be maintained if you will pass this floor amendment which says "and boards, commissions and agencies which operate solely on self-generating funds". I urge you to accept this floor amendment.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

Questions

Mr. DeBlieux Dr. Weiss, you made a statement that kind of intrigued me a little bit and that's the right of an appointed official to see the governor. Do you think that every person that the governor appoints to office has the right for an appointment with him?

Mr. Weiss No, absolutely not, Senator DeBlieux

Mr. DeBlieux Well, I just wanted to clear that up because that seemed what you indicated in your remarks.

Mr. Weiss Not at all.

Mr. Stovall Dr. Weiss, don't many of the decisions by these different boards affect the people...the welfare of the people of the state of Louisiana?

Mr. Weiss The state's authority is supreme, Rev. Stovall, and I think that the state is responsible in any action of any board that exists.

Mr. Stovall And because they are, should they not be under direct state supervision in some administrative channel?

Mr. Weiss Absolutely not, and the reason I say that is that these boards are specialists in their own fields. If the funeral directors don't know more about funerals, I don't know who does, and they are the ones who are responsible for licensing the funeral directors in a given area. Now, the governor or the legislature may take action, certainly, but they are the boards that qualify these individuals and are expected to know more about it than anyone else.

Mr. Stovall But the decisions that they make do affect the people of Louisiana?

Mr. Weiss Of course, they do.

Mr. Duval Dr. Weiss, you've been talking about professional boards, but don't you know that your amendment says "self-generating funds". It doesn't mean professional boards, and are you aware, sir, that there are certain boards that are self-generating and are not professional boards such as the milk marketing, the structural pest control and levee districts just as a few examples. Are you aware of that, sir?

Mr. Weiss The levee districts I've checked on, and I do not believe that's correct, but I do understand the milk commission may be, the insurance rating bureau may be and the public employees board may be. But these are still self-generating revenue boards and I think they're entitled to be separate and apart from any bureaucratic process which is necessary if the governor is to have a strong hand on these.

Mr. Duval You do understand that these are subdivisions of the state and state agencies, don't you?

Mr. Weiss No, anything created by the legislature, or course, is a state agency. That's correct.

Mr. Duval But, I happen to know that levee districts are self-generating, but you don't know that, is that correct?

Mr. Weiss It's my understanding that they are not, and I'd appreciate a researcher's comment, Mr. Flory, and I know that I haven't spoken to anyone but Mr. Flory. It was his understanding that they are not. If someone knows otherwise, I'd appreciate their comments.

Mr. Mire Did you know, doctor, that the Lafourche Levee Board is absolutely today operating on self-generated funds, 100%, with an abundance of those funds?

Mr. Weiss It has a legislative act...well, then, that's controlled by the legislature, certainly.

Mr. Landrum Doctor, could you tell what happens if the amendment should fail to the barbers and beauticians?

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

Mr. Weiss Right, I'm glad you asked that Delegate Landrum, because that's my concern... that if this is not included in the constitution, what I envision is a very simple thing... that is the barbers, cosmetologists, beauticians and the like will fit under one of these 20 department heads wherever they may be and whatever assortment and variety of assignments they may have... to whichever department head they are placed under. For example, the master H.E.W. scheme that is now in effect for the state of Louisiana has one man over this tremendous agency... some 300 agencies spending a half a billion dollars in the state at this time. My understanding would be that he would or she would or whatever the agency... cosmetologist would do would be to report to this department head before they could reach the governor for any type of minor or major problem which they may have. This to me is very disturbing because these people are selected as the most outstanding people in any given field. I think they should have the governor's ear, and I think that the governor would want to have their ear, and this is something that would enhance the governor's position.

Further Discussion

Mr. Gravel Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in opposition to the amendment. There's nothing in the present constitution, nor has there ever appeared to have been any need for the kind of protection that Dr. Weiss's amendment suggests should be in the new constitution. But even pre-empting that, if there is any necessity to give consideration to the boards and commissions that operate with self-generating funds, they can be handled under Section 19 of the proposal. Now, I'm not suggesting that it should be handled at all, but I do believe that this particular amendment should not be considered at this time and in this particular part of the constitution and I move that you reject the amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Conroy I am opposed to this amendment. I think I addressed myself to the basic substance of this amendment previously with Mr. Flory's prior amendment, but I do want to raise one additional question, not so much just for this amendment, but for in general, that some of us who worked on the Committee on Revenue, Finance and Taxation will recognize. That's the use of the phrase in here of an agency that operates on self-generating funds. We had a great deal of difficulty with this concept in the Revenue, Finance and Taxation Committee. I think that anybody who studies it would have the same sort of concern about exactly what you're describing and what self-generating funds are. This alone is subject to a great deal of dispute as to when funds are really self-generated and when an agency is operating solely on such self-generating funds. We managed to get through our proposal on public finance without having to use that phrase, and I think that anybody who does attempt to use it in this constitution will find that it will cause you nothing but headaches in trying to define what you're doing, and for that reason alone, I would urge you to reject this amendment.

[Previous question adjured.]

Mr. Henry You have the right to close, Dr. Weiss. Do you pass? Dr. Weiss?

The gentleman passes.

Oh. Excuse me, I thought somebody said that you had passed.

I guess that I was just hoping that.

Closing

Mr. Weiss I'm with you in spirit, and we'll soon leave, but I must make it clear that I'm glad to hear that there's confusion in the term "self-generating revenue" other than in my mind. But nonetheless, that's the best term I could figure out here and I think that the Supreme Court has, as Chairman Henry has said, will make a large number of decisions, and certainly the levee board will not be included in these types of boards, commissions and agencies which are so border lined, and so constructed that there's a tremendous amount of legislative responsibility. I would like to see the floor amendment adopted, and I think that we are doing the people back home a real service, particularly the list of organizations that I read a moment ago. Perhaps, this should have been introduced at another section, but I'm introducing it here for you to be familiar with it in the event it is introduced later in another section. I would ask you to adopt it and hope that we can dispose of this properly now.

Question

Mr. Stinson Dr. Weiss, were you not a little shocked at Mr. Gravel objecting to this because it's not in that old antiquated constitution? Hadn't the argument always been we're supposed to plan for the future? That's what you're doing, isn't it?

Mr. Weiss I am, and as a matter of fact, it's somewhat unwritten in the present constitution. There's no appreciable change, as I understand it, over what is currently going on.

[Amendment rejected: 21-82. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Kelly, et al.], page 1, line 17, at the end of the line and after the word "state" delete the remainder of the line. Amendment No. 2, page 1, line 18, at the beginning of the line, delete the portion of the word "eral".

Explanation

Mr. Deshotels Ladies and gentlemen, I want to apologize to you for coming up with this at this time, but we had this on the table since yesterday. For some reason or the other, it was overlooked when we were going over Section A. It involves taking the attorney general out of the executive article and putting him back into the judiciary article where he has been in our past constitutions and is presently in our 1921 constitution. Our rules that we adopted in January provided for the Committee on the Judiciary having jurisdiction over the Department of Justice, and we, in our committee, reported to the convention and had the Department of Justice worked on. Now the committee proposal is with our committee now. We have not reported it back to the convention, we're still working on this particular section. There are some very valid reasons besides having been assigned a particular subject. One is that our attorney general is not a judicial officer. All of you are concerned and realize you have been acquainted with the many opinions that our attorney general gives throughout the course of his term of office. The attorney general has an interrelationship with our D.A.s and any article or any provision containing the powers and functions of the attorney general have to be considered along with your powers and interests of your district attorneys and also of your courts. He is a quasi-judicial officer, and for that reason, I would ask that he be considered in due course, and that our Committee on Judiciary be allowed to continue its consideration and deliberation on this particular office, and provide you with a good proposal with a continuity between the attorney general and the workings that he had. I might add in closing that the attorney general specifically requested that he be included in the judicial article if he were not given an article separate and apart from the executive and judicial. His second choice was to be in the judicial article, and gentlemen and ladies, quite frankly, we have enough to consider in our executive article—without lapsing over into judicial matters which is what we'd be doing if we'd try and consider this at this time. So, for that reason, I'd respectfully request that you vote for this amendment, allow our committee to continue its work, and present you a good proposal that has been considered and which I hope will create less debate once it is brought onto the floor.

24th Days Proceedings—August 2, 1973

Further Discussion

Mr. Perez Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I know that we're all very tired, I know that usually at this time of day we all are pretty much accustomed to throw those red lights and say "let's get out of here", but this is a very serious and a very important matter. The only way that the attorney general of this state can be intelligently acted upon by this convention is to consider the responsibilities and duties of the district attorney, of the courts and of the grand jury. As a member of the Coordinating Committee, I know that the responsibility of the attorney general was designated to the Judiciary Committee. As a member of that Coordinating Committee I cannot recall any question being raised with respect to the executive department, considering the particular office that is the office of attorney general. I know that we're all very tired and I want to be brief, but please, let's remember that the attorney general belongs as it is in the present constitution, under the judiciary article and should be considered there so that we can have an intelligent consideration of all of the offices in the judiciary department together. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Gravel Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, it's very difficult for me to imagine how anyone can successfully contend that the attorney general of the state of Louisiana belongs in the Judiciary article. He does not perform any judicial functions, whatsoever. He is the chief legal officer of the executive branch of state government, and that's what he is. Now, what his duties and functions may be will be prescribed by this convention. It may be what has been suggested by the Committee on the Executive Department, it may be varied in the manner suggested by the Committee on the Judiciary Department, but let's don't complicate the problem. If we are going to devise and confect an orderly constitution with proper classifications and designations, let's begin by doing so here and now. I just suggest to you that there is no way that it can be successfully contended that the attorney general of the state of Louisiana performs any judicial functions. He's the lawyer for the state. Sometimes a good lawyer and perhaps, sometimes, a lawyer that's not so good, but nevertheless that's what he is. He represents the executive branch. He doesn't represent the legislative branch. He doesn't, under any circumstances, represent the judiciary. I submit to you that it would be a grave mistake to take him out of the executive department, which is what this amendment proposes to do.

Questions

Mr. Perez Mr. Gravel, isn't it correct that under the present constitution the attorney general is under Article VII which is the judiciary department?

Mr. Gravel It is and I don't think that we should perpetuate that error.

Mr. Perez Isn't it also true that under all proposals that the functions of the district attorney would be to institute, prosecute and intervene in legal actions before the courts?

Mr. Gravel Under what proposal?

Mr. Perez Under all proposals, that is both the executive proposal and the proposal by the judiciary.

Mr. Gravel I don't think that the executive department yet has any provisions specifically with respect to the district attorneys.

Mr. Perez Well, I refer you to Section 8 on page 7 which provides that the attorney general shall have the authority to institute, prosecute or intervene in any legal action or other proceeding, civil or criminal, exercise supervision over the district attorneys, and supersede any attorney representing the state in any civil or criminal proceedings so therefore I ask you, isn't the attorney general performing strictly a judicial function under those circumstances.

Mr. Gravel Absolutely not. He's performing a function as an officer in the executive branch of government, as the chief legal officer of the executive branch. He doesn't make any decisions. Mr. Perez, that are binding at all. His opinions, the courts have held, are only advisory and suggestive, just as much so as a good brief by an attorney representing a litigant in a law suit. He does not perform any judicial function.

Mr. Avant Mr. Gravel, isn't it a fact that under the present constitution and also under the rules of this convention that the Judiciary Committee and the judicial article in the present constitution contain not only the attorney general and the district attorneys, but the sheriffs, the clerk of court and the coroner?

Mr. Gravel I think it is correct that the sheriffs, clerks of court and others were considered by some committee other than the Executive Committee, if that's what your question was.

Mr. Avant And are not those officers presently in the judicial article of the present constitution?

Mr. Gravel I think that they are. I don't think, personally, that the district attorney should be under the judicial article, because neither do they perform judicial functions.

Mr. Avant Don't all of those officers, though, have to be considered together because their functions are so interrelated?

Mr. Gravel Not necessarily, no, sir. Absolutely not. Keep this in mind, too, and let me expand upon my response to you, that we're talking about the structuring here and that's all we're doing in Section 1 of the executive branch of government. Certainly there are going to be some areas of the constitution where you may have to refer in one article to positions, to jobs, or to functions that may be considered to some extent in another article. My position is simply that basically the office of attorney general belongs in the executive department of state government.

Mr. De Blieux Haven't the United States attorneys always been considered a part of the executive department of government.

Mr. Gravel As far as I know, they have. Thank you very much.

Mr. Poynter Committee Proposal No. 4, introduced by Delegate Stagg, Chairman on behalf of the Committee on the Executive Department, and Delegates Abraham, Alexander, Arnette, Brien, Denney, Duval, Gravel, Stovall and Tapper

A proposal providing for the executive branch of government, for the filling of vacancies in certain public offices, and with respect to dual officeholding, a code of ethics, and impeachment.

Personal Privilege

Mr. Lebreton Mr. Chairman, members of the convention, I thought you might be interested in an article in News and Review, which is the old municipal review magazine. The City of Alabama has just completed their study of a constitution. That's a neighboring state, I thought you would be interested. It's very short, it will take me maybe two or three minutes to cover it. I think it's interesting. I might observe before I give you the report of how similar we have been and how we have differed in some parts, and that's what makes a bunch of good 50 states, I imagine. Alabama Commission reports on constitution. In its final report the Alabama Constitutional Revision Commission provided guidelines around which the proposals were framed. These basic principles include, one, preservation and stressing certain aspects of the Bill of Rights.

Two, preservation of the separation of powers. Three, assurance of flexibility for the legislature in dealing with changing conditions. Four, recognition of increased responsibilities of the governor as head of the administrative branch should be improved by adequate authority. Five, responsibility and authority of the courts must be restated and strengthened. Six, local government should be granted more authority flexibility and initiative. Seven, excessive provisions and language should be omitted so that the document provides clearly the basic principles and the structure of state and local government. Highlights of articles pertaining to rights, divisions of power, representation, the executive, the legislature, the judiciary and local government follows. We skip over that and go to where we just finished, Provision No. 3, legislative powers. In Alabama they call that the distribution of powers of government, and you can see how close our report came to theirs. Regular annual sessions and an annual salary for legislators to be determined by an independent compensation commission are recommended. Several changes to the proposed procedure in enacting legislation and local and general laws are clarified. Next, the legislature will be required to adopt a code of ethics governing conflict of interest for the legislators, state employees and nonjudicial offices. Representation, the state will be divided into House and Senate districts of compact and contiguous territories with a ratio of members of legislature to population, as nearly equal as practical. A reapportionment commission is established and directed to report after each decennial census. The commissions plan would become law if the legislature fails to act on it in the next session. Last, provision of a plan by the State Supreme Court is authorized on the petition of any voter. And then it gets us to the executive department where we are right now. The one paragraph is, and I quote: 'Executive Department. Nonpolicy making offices are eliminated from constitutional status leaving only the governor, the lieutenant governor and the attorney general. Age and residency requirements are reduced for these offices.' Thank you.

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter Status of the proposal to date is that the convention has adopted Section 1 relative to compensation.

Next section, Section 2, Qualifications. Section 2, Paragraph A. To be eligible for any statewide elective office, a person must have attained the age of 25 years by the date of his election and be a citizen of the United States and of this state for at least 5 years immediately preceding the date of his election. He shall hold no other public office except by virtue of his office during his tenure in office.

B. The attorney general shall have been admitted to the practice of law in this state for at least the five years immediately preceding his election.

Explanation

Mr. Stagg Mr. Chairman, delegates to the convention, in the present constitution, the age requirement for governor has a minimum age requirement of 30 years of age and that he must be a resident of this state for 10 years. The Committee on the Executive Department felt that it was in line with public utilities and 1973 as against 1972 consideration that the age for statewide officers be reduced to 25 years and that 5 years of state residence was sufficient a qualification for such office. There is in this provision, also, a provision, also, a provision that the statewide elected officers shall hold no other public office during his tenure in office except those that he might hold ex officio. I understand, Mr. Chairman, that there is an amendment being circulated concerning the Section B, and I'll withhold any comments on that until such time as we get to it. At this point in time, Mr. Chairman, I move adoption of Section 2.

Recess

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. William Lamb, et al.]. Page 1, delete lines 27 through 30 in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

Section 2, Paragraph A. To be eligible for any statewide elective office, a person must be an elector who has reached the age of 18 years at the time of qualification for office and must be a citizen of the United States and of this state for 5 years.

Amendment No. 2. On page 1, at the beginning of line 31, delete the following words: "preceding the date of his election."

Explanation

Mr. Tobias Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this amendment purely and simply reduces the age at which a person can qualify for running for the state elected offices. I am aware that a lot of people believe that an 18 year old or a 19 year old or a 20 year old is unqualified to run for this office, or these offices. As a practical matter, and I urge the practicality of it, strenuously, how many 18 year olds do you or any of you know that can raise the funds or have the political power to run for this office, these offices? How many people do you actually know that can do this? It is not fair that any elector should be allowed to participate in every election of this state to the maximum extent that he ought to? At 18 years old, I probably would have been unqualified to run for a statewide elected office. I might even venture to say that I'm 25 now, and I would probably consider myself unqualified to run for a statewide office at this time. But it's fair, it's fair to everyone. I move it's adoption, Mr. Chairman.

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Questions

Mr. Lanier Max, I notice here you say that "has reached the age of 18 years at the time of qualification for office." Do you mean by that at the time of qualification for candidacy for office or at the time that they are sworn in to office?

Mr. Tobias At the time of qualification. This means the same thing as we did in the provision for the legislature.

Mr. Lanier Well, we found we had a little bug in that.

Mr. Tobias No, this is the language that we track. It takes care of the situation. You have to be 18 when you qualify.

Mr. Lanier Is that qualify for candidacy?

Mr. Tobias Qualify for candidacy, yes sir.

Mr. Bel Mr. Tobias, only one thing worries me. I'm not against 18 year olds, but what about the attorney general?

Mr. Tobias Well, as a practical matter, as you are aware, the attorney...the qualifications for attorney general include that he must have practiced law for 5 years. Since he must have practiced law for 5 years, and as a practical matter, you're not going to find very many 18 year olds who have practiced law for 5 years.

Mr. Lanier I was just wondering, he'd have to be 13 when he graduated.

Mr. Tobias Yes, that would be very difficult.

Mr. Smith Mr. Tobias, do you think someone just 18 years old is mature enough to run for office?

Mr. Tobias Yes, sir, some, not all.

Mr. Smith Well, I mean anybody could run though, at 18 couldn't they?

Mr. Tobias Yes, sir.

Mr. Smith They were just recently given the vote. Is that right?

Mr. Tobias Correct.

Mr. Smith Why do you think they are mature enough at that age? Why do you think that particular arbitrary age makes them mature enough to run for an office?

Mr. Tobias Well, my firm belief is that every individual at the age of 18 is mature enough to run for that office. But if a person is mature enough to run for that office, the people will know who he or she is.

Mr. Smith Well, usually at that age they are still under their parents and hadn't finished high school. Isn't that correct?

Mr. Tobias Many of them, yes, sir.

Mr. Smith Still you think they should be able to run for office?

Mr. Tobias Definitely.

Mr. Jenkins Mr. Tobias, do you think that all 40 year olds are mature enough to run for statewide office?

Mr. Tobias I know of several that are not.

Mrs. Warren Mr. Tobias, as a champion for the youth, and I say that I am, I'm wondering what qualifications an 18 year old would have for being governor? You mentioned, this is kind of a twofold question: that an 18 year old might not have the financial funds to run statewide. There might be an 18 year old who has it, who has gotten some kind of an inheritance who gives him the money to run for anything that he wants to run for. In that event, if he is elected, what situation would our state be in if he wasn't qualified?

Mr. Tobias Well, the point is that if the voters want to elect an 18 year old statewide elected official, they ought to be allowed that right. It would have to be a fantastic young person running for the office to actually succeed in getting elected, as a practical matter.

Mrs. Warren I agree with you that it would be an exception for one to do that, yet I'm still concerned with knowing the juvenile situation as it is today, I'm just wondering if we would have one.

Mr. Guarisco Mr. Tobias, you said the reason you didn't think that you were possibly qualified to be governor even though you were 25 but you thought that you'd have to be for it because it's fair. I want to ask you, fair to whom?

Mr. Tobias Fair to all young people below the age of 25 in this state and qualified electors.

Mr. Guarisco Do you think it's fair to the rest of the citizens of the state to have someone who just got out of his pampers being the governor of the state?

Mr. Tobias They have the right to either vote for them or not to vote for them.

Mr. Guarisco Do you think that the framers of the United States Constitution were unfair when they made the president reach the age of 35 and Senators reach the age of 30 and a Representative reach the age of 25 before he can hold those offices?

Mr. Tobias The United States Constitution was drafted in the late 18th century. I think times have changed considerably and a lot of young people are better educated than some of their children at that time.

Mr. Guarisco Don't you think that you are misconstruing education and knowledge for experience and judgment and good sense?

Mr. Tobias No.

Mr. Jack Mr. Tobias, I'm afraid of this happening and I want to see if you don't think it. I've done checking, like I always do, and so many 18 year olds are still in high school. Now if they are cut for these offices, don't you think that's going to cause a lot of high school dropouts? How about it?

Mr. Tobias I don't think it will cause a lot of high school dropouts.

Mr. Jack All right, now one other one. I did some further checking and I find there are a whole lot of boys and girls not quite 17 that are smarter than the 18 year olds. Now don't you think you ought to lower this to catch those 16, not quite 17, or you're being unfair to juveniles? How about that?

Mr. Tobias Well, I've often maintained, I'll answer you this way. I am the youth representative in this convention and 4 year olds are young people. Now what do 4 year olds want? Do they want toy stamps instead of food stamps? I don't know.

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Mr. Jack I don't know, there are some of them smart, might want to be governor.

Mr. Rachal Mr. Tobias, I'm getting a little confused by the questions, and I'd like to ask, aren't you simply trying to make it possible for the people of the state to select whom they want to represent them in various offices?

Mr. Tobias Precisely.

Mr. Rachal And aren't you trying to also make it possible for those people who are able to be taken away an go to fight and risk their lives for their country, that upon registering to vote that they can also run for office in this state?

Mr. Tobias That is included, yes, sir.

Mr. Rachal So then, aren't you, in fact, making a provision which will give wide as possible selection on the part of the people?

Mr. Tobias I am trying to.

Mr. Rachal Then the questions of their qualifications to run otherwise is irrelevant.

Mr. Tobias Generally, yes, sir.

Mr. Landrum Mr. Tobias, don't you think that... would you believe that there are people in the school system today who have finished college at the age of 18?

Mr. Tobias There are a few, I would gather.

Mr. Landrum So you did say exceptionally someone who would be an exceptional young person that the people would elect. Right?

Mr. Tobias Yes sir.

Mr. Champagne Mr. Tobias, aren't you simply saying that the people deserve what or who they elect. Is that right?

Mr. Tobias Yes sir.

Further Discussion

Mrs. Taylor Mr. Chairman, and delegates, I certainly rise to support this amendment and I certainly hope that you will give deep consideration to lowering the age to 18 year olds. I've heard many questions asked that certainly seem to be maybe making fun of the seriousness of the amendment. Just think back awhile to how many 18 year olds who were actually sent to overseas to protect you here in these United States. Think in terms of many of them who for the first time had a gun placed in their hands to represent you, to protect you, and now they're coming back home thinking they're coming back to a democratic system where there would be no discrimination against any person. If you allow them to register at the age of 18, if you allow them to go abroad for your protection at the age of 18, then I would think that you would be broad-minded enough to give them the opportunity that other persons have who are electors, and that is if it is their desire to run as governor of the state of Louisiana to give them that opportunity also. I would think we are talking about a government of the people. The people will make the final decision as to whether they want an 18 year old or not. We're not saying that 18 year olds are going to control the state of Louisiana. The final decision lies with the people, and all we're asking that we have no forms of discrimination. In this instance we're talking about discrimination against 18 year olds. I urge your support of the amendment.

Questions

Mr. Jenkins Mrs. Taylor, did you know that Alexander the Great conquered the world by the time he was 21?

Mrs. Taylor I'd believe it if you say so, Mr. Jenkins.

Mr. Bergeron Mrs. Taylor, to be a voting citizen in the state of Louisiana, what is the age requirement?

Mrs. Taylor I would think it is 18.

Mr. Bergeron It's 18. And under our proposed constitution, what did we set the age requirement for the House of Representatives?

Mrs. Taylor 18.

Mr. Bergeron And for the Senate?

Mrs. Taylor 18 also.

Mr. Weiss Delegate Taylor, to put things in perspective, did you know what the life expectancy was at the time of Alexander the Great? Twenty-five years of age.

Mrs. Taylor Thank you for that information.

Mr. Ullo Mrs. Taylor, since we are talking about Alexander the Great, do you know that Albert Einstein, his theory of relativity was written at the age of 27?

Mrs. Taylor Well, since we are going back into history, I wish somebody would say something about Booker T. Washington.

Mr. Stovall Mrs. Taylor, would you ask Delegate Jenkins if it's not true that Alexander the Great was 33 when he made his military victory, and not 21? Right.

Mr. Henry What did he die from, Reverend Stovall? You know that too.

Further Discussion

Mr. Abraham Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I have to rise in opposition to this amendment. We are talking about letting 18 year olds run for offices and a proponent of this particular amendment stated that it's very unlikely that such a thing would happen. Well, if it's so unlikely that it could happen, why should we worry about putting this thing in the constitution in this manner? If we're going to leave the final decision to the people, well then let's leave the final decision of the people on everything and don't worry about a constitution. Let them write the constitution and the laws and things like that. We're here to try to decide what is going to be best for this state in order to present it to the people. And in good conscience we must try to come up with a recommendation that is sound. Now, an 18 year old might inherit the money to run for office. An 18 year old could possibly get elected and we all seem to agree that an 18 year old does not have the experience necessary to handle some of these jobs. You don't really need to have the experience in order to run for the office and you just might get elected. Now we've lowered the requirement from 30 years old to 25 years old. I don't think we ought to go any lower than that. I'm real concerned about this. I'm not in favor of precluding youth from everything, but I think that we're going to have to be sensible about this and reasonable about it. I just don't see how lowering the requirement to 18 years is a reasonable thing to put before the people of this state. I strongly urge the rejection of this amendment and the adoption of the committee proposal as it is written. Thank you.

Questions

Mr. Stag Mr. Abraham, in his presentation Mr. Tobias posed the question: "How many 18 year olds can raise the funds for statewide office?" Is it not true that all he needs is the filing fee in order to get his name on the ballot?

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Mr. Abraham That's correct. All he needs to do is get a filing fee.

Mr. Duval Mr. Abraham, I agree with your position but I just wanted to ask you if you know that Mozart was 4 years old when he wrote his first opus?

Mr. Abraham No, I'm not a musician.

Mr. Alexander Mr. Abraham, have you ever known anyone to be elected who just filed and went home?

Mr. Abraham Yes.

Mr. Alexander Governor?

Mr. Abraham Not for governor, no, but I've known people to be elected who just filed and went home.

Mr. Alexander No, that was the question.

Mr. Rachal Mr. Abraham, I'm a little disturbed by what I consider your lack of confidence in the integrity of the people. Are you suggesting, on the other hand, that all of the persons elected by the people have been top flight, efficient, and carrying out of their responsibilities once elected?

Mr. Abraham I don't mean to infer and I do not infer that I have any lack of confidence in the people. The think that I'm saying is that we are charged here with presenting a document to the people that makes some sense. I think that's our responsibility to do it and I think that this thing here of lowering this requirement to 18 is really not what it should be.

Mr. Rachal Yes, but my only question, I was just concerned that you were denying the people the opportunity to make that selection. Don't you think that you are suggesting to the people that they don't have the wisdom to select whom should represent them and we have to say that we're going to restrict whom we allow to run for office?

Mr. Abraham By your line or reasoning we are denying the people the right to make the laws. They are electing Representatives to make the laws for them and they are trusting these Representatives to make the laws for them. By the same token, the people are trusting us to come up with a recommendation for this constitution.

Mr. Rachal All right, well aren't we also allowing 18 year olds to run to be Representatives to make those laws? I was just wondering why you think we need to restrict the age of those who run for statewide office.

Mr. E. J. Landry Mr. Abraham, by the same reasoning that you're giving, would you be willing to consider placing restrictions on the other end of the spectrum? A lot of us are much older, some of us are senile and there is a danger that the people of the state of Louisiana shouldn't allow older people, like myself and some of the other people in the convention. Would you believe that we ought to consider placing restrictions on the...Some of the older people are not able to function as well as you middle-aged people.

Mr. Abraham Well, Mr. Landry, since you are on the other end of that spectrum there, I will be more than willing to listen to your recommendations on that.

Mr. E. J. Landry Well, I'm going to ask you to...

Mr. Abraham I've been on the lower end of the spectrum so I know what I thought when I was 18, but I'm not at your level yet so I'll have to go along with how you feel on some of these things.

Further Discussion

Mr. J. Jackson Mr. Chairman, delegates to the convention, statements have been made up here to imply that when you have youth involved, the possibility of youth obtaining office, that that increases the potential for misrepresentation in office, the kinds of, I guess, unaccepted behavior in office. I would like to suggest to you that all you would have to do is to turn on today's television and you will see that most of the participants in some of the hearings and some of the discussions about national and state government are nowhere near the age of 18 years of age. It seems to me that if we talk about providing the age of 18 to run for the office of House of Representative and Senate which are those bodies that are going to be passing laws that effect every part of this state, it seems to me that young people at the age of 18 or somewhere close by ought to be able to hold those offices. If we are going to create them through the legislature and if someone is 18 and they create that office it seems to me that they ought to, if the people so desire to elect them, be able to hold that office. I think that the arguments presented here are some of the same arguments that we heard when we discussed the legislative proposal. The same merits that were fostered and which this convention adopted are the same grounds. I don't think that there's too much difference between an office of being a Senator and someone being able to hold statewide office because both offices have statewide implications. I would suggest to you that it would be a contradiction if in this executive proposal we maintain the age of 25 but yet in the legislative proposal we say that the age is 18. I think we open the door for some kind of constitutional court action against this proposed constitution. I think that all the merits have long been stated about the adoption of the minimum age and for those reasons I would ask that you adopt it. Mr. Chairman, if there are no more speakers, I would move the previous question.

Further Discussion

I think this is a serious matter. I think we are charged with the responsibility of setting some standards in this constitution with regard to a statewide office. Now, I think there is a marked distinction between a statewide elected office and a legislator. If you adopt the logic that is behind this amendment, well then when you vote on the attorney general it would be incumbent upon you if you adopt that logic to say that if someone graduates from law school that year, that the public should have the right...it is their decision. Don't put the five-year requirement on if they want a lawyer right out of law school to go ahead and have him as an attorney general. I think that the same thing applies with the statewide office. I think that we ought to require at least some degree of age and experience and having lived in the State of Louisiana and for that reason I would be in favor of retaining the proposal as proposed by the Executive Committee. Thank you very much.

Questions

Mr. Sutherland Pat, isn't it a fact that if you are elected a member of the legislature, you are one of many?

Mr. Juneau That is correct.

Mr. Sutherland But if you are the governor or lieutenant governor of the state, you have sole responsibility, and isn't there a difference between the qualifications for that office as opposed to a legislator?

Mr. Juneau Not only is that true, but there is a marked difference between the number of people you are representing and the locality you are representing.

Mr. Toomy Pat, are you aware of the age that was recommended by the student constitutional convention on this matter?

Mr. Juneau As I recall, their recommendation was age thirty.

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Mr. J. Jackson Would you admit to the fact that the legislature, particularly in this new proposed constitution, will be passing laws of statewide concern, and so therefore, in the future we are passing and will be passing laws of statewide concern, that the possibility that they may be eighteen years old would indicate that we could very well have an eighteen year old hold an office of statewide concern?

Mr. Juneau My answer would be this, Mr. Jackson. I think that a legislator is responsible to a very small area and he is responsible to a very limited number of people. A person elected to a statewide office is accountable to sixty-four parishes and over two million people.

Mr. J. Jackson Would you also admit to the fact -- would you think that if the people of the State of Louisiana want to elect someone eighteen years of age, that they should have that right and it should not be prohibited by this constitution? In fact, when we talk about this constitution then we are really talking about us representing people here.

Mr. Juneau My answer to the question is that I think that the age twenty-five is a reasonable standard on a statewide level and if that is true, Mr. Jackson, you would vote for the proposition that an attorney general the people should elect when he immediately gets out of law school, they should make that determination. It is the same logic in my opinion.

Mrs. Taylor Would you agree that there is no place for discrimination in the constitution?

Mr. Juneau That is correct. In further response to the question, I am in favor of reasonable standards which apply to all people regardless of race, creed, color or religion.

Further Discussion

Mr. Roy Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I rise in opposition to this particular amendment. I do not think that this is an issue of just a legislative type position but some executive background that is needed which comes only with experience. I am reminded of what Mark Twain said when talking about his old man, about what these eighteen year-olds say. Mark Twain said, "When I was fourteen years old, my old man was so dumb that I could hardly stand to be around him, but when I became twenty-one years I was amazed to find out how much he had learned in just seven years." Now that is exactly what we are talking about here. If we reduce the age down to sixteen years of age to vote, then we are going to have some of these proponents saying that since you can vote at sixteen, you ought to be governor at sixteen. If we reduce it down to fourteen, the same reasoning of change. Well, that is illogical. To a man gets experience, and I have learned a world of stuff here and I happen to be a good bit older than twenty-five years of age, and I do not think that I would be competent to serve as governor of this state with the little experience that I have had. I think we need a minimum age of some sort and I am opposed to this amendment and I hope you vote it down and if there are no other speakers I move the previous question.

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered.]

Closing

Mr. Tobias I am going to be very brief. In my opinion, the reasons against this amendment advanced before you today are nothing but a lot of bull.

[Amendment rejected. 60-71. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1. [27 Mr. Abraham], page 1, line 29... this is the Abraham set of amendments... immediately after the word "his" and before the word "and" delete the word "election" and insert in lieu thereof the words "qualification for office". The amendment has been changed to read "qualification as a candidate for office".

Amendment No. 2, page 1, line 31, immediately after the word "his" and before the period, delete the word "election" and insert in lieu thereof the words "qualification as a candidate for office".

Explanation

Mr. Abraham This is more or less a technical amendment simply to bring this article in agreement with what we have already approved in the Legislative Article. If you will remember in the Legislative Article, on Section 4 B, we defined or we spelled out there that the person shall be eligible for membership in the legislature unless at the time of qualification for office he shall have been a resident, etc. So this is simply to bring this in agreement with that one. In view of the fact of the question that Mr. Poynter brought up a while ago when we were talking about candidacy for office, I inserted the words, "as a candidate" so there would be no doubt as to what was meant by as to when this person would qualify. So I urge your adoption of this amendment.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendments adopted. 86-3. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendments proposed by Delegate Fayard as follows: Amendment No. 1, on page 1, line 29, immediately after the word "election" and before the word "and" insert a comma and the words "an elector".

Explanation

Mr. Fayard Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I have discussed this with the Chairman of the Executive Department Committee and several of its members who agree that this is mainly a technical amendment which would conform the qualifications section on statewide elected officials with Section 4 of the proposal submitted by the Legislative Committee with reference to legislators. If you will read on page 3 of your first enrollment copy of the Legislative Committee Proposal, provides that every person who is an elector and has reached the age of eighteen years at the time of qualification for office shall be eligible for membership in the legislature. What this amendment does is merely conform the Executive Branch Proposal with the Proposal of the Legislative Committee. It requires for a person to be an elector in addition to the requirements set out by the committee. It makes no other change. It does not mean that a person who is eighteen years of age can run for an office. It still requires him to have attained the age of twenty-five, still requires him to be a citizen of the United States, and of the state, for at least five years, merely to conform it with the Legislative Proposal and requires him to be an elector. I would consider it a technical amendment and move for its favorable adoption. Any questions?

Questions

Mr. Denny Mr. Fayard, in view of the adoption of Mr. Abraham's amendment, which deletes the word "election" would you not agree that this has to be technically changed?

Mr. Fayard Exactly, it should be after the word "office". Instead of after the word "election".

Mr. Conroy Would you just read the first couple of lines or three lines as it would read with you amendment because my copy may be wrong but I can't quite fit it in grammatically.

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Mr. Fayard "To be eligible for any statewide elective office, a person must have attained the age of twenty-five years by the date of his qualification for office, be an elector, and be a citizen of the United States of the state for at least five years."

Mr. Weiss Delegate Fayard, isn't this redundant in that you have to be an elector to qualify for office?

Mr. Fayard It does not say that in this article.

Dr. Weiss But that is the requirement for qualification of office that you be an elector, isn't that true?

Mr. Fayard Not necessarily.

Dr. Weiss Well how can you run for office if you are not an elector?

Mr. Fayard By reading Section 2 as presently proposed you could be.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Fayard], page 1, line 28, immediately after the word "office" added by Floor Amendment No. 1, proposed by Mr. Abraham, and adopted by the Convention August 3, 1973, insert the following: ", be an elector". So it would make that first sentence read as follows: "To be eligible for any statewide elective office, a person must have attained the age of twenty-five years by the date of his...using the Abraham language...qualification as a candidate for office, be an elector and be a citizen, etc."

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Gravel], page 2, line 2, after the words "general shall" and before the words "have been", insert the following: "be the state's chief legal officer, head the Department of Justice, and shall".

Explanation

Mr. Gravel Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, on yesterday this convention voted in effect that the functions and qualifications, that is the functions, duties, powers and responsibilities of the attorney general's office, should be considered at the time that the Judiciary Article is going to be considered in order that such functions, powers, duties and responsibilities could be interrelated with the powers and duties and responsibilities of the sheriff, district attorney, etc. I think most of the delegates agree that the office of attorney general really properly belongs in the executive branch of state government. There are a number of provisions in the article dealing with the executive branch that relate to the attorney general. Such as, the succession article, the article that deals with statewide elections of some of the public officials. We have had several discussions with those who felt very strongly that the functions and duties should be considered by the Judiciary department. I think that most agree that the actual office itself should be retained in the Executive Article. Now the purpose of this amendment is to see that that is done. Section B, then would be the vehicle by which ultimately Style and Drafting could very frankly replace the attorney general into Section A. Now let me make this point very clear. The Committee on the Executive Department unanimously agrees and commits to this convention that it will support a motion to delete from consideration by the convention Section B of this article at the time that this article is being considered and further agrees that it will commit itself to a consideration of that article at the time that the convention considers the article on the Judiciary, so that later on and not while we are considering the Executive Department we will go into the question of the functions and the powers, duties and responsibilities of the attorney general.

[Previous question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted: 96-5. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Denberry], page 2, line 3, immediately after the words "leave the" and before the word "years" delete the word "five" and insert the word "four".

Explanation

Mr. Denberry The purpose of this amendment is that to be eligible for a statewide elective office according to Section 2 A, a person must have attained the age of twenty-five years. Under 2 B, it says the attorney general must have been admitted to the practice of law for at least five years immediately preceding his election. However, an attorney is not admitted to practice under the present setup until he is at least twenty-one years of age. Therefore, he would be required to be twenty-six years old at the time of his qualification for office. It was my feeling although the balance of the Executive Committee did not agree with me, I mean the balance of the Committee on the Executive Branch did not agree with me, that there was no reason to have the attorney general twenty-six years old at the date of his qualification and have other statewide elective office twenty-five years old. That is the purpose of the amendment.

Questions

Mr. Stinson The present constitution I believe it says "will have practiced law five years". I believe that when it is written here, it is "admitted to the bar for five", why was the change?

Mr. Denberry The change was made in view of the language that was originally suggested in the draft of the Judiciary Committee which has used this language for the determination of eligibility for judicial office.

Mr. Stinson But wasn't the intention for putting that requirement was experience and not the fact that he was a member of the bar and never practiced. Aren't you defeating the purpose of the experience requirement?

Mr. Denberry Well you have this problem, Delegate Stinson, and that is suppose the judge, an elected judge, decides to run for attorney general. He will not have practiced law for at least the four or five years immediately preceding his election because he would have been a member of the judiciary.

Mr. Stinson Well you could have taken care of that or said served in the judiciary five years, couldn't you, instead of throwing the entire experience out of the window?

Mr. Denberry Well you are quite correct in one sense; on the other sense, suppose a man has served as a clerk for one or more of the courts in this state for a couple of years immediately preceding his election. It was the opinion at the time that this language was drafted that admission to practice was the best test.

[Previous question ordered. Amendments rejected: 36-62. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 96-5. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Mr. Poynter Section 3. Election and Terms
Section 3, Paragraph A. The governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, attorney general, and treasurer, shall each be elected for a term of four years by the electors of the state at the time and place of voting for members of the legislature. A person who has served as governor for more than one-half terms in two consecutive terms, shall not be elected governor for the next succeeding term.

Paragraph B. The returns of the election of such officials shall be transmitted to and promulgated by the secretary of state in a manner as shall be provided by statute. The returns of the election of a greater number of votes for each office shall be declared elected.

Paragraph C. If two or more persons have an equal and the highest number of votes for an office, they shall draw lots to determine the winner. The secretary of state shall arrange for the drawing of the lots within ten days after the election. Results are promulgated and the decision as to the winner shall be final and conclusive.

Paragraph D. The term of office of each elected official shall begin at noon on the second Monday in March next following the election.

Paragraph E. No official shall be elected statewide except as provided by this constitution.

Explanation

Mr. Stagg Mr. Chairman and delegates, in this section, the purpose of the Committee on the Executive Branch was to delineate those who should be elected statewide, they would be elected, and how the returns would be promulgated. We retained the four years for office. We changed the re-election of an incumbent governor provision slightly by requiring a person who occupies the job of governor for more than one and one-half terms cannot be then a successor in office. In other words if the governor should die in office and the lieutenant governor would take over for two years or more of the term of the deceased governor and then be elected for one additional term, then he is out on the street. In the promulgation of returns this ties in very closely with the sections provision or the suggestion by the Committee on the Executive Branch that the governor and the other statewide officials take office in adjacent days at the opening of the legislative session. By providing that the elections be promulgated by the secretary of state, rather than by the legislature, we advance the date of the promulgation of the results and have them routinely done by the office of the secretary of state. There is a brand new provision in our law that we are suggesting in our constitutional provision in Committee Proposal No. 4, and that is in the unlikely event that there is a tie vote for one of the statewide elected officers, that the tie be settled by the drawing of lots. Now this is not exactly new in our law because we do it in local levels of government and it is contained in the revised statutes that tie in such elections at local levels be settled by the drawing of lots. This is now being provided in order to cut down on the excessive number of elections and the problems which would be presented by the unlikely event of a tie vote.

In Section D, it reads that the term of office of each elected official shall begin at noon on the second Monday in March, next following the election. The reengrossed legislative article provides that the new legislature shall also be sworn in at that time.

The final section is that no other official shall be elected statewide except as provided in this constitution and that is a new provision.

I will be glad, Mr. Chairman, to answer any questions on the committee's proposal.

Questions

Mr. Avant Mr. Stagg, I just want to make sure that I understand what the committee means by the phrase, "who has served as governor." It is my understanding that if the governor would leave the state for say thirty days as has happened on occasions that then the lieutenant governor would serve as governor in his absence or he would act as governor, and it is not my understanding that it is the intention of the committee that that type of service in the office of governor would be included in this phrase. I just want to make sure what the intent of the committee is.

Mr. Stagg Mr. Avant, I think that's probably settled by our position in Section 14 and 15 on vacancy where we determine and we define what a vacancy is and the lieutenant governor would not serve as governor. He would serve as acting governor if the governor was out of the state but he would not serve as governor.

Mr. Reeves Mr. Stagg, would you not agree that we have fought the battle of elected officials yesterday, and to repeat the battle in Section 3 A would be just simply repetitious? Would you and your committee just agree to go along with what the convention decided yesterday on the elected officials other than possibly the superintendent of education which we may not have decided, but the others I think we did?

Mr. Stagg Mr. Reeves, I am not a die-hard by nature and I don't wish unnecessarily to prolong the business of this convention. I think we proceed into this article and the amendments will be presented, you will find some amendments that are sponsored by the committee, whether that meets fully with your approval, we'll just have to submit that to the floor. But the committee does realize that we spent quite a bit of time yesterday talking about the commissioner of agriculture, whether he should be a constitutional officer was the question at that time, not whether he should be elected or not. The commissioner of insurance whether he should be constitutional in nature but not elected because that's here in this provision. When we come to the superintendent of education I think it was the feeling of those who spoke yesterday that there's not a settled agreement among the delegates to this convention as to how that job ought to be handled until we come to the governance of education in a further proceedings before this convention, as perhaps that office ought not to be included. Then we came to Mr. Kelly's commissioner of elections which is a new office in this state. It takes on the meanings and the import of the custodian of voting machines but it may have other duties assigned by the delegates. If those duties include the full-scale management of elections in this state then it would be for the protection of the people that he be a statewide elected official and not the appointee of any governor because that power... There will be an amendment which you will probably agree with sponsored by members of the Executive Committee, Mr. Reeves.

Mr. Burns Mr. Stagg, I just wanted to see if I understood Section C. Assuming there were four men running for governor and two of the high men both received the same vote, does that mean there would be no second primary and if the two high men would draw cards or straws or flip a coin or what have you?

Mr. Stagg This would be in a primary rather than in the general election? It is possible that in the general election, Mr. Burns, that there could be three candidates. One representing each of the major parties and maybe an independent as was in the case of the race for Senator last year. If there was a dead heat, then those who had the equal... the two or more persons, it could be three people... who had an equal number of votes and if that's the case then they would draw lots to see who served in the office.

Mr. Burns You're speaking of general elections. I was asking you about primary elections.

Mr. Stagg Well, it just says higher number of votes for an office. That, in my opinion, would apply to any election, sir.

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Mr. Burns In other words...

Mr. Stagg Along with statewide elected officials.

Mr. Burns That would in effect deny the people to have a second primary in an election for governor if the two highest men received the same number of votes?

Mr. Stagg No, that's not the case, Mr. Burns. This would still be a further election if it happened in the first primary.

Mr. Burns I see.

Mr. Champagne I had two questions, Mr. Stagg. As I read Section E, "no official shall be elected statewide" this would mean that if the legislature decided twenty years from now... if they wanted to create a new position and have it elected they could not. They would have to go back and amend the constitution.

Mr. Stagg That's absolutely correct.

Mr. Champagne On Section C I have some concern about that also. Could this not be settled in statutes rather than in the constitution?

Mr. Stagg It could be, Mr. Champagne, we felt that in the election of statewide officers that the provisions for the unlikely event of a tie vote could be done by lots as it is done in the election for lesser officials. It's not a new provision to our law. I'm sorry I don't have the section of the Revised Statutes here to read it to you, but we have in the statutes considered this for lower elections.

Mr. O'Neill Mr. Stagg, was it the intent of the committee that there shall be no appeal after the drawing of lots?

Mr. Stagg No, sir. That's not the case. Any decision or any contested election... say there was in the final vote a draw or tie, but one of the candidates for election claimed there was fraud in his election or absentee ballots were jiggled with, that man has a perfect right to go to court and contest the results of the election. That provision is not changed one whit. We believe that a man ought to have his day in court and this provision does not preclude that.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Asseff], on page 2, line 7, immediately after the comma which follows the word "general" and before the word "and" insert the following: "Commissioner of Agriculture, Commissioner of Elections, Commissioner of Insurance,"

[45 amendments added to the amendment.]

Explanation

Mr. Asseff I have no desire to prolong the discussion. In voting on Section 1 it is my opinion you also voted on Section 3, as the issue became election versus appointment rather than what it really was. That is why I have submitted this amendment which will add the Commissioner of Agriculture, the Commissioner of Elections and the Commissioner of Insurance to the list of officers who will be elected statewide. In my opinion the convention has spoken and it has spoken wisely. The decision was an acceptable compromise to me and I have the permission of the Chairman of the Committee on the Executive Department to say that the committee now joins me in urging you to approve this amendment.

Questions

Mr. O'Neill Dr. Asseff, the Superintendent of Education has been left out of this Section 3. Now, we've included him in Section 1, and the motion has been laid on the table, am I correct?

Mr. Asseff Bear your pardon? The motion has been made, what?

Mr. O'Neill The Superintendent of Education, he has been listed as an officer of the executive branch in Section 1 of this executive department proposal.

Mr. Asseff Mr. O'Neill, mine adds these three offices. It does not preclude adding anyone else that the convention wishes to add. As I understand, someone will present the Superintendent of Education separately. Others may be presented. I am simply asking the convention to add these three offices which we approved on Thursday to the list. You may add others if you wish with convention approval.

Mr. O'Neill Well, Dr. Asseff, I just wanted to clarify it so everyone knew what we were doing.

Mr. Asseff Good, thank you.

Mrs. Warren Mr. Asseff?

Mr. Asseff Yes, ma'am.

Mrs. Warren I wasn't around the table when you all were discussing putting your amendments together, and I'm just wondering why the Superintendent of Education was left off of this particular amendment when we could have adopted it all at the same time and saved some time. Why wouldn't you put the Superintendent of Education's amendment first and then let this come behind?

Mr. Asseff The reason is, that there was great objection at the time, and I feel that the education people are divided. I feel that there is general unanimity on these three offices, consequently I decided to submit these three and leave to another delegate who will submit his immediately after mine, Mrs. Warren, and that is why I did it. I had no objections, really.

Mr. Lanier Dr. Asseff, I'm noticing further down here in Section 3, in the B part, it says that the returns of the election of such officials shall be transmitted to and promulgated by the secretary of state in a manner as shall be provided by statute. Do you know if it is intended that this function shall be taken away from the secretary of state and given to the Commission of Elections?

Mr. Asseff Mr. Lanier, I have no idea what this convention will do. It is a decision the convention must make. The sole issue before you at this time is do you wish to add three officers to the list of officers to be elected statewide. The other may be changed in the discretion of the convention. It is not at issue on this point. I mean, you are incorrect that a decision will have to be made on it, but that will come up later.

Mr. Fulco You have a later amendment... after adding Commissioner of Agriculture, Commissioner of Elections and Commissioner of Insurance... you have another amendment that is going to delete the Commissioner of Insurance. What...

Mr. Asseff I don't have another one, and if I do, Frank, I withdraw it. I didn't think I had one, Frank, but if I did, I withdrew it.

Mr. Fulco Well, you have because I've got the copies.

Mr. Asseff Well then, consider it withdrawn. If I may, Mr. Chairman.

Further Discussion

Mr. Munson Mr. Chairman and members of the convention, I will be brief. I don't know of anything that I can add that wasn't said yesterday when we voted on all three of these offices in regard to the Commissioner of Agriculture, which I spoke on yesterday. I would like to remind you again that the farmers of this state are unanimous, I believe, in their desire to have this an elective office. The farm organization that represents all farmers are unanimous in asking that this be done, and I would suggest to you today that let's vote and finish what we started yesterday with Section 1 and make it elective in Section 3. If there are any questions, I'll be glad to try to answer them. If not, I move the adoption of the amendment, and I would like to point out also since it was brought up a moment ago, when the next amendment comes up in regards to the Superintendent of Education, I intend to support that one also. Thank you.

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

Dr. Asseff I would waive the right to close except that I may have given the impression that all members of the executive committee agreed with me...two said they did not; I want to be certain, Mr. Chairman, that that is understood.

[Amendment adopted: 92-05. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Rayburn], in Amendment No. 1, proposed by Dr. Asseff and adopted by the convention on August 3, 1973, after the word "insurance" insert the following: "Superintendent of Education".

Explanation

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this is rather a simple amendment. A very short amendment. It just adds the words "Superintendent of Education". I think we've made a tremendous step in the right direction by adopting the amendment that we just adopted and I hope that we will adopt the one that you're fixing to vote on in a few moments. The people that have talked to me... the majority of them that understand education far better than I do... feel that the state superintendent should be elected. The vast majority of the teachers and the parents in the various school circles that I have discussed this with share my feelings that our superintendent should be elected. I, personally, am for electing all officers. As I have said before, a public office in my opinion is a public trust. I have heard the argument made that you might get a person that didn't know anything about education. I don't think our people have quite got that stupid, yet. I certainly hope they haven't and if they had had a lot of requirements on a man to serve in the legislature educationally, I would have never made it, because I have no formal education. I wish I did have, but some of the smart people I've seen have seen some of the hardest people that I've ever seen to understand. You want to see a real dilly, you see an over-educated smart fellow, and you'll see one. You'll see a dilly, dilly, and he knows he's a dilly. A lot of other people don't, but he does, and I say to you that I do not believe you can do wrong by letting the people of this state speak on who they want to operate the educational program of our state. I move the adoption of the amendment.

Questions

Mr. Flory Senator Rayburn, would you have any objection to then opening the machine and let some of us others be co-authors of your resolution?

Mr. Rayburn Not at all, and I suggest, Mr. Chairman, that the machine be opened at this time, if nobody has objection.

[⇒ author's added to the amendment.]

Mr. Bollinger Senator, is it not true that if your amendment is defeated the convention could decide in the educational proposal to elect the Superintendent of Education?

Mr. Rayburn You mean... they could do what, now?

Mr. Bollinger Is it not true that if this amendment is defeated, and would you not place the name Superintendent of Education in the elected offices of the executive department, couldn't the convention decide that they want to elect the Superintendent of Education, but decide at the time we discuss the article of education?

Mr. Rayburn Sure, they could, if they so desire to put it there, but if they are going to decide it then, I don't see any reason why they shouldn't decide it now, Mr. Bollinger.

Mr. Bollinger Well, don't you think that the composition of the Board of Education will have some effect on the decision of the Superintendent will be elected or appointed?

Mr. Rayburn Not necessarily so, I've seen the boards when they all had a big honeymoon, and I've seen them when they were like me and my wife... didn't get along too good at times.

Mr. Stinson Senator Rayburn, isn't it a fact that we're trying to simplify it. So, why not put them all in one provision. We're trying to keep around looking all through the constitution to find things. We're just going to bury it back away from the word statewide... that's just going to interfere with the people interpreting the constitution, isn't it?

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Stinson, I certainly feel that way, and I had an amendment that had them all, just like they were passed on yesterday to make constitutional officers out of them, but some of them desired to take the first three first and then take the one separate, so that's what we're doing. Certainly, I think the best place to put the Superintendent of Education is right where we're putting the other elected officials, and since we've already said it would be a constitutional office, I think it should be placed in this particular category.

Mr. Stinson The next question... you referred to your intelligence... don't you think it's lucky for the people that you're not smarter than you already are?

Mr. Rayburn I wouldn't necessarily say that, and I wouldn't say I'm smart. I will say this... since the people have placed their trust in me, I've tried to apply myself and I realize my limitations. I think as much as anybody. Sometimes, I believe, when you realize your limitations, Mr. Stinson, you learn a little more. Those people that I've had trouble with are the ones that don't realize their limitations.

Mr. Arnette Senator, how is your local superintendent of education in your home parish selected?

Mr. Rayburn They are appointed.

Mr. Arnette They are appointed by whom?

Mr. Rayburn By the local school board.

Mr. Arnette Does it work pretty well?

Mr. Rayburn Well, it works fairly well, yes sir. As far as I know it works well, but let me say this, Mr. Arnette in further an answer to your question. That's a very small area. The people are in on given areas there, but the superintendent of the education department statewide is a large area; he represents a tremendous amount of people more than the local superintendent.

Mr. Burns It's gotten a little stale now, but if you carried out the question that Mr. Bollinger asked you about if your amendment were defeated wouldn't the constitutional convention still have other methods of providing for the appointment of a Superintendent of Education. That would take away the right of the people to elect their own superintendent, would it not?

Mr. Rayburn It certainly would, Mr. Burns, and let me say this before I leave this microphone. I guess one reason for a little cool on appointments, I happen to know a little bit how some of those appointments come about. I followed several governors on a statewide tour speaking through every parish and every hook and nook and crook of this state, and I've overheard a few things. It's nice to say have independence but you know mostly how these people get appointed? They guess right and they get a commitment right. That's how they get appointed if you really want to know, and you're looking at the man who knows. They guess who's going to win the election and they get the commitment from him prior to the election in most all cases. That's why I say, "let the people decide a post" in my opinion that is as important as the Superintendent of Education. I move the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. Denny Delegate Rayburn, as I recall during the discussions on the legislative section, you explained to us that we should be very flexible and leave everything as flexible as possible for the legislature. Now, don't you think that you're making it inflexible for us, as delegates, by stating this now instead of letting us see how the entire education section is set up.

Mr. Rayburn No sir, Mr. Denny. What I'm trying to do is leave this important position to the people, and let them decide it. That's all I've tried to do...let the people vote on it.

Mr. Abraham Mr. Rayburn, I believe you answered Mr. Stinson's question a while ago that you felt that all of these offices ought to be together so you wouldn't have to look through the constitution to decide which ones are going to be elective offices, is that correct?

Mr. Rayburn Well, I think if you're going to have constitutional offices, yes it would be my opinion that they should all be together.

Mr. Abraham Then, why do you vote yesterday to take the attorney general out of this section?

Mr. Rayburn Why did I vote to take him...because he appeared before the committee and asked to be taken out, I was told. I don't want to see anybody where they don't want to be.

Mr. Abraham Yes, but you said that you felt that they ought to all be right here.

Mr. Rayburn That's right, but he said that he didn't want to be there. He didn't want to be in the executive department, so the committee members told me, Mr. Abraham, and I certainly wouldn't want to put you somewhere where you said you didn't want to be.

Further Discussion

Mr. Bollinger Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, with 52 co-authors I rather hesitate to rise in opposition to this amendment. However, I've spoken to many delegates who are in favor of an elected Superintendent if and only if the Board is appointed and they are in favor of an appointed Superintendent if and only if the Board is elected. I agree with Senator Rayburn that appointments are bad in some cases, and I agree the means that they are made are bad. However, what most of these delegates advocate is that the Board who is chosen by the people, elect the Superintendent, which in effect is the people's choice. I think our present setup in education has problems because we have an elected Board and an elected Superintendent. By the adoption of this amendment you've forced me to vote against an elected Board. If any delegate is in favor of an elected Board and in favor of the Board appointing a Superintendent by adopting this you are forcing him to make a decision when it doesn't have to be made, now. Why can't the convention decide at the proper time when it sees how the governing body of education is construed. It doesn't have to be in this article. It's not making it any briefer...the constitution...it won't make it any briefer. For these reasons, I move the rejection of the amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Burson I am not here to speak against, fellow delegates, the idea of electing the State Superintendent. I simply want to suggest to you that I know has been in the thoughts of many people here. That it might well be wiser to wait until we can see what the whole structure of education in the state will be, when we consider the education article to make this decision. My own personal feeling, which of course is based on my own experience as a local school member, is that the system of having an elected Board appoint the Superintendent has worked well on the local level. I'm not sure that it would work that well on the state level. But I would like to consider and I'd like to have the benefit of the Education Committee's opinions and reasons for their recommendations before making that final decision. I have felt that one of the big problems, as far as support for public education is concerned, is that public education on a state level at least is too divorced from the people. My own personal preference at this time before getting into it in depth would be to see some sort of State Board of Education elected from single member districts. I feel that would give the people more contact with state policy in regard to public education. However, I understand that the committee proposal, as it presently stands, is a little different from that. But there are all sorts of arguments that bear on this problem and it seems to me simply in the end, that it's premature to make your decision at this time, which if we make it to elect him now, as far as I'm concerned, are foreclosing the possibility of doing a lot of things with regard to the State Board of Education later on. I just, from my own experience, cannot imagine on the local level if we had an elected Superintendent and it seems to me that the problems between having an elected Board and an elected Superintendent both responsible for the same domain are almost insurmountable. Now, maybe, it's been suggested by some people if you're going to elect a Superintendent, you want to do away with the Board. Well, I don't like that idea either. But, there are about 8 or 9 different configurations of government for education in this state that I've seen suggested by people who have a lot of knowledge on the problem. I would simply like to have the benefit of all of their thoughts before making this decision. I urge you to consider in this regard, that simply because we reject that amendment now, we are not foreclosing the possibility of coming back later on and deciding that after all we do want to elect a Superintendent.

Questions

Mr. Weiss Delegate Burson, are you saying that delegates who vote against the inclusion of the Superintendent of Education at this time in this article or this section are not necessarily voting against an elected Superintendent of Education?

Mr. Burson Certainly not, I'm going to vote against the amendment, and I'm not saying at all that I might not eventually come back and vote for an elected Superintendent.

Mr. Planchard Jack, my question is this. Do you feel that we're precluding ourselves from every coming back to this subject?

Mr. Burson No, because, as I read the article that we're voting on now, it says no other officer shall be elected except that's provided in this constitution. So, we could certainly come back in the constitution and provide later on that we were going to elect him.

Mr. Planchard Well, don't you think that the people should vote their feelings at this time and then if we change our minds after the Education Committee has made their report; don't you feel that we can come back at that time and do something about it?

Mr. Burson That's possible, except if we vote final approval on this article and lay it on the table, it'll take two-thirds to come back and change that decision.

Mr. Planchard We didn't do that to the legislative article, did we?

Mr. Burson Right.

Mr. Planchard Do you think that we will do it to this one?

Mr. Burson Well, I hope not for the reason that you're indicating.

Further Discussion

Mr. DeBlieux Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I didn't come to the mike yesterday. I thought possibly we might see what kind of progress we'd make if I didn't, particularly in view of the Chairman's statistics. I couldn't get anybody to check them for me so I started keeping my own. I've found out as a result of my sitting at my seat that there were a lot of mistakes made.

Mr. Henry Thank God for Senator DeBlieux.

Mr. DeBlieux So, I came to the conclusion that I just as well make a mistake up here at the mike than stay at my seat and make them. So, I've concluded that I have my say right or wrong and even at this particular time even though it may not be to much avail. But, there's one thing that I want to point out to the delegates right now. You should not have in my opinion an elected Board of Education and an elected Superintendent, because each one of those particular groups can tell the other one, you go to one, stay put. We don't have to follow your instructions to do what you want us to do. You have no real leadership or management in the situation. So, I particularly implore you at this particular time, let's not put this elected office into this particular section until we find out what the educational article will be. Then, if we should decide that we want an elected Superintendent, we certainly can go back to the Style and Drafting and insert that officer...we decide he should be elected...into this particular section. It is absolutely, as stated by Mr. Bollinger and also by the last speaker, premature to adopt this amendment at this particular time. I think that we've done that to several of the articles or several of the sections that we've previously adopted. You're going to find out when this document is finally concluded that if we don't change some of those we have made some errors. I'm just asking you at this particular time let's don't make another one. Therefore, I oppose the adoption of the amendment at this particular time.

Further Discussion

Mr. Abraham The point has been well made by Mr. Burson and Mr. DeBlieux. Ladies and gentlemen I would ask you please let's don't decide this issue now. Let's not prejudice the position of the committee that's dealing with this particular problem. Let's wait until they've had a chance to come back to us with a recommendation, and then, if we decide then that we want an elected Superintendent of Education, then it can be inserted back into this particular article here. So, I ask you please, let's hold off on this particular decision until the committee has had a chance to report to us. And Senator Rayburn, I might remind you also, that the present Superintendent of Education says he does not want to be elected. So please let's don't put that person in a position where he doesn't want to be.

[Presiding question answered. Amendment adopted by yeas 47, nays 34. Roll call not taken.]

Recess

[Roll call: 84 delegates present out of 90 present.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Schmitt], on page 2, line 7, after the word and punctuation "attorney general," insert the following: "Commissioner of the office of consumer affairs."

Explanation

Mr. Schmitt What this amendment does is to attempt to create an elective office for consumer affairs. I had the opportunity to go around and speak to many of you with reference to the votes which you made yesterday and to attempt to explain my reasoning behind the position for supporting an independent office of consumer affairs. For too long in our state we have let the consumer take the back seat to the vested interests in the state of Louisiana. I believe it is time that this state must step forward and recognize the interest of the consumer and recognize the interest of the poor man in the state of Louisiana. I have spoken with many of the people who in the past have elected to represent the interest of the poor man, the small man in the state of Louisiana and one of them indicated that the reason he was opposed to it was because of the fact that he supported a short constitution and this just added more verbiage to the constitution. I don't feel that five extra years is not because of the fact that much difference in the length of this constitution. Further, I have spoken to people and they have said well, they don't believe that any other offices should be added to those which are elective already and I wanted to find out why. Their reasoning was well since these offices were in effect for the last thirty or fifty years that these offices should remain in effect, not because of the fact that they are doing a good job but because of the fact that it would be politically bad to go against these elective offices. I don't feel that this should be the ultimate consideration which we make during this convention. I feel that we must stand upon our convictions and move forward with a progressive constitution, one which looks past the problems which have occurred in the past and looks forward to meet the problems of the future. For many years in this state we have adopted the legal premise which has been that of the common law states of the United States, caveat emptor. I feel that we should step forward and eliminate this antiquated philosophy and look towards the protection of those amongst us who are the consumers rather than the producers in our society. Yesterday, I brought out some examples to you of what I thought were abuses which have existed in the past. These are only a small number of examples and these abuses occur not only in the cities but occur in the rural areas also. These abuses occur in the office of the commissioner of agriculture might not have jurisdiction and would not have jurisdiction. We need someone to protect the interests of the small farmer when they are dealing with these department stores and when they are dealing with the different types of retail and other type of outlets. We need someone who can intervene prior to the necessity of a court room litigation. One of my reasons for supporting this office is that I feel that there are many problems which should not get to the court room. These are problems which for the benefit of our community and the benefit of our society could be better worked out through the means of an impartial arbitrator or through the necessity of a particular office of consumer affairs. In my practice of law, I have had many people come into my office and complain of certain situations of which there were legal remedies but the legal remedies were more expensive than the results which they could obtain in these cases. These are the kind of situations in which an impartial third party could intervene and more or less moderate the situation and attempt to work out a reasonable and just settlement between the parties. This would lead to a greater confidence of the consumer in business and also greater confidence of the consumer in our government and in our society. There have been in the recent past the outrage which the consumers have projected with reference to things and actions which were done to them by corporate interests which they felt did not have their best interest at heart. I feel that by establishing this office we will take one step forward in the problem of making this constitution a constitution which does not look towards the past only but recognizes that there shall be problems in the future, problems which we can see right now and problems which we can eliminate in the future. I therefore request your favorable consideration of this amendment.

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Questions

Mr. Velazquez Mr. Schmitt, would you say that almost every citizen of Louisiana is a consumer to one extent or another?

Mr. Schmitt I think everyone is.

Mr. Velazquez Wouldn't you say that even the small farmer is in many ways a consumer of many products of the system?

Mr. Schmitt A small farmer perhaps might be one of the ones who could be taken advantage of more easily than a lot of other people insofar as they would be apt to go out of the farming area to deal with the city slickers to get an automobile or to get a truck or to get some other type of merchandise which they might not have the ability to be able to adequately defend themselves.

Mr. Velazquez Don't you believe that virtually all of the major agricultural equipment used by the farms of all sizes in Louisiana are made outside of this state and if they break down or you have problems of warranty, you have problems dealing with interstate commerce rather than dealing with intra state so that you would need the additional protection even if you had a commissioner of agriculture to take care of these matters?

Mr. Schmitt Yes, I agree with you.

Mr. Roemer You know I supported your amendment yesterday for a commissioner of consumer affairs. I am worried about a couple of things though and I would like to ask you some questions about it. Would this commissioner be able to deal with such things as we see now on our highways like billboards that say "Been cheated lately?" That sort of business. Is that what this guy does?

Mr. Schmitt The commissioner of consumer affairs would be responsible for protecting the interests of the consumer throughout the state of Louisiana and it also would be responsible in the areas with reference to fair advertisement and in these areas also, yes.

Mr. Roemer I don't understand and perhaps you can answer for me, but where does this kind of billboard stuff come from "Been cheated lately?" which seems to me reflects on business throughout the state unfairly. Is that the kind of thing that this director or commissioner will be doing?

Mr. Schmitt I think this is one of the things that should not be done. Something like that. Because I think that instills distrust in our community in the business people and I believe that in order to have a progressive society the businessmen must be able to work with the consumer and I feel that this offers tremendous problems in the future.

Mr. Roemer The first question, if I understand your argument yesterday about the commissioner of agriculture, you said that in effect he would be elected by the urban centers. Is that right?

Mr. Schmitt That is correct.

Mr. Roemer And therefore would be more representative of the consumer than of the farmer. Is that correct?

Mr. Schmitt What I said is that there was a chance of it. However, if you adopt this amendment then the urban people would have the right to have their representative in the form of the office of consumer affairs and he would also be representing the agricultural area, and the agricultural area would have the opportunity of having their person in that particular field.

Mr. Roemer Well you don't share my fear then that by selecting a commissioner of consumer protective interest or whatever you call it then would just be duplicating the role of the commissioner of agriculture and in effect that this guy concentrate on putting up billboards like "Been cheated lately?" you know, "When's the last time you beat your wife?" that sort of campaign.

Mr. Schmitt I don't think there would be a duplication of effort, no.

Mr. Burns What would this be? A kind of Ralph Nader of Louisiana?

Mr. Schmitt I don't know if it would be a Ralph Nader of Louisiana but it would be a person who could look out for your interest as well as that of every other consumer in the state of Louisiana.

Mr. J. Jackson In the justification for maintaining the commissioner of agriculture, one of the arguments did you know was that the farming business or the agriculture business brings in approximately two billion dollars, or is in effect one of the largest industries within the state. Would you say that the amount of money that consumers spend would be at least, it would seem to me would you say that the amount of money that consumers spend in the state would represent the total economy of our state?

Mr. Schmitt It would probably represent more than the total economy of the state insofar as a lot of times money is spent more than one time.

Point of Order

Mr. Thompson Yesterday, we discussed this thing pretty thoroughly and it was pretty soundly defeated. Are we going to take everything in another section and bring them back up again? If we do, we are going to be here an awful long time.

Mr. Henry Well, I would hope we are not, Mr. Thompson. But there again there is no mechanics for prohibiting this.

Point of Order

Mr. Champagne Point of order. All I want to say is that we have done that before so I can't see depriving one individual and doing it for another.

[Previous question ordered. Amendment rejected. Motion to reconsider denied.]

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [By Mr. Poynter & Mr. Wall], on page 2, line 7, after the word and punctuation "attorney general" insert the following: "Speaker of the House of Representatives".

Mr. Henry Senator Kilpatrick sends up this amendment? I would love to hear this explained.

Explanation

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Mr. Kilpatrick Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I would like to ask the Speaker to come down to the podium at this time, to the mike, and while he is coming down I would like to tell you it is my pleasure to serve in the thirty-fifth senatorial district. Speaker Henry is the representative in this district. I was going to be a proponent of this measure. I think it is an awfully good measure. We have a hundred and thirty-two delegates. I think it is a good measure and thirty-two delegates decided, there are a couple who are absent or sick, and after thinking about this and being a proponent I have just about decided I would have to be an opponent because after serving in the House I don't believe he could go on and win in the House and he would have to run Statewide. But I am going to give Representative Henry at this time a copy of the bill and let him know that we all did sign the bill, the first official document for you sir, and it says that the Speaker of the House of Representatives shall run statewide, is what it means.

Vice Chairman Roy in the Chair

Mr. Henry You are out of order Mr. Stovall. This is my convention.

Now let me make one thing perfectly clear. I have tried and tired again to explain this to you people, and my own senator does not surprise me at all. I have introduced a proposal for a rules change which I think will be applied. I have points of information and points of order and this points out to me that what we need is a rule on points of ignorance, because you people, if you had read the rules and if you understood the mechanics of this convention by now, would know that this amendment is out of order. It should have gone in the legislative section so the amendment is withdrawn.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Delegates Fontenet, Jack, Smith, Lennox and Stinson send up amendments.

Amendment No. 1, on page 2, at the end of line 9, delete the words "a person" and delete lines 10, 11 and 12 in the entire and insert in lieu thereof the following: "no person shall be eligible as a candidate for nomination, election or reelection to the office of governor for the term immediately following the term for which he was elected as governor. However this provision shall not apply to the governor in office at the time of the adoption of this constitution who shall be subject to law in effect at the time of his election."

Explanation

Mr. Fontenet Mr. Acting Chairman, fellow delegates, this is the first floor amendment I come here with since we have been at this Constitution Convention since July. I think it is an important floor amendment. I have a couple of statements I would like to make in its behalf. The present constitution, Article V, Section 3, allows a person to run as governor for two terms. Then he can sit out one term and run again for two more terms. The possibility of sixteen years out of twenty years, you can have the same governor. The present constitution also allows the possibility of a lieutenant governor becoming governor the day after the governor takes office by a possible death of the governor or if the governor resigned. This could possibly lead to a lieutenant governor taking office, serving three years and three hundred and sixty-four days, then he could run for two terms. Or there is a possibility we could have the same governor for twelve years, less one day, straight. If you keep adding on these years you will also find that this same person could stay out four years and run for governor another eight years. A possible twenty years, less one day, out of twenty-four years. Or go a little bit further, he could stay out another four years and run for eight more, twenty-eight years, less one day, out of thirty-six years. This is what you have in the present constitution. Now, let's get to the committee's proposal, Section 3. This is how I interpret it. It starts off the same thing as the regular Constitution. You can run two terms, stay out a term and come back with two more, sixteen out of twenty years; stay out another term, come back for eight more, twenty-four years out of thirty-two. Now, this is where the change comes in in the committee proposal. If there is a lieutenant governor who takes office as governor due to death or resignation of the governor, it depends what half of the governor's term he takes office in. If he takes office in the first half of the governor's term then he can only run once. If he takes office in the second half of the governor's term he can run twice. What this is leading to is the possibility of a lieutenant governor stepping into the governor's shoes the day after the second half of the governor's term is over, serving two years, less one day, then a possible eight years straight. As I say, you continue this, let him stay out another four years and you have the possibility of a person being in office a total of eighteen years less one day out of twenty-two years. Stretch it a little further and you have a possibility, like I said this is all possible, of twenty-six years less one day out of thirty-four we could have the same governor. My mathematical calculations may be wrong, but I studied it and I don't think they are. Maybe somebody could find out where I added one or two numbers wrong. My examples under both the present constitution and the new proposal may be extreme cases and I would like to point out that this could possibly happen and as far as I am concerned I don't want the possibility to exist. My amendment cuts down the possibility of having a governor for such a long period of time. It limits the governor to one term. The only exception is that if the lieutenant governor takes office if the governor dies or resigns. After one term is over, if that is in the best interest of the state for the governor to stay out four years and then run again if he so wishes. This cuts out the possibility of having a governor for such a long period of time as I stated in my example. My amendment would allow a governor to be in office four years, stay out of office four years, be in office another four years and stay out another four, or a possibility of four out of eight, eight out of sixteen years he could be governor, twelve out of twenty-four, or sixteen out of thirty-two, you just keep on adding up the numbers. I know that the people changed the old constitutional article in 1966 to allow a governor to succeed himself. I don't want to get in an argument as to whether this was a good move or not at the time the people did it. I don't want to get into personalities of either the governor at that time or the governor we have now. I feel that the best interests of the state will be served if we amend the committee proposal to restrict a person from serving more than one elected term in succession. As you can see on my amendment, I have excluded the present governor from this rule because I feel that the law at the time of his election should apply to him. I don't think it would be right to cut him off now that he is in the office and may wish to run again. Therefore I urge your adoption of this amendment. If there are any questions, with my limited scope and experience I will attempt to answer them.

Questions

Mr. Abraham Mr. Fontenet, I have heard this expression used many times here in the last few days so I am going to ask it now. Shouldn't we let the people decide whether they want to vote for someone for twenty-eight years out of thirty-two?

Mr. Fontenet We are here today to write a constitution and the constitution, as I see it, is to protect the people. I think placing a limitation as I am proposing is a protection to the people.

Mrs. Warren Mr. Fontenet, have you had any people asking that you do this or that you don't do this? Anybody for or against it? Have you had anybody to make any suggestions at all?

Mr. Fontenet Anybody from where?

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Mrs. Warren Have any citizens contacted you to say that they were for this or against it?

Mr. Fontenot Sure. I have. Both ways.

Mrs. Warren Both ways. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Jack Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this problem came up a lot of times during the years I was in the House of Representatives. I am against a governor succeeding himself. If you will listen, I think I've got a little information from seeing over the years what has happened to governors not just succeeding themselves but where they were later governor. We are not discussing personalities but here is what history shows, my experience in observing. No matter how good the governor is, where the harm--let's assume the governor is just as good, personally, the second time as he was the first--it's the camp followers that I call. He has to put --and it is natural to put the same people back helping that he had the first time. It seems, why I don't know, that the second go round is not as honest as the first time. Maybe the camp followers have caught on but the second time governors have served, after serving the previous term, that is when the scandals have occurred. I have never been, to my knowledge, a supporter at all of a governor serving two consecutive terms. If I remember correctly, I always voted in favor of just serving one time. Now this amendment that I am on provides that in the case of the present governor--and it should be because when he ran for this office he knew you could run eight years---but he can run to succeed himself. After that, if it passes and it should pass, then you could elect Governor Wallace in Alabama, they wanted him again but they did not amend their constitution so he could succeed himself, they defeated that amendment then and they elected his wife Lurline. So, you won't run any risk there but with this on the books of a governor succeeding himself when the people are not getting a fair shake and the camp followers are the ones causing the trouble. So I ask you to go along with the amendment.

Questions

Mr. Flory Mr. Jack, if you trust the people why not let them elect a man as long as they see fit and see that he is doing a good job?

Mr. Jack Well the reason I'm for this amendment, Mr. Flory, is because of the people. The vast majority of the people that I have discussed this situation with are in accordance with this amendment. If I thought for one minute the people wanted it the other way, my name wouldn't be on this amendment. No siree, this is the people's amendment.

Mr. Silverberg Delegate Jack, which people are you talking about?

Mr. Jack I am talking about, naturally, the people that I have talked to and most of the people I have talked to are from my area. But, I do talk to people in other places.

Mr. Silverberg Don't you think for the record that we should be referring to the people of all of Louisiana? Because you are not speaking for the people of Lafourche Parish.

Mr. Jack I can't go around, you know that, and discuss it with everybody, but if Lafourche Parish will come to Wellborn Jack I will be glad to discuss it.

Ms. Zervigon You were talking about the governors who have been corrupt in their second consecutive terms. I was wondering how many governors like that we have had in this state.

Mr. Jack You are not phrasing your question right I wasn't talking about governors who were corrupt in their second term. I specifically used a new word, camp followers were crooked, not the governor. The governors were doing well and were fine men as far as I know. They were stabbed in the back by people who were in that office during the second term. Maybe they caught on, maybe they were born crooked, I don't know. But it is too important a thing, in my opinion...

Further Discussion

Mr. Stinson Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, the question has come up always when it was attempted in the legislature on this matter, why pick out only the governor? The only logical reason is that the governor in the state of Louisiana is the most important and above all the most powerful office holder. Just the fact of the appointment, what is done with his executive orders, and the governor can, I think as far as Louisiana, is more powerful than the president of the United States. At least it is comparable between the two positions. As Mr. Jack says, we are not accusing any governor of any thing unless it is the fact that he has been complacent and has been persuaded by the camp followers of that is what we are going to call them. This is such an important job, and no reflection against Governor Edwards because this doesn't apply to him, but it is said to think that in all Louisiana for eight years at a time we only have one person who possibly is qualified to be governor. I think there are a lot of people in Louisiana who are qualified to be governor. A lot of them who are qualified can not run because they can't raise from two to three to four or five million dollars to make the race, which it costs. Anyone who is governor with the prestige and appointive power and the favors that he can do for people, is like Secretariat running against a mule, with the mule reflecting against the horse, the mule to get the money, and certainly has an advantage over anyone else that might want to run for governor. It is almost closing the door on anyone else for a second term with a governor who has been even just a fair governor. With the contacts, powerful, rich contacts that he has made. Here at one time, I guess the philosophy has changed, if you weren't raised in poor circumstances you couldn't get elected but now it seems you almost have to be a millionaire to get elected. Of course the millionaires who run for governor don't spend their own money. They spend others' money and wherever there are large contributions, there has got to be something done in return. There are very few people who put up money for good government unless good government means that it is going to be good to me. Now, one of the best steps as far as an independent legislature is to have it so that the governor will not succeed himself. The governors are inclined to endorse and support those representatives who have been most favorable to them. If you have a representative who is consistently opposed him on a lot of things, he is on his enemy list and he is going to try to get rid of him when he goes in that second time. And the same thing I have found out, it is not only the senators and representatives who have opposed him but it is the independent senators and representatives who haven't been yes-men and yes-ladies to everything that they want. That is human nature and I don't think that the governor should be that powerful because when he does, that second term he is going to largely determine who will be the elected members of the legislature when he is elected the second term. As I say, the governor---you have the contacts, you've made them and done different favors for different people and naturally they are not going to contribute to someone else. You are almost freezing in a governor and making him a cinch for the second election. I think the number of years as pointed out by Mr. Fontenot, we have too many people in the state of Louisiana who are qualified to be governor to just have one governor, one governor. Everybody should have a fair chance and when the governor can succeed himself, no opponent that will run against him will have a fair equal starting chance in that race. So I would like to urge this without any reflection against Governor Edwards. I offered the same amendment, what I am attempting to do in this. I accepted it so that Governor McKeithen could run the second time and in the legislature it didn't pass. I am still for it. I think it will be a great advancement and I think if it is submitted to the people--and in fact if this is not adopted at this time, and we do have alternate propositions, I'm going at this time to attempt to do this because I believe that the people of Louisiana would rather have it that way. I would like to urge at this time, let's put it in here. We are not hurting anyone and I think it is helping an independent legislature and helping the people statewide in having better government. You know I think...

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Further Discussion

Mr. LeBreton. Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I don't believe it can be anything for a difference between north and south Louisiana, but I rise in favor of keeping the governor on a two-term basis, and hence against the amendment. I have felt that way for a long time, and I am going to get up here and speak this way because I think my legislative record will show that I have better than twelve years of trying to get our law so that the governor could succeed himself--any governor. My theory in this is very simple. I don't know of a better way to compare the business of this state than to big business. Any business that you would speak of doesn't say that their president can only be president for four years. It probably takes two years or more before the governor really knows what he is doing, his powers, his field, his ability to run the state, and to give him eight years, I think, is an investment. I think the state of Louisiana has an investment in a man who has had four years, who'll risk that experience to come back. I like to think that about myself as a legislator. We all know the joke, or the story of the congressman who goes to Washington for the first time, how long it takes him to get around, how long it takes him to find a few places and how to get from one place to another. Obviously, experience is what I am saying. It doesn't take very much judgment to realize that a man with experience can be of tremendous help as governor of this state. Other states have this. The United States has this. There is a lot of criteria for having two terms and I assume the only reason you limit it to two terms is so you don't have a monopoly of a man who can successfully have himself elected re-elected as governor any other reason. We have only tried it once and the second governor has a chance at it if he chooses to run again. Certainly we ought to not try to move it out now with the little experience that this state has with the two year term. I heard people yesterday get up here and talk about the different offices that this state should have, and I am going to mention the fact that people speak. Well I don't know that I can go along with what the people who said that yesterday but certainly the people of this state spoke on the two terms. I heard one member get up here and say that his people are against it. He may know something nobody else knows but the last vote on the two term governor was overwhelming so if you want to take what the people have said, then you will leave this be. I know of no reason to change it. I know of very few people who have asked to have it changed. And certainly there is a lot of merit to keep it going and I am on that side strongly. I would be glad to answer any questions.

Question

Mr. J. Jackson. Mr. LeBreton, is it not a fact that in all other statewide elective offices that there is no limit placed on the amount of terms that a candidate or an incumbent can seek?

Mr. LeBreton. You're absolutely correct, Jimmy.

Mr. J. Jackson. And wouldn't it seem to you that in the past I can understand the fear of some delegates in the government building empire, but wouldn't it seem that it would be reasonable that if we have unlimited terms in other statewide offices which have particularly the same significance that we ought to at least allow a governor to have the opportunity to run for two terms. If the voters decide that he was a bad governor, that he has ulterior motives, then they could very well not elect him for that second term.

Mr. LeBreton. I thoroughly agree with your analysis and certainly the people have the right to speak.

Mrs. Warren. Mr. LeBreton, how often has this come before the legislature to vote on and why did it come before it in the first place?

Mr. LeBreton. Well, I would say that I can remember back in the late fifties it came up for the first time that I can remember and maybe it was earlier than that. But I can remember sometime in the late fifties at least.

Mrs. Warren. And the people voted for it overwhelmingly?

Mr. LeBreton. Well, it only went to the people once and that was in...

Mrs. Warren. That is what I am trying to find out.

Mr. LeBreton. That is what I am trying to find out.

Mr. LeBreton. And it went overwhelmingly and that was in 1964, I guess, or 1963, in the early part of the sixties, I don't remember the exact year, and that is when it was overwhelming, about ten years ago.

Further Discussion

Mr. De Blieux. Mr. Acting Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I want to reiterate a few things to you I want you to take into consideration in considering this amendment. The first thing is that this puts restriction on the point that a person can offer himself as a candidate for governor of the state. There are only two elected offices in the state of Louisiana that I know are limited in the times that they can run for office--only two, the governor of the state of Louisiana and the mayor of the city of New Orleans. You don't impose that limitation on any other elected official in the state. Now, let me tell you this, the reason that we have the bad government that we have in the state of Louisiana sometimes, in my opinion, is because we can't reelect the governor any more than once or twice as we have just changed our constitution in 1966. What happens? When a governor takes office he starts out doing the job that he wants to do, he gets off on a good track and he is pretty popular the first couple of years. McKeithen was popular in his first term because the amendment allowing him to succeed himself was passed in 1961, just two years after he got into office. But owing to the latter part of the office, the department heads, the others who have received the special favor of being in office at all times, they start making and looking for positions with the next incoming administration, and let the state go to rot. That is what brings about the bad government we have. You take every progressive state in the union, they don't have a limitation upon the number of times the governor can succeed himself and it keeps the governor on his feet at all times. I have heard a number of speakers come to this table and say that you ought to trust the people yet you will not trust the people to decide whether or not they want to allow a man to stay in office or not. Now, how can you trust him in one category and not trust him in another? And I tell you this, if you are going to have a limitation in one office as to the number of times you ought to have it in all elected offices. Not just one, but all of them. Mr. Stinson mentions the appointments that the governor has. Now if you will just stop back and think, for every appointment he makes, he's got about ten or fifteen or twenty that want that same job. The appointments is one of the things that keeps the governor from getting reelected or makes him unpopular because he has a lot more people mad at him after he makes an appointment than he had before. They were all expecting to get the job and only one can get it. The other nine, ten or fifteen or nineteen are mad at him. That's not what gives the governor power. What gives the governor power is the favors he does for the architects who supported him, the engineers who supported him, the lawyers who expect to get the state funds, the insurance people who expect to make premiums and the part-time attorney jobs that can be handed out. Those are not the things you read about in the paper too much. But that is where the real power of the governor is insofar as election. The legislature has taken care of a lot of portions of those things. They have taken care of it insofar as the insurance. We have got a better administration of the insurance program of the state. It is not corrected in its entirety but we have gone a long way on it. We have taken care of the bank accounts by the investment of idle funds. That isn't what it used to be. I would just like to say that if you limit a governor in the time he can serve, unlike what Mr. Stinson stated you are not hurting anybody but the people. That is who you are hurting. You are really hurting the people, denying them the right and privilege of choosing their elected officials as they want. Which you have seen this has been gotten around to allow the people a choice as in Georgia and Texas, when they elected Mrs. Ferguson and her husband had been impeached and also the wife of Governor George Wallace. That is the only way you can do it but the people really showed that they wanted the governor to succeed himself and I think we ought to allow them that right and privilege if they so see fit and want to. So therefore I say vote down this amendment.

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Further Discussion

Mr. Fulco Mr. Acting Chairman and fellow delegates, I don't know that we have given the two terms for the governor a fair chance to date. The successive terms for governor or the two successive terms for governor was introduced during the 1964 administration of Governor McKeithen. It was introduced and adopted as a result of a good four years of the first of two terms that governor McKeithen had served the people of the state of Louisiana. Most of the good government reforms were adopted during that first four years. Those good government reforms were first adopted prior to that term under the single term of four years for governors prior to 1964. And because of the four years of good government that we had from 1964 to 1968 we were... it was possible for us to adopt many reform measures that made history in the state of Louisiana that improved the image of our state government in our state of Louisiana in the rest of the state. Now since the next four years, it's history. We all know that the following four years were not as productive as the preceding four years and because of that there were a lot of unhappy people in the state of Louisiana who were not impressed with the two successive terms. However, the majority of the people still felt that there should be a continued proposition and should be given a fair chance. We have not had time enough to determine whether or not the two successive terms for governor is a good idea or a bad idea. I say, let's go again for a few more years, let's see what happens in the succeeding year... succeeding governors for our state. Let's give it a trial and go again with the two successive terms for the governor of Louisiana.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

Questions

Mr. Smith Mr. Fulco, of course I am for this amendment, you are against it. Don't you think a governor for the first four years is always trying to do for the next four years and not making as good a good governor as he could if he would just serve one term?

Mr. Fulco Well, at least, he is going to give the people one or four years out of eight, because he is going to campaign that for four years to get a good job for the people in order to get reelected. Now, let's hope we have one man in the governor's office who will attempt to give the next four years of good government to the people.

Mr. Smith Mr. Fulco, don't you think that the second four years the governor is usually a lame duck governor because he knows he can't run anymore and he did the best he could the first four but the second four is kind of a loss, don't you go along with that?

Mr. Fulco Well, Jasper you know even a one four year term for governor is a lame duck governor.

Mr. Smith You think he will make a better governor the second four years?

Mr. Fulco I think he can if he wants to, he has got the opportunity.

Mr. Smith But he will have built up a political dynasty by then wouldn't he?

Mr. Fulco Well, he could do that too, it depends on the individual, Jasper.

Further Discussion

Mr. Asseff Mr. Chairman, delegates, I support the position of the committee and oppose the amendment and suggest that you reject it. It takes at least two years for a governor to learn his office. For the second term he runs on his record and the people decide. And I think they have that right. If we are going to restrict him to four years then we should restrict the others as well. The experts recommend at least two terms and I agree. I urge you to support the report of the committee on the Executive Department and to reject the amendment. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Jenkins Mr. Chairman, delegates to the convention, it has been said, let the people decide who the governor will be after a governor has served for four years. I think that is a false argument. It is an argument that is true in some instances for some offices. But there is another influence and another force which makes it a false argument when you talk about the governor of the state of Louisiana. For the fact is that once a man has served in office for four years there is a coercive element which tends to perpetuate him in office regardless of what the people may truly want. What is the coercive element? Well, the first element is the fact that you have several thousand office holders who have responsibility for putting in office, who want to maintain that office. And you have legislators who have gained a position of influence and authority under that governor who want to maintain themselves in office. You have department heads, you have local officials throughout the state who know how they stand with that governor and don't want to take the chance of infringing on his power, his authority by bucking the trend. You have businessmen, you have labor, you have special interest groups who are afraid to come out against an incumbent governor because they know that the odds are that he will succeed himself. Look at what a governor has going for him. After a man has served in office for four years, he has been in the newspaper everyday of that four years. He has had his picture in the paper almost everyday. When he has spoken, it has gone across the state. He has name recognition, he has public attention focused on him like no candidate who wanted to if possibly succeed him could ever have. This is what makes it unfair and that is why the people in such instances never decide truly. Look at history, I ask you, when was the last time that a governor of Louisiana or a president of the United States has been unable to win reelection when he sought reelection. When? When a president of the United States has sought reelection, has he failed to gain reelection? I'll tell you when, 1932, when Herbert Hoover ran for reelection and I was defeated. And you know what it took in that instance to defeat an incumbent president? The greatest depression this nation has ever known. That is what it took then to defeat an incumbent president. Now, look at the men who have served two terms. And I include in that category men who have succeeded to the office of president by virtue of a president dying and who had then been elected and I consider that as their second term. Look at what has happened. Look at Richard Nixon now in his second term, admits the ball to be along in his second term in this nation in who knows how long. Look at Lyndon Johnson, who was serving what amounted to a second term, involving us in no win war that lasted for eight years. Look at President Eisenhower, whose second term was keynoted by recessions and extreme embarrassment in foreign affairs. Look at Harry Truman, who in his second term got into the Korean War and kept us there. And what was the result of it, another Viet Nam. Look at Franklin Roosevelt, who had gained so much power in his terms in office that we had an amendment to the United States Constitution limiting presidents to two terms. Look at Woodrow Wilson, who in his second term got us into World War I probably for the best reasons at all. Listen, when you put so much power in a man's hands it tends to make those men not act rationally, it tends to give them too much power. We have got to have some check on it, it is not enough to say let the people decide. The people have such coercive elements placed on them that they can't make a free decision. Show a legislator succeed him in the other state office. There is not comparison, no other statewide official, no individual legislator has anywhere near the power that the governor has. If those people did, I would say that the same thing would be true, don't let them succeed themselves. The legislative branch of government barely has as much power as the governor of this state and the legislature as a whole is never made up of the same men in any succeeding term. For example in the last four years we had a sixty-five percent turnover. I say look at our sister states, they have had the good judgment to not allow governors to succeed themselves in most of the instances. And where they do allow gubernatorial succession, those are states where they have two-year terms for governor and the governor must frequently come to the people to present himself for reelection. This is true in almost every other southern state. They have had the good judgment there to realize this limitation on executive power must be imposed. Now, we have talked about strengthening the legislature. We have not strengthened the legislature. The fact is that it will be a stronger branch of government. The way to do that is before us now. If we limit the governor of this state to one term we will have a true system of check and balances. A true system of separation of powers and we will have equal branches of government. That is the decision we face here. And that is why limiting terms of governor to one term is in the interest of the people.

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

[Proceedings continue with Mr. DeBlieux.]

Closing

Mr. Fontenot: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I will try to be brief, and of that word I'm debating but I listened to some of the arguments presented against my amendment and I have a little bit of rebuttal. Somebody made the statement that our national government... the president can succeed himself. I think Mr. Jenkins mentioned it and I will mention it also. Just because the national government has it that doesn't necessarily mean it is good for the state of Louisiana. We looked at the Johnson administration, he looked at the Nixon administration. Mr. Jenkins did, and I agree with him. The second half of those terms are just terrible and I will agree with him and I think the only example we have in our state... I didn't want to get into Mr. John McKeithen's administration, I don't condemn him personally but I think under his administration, the second four years were terrible four years. I feel if John McKeithen had stayed out for four years he could have run for reelection, he would have been a good governor for another four years, I may be wrong, it's just my opinion. Now concerning the people voting for a change in the constitution back in 1966 I don't think they were voting for the change. I think they were voting for John McKeithen at the time when his popularity was just overwhelming. This is what brought about the constitutional amendment. I don't think the people were really voting for changing the constitution, I think they were voting to let John McKeithen run a second term. And I think we found that it was a mistake to do it. Now about the argument that the restriction only applies to the governor. I don't think all these other elected officials are as strong as the governor. I think it is much easier to perpetuate yourself if you are governor than if you are one of these other statewide elected officials. Like I said earlier, it is only my personal opinion. Now if you want to allow the possibility... like I said, it is a possibility you are going to allow if you let the committee section stand as it is, you can allow a man to perpetuate himself in office for a period of twenty-six years less one day out of a possible thirty-four years. If you want to allow that voting against my amendment. Now consider what he might do if he is out these four years. He will put somebody like his wife, or somebody else to run for governor, he can be lieutenant governor, so technically he will be there for thirty-four years straight and even longer if he so wishes. It is possible. If you feel as I do, that it would be in the best interest of the state to limit the term of governor to one term then I urge you to adopt my amendment.

Questions

Mr. DeBlieux: Mr. Fontenot, with all the power that the governor has... can amass during his term of office, can you name one governor that has been able to elect his successor to office?

Mr. Fontenot: Mr. DeBlieux, I am not as old as you are and I am not an expert in history and I really could not answer that question. Somebody is yelling Huey Long.

Mr. DeBlieux: Now, we have a number of governors since his time and they haven't been able to do that. Now, let me ask you another question. Do you know of any governor that you can remember during your lifetime who was popular at the end of his term of office, whether it was a one-four-year term or a second term?

Mr. Fontenot: Well, to answer your question, no. I don't remember but I do know that Jimmy Davis was elected, stayed out and got elected again. I know Earl Long was elected, stayed out and got elected again but I don't think John McKeithen would be elected again if he ran.

Mr. DeBlieux: Well, now isn't that the cause of the fact that after each time... at the end of their office they were unpopular and could not have been reelected?

Mr. Fontenot: Well, if they were unpopular at the end of their term, why did they get elected after a layover of four years?

Mr. DeBlieux: Because the other governor that they succeeded was unpopular at the end of his term, that is why.

Mr. Fontenot: Mr. Chairman, I request a record vote

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Senator De Blieux send up amendments at this time.

Amendment No. 1. Page 2, line 9 after the period delete the remainder of the line and delete lines 10, 11 and 12.

Explanation

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Chairman, and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this amendment simply takes out of the limitation the number of times a governor can run and succeed himself. There was some reference made a few minutes ago to Huey Long and the fact that he was able to elect his successor. Let me tell you, back in those days we didn't have civil service, we didn't have the investment of idle funds. We didn't have a lot of the other reforms that had been passed since those days and times. You have seen and I think you know, that frankly every governor that we have had that at the time of the end of his term of office he was very unpopular and this unpopularity was brought about by the fact that he could not succeed himself and the administration was allowed to try to seek other candidates to get themselves into a position to whether they could protect themselves for the next incoming governor. There was a lot of jockeying for positions as a result of it. Government of the state suffered during that period of time. If we can take this limitation we can have good government not only just for two years out of a four year administration but as long as the man is in office because he will not be seeking to find the other candidates that they can get with unless he announces the fact that he is not going to run for reelection, which I am sure that will happen some times. I just think it's a good decision and I don't think we ought to put ourselves in a position to where if we get a good man in office we can tell him, well, you can only serve one or two terms and that is all we are going to let you have. If it is good to have the limitation on the governor, it is good for all other elected officials. You ought to limit all of them to one or maybe two terms. I just think that we ought to get ourselves into the modern age rather than back in the middle of the nineteenth century when this original provision was originally put into our constitution limiting the term of the governor. And as you can see, if you will just check the states that have a limitation they are not in the forefront as being the most progressive, and I ask you to vote for the amendment and let us take this archaic limitation off of our governor.

Further Discussion

Mr. Stinson Mr. Chairman, and fellow delegates, if I didn't know Senator De Blieux so well I would be shocked and surprised, and I have long ago ceased to be shocked and surprised. If you want to get through writing this constitution in a hurry, let's put Senator De Blieux's amendment on and then move to adjourn sine die and I think we will get through in about a day's time. That is all I have to say. If the people of Louisiana at anytime are going to be in favor of a governor, they are going to really be in a terrible shape. Politics, politics, machines and machines. Can you see what kind of machine will be built up if a governor could run from now on. Ladies and gentlemen, if you wasn't for this last one, limit to one time, I plead and urge with you for the people of Louisiana, don't remove all restrictions from only one man, be that forgetful of the rights of our people, it would be the worst thing that could ever happen in this state regardless of what it might be. Can you imagine, suppose they would elect Eddie LeBreton governor from now on. (Soul brother, you got a good hand on that). Now seriously let's vote this down, the people certainly don't want unlimited office of governor of the state of Louisiana. That would be the most irresponsible unthought of thing that we could do and certainly if we are going to pass this constitution, I don't believe we could wish such an unlimited position as that. Dictatorship, mass machine politics would result. Please let's vote this down.

Further Discussion

Mr. Wall Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, there is no question that this amendment is bad. Really and truly I would like to see that not only the governor be limited to two terms I would like for... this is going a little far and I see Mr. Chehardy getting real interested over there. I would like to see all terms limited to one term. Let everybody have a chance for this good old public service we talk about, the peoples' interest at heart. To give everybody a chance. If you did that, you would have a lot more people interested in government because they would know more about it. But that is beside the point, really. It is just like Mr. Stinson said, if you put this in there that a governor can keep running we may as well adjourn and go home. It is that bad and the people of this state know it is that bad, so I am going to ask you to vote it down. I am going to ask for a record vote.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I can make my closing remarks very brief and that is all I want to say to you today. This irresponsibility which Mr. Stinson has spoken about. This dictatorship and so forth. Why aren't the other states that don't have the limitation on their governors under dictatorship and have irresponsible government. Think that over. Think that over. The most progressive states in this Union don't have this limitation. You only have about eight or ten states that have that limitation and you look and see where they rank on the economic and progressive scale. They are not in the top ten I can tell you that. And let's take this archaic provision out of our constitution, our laws. I just ask you, let us be a little progressive once in awhile.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected: 10-100. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter First amendment affects Paragraph B and C as follows:
Section 1 [By Mr. Roy and Mr. Jenkins].
On page 2, delete lines 13 through 23 both inclusive in their entirety.

Explanation

Mr. Roy Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this amendment is very simple. It simply takes out of the executive provision the results of elections and tiebreaking matters that should not be in the Executive Article at all. I call your attention to the fact that the Bill of Rights was ordered and mandated by the convention as a whole to deal with elections and suffrage along with of course the Bill of Rights and we are presently working on and have completed a tentative draft of elections wherein we state essentially that no person shall be elected to any public office unless he has received the highest number of votes cast for that office and we are surely going to have a proviso that the legislature shall determine methods for breaking ties. Now, there is no need at all for B and C in this particular provision of the executive branch or article because it has nothing to do with the Executive Article or branch. We just passed the Legislative Article and there is nothing in the Legislative Article with respect to elections and how Representatives and Senators shall be chosen. So I ask that you delete B and C from this particular provision. There is going to be no provision with respect to how elections are conducted in the Judiciary Article and I am sure no other articles because of right, they should be covered in the elections and suffrage articles of the constitution.

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

Questions

Mr. Vick Mr. Roy, are you saying that these two provisions are redundant?

Mr. Roy Yes, I am.

Mr. Vick And can you explain again why?

Mr. Roy They are redundant because these provisions and the results of elections and tabulations, etc., should properly come under the elections and suffrage provisions or articles of the constitution which have been designated to the Bill of Rights for preparation, and we are working on them and there is no need to put a special provision about electing executive officers under the executive branch of government in the executive branch alone.

Further Discussion

Mr. Perez Mr. Acting Chairman, and delegates, that part of the section which bothers me a great deal is that part which deals...which provides that the person having the greatest number of votes for each office shall be declared elected. The problem with that is, that it would preclude the possibility of ever having an open...so called open primary, open election where all of the various candidates would be required to run at the same time. Because if only the high man wins you would never have the possibility of a second primary and I don't believe that the legislature would ever adopt a law which would provide for an open primary as long as the requirement were there that you would have no second primary. This would preclude the possibility of a so-called open primary or open election with all of the candidates in the various political parties running at the same time.

Point of Order

Mr. O'Neill Mr. Acting Chairman, my point of order is that my understanding of the rules states that elections should be covered in the Bill of Rights Committee and you know, not in any other committee. And I would just like your interpretation of whether or not this should be considered in this article at all?

Mr. Casey Mr. O'Neill, I think that this is a matter that would have to be determined at this time, and I think the amendment would properly be in order.

Mr. O'Neill Thank you.

[Discussion question closed.]

Closing

Mr. Roy I am not going to take any time. I didn't understand Mr. Perez's statement. I didn't understand if he was opposed to what the Bill of Rights has done in the Elections Article or if he is opposed to what is presently proposed by the Executive Committee because it simply provides a person having the greatest number of votes for each office shall be declared elected. And all I am saying is that this does not belong in this particular Section of the Executive Branch Article at all. This is an election matter pure and simple and in the end, the Election Article should be covered by the Bill of Rights Committee, we are going to cover that, we are going to cover all elections of all statewide as well as public officials. And that is the reason I urge the adoption of the amendment.

Questions

Mr. Jenkins Delegate Roy, isn't this just the kind of duplication that has so cluttered up the constitution and aren't any policy questions going to be decided with regards to elections in the Elections Article rather than in the Executive Department?

Mr. Roy You are absolutely right, Mr. Jenkins. What we are doing here is writing apparently...the Executive Committee is attempting to write a specific provision on elections for the officers that we have constitutionalized thus far, that is, those of lieutenant governor, governor, secretary of state, attorney general and treasurer and that doesn't address itself to the whole issue of elections which we are trying to cover elsewhere.

Mr. Stagg Mr. Roy, in preparing this document, we have changed the law for a purpose. The change in the law is to have the returns transmitted to and promulgated by the secretary of state, in order that the election decision can be reached before the legislature meets in May. If your amendment should be adopted, and I trust that it will not, then would your committee also believe that the returns should be transmitted to the secretary of state for promulgation of this, and would you also agree that the drawing of lots in the case of a tie would be considered by your committee?

Mr. Roy Now, Mr. Stagg, that is easily answered because the convention as a whole has now elected or put into the constitution a commissioner of elections.

Mr. Stagg They haven't defined his duties yet?

Mr. Roy That is right and that comes later in the sections on the following pages 4,5,6, and 7 when we are going to have to decide the functions of each of those constitutional offices. So your question really is redundant because you are putting something in here that doesn't need to be in here with respect to elections per se. Later on we will have to define the new duties of the secretary of state and of the commissioner of elections. And in those functions and duties that is where that comes in. But you are attempting to say B and C, to simply double with a problem pertaining to elections as a whole and that ought to go into the general Articles on Elections and Suffrage.

Mr. Stagg Mr. Roy, you have been reading these articles now for a month and a week and you must be able to recognize that this Article III in Sections A,B,C,D, and E constitute a whole train of thought. If you go down to Paragraph D where we state "the term of each elected official shall begin at noon on the second Monday in March" and you take out the provisions in B and C which would permit that to happen by an orderly promulgation of elections, aren't you doing violence to the considerations given by the need to do these things in this order?

Mr. Roy No, I don't think I am, and as a matter of fact in the Legislative Article, we provide that the legislature shall take office on a certain day and they didn't bother to come harass us with a bunch of redundant stuff.

Mr. Lanier Mr. Roy, what are the provisions that Bill of Rights and Elections has come up with for the promulgation of elections and how they would be determined?

Mr. Roy tentively, until of course, there was a change yesterday with respect to the duties that may come about with the new commissioner of elections, we have that the secretary of state shall promulgate the returns. I think that is as it should be. What I thought the notion yesterday was that a commissioner of elections there would be a separation of powers so that you would never have any concentration of power in one office, the commissioner of elections would take care of voting machines, etc., and what have you, but the secretary of state would still promulgate the returns. So we don't do violence to any of this, but we just don't think that it is necessary in this particular section of the constitution.

Mr. Quarrisco Mr. Roy, if we should delete B and I, that it not be true you would not do violence to this article if we subsequently adopt D and E because the Elections Committee would have to form the election laws along those guidelines to fit, is that correct?

Mr. Roy That is correct.

[Amendment Numbered 4-1-1 Motion to Reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter We have amendments offered up at this time by Delegate Chatelain, Thistlethwaite, Landry, Juneau, Elkins, McDaniel and Many others.

Amendment NO. 1, on page 2, between lines 12 and 13, insert the following: "B. Each candidate for governor shall file jointly with a candidate for lieutenant governor in primary elections so that each voter shall cast a single vote for a candidate for governor and a candidate for lieutenant governor, running together."

There are several technical amendments changing the paragraph numbers thereafter which now need to be corrected in light of the previous amendment.

Explanation

Mr. Chatelain Mr. Acting Chairman and fellow delegates, this I think is a step forward in Louisiana government. This amendment will permit the governor and the lieutenant governor to run together as a team. They will file their candidacy jointly, they will run together on the same platform. It is very comparable to what the president of the United States and the vice-president do today. You will cast a single vote for both the governor and the lieutenant governor. They will take office together and work together. Eighteen states now have this situation. Seventeen are embedded in the constitution and one in statutes. In the last two years, two of our progressive states have done this, Maryland and Florida. There are some major arguments for this. First, is the compatibility in party affiliations. For instance, you could have a Henry and Broussard ticket, for governor and lieutenant governor, the same party. You could have a Treen and Staggs ticket, same party. I think it would be a good step forward in Louisiana. You would have compatibility in campaign platforms and you would have the same political philosophy. This, I think, would be a great step forward. You would have assurance of continuity in government in the event of a succession. I think this is a real reason that you need a lieutenant governor. It is that awesome thought of a succession in the event of a death or some other reason for losing your governor. I think too, that it would certainly lower the campaign cost of both the governor and the lieutenant governor. I think that it would facilitate also the governor's role in asking this lieutenant governor to do some of the powers and the duties of the governor. I think then we would have a lieutenant governor who would have something to do rather than standing idly by with no great directions. I think too, it would permit the governor to delegate increasingly large numbers of the duties and responsibilities. I think in the final analysis you would have a greater cooperation and responsibilities in the governor's administration. I urge that you would support this. I think it is a great step forward.

Question

Mr. Zervigon Mr. Chatelain, I agree with you in concept but I was just wondering why it is drafted the way it is. You say that they shall file jointly in primary elections. Does that mean that in the general election, would we continue to have the primary and general election systems, that you could elect a democratic governor and a republican lieutenant governor?

Mr. Chatelain The intent was to have them run together from the very inception of the time they first file, Mary.

Mrs. Zervigon Perhaps it would be worded, say, primary and general elections.

Mr. Chatelain Probably so, that would be all right with me.

Mr. Alexander Mr. Chatelain, you said that there are several states where this system is employed. Do you know if any of those states are southern or one party states?

Mr. Chatelain Southern states, yes. We have two of them, Maryland and Florida.

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Chatelain, I believe they have a track at Evangeline Downs that is not too far from Lafayette. Is that right? Would you call this an entry, and who would get the 1 or the 1A number?

Mr. Chatelain Frankly, I think this would be the third runner perhaps.

Mrs. Warren Going along with the concept, what I am trying to find out is if you have a governor and you have two lieutenant governors who want to run and each one of them wants to run on the ticket with the governor, how would this work?

Mr. Chatelain Let's run it by one more time, Mary. It is very simple. You would have two men, perhaps a man from north Louisiana, perhaps a man from New Orleans or the south Louisiana area, who decide they want to run for governor and lieutenant governor respectively. They would form a political alliance. They would talk philosophy. They would sit down and say look, we are going to run on this platform, we are going to offer these things for the people of Louisiana, and in the final analysis you are going to have two men who will run together in the election, they will be sworn in together and then you will have a true lieutenant governor.

Mr. Stinson Mr. Chatelain, if I want to run for governor and I don't want anyone on my ticket for lieutenant governor, I wouldn't be able to run for governor under this, would I?

Mr. Chatelain Mr. Stinson, the object of this amendment is to create a better situation for the lieutenant governor, to make a stronger office for the lieutenant governor of this state.

Mr. Stinson The next question, suppose I want to run for governor and nobody in the whole state wants to run on my ticket for lieutenant governor, I wouldn't be able to run for governor would I?

Mr. Chatelain I don't think you would be elected, Mr. Stinson.

Mr. Stinson Well it still would be my right as an individual to run, wouldn't it?

Mr. Chatelain You certainly could run.

Mr. Stinson Isn't that what we are supposed to be doing, guaranteeing the rights of individuals?

Mr. Chatelain You would certainly have a right to run, sir.

Mr. Stinson We are not down here guaranteeing the rights of a ticket, are we? Now also suppose I would run for lieutenant governor and no governor would take me, you still say I shouldn't be entitled to run because...

Mr. Chatelain I think you could run, sir.

Mr. Stinson Not under this.

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Mr. Chatelain We are talking about the lieutenant governor and the governor running together, Mr. Stinson.

Mr. Stinson I know, but I couldn't run if a governor candidate wouldn't put me on his ticket.

Mr. Chatelain I can't conceive of a situation, Mr. Stinson, where any man who was qualified to be the governor of this state who could not find someone to run with him. I just can't conceive of that thing happening.

Mr. Stinson It happened last election, didn't it?

Mr. Chatelain I don't want to go into that, sir.

Mr. Stinson Do you think we are the ones who should pass on who is qualified or not? In other words, don't you think it is an inherent right of every elector of Louisiana to run if he only gets one vote?

Mr. Chatelain Well, sir, you are right. I would agree to that.

Mr. Nunez Don't you believe that there has been a trend in this state recently to get away from the ticket concept and let each candidate stand on their own merit and run on their own merit?

Mr. Chatelain Senator Nunez, you are right, but what we are talking about today is writing a new constitution. We have taken away from the lieutenant governor his right to be president of the Senate. We have made a lot of changes in this constitution. We are talking about a new era, sir. An era when you are going to have a new look in Louisiana.

Mr. Nunez Do you believe that era should encompass the concept that the governor should run for two terms and then he picks his lieutenant governor and that lieutenant governor in return runs for two terms as governor, and that lieutenant governor picks his lieutenant governor. Don't you believe you are perpetuating one of the greatest dynasties this state probably would ever have or has had?

Mr. Chatelain The dynasty aspect has come up on both sides before I offered this amendment with about fifteen other coauthors. I, as well as they, discussed both sides of this subject matter. You are certainly right, you could create a dynasty. You can do it today under the present laws of Louisiana. You can do it in the United States government. Today we have a situation where AGnew almost is in a position to be the next president of the United States but I think because of the recent scandals, that you are well aware of, this probably won't happen. Certainly, you always have these possibilities.

Mr. Nunez But you are making the possibility broader when you lock it into the constitution and say the lieutenant governor and the governor shall run together. What I am asking you is should we perpetuate the type of dynasty I think your amendment is going to do, because the governor naturally with his successor in line he picks his successor, the lieutenant governor, that lieutenant governor or maybe the governor will pick the next lieutenant governor and then you have a dynasty going that you just won't be able to control. Don't you think that's a bad...

Mr. Chatelain Senator, in my lifetime I have seen three different governors serve their four years, sit out a few years, come back in, some of them are good the second go-round, some of them weren't. You have all these possibilities and any of this could happen, yes sir.

Mr. Nunez But, isn't it more possible now that we have a two term amendment and the governor can succeed himself. What you were talking about was before the governor could succeed himself. Now he can succeed himself and his lieutenant governor, I don't think there is any limitation on how many times the lieutenant governor can run. If his lieutenant governor has won twice with him then the natural line of succession would be to go on. In line with all of the political appointments that he has made, I am sure they won't be changed and they dynasty is perpetuated.

Mr. Chatelain You are right, sir. But I will take that since everything you gain in this world, you have to pay a little price for it. I would rather pay the price of having a strong lieutenant governor who is in true fact a lieutenant governor, who has something to do and a man who can help the awesome job that the governor has. I think then you would have a team working together and the Louisianians would wind up with a better government, in my opinion. I urge your support of this amendment.

Mr. Roemer Mr. Delegate, if a man or a woman wanted to run for lieutenant governor and couldn't find a governor on whose ticket to run, what would he do?

Mr. Chatelain I think that obscure person would probably find someone to run with him. I would hope so sir.

Mr. Roemer You mean he would not only have to advance his own candidacy he would have to carry a heavy load with him perhaps.

Mr. Chatelain We can go into all these possibilities, Mr. Roemer. As I said before, for everything you gain you have to pay a little price. I will pay the price of having a good strong lieutenant governor who can in fact do something for his money.

Mr. Roemer I don't know if you would agree with me. I feel like you are in the position of a popular song some years ago: "How does it feel to be alone, like a rolling stone."

Mr. Chatelain Mr. Delegate, I wouldn't know that.

Mr. Roy Mr. Chatelain, they wouldn't have to worry about getting a candidate because...

Mr. Chatelain I beg your pardon. I didn't hear that sir.

Further Discussion

Mr. Thistlethwaite Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I think the answer to this dynasty question was given by Senator De Blieux when he asked how many governors in recent Louisiana history have ended up their terms of office popular. I doubt that any governor in recent Louisiana history has been able to transfer any support to anybody, whether it is his lieutenant governor or whoever. In our legislative article we have clipped the wings of the lieutenant governor. He no longer will preside over the Senate. This is almost entirely a standby office now except that the lieutenant governor will serve ex-officio on a number of boards and commissions and will exercise the powers delegated to him by the governor. Now some of these boards he will serve on are very important and the chief executive's representative should reflect his views. Further, the governor could delegate many useful powers to a man of his trust. No longer would we risk having a man sitting over in the corner office out of contact with the chief executive. I am against ticket politics but I consider this an orderly and wise arrangement of our chief executive's office. When the governor leaves the state he should leave it in the hands of a confidant. And finally, this arrangement will be of great value in easing the difficult transitional problem incident to a change in the state's top administrative office in the event of death or disability of the governor. I urge your support of this amendment.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

Further Discussion

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Mr. Gravel Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in support of this amendment. I want to point out just one thing to the delegates that I think is very important. If you will read Section 6 of the committee proposal that is under consideration, you will see that it was the sense of the committee that the lieutenant governor would serve as a partner with the governor in his office, as a member of each committee, board, agency or commission that the governor serves on. I think that this proposal of Delegate Chatelain carries further into effect the concept of making the governor and the lieutenant governor a working partnership for the benefit of the people of the state. For that reason, I believe that the amendment is good and I hope that it is adopted. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Avant Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise to strenuously oppose this amendment. I have heard one or labels put on various amendments in this convention. If you want to put one on this one, you can take your pick. Call it the machine politics amendment. Call it the slap the people in the face amendment. Call it the...with the people amendment, or anything you want, but this amendment kicks the people of the state of Louisiana right square in the teeth. Permit me to call my attention to this podium that they want to do what the people want to do. Well, I ask you to examine your Louisiana history for the last twenty years or twenty-five years and you will see what the people wanted to do. We had Governor Kennon and Lieutenant Governor Barham. They didn't run on the same ticket. They ran on different tickets who had Governor McKeithen and Lieutenant Governor Aycock and I know for the first go round, I don't remember the second, they didn't run on the same ticket. Our most recent governor, if my memory serves me correct, didn't endorse a candidate for lieutenant governor, didn't even have a ticket. If my memory further serves me correct, I think Lieutenant Governor Aycock was elected one time as a candidate for lieutenant governor based on memory but you have to remember that the lieutenant governor of this state is a very, very important position. Not only does he succeed to the office of governor in the event of the death of the governor or other reasons for his inability to serve, but he acts as governor in the place instead of the governor when the governor is outside of the state. Now I think that every voter of this state has a right to look at the candidates for governor and to look at the candidates for lieutenant governor and to decide for himself: I think that candidate A will make the best governor for the state of Louisiana and if some misfortune should occur I think that candidate B who is running for lieutenant governor is the most qualified man to succeed him in that office. This amendment takes that right away from the people of the state of Louisiana. It says you've got to run for a team and you don't have any choice about who is going to be on that team. If you want to pull a wagon with a team of horses, at least you can pick the two best horses that you think are going to be on that team who is going to be in this team. The politicians are going to pick who is going to be on this team. This is strictly political dynasty, machine politics amendment, and it takes away rights from the people that are properly and rightly theirs. I ask you if you think I am wrong, if you think that man doesn't know what he is talking about, go back to the history of this state for the last twenty to twenty-five years and what has actually happened in gubernatorial campaigns and what have the people done. On at least three of those occasions* to my personal knowledge they have selected a candidate for governor from one ticket and a candidate for lieutenant governor from another ticket. I urge you and implore you, do not take the rights of the people of this state away from them to select their own governor and their own lieutenant governor and give that right to the politicians.

Questions

Mr. Bel Mr. Avant, wouldn't this take my constitutional rights away from me of running as a candidate?

Mr. Avant To run as an independent candidate? You couldn't run as an independent candidate for one office. You would have to team up with somebody.

Mr. Bel That wasn't my question. Under the constitution wouldn't I have a right, the United States constitution, wouldn't I have a right to run for office.

Mr. Avant I would certainly hope so, Mr. Bel.

Further Discussion

Mr. Jack Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I am against this amendment. We have a governor and I think I should have a right to vote for the candidate of my choice for governor. I think everybody else should. We have a lieutenant governor provided also by the constitution and I think I should have a right to vote for him. Now, this deprives me of that right unless I just happen to want to vote for both of those two. Let's just take this example. Suppose this thing passes and I think the candidate for lieutenant governor is a fine person but I think the person he is running with is a crook. If I want to vote for my candidate for lieutenant governor I have to vote for a man I think is a crook. Now if that isn't against the federal constitution, I don't know what is. Now, let's just take that place where a person wants to be a candidate for lieutenant governor. Suppose a man is a fine man but he can't get on a governor's ballot ticket. Where is he? Let's take in memory Taddy Aycock, one of the best lieutenant governors going. If I remember correctly, he was lieutenant governor three times. Now, suppose I would like for him to run for lieutenant governor and he wanted it but he has got to be on a governor's ticket. Now that is not fair. The whole purpose of this amendment is I figure is bound to be to get a lieutenant governor that can never be at odds with the governor. Now let's just see how ridiculous it could be. Why not provide a law that if a man runs for governor the candidate for lieutenant governor on his ballot ticket is his wife and lets see if we can get a happily married couple. Now if the man is not married to his girl friend or vice versa. Maybe those kind could always or the other be subservient to the other one. To me, that is how ridiculous this amendment is. It may deprive me and other people of their votes. Somebody said they've got it in fourteen states. I have often said what happens in other states a lot of times can be good or bad, I don't know. We can't investigate them all. But if it is in fourteen other states what does that mean numerically? If I remember right there are fifty states so the majority of them don't have it. I say this is a bad amendment and vote it down.

Further Discussion

Mr. Stagg Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, Mr. Chatelain for whom I have a great deal of respect began his discussion on this amendment by stating that this was a step forward for Louisiana. I could not disagree more strongly. This is a step backwards. While I have a great deal of respect for my friend Mr. Thistlethwaite and my good government friend, Mr. Gravel, and for the Public Affairs Research Council, I have seen enough history in Louisiana to know that ticket politics is not good politics. I find myself in this position associated with Mr. Stinson and with Mr. Nunez and Mr. Roemer and Mr. Avant and Mr. Jack, a position I have seldom enjoyed in these days' discussions that we have had. We spend the better part of the latter part of Wednesday, we spend all day yesterday and the better part of today giving the people back their right to vote for the commissioner of agriculture, the commissioner of insurance, the superintendent of education and the commissioner of elections and now in this late hour on Friday afternoon we are faced with an amendment that wants to take back from the people one of their elected officials for whom they may freely vote. I do not understand the apparent inconsistency of these positions and I urge the defeat of the amendment.

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Questions

Mr. Chehardy I would like to preface at first that I have no particular feeling for PAR as offering anything worthwhile so when I show anything that favors this amendment, it is not because of PAR, it is despite PAR. Now, the question I want to ask you, you seem to place a lot of, not you, but everyone speaking against this particular amendment, on the proposition that the lieutenant governor would not be elected independent. I would like to believe that this is comparable to the president and the vice-president. Would you say this is so?

Mr. Stagg The amendment has some visible relationship to that circumstance in our national government.

Mr. Chehardy Now wouldn't you admit that the vice-presidents who have succeeded the president who have died in office have been men who have proven themselves to be men of merit generally throughout the entire history of the United States and everyone of those men ran as a running mate of the president?

Mr. Stagg Mr. Chehardy, that is not the problem. The problem that Mr. Chatelain addressed himself to was that these people would be compatible and I don't see that it was anything but politics that chose Truman to run with Roosevelt, or Johnson to run with Kennedy, or some of the rest of the people who have been chosen as vice-presidential candidates. The same is true in Louisiana. You will get a southern governor candidate who will go to north Louisiana to fill out his ticket and that is what we are talking about here today.

Mr. Chehardy One more question, these same vice-presidents you mentioned, Truman and Johnson, neither one of them gave you a Watergate, is that not so?

Mr. Stagg I couldn't care less, Mr. Chehardy.

Mr. Chehardy I am just asking by way of example.

Mr. Stagg There is nothing in this bill that we have before us under debate today that would prevent two candidates who want to run and to give themselves the freedom to run as a ticket. This provision requires it, demands it and makes it mandatory in the constitution, and that is wrong.

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Stagg, isn't the real problem there insofar as the Republicans are concerned that they might not be able to field enough candidates if they had to run as a team?

Mr. Stagg Mr. De Blieux, I hope someday that problem is resolved, but you are not helping it.

Mr. Stinson Mr. Stagg, do you know of any requirement for president and vice-president to have to run on the ticket? In the past haven't we had just people to run for president without a vice-president candidate?

Mr. Stagg We have had that happen. You are correct.

Mr. Stinson So therefore it is not comparable, necessarily.

Mr. Stagg I didn't agree with the question of the gentleman who posed it.

Mr. Roemer Delegate Stagg, don't you agree with the potential problem of a very strong governor, particularly when we have this two consecutive term provision in here, a man running for reelection, he would only do so if he thinks he can get reelected, a very strong man, picking a guy just for ticket balance, geographical or whatever, a man who is completely incompetent by any measure of reasonable men, and they both get elected. Something happens to the governor and we have this guy now as governor, the lieutenant governor.

Mr. Stagg I feel that that man would have been an appendage on to that popular governor, picked for his politics or for his geographical place of residence and with no other good qualifications.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendments submitted by Mr. Toomy which affect D as printed, a technical amendment momentarily that renumber the paragraphs. Amendment No. 1, Page 2, line 24 between the words "office" and "and" insert the following: "enumerated in this section".

Explanation

Mr. Toomy Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I think this amendment could properly be labeled a technical amendment. It is my understanding from speaking to several of the delegates on the Executive Committee that their intention in this Section D was that it would refer to all the statewide elected candidates referred to in Subsection A. And the purpose of this amendment is only to clarify their intention that the date upon which the officials were to assume office, would be... It is my understanding that the intention of the committee in Subsection D was that this term of office beginning on the second Monday in March would apply only to the statewide elected officials in Subsection A and not to all the elected officials of the state as I am sure you are aware many of the local officials and other officials assume their term of office on dates other than this date mentioned here, and I merely offer this amendment with the intention of clarifying the committee's intention that this applies only to the officials enumerated in Subsection A whichever officials those might be. I would appreciate your acceptance of this amendment.

Question

Mr. Denney Mr. Toomy, I am not arguing with the intent of your amendment, I ask though if you limit it to those enumerated in this section. As I understand it, it is conceivable that somewhere else in this constitution there may be a provision made for another statewide elected official. Now if you... instead of using enumerated in this section say statewide elected officials, wouldn't that cure that problem, should it exist, I don't know that it will exist, but it conceivably could?

Mr. Toomy That would be along the same lines as my intention. I don't believe that would be quite necessary though. I think this would adequately fulfill what the intention of the committee was. Which was just to cover the area in Subsection A.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Offered by Delegate Denney, a technical amendment.

Amendment No. 1, Page 2, line 24 delete the letter D and insert in lieu thereof the letter B.

Amendment No. 2, Page 2, line 27 delete the letter E and insert the letter C.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendments proposed this time by Delegate De Blieux.

Amendment No. 1, Page 3, delete lines 27 and 28 both inclusive in their entirety. If you don't have the amendment with Mr. De Blieux's name on it, the identical amendment was prepared by Mr. Anzalone and AssEFF.

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Explanation

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, the reason that I ask for the deletion of these two particular lines is because this limits the statewide election to those officials contained in this section. And the feeling of the legislature could not if it saw fit create any other statewide elected official. And I just realize that would be putting a hamper on something that you might not want because it would require the constitutional amendment to do that, and I just think it is a bad provision to insert in the constitution. That is the only purpose of the amendment, and if you want it, all right, if you don't it's ok.

[Previous question ordered. Amendments requested: 25-81. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous question ordered on the section. Section passed: 107-0. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

Mr. Poynter Section 4. Compensation
Section 4. Paragraph A, the compensation of each elected official within the executive branch shall be fixed by the legislature and shall not be increased or decreased for the term for which the official is elected. No state official shall receive a salary in excess of that paid to the governor.
Paragraph B. The lieutenant governor, when acting as governor shall receive the same salary as the governor and an appointed assistant when acting as an elected official, shall receive the same salary as the elected official.

Explanation

Mr. Stagg Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, we had considerable discussion in last week's proceedings under the legislative Article, and the Committee on the Executive Department felt that the compensation paid to the elected officials within the executive branch ought to be fixed by the legislature and when fixed, should not be increased or decreased during the term for which they were elected. There is an added provision which is not in the law at this time, which is suggested to the delegates for their consideration, that no state official shall receive a salary in excess that paid to the governor. It was the feeling of the members of the committee that as the chief executive officer of the state, the governor bore responsibilities far in excess of those of any other official of the state and ought to be so compensated. In the Section B we feel that when the lieutenant governor because of the absence of the governor is sitting in his chair and handling his duties, that for that period of time he ought to be paid the salary that the governor will command because he has the duties of the governor for that period of time and the same thing applies to the other statewide elected officials. By way of explanation in a further section in this article in Section 10 we have provided that each statewide official will have a first assistant who will be appointed by that official subject to confirmation by the Senate. In that instance, for instance if the first assistant to the secretary of state occupies his office while the secretary of state is out of the state, he should receive the compensation applicable to the job because he is carrying out the duties of the job. I move the adoption of Section 4, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

Mr. Burns Mr. Stagg, in line 80 on page 2, you refer to the salary of elected officials and on line 1 of page 3 you refer to state officials. May I ask, the heads of a department, the state departmental heads, would they come under the state official category?

Mr. Stagg Mr. Burns, it was the feeling of the committee and of the delegate who sponsored this provision into our article, that no state official ought to be paid any more than the governor. And if for instance there is a state official who is drawing fifty thousand dollars, then the governor ought to receive fifty thousand five hundred dollars and you can magnify that in any way you wish, but that was powerfully lobbied by a member of our committee, we accepted his suggestion and it appears as a part of our committee proposal to this convention.

Mr. Burns But in your answer to my question is that this state official would apply to departmental heads?

Mr. Stagg Yes, Mr. Burns, it would.

Mr. Burns And if a head of a department of hospitals and welfare is drawing fifty-seven thousand or whatever it is then the...governor ought to draw fifty-seven thousand?

Mr. Stagg That was the feeling of the committee, Mr. Burns. Yes.

Mr. Burns Or either the other one ought to come down to the governor's level.

Mr. Stagg Either they got to reduce some of these salaries or raise the governor's, there is an option.

Mr. Burns That's all.

Mr. Fayard Mr. Stagg, was it the feeling of the committee that this provision was necessary to give the legislature the authority to fix these salaries, or would the legislature have this authority if it was not put in the constitution?

Mr. Stagg We think that in the constitutional document that when you state that the legislature shall do it, it leaves it without the discretion of anyone else to change it. We believe that the legislature is the arm of government that ought to fix these salaries, and that is why we made the recommendation.

Mr. Fayard Well, if this provision was deleted, would the legislature still have the authority to fix salaries for the executive department officials?

Mr. Stagg Anything that would not be prohibited them would be permitted them.

Mr. Fayard Now, my next question is addressed to Subsection B, what is meant by when acting as an elected official, when does the salary start to run?

Mr. Stagg We have a provision that requires in the case of the inability of a statewide official to perform the duties of his office and that inability has been certified by the provisions of that article, that then the appointed assistant would take over. Under those conditions, the date he took over would be clearly defined. In the event that for instance the commissioner of insurance was to leave the state for a vacation of thirty days, then his first assistant for that thirty days would receive the salary provision that the legislature will have fixed for the commissioner of insurance.

Mr. Fayard Would this also apply to the lieutenant governor when acting as governor if the governor was out of the state say for two days...

Mr. Stagg That is the way it does now, Mr. Fayard. Unbelievably, that was one of the principle jobs of the comptroller was to figure out how many days the governor was gone so that he could fix the salary payments of the lieutenant governor for whatever days the governor was gone.

Mr. Fayard And it is the feeling of the committee that it should remain as it is now?

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Mr. Stagg Yes, sir.

Mr. LeBreton Mr. Stagg, trying to follow your reasoning, what would be the actual workout, should this pass and become part of the constitution, does the governor's salary automatically go up to the highest paid state official or does the state official's salary come down to the governor's, or do you provide for it?

Mr. Stagg We don't exactly provide for that... the position of the committee was that we ought to state it affirmatively that no state official will receive a salary in excess of that paid by the governor, that is a kind of a backhanded way of saying, the governor shall be the highest paid state official.

Mr. LeBreton I am not particularly for or against your article, it just seems to me it leads to some confusion, does the pay automatically stop the day it is received. I think some thought ought to be given to that or at least to Style and Drafting that maybe this conversation you and I are having could put some sort of a deadline of maybe give the legislators six months for a year to straighten the matter out. My second question is, and I could not follow you. Does this apply to municipal, parochial officers, like superintendent of education of Orleans

Mr. Stagg No, sir, it does not.

Mr. LeBreton How about quasi, like the dock board in New Orleans?

Mr. Stagg No, sir, it does not.

Mr. LeBreton Just state officials...

Mr. Stagg Yes.

Mr. LeBreton I would think then... don't you think then that if we are just going to pick on state officials, why let the man appointed get much more money than the man that is elected, I just suggest that for thought if we are going to cure, let's cure all of the baby.

Mr. Roemer Tom, in the Section B, talking about receiving the same salary as your superior when acting in his or her position. It would be my impression and I would like to hear the reason why it is in here, that we elect a lieutenant governor just for that purpose, he runs for that office for that purpose, he is elected for that purpose, why should we give him special award for doing what he ran for in the first place? Why should we increase his salary?

Mr. Stagg Buddy, I think that the committee felt about it in... felt this way for two reasons. One, that it is in the present system of payment of state officials now and that to make some change of that sort that wasn't necessary to make, that weighed on the committee's mind somewhat. It is, the way it is done in several other states, though I am frank to admit that in some states they dispense with this bookkeeping and simply pay the man the salary that he was fixed by the law when he ran for the office and therefore they agree with you. But the majority sentiment on the committee was, that if a man takes over additional responsibilities other than those for which he ran and was elected to do, that then he ought to be compensated for it.

Mr. Roemer Right. And I wonder if you would agree that in effect the lieutenant governor does run as one of his requirements is to stand ready to serve as governor in the governor's absence, so it is no great undertaking, additional to what he ran.

Mr. Stagg I agree that that is a correct statement.

Mr. Lanier Mr. Stagg, did I understand you correctly when you said that if this article makes no provision for fixing salaries, that in your opinion the legislature would then have the right to do so?

Mr. Lanier I did say that Mr. Lanier. If you wish to correct me, I am wide open.

Mr. Lanier Well, I just wanted to get your opinion as to what effect you think that the present provisions which I understand will be duplicated on division of powers would have on that. In particular Article 11, Section 11, that says the powers of government of the state of Louisiana are divided into three distinct departments, legislative, executive and judicial. In Section 2 which says no one of these departments nor any person holding office in one of them shall exercise power belonging to either of the others except as otherwise provided in this constitution.

Mr. Stagg And we are here otherwise providing in this constitution for that exception...

Mr. Henry The gentleman has exceeded his time.

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Amendments sent up by Delegate O'Neill as follows:

Amendment No. 1. Page 2, delete lines 29 through 32 both inclusive in their entirety.

Amendment No. 2. Page 3, delete lines 1 through 6 both inclusive in their entirety.

Explanation

Mr. O'Neill Mr. Chairman, members of the convention, we will let you in on what our huddle came up with... our discussion came out that my amendment would come first because it took the complete provision out and in case you don't go for that well we have some amendments following. The reasons I think this provision should be taken out, that most of it is excess baggage and I think we have consistently voted to take excess baggage out. I remind you of the discussion during our debate on the Legislative Article, whereby an overwhelming vote, almost 90 votes, we voted to take out almost all matter dealing with salaries of public officials, etc. The question that comes to mind is, if we strike the entire provision, is the executive able to set his own salaries and that of the other members of the executive branch. I believe that power is inherent in the legislature and when you say that they... if you don't say that they can't do it, well they can do it. I have specific objections to the idea that no state official shall receive a salary in excess of that paid to the governor. I think the governor knows what he is going to be paid when he runs, I think even though some of us might feel the salary is low right now we find that there is not a real need for candidates to run for governor at that salary. And I submit to you that the salary increase right now would be nearly thirty thousand dollars and is more than the governor can make in a year. The second section, Section B, states that the lieutenant governor when acting as governor, etc... I think that this is verbiage and I wonder if it is even worthy of statutory nature. I think it would be better if we take this out and rely upon the provision adopted by the legislative article and I refer you to Section 11 of the article. Which says the compensation of elected public officers shall not be reduced during the term for which they are elected. I think this implies that the legislature has the power to set salaries and also to raise salaries. It is only a specific prohibition against reducing salaries. All of us here want a short constitution and action on those good things and maybe I have been guilty, more than some, of wanting to put things back in, so help me take this out, and we might make up for some of that. I move for the adoption of this amendment.

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Questions

Mr. Lanier Are you familiar with the proposal of the Bill of Rights Committee on the three departments of government and the limitations on each department?

Mr. Roemer Right. And I wonder if you would agree that in effect the lieutenant governor does run as one of his requirements is to stand ready to serve as governor in the governor's absence, so it is no great undertaking, additional to what he ran.

Mr. Stagg I agree that that is a correct statement.

Mr. Lanier Mr. Stagg, did I understand you correctly when you said that if this article makes no provision for fixing salaries, that in your opinion, the legislature would then have the right to do so?

Mr. Stagg I did say that Mr. Lanier. If you wish to correct me, I am wide open.

Mr. Lanier Well, I just wanted to get your opinion as to what effect you think that the present provisions which I understand will be duplicated on division of powers would have on that. In particular Article II, Section 1 that says the powers of government of the state of Louisiana are divided into three distinct departments: legislative, executive and judicial. In Section 2 which says no one of these departments nor any person holding office in one of them shall exercise power belonging to either of the others except as otherwise provided in this constitution.

Mr. Stagg And we are here otherwise providing in this constitution for that exception...

Mr. Henry The gentlemen has exceeded his time.

Recess

[Quorum Call: 85 delegates present and = quorum.]

Mr. O'Neill Yes, sir, I am. I heard you read it awhile ago.

Mr. Lanier In your opinion, would I be correct in saying that you do not feel that the division of powers would not create a situation here where there would be at least some doubt as to who would be setting the salary of the executive if there was no specific provision in this article that it be done by the legislative branch?

Mr. O'Neill I have some doubt Mr. Lanier, but very little.

Mr. Lanier Well, if there is any question at all, don't you think that it would be prudent for us to make sure that there is absolutely no doubt.

Mr. O'Neill Well, Mr. Lanier, my understanding is, that a Mr. Hayes has prepared an amendment to come back which would simply say the compensation of each official within the executive branch shall be fixed by the legislature period. I think that if we take this entire section out right now, come back and insert that here, that it will take care of that doubt and I think any other doubt that anyone else has.

Mr. Denney Mr. O'Neill, would you please reiterate your explanation of why the B portion of this is useless verbiage?

Mr. O'Neill Well, Mr. Denney if the legislature is allowed to set salaries, I feel that they can set the salaries for these people as it should be. I personally disagree with the section anyway. First, let me explain my reason. The lieutenant governor assumes his job and inherent in that job is that in case anything happens to the governor the lieutenant governor shall take over. When he runs for that job, he knows the salary and he knows the duties and I think he in particular doesn't need this extra provision. Secondly, I think a first assistant shouldn't automatically go up to the salary of the head of that department, just automatically, I think it would create more problems than it would solve.

Mr. Denney Well, I understood you earlier to say that you thought it would even be useless verbiage in the statute and I didn't quite follow why you said that.

Mr. O'Neill Well, I said that because of personal objections, Mr. Denney. I really don't believe that it is constitutional and I would never vote to even put it in a statute.

Mr. Denney Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Asseff Mr. Chairman, delegates, in view of the fact that there are several amendments, I shall defend my position just once. I have one sentence to protect, no state official shall receive a salary in excess of that paid to the governor. Someone wanted to know why it was phrased that way.

Well, I got it out of committee by a five to four vote and I had no intentions of changing even a comma, because I am not sure I would have gotten it out. I cannot agree with the gentleman that this does not do anything but set a salary. It does say, "shall not be increased nor decreased". Now, you may differ with it but it says may not be increased nor decreased, for the term for which the official is elected. Unless this is placed in the constitution then the legislature will be free to do as it pleases, which is all right with me. I am here to defend "no state official shall receive a salary in excess of that paid to the governor". The purpose of the provision is to require that the governor be the highest paid official. Since the governor is responsible for administering the entire executive branch, surely he should be paid more money than any person beneath him. I am well aware of the fact that the governor has the mansion and all the fringe benefits. But in my opinion he earns every cent that he is paid. It is argued that it is statutory and that it will discourage getting top people. To the first, I say two things. What is statutory and what is not, is a matter of opinion. And much that is statutory has been and will be included in this constitution before we finish. However to me it is fundamental. I watched four governors refuse salary increases. One took a small one. No governor with political ambitions will sign a salary increase bill for himself, it would be political suicide. For it would be said he knew his salary when he ran and he couldn't wait to grease his own palm. Ask them, I have. But haven't others increased their salaries when they knew what they were being paid. I am sorry if it discourages top people. In my book the top person is the governor and he should be paid a salary commensurate with his responsibilities. And his responsibilities exceed those of everyone beneath him, individually and collectively. How can you argue that we must reorganize government and strengthen the governor in the executive branch and yet be unwilling to pay him a salary in accord with that responsibility. You simply cannot do it. He is the top man in government and should be the top man in salary. If we paid our officials for themselves, I expect more from them and minimize outside influences. I am well aware of the fact of the defect in draftsmanship, I have drafted for many, many years but this is the best I could get and so I go along with it and I urge you to consider seriously the fact that the governor is the top official, he cannot sign a salary increase bill for himself, ask him. So if you want to make him top man in responsibility then I suggest you make him top man in salary. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Mr. O'Neill Dr. Asseff, two questions. First, has there ever been a lack of people aspiring to the governorship?

Mr. Asseff As far as I am concerned, Mr. O'Neill, that is immaterial.

Mr. O'Neill Second question Dr. Asseff, correct me if I am wrong. Wasn't it your notion that deleted entirely or almost entirely the reference to salaries in the legislative department which we adopted overwhelmingly?

Mr. Asseff Mr. O'Neill, I made it perfectly clear that I am in accord with the general principle, however there are exceptions to all rules. I am in agreement that the legislature should fix salaries. I simply say that this is a situation in which no governor will sign a salary increase bill and that consequently this provision will make it possible for him to do so. Of course I agree, under every other circumstance I would be willing to let the legislature do it and I think I have made that position clear.

Mrs. Warren I am not trying to say what the governor should or how much he is worth, but I am concerned about the medical situation today and if I got real sick, the most important thing...

Mr. Asseff Mrs. Warren, I yielded for a question not....

Mrs. Warren Now, I want to ask you this question. Since there is a scarcity of doctors and our health is important. If we can't get a doctor less than we pay the governor, then we are going to have to increase his salary in order to get that extra special thing that we need then.

Mr. Asseff I am willing to pay everyone an adequate salary Mrs. Warren. Now, I simply am saying that the top dog in administration should get the top salary and the only way I know to do it is to make a directive to the legislature. I am well aware of constitutional law. And I am also well aware of the fact that I doubt seriously that we could enforce it if the legislature ignored it.

Further Discussion

Mr. Gravel Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I want to speak in support of the amendment to delete all of Section 4. Particularly I would like to respond briefly to the statements made by Dr. Asseff who strongly believes that there should be contained in the new constitution a provision to the effect that no state official shall receive a salary in excess of that paid to the governor. I discussed this particular provision with the governor last Saturday afternoon and he authorized me to state that he does not feel that any such provision that relates specifically to salaries and particularly his, should be contained in the constitution. As a footnote to that, of course I am sure all of you realize that the emoluments of office insofar as the office of governor is concerned is substantially more than the salary that he is paid. Now, I do believe that if Mr. O'Neill's amendment is adopted, as I think it should be, that we need to come back with some provision in Section 4, and I propose to do so, if that amendment is adopted, to provide that the compensation of each elected official shall be fixed by the legislature except as otherwise provided in the constitution. And the reason for that is, that I don't believe that as Mr. Triche has pointed out that we adequately handled this particular provision or this type of provision in the Legislative Article. We did say in the Legislative Article, you will recall that the salaries of public officials should not be reduced during their term of office but nowhere have we said that the Legislature should be responsible for fixing the salaries of elected officials and I believe that would need to go in here and then Style and Drafting can determine where it should be placed in the ultimate constitution. But I feel that the O'Neill amendment is a good one and that the language of Section 4 should be totally deleted from the constitution.

Questions

Mr. Willis Mr. Gravel, don't you agree that in matters of public service the less the profit the greater the honor?

Mr. Gravel I not only agree with it, I am a victim of it.

Mr. Willis Dittoing that for the next question, as far as I am concerned I wouldn't be the thesis to what prompted the governor to delete the section?

Mr. Gravel No, I think what the governor's position was that in addition to the salary that he receives, he gets the use of automobiles, and airplanes, and servants and a mansion and as Earl used to say a lot of free groceries. And I believe that the governor was suggesting that the emoluments of office...for the office of governor were adequate to the needs of anybody who sits in the office.

Mr. Asseff Mr. Gravel, you and I are on the same committee, isn't it a fact that you drafted and included this provision in the constitution...in our proposal except for the last sentence which I included.

Mr. Gravel You mean the part...

Mr. Asseff That is correct, sir. You proposed it and we adopted it sir.

Mr. Gravel Just a moment, you mean the provision that has no state...

You are the author of the sentence that says, no state official shall receive a salary in excess of that paid to the governor. It is entirely possible that he helped draft the provision...I did many other provisions of the article with the full right and reservation that all of us retained at all times to oppose any provision that we wanted to oppose on the floor of this convention.

Mr. Asseff Correct, but that was not my question, Mr. Gravel.

My question was, did you do it, which you did and I did the last sentence.

Mr. Gravel That is probably correct.

Mr. Asseff Which is all right, you may change your mind, that wasn't my question. The governor as I recall at a meeting of the Committee on the Executive Department when I specifically posed the question to him stated that if a salary was specified it should be a minimum one and asked that regardless of what we did, it should be made clear that he knew nothing about it, which of course is true. Now, he did make that statement sir. Now, I don't mind your saying that he didn't change his mind. Thank you.

Mr. Gravel I understand your question.

Mr. Champagne Mr. Gravel, would you agree to the statement that "no state official shall receive a salary in excess of that paid to the governor" might be misinterpreted by some people who are going to vote on this constitution as possibly a hidden means of the governor getting a big salary?

Mr. Gravel I think that is correct.

Mr. Kean Mr. Gravel, I share the concern that Mr. Lanier has expressed here. If we delete this entire section so that there is no provision for the setting of the executive salaries is it your opinion that the legislature would then have the inherent right to set those salaries?

Mr. Gravel I think probably the legislature would have that right but as I stated at the outset, if the O'Neill amendment is adopted and if Section 4A is deleted, that I propose to offer an amendment that would provide in essence that except as otherwise provided in this constitution, the compensation of each elected official shall be fixed by the legislature. And I think that we need that although I don't believe that this is necessarily the place where it should be lodged, Style and Drafting can reallocate it to its proper place at the proper time. Thank you.

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Mr. Stovall Mr. Gravel, did I understand you to say that you had talked with the governor about this provision?

Mr. Gravel I did...

Mr. Stovall The present governor?

Mr. Gravel The present governor. Saturday afternoon and he authorized me to make the statement that I made, that he did not feel that this kind of provision should be in the constitution nor should any...

Mr. Stovall But, my question, Mr. Gravel...are we writing a constitution to accommodate the present governor or are we writing a constitution which we think will be the best for the future of our state ...

Mr. Henry Mr. Stovall, he's exceeded his time. This kind of tommy-rot is not necessary.

Further Discussion

Mr. Burns Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, that last sentence in this Section 4A is of some concern to me because I believe it can be so misconstrued and misleading and I just don't think it's the proper business-like way to fix salaries of the elected state officials or local government or other departmental heads. I think that each salary should be fixed on the basis of the position that they hold and what salary is commensurate with their duties and responsibilities. But to pass this amendment, which would automatically mean that one position, I'm told in the state, pays a salary of $57,800 while another position, I'm told, the governor would be raised from $28,000 some $30,000 just by virtue of passing this amendment. Personally, I think the governor is underpaid. I think that his salary should be higher in view of the present economic situation and his responsibilities, but I certainly don't feel like that this is the way to accomplish that objective. I think perhaps by the passage of this amendment deleting this section altogether, although this sentence is the only one that I find fault with, and then having come back with the passage of Section 1 as Mr. Gravel suggested he's going to do, I think would be the best approach to it, or either pass this present section with the deletion of that last sentence, but I think the last sentence as Mr. Champagne, as we call him over in our section of the country...I think his suggestion has merit, that perhaps it's going to give the public a wrong impression that there's something hidden in this thing, which I'm sure there's not, but I suggest that we either delete this last sentence or delete the whole section and approach it in a different manner.

[Previous question ordered.]

Point of Information

Mr. De Blieux I want to know if we can have a division of that question, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Henry No, sir. I don't believe the question is divisible because of the way the amendment is drawn.

Can it be divided, Mr. Clerk?

Mr. Poynter No, Mr. Chairman, because, Mr. De Blieux, the first amendment would just take out the first three lines on page 2, and the second amendment would take the six lines on page 4, so you would be slicing right in the middle of paragraphs.

Mr. De Blieux So, the best way is to defeat the whole thing, I guess.

[Amendment adopted: 55-41. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Recess

[Roll call: 102 delegates present and unanimous.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendments offered by Delegate Gravel as follows: Amendment No. 1, on page 2, delete lines 10 through 32 both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Section 4. Except as otherwise provided in this constitution, the compensation of each elected official shall be fixed by the legislature."

Explanation

Mr. Gravel Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this is simply the amendment that I said that I would offer in the event that Mr. O'Neill's amendment passed. It provides that the compensation of each elected official shall be fixed by the legislature.

Questions

Mr. Casey Mr. Gravel, I'd like just a brief explanation as to exactly why this is even necessary. My off-hand opinion is that the legislature would have the right to fix salaries, but you must have, certainly, a good reason for submitting this.

Mr. Gravel Well, I think that the legislature traditionally does fix the salaries of elected officials, but there might be some elected officials for example in the judiciary. There might be some question as to whether or not they can fix the salaries of the clerks of court, and I think that unless there is some other provision in the constitution providing for the fixing of the salaries of elected officials, and I don't know that there would be that we ought to have a catch-all provision to make sure that the legislature performs that function. That's the only reason...I thought it should be made positive, so that there should be no question about it. I don't know whether the local government provision with respect to the fixing of salaries of elected officials in local government will pass. If it does, then it wouldn't be necessary with respect to local governing officials.

Mr. Casey Well, do you feel that if this provision were not in then the legislature might not have the right to fix the salary of, let's say, the attorney general?

Mr. Gravel Well, do you feel that if this provision were not in then the legislature might not have the right to fix the salary of, let's say, the attorney general?

Mr. Gravel I think that the legislature would have the authority to fix the salary but it might be possible that someone else or some other body might try to attempt to exercise such authority, and this would prohibit, really, anybody other than the legislature attempting to exercise such authority unless there were specific provisions therefore elsewhere in the constitution.

Mr. O'Neill Just a technical point, you have an amendment No. 2, and my amendment already deleted what this amendment attempts to delete...just a technical matter...I deleted A and B both in their entirety.

Mr. Gravel Actually this amendment should be just set forth what Section 4 will be now since your amendment did delete all of Section 4.

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Mr. Poynter Mr. Gravel, if it's acceptable to you, I've just stricken Amendment No. 2 and made Amendment No. 1 read: on page 2 at line 29 insert the following:

Mr. Gravel That would be correct. Thank you very much, Mr. Clerk.

Mr. Lanier Mr. Gravel, would you agree that, of course, with reference to the appropriation of monies to pay salaries that that is the right of the legislature?

Mr. Gravel If the money is coming from state government, yes, sir.

Mr. Lanier However, with reference to the fixing of the salary, would you not agree that with the separation of the different branches and the division of powers and the prohibition against one branch doing actions in the other branch except as provided in the constitution that there could be created here a very serious problem about how to fix the salary and that that is the very definite necessity for your amendment?

Mr. Gravel That's correct. I think so.

Mr. Kean Mr. Gravel, would you have any objection to inserting between the words "elected" and "official" the word "state" so it would read "of each elected state official".

Mr. Gravel Well, I'm afraid that that might be confusing because then it would perhaps not be construed to be applicable to district officials or other officials less than state official who might not otherwise be provided for in the constitution. I think it would leave a hole and a gap that might cause us some problems.

Mr. Kean Was it your intention in inserting the words "except as otherwise provided in this constitution" that if in the local government section, for example, it provides for local government units to provide for the pay, that this would be the exception?

Mr. Gravel That's correct, sir. That's exactly right.

Mr. Sandoz Mr. Gravel, if this is only intended to affect the rights of the legislature to fix the governor's salary shouldn't this be in the legislative section rather than in the executive?

Mr. Gravel I thought that I had made that clear, Mr. Sandoz, and I do agree that this provision will probably have to be placed in the legislative article by Style and Drafting when the ultimate document is composed and put together.

Mr. Willis Mr. Gravel, I have trouble with the word "each". Shouldn't it be "all elected public officials" instead of "each"? I envisage that if you use the word "each" then you could treat them separately and you would have salaries, well you don't use salaries, you use compensation. That was my other question. Couldn't that be interpreted to mean that they'll sort them out.

Mr. Gravel I don't really see the problem. I think that we're referring to the determination by the legislature as to the compensation that each elected official would receive, and that is, in the absence of another provision, I think, would have to be determined mostly on an individual basis. That was the reason for using the word each.

Mr. Willis I fear a lack of uniformity, is all.

Mr. Gravel Well, I think that Style and Drafting can adjust that.

Further Discussion

Mr. DeBlieux Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen, the amendment which Mr. Gravel has said that was necessary we wouldn't even need that. The legislature can do that without this amendment, but it so happens in drafting this amendment, Mr. Gravel let out some very important words that were contained in the original portion of the provision as submitted by the Committee on the Executive. He left out the words "as fixed by the legislature and shall not be increased or decreased for the term which the official was elected." Those words are not contained in Mr. Gravel's proposal. That's the important words in that. That's why they were submitted by the Executive Committee to start with, to show that this was limited to those officials during the term of office for which they were elected. Now, I have an amendment proposed tracking the words as they are contained in the original proposal still leaving off that portion which says that the state official's salary shall not be in excess of that paid by the governor. I just don't feel like that we ought to have that particular provision in the law, because you might not be able to get a state official something that may be an appointed official to have for what you would pay the governor because he doesn't get all the other things which the governor gets. So, I'm going to ask you, if you want to have a realistic provision with reference to salaries in the constitution, you ought to vote down this one and vote for mine. At least, if you don't want my amendment, don't put this one in the constitution because it's just words which actually means nothing insofar as the legislature is concerned. They have the right to fix a salary anyway, and you don't have to tell them that they have that right when they already have it. I just think we ought to take out obsolete words out of the constitution. I am going to vote down this one and vote mine when it comes up.

Questions

Mr. Denny Mr. DeBlieux, Section 11 of Proposal No. 3, which we have already adopted, provides that the compensation of elected public officers shall not be reduced during the term for which they are elected. So, that takes care of part of your problem. Are you also worried about increasing their salary?

Mr. DeBlieux That's right. That's the very reason why I want to put it in there, Mr. Denny.

Mr. Denny In other words, you don't think the legislature should have that power?

Mr. DeBlieux I don't think they should have the power to increase the salary of an elected official ... a statewide elected official during the term for which he is elected. I think that we ought to increase it before he is elected, not after he's elected.

Mr. Denny Well, now I understood you to argue earlier, in connection with Proposal No. 3, that we should be very flexible as far as the legislature is concerned and we should permit them some leeway. Don't you believe that if living costs go way up beyond the ideas of people when they run for office the legislature should have the right to increase those salaries?

Mr. DeBlieux Mr. Denny, you have never heard me argue for the right of legislature to increase the elected official's salary for the term for which he was elected. Never.

Mr. Denny I didn't say that, Mr. DeBlieux. I said that you urged that we be flexible ... let many powers within the legislature not bind the legislature. Now, you're suggesting that we do bind the legislature.

Mr. DeBlieux The whole constitution is to bind the legislature. If we don't bind the legislature it's no need of passing a constitution, and I am in favor of binding the legislature for certain issues and letting it be flexible on others. One of the things which I don't want the flexibility is the right to increase elected officials' salary during the term for which they are elected. I just don't think that's right. I don't think that the public approves of it.

Mr. Nunez Senator De Blieux, you're very consistent; you've always maintained the position that elected officials should not be increased for the term for which he was elected. I take that it's a little narrow-minded for you to take this opinion but you're consistent in taking it. You don't believe that the economic conditions can change enough that it's justified in giving an elected official a raise in the 4 or 6 or 8 or 10 year period that he's elected for, even though conditions would justify that he get a raise.

Mr. De Blieux Senator Nunez, I've just wanted to keep the salaries the same for a four year period. I just say for more than that, but only for a four year period. I just feel like that that's a short enough period to allow for the increasing of salaries.

[Previous question ordered. Amendment adopted: 8-1-73. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendments

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. De Blieux], delete Amendments No. 1 and No. 2, proposed by Delegate O'Neill and adopted by the convention on August 3, 1973. And I would like to add to that to delete the Gravel amendment, now Senator Amendment No. 2, page 2, delete lines 29 through 32 both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Section 4. Compensation.

Section 4. The compensation of each elected state official within the executive branch shall be fixed by the legislature and shall not be increased nor decreased for the term for which the official is elected."

Explanation

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, the previous amendment as I stated that was adopted actually means nothing because the legislature already has that authority. Now, the real crux of this particular amendment is, and it pertains only to your state officials, it does not pertain to any other elected office, pertains only to elected officials, that their salary shall not be increased or decreased during the term for which they are elected. This does not apply to judges. It does not apply to legislators. It does not apply to assessors, sheriffs, or anybody like that. Only those people named in that particular section, I tell you that. Only those named in that particular section and I think it's a fair amendment and Mr. Chairman, I ask for a record vote.

Questions

Mr. Roy Senator De Blieux, when we were discussing the legislative provisions, didn't you bring up that exact same idea that you couldn't increase salaries in the terms of office of the representatives and we voted that down then?

Mr. De Blieux That pertained to legislators as well as to this. This amendment only pertains to the statewide elected officials contained in this section, Mr. Roy.

Mr. Roy Oh, I see. Then, it's OK for us to have not enjoined or prohibited legislators from raising their salaries in their terms of office, but you're going to by this provision stop us, or the legislature from increasing the salaries of statewide elected officers. Is that true?

Mr. De Blieux It was not OK with me. It might have been with you, but not with me.

Mr. Roy But that's the result isn't it?

Mr. De Blieux Yes, if I can't get what I want, [] take what I can get.

Mr. Roy Why? Why?

Mr. De Blieux Because, I don't have all the votes. If I could control this convention I could get what I wanted.

Mr. Roy Oh, in other words, you can accept the discriminatory practice against one group by a chance on vote but not against the other.

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Roy, this convention has been discriminating in a lot of sections, and I realize that. I wish it would not, and I wish we could get the provision which would apply equally every place, everywhere, to all the people at all the times. But unfortunately, this convention doesn't vote that way all the time.

[Previous question ordered. Amendment adopted: 8-1-73. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous question ordered in the Section. Section passed: 8-1-73. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

If he fails to veto such time provision by this constitution it shall become law.

H. Appropriation Bills.

1. The governor may veto any line item in any appropriation bill. The items vetoed shall be void unless the veto is overridden as prescribed for the passage of any other bill over a veto.

3. Should the legislature not be in session the governor may make interim appointments which shall expire at the end of the next session of the legislature unless submitted and confirmed by the Senate during such session.

4. A person not confirmed by the Senate shall not be appointed to the same office during any recess of the legislature.

J. Removal

The governor may remove from office those whom he appoints except those appointed for a term fixed by this constitution or as may be fixed by statute.

K. Commander-in-Chief

The governor shall be commander-in-chief of the armed forces of the state, except when they are called into the service of the federal government. He may call out the armed forces of the state to preserve law and order, to suppress insurrection, to repel invasion or in other times of emergency.

L. Extraordinary Session

1. The governor may convene the legislature into extraordinary session by issuance of a proclamation to the legislature at least five days prior to the convening of the session. The proclamation shall state the specific subjects to be considered, the date and time the legislature is to convene and the number of days for which the legislature is convened. The subject matter of the session may be amended by proclamation to the legislature until 48 hours prior to the hour at which the legislature convenes. The power to legislate under the penalty of nullity shall be limited to the subjects especially enumerated in the latest proclamation convening such extraordinary session. The session shall be limited to the time name therein and shall not exceed 30 days.

2. The governor may convene the legislature in extraordinary session without prior issuance of proclamation on occasions of public emergency caused by epidemics, attacks by the enemy, or public catastrophe.

Explanation

Mr. Duval: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, because this is such a short section, I'll be very brief. The Executive Department Committee is going to attempt to do this in tandem, in that it does have quite a few provisions and I'm going to attempt now to explain A, B, and C, and we'll have other members of the committee come up and explain the other sections.

"A" merely deals with the executive authority and provides that the governor is the chief executive officer of the state, and shall faithfully support the constitution and laws of the state. The present constitution provides that the governor is the supreme executive power. We deleted that language and put chief executive officer, which, I think, more accurately states what the governor really is, the chief executive officer. It requires him to faithfully support the laws of the constitution, to support the constitution and the laws rather than execute. Execute was in the other constitution and we felt it might be some problem when you require the governor to execute the laws, because in some instances he could not possibly execute a law. He would have to go through the normal processes of government to do that. Section 8 merely requires the governor at the beginning of each regular session of the legislature to make reports and recommendations and to give the legislature a full financial picture of the state. The present constitution requires the governor to make periodic reports to the legislature concerning affairs of the state and to recommend measures for its consideration. This, I think, more clearly requires the governor to give a full report at each legislative session and of course, at any other time can make reports and other recommendations and give information to the legislature. Section C coincides with our reorganization concept and merely gives the governor the right to secure information written or otherwise from his department heads. The department heads to be a part of the reorganization plan, and, of course, it excepts matters related to investigations of the governor's office, because we felt that this protection should be built in. The present constitution now provides that the governor can require written information and financial reports from all statutory and constitutional offices and agencies. So, this really doesn't vary from the present constitution, with the exception that it conforms to our department head language. If there are any questions, I'd be delighted to yield.

Questions

Mr. Tobias: Could you tell me why you left out in Section A, the phrase "and of the United States"? In other words, why are you just making him faithfully support the constitution of this state and not of the United States?

Mr. Duval: I don't remember any conscious deliberation on our part. I may stand corrected, some of the committee members may correct me, but I don't recall any specific reason except that the governor of Louisiana would have a primary obligation to Louisiana.

Mr. Singletary: Mr. Duval, on line 19 under Reports and Information "excepting matters relating to investigations of the governor's office," would you explain that a little, please?

Mr. Duval: Yes sir. With the governor's right to require written reports from all department heads, let's say the attorney general's office was conducting an investigation of the governor's office, the governor could secure this investigation material and I think it would be prejudicial to the investigation. So we thought that this type of thing should be protected in the constitution.

Mr. Burns: Mr. Duval, how does the length of this section in this proposed draft compare to the present section in the constitution? Lengthwise?

Mr. Duval: It's 87 words less. No. The present constitution has different sections on these matters, Mr. Burns, and this merely puts them all together in one section because they all relate to the powers and duties of the governor. It is actually no longer and perhaps it's probably shorter, actually. If you take all the sections and put them together.

Mr. Burns: The reason I asked, it just seemed like to me that there is so much of this that is descriptive. You know it goes into detail.

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Mr. J. Jackson Mr. Duval, you mentioned in your presentation that the committee thought about utilizing the word "execute" but there would possibly be instances where the governor, someone might be confused about whether the governor really had the capacity to execute certain laws. It would seem to me, that in your statement you also said "executive" and it seems to me the word "executive" is a derivative of some part of the word "execute". But could you give me some examples of situations where the governor could not be, or could not really execute?

Mr. Duval In the event someone in the executive some statutory official violated a criminal law, the governor could not execute that criminal law. It would have to be executed via the ordinary criminal process.

Mr. Alario Mr. Duval, on Section E you refer to a capitol budget here, and it says that...

Mr. Duval In the interest of the committee, I'm just explaining "A", "B" and "C".

Mr. Alario All right, then I'll just wait till someone else comes up for that.

Mr. Denney Mr. Duval, isn't it correct that in the present constitution there is no provision requiring the governor to faithfully carry out the constitution and laws of the United States and isn't that why we didn't place it in here because it has never actually been in the constitution?

Mr. Duval Yes. That's correct, the present constitution merely requires that the governor take care that the laws be faithfully executed. It doesn't say what laws.

Mr. Denney And this committee did not specifically reject such a provision.

Mr. Duval That is correct.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Sent up now by Delegate Stovall.

Amendment No. 1. On page 3, line 9, after the word "shall" delete the word "faithfully" and delete the "to" in its entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "cause the constitution and laws of the state to be faithfully executed and enforced."

Explanation

Mr. Stovall My dear Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this is a very simple amendment which is a clarification. I think that it's something in which we will all want to concur. Mr. Duval, in explaining this section, said the governor shall be the chief executive officer and then he made the statement that the governor cannot execute some of the laws. Now, if you notice that my amendment says the governor shall cause the constitution and laws of the state to be faithfully executed and enforced. I think the point is valid that the chief executive officer cannot carry out all of the laws, but the purpose of this amendment is simply to say that it is his responsibility to cause it to be done through whatever administrative channels he finds necessary. I choose the word "execute and enforce" rather than the word "support" because the word "support" is somewhat vague and general. However, the words "execute and enforce" are more definite and I think would be more acceptable in a constitution.

Further Discussion

Mr. Triche Mr. Speaker and ladies and gentlemen of the Convention, I don't rise necessarily in favor or in opposition to this amendment. I'd just like to hear some more discussion about it. The only thing I heard from Reverend Stovall was that the language "faithfully executed and enforced" sounded a little better than "faithfully support the constitution and laws." I'm not sure that I understand what we mean when we charge the governor and mandate him with the responsibility to faithfully execute and enforce laws. I'd like to hear some discussion on it. The present constitution says something like the governor shall cause the laws to be executed and I searched around for some understanding and definition of that, and I'm not sure that it's ever been defined or explained and I'm not sure I understand what we mean here. Do we say when the governor shall enforce the laws, does that mean that we give the governor the authority, just by way of illustration, to send the State Police into the various municipalities or parishes of the state to enforce criminal laws that may not be enforced at the local level by the local sheriff? Or do we call upon the governor to do other acts in connection with enforcement that he's not doing now? I'm not suggesting that it's good or bad, but I'd like to hear some more explanation of it.

Questions

Ms. Zervigon Mr. Triche, do you suppose that this could be interpreted to hold the governor responsible for everybody way down the line in his office so that if somebody did something wrong way down the line, the governor would be responsible for it because he hasn't caused the laws to be faithfully executed? Is that your reservation about this?

Mr. Triche No, that's not my reservation about it. I'm just concerned here and I'd like to have more explanation of what we mean by "executed and enforced." In answer to your question, Mrs. Zervigon, I'm not concerned with the governor's responsibility. He seeks the office and gets elected, he should meet up to his responsibility and should be answered for the people under his jurisdiction.

Mr. Roy Mr. Triche, I feel somewhat like you and I'm wondering if this is interpreted if the governor could be mandamus to enforce and execute laws that we're not sure of the interpretation of them. That is it may be that he would feel that there is no law there to execute and somebody would be filing mandamus suits on him trying to get him to do it.

Mr. Triche I'm concerned just for the opposite. For example, I recall a case where the legislature provided for the appointment of certain health officers by the state health officer and that was not done by the officer. In a suit to mandamus the health officer to appoint the local health officers, the court said that the power to execute the laws is vested in the governor and it could not mandamus any executive official, that that was the governor's prerogative and the governor's responsibility. Now when you say the governor is not only charged with the responsibility to execute but also enforce, I'm wondering if we are not now taking away some judicial authority from some other offices, probably, maybe the attorney general. I think the Supreme Court to see that laws, to order that laws are enforced. They may be met with the argument that the constitution says this is the responsibility of the governor to enforce the laws and we can't interfere. I'm just not sure, I have any number of reservations and I just would like to hear from the author of the proposal where the language came from, what's the meaning of the language.

Further Discussion

Mr. Denney Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise in opposition to Reverend Stovall's amendment. The language as shown in the Executive Department's Proposal says that the governor shall faithfully support the constitution and laws of the state. The amendment says that the governor shall cause the constitution and laws of the state to be faithfully executed and enforced. There are other provisions in the executive section which require certain other elected officials to execute and enforce certain laws of the state of Louisiana. I think we are putting a burden on the governor which will be impossible for him to fulfill and could conceivably give cause to an impeachment when the man, whoever was governor at the time or lady, would not have the power to cause the execution and enforcement of the laws by another elected official. We deliberated this section in the Executive Department Committee at length and we concluded that we should not put the burden on the governor to execute the laws, but merely to faithfully support the constitution and laws of the state and make him the chief executive officer of the state. It seems to me that this amendment could very well create an impossible position, or situation rather, and would be difficult of enforcement and might lead to bad results. I therefore request that you defeat the amendment.

Questions

Mr. J. Jackson Moise, I can understand some of the reservations that you may have about it, but maybe one of the reservations I have about the committee amendment is that you, based on your presentation just now, could you maybe go into some clarity of the word "support." I mean what does it mean for a governor to support the laws. Does that mean that he is void of having, in some cases, to have to execute, or see that certain laws are caused to be executed or be, in effect, adhered to? So could you maybe give us a little more deliberation or clarification as to what the committee meant by "support".

Mr. Denberry Well Mr. Jackson, I think we started off by saying that he is the chief executive officer of the state. That implies that any executive function that can be carried out by him must be carried out by him. There are some executive functions which are deliberately given to other officers. The attorney general has certain duties. The superintendent of education is going to have certain duties. The commissioner of agriculture, the commissioner of insurance, the commissioner of elections all have certain responsibilities to execute the laws. Now I don't see how we can make the chief executive responsible for improper execution, if you will of the laws, by another elected official. I think he should support those laws and in any instance where he has the power of execution, obviously, he will have to execute the laws. But to give him the duty, to burden him with the duty of causing the constitution and laws of the state to be faithfully executed and enforced, I think, creates an impossible situation. Does that answer your question, sir?

Vice Chairman Alexander in the Chair

Mr. Shannon Delegate Denberry, do you not think that this amendment would make more sense to add ... Do you have a copy of the amendment in front of you?

Mr. Denberry Yes sir.

Mr. Shannon To add "support and", to the beginning of his amendment, "support and cause the constitution and laws of the state to be faithfully executed." Leaving out "and enforced."

Mr. Denberry Well, I think it would be better than the way it's worded, Delegate Shannon, but I still think you might create an impossible situation when you give him the burden and duty of causing a law to be executed when he may not even have the power to execute it.

Mr. Shannon But granted that he does have the power, why, then this would be true.

Mr. Denberry Well if he has the power as the chief executive officer, he's not fulfilling his duty if he doesn't carry it out.

Mr. Tobias Mr. Denberry, are you aware that the present 1921 constitution, the Constitutional Oath, Article XIX, Section 1, provides only that the governor would have to support the constitution and laws of the United States and the constitution and laws of this state? COULD THIS BE THE REASON THAT YOUR COMMITTEE JUST WENT THE WORD "SUPPORT"?

Mr. Denberry I beg your pardon. I didn't quite understand you.

Mr. Tobias Well, the present Constitutional Oath simply provides...

Mr. Denberry Oh, the oath. Yes, yes I'm aware of that. I understood you, yes, the oath does say that.

Mr. Tobias This is probably the reason that you used the word "support" in your...

Mr. Denberry Probably. I wouldn't guarantee that, but I think it may be true.

Mr. Avant Mr. Denberry, in the proposal, Committee Proposal No. 6 of the Committee on the Judiciary, the section dealing with the sheriff. It says, in each parish a sheriff shall be elected for a term of four years. He shall be the chief law enforcement officer in the parish except as otherwise provided by this constitution. Now I think, I don't want to be speaking for everybody, but that was intended to cover duly... to exclude duly constituted chiefs of police in municipalities where you had a municipal police department, perhaps. But can't you see that under this amendment, "cause the constitution and laws of the state to be faithfully executed and enforced," that the governor could move into parish and supplant the duly elected sheriff and take over the law enforcement duties in that parish, and in that fashion, cause the laws of the state to be enforced.

Mr. Denberry That's very true, Mr. Avant. In addition to that, if he fails to do that, it is conceivable that he has given the legislature grounds to impeach him.

Mr. Derbes Mr. Denberry, isn't it important to distinguish, for purposes of this particular amendment, between an oath, which is essentially a vow of office, and a delegation of responsibility which we are really addressing ourselves to here?

Mr. Denberry Well, I think there is some distinction, Delegate Derbes, but I don't know that that answers the problems I have with the language.

Mr. Derbes So what we're really trying to do here, we're trying to be clear in the delegation of responsibility to the governor and empowering the governor to perform certain functions. We don't wish to delegate to him more responsibility than we feel he should have for actions of others. Isn't that essentially the criticism of the amendment? Thank you.

Mr. Denberry Yes, that's my criticism. Correct.

Mr. J. Jackson Mr. Denberry, just awhile ago Max mentioned that in an oath, that it's possible that the committee got the language that is presently being proposed as that language being support from the oath. But as I look into the book on page 53 where it talks, Subsection 14, under Governor, Execution of Laws, Extraordinary Sessions of Legislature, Restrictions on the Powers to Legislate, Limitation on Time and Proclamation and Notice, it says, "he shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed and make etc., etc." So that the word "execute", it has been used and is used in the 1911 constitution.

Mr. Denberry Oh yes, unquestionably. But it says take care to, and I think that is meaningless.

Closing

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Mr. Stovall It's somewhat surprising that questions would be raised concerning an effort to make adequate provisions for the execution and enforcement of the laws of the state. The last speaker recognized that in the 1921 constitution it says that the governor "shall cause the laws to be executed." This is all that this amendment says. It does not place a heavy burden on the governor. Instead, it recognizes that he shall cause, that is, through his administrative channels. Now, I think that in regard to what the attorney from Baton Rouge had to say a moment ago, that we would all recognize that if the laws of the state are being latently violated and are not being enforced in some subdivision, that there should be some channel whereby the enforcement of the laws can be realized. Certainly this power would not be exercised only in such cases. Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, it seems to me that this amendment simply says that the governor shall be responsible for the faithful execution and enforcement of the laws, for fulfilling this constitution which we are working on, and that he might, by appropriate action in the name of the state, see that the laws are enforced and executed and that the constitution is likewise. It seems to me to be a very reasonable amendment which strengthens the position of the constitution. Thank you.

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Delegates Roy, Vick and Tobias send up amendments at this time. Amendment No. 1. On page 3, line 10, at the end of the line delete the period and insert in lieu thereof the following: "and of the United States."

Explanation

Mr. Vick Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise to propose what is basically a technical amendment. It just adds "and the United States" after, "The governor shall be the chief executive officer of the state and shall faithfully support the constitution and laws of the state and the United States." Unless there are any questions, I move it's adoption.

Questions

Mr. Jenkins Mr. Vick, do you believe that this might someday put a governor in a position of having to support and possibly enforce some edict or mandate from the federal government which he felt to be unconstitutional or contrary to the laws of this state?

Mr. Vick Mr. Jenkins, my answer to your question would be that it is his duty to abide by the constitution and laws of this state and the United States until a court challenge had been pursued through to it's finality. I don't think we've had that sort of thing in the past.

Mr. Jenkins Well, isn't it true, though, that in many instances in order to get a court decision on a particular issue, some act has to be done which sometimes would not be in accord with the letter of the law in order to test the constitutionality of that particular law.

Mr. Vick Are you advocating civil disobedience?

Mr. Jenkins No, I'm asking you a question. Isn't it true that in most...

Mr. Vick A test case is always in order. You must have a justiciable issue which obviously raises a cause or controversy. A test case is always in order and I think one is not in violation of one's oath or one's duty if one tests the law.

Mr. Velazquez Delegate Vick, we still have only one nation, don't we, and 50 states? Not 50 nations over here.

Mr. Vick At last count, Mr. Velazquez, but I understand Hawaii had moved to secede after the other day's comments.

Mr. Velazquez Well, it's very possible, but I think that we better work with the idea that this was tried one time, when it did try to divide the situation up in the north and south, it didn't work then. I don't think we can envision any further civil wars so we ought to go ahead and make the governor of Louisiana obey the laws and the constitution of the United States seeing as every other citizen has to do so.

Mr. Vick Exactly, Mr. Velazquez.

Mr. Anzalone Mr. Vick, isn't this really some kind of an attempt to keep us from seceding from the Union?

Mr. Vick Not on my part.

[Prev. un. Question withdrawn. Amendment adopted: 85-9. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter The amendment is sent up by Delegates Anzalone and Asseff

Amendment No. 1 On page 3, delete lines 16 through 20, both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Chairman Henry in the Chair

[unrum Call: 89 delegates present and a quorum]

Explanation

Mr. Denny Mr. Chairman, delegates, This is an attempt to explain Sections D and E of Committee Proposal 4. The purpose of these committee proposals was to assure first in some manner that the state would operate under a balanced budget. Secondly, that there would be a capital budget provided for in the constitution. Neither of these philosophies are presently embedded in the state constitution. However, most of us on our committee were neophytes in the legislative art and we have been advised by many of the delegates to the constitution and also by many members of the staff of the constitution that the language which we have provided in there would be difficult to comply with. Therefore, although I have not polled all of the members of the Executive, the Committee on the Executive Department, I have spoken to many of them and I believe that the Committee on the Executive Department is now willing to go along with the amendment which you have before you now proposed by Delegates Rayburn, Roemer, and me. I have my understanding that in the section on the Proposal on Revenue and Finance, we are guaranteed in effect a balanced type of budget. The annual appropriations bill has a provision which will prevent or permit the governor to reduce the expenditures in the event that revenues do not come up to anticipated revenues. We have provided in the original draft that the revenues were to be anticipated by the governor, and that the appropriations should not exceed the anticipated revenues. At the suggestion of many delegates and also of many members of the staff, it was determined to leave anticipated state revenues in a rather vague sense so that the legislature in its wisdom each year could take anticipated revenues given to it by various and sundry sources such as the governor's office, the division of administration, L.S.U. New Orleans, L.S.U. Baton Rouge, PAR, the legislative auditor, etc. and try to come up with a figure which was a reasonably correct anticipation of the revenues for that year. Accordingly, we recommend that the, or at least I recommend, speaking for myself and I think for most of the members of the Executive Department Committee, the adoption of the amendments submitted by Senator Rayburn, et al which regards the operating budget. I do not have before me the amendments submitted with regards to the capital budget.

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Rayburn], on page 3, delete lines 21 through 29 both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "D. The governor shall submit to the legislature at a time fixed by law a proposed state budget for the next fiscal year setting forth all proposed state expenditures and anticipated state revenues."

Explanation

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, This amendment was adopted by the Committee on Revenue, Taxation and Finance and after talking to some of the other committee members, I think we have reached an agreement. The language is very brief and is self-explanatory. It says, "the governor shall submit to the legislature at a time fixed by law"; the original bill says within two weeks. We felt like the legislature might want to fix three weeks or a longer period so we did leave out the two weeks and say by a time fixed by law which means that would be a time fixed by the legislature. A proposed, not necessarily a state budget as the original language provides but a proposed state budget for the next fiscal year setting forth all proposed state expenditures and anticipated state revenues, period, and we think that's brief and to the point and I would ask the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, just a... when they prepared this amendment they left out at the beginning operating budget and we did write it in pencil and it is in the original. It is not in this one, I just wanted to call this to your attention.

Questions

Mr. Jenkins Senator Rayburn, in the committee's proposal it says "total appropriations for the year shall not exceed anticipated annual revenues as projected by the governor and the operating budget." Will you have some language to that effect in your Article on Revenue and Taxation?

Mr. Rayburn Yes, sir. We have it in our recommendations. I'll read it, Mr. Jenkins. It says total appropriations made by the legislature for any fiscal year shall not be greater than anticipated revenue of the state. We have that covered in another section. We felt like it would be more applicable to another section than it would this section and I move the adoption of the amendments.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Rayburn, et al], on page 3, delete lines 30 through 32 both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "E... And you need to insert on your copy Capital budget... The governor shall submit to each regular session of the legislature a proposed five year capital outlay program with a request for implementation of the first year of the five year program." Page 4, delete lines 1 through 5 both inclusive in their entirety

Explanation

Mr. Rayburn Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, in the original bill that you have before you, the language provided that the governor shall submit at each regular session of the legislature a proposed capital budget as provided by law implementing the first year of the program. The language in the amendment says the governor shall submit to each regular session of the legislature a proposed five year capital outlay program with a request for implementation of the first of the five year program which means that the governor can request the implementation of the first year if revenues are available, but it does not bind us to have to abide by his capital outlay program and that's why we added the word "request" in place of just a five year capital outlay program. And that are no questions I move the adoption of the amendments.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

Mr. Poynter Amendment No. 1 [by Mr. Sandoz], on page 4, line 10, after the word and punctuation "offences," and before the words "in addition" add the following: "All these powers except the governor's power to grant reprieve of a death sentence may be restricted or limited by law."

Explanation

Mr. Sandoz Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, the purpose of this amendment is to permit the legislature in proper cases to be able to restrict the governor's right of commutation and also, to permit in certain cases, for example, at the present time our problem is just as brief as this. Sometimes the man that's convicted beats the deputies back home and we're trying to grant to the legislature, which I believe is the responsible body today and apparently improving in that category all along, the right to limit in certain specific cases by statute the powers of the governor except in the case of a reprieve to grant commutation and pardon and this is recommended and sponsored also by our district attorney and I think he has discussed this with a number of the district attorneys throughout the state. We are trying to, in cases where the juries that try these cases recommend a certain sentence without benefit of pardon or parole that the person sentenced under those circumstances by a jury that heard the evidence that that person would serve the sentence as recommended and I'll be glad to answer any questions that any delegate may have.

Questions

Mr. Roy Mr. Sandoz, what juries are deciding what penalties will be imposed on people? I'm not aware of that.

Mr. Sandoz I didn't understand your question.

Mr. Roy What juries are deciding the punishments that will be imposed on people? I thought the judge did that.

Mr. Sandoz Well, I'm saying the sentence... in the event of a jury recommending life sentence without benefit of pardon or parole, if there would be such a statute passed in this state, meaning for life imprisonment, let's say Mr. Roy, you had a third offender convicted three times for aggravated rape, and this was his third offense and the jury that heard him recommended life imprisonment without benefit of parole or pardon and a legislative act was enacted to support that, then the governor, in those circumstances could not commute that sentence or grant parole under those circumstances.

Mr. Roy Well, then what you're saying is that a legislature from session to session may just arbitrarily decide commutation or no commutation, well then how are you going to stop that?

Mr. Sandoz I'm saying by general law Mr. Roy. It's not designed to apply to any particular case. But let's say armed robbery for example, in armed robbery if the legislature, and there's such a statute, provides that there shall be ninety-nine years or whatever term it specified and if the legislature in that particular type crime would specify that that sentence would be without benefit of commutation of sentence or parole then under those circumstances the governor's power would be limited.

Mr. Roy I understand what you're saying but you're not addressing yourself to my question. My question is couldn't a subsequent legislature say that that particular crime will be subject to commutation of sentence?

Mr. Sandoz Oh yes, it could be changed.

Mr. Roy Well, that's what I'm saying, so that there is no stability in the law. You are taking away under your amendment the thing that we the people have given to the governor historically you're going to remove it from session to session of a legislature.

Mr. Sandoz No, my point is this, Mr. Roy, that we would place in the discretion of the legislature the right under proper circumstances and conditions to place some limitation on the unlimited power of the governor to grant these pardons and commutations. In other words, I believe that under certain sets of facts that it would be more responsible to have the legislature set certain types of crimes and conditions that would restrict the right of the governor to pardon and commute sentences.

Mr. Roy But that right would still be an arbitrary determination every four years or every year. Every regular session the legislature could change what had been done prior thereto.

Mr. Sandoz That's true of every legislative act.

Mr. Roy But we're dealing with the notion of commutation and reprieves and a constitutional document that was inherent in the right of the governor. Are we not?

Mr. Sandoz Well, that's true and I'm submitting Mr. Roy, that that power has been abused in the past and I would like to put some restriction on that power through the legislature.

Mr. Roy Well then why don't we just take out the idea of commutation and reprieves and pardons all together and just let it be governed by the legislature from session to session?

Mr. Sandoz No, I'm basically in favor of the governor exercising these powers. However, I think that in the past we have been subject to an abuse of these powers in certain instances and I'm recommending that the legislature be in a position to place certain restraints in certain specific crimes.

Mr. Roy Well, I don't take it, or do I take it that you have any statistical data to support what you're talking about other than what your district attorney may feel is necessary?

Mr. Sandoz I think that there are other district attorneys here that may back up the statistics I'm referring to.

Mr. Roy I hadn't heard any...

Mr. Avant Mr. Sandoz, the thing that troubles me and I'd like to have an answer to is this. The legislature has passed a law, a penalty provision regarding armed robbery. Now I'm not defending armed robbers, don't indulge in that assumption, it's a very heinous crime but I can envision a situation where a young man say, 18 or 19 years old convicted of armed robbery and was sentenced to ninety-nine years. He may serve twenty-five years and at that time he may well be the proper recipient of some type of clemency or parole or something like that, on the other hand he may not be but it could be that he would be. Would this prohibit then, if the law at the time he was sentenced, that there would be no parole or pardon or commutation of sentence?

Would this prohibit any relief for that man if he was truly entitled to it at that time?

Mr. Sandoz Mr. Avant, we are leaving the details of the types of crimes and terms and conditions up to the legislature. The legislature may fix these terms and conditions as it deems fit. We are only attempting because of experience which we've had, to provide that in certain cases, in the wisdom of the legislature if it deems necessary it would have that right to pass such a statute.

Mr. Avant Now, question number two. There are many crimes that are today don't carry that limitation. Armed robbery I think is the only one that does. I may be wrong but let's take simple theft, could under this provision the legislature enact laws applying to people who had already been convicted and sentenced of the crime of theft and were presently serving their sentence and eliminate their right to executive clemency?

Mr. Sandoz I don't think they could. I don't think that would be retroactive.

Mr. Avant Well, I'm not at all sure and those things disturb me.

Mr. Champagne Mr. Roy pointed out that it was discretion of the legislature. Isn't it not discretionary now to the governor? In other words would it not limit it to more people than simply one or two or three?

Mr. Sandoz That's true, Mr. Champagne. We're trying to put this power to some extent in the hands of the majority of the elected legislature rather than in one man's hand.

Further Discussion

Mr. Gravel Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I urge you to reject this amendment. The Committee on the Executive Department worked long and hard in the preparation of this provision dealing with pardons, commutations, reprieves and feels that we have come up with a plan that probably should satisfy most people who are concerned with this most important area of activity in the executive branch of state government. Essentially what has been done here in the proposal by the committee is to make sure that the ultimate and final right to make a determination as to whether a pardon, commutation or reprieve shall be granted will rest with the chief executive officer of the state of Louisiana. The governor retains the ultimate right under this proposal. Now many people thought that in addition to the governor having that right that some other provision should be authorized whereby the legislature by supplementary provisions could also provide other methods and other means by which a pardon, commutation or reprieve could be granted. The upshot of it all is probably going to be that the legislature will devise and will develop a plan which in practically every instance will be utilized for the purpose of granting this kind of relief but I don't think there's any question but that because of the position that he occupies in state government that in the very last analysis that the governor's authority to act in these instances should be retained, so what I think that we should do and hope that we do do, is to stay with the committee proposal which gives the ultimate authority to the governor but also authorizes the legislature to provide supplemental methods whereby post conviction relief can be granted to persons charged with offenses and I strongly urge that you reject this amendment.

Questions

Mr. Lanier Mr. Gravel, would you tell me if I'm correct in reading this. This gives an unlimited right to the governor in any case to grant a commutation or reprieve?

Mr. Gravel It does, sir.

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Mr. Lanier Is this any change from the present law?

Mr. Gravel It is to the extent that the pardon board under present law consists of the lieutenant governor, attorney general and the presiding judge and this would substitute the ultimate and final pardoning power in the office of governor for that particular kind of pardon board. That is correct sir.

Mr. Lanier Then would it be theoretically possible say, for the governor to pardon or relieve all the prisoners in Angola, if that was his wish?

Mr. Gravel Under this provision, yes he could. It would be possible.

Mr. Derbes Mr. Gravel, there is nothing in the original committee proposal as submitted which would preclude the legislature from adopting a law providing for automatic pardon... that is restoration of citizenship for first offenders without the necessity of gubernatorial intervention.

Mr. Gravel That's correct, Mr. Derbes. As a matter of fact the legislature can and should and I suggest will provide some model method by which this kind of release can be considered and will be granted but it would be supplementary or corollary to the same right that the governor as the chief executive officer of the state would have under this proposal.

Mr. Derbes I think that's good. Thank you.

Further Discussion

Mr. Burson Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I want to lay the issue squarely on the line. Do you believe that you ought to have a meaningful sentence of life imprisonment under our criminal law because that's what the gut issue is in this whole topic? We all know that for all practical purposes the death sentence is a dead letter. I submit to you that the legislature in its last session enacted Act No. 111 which provided among other things that in second degree murder where the capital crime of second degree murder shall be imprisoned at hard labor for life and shall not be eligible for parole, probation or suspension of sentence for a period of twenty years and that is what the legislature passed at the last session. Under the committee proposal, the legislative Act 111, and I advise all of you legislators to take a look at that committee proposal and see if this is not true. Your legislative act would be unconstitutional because this constitutional provision would give to the governor the absolute right to grant a pardon or parole and you could pass legislative acts regarding life imprisonment for murder until you were blue in the face and they would be flatly unconstitutional because you could not limit a constitutional power which is unlimited under the committee proposal and that is the purpose of this amendment to permit the legislature in the proper case to limit it. Now it's been said the legislature would act arbitrarily, what is more arbitrary than one man making the total decision in this case. Remember, under the present law the pardon and parole boards... the pardon cannot be granted unless two out of three of the lieutenant governor, the attorney general and the presiding judge in the case who knows the facts of the case make a recommendation to the governor. Now, when you vote on this and I'm going to ask for a record vote, I want you to be ready, however you vote to grant pardon and explain to your people, how it is that you voted for a provision which would take the presiding judge, who is the only one that knows the facts of the case, off the pardon board and turn around and grant an unlimited grant of authority to the governor without any ability of the legislature to limit it and I submit to you that Mr. Gravel is flatly incorrect when he says that the committee proposal permits the legislature to limit the power. All it says is that the legislature may provide additional methods for the foregoing. Well, the additional meth-would be simply additional methods for exercising the power but it cannot limit that power unless you adopt this amendment and I submit to you that in order to preserve the integrity of legislation that has been enacted as late as the last session of the Louisiana legislature and I noticed that some of the cosponsors on Act No. 111 Senator Rayburn among them, Representative Ullo. I urge you to think in this case of the people that you're representing. Now I have a great deal of sympathy for people who are in prison but I also have a great deal of sympathy for the helpless victims of brutal crimes and we've seen cases as recently as this year in my parish where a man who was sentenced to twenty-five years in the penitentiary for a brutal crime of manslaughter was back on the street in six months. Now if that's what you want to continue, well you go ahead and vote for the committee proposal and let the governor have the unlimited power of pardon but if you think that your elected representatives in the state legislature ought to be able to pass statutes such as Act No. 111 which would say that if a man was sentenced to life imprisonment for second degree murder that he had to serve at least twenty years then you vote for our amendment. It's as simple as that.

Questions

Mr. Gravel Just to get the record straight, are you under the impression that I said that the legislature could eliminate the power of the governor under this section?

Mr. Burson Mr. Gravel, I wasn't quite sure what you said but I thought that impression might have been left and I wanted to dispel it if it had.

Mr. Gravel Let me dispel the impression because I don't think I said that, if I did certainly didn't intend to. I wanted to make it clear I thought, that the governor did have total and complete power and that the power of the legislature would be supplementary and corollary to that power and I don't think I said that and I certainly don't want to leave that impression with you or with the convention.

Mr. Burson Well, I'm glad we agree on that point because I think that makes the issue clear on the vote on this amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Triche Mr. Speaker and ladies and gentlemen of the Convention, I'm not going to have any difficulty at all going back to Assumption Parish and telling the people whom I live with that I voted against this amendment. It's not going to be difficult for me to explain. It reminds me of a song; you don't have to hear and you don't have to see, you can feel it in your ofactory. It's like a dead skunk in the middle of the road, it's sticking to high heaven. That's what I'm going to tell my folks why I voted against this amendment. The power to pardon has been traditionally an executive function. It's got nothing to do with the legislature. The legislature cannot make those kind of decisions. I repeat again and again and again the legislature makes political decisions and I submit to you that the authority to pardon is not one of those decisions the legislature is competent to make nor should it be called on to make because it will not do it responsibly. I guarantee you that, Mr. Burson. What is this amendment about? I'll tell you what it's about. The acts passed in the recent session of the legislature limiting sentence, said that the sentence shall be for twenty years without benefit of parole, probation or suspension of sentence. That's a directive to the district court that renders the sentence. It says nothing about prohibitions against pardon, reprieve or commutation of sentence and the reason for this is pardon, reprieve and commutation of sentence are constitutional authorities granted to the chief executive in the constitution of 1924 and we propose that it be granted again in this constitution. Probation, parole and suspension of sentence are sentences meted out by the district judge after the defendant has been found guilty and all the legislature has ever said and all it can ever say is that the defendant after found guilty shall be sentenced to X years without benefit of parole, probation and suspension of sentence. That's entirely different from pardon. Parole is after a man has served some time in the penal institution and has been rehabilitated and upon the advice and with the consent of the parole board, the parolee is granted some relief. That's after he has served a portion of the sentence. Probation and suspension of sentence is usually granted at the time of sentence by the district judge because the circumstances warrant some additional mercy in the case and the district judge will say two years probation, ten years sentence suspended in good behavior. Those are the types of things that the laws in the past and the legislature have sought to prohibit the courts from doing. Prescribing a sentence without benefit of parole, probation or suspension of sentence but never has the legislature provided that sentence shall be without pardon. If you pass this amendment, you will allow the legislature to set certain crimes that will be without parole and without benefit of pardon. Now let me tell you about that. Once a sentence is imposed and begins to be served it cannot be changed. I repeat, it cannot be changed and parole doesn't change the sentence. It puts him on the street under certain conditions but the sentence of ten years imprisonment still goes on. The sentence cannot be changed. If a man is convicted of a crime that calls a penalty, if a man is convicted of a crime that calls for a penalty without benefit of pardon and he's sentenced to fifty years in a penitentiary without benefit of pardon and we later find out five or ten years later, somebody makes a deathbed confession, we found out in spite of due process laws, in spite of the sworn testimony of witnesses and the jury of an impartial verdict of an impartial jury, we've convicted the wrong man and there's nothing we can do about it.

There's nothing we can do about it. There are no post conviction remedies that apply to that circumstance and that situation except the remedy of pardon. I've exceeded my time on ladies and gentlemen. This is a very serious matter and I urge you please to vote against this.

Further Discussion

Mr. Burns: Mr. Speaker and fellow delegates, it is true what Mr. Friche has just said about the power of the governor to pardon and the authority and the legal rights of the legislature only to deal with paroles and things of that matter. That is exactly the purpose of this amendment in this new constitution. We're not talking about the constitution of 1921. If we fail to adopt this amendment it will go by to the voters. The thing that impresses me, ladies and gentlemen, is almost everything that has been said not only in connection with this particular amendment, but with reference to the criminal, its reference to the law violator, its reference to those who have been guilty of the atrocious and the mass killings that we experience today, and which, unfortunately, are growing worse and worse all the time. I think in drawing up this new constitution that we should stop a minute and think about those people who have been the victims of these tragedies of these murders, and kidnappings, and rapes and give them a little consideration, or at least their families and their loved ones and not devote all our time for the protection of the public, at this time, is more aroused and more aware about that, particularly since the United States Supreme Court has seen fit to declare the death penalty unconstitutional. The only thing that we have to offer the people of our state now, if that when a man is convicted of a cold blooded murder or particularly a mass killing, that he's sentenced to the penitentiary for life, it means that. I don't mean that he goes up for a year or two years, and under this article that the governor would see fit to pardon him. And what I'm saying,

I want it definitely understood, has no reference to the present governor. We keep on saying which is properly so that we are adopting this constitution to serve for the next 50 years. So what I'm saying applies to all governors in the future. I am not necessarily sold on this particular amendment, but what I'm saying is that we're going to have to put some restrictions on the pardoning and the reprieve powers of the governor. If you don't, then you're going to have the real judges and I'm talking now about these real extreme cases, the ones that get people aroused and disturbed and they are disturbed. I know each and everyone of you know it, as to what we're going to do to stop this. You're not going to do it by always catering to the criminal element. Now Mr. Roy asked Mr. Sandoz a question, did he know of any instances where this authority of the privilege of right of the governor had been abused. Well I've served as District Attorney for 24 years, and luckily I got out before all the present type of crimes came into being. But during those 24 years I could name you instance after instance after instance where this power was politically abused. I'll just give you one instance. I conducted the trial for cattle stealing in Toiyabe Parish and he had good connections, both family wise and political wise. He had contacts down in the Supreme Court when the case was taken upon appeal. When the conviction was upheld by the Supreme Court and the time came for him to be taken to Angola, the people were waiting at the gates of the penitentiary with their wives and that's how they got into the admission office at Angola. Now that's just one instance of what I'm talking about. But what I'm trying to say to you, ladies and gentlemen...

Further Discussion

Mr. Jenkins: Mr. Chairman, delegates to the convention, I must admit dissatisfaction with both the amendment before us and the provision written by the Executive Committee. I think the best alternative is that in the present constitution in which the pardon power is unlimited, but it must go through the Pardon Board made up of the lieutenant governor, the attorney general and the presiding judge. That, to me, is the protection for the public that we need, but also the flexibility that is sometimes necessary in particular cases. I really feel if we adopt this amendment that pardons will no longer exist in many instances because I think the legislature will be quick to take it away in certain extreme cases, because of our emotions, because of our high feeling about the particular case involved. Suppose we have a mandatory life imprisonment with no benefit of parole, probation, commutation or pardon for a certain crime. We may feel very strongly right now that that should be imposed in the year 1973. But there may be someone in his teens or his twenties and in the year 2020, all the principles may be dead and the law that says that that individual who has been in jail. Just as now, we have in some cases people in jail who have been there since the 1920's and the 1930's and everyone involved is long gone. It's a crime which has been forgotten. It's a crime where a penalty, a severe penalty has been paid. There is no way to right the wrong at this point, but the person is in a harmless, helpless condition and there's really no justification for keeping him in prison at this late date. Now if we want to talk about justice, I think we've got to believe in the death penalty and I do. I support it when uniformly applied for certain heinous crimes. But if we can't impose that penalty, we've got to do the best justice we can. And in some cases it's so difficult to do that way that it's the alternative for one man sitting over there in the governor's mansion to review his conscience and the circumstances of the case and make a decision, usually long after the events have occurred. I think between this amendment and the provision by the Executive Committee, we've got to go with their provision in the Executive Department. I'm not for. But I think the real alternative is to retain the present law. Make it go through the Pardon Board. But keep that institution inviolate—the right to pardon. So I urge you to reject this amendment

Mr. Conroy In the ultimate, in the important part of this, Mr. Jenkins and I are in complete agreement. That is that the correct solution here is to go back to what is presently in the constitution. I understand from Delegate Jack that he has such an amendment proposed and I will certainly support that amendment when it comes up. At the present time, which I hope is virtually irrelevant, I would support the proposed amendment because I think that some restriction is necessary on the governor's authority to grant pardons. I think the better solution to that is the Jack proposal which will come up in just a few minutes, I hope, but in the meanwhile I think it's so important that it's better to adopt the present amendment than to retain the present proposal by the Executive Powers Branch.

Further Discussion

Mr. Jack Mr. Chairman and members, I'm looking at this watch because with 5 minutes... Now this is a very complicated field. I've dealt in my law practice since 1940, with Pardon Boards and Parole Boards practice among my other practices. Now, I prepared an amendment to hold in emergency which is filed to retain the present, word for word in the constitution, anticipating from reading the material in this proposition No. 4, that the necessary legislature could call it. Now, it's been properly stated by Mr. Triche and others, in my opinion, that the power of pardon, commutation of sentences, reprieves, those are things that belong in the constitution. Not within the power of the legislature that's going to meet every year to be changing them back and forth. The power of parole, rightly, is not in the constitution. That is, of course, the power of the legislature, and parole comes after serving certain time. Now let me tell you this, this amendment of Mr. Burson's here, can completely undo everything the first part of the proposition No. 4, that subsection provides for and leave up everything to the legislature. In other words, it'd take everything out of the constitution. An amendment can have that effect, the legislature could take everything out except that the governor would still have the right to grant a reprieve of a death sentence. So it would take everything out since it looks like you may not even have death sentences. But a reprieve, I don't know whether you know some of these technical things, a reprieve is different from a commutation. A reprieve simply means if it's to a 10 year sentence, it means you don't start that sentence within the time of your reprieve. If it's a reprieve from a death sentence, it means you cannot have the death sentence enforced during the time of the reprieve. Now here is a situation as to regarding the present law. Governors do not like that part of it, of having to pass on Pardon Board recommendations. Your Pardon Board is made up of the trial judge, attorney general and the lieutenant governor. They can only make recommendations to the governor. It takes two out of three, and it's no good unless the governor signs it. Now let me tell you, I sat up and listened, Senator, you talked about like it's easy to get them. There are Pardon Board recommendations sitting over in the governor's office as far back as ten years ago that have not been acted on. I represent a man where it's been over there for four years. They are thoroughly gone into. You can always find some injustice, but we'll get to that in a minute. But if you pass this amendment, you can have a legislature pass the law saying there is no reprieve from a life sentence, ever. No parole, no commutation, no pardon. That man could sit there 50 years, and if he was innocent and could be proved, as the day he was born, there is no post legal trial machinery that assures that he'd ever get out. Now, of course, the legislature would, in effect, have to change the law and say everybody under that same situation is subject to parole. Now, if I had my druthers on a serious subject like this, I would think that, and I'm going to do it at the proper time, if a part of a section can be referred back to a committee, this thing ought to be referred back and that committee with people, knowing they can consider it, I would like to appear before it and others. I think we ought to, for that committee, if we're not going to keep the present law as the Pardon Board is made up, the attorney general, trial judge and lieutenant governor, we ought to decide and put in the constitution what the new Pardon Board will be made up. It's an unpleasant task for those people to serve on it. But we are the ones ought to pass in this constitution what's going to constitute a new Pardon Board if we don't leave the present law. The procedure, I say, let's kill this amendment and then I'd like to, after that, ask the Speaker if a motion is in order, to refer back to this committee a subsection. Or if I can ask now, I'd like to know. What about it, Mr. Chairman?

Mr. Roy You are out of order, Mr. Jack, at this time.

Mr. Jack Okay, I say let's now defeat this amendment.

Further Discussion

Mr. Hayes Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I would like to say that if we are going to give the governor certain powers in this state that we should not try to stay here today to try to take away all of the powers that we're going to give the governor or whoever that is. I think the right to pardon should be left somewhere. Someone made a pretty good suggestion a few minutes ago that we put it back where it is. I'm for either putting it back where it is or leaving it with the governor. Now, the argument seemed to rest around the fact that someone is going to misuse this authority. Okay, Mr. Burns said somebody had met him at the gate at Angola and they took somebody away. Well whoever did that did wrong. That's the person they would have put in Angola who did that if this was wrong. And when the governor pardons someone...

... But whenever the governor pardons people, if he's going to pardon people and he's going to do this just to be doing it, then the governor is wrong. That what you need to do and every four years we can change the governor or every eight years automatically. So I would encourage everyone to defeat this proposal.

[Quorum call: 92 delegates present and a quorum.]

Further Discussion

Mr. Stinson Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, most of the points that I wanted to cover have already been covered by the prior speakers. But I would like to point out that I'm certainly in favor of the present provision concerning this matter. I don't think it's been gone into, but I'd like to point out in the present time the Pardon Board, for those of you that don't know, meets in New Orleans. If you have a case that has to be presented, it's advertised in the papers where the crime was committed and the person was tried and sentenced. Those people in favor or opposed to the application have the right to appear before the Pardon Board and be heard. The three gentlemen that preside on that have already been named. It is a fair hearing, it's open to the public. Under this provision of the committee, there is no hearing, no public hearing, left up to one man. The human flesh is weak. One governor, and I've been accused when I was in favor of retaining the sovereignty of the state, that I believed in a king. Well if there ever is a king maker, this is. The old saying, "the king is off with your heads" or your pardon or whatever it is, that's putting the governor in the position of a king. He doesn't have to have any hearings, he doesn't have to have recommendations from anyone. No one knows when he is going to grant that and I think that it's too much power to put in the hands of any one human being. Only favorites will be pardoned and not maybe those that should be. Now if there was a requirement saying that the governor would and shall review every case and pass on it, it would be all right. But the only case that is going to get to the governor, he's not going and go through and look for them, are those that someone in jail or the penitentiary that has political pull. Politics will come into this more than anything. It's a chance for graft and payoffs. You're sentenced for 80 or 90 years in the penitentiary. It sure is a big temptation to try to buy the governor and get out instead of staying there that long. I'd like to urge that this amendment, as some others have said, is at least better than what the provision is here. Let's adopt this and then if Mr. Jack's amendment comes up placing it back in it's present context, let's vote for that at that time. At the present time, you noticed on your digest on your table, the governor can only pardon after it has been recommended to him by the present board. The person entitled to be there with his lawyer and whatever may be to the governor is not going to be anything under this committee report. In fairness, let's adopt this resolution leaving it up to the wisdom of the legislature...

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Questions

Mr. Burns Do you realize, or do you know that the vast majority of the more serious crimes such as armed robbery, rape, murder are being committed by convicts that are out on parole or reprieve?

Mr. Stinson Yes sir. And not only that, I was on the Drug Committee under the last administration we had hearings there and we had people that were pardoned so fast that they get caught the day they get out and go right back. Most of them committed other crimes when they got out. We've got to...under this, a person from that parish wouldn't even know a man had been pardoned because there is no advertisement, there is no nothing, knowing when this case has even come up. So, ladies and gentlemen, I'd like to urge you, let's adopt this amendment and then when Mr. Jack's comes up or his co-authors come, put it back like it is at the present time. I haven't heard any criticism of the present situation. In fact, if anything, it's too lenient. But under this, the gate is going to be open wide up and politics are going to play the part. I don't care who the governor is...

Mr. Jack Maybe I misunderstood you, I think you said...Mr. Stinson, I think you inadvertently said to please adopt that amendment. You mean please defeat it.

Mr. Stinson No, you misunderstood me. Yours might not pass. As safety, I want to adopt this one and then adopt yours when it comes up. I believe in two shots instead of one, Mr. Jack.

Further Discussion

Mr. Guarisco Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I know we have a short House right now, but I believe, and I think a lot of people will agree with me, that this is probably the most serious substantial issue we've taken up thus far in the convention. We are speaking about civil liberties, although that was probably not the intent of the Executive Department, we are here now. For an example, a person could be convicted of a crime that was heinous at the time, heinous by legislative standards, but as time passes, those crimes will be reduced and the sentences will be reduced and the person who went to jail for that crime will have to stay there. I have the Code of Civil Procedure of the state of Louisiana and the Code of Civil Procedure of the state of Louisiana. I have the section on habeas corpus. Habeas corpus is the method by which a person who is in jail may possibly be removed other than by a commutation of sentence. Would you believe that nowhere in this book, in the law, can an innocent man who is convicted properly who is later found to be innocent by possibly the confession of the guilty party, under the amendment, be able to get out of jail. There is no way. There is no new trial for him because the only way he can have a new trial under this statute, under the habeas corpus article, is if there was an error in his trial. We're also talking about the issue of separations of power. What's to stop an emotional legislature from invoking serious, very serious penalties for even minor crimes. Persons going to jail under these sentences and then have no recourse to any other authority. I think we have to have a court of last resort and the executive has to be that person. Well, you say you're going to allow, let a lot of guilty people out. Well at least the governor can't do you in. The legislature can do you in.

Questions

Mr. Singletary Mr. Guarisco, did I understand you to say that under the law there is no right to habeas corpus under this amendment?

Mr. Guarisco There is no right to habeas corpus in the Code of Civil Procedure of the state of Louisiana at this time. If you adopt the amendment, then there is no recourse whatsoever to get out of jail if you are convicted properly, even though you are innocent.

Mr. Singletary How so, sir?

Mr. Guarisco What?

Mr. Singletary Now? How do you draw that conclusion from the amendment?

Mr. Guarisco I'll have to answer your question with a question. How would he get out?

Mr. Singletary This amendment doesn't provide that the man has got to stay in jail after he's found to be innocent.

Mr. Guarisco But you took away the powers of commutation from the governor. Now who is going to commute if the governor doesn't commute?

Mr. Stinson Mr. Guarisco, have you read the case of the State of Louisiana vs. Favor [Favre] from Bossier Parish in which a writ of habeas corpus was filed in the federal court now because of the fact that he said he didn't have a fair trial and he's going to have another trial all over? The federal court ordered that and if they don't do it within 60 days, he's going to be released from the penitentiary.

Mr. Guarisco Mr. Stinson, you're probably talking about a federal case.

Mr. Stinson State of Louisiana vs. Favor [Favre] would be a Louisiana case. It was tried in Bossier Parish and the writ of habeas corpus went to the federal court and he's going to get another trial.

Mr. Guarisco That's exactly what I'm saying, Mr. Stinson. We have no rights under our state law. I want to find these federal rights in our state law and so far the legislature, in its wisdom, hasn't passed it. So we've got to look in the federal courts for these rights. No, I don't agree with that.

Mr. Stinson In other words, you don't think a person should seek his release in the courts. You think one man without any facts or anything should just go ahead and let anybody out he wants to and not be responsible in any way for whom he releases?

Mr. Guarisco Mr. Stinson, if we had these remedies in our state courts I would agree with you, but we do not have them. I'm reading the laws right here.

Mr. Avant Mr. Guarisco, is what you're trying to tell us simply this. That if this amendment passed and the legislature passed a statute that said the penalty for the crime of murder will be life imprisonment without benefit of pardon, or commutation of sentence or parole, and John Doe was convicted of killing William Roe and 15 years later William Roe showed up and it was found out that he had been lollygagging around in South America all that time, that there is no legal procedure under our law for John Doe to get out of the penitentiary. Isn't that right?

Mr. Guarisco Absolutely right.

Further Discussion

Mrs. Warren Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I think now is the time we should be having our prayer instead of this morning. I would like to say to say to all of the delegates and especially to the first speakers, I'm not for crime, I'm not for rape, I'm not for murder, I'm not for it in any form whether it's legal or illegal. I'm thinking now of a statement that was made some time ago, that it's not the man that steals that goes to prison, it's the man that gets caught. I'm also reminded of a question that I asked one of our judges in the city of New Orleans when we were discussing this same matter. We were talking about justice, and you know what disturbed me mostly was his answer. That it was nowhere in the law where a man had spent his life in jail for a crime that he did not do and was proven innocent, that he could get any kind of consideration or any kind of leniency for the time that he had spent there. I think we should defeat this amendment, I think we should spend a little more time on it. I'm not saying that I think the governor or one man should have all that authority, but I do think we should have a Pardon Board. I want everybody tonight, and I want Reverend Stoval and his minister, but I want everybody to get up tonight and pray because if God gave us all our just dues, I wonder where all of us would be today. At this time, all of you bow your heads and pray.

Further Discussion

Mr. Kilbourne Mr. Speaker, fellow delegates, I come here as one who believe has been closer to this problem, probably at the moment, than anyone here. For 18 years I served as district attorney of the Felicianas. In my district, I had the Louisiana State Penitentiary. I just completed my last term last December. Now let me make this clear. I didn't get kicked out, I didn't seek reelection. Not to say that I might not have gotten beat, but anyway, that wasn't the reason I didn't run. I just got sick and tired of new rights. New rights all the time for the criminal, and no rights for the majority, law abiding majority of our population. As fast as we could put them in there, they would come in with some federal ruling that gives the criminal's new rights and by which they could get out for. All this stuff about not having any rights, and be put there forever is the most ridiculous thing I ever heard of in my life. When I was district attorney I had the experience a number of times of convicting criminals, murderers at Angola, who committed brutal crimes against their fellow inmates. In several instances they got the death penalty against them. It was never enforced. If the governor didn't stop it, the federal court did. Somebody always stopped it. All the governor had to do after he issued the death warrant was to stay it, to stop it. All the federal judge or any judge had to do, issue a stay order and you're out. And I've had the experience of people who got sentenced to life in prison for murder of other inmates and 10 years later, federal courts come up with a new rule--he didn't have certain rights which they said, via this, the Miranda case, for instance. And so they would file a writ of habeas corpus. Now let me tell you the way they do that. They got the jailhouse lawyers. They got a staff of lawyers up there, jailhouse lawyers at Angola. They've got a law library at Angola. In fact, they just had a case down here where the convicts were suing the warden up there cause they said he didn't keep the law library open at the right time. And they file one writ right after another. And they now and then they'll get a good one where the federal courts have made a new rule and I've had the experience of the federal judge ordering me to retry that man. Maybe he was convicted 10 years ago, and he said you've got to retry them within 60 days or let him go. Well can you imagine, no you can't, cause you've never had the experience of trying now and dig up witnesses in a murder case that happened 10 years ago. When the Supreme Court threw out the death penalty I think we lost a great deterrent. Even though we couldn't enforce it, there was a possibility we might be able to. Now the legislature has come along and said, in some cases, that you can't grant pardons, paroles, reprieves in certain kinds of very bad crimes, heinous crimes. I say this, under the present constitution...

Mr. Roy Will you yield to a question from Delegate...?

Mr. Kilbourne No, I won't yield. Under the present constitution, I don't think those laws are constitutional because the present constitution says that it will have the right to parole, to pardon by the Pardon Board. So those laws, in my estimate, are ineffective. Now in a desperate attempt to protect our people from these murderers, these rapists...

Mr. Roy Wind it up, Mr. Kilbourne. You've got about 30 seconds left.

Mr. Kilbourne Well, I can't say much in 30 seconds, but all I want to say right here and now, you just let the folks know whose side you are on, the criminals or the law abiding majority of our society. I know which side I'm on.

[Previous Question Order.]

Closing

Mr. Burson I agree with all the speakers that say this is the most serious matter that you've considered thus far. You know, it's amazing to me that the same speakers who've been up here for a month telling us how responsible the legislature is going to be under this governmental system are the same speakers that are up here today telling us that the legislature is going to pass laws and make away all of the rights of the people. Now, I don't believe that people like Mr. Riche, for whom I have great respect, would vote for laws like that, do you? If you'll read this amendment it says the legislature shall provide by law. The legislature can provide by law for all of these horror stories that we've heard up here including the innocent man who's found out after 10 years in prison. The legislature can provide by law and don't you believe that the legislature will provide by law. I have to feel that, I remind you when we're talking about pardon, commutation of sentence and reprieve we're talking about remedies that are applicable after a grand jury has found an indictment, after there has been a conviction by a jury of twelve men and after a judge has exercised his discretionary power in the sentencing. I would also remind you that this committee proposal radically changes the present system wherein the trial court judge who knows more about the case than anybody else would be part of the body that would rule on this question of pardon. I submit to you, I don't care what you do after, if you do after, if you do not adopt Mr. Jack's amendment, that might be all right, but I think somewhere in here we should maintain for the legislature the discretion to limit or restrict this power of pardon and parole, I don't care who exercises it, because that is the only way through the elected representatives of the people, that the will of the will of the majority of the people in this country who are fed up and sick and tired of permissiveness will be heard. You can be lieve that because it's proven every day. Now, you know, I can understand the concern of certain delegates to this convention about law enforcement procedures in general and about justice because history has shown that they have not been fairly treated, but I ask you to remember two things here. First of all, one of the greatest injustices that has been done to minorities in my view, in the United States, is a failure to prosecute people and convict people for crimes committed against individual members of minority groups. That's one of the greatest injustices that's been done, and I submit to you that individuals who are members of minorities are probably percentage-wise the victims of serious crime in this country more than anybody else. I would like to make a second point in that regard. I wonder how much some of you here as delegates today would like to have had to depend on for your freedom the whim and the will of a single man, the governor. Now, you're all thinking about Governor Edwards, but let your mind drift back if you will and think about some other governors we've had and consider whether or not you want to give a future governor, because you don't know what he's going to be like, all of this power to decide as one man without any hearing as required under the present law whether a pardon, parole or commutation of sentence will be granted. I point out to you, Mr. Triche made a distinction between parole and commutation of sentence, the practical effect of granting a man a parole after serving five years and commuting his sentence to five years is the same. He's out on the street. If he's an armed robber and he's committed ten before, he'll go back for number 11. I think that we're all grown men and women and we know that the issue to society today is "have we gone so far in our regard for individual rights" which I am for. I'm for the Miranda decision on confessions. I think it's good law, but you reach a point in time where you have to think about the overwhelming majority of law abiding citizens, and I submit to you that their will; the instrument of their will under our system, is the law. I submit to you that I have confidence in the legislature in the passage of criminal laws just as I have confidence in the jury of 12 men of your peers to decide whether you're innocent or guilty. That's our system and that's all I'm asking to be employed in this case.

25th Days Proceedings—August 3, 1973

Chairman Henry in the Chair

Question

Mr. Roy Mr. Burson, I noticed that everyone who talked was a D.A. or an assistant D.A. in favor of this absurd result, but in any event is it your statement to this body of delegates that it takes a grand jury indictment for any crime other than murder or capital crime? Cannot the D.A. or his assistant bill for armed robbery and require a 99 year sentence in certain cases?

Mr. Burson Yes, sir. But I understand under the proposal coming out of your Bill of Rights Committee we'd do away with that and have to have a grand jury indictment for every burglary we would have.

[Personal privilege. Amendment tabled. 45-50. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Personal Privilege

Mr. Stinson It will be very short. Mr. Chairman and delegates, I resent Mr. Roy deliberately accusing all of us being district attorneys. I'm a defense counsel and the rest of those were. There was no...as far as I know...a district attorney or assistant that spoke in behalf of that amendment. I resent...

Personal Privilege

Mr. De Blieux Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I'm getting somewhat concerned about our committee meetings. I don't know when we're going to be able to finish. If we have any more committee work to be done, but as I see this thing, if we're not going to have some time to cover the work in these committees, we're going to be in a worse jam than ever. I just wondered if we can't find some way or some schedule to where we can have an orderly meeting of the committees rather than trying to do it after adjournment and on days other than when the convention is in session. I just ask that in hopes that maybe the Executive Committee in its meeting Thursday can work that out.

Mr. Henry Senator De Blieux, let me assure you that you can feel free for your committee to meet on Mondays and Tuesdays or Saturdays afternoons or Sundays, but we have some business in this full convention to take care of, too.

[Adjournment postponed 1:00 a.m., Saturday, August 4, 1973.]
