102nd Days Proceedings—December 17, 1973

cooperative endeavors with any public or private association or corporation or individual. Don't you think that they could do this under this section? In other words...

MR. JENKINS

As far as time deposits are concerned?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Right. Right.

MR. JENKINS

Yes. I think so.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

I think that's covered right here. You don't need anything else.

MR. JENKINS

I agree.

Further Discussion

MR. PLANCHARD

Mr. Chairman, I think it's the feeling of the committee that this would, of course, enlarge what our intent was in the first place. If it is only to open the right to a specific type of loan for a specific purpose, then I think it should be stated in this article. But, otherwise, it is way too broad and far beyond what we had anticipated in our original proposal. Therefore, I would have to be opposed to it.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment rejected: 26-59. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 86-5.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mrs. Zervigon, do you want your amendments?

Mrs. Zervigon at this time sends up amendments, the last amendment at the present time, pending at the desk which would propose the addition of a new section.

Amendment No. 1. On page 10, line 6, add the following Section:

"Section 19. Increase in Taxes

Section 19. Notwithstanding any contrary provision of this constitution, the legislature may increase the individual or joint state income tax rate, the state motor vehicle license tax on automobiles for private use, or the state ad valorem property tax above five and three-quarter mills only by law enacted by the favorable vote of two-thirds of the members elected to each house and approved by a majority of the electors of the state voting in an election called for the purpose."

Explanation

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman and delegates, and Mr. Guarisco, if you'll listen, I'll explain to you what I'm trying to do. If you adopt this section, it has two effects. Neither of them undo what we've done over the past week. The first effect, I would hope, would be to move the reference...to enable us to move the reference to Title 47, Section 32 of the Revised Statutes, from the main body of the constitution into the transitional measures. I'm not an attorney, and I for one don't look forward to going home and explaining what Title 47, Section 32 is. I don't even look forward to going home and reading it so that I can try to explain what it is. But, that would really be a side benefit and would be open to your discretion later on when we come to styling this particular article--the second styling of the article. The main benefit, as I see it, is that tax raises on the ballot would be clearly identified as such. A raise in automobile license tax, for example, would not be Amendment No. 4 on the ballot identified as an amendment to Article X, Section 5 on the left-hand side of the ballot, for example. It would be on the right-hand side of the ballot, and it would say, "We are changing your license plate tax from three dollars to four dollars." The people could easily ask the legislators why, how, how much, how did you spend the last bunch we gave you, and that sort of thing. In my experience when you mix tax increases with other sorts of constitutional amendments, people become confused and angry and vote against them all, not on the merits, but just because they don't want something put over on them. This way we separate constitutional amendments which change the structures or processes of government, and consider tax raises totally separately, clearly identified as such. So, please consider this carefully. If you want a rationally drafted document that allows the people in the future to see exactly on what they're voting, and to ask for all the explanations they need, please vote for this amendment. Another benefit of it--Mr. Chairman, and I'll close in a second--would be, for example, that the legislature could put on the ballot or tax referendum "for a limited time or purpose" if they wanted to, not necessarily draft the law that way, but could identify it that way to the people. The experience in the past has been when there are ten amendments to the constitution on the ballot, for example, and the millage raise separate from those, that more of the voters vote on the millage raise, than those who vote on the constitutional amendment because they are certain they understand it. They know exactly what it's going to do. They know what's being done to them. I'll answer any questions, Mr. Chairman.

[2908]

Questions

MR. ROEMER

Mary, this is the exact same procedure by which we have a constitutional amendment; isn't that right?

MRS. ZERVIGON

That's right, but the benefit of it, Mr. Roemer, is that it does not amend the constitution.

MR. ROEMER

Nothing personal meant by this, and truly nothing personal, Mary...I just want you to know that personally I'm opposed to this.

MRS. ZERVIGON

No, it was drawn specifically for that reason because I do not intend to overturn the actions of the Constitutional Convention in the past weeks. I don't agree with them, but I'm not going to overturn them. What I'm trying to do is to enable the constitution to remove that specific reference to that revised statute into the transitional articles, and also to separate on the ballot in the future the question of whether or not it raises your taxes from the question of whether or not you're for a constitutional amendment.

MR. ALARIO

Mary, if we adopt your innocent little amendment here, and somebody came back with an amendment after yours deleting the last two lines, lines 10 and 11 in your amendment, which read, "and approved by a majority of electors of the state voting in an election called for that purpose," where does that leave us then as in relation to Section 4 which would require a constitutional amendment?

MRS. ZERVIGON

John, that's not going to happen because we voted again and again that this is the process we want. So, I just really can't see how that's going to happen.

MR. ALARIO

Wouldn't that give them means for those who wanted to delete that, to come back and try it again, though, and open it up again?

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Alario, I really resent your implication that I'm trying to backdoor something, and I got up here and said, "I'm not," and I'm not. What I'm trying to do is just to combine the provisions of the constitution that call for a referendum on the people on state taxes.

MR. ALARIO

Mary, you know, I wasn't trying to imply that you were going to do it, but someone else could certainly offer the amendment.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman, I'm not a gentleman. I yield, but I'm not a gentleman.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mrs. Zervigon, I recognize what you are trying to do here, and I think it's very meritorious, but let me ask you, wouldn't it be a whole lot easier to accomplish what you want to do, not by adopting this particular section here, but by rejecting proposal until we took that portion out of the proposal?

MRS. ZERVIGON

No, sir. I really don't. To reject the proposal and take those portions out of the proposal does something entirely different, entirely different. What you're talking about is removing those ceilings. I'm not talking about removing those ceilings. I'm talking about trying to show the people in the future exactly what they're voting for. All I'm talking about's a little bit, just that much of democracy. As you know on constitutional amendments, sometimes you've got as few as twelve percent of the voters voting because they're all mixed up together, different subject matters doing different things, affecting different parts of the state. Now, hopefully, we won't have any local constitutional amendments any more, but what I'm trying to do is to separate out constitutional amendments over here, and if only twelve percent of the people want to vote, and only those folks know what's going on, fine, well, and good. But, over here will be a tax raise, and we're going to have a tax raise and we're going to have a turnout of fifty, seventy, eighty percent of the voters on that because they're going to understand clearly what they're voting on. That's all. It's not the same thing at all as what you're talking about.

102nd Days Proceedings—December 17, 1973

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, do I take it that you want a special election in a special place for raising of the limits of these tax issues?

MRS. ZERVIGON

What do you mean "place"?

MR. DE BLIEUX

On the ballot.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Yes, exactly so. I want it separated on the ballots so the people can see it, and not identified as a constitutional amendment because it would not be a constitutional amendment.

MR. TATE

Mrs. Zervigon, if I understand your amendment, you, along with others of us who didn't agree with the philosophy of Section 4, are willing to accept this, and that what you're trying to do is provide a mechanism by which, if the people, by the same voters that adopt the constitutional amendment, want to change it in the future, they don't have to do it by means of a lengthy constitutional amendment or a short constitutional amendment that will keep on adding to the length of our present constitution. Is that your general approach?

MRS. ZERVIGON

No, it isn't, Justice Tate, but my main thing is that it won't be mixed in with other constitutional amendments, totally unrelated to taxes.

MR. TATE

That wasn't really a question I was making.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment rejected: 25-68. Motion to reconsider tabled. Motion for the Previous Question on the Proposal rejected: 41-50. Motion to take up other orders rejected: 37-55.]

Motion

MR. BURSON

I move that we limit. . . we suspend the rules to limit the consideration of amendments to the one amendment that is now pending, so that nobody can think up anymore to stall here this evening.

Point of Information

MR. CONROY

If the Dennery amendment were adopted, would this preclude amendments to that amendment?

MR. HENRY

All right, read the Dennery amendments.

[Motion rejected: 51-38.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The amendment previously read:
On page 10, line 6, it would insert the following:

"Section 19. The legislature by law enacted by a favorable vote of two-thirds of the elected members of each house may authorize the investment of public funds in bank certificates of deposit, corporate bonds, and savings and loan associations."

Explanation

MR. DENNERY

I believe the amendment was explained with my previous amendment. I would only point out two things: Under Section 15, the state funds may be invested in accordance with law. It says nothing about the funds of the parish. Mr. Chehardy, for instance, in Jefferson, this would authorize the parish of Jefferson to do this, which I believe would be a good thing. The committee has authorized me to say that they have no objection to this amendment. I ask its favorable adoption.

Questions

MR. ROEMER

Mr. Dennery, why is "corporate bonds" in there? That's a big gate.

MR. DENNERY

You want to take it out? Take it out. I'll be glad to remove it.

MR. ROEMER

Would you withdraw to take out "corporate bonds"?

MR. DENNERY

I'll withdraw and take out "corporate bonds."

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

He resubmits the amendment, striking out, on the fifth line, the comma ",", the word "corporate" at the beginning of line 6, I guess it is, the word "bonds" and the comma "," following it.

Questions

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Do you, by this means, limit the means in which they can invest? Suppose they want to invest in something else? Suppose they want to invest in government bonds? Where is that?

MR. DENNERY

There's no prohibition in the constitution about putting money in government bonds. There is a prohibition in the constitution about lending money or investing money in private corporations. That's the whole purpose of this provision.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Do they presently invest in savings and loan associations?

MR. DENNERY

Well, my understanding is that in some parishes they do, and the auditor has questioned that. Yet, it's quite possible that a parish may be able to get better interest from a savings and loan investment than he can from a bank investment.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Do you know that in my opinion a savings and loan investment is much less desirable than a certificate of deposit?

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Champagne, that's why I left it to the legislature. I'm not prepared to say whether it is or it isn't. But, I think the legislature, by a two-thirds vote, could do something.

MR. SINGLETARY

Moise, wouldn't all of these investments be interest bearing, so that the state wouldn't be favored?

MR. DENNERY

That's the whole purpose of it, Mr. Singletary.

MR. SINGLETARY

It wouldn't be favoritism or anything, but it would be a way of earning money for the state.

102nd Days Proceedings—December 17, 1973

MR. DENNERY

The purpose of it is to permit the state and the local governing authorities to invest where they can get the most interest.

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Dennery, you mentioned that the legislative auditor questioned the investment in savings and loans. Why? Do you know?

MR. DENNERY

I don't know. I was told that, Senator, by one of the local clerks. I don't really know the reason.

MR. CHATELAIN

Mr. Dennery, as I appreciate it, at the present time, when someone deposits money in the savings and loans, they become members of that savings and loan. Is that right, sir?

MR. DENNERY

I believe in most. . .

MR. CHATELAIN

. . . stockholder, I mean. You know, a stockholder.

MR. DENNERY

You become a member in the association, I think, under the technical term.

MR. CHATELAIN

Well, then the state would become stockholders or members of the savings and loan, would they not, sir?

MR. DENNERY

Technically so, yes, sir.

MR. HENRY

Would you yield to a question from Mr. Kean?

MR. KEAN

Mr. Dennery, do you know that there's a statute which presently authorizes the investment in savings and loan associations up to the amount protected by the FSLIC?

MR. DENNERY

No, sir, I was not aware of that. But, it seems to me that the language that we now have in the constitution would prohibit that, despite the statute. That's why I added it in here.

MR. KEAN

Well, there is a statute. The FSLIC is twenty thousand, and they can invest to that amount.

ROLL CALL

[78 delegates present and a quorum.]

PRAYER

MR. ABRAHAM

Direct us, Oh, Lord in these our doings. May all our work today be in the interest of the people of Louisiana. Guide us in our actions. Keep our minds and our hearts pure. Help us to develop a good constitution for the State of Louisiana. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

READING AND ADOPTION OF THE JOURNAL

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES [II Journal 1025]

RECONSIDERATION

MR. POYNTER

On reconsideration today:

Committee Proposal No. 15, introduced by Delegate Rayburn, Chairman on behalf of the Committee on Revenue, Finance and Taxation, and other delegates, members of that committee.

A proposal relative to the tax structure of the state and the public finance.

Mr. Roemer now moves to reconsider the vote by which Committee Proposal No. 15 failed to pass on yesterday.

Motion

MR. JENKINS

I'd like to move to return it to the calendar subject to call.

MR. HENRY

The gentleman now moves that the resolution be returned to the calendar subject to call.

[Committee Proposal 15 returned to calendar subject to call.]

PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

[Committee Proposal 34 called from its regular order.]

MR. POYNTER

Committee Proposal No. 34, introduced by Delegate Lambert, Chairman on behalf of the Committee on Natural Resources, other delegates, members of that committee.

A proposal making provisions relative to natural resources and environment.

It's my understanding Mr. Lambert would like a few introductory comments before we go into Section 1.

Explanation

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, first of all I would like to express my gratitude to the members of the Natural Resources and Environment Committee. We started off with seventeen members. They all worked very diligently in a most dedicated manner. We heard much testimony over the past year, roughly. We came up with a proposal that we certainly hope meets your favor. To the members of the Natural Resources Committee I want to thank them once again for the cooperation and dedication that they demonstrated in this endeavor. Secondly, I would like to point out to you that the subject matter which we were assigned contained thirty thousand and thirty-five words. Through the process of deleting obsolete material, shortening existing provisions and the introduction of new concepts we've ended up with a total of fourteen hundred and eighty-eight words. I thought I would point this out to you for your information. I would also like to point out that in the area of natural resources we looked at other recent state constitutions that were either adopted or attempted, and that in that particular area, with the exception of the State of Alaska. Basically, the provisions are short. We have more or less tailored our proposal along these lines. I would assume that obviously, we had the shortest provision containing fourteen sections. At this time I would like to briefly go over each section, after which, I would ask the Clerk to read Section 1. We adopted a public policy statement on the environment. We took this provision from the existing policy statement in the Wildlife and Fisheries Article, and we expanded on it. What we tried to do basically was to say in our constitution that the people of this state are entitled to a clean environment, and it's our feeling that we should protect, conserve and replenish insofar as possible, the natural resources of our state. We added a provision mandating the legislature to implement this policy by appropriate legislation. Secondly, we, in the light of the present energy crisis, with the obvious problem that we're having with retaining natural gas within the limits of our state, and at the suggestion of Mr. Tom Lee, who we have come to recognize as an expert in the field of natural gas litigation, we included a policy statement on natural gas. We felt that it would be in the best interest of the State of Louisiana to do this. We felt that it would be wise to create a constitutional basis for Louisiana's right to retain a sufficient amount of natural gas for use within our state. We tried to do this without violating any federal laws. In addition to this, we went into a new area--geopressure-geothermal resources. We included a policy statement on this particular subject matter, this new energy source that is relatively untapped. We felt that it would be wise to have a statement in our constitution to the effect that the state shall conserve, manage and regulate the development of this untapped natural resource. Geopressure-geothermal energy, for those of you who do not know, is made up of hot, boiling water many, many feet below the surface of the earth, has been tapped in some areas--in California and Oregon. There have been some experimental wells in this area, I understand, in this state. It was a concept that was introduced to us by Mrs. Ruth Miller. We heard testimony from numerous experts in this area. We also were assigned a subject matter having to do with alienation of state lands or water bottoms on the beds of navigable streams and lakes. What we did in this area is basically retain the source provision, making an exception dealing with reclamation of state land, water bottom. We placed a prescriptive period on this particular reclamation exception, and we also restricted the use of reclaimed marshlands or water bottoms by public bodies for public use. In Section 6 we went into a new area, you might say. This is an area that I'm sure you would all be interested and concerned about. I suggest to you that when we get to Section 6 you pay close attention to it because it has the effect of reversing our present jurisprudence in Louisiana concerning the accretion, alluvion, dereliction provisions in our Louisiana Civil Code, possibly would have the effect of reversing a number of cases. We felt that it was an area that could possibly mean the loss of many revenues...oil and gas revenues to our state in the future. We felt that it would be wise to offer this to you and let you decide, as a body, whether or not you feel that it is important enough to place in our constitution and whether or not we should take this position... this position on this particular subject matter. Section 8 deals with the Royalty Road Fund. We had lengthy debate and hearings on this particular subject matter. Our committee went on record as favoring the retention of the Royalty Road Fund. We made some changes in the provision. As you recall, several days ago Mr. Bollinger offered an amendment retaining the Royalty Road Fund in the Public Finance Section of Revenue and Taxation. At that time it was not retained, but we're going to ask you to retain it in Section 8 of the Natural Resources proposal. We also retained the language dealing with minerals beyond a three-mile limit. There's some question as to whether or not this is necessary, or whether or not this is obsolete material. After listening to many speakers in this area, we felt it would be wise on our part since there is obviously some litigation that is still involved concerning minerals offshore, off the coastline of Louisiana, we felt that we may be derelict in our duty if we did not retain this provision. Pending a possible settlement in the future, we felt it would not be in the best interest of the state to take this out of our constitution because it may be something that we can fall to in the future in the hope of retaining some of the minerals that are in litigation at this time, pending settlement with the federal government. We also had jurisdiction over the commissioner of agriculture. As you know, this horse has been whipped a few times in this convention--give you one more chance. Our committee felt that the commissioner of agriculture should be an elected post. It was a close vote in the committee. It was felt that it should be elective and not subject to being made appointive by the legislature at any future time. We offer this again to you for your consideration. We also dealt with

103rd Days Proceedings—December 18, 1973

Wildlife and Fisheries Commission. We took the existing provisions in the constitution, which were very lengthy, and we cut them down to twenty-one lines. There was some question at the time as to whether or not the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission should be retained in the constitution. I, personally, and our committee, took the position that it should be more than one reason. One obvious reason being the many concerned members of the various sportmen's leagues throughout the state, hunters or fishermen who are interested in the preservation of our wildlife. They felt, and they expressed this feeling to us either as a committee or individually, that to keep constitutional language in regards to the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission would not do any harm to our attempt to pass a new constitution. We felt that in the light of some of the things that have been kept in the constitution that certainly it would be unwise not to give this body as a whole the right to make a final judgment on this particular subject matter. We did the same thing with the Louisiana Forestry Commission. The material on the Forestry Commission was lengthy. We reduced it in size but retained the basic features that are presently in our 1921 Constitution. The last area over which we had jurisdiction was the Public Service Commission. Our committee made some changes in this particular area, changing the makeup of the commission to five members, also made some changes concerning jurisdiction, powers and duties, and so forth. That basically concludes the substance of Proposal No. 34 by the Committee on Natural Resources and the Environment. At this time I would like to ask the Clerk to read Section 1.

MR. HENRY

Mr. Jenkins, now we're going to consider it section by section. I think he was just sort of going over the whole proposition.

Questions

MR. JENKINS

Louis, I'd like to commend you and the committee on the work you've done in deleting so much of this material. Let me ask you, are there some other things you think that really could be deleted further that need not be in here? It seems like some of these things are similar to some codal provisions and statutory material. Could we delete some of those, too?

MR. LAMBERT

Why won't you be specific? What are you talking about?

MR. JENKINS

Well, I'm thinking...oh, say, like Section 3 and 6 and 7, and things like that...

MR. LAMBERT

Well, Woody, I guess you could delete more of it. I guess each committee that offered their material to this convention, I guess that argument could be made. I suggest to you that before you make a final judgment on that to let us bring out the various reasons why we did not delete it. Maybe on its face it looks that way, but we may be able to point out something to you that may change your mind. On the other hand, we may not.

Reading of the Section

MR. HARDIN

"Section 1. Natural Resources and Environment; Public Policy
Section 1. The natural resources of the state, including air and water, and health, scenic, historic, and esthetic value of the environment shall be protected, conserved, and replenished, insofar as possible and consistent with the health, safety, and welfare of the people. The legislature shall implement this policy by appropriate legislation."

Explanation

Mr. Chairman, members of the convention, as I stated earlier, in an attempt to properly organize a section on natural resources to be placed in our new constitution, we tried to come up with a policy statement on the environment, and we thought the proper place for this would be at the beginning. We took a presently existing statement in our constitution...in our present constitution which reads as follows: "The natural resources of the state shall be protected, conserved, and replenished." This particular language is found as a preamble to the present constitutional provision concerning the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission. We took it from that particular area, and we placed it at the beginning of this proposal. We expanded on it as you can see by reading the section. What we attempted to do is to strike a balance, or find a happy medium between the environmentalist on one side, and the agri-industrial interest on the other side. We feel that we have found, hopefully, a policy statement that does this--that strikes a balance, that is not extreme one way or the other. We heard amendments by members of our committee who wanted to provide a citizen with the right to sue in our constitution. In other words, the right to file a suit to close, for example, to seek an injunction to close down some industry, let's say, or... The majority of the members of our committee felt that this was an extreme position because there are provisions in our present law, in our civil code, our nuisance laws, class action provisions in our civil code...in our Code of Civil Procedure, that provide this. Then, on the other hand, there were members of our committee who felt that to flip the coin completely over and have nothing, say nothing, we felt that a vast majority, and after much discussion and much debate on this particular area we came up with the language that you see here, and it was... we had seventeen members on our committee, and there were very few who voted no...who voted against this. So, I assure you that we have debated this at great length and we have made a sincere effort to come up with something that gives you more than what you had in the past, but yet is not so extreme as to jeopardize the operation of industries and businesses in our state.

Questions

MR. STAGG

Louis, I realize that Jerry Jones is back there, and Burt Angelle, and others interested in the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission area of the constitution, and that it is contained in your proposal. In the balance of the constitution--and we have as of today finally adopted ninety-nine pages of constitutional matter; it would have been a few more if we had had an extra vote yesterday, but we've got in the hopper now ninety-nine pages--in none of those pages is there a board or a commission like Wildlife and Fisheries. There is not a highway board; there is not another board or commission of that type--it being, I suppose, the feeling, particularly the Committee on the Executive Branch that such boards and commissions ought to go into the statutes. I realize that Wildlife and Fisheries has a number of adherents around this state. Can you explain to the delegates why this among all commissions is retained in the constitution?

MR. LAMBERT

Did we not retain some boards, Mr. Stagg? Hasn't a precedent been set? Was the Pardon Board not retained?

MR. STAGG

The Pardon Board was put as a five-member board in place of the lieutenant governor, the attorney general and the presiding judge. We did not eliminate a function of the penal institutions. Now it's a part of the governor's office.

MR. LAMBERT

Let me just say this, Mr. Stagg: whether it's retained in the form of a commission, the concept of a commissioner of Wildlife and Fisheries, or whatever, I think it's a basic decision that this convention is going to have to make. We may find it necessary in the wisdom of this body, a majority may find it necessary to keep it as it is in our proposal. The reason we left it in that particular way was because we've received from throughout the state...I'm just telling you the way it is, now. I don't know if this is what you want to hear, but I'm going to tell you just the way it is. We heard many, many people...from them, either individually, or as a group. They were concerned about retaining something in our constitution to assure that we would have a Wildlife and Fisheries Commission to see that the wildlife, the game, etc. in our state were properly cared for and taken care of. That is the reason we left it in.

MR. STAGG

In other words, they've got a good lobby.

MR. LAMBERT

You might say that.

MR. STAGG

All right, then, explain to those people who lobbied for this to be in the constitution the effectiveness of the language on line 20 on page 4--the functions, duties, and responsibilities of the commission and the compensation of its members shall be provided by law." What have you done?

103rd Days Proceedings—December 18, 1973

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Chairman, answer this question for me. Are we on... the procedure that we're following, are we on Section 1?

MR. HENRY

That's right.

MR. LAMBERT

When we get to that section, why don't you ask that question?

MR. AVANT

Senator Lambert, in all due deference to what you just said, but since Mr. Stagg made the point, I do want to ask you this question: We did keep the Civil Service Commission in the constitution, didn't we?

MR. LAMBERT

That's correct.

MR. AVANT

Did not your hearing demonstrate that there were just as many people in the state who very strongly felt that the proper management of our natural resources was just as important as the proper management of our public employees in our personnel systems?

MR. LAMBERT

That's correct.

MR. LEBLEU

Senator Lambert, also in response to Mr. Stagg's question, isn't it also a fact that at one time the Wildlife and Fisheries Department came under the Conservation Department? It was separated, in the forties, I believe, or fifties, and since then has been doing a more admirable job?

MR. LAMBERT

That's correct.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Is it not true that we kept the Board of Liquidation of the state debt under a new name?

MR. LAMBERT

That's correct.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Is it not true that we also continued the Bond Commission?

MR. LAMBERT

That's correct.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Senator Lambert, hadn't the many Wildlife and Fisheries organizations throughout the state been very anxious to keep this Wildlife and Fisheries Commission in the constitution?

MR. LAMBERT

Yes, sir, that's correct.

MR. HERNANDEZ

That constitutes a pretty large segment of people in the state, doesn't it?

MR. LAMBERT

Yes, sir, it sure does.

Mr. Chairman, if there are no further questions, I move final passage of Section 1.

MR. JENKINS

Louis, can you tell us, what does Section 1 really mean? It says, "the legislature shall implement this policy by appropriate legislation." What authority are we granting to the legislature by this section?

MR. LAMBERT

Woody, obviously, you know that we cannot force the legislature to do anything. However, I think the intent of this convention is obvious by the statement that "the legislature shall implement this policy by appropriate legislation." That means that if the legislature in its wisdom should decide that they want to beef up this provision and add a citizen's right to sue to it, they could. I don't think they would do that.

MR. JENKINS

But...

MR. LAMBERT

For example...that's an example of one thing they could do, or they could...whatever they feel necessary to expand or make--to implement the policy, they could enact laws to that effect.

MR. JENKINS

Is it your view that we are by this section granting more authority to the legislature than the legislature would have without this section, or not?

MR. LAMBERT

I would say that probably we're not granting the legislature any more authority than they presently have. We're certainly not restricting them in that area, though.

Further Discussion

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Chairman, I just wanted to make one quick point before we...in my closing remarks, if I might. Mr. Dennery asked me the question, why did we leave out land in the policy statement. Well, we did not leave out land. The natural resources of the state, including air and water...this question was talked about in the committee, and natural resources includes land, and he was satisfied with that answer. I just wanted to point that out.

[Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 98-0. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Motion

MR. KELLEY

Mr. Chairman, I'd like to move to return Committee Proposal No. 34 to the calendar and pull from the calendar...

MR. HENRY

Well, let's take them one at a time now.

Gentleman moves to return Committee Proposal No. 34 to the calendar.

MR. LAMBERT

I do not object and the only thing I'd like to know is this. As soon as this is completed we can get back to this proposal.

MR. HENRY

Yes, sir.

MR. LAMBERT

I think there's much concern in the body about completing... what is it, Section 15?

[Committee Proposal No. 34 returned to the calendar: 79-16.]

Motion

MR. KELLY

I'd like to move at this time, Mr. Chairman, to recall from the calendar Committee Proposal No. 15.

[Committee Proposal No. 15 called from the calendar: 79-16. Previous Question ordered on the Proposal: 65-33.]

Closing

MR. ROEMER

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I'll just take a few seconds to say that we, in the committee, worked long and hard and you in this convention that stayed with us over the weekend worked long and hard to do the best we could. I think we've done not a perfect job, but a very human and decent job on this article. I think it's a shining example of what we can do for the people of Louisiana, and I ask your wholehearted endorsement of Article 15.

Point of Information

MR. AVANT

I want to ask you something. The statement was made, at least I heard it, that if we voted no on this then we wouldn't have any proposal at all and never could get one; is that correct?

MR. HENRY

Well, we wouldn't have any Committee Proposal No. 15, but ... or it could be reconsidered on another day and all that business, Mr. Avant.

Point of Information

MR. ROY

Could I move to suspend the rules so that Mr. Joe Traigle, who is here, could address the convention as a whole?

MR. HENRY

That function would be out of order. The previous questions have been ordered.

Point of Order

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Chairman, a point of parliamentary procedure, I suppose. According to the Journal on yesterday a motion to reconsider was pending at the time that the convention altered the other business, so I assume that the only motion before the House now, correctly speaking, is to reconsider.

MR. HENRY

No, sir, the first thing we did in Morning Hour No. 12 this morning was reconsider the vote by which it failed to pass on yesterday, and that was....

MR. DENNERY

Today.

MR. HENRY

Yes, sir, when we got into Regular Order No. 12 and it was passed without opposition and then we returned it to the calendar, Mr. Dennery.

[Proposal Passed: 80-19. Motion to call Committee Proposal No. 34 from the calendar adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mrs. Miller, Delegate Tobias and Delegate Asseff send up amendments which read as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, between lines 21 and 22, insert the following:

Section 1.1. (A) The navigable water bodies and bottoms, the sea and its shores, and lands, title to which is in the state, are hereby declared to be a part of the public domain. Title to lands held by the state, its agencies and political subdivisions, excluding municipalities, is hereby declared to be held in the public domain for the use and benefit of each.

(B) No disposals, contracts, compromises, or leases involving lands or interests therein, of the state and its agencies and political subdivisions, shall be made without the approval of the state's chief legal officer, prior notice, and other safeguards of public interest as prescribed by law.

(C) Neither the lands, or interest therein, in the public domain at the effective date of this constitution shall be subject to loss through prescription. The wrongful act, misfeasance, or non-feasance or any public official, agent or agency, or employee of the state shall not act to divest the state of its title to property."

Explanation

MRS. MILLER

We've been joined in this, Mr. Tobias, Dr. Asseff and myself by Mrs. Warren as a coauthor. I put this in three sections so it would be easily divisible, and I believe, Mr. Clerk, it is divisible along those lines. In Section 1 where you have the statement of general policy this is the law as it is today, that the navigable water bodies and bottoms, the sea and its shores, the lands, title to which is in the state, are a part of the public domain. I don't think any lawyer here would argue that this is the law. But, this puts it in the constitution rather than leaving it in the Civil Code. I don't think you can have a meaningful policy on Natural Resources until the person who is voting on this constitution knows what is the public policy... what is the public domain. I think it means a great deal to a citizen when he picks up this new constitution and looks at it and sees that he or she has a share in these navigable waters and is entitled to use them, and in the rivers and streams, etc. I think this is an important concept and, as I say, it is the law. Of course, we know that it is the law that the title to all of these things are in the state or in different agencies and political subdivisions, so this is only a solidifying, I would say, of the public concepts, jurisprudence in the law as it is, but I think it belongs in the constitution as a general statement of public policy. Section (B), I think is the most important thing that we need today. Ladies and gentlemen, I want to show you a book which is in your state library system. It contains the two horror stories that are the greatest horror stories ever written, one is termed Dracula and the other is termed Frankenstein. I want to show you two horror stories that compare with these; this is the Oil Act of 1972 passed without a dissenting vote in the legislature. This act gave to seventeen appointed men the right--the right to contract away the state's oil and gas without public bidding, making the deals behind closed doors, making the deals under the table. The members of that Natural Resource Committee of which, Mr. LeBieu is one, sat up there and said they did not know they had given such unlimited, unbridled authority to seventeen elected officials. Four of those members of the committee set up there and said they would bring acts before the legislature to repeal this authority. I call this a "Dracula", a horror story, because they can suck away the blood as the vampire did in Dracula and take our oil before we even know we're dying as the victims of Dracula died. This state can dry up before we have known it's gotten away from us with this ability to contract the state's oil and gas in which the Mineral Board is doing. This is the Monster Bill. It's called the Monster Bill by the press. It's called the Monster Bill by the members of the legislature. Half of the members of the legislature will tell you and I've seen them on TV saying it, "They really don't know what's in it." Well, read what's in it and I will tell you that it is a Dr. Frankenstein creation because in this bill you give the power to another non-elected, but appointed official to contract away this state's gas without public bidding, without many safeguards and controls. So, between the two you have a Dracula and a Frankenstein, and I am saying that this is not restoring confidence in government that the people expect this constitution to do. I urge you from the bottom of my heart to support the concept that the people of this state will be entitled to know what's being done with our resources, that there will be no closed doors, that there will be no under-the-table contracts, that there will be no siphoning off with private deals and little private companies formed to take advantage of the liberality that the legislature has given to this division of Natural Resources under the Department of Conservation and has given to seventeen appointed men on the Mineral Board. I say your Section 2 of my proposed amendment is the most important thing that you can pass relating to Natural Resources if you want to keep these things for the people. On Section 3-- and I ask for more time, please Mr. Chairman. I know I have exceeded my time.

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

You have not exceeded your time for explanation, so you still have your time.

MRS. MILLER

Thank you. Then, I'll answer questions after I have finished my explanation, feeble though it might be in the estimation of some. On Section 3--and I will say that this will give rise to questions--"neither the lands or interest therein," that means your mineral and oil and gas interests in the public domain at the effective date of this const... of the passing of this constitution shall be subject to loss through prescription. "The wrongful act, misfeasance, or non-feasance of any public official, agent or agency, or employee of the state shall not act to divest the state of its title to property." We have never had this type of statement or policy. But, let me tell you what happens in the field of oil and gas and mineral rights when you don't act; you lose; every lawyer knows this is the principle of law. So, the way in which public officials can steal and I say they can steal, or they can let their friends do it, they cannot provide the legal services to the attorney general. They cannot provide the legal services to the Mineral Board. They cannot provide the legal services to the Department of Public Works, the Department of Public Works has no legal advisor. By not providing the legal services you keep anything from being done and the state loses by prescription. It's that simple. Let us say that let's give the right of action to the state to go in and claim regardless of the fact that one set of public officials as we had for sixteen years when we had a non-functioning attorney general. By not functioning you can let the state's rights evaporate. I'm saying this is to restore confidence in government by saying to the people of this state, "We are protecting you; we're protecting you from your own elected officials that you thought you trusted when you put them in office, but you found they wanted wealth as well as power."

Questions

MR. BOLLINGER

Mrs. Miller, do you know that I think you have a very, very good amendment, but my question is this: Why do you exclude municipalities in the first paragraph because you include political subdivisions of the state excluding municipalities; I was wondering why you had excluded them?

MRS. MILLER

Well, I was a little bit afraid to step into that zone, I tell you, because you do have so many regulatory agencies in your municipalities and I believe it's such a form of government that you have many safeguards already written into the municipality sections, and that we don't need that additional safeguard. It's the state's property that seems to be so subject to stealing by various methods, and you know there are just as many methods to steal as there is to go in and take somebody's -- you know we think of stealing as you coming in my house and taking my jewelry or taking my silver or something like that. You can steal by not acting; by acting wrongly, by misfeasance or non-feasance. You can steal by making contracts under-the-table that make it profitable for someone in public office to have a little silent partnership in some deal.

MR. AVANT

Mrs. Miller, I'm concerned about Section (C) of your amendment, the last sentence. Now, I don't disagree with what you're trying to accomplish; I think, that it's laudable, but this is what worries me. The state and particularly many of its political subdivisions have been given authority under this proposed constitution and, of course, under the old constitution to acquire property. They also have the right to dispose of that property by sale, lease or otherwise. I'm thinking particularly under the present constitution the parish of Jefferson has been authorized to reclaim certain portions of Lake Pontchartrain. I understand that some of that land that has been reclaimed has been subdivided and people have their homes on that land. Now, we have a very strong public policy in this state and always have had that innocent people who deal on the faith of the public record are entitled to rely on the public records and that sequester equities and things that do not appear on the face of the public record do not cut off the rights of people who in good faith, who are not crooks themselves, have dealt with real property on the basis of the public record. Now, my question is this: If this last sentence is put in there, wouldn't it be then the law that fifty years from now in the hands of some innocent person who had owned, say, a home for maybe fifteen years, that the state or one of its political subdivisions could come in and say "way back there fifty years ago when this property was disposed of there was some crookedness. There was some shenanigans that went on, and therefore, Mr. Innocent Purchaser you don't own that property; it belongs to the state" and to take that man's property away from him; wouldn't that be what would happen?

MRS. MILLER

You say Section (C) or are you talking about Section (D)?

MR. AVANT

The last sentence in Paragraph (C). Now, I agree with what you're driving at, but I'm also worried about people who deal in good faith on the face of the public record, and I don't think... I think we've got to balance the state's interest and we've got to balance the interest of people who deal in good faith on the basis of what is of record in the courthouse. Do you see what I'm talking about?

MRS. MILLER

I see what you're driving at. I do believe that Section (C) gives some of those safeguards that kind of will take care of some of the things in Section (D). Once you have examined titles and things for forming legality you're going to look, if you know this is in the constitution, you're going to look first to the attorney general's approval. You're going to look for all the requirements of notary public duty.

MR. AVANT

Well, suppose the attorney general himself was a crook, suppose he gave his approval and it was illegal and dishonest, and he was in on some sort of crooked deal. How could you ever deal with property on the basis of what's on the public record, if you put this sentence in here, "the wrongful act, misfeasance, or non-feasance of any public official, etc., shall not operate to divest the state of its property?" How could you ever rely on the public record?

MRS. MILLER

Jack, I think that when you're examining a title and you run across the fact that, as we have done with old patents and this type of thing, that we know when we examine these titles that we have to look for certain things and the one thing we look for is whether there has been a proper handling. I know that when I look at any state lands and leases the first thing you look for is whether the things have been done right on behalf of the state.

MR. AVANT

Well, yes, ma'am, you look at the formal requirements of the law; did they have the proper resolution; did they meet; did they have a quorum? But, you... there's no way you can look to see if somebody was pulling a shakedown or if somebody took a bribe or somebody did something dishonest. I mean you can't find that out on the face of the public record. All you can do is see if the formal requirements of the law were met. I'm very concerned about it.

MRS. MILLER

I don't think it would really pose any problems in looking it would give the state... because before anyone is going to sell something in which they question whether the state ever had an interest they're going to look at whether the state has a right to come and claim that interest. It will just be another step in your title examinations, which I don't think would pose... it would mean that you would clear up the titles before you would proceed any further which is the first thing you do when you're approving a loan for... even for ordinary simple loans like for a house, you make sure that the land has had all the successions opened, all the tutorships opened, and this type of thing.

MR. PEREZ

Mrs. Miller, again, I'd like to... I'd like again to find out why it is that you would include parishes in your... in these restrictions, but not municipalities; what's the difference? They're both agencies of the state; they're both owned property, and wouldn't the courthouse then become a part of the public domain, or every piece of property say that the parish would own, and in the event that it no longer needed it for public purposes under the public... the act with regard to the sale of public lands you would have to advertise it in the newspapers for sale? I just don't understand what we're getting at.

MRS. MILLER

Of course, I really would have no objection to adding municipalities because I think sometimes they do need help from the official agencies handling these. But the reason I include these other subdivisions under state agencies, we have millions of acres of state agency lands and we have millions... well, I don't say millions, but hundreds of thousands of acres of lands that are owned and controlled by your political subdivisions like your school boards, your sixteenth section lands and your police jury.

MR. PEREZ

The main thing you're trying to get at is what you consider to be the abuse by the Mineral Board and compromises made with regard to minerals?

MRS. MILLER

That's right.

MR. PEREZ

Don't you know that there is assigned to the Mineral Board an assistant attorney general who is under the state's chief legal officer and if we have had those problems it is directly attributable to the attorney general's office and I'm trying to find out what we're going to accomplish by Paragraph (B)?

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Perez, what we're locking into the constitution and this is what I meant by the Monster Bill. If you read the gas act that was passed in the special session of the legislature, this act attempts to bypass the attorney general. It is bypassing the chief legal officer of the state. This is what I'm trying to say and maybe I haven't made my point clear, but we're saying in this constitution that no one can be lead down... no legislator can be lead down the primrose path by a popular, effective, knowledgeable, charming governor who can make them pass anything he wants passed.

MR. CASEY

You've exceeded your time, Mrs. Miller.

MRS. MILLER

Two-thirds vote is no control when you have a charming, lovely, governor who can get anything he wants.

MR. PEREZ

Mrs. Miller, don't you realize that just about everybody's home property, their farms or whatever property they may own originally came out of the State of Louisiana and that this would cast a cloud on a title of everybody's private property because in the event there was any wrongful act, misfeasance, or non-feasance on the part of any public official when that property was divested from the state it would create a cloud on the title to everybody's property in the state?

MRS. MILLER

This is why I put the words in there "effective the date"... the "effective date of this constitution." It at least gives you a point where in your title examination you go back to the point of this 1973 or '74 Constitution. You're not going back all the way to original patents under this. You would go back on original patents and original titles under old constitutions as it stands. This is only the effective date of this constitution, at this particular point. I think what we're doing is saying to the legislature and saying to the administration, "Be careful what you try to put over on us."

MR. PEREZ

No, but isn't it a fact that if, in fact, there has been a wrongful act, misfeasance or non-feasance the title is in fact still in the state so, therefore, your first sentence would have no effect with the second sentence which you include because of the fact that the second sentence would, in effect, say that the title still is in the public domain, if in fact, there was any wrongful act, misfeasance or non-feasance by any public official when it was severed from the domain... from the sovereign.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Tapper, I had you next on the list for a question.
Mr. Tapper, did you want to ask a question?

MR. TAPPER

Mr. Chairman, I think Mr. Perez has covered most of the questions I had except one. Mrs. Miller, I know and I feel that... did you know that you're very well-intentioned in this thing, but it seems to me that you're ... in order to take it out of the hands of seventeen people you may be very well be putting it in the hands of one person. I just ... I don't see what you're accomplishing by it. You're saying that the attorney general would have the ... have to approve anything that was done; is that correct?

MRS. MILLER

Well, this is to keep the attorney general in focus. In focus as the chief legal officer so that he cannot be bypassed by special acts and special creations of other little monsters. We don't know what might come in the future. We sure got this in a hurry without much warning and without much prior knowledge.

MR. TAPPER

You're talking about the so-called Monster Bill?

MRS. MILLER

Yes, sir, a little Monster Bill.

MR. TAPPER

Isn't that the bill that the people throughout the state were overwhelmingly in favor of? Isn't it a fact that what you're trying to do is to knock that legislation out by this constitutional provision?

MRS. MILLER

No, what I'm saying is you can have this kind of legislation. You can have it, but you're going to do it; you're not going to give away any of the rights of the people to say this is going to be open aboveboard. You're going to not bypass your chief elected legal officer of the state who is the attorney general. I do not think you should bypass the chief legal officer and give all his functions and his rights of either approval or rejection to some other group of attorneys who are appointed by an appointed group of men in government.

I did say, Mr. Chairman, this is divisible, it seems to be Section (D) that gives the most difficulty and it is divisible so if they would like to vote on it by sections, I would certainly approve.

MR. HAYES

Mrs. Miller, you seem to be trying to protect the people of the state and I would have to be for that, but now don't you let them loose under Section (B) and at the same time, in (C) say that whatever they do ... regardless to what they do it would be guaranteed and the only way that you can guarantee anything when you have people performing that they have some type of performance bond to recover under. Couldn't people do anything they want to under (B) regardless to this stopgap you have here?

MRS. MILLER

Well, what we've done, (B) is a general statement of policy which is the law now.

MR. HAYES

All right. Now, what I'm saying is people can do wrong under (B); they can do all the things that you don't want them to do under (B). Now, if they do wrong under (B), wouldn't it be... shouldn't we have some type of performance bond to guarantee us a recovery in case they do wrong?

MRS. MILLER

Well, under (C) what we are saying, we're guaranteeing one thing that you don't bypass the chief elected legal officer of the state that he will have a chance to look at it. Two, that you're going to have some type of public notice that this thing is being done; it's not closed doors. Three, you're going... it is saying you're giving to the legislature the duty to prescribe by law for other safeguards.

MR. HAYES

But, there is....

MRS. MILLER

Now, if they want to put before... I think this would be a legislative matter, if they want to put up... if they want to require certain kinds of bonds, etc.

MR. HAYES

That would take care of it if we had some type of performance bond.

MRS. MILLER

Because you do that in your public ... even your leasing, you have all kinds of safeguards in your public lease laws. But, what we do want is to keep everything open. We don't want anything going on behind closed doors, and I do not think you should bypass the chief legal officer of this state in any kind of legislative act. I urge your support of the amendments.

MR. CASEY

Why do you rise, Mr. Velazquez?

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Time to ask a couple of questions.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Velazquez, I have ten people on the list here.

MRS. MILLER

I thought it would be noncontroversial.

MR. DESHOTELS

Mrs. Miller, I too--as Jack Avant expressed--I think that your philosophy and your concept is laudable, but I also have problems with Subsection (C), and I have problems with Subsection (B). I'm considering, particularly, the middle language that you have: "with the approval of the state's chief legal officer." I do work for the school board and for the police jury as assistant D. A. Right now, we have several actions of the school boards and police juries pending for the declaration of lands to be no longer needed for public purposes, for example, for leases that they have with people on school property that they are now leasing that they don't need for education purposes. I see a tremendous amount of work that you would be putting onto the state's chief legal officer in approving all of these leases. Many of them have nothing to do with minerals or natural resources. I'm wondering whether we couldn't--I believe in the prior notice; we have it in our statutes now; and, of course, we want advertisements--but I'm wondering whether the approval of the state's legal officer really has anything to do with it, because he's not aware of what's going on in all of these small subdivisions of government that we have in the state.

MRS. MILLER

Of course, we're dealing here primarily with the natural resources that are an adjunct of the land itself--which I think, primarily, we mean water resources, which is going to be a problem later. Water resources has not been considered yet. We thought we had as much subsurface water to last us as we thought we had unlimited oil and gas; and now, in southwest Louisiana, we're finding out we might be running out of fresh water. We're talking about the natural resources that go with the land. Now, you all have heard a great deal of criticism from me about the Mineral Board, but I will say that once you set up a procedure--and we do have a very fine functioning professional staff, and we have the majority of the board that are trying, really, to realize the maximum benefit from the state's resources. Now, when it comes to your school boards and your police juries, your political subdivisions and state agency leases, we have a lot of land put up for minerals. Most of the time, these agencies come back to the Mineral Board for help with their leases. They don't know about overrides; they don't know about when they should have releases; they don't know some of these things. They do an incredibly poor job on leasing their own properties most of the time. So, what you're doing is saying that once you've set up the procedure, this is not going to be any difficulty for your attorney general. This is a form in legality matter that is very simply handled once the attorney general has set up the legal staff, as the present attorney general has been trying to do, and the legislature has been giving him more funds now, to try to take care of the state's oil and gas.

MR. DESHOTELS

Mrs. Miller, do you know that I and, I believe, a lot of other delegates here are prepared to vote for the concept that you have in this amendment, in my humble opinion, if we could clear up this language—in particular, the subdivisions—and, also, I think, if we could straighten out and clarify the language in Subsection (C), because I see that it invites a tremendous amount of litigation, especially for title attorneys.

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Deshotels, if you would prepare the suggestions, I might be able to go along with you and withdraw this and resubmit it with any changes. I want to say that Subsection (C) is in the Alaskan Constitution. Now, I think it's important to realize that Alaska's oil and gas interests are being developed some seventy years after ours. They had a chance to look at the mistakes that the other oil and gas producing states have made, and they tried to write into their constitution some of these safeguards. So, I did get Subsection (C) from the Alaskan constitution. I think it's a good provision, and I think it came when those people were wide awake, because we slept almost seventy-two years too long before we woke up and began to do something about it. Alaska may be able to manage its resources better, and this is one of the provisions that they put in their constitution. I would like, maybe, to pass either one or all of these and then let you all come in with amendments that you think would clear up some of the language and maybe accomplish better than I've been able to do, but I think that you could amend it.

I urge your adoption of the amendments. Then, I would help you with any clearing up of the language, if you think that would be necessary.

Thank you.

Point of Information

MR. TAPPER

Mr. Acting Chairman, did I understand that Mrs. Miller wants to withdraw this and resubmit it?

MR. CHEHARDY

Mrs. Miller, is that your intention?

Mr. Tapper asked: Do you wish to withdraw and resubmit the proposal?

MR. TAPPER

Because if she does, I want to wait until she resubmits it before, I speak on it because I don't know how she's going to amend it.

I move for a five-minute recess so that we could let her get started.

Delegate Chehardy in the Chair

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Further Discussion

MRS. MILLER

I've withdrawn the amendment which has been...is before us with the...I suddenly have developed several coauthors, and we plan to rework this and eliminate some of the things objectionable, and resubmit it later as a later section. I appreciate your indulgences. Thank you.

Personal Privilege

MR. LEBLEU

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I'm really not aggrieved. I wanted to ask Mrs. Miller the question awhile ago, and I didn't get a chance to. She said over the mike awhile ago that when we voted on the monster bill in the legislature, that I said I didn't know I was giving seventeen men the power that we gave them. I'd just like to correct it. I believe—I thought I said—that I was aware that we gave all this power to the commissioner of conservation—one man. I was a member of the House Natural Resources Committee that heard the bill. When we got through with it in our committee, we made a motherhood bill out of it; anybody could vote for it. However, when it passed the House with amendments, the Senate wouldn't concur. It went to Conference Committee, and a lot of these objectionable items were placed back in the bill. Just for Mrs. Miller's information, I voted not to concur with the Conference Committee report.

Personal Privilege

MRS. MILLER

This may be in the nature of a statement more than a question, and I know it might be a little bit out of order to do this, but I do want to correct. What I said is: when we were having a meeting of the Natural Resource Committee of the legislature, before which I was testifying, when the bill came up that was passed in 1972—and I believe you were one of those that signified that you all had no idea; I know several of the members of the committee did. You may not have been there, and I may have been mistaken; but several members of the legislative committee on Natural Resources said that it was on that oil bill in '72 they did not realize they had passed this act giving such unlimited powers to contract away the state's oil without public bidding. You all spent several hours discussing with the Mineral Board about that. My remarks run on the monster bill, and I want to say I was real proud of what the legislators from our Lake Charles-Calcasieu-Cameron area did when it came to the monster bill. You all did raise voices of protest.

MR. LEBLEU

Thank you.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Derbes now sends up the amendment, previously passed out, also proposing the addition of a new section:

"Section 1.1. Management Policy

Section 1.1. The legislature shall provide for the coordinated management and administration of natural resources owned by the state and for the regulation of other natural resources."

Explanation

MR. DERBES

Good morning. Basically, I think that this amendment needs a home in our new constitution; and, therefore, I've put it up for adoption. It is an attempt to state, by way of policy and only policy, that resources should be coordinately managed in a manner provided by law. It does not create any substantive rights. It is not self-executing. It is not a method by which legislation can be challenged by environmentalists. It merely states affirmatively, in what I hope will be a brief and concise constitutional document, that there is a multiplicity of problems associated with limited and nonrenewable natural resources and that these problems should be resolved by the legislature in a coordinated fashion, in a fashion consonant with good management, and in a fashion which is cognizant of the fact that unless resources are managed in a coordinated and efficient manner for the benefit of all of us, the public will suffer. I suggest to you that it is only a policy statement and, in fact, that is really all we can and should say about natural resources in a constitution. The state of natural resources in Louisiana, as well as the rest of the world, is in such a state of flux that there are very few actual affirmative rights and duties that we can create in this constitution and that we should create in this constitution. It occurred to us, after listening to a great deal of testimony, that there are over thirty-five state agencies—and since the special session of the legislature, over thirty-six state agencies—which are in one way or another concerned with the management, use, and rights to natural resources. So, I suggest to you that a constitutional document should be one which the legislature should periodically look to for direction; and when it looks to this particular document, hopefully, it will take cognizance of this provision, enunciated in this amendment, which says that "The legislature shall provide for the coordinated management and administration of the natural resources owned by the state and for the regulation of other natural resources." It is a directive to the legislature. It creates no substantive rights. I think it is a justifiable policy statement, and I urge its adoption.

Thank you.

Questions

MR. DESHOTELS

Mr. Derbes, I've read Section 1 that we've just adopted--unanimously, I believe--and if I read Section 1 correctly, everything that you've just said is included in Section 1, including the last sentence which says "the legislature shall implement this policy by appropriate legislation." Second question: don't you think...

MR. DERBES

May I answer that question first?

MR. DESHOTELS

Sure.

MR. DERBES

To a certain extent, you're right, Mr. Deshotels. I think the legislature has ample authority and ample directive under Section 1. I seek only to enunciate, as a matter of policy, in the constitution the two phrases "coordinated management" and "administration of." That's basically what I attempt to do, merely by way of a directive to the legislature. The legislature does have authority under the section we adopted, and I'm grateful for that. I'm merely trying to clarify that resource management should be on a coordinated basis and with efficient administration.

MR. DESHOTELS

If I understand the thrust of your amendment, it's to conserve and protect our natural resources, and allow as many people as possible to enjoy those natural resources. Isn't that correct?

MR. DERBES

Yes, but not to the detriment of private property rights.

MR. DESHOTELS

Of course. If you would be doing that, then you wouldn't be doing it to their interests. Doesn't the language in Section 1, which says that "natural resources shall be protected, conserved, and replenished insofar as possible" with the prior language that the "aesthetic and quality of the environment shall be protected," cover everything that you've said--in fact, in more detail than you've said it?

MR. DERBES

You may take that position--and correctly so. I'm trying to merely enunciate two additional policies, particularly one of coordinated management. I don't disagree with you entirely.

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Derbes, the last phrase of your amendment says "and for the regulation of other natural resources." When you talk about regulation, the regulations that the legislature might pass could only apply to people. You can only regulate people, can't you? You don't regulate natural resources. Isn't that correct?

MR. DERBES

Well, to the extent that natural resources would only be affected in terms of the way they are used or owned by people, yes. But, I would remind the convention that there is nothing implicit in this amendment which in any way disturbs the private property rights or gives any further effect to the police power of the state. The individual's rights, as clearly stated in the Bill of Rights and elsewhere in substantive law, are still available to him. I'm just trying to say that when the legislature goes about the process of regulating and administering natural resources, they should do so on a coordinated basis.

MR. JENKINS

Well, you know, I'm not so sure that the legislature has authority to regulate everything in the state. Can it, for instance, regulate crops? They're natural resources. Sunlight? Timber? Sand? Gravel? Are all those things subject to regulation now, or are we granting it by this amendment of yours?

MR. DERBES

The challenge to any regulation of the resources that you refer to would be one in which the police power of the state, which is implicit, would conflict with the rights of the individual private property owner, and they would be resolved in court--with or without this amendment. I don't think that this amendment would give any further authority to the state; it would merely direct the implementation of existing authority--if you understand the subtle difference.

MR. JENKINS

If your real goal is to coordinate and manage, wouldn't you really be better to put a period after the word "state" so that you can coordinate and manage the "administration of natural resources owned by the state (period)"? Wouldn't that accomplish your purpose?

MR. DERBES

Well, it would to a certain extent, and then it wouldn't to a certain extent. If one is trying, for example, to encourage oil exploration, one would make certain provisions to give incentives therefor, in order that there might be enough oil for the benefit of all people. If one were trying to encourage crop planting and harvesting, one would tend to do that. The same with recoverable resources in the streams and on the lands. It is merely a directive, Mr. Jenkins, and I do not believe, candidly, that it creates any additional substantive rights of the state vis-a-vis the individual.

MR. MUNSON

Mr. Derbes, you and Delegate Jenkins just touched on this, but isn't this a mandate to the state to regulate other natural resources, which could be agricultural crops? You are mandating them to regulate other natural resources.

MR. DERBES

Well, first of all, it's arguable whether or not crops are indeed natural resources. They are something that is created by the act of man. In other words, he plants the crops, and he harvests the crops.

MR. MUNSON

He doesn't necessarily plant trees.

MR. DERBES

I beg your pardon?

MR. MUNSON

Tree farming is an agricultural crop, and they're not necessarily planted on a tree farm. That's an agricultural crop, and it's a natural resource.

MR. DERBES

Well, to the extent that they may be renewed by the act of man, Mr. Munson...

MR. MUNSON

But, you're regulating under this. Aren't you mandating the legislature to regulate?

MR. DERBES

What I'm doing, Mr. Munson, is I am trying to anticipate, as I think might be brought home by the problems of society that we've reached at this point in time, that there very well may be an era of scarcity in this country, where various types of natural resources are indeed very much needed and, yet, are not available--both for the producer and for the consumer--and I'm trying to direct the legislature to regulate them in a coordinated manner so that they might be available.

MR. MUNSON

One other question, Mr. Derbes. We discussed this at length in the committee, as you know, and that is: we have in here "there shall be a Department of Wildlife and Fisheries; there shall be a Department of Conservation; there shall be a Department of Forestry and a forestry commissioner." Are you trying to consolidate these agencies into one?

MR. DERBES

No, Mr. Munson, and I wish you wouldn't give the convention that impression...

MR. MUNSON

I'm asking a question. I'm not giving them anything.

MR. DERBES

I'm certainly not trying to do that, to the extent that...for example, we might have a provision in the Judiciary Article which says there shall be a judicial system; but, by the same token, we create certain constitutional judgeships. We may create, in this particular proposal, certain constitutional agencies; and, to the extent that they are created and sanctioned in this constitution, they could not be coordinated by the legislature or, in any way, diminished in their power by the legislature.

103rd Days Proceedings—December 18, 1973

MR. MUNSON

Let me read the first part of your one-sentence amendment: "The legislature shall provide for the coordinated management and administration..." Doesn't that mean consolidate them, in order to administer?

MR. DERBES

No, I don't see that, Mr. Munson. What I do see, however, is once certain agencies or commissions are sanctioned by this constitution, the legislature would be required to work around the agencies that are sanctioned and empowered by this constitution so as to best coordinate and manage the natural resources. It would be a given, a limited, factor which would have to be taken into consideration; but, in conjunction with the constitutional agencies, the legislature should take steps to manage, in the most efficient possible manner, the natural resources of the state.

MR. HAYES

Mr. Derbes, you have this numbered Section 1.1. It appears to be a part of the natural resources of the state. Is that correct? Wouldn't the line 20 take care of what you have--16 and 20--take care of what you have in Section 1.1? The natural resources of the state would be the same as the...you said the resources owned by the state or other natural resources, and you say the legislature shall implement the policy...implement this by appropriate legislation. You seem to be covering the same thing again. Isn't that generally the same thing?

MR. DERBES

Mr. Hayes, Mr. Deshotels asked the very same question, and I answered it for him; I'll answer it for you. Basically, I do think that the first section is a good, solid section; and I think, to a great extent, it serves the purpose that I would like to serve with this constitution. I just want to enunciate a policy of coordinated management and administration of natural resources, to emphasize that point to the legislature. That's really all we need to say about natural resources in this state. I think when the legislature looks at this constitutional document for directives that that should be one of the directives given to it.

MR. WILLIS

I do believe, Mr. Derbes, that because of my inattention to the questioning of Mr. Hayes--and, perhaps, you referred to some other--that my question will be redundant. Nevertheless, do you not think that from a grammatical, literary, or language standpoint, Section 1 does the same thing as your proposed Section 1.1? Is that the question that has been asked of you before?

MR. DERBES

Twice.

MR. WILLIS

Well, perish the thought. Let me ask you this question, then, in projection of the question. Isn't it a fact that if you would put the word "coordinated" and "administered" in the ukases set forth in Section 1, vis-a-vis the legislature, that you would accomplish your purpose? I think that what you are suggesting is that, because the crucial words "coordinated" and "administered" are not in Section 1, that you want to put Section 1.1. Don't you think that if you were to put--insert--"coordinated"...you understand my question now?

MR. DERBES

I understand your question perfectly, Mr. Willis, and I completely agree with you. However, as a practical matter, I did not want to disturb in any way the committee proposal, which is now Section 1. I didn't want to jeopardize its passage because I think it's very important.

MR. WILLIS

I understand. I embrace the principle, as you do; but, if you want to embellish it, I don't think that there would be any aversion here if, as a matter of fact, the addition or the insertion of the words "coordinated and administered" would do the embellishment.

MR. DERBES

Mr. Willis, I have to disagree with you there, because I think some of the questions that have been asked this morning indicate that there is opposition. That's the very reason why I chose not to offer it as single-word amendments to Section 1. Instead, I chose to offer it as a sentence supplement to Section 1.

MR. WILLIS

You can't quarrel with strategy.

MR. DERBES

Thank you. I urge your adoption of the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I think it's been adequately explained. I don't see any particular reason to take up any more of the convention's time. I'd rather not have my time enlarged to answer additional questions. I would move the adoption of the amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. JACK

Mr. Chairman and members, I hate to oppose a fellow member of the committee; but, listening to Mr. Derbes, as I understand his explanation, this is covered in Section 1. However, I don't think it is. I don't like--I'm like Mr. Munson--that part for the regulation of other natural resources; that has a "shall" in it. I know the legislature, of course, don't have to do what we say they "shall" do--like, for years, we never reapportioned--but, this is to me a dangerous amendment: "the regulation of all other natural resources." As we decided by the committee, a corn crop is a natural resource--or any other kind of crop--not just... most people think of minerals and oil and those things. Now, if we pass this and the legislature takes us literally, it might be an urging, on our part, for them to come up with laws and regulations to plow under--like the federal government did--to plow up crops, not plant them. I can envision with some people could even think of a Louisiana soil bank--all those kind of gimmicks. I think we have a good statement of policy here in Section 1. I'm on this committee. We're in a new field on the natural resources and environment. We set out a good policy for the legislature to go into and to study. We shouldn't be drawing hindering things here, as a constitutional convention, in this proposal on this section, near as much as we would on certain other ones where we are dealing with things that we've known of and legislated on for years. A lot of this is a new field. I don't know exactly what he's talking about when he says: "The legislature shall provide for the coordinated management and administration of natural resources." How far will that go? So, I say this is too indefinite, could be very dangerous. For that reason, I'm "agin" it. Thank you.

Questions

MR. O'NEILL

Mr. Jack, I feel the same way you do, but let me ask you a couple of questions I didn't get to ask Mr. Derbes.

How would you think he would define natural resources? Do you have any idea?

MR. JACK

How he would?

MR. O'NEILL

Well, how it would be defined under his amendment?

MR. JACK

Oh! Well, if it's too indefinite...but natural resources, the way we feel in the committee and he is on it--it covers agriculture. That's why we've got in there about the commissioner of agriculture and those things.

MR. O'NEILL

Well, so....

MR. JACK

It's just everything is a natural resource that...unless it's like a man manufactures something. You can plant it, a crop, and that's a natural resource.

MR. O'NEILL

So, under this amendment, then, the legislature could start regulating who grew what, and in what quantity, and everything else. Right?

MR. JACK

Just like back during the depression. The federal government told you how much cotton to plow up; how much to plant; certain people in that Federal Soil Bank getting rich--probably some of them wouldn't know how to plant cotton. Now, I don't want to see under here...here someday telling us under Louisiana Legislature what cotton to plant, to plow up, and if you don't plant it, you've got a Louisiana Soil Bank. I just don't know. It's no reason for this thing. We're in a new field on natural resources. Let's just, as he told you, Mr. Derbes, I understand, he said that the legislature, and I think he's correct, can do what they want whether this was here or not, providing it was under the police power. Of course, if it deprived a person of his due process of law or equal rights, or all those things, they couldn't do it unless it was of the police power.

103rd Days Proceedings—December 18, 1973

MR. O'NEILL

O. K. Thank you, Mr. Jack.

MR. JACK

Let's leave good enough alone at this time.

MR. BURNS

Mr. Jack, do you think this amendment adds enough to the policy statement contained in the committee proposal that would justify adding another paragraph to this constitution?

MR. JACK

I don't...well, I'm not a bug on what's statutory and what's constitutional. It increases the length. But, what I'm saying, it could be a very dangerous thing, Senator. That's the way I'm afraid of it.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment rejected: 22-74. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Chairman Henry in the Chair

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

Section 2. Natural Gas; Public Policy; Interstate and Intrastate Pipelines

Section 2. Natural gas is hereby declared to be affected with a public interest, and natural gas produced in Louisiana shall be made available for utilization within the state as well as to the citizens of other states.

No intrastate natural gas pipeline or gas gathering line shall be in connection with an interstate natural gas pipeline, and no interstate natural gas pipeline shall be connected with an intrastate natural gas pipeline without a certificate of public convenience and necessity issued by the Public Service Commission after due application for such connection and hearing thereon.

Explanation

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I would like to mention first of all that I have an amendment to offer on line 32 which makes a change in this provision brought about by the legislation enacted in the special session, so that there is no conflict, so that this provision, if you should decide in your wisdom to adopt it, which I certainly hope you do, it does not make some of the legislation adopted in the special session unconstitutional.

Basically, what this provision does is to recognize that Louisiana has a problem with a natural resource, namely, natural gas; that we produce about thirty percent of the natural gas that's used in this country; that we have a problem today keeping enough of this gas within the boundaries of our state, so as to enable full utilization within Louisiana. This concept was developed by Mr. Tom Leigh who is not here because he is ill. Were he here, he would be speaking on this matter at this time. Basically, what he suggested and what our committee is attempting to do is to recognize in our constitution that natural gas is declared to be affected with the public interest, and that it should be made available to citizens of this state as well as to citizens of other states.

It also places in the constitution language to prohibit the interconnection of interstate pipelines with intrastate pipelines, and vice versa, the obvious reason being because under recent rulings in the federal system, if you inject interstate gas, which is subject to the jurisdiction of the Federal Power Commission, into an intrastate line, which this state does have jurisdiction over, then you convert the intrastate line to an interstate line. We feel that this is something that is most important to an energy producing state as Louisiana is. In order to do everything within our power to preserve as much natural gas as we can for utilization within the boundaries of this state, we felt that we should put a policy statement in this constitution declaring that natural gas is affected with the public interest and it should be made available to our citizens as well as to citizens throughout the north and eastern portions of this country. As you know, the problem we have today, is that much of our gas, as much as eighty percent, is being piped outside of Louisiana under old-term contracts, to the northern, eastern, the midwestern states, because of Federal Power Commission jurisdiction over these lines, we have no control over this.

This concept was developed prior to the special session. Some of these ideas were included in Senate Bill No. 9. I mentioned earlier that I had an amendment that I planned to offer to delete "Public Service Commission", and in its place, provide, "as provided by law." The reason for that being the special session of the legislature gave the powers and duties, regulation of intrastate gas, basically, natural gas, to the Commission of Conservation so as to avoid a conflict in our constitution with the legislation that was enacted in the special session. I'm going to offer that amendment.

Questions

MR. JENKINS

Louis, you say here that natural gas is affected with the public interest. What does that mean?

MR. LAMBERT

It means that it is a natural resource that the public of this state has a vital interest in, and without which the State of Louisiana, its economy, would be greatly jeopardized.

MR. JENKINS

We have an interest, as individuals, in many things, don't we? The soil of the state; the water of the state; the corn grown here; the cotton. We don't say that those things are affected with a public interest in our constitution, though, do we?

MR. LAMBERT

No, we don't. I don't understand what's the point of your question.

MR. JENKINS

My point is, why do we need to say that?

MR. LAMBERT

Because we have a problem. We have...we are involved in an energy crisis. For years, obviously, there has been a lack of programming on a long-range basis of the natural gas in our state which has turned out to be something that is very valuable. At one time, it was not. At one time, it was sold for four cents a thousand cubic feet. Now it is selling for a dollar a thousand cubic feet. In order to recognize this situation, we felt that this time, it would be most appropriate, since it is obviously a depleting natural resource, that we should recognize it in our constitution and, hopefully, lend more creditability and weight to any attempt by the federal government to further take over jurisdiction of all of the natural gas in this state. You know, Mr. Jenkins, that that could happen. That was one of the reasons that the special session of the legislature was called--in an effort, hopefully, to take steps in our state to show the Federal Power Commission, and the federal government, that although we do have this gas in Louisiana, we don't have so much of it that we do not concern ourselves with a program to conserve it and utilize it to the best of our ability.

MR. JENKINS

Isn't the high price of gas in Louisiana doing much more to conserve it than the low interstate price of gas is doing? Isn't the free market in Louisiana doing more to conserve it than the regulated market interstate?

MR. LAMBERT

The problem, as I understand it today, one of the main problems with the natural gas, is because it's under long-term contracts at a very cheap price. The producers don't have the incentives and the inducements to drill. This is what we were told. This is what we've been told.

MR. JENKINS

They don't interstate, but they do intrastate because there's no price regulation. Isn't that true?

MR. LAMBERT

That's correct, Woody, but if, I know you realize that once the Federal Power Commission takes jurisdiction over a line, or a reserve, a field, they never lose it. When that old contract expires, we can't take jurisdiction. They...the arm of the Federal Power Commission never leaves. If they negotiate new contracts, the FPC has jurisdiction in that area. So, as you know, what we attempted to do--and I don't know if we're off the subject or not--but in the special session of the legislature, it was an effort to set up a vehicle whereby we could hopefully induce private enterprise to develop new gas finds and set up a mechanism whereby we could transport the gas. We don't have that now, as you know. We have about five major intrastate lines in this state. Without these lines, the sugar mills could not grind.

MR. JENKINS

Isn't it true in your second paragraph you prohibit anyone who owns an intrastate gas pipeline from connecting with an interstate gas pipeline?

MR. LAMBERT

That's correct.

MR. JENKINS

Isn't it true that there's no incentive now for anybody with an intrastate gas pipeline to connect with an interstate gas pipeline, because if he did so, his gas would sell at one-half to one-tenth what it would sell by keeping it intrastate? So, why do we need to put this in here?

MR. LAMBERT

Are you familiar with the United Gas Pipeline Case--I think they call it the Green System--where an entire pipeline system was converted from an intrastate into an interstate system? The FPC took jurisdiction over what was formerly an intrastate system because of the injection of natural intrastate gas, I'm sorry, interstate gas, into an intrastate line? Are you familiar with that? That's the reason for it.

MR. JENKINS

Yes. But, we can't control the decisions of the FPC.

But, isn't it true that there's no reason, whatsoever, economically, for someone to connect his intrastate line with an interstate line, because he is going to lose money if he does so?

MR. LAMBERT

Well, if the federal government, through Nixon, President Nixon, would decide to deregulate natural gas, the price of natural gas at the wellhead, then, obviously, it may be advantageous to interconnect because the interstate gas might be selling at a higher price than intrastate gas. We don't know that, you know.

MR. DESHOTELS

Mr. Lambert, you agree that Paragraph 2 of Section 2 is now obsolete, don't you?

MR. LAMBERT

It's certainly not obsolete. In fact....

MR. DESHOTELS

Well, as far as the legislature's last act, you put someone else in charge of that, haven't you?

MR. LAMBERT

Yes, that's....no one was in charge of it. No one was in charge of it. That was a constant....there is presently, in the Louisiana Constitution, as you know, a prohibition against regulation of sales of intrastate gas directly to industries by the Public Service Commission. But, according to our present constitution, the Public Service Commission could not do this, you see?

MR. DESHOTELS

I understand that. But, what I'm saying is that your last legislative expression would go contrary to the provisions of this proposal. Isn't that right?

MR. LAMBERT

That is correct. That is why I am offering the amendment to delete the Public Service Commission.

MR. DESHOTELS

My second question is, your amendment, if adopted, would make Paragraph 2 a legislative matter, would it not?

MR. LAMBERT

You could say that. But....I think you go back to the old argument as to what is constitutional material and what is not. We discussed this in our committee, and Mr. Leigh felt strongly that it should....that it's so important, that, and it could, if there's no controls over this, it could convert intrastate gas to interstate gas. He felt that it was so important, and the committee agreed, that it should be placed in the constitution.

MR. DESHOTELS

Well, Senator, I would agree with you, that if you designate a specific body with that authority to issue certificates, then you have constitutionalized it. But, if you leave in there the certificates and the granting of authority to do this, it would be left up to the legislature, then you have actually taken away the constitutional sanction over it, haven't you?

Wouldn't it be better to just leave this whole thing out since the legislature has already covered this subject, I think, quite well?

MR. LAMBERT

Leave what out?

MR. DESHOTELS

The whole paragraph--the second paragraph of Section 2.

MR. LAMBERT

Well, let me just say this, the legislature, the special session, took this material from this proposal, basically. This proposal had been printed before the special session. Some of the material that was included in the special session came out of the Natural Resources Committee. This was one of the provisions that....

MR. DESHOTELS

You will agree that the legislative....the last legislative session, and particularly its legislation, was pilot legislation--was new--in a new field so far as Louisiana was concerned.

MR. LAMBERT

I would just say this that it could be argued both ways on the second paragraph--that it could be placed in the constitution, or it does not have to be placed in the constitution. But, it is something that it is so important, it affects whether or not natural gas is converted from intra to inter, and we lose control over it within the state; we cannot regulate it. It's regulated by the FPC, that this, because of the significance of the language, that we should put it in our basic and fundamental law which is our constitution.

MR. DESHOTELS

I agree with you....

MR. HENRY

The gentleman has exceeded his time, sir.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendments sent up by Mr. Derbes as follows:
Amendment No. 1. Page 1, delete lines 22 through 32 both inclusive in their entirety. On page 2, delete lines 1 through 2, both inclusive in their entirety.

Explanation

MR. DERBES

Ladies and gentlemen, if I may have your attention for a minute, let me make a couple of points.

The Committee Proposal essentially enunciates the policy with respect to natural gas. I don't think....first of all, I think that that policy is amply covered in Section 1 of the Committee Proposal which you have already adopted. That's my first point.

My second point is a rather technical one. If you will listen to me carefully, I think I can clarify it for you. Does the very fact of putting a public policy statement with respect to natural gas only give....in the constitution....give Louisiana a greater claim to natural gas? I think not. I think not. I think that amply the legislature can provide for public policy with respect to natural gas.

Third: I think that in this particular area which is changing rapidly, we should not in any way put in specific restrictions on the supply and sale of natural gas in the constitution. That can be properly covered by the legislature.

Finally, I'd like to call your attention to something which I regard as a basic problem of substantive law: that is in the first paragraph of the committee proposal in Section 2. It says, "Natural gas is hereby declared to be affected with the public interest, and natural gas produced in Louisiana shall be made available for utilization within the state as well as for the citizens of other states."

I say to you that this arguably creates a substantive right in the people of other states to demand an allocation of natural gas produced in Louisiana.

For example: Can a natural gas pipeline company domiciled in Tennessee, or Mississippi, or even Maine, or New York come into this state and argue that under the first paragraph of Section 2 of the Committee Proposal, they are entitled to an allocation of Louisiana natural gas? I think that is a very important consideration. Although I do not necessarily agree that it is clearly required by the language, I think it illustrates--it illustrates the complexities of the problem which make the problem insoluble by constitutional provision. Therefore, I say to you, No. 1, that public policy regarding natural gas, indeed a matter of great consideration to the people of this state, and particularly at this time, is amply covered in Section 1 of our Committee Proposal as you have already adopted it. And that furthermore, the complexities of the problem indicate to me that it is something to be left to the legislature.

By way of further argument, let me suggest to you that natural gas is of such concern to the people of this state, that it is an area where the legislature can be clearly trusted. The legislature, in my opinion, will do nothing--will do nothing--to destroy the availability of natural gas to the people of this state. It is a matter of great concern. The legislature, in my opinion, will do the job required.

Therefore, I suggest to you that all of Section 2--all of Section 2, that referring to the Public Service Commission and the certificate of convenience, and that proposing that natural gas be affected with the public interest--is something which should be covered in legislation, which has already been covered in the legislation of the special session, and which should not be--should not be, since it is a complex and difficult matter--covered in this constitution.

I urge your adoption of the amendment which has the effect of deleting the entire section.

Questions

MR. STINSON

Mr. Derbes, I notice that you are on this committee, and one thing that puzzles me, is why there is no mention of oil?

MR. DERBES

Mr. Stinson, let me explain it to you as best I can. Mr. Tommy Leigh of Monroe is an expert in this area. He, as all of us, is concerned with the availability of natural gas. He proposed the adoption of this section. Out of thoughtfulness, consideration, and courtesy to him, we reported it out. Unfortunately, he is not here to defend it. But, frankly, I think that there are many, many, natural resources in this state which have to do with food and fibre, and transportation and heating, which we could all itemize and say that they are all declared to be affected with a public purpose.

MR. STINSON

I know Mr. Leigh is an authority, but even authorities can overlook things. It seems obvious to me that it's just as important to apply to oil, because the special session, didn't they say they are going to build refineries. In the refineries, they are not to use natural gas. That's to use oil.

MR. DERBES

Mr. Stinson, I agree with you completely. I suggest that my amendment is the solution as far as this Constitutional Convention is concerned.

MR. HAYES

Mr. Derbes, did you know I agree with you that I can see no need for the rest of this after Section 2, guaranteeing the other states gas, that's there is any need to put this in the constitution at all?

MR. DERBES

Now, wait a minute, Mr. Hayes. My amendment deletes all of Section 2....all of Section 2.

MR. HAYES

Absolutely. I agree with that. Because after you put in that natural gas is hereby declared to affect public interest, it should be for this state as well as others, then there's no need to put it in the constitution.

MR. DERBES

No, that Section 2, Mr. Hayes, I delete the language that you just read.

MR. HAYES

I understand that you are deleting the entire thing. For that reason, I would like to see it deleted.

MR. DERBES

Well, maybe we agree with each other for different reasons. But, in any indication, to make it clear, we delete....this amendment deletes all of Section 2.

MR. O'NEILL

Mr. Derbes, I want you to know this is a favorable question. I'd like to ask you a question about....

MR. DERBES

I'm relieved, Mr. O'Neill....

MR. O'NEILL

....about the section as it's written.

Now, if it requires, it says "shall be made available for utilization within the state as well as to the citizens of other states." Now, take a natural gas supplier within the state who sells his gas only within the state. Wouldn't this be....couldn't this be an abrogation of his contract if he were made to sell gas outside the state, and supply it outside the state?

MR. DERBES

As I explained to you in my argument in support of the amendment, I think that....technically....and it is a technical consideration, this creates a substantive right in out-of-state consumers to walk into Louisiana courts and say that under the Louisiana Constitution they are entitled to an allocation of our natural gas. I think that that's very dangerous.

MR. O'NEILL

Well, you have a good amendment, Mr. Derbes.

MR. DERBES

Thank you, Mr. O'Neill. I appreciate your support.

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in opposition to the amendment proposed by Mr. Derbes. First of all, I would like to point out his primary objection appears to be that he is concerned that the language in this....in Section 2 would make gas possibly give a right to natural gas from within Louisiana to citizens of other states. The obvious answer to that is that we discussed that at great length in committee. The obvious answer is that if we passed a law saying that no other....or put in our constitution that no other states can use Louisiana's natural gas, the obvious step by the federal government would be to nationalize the natural gas in Louisiana, and they would take over all of our intrastate lines. So, obviously, what we tried to do, was to come up with language that could, hopefully, meet a constitutional test. We didn't want to discriminate in the area of the interstate commerce clause. So, this was taken into great consideration. The language was carefully worded so that, hopefully, we would be enacting something that it could not be said by the Federal Power Commission, the federal government, the federal courts, that we were discriminating against the rights of other states to use the natural gas in this state.

I may feel, and you may feel, that they should not have the right to use it. But, unfortunately, you have about nine energy producing states, gas producing states in this country. Four of them export gas, and four of them, the balance of them, import gas. They don't produce enough to use within their borders so they import it, and one of the states that they import it from, obviously, is Louisiana. So, the point that Mr. Derbes makes, as far as I'm concerned, is exactly what we considered. If we did what he's saying, of course he argues to delete the entire section, but assuming we did not and we changed the language to read that natural gas produced in Louisiana cannot be used by anyone else, obviously we would invite the federal government to come in and take everything over. That's why we didn't do that. The answer to that is obvious.

Secondly, I want to point out once again, Mr. Leigh, you might say, was the architect of this particular provision. Mr. Leigh has been involved in natural gas litigation for years. I'm sure there are other attorneys in this hall today that also have been. He felt he was not alone. I felt, and the majority of the members on the committee felt that, if we are going to do everything within our power to demonstrate to the people of Louisiana that we want to make sure that they have a sufficient supply of natural gas to use domestically; and when you talk about food items and fibres and you're talking about sugarcane grinding; you're talking about the rice dryers; you're talking about soybeans, etc., we felt that it might give us a stronger leg to stand on in court--natural gas litigation--if we had something in our constitution that said natural gas is declared to be affected with the public interest. That was the purpose of it. I ask you for the reasons that I've just stated to oppose this amendment.

Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. DREW

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise to oppose this amendment. Now, let me first go into some of the reasoning behind the amendment. I must say that Mr. Derbes has some merit--and I say some merit--in his opposition to the use of the phrase "within the state" as well as the "citizens of other states." I think that can be cleared up with a very simple amendment.

Now, as to the question of the necessity of having this in the constitution, it has been asked if we declared by the legislature, as we have done, that it is affected with the public interest, would it not carry the same weight?

Well, my answer to that question is, "No." Certainly a constitutional provision carries more weight than a legislative provision. We need this public interest provision so that we can then...it ties directly into Paragraph 2 where we require a certificate of public convenience before these lines can be interconnected. I think that this is a very necessary thing.

Now, as far as the...Mr. Derbes' argument about allocation, yes, it could be allocated. But I don't think you are going to find the State of Louisiana, even as it is written today, allocating any more than is absolutely required. I don't think this would require any percentages to out-of-state users.

In answer to Mr. Jenkins' questions awhile ago about why would any interstate line connect with an intrastate line? The whole problem in this state, in all of the hearings that we had in the Natural Resources Committee, is not primarily the gas or the availability of gas. Our problem in the state of Louisiana is transportation of the gas that we have. If you cannot transport that gas inside of the state to purchasers and users of the gas, then your only alternative is to ship it out of state where there is an abundance of purchasers. This is a very essential thing that we would keep it in the constitution.

I do hope that Mr. Stinson will go with his amendment to include oil. I cannot see where we should distinguish between gas and oil. They have almost equal importance. But, I do feel like that one of the questions that Mr. Deshotels asked, "If this was not, by putting as provided by law, if this was not legislative." What we have done, we have put a constitutional prohibition against interconnection without a certificate of public convenience. The only thing legislative is to determine what body should have a hearing, and issue that certificate, or deny that certificate. That does not make Paragraph 2 legislative. It is an absolute constitutional prohibition subject to the legislature determining what body shall have the hearing. That is all. That is the only legislative aspect of Paragraph 2.

I ask that you defeat this amendment. I will, and I'm sure others will have amendments that may help it a little bit and answer Mr. Derbes' questions about the within or without the state. But, I think it is imperative that we have this in the constitution so that we will have more influence, more effect, on legislation pertaining to gas. We, as I said, the hearings that we had in the House and at the Resources Committee, indicated the transportation in Louisiana is the problem more than the supply.

I hope you will defeat this amendment.

Questions

MR. NUNEZ

Mr....Representative Drew, I'm sort of concerned because this... if this is in conjunction with what Senate Bill 9 did, or the Energy Commission we created, it looks...it seems to me to be the same thing. But, then, on the bottom down there, you have the ...."without a certificate of public convenience or necessity issued by the Public Service Commission" which seems to be in conflict with Senate Bill 9, and in conflict with the new Energy Commission to regulate....

MR. DREW

Sam, there's an amendment that will be offered that will delete Public Service Commission and put as provided by law. That's the point I was talking about awhile ago. The only legislative part of this article--everything is constitutional except the fact that the legislature designates the body to hold a hearing and issue or deny the certificate.

The Public Service Commission under this amendment that will be offered, will be deleted.

MR. NUNEZ

O. K. We are going to delete the Public Service Commission, right?

MR. DREW

It will be offered. I don't know what the convention will do. But, it will be offered.

MR. NUNEZ

That was one of my objections to the whole thing. But, the other one. Do you feel in your opinion that we absolutely need this in the constitution the way it is here?

MR. DREW

I think it definitely strengthens the position of the state in the natural gas deal....

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. DERBES

I'd just like to say one thing in closing. There are many, many items upon which we all depend for our livelihood--that is for our sustenance, for our transportation, for our food and consumption. Many are considered by Louisiana law to be fugitive items; that is, items which are not ordinarily subject to private ownership until they are reduced to possession. This may seem irrelevant to you, but I'm driving at one particular point, and that is that these...that items that are in this classification are oil, gas, other minerals...other minerals. Items like fish, for example, and game quadrupeds which may be needed for public consumption. I suggest to you that if this constitution is to be futuristically oriented, if we are making a constitution for the people of this state, and we are going to effect only natural gas with the public interest, then, perhaps, we ought to reconsider and affect all of these materials with the public interest--affect oil, affect other minerals, affect fish in the streams, affect game and non-game quadrupeds which certain people...have occasion to consume for their very sustenance. All of these things...this argument that Mr. Drew is advancing, and which Senator Lambert is advancing, is applicable to all such fugitive commodities. If you are going to single out natural gas and affect it with the public interest just because at this particular time in our history, there is a definable scarcity of it, then you are not writing a constitution for the people of this state for future generations. I suggest to you that scarcity of minerals, of foodstuffs, of oil and gas, is something which can be amply handled by the legislature which changes in its complexities from time to time. The best way to handle it in this constitution, is not to handle it at all.

I urge your adoption of the amendment.

Question

MR. ABRAHAM

Jim, you've made some good points. First of all, on your point of making gas available to citizens of other states, could not that be handled by simply saying it's made available for utilization within the state and insofar as possible to other citizens, or maybe to say that it shall be allocated in the best interest of the citizens of the state?

MR. DERBES

The basic principle that we have frequently run afoul of in our deliberations in this convention is to try to do something with... in one deft blow, in one fell swoop, as it were, that's going to benefit all the people. When you do it in a constitution, you have to do it succinctly, and you have to do it clearly. When you create a substantive principle like the one Mr. Leigh is proposing, here, in this committee proposal, you're going to run afoul of certain complexities which are going to change from time to time. To answer your question specifically, yes, perhaps we can do that. Perhaps we can clarify the language a little bit, but it's not going to help matters very much. What Mr. Drew is suggesting to you is that when the State of Louisiana goes to court and tries to keep natural gas in this state, is it going to be of any significant value or interest to the court that the policy on which the state is relying is enunciated in the constitution of this state or in the legislation of this state?

[Amendment rejected: 36-62. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Bollinger. All right, Mr. Bollinger sends up a floor amendment. There needs to be one correction made to it.

103rd Days Proceedings—December 18, 1973

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, delete lines (and here's the correction, instead of 22, make that 28 ) delete lines 28 through 32, both inclusive, in their entirety and on page 2, delete lines 1 and 2 in their entirety.

Again, as passed out, it would have the effect of deleting on page 1, 22 through 32, but the gentleman wishes to change it, prior to introduction, to read: "delete lines 28 through 32," to have the effect of leaving the first paragraph of this section in the proposal.

Explanation

MR. BOLLINGER

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I was rather surprised at the vote on the Derbes amendment. I think we ought to stop and look at what we're doing in the constitution. The points were brought out and brought out well that the only reason this natural gas section is in here is because the state is having a crisis with natural gas. The legislature had a special session and tried to deal with these problems, which is the proper way the state should operate. But, we're going to constitutionalize a section on natural gas; and in ten years, we might have trouble with fish, so we're going to have a constitutional amendment that says the fish are going to have to stay in the state--and shrimp, and crabs, and oysters, and cattle, and horses. Where are we going to stop? This amendment is going to take some of the section away and just leave a public policy on natural gas. If you insist on having something in the constitution on natural gas, let's just use our heads a little bit and remember that we're not legislators, we're not trying to solve the everyday problems of the state, but, we're here to solve some of the future problems and to provide a constitution that's going to last, we hope, for years into the future.

I move the adoption of the amendment, and yield to any questions.

Questions

MR. MUNSON

Mr. Bollinger, are you saying, in effect, that you believe that gas should be co-mingled between intrastate and interstate lines?

MR. BOLLINGER

No, sir, Mr. Munson, I don't. But, what we do in this constitution cannot override what the public. . . what the Federal Power Commission is going to dictate to us. It's legislative materials and should be dealt with by the legislature.

MR. MUNSON

No, the public. . . I mean, the commission--the national board--after it has been co-mingled, then they say it is interstate and cannot be regulated by us. They don't have any regulation that it shall be co-mingled. What this section does that you are eliminating would prohibit the co-mingling of natural gas between intrastate and interstate.

MR. BOLLINGER

Well, I think that Mr. Jenkins. . .

MR. MUNSON

The Federal Power Commission has no jurisdiction over it.

MR. BOLLINGER

Mr. Jenkins brought up the point that it's obviously not attractive for anyone to comingle gas. There's not an incentive or anything. There's no incentive to put intrastate gas in an interstate pipeline because of the price structure.

MR. MUNSON

It's an incentive to the people up east, isn't it?

MR. BOLLINGER

Of what?

MR. MUNSON

Up east, other parts of the country.

MR. BOLLINGER

Yes, they. . .

MR. MUNSON

Wouldn't they like to see it all comingled?

MR. BOLLINGER

Yes, they would, but we're talking about Louisiana's gas with Louisiana's production. The price up east is a lot cheaper than when it's controlled within the state.

Point of Order

MR. JACK

I have a point of order. As I read it, this is exactly like the Derbes amendment, to knock out the same thing.

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Jack, he has changed that amendment, sir, to make it strike out only lines 28 through 32 on page 1. So, it would leave that first paragraph in.

MR. JACK

Well, I didn't get the official notice or hear it.

MR. POYNTER

I had said it, but I. . .

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected: 24-71. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The next set of amendments sent up by Delegate Lambert, and Senator De Blieux has asked to be a cosauthor of that amendment.

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, at the end of line 32, after the word "issued" delete the remainder of the line and on page 2, at the beginning of line 1, delete the words "vice commission" and insert in lieu thereof the words "as provided by law."

Explanation

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, what I'm trying to do here is to delete the Public Service Commission. The reason for that is that the authority--first of all, the Louisiana Constitution that we operate under today, prohibits the Louisiana Public Service Commission from regulating. There's a specific prohibition that was adopted during. . . in about 1967 or 1968. I think it was called a part of the Industrial Inducement Incentive Right to Profit Laws. It prohibited the Public Service Commission from regulating the sales of intrastate natural gas to industry. It did not, however, prohibit some other agency from regulating the sales of intrastate natural gas. That is why, or one of the reasons, I assume, that in the special session of the legislature, in Senate Bill No. 9, this authority was given to the commissioner of conservation. So, if the Public Service Commission were left in this provision, and this had been drafted before the special session of the legislature--and that's why the amendment is necessary--Public Service Commission needs to be deleted. Otherwise, I feel, and a number of other people feel that it would have the effect of crippling some of the legislation that was passed in the special session because the authority to do this was given to the commissioner of conservation. It was done. . . that was done in legislative act, and if the legislature sees fit, that could be changed. But, what I'm asking that you do is to go along with the removal of the Public Service Commission and just put "as provided by law." That way, there would be no conflict.

Questions

MR. SINGLETARY

Senator Lambert, do you know that as a member of the committee I think you have a good amendment?

MR. LAMBERT

I can't hear you, Mr. Singletary.

MR. SINGLETARY

As a member of the committee, I think you have a good amendment.

MR. LAMBERT

Thank you.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Senator Lambert, isn't it necessary that we have this amendment in order to be sure that the legislation we passed during the special session is valid legislation?

MR. LAMBERT

That's correct. I think it would have the effect of making much of the legislation enacted in Senate Bill No. 9 unconstitutional, because it would be a direct conflict with -- if this is adopted-- this new constitution. I'm assuming it will be.

103rd Days Proceedings—December 18, 1973

MR. DE BLIEUX

If the situation should ever arise where we wanted the Public Service Commission to regulate it, it could be done by legislative acts.

MR. LAMBERT

It certainly could. It leaves it up to the legislature, and it does not preclude the Public Service Commission from having this authority. However, it is presently given to the commissioner of conservation.

MR. DESHOTELS

Senator Lambert, I assume that at the time the committee adopted the particular portion of this section, it was adopted only after debate and consideration. Isn't that correct?

MR. LAMBERT

Much.

MR. DESHOTELS

All right. At that time, it was the committee's feeling that the Public Service Commission, being a body elected throughout the State of Louisiana, would be the most appropriate body to do. . .to issue certificates and have hearings. Wouldn't you say that was correct?

MR. LAMBERT

At that particular time, yes. The reason that Public Service Commission was put in there was because later on in the Public Service Commission Proposal, which this committee had jurisdiction, the prohibition against the regulation by the Public Service Commission of sales and intrastate natural gas to industries was deleted. That prohibition, if it were adopted later, would no longer be there. That was one of the reasons that it was placed here.

MR. DESHOTELS

Your committee, at that time, considered and evidently prepared a proposal for the convention that would require hearing before issuance of a certificate of public convenience and necessity. Isn't that correct?

MR. LAMBERT

Yes, and they still provide for that. That has not been deleted.

MR. DESHOTELS

Well, you're deleting. . .with your amendment, you're saying that it will be "as provided by law." Isn't that correct?

MR. LAMBERT

No, I'm not.

MR. DESHOTELS

All right. It says, "issued. . ."

MR. LAMBERT

Read it to me; you have it in front of you.

MR. DESHOTELS

Well, my. . .I think we can go on to the next question. But, I. . .

MR. LAMBERT

It says this: "without a certificate of public convenience and necessity issued as provided by law after due application for such connection and hearing thereon."

Yes, that's all. In other words, you still have the hearing, etc. In other words, it does not, at all, do away with that, certainly not. That's not. . .

MR. DESHOTELS

My final question is: I'm a little confused with your philosophy that you would seem to urge the convention to be adopting a provision to accommodate the legislature, and more particular, its last legislative expression rather than to accommodate what you, at the time of the consideration of this provision by the committee, considered to be, I assume, a public interest of the state.

MR. LAMBERT

I'm not asking you to do that. I'm only pointing out to you that if we do not. . .if our committee would have had a chance to meet, and this proposal had not already been introduced, hopefully, we would. . .Mr. Deshotels, you want to listen? Hopefully, we would have made this change before it got to the floor. We were asked not to cover this until the special session met. We had no idea that the special session--just exactly what was going to be done. We had some inclination, but not completely and totally. But, I. . .go ahead.

MR. DESHOTELS

Of course, the legislature could appoint anybody that they want to to issue these certificates. . .

MR. HENRY

The gentleman has exceeded his time.

MR. LAMBERT

I can't hear you.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: 76-14. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Recess

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

[Quorum Call: 74 delegates present and a quorum.]

Amendment

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, delete lines 22 through 27, both inclusive, in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Section 2. Oil; Natural Gas; Public Policy; Interstate and Intrastate Pipelines Section 2. Oil and natural gas are hereby declared to be affected with a public interest, and oil and natural gas produced in Louisiana shall be utilized to the best interest of the state."

Explanation

MR. DREW

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, as mentioned this morning, it was the opinion of many in the convention that oil should be included, as well as gas. We have inserted that in this amendment, and because of the opposition to the "without the state," we have changed that. . .I have changed that to read: "The oil and natural gas produced in Louisiana shall be utilized to the best interest of the state." I think that will stand up. I think it better states the intention of this paragraph of Section 2.

I move for the adoption of the amendment.

Questions

MR. ROEMER

Harmon, as I understand it, oil and natural gas on private lands, or from private lands are owned by the people that own said lands, or who pump that oil and gas. Now, we're going to say in this constitution that their rights are going to be abrogated, and this oil and gas is going to be "utilized to the best interest of the state"? I mean, is the state just going to take over all of the oil and gas? Is that it?

MR. DREW

I don't think it could be interpreted that way. I can't see at all how it could be interpreted in that manner.

MR. ROEMER

Well, I just want you to realize. . .I'd hope you understand that I think that oil and natural gas produced in Louisiana should be used for the best interests of those that produce it. That's my feeling, in a free society.

MR. DREW

Well, that's the reason I said "shall be utilized to the best interest of the state." Now, Buddy, I think you have to read this in connection with Paragraph 2, where you then have your certificate of public convenience to prevent interconnections.

I move the adoption of the amendment.

MR. SINGLETARY

Harmon, you used the language, "shall be utilized to the best interest of the state." I'm in agreement with the first part of your amendment. I think it's a good amendment. But, you change the language a little bit to say "shall be utilized to the best interest of the state," rather than say "it shall be made available for utilization within the state." I think that I would, personally, prefer that language. Would you comment on that?

103rd Days Proceedings—December 18, 1973

MR. DREW

Well, I mean, I would have no objection to an amendment like that, of course, when . . . maybe I'm in error, but when I speak of the state, I am speaking of the people of the state that make up the state, is what I'm speaking of. I think that's the general interpretation of that usage of . . . I think if you say "state," you are certainly speaking of the people of the state.

MR. SINGLETARY

Well, Mr. Roemer says that he would prefer this language, "available for utilization within the state." I think that would tend to work more towards correcting the problem we're trying to correct, rather than the language you use. I'd appreciate it if you'd . . .

MR. DREW

I would . . . like I said, Alvin, I would have no objection if you wanted to offer an amendment to so read, but I think it, in effect, says the same thing.

MR. PEREZ

Harmon, why did you include oil in your statement, because the problem which confronts the state, today, is the control by the Federal Power Commission with respect to the transportation of natural gas in interstate commerce? But, I can't figure out why we want to include oil, which is not so controlled, and would make it appear as if, again, as Buddy Roemer said, this may be something which could be nationalized, so to speak, as I read this language.

MR. DREW

Mr. Perez, right at this time, I don't think, as you've said, what you've said is absolutely correct. I don't think that there's, necessarily, any critical. . . I mean, oil is not as critical as gas, at this stage. But, I mean, it appears to me that it will probably be just as critical in the very near future, if what we read and what we hear is correct. But, I don't think that there's any intention or that this could be interpreted as socializing oil and gas to where the individual rights would be abrogated.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Drew, just to clarify your language a little, who decides what is in the best interest of the state--the legislature?

MR. DREW

Well, I think you have to . . . of course, that is one of their obligations, Mrs. Zervigon. At the same time, you have to read it in connection with Paragraph 2, where we're speaking of the . . . specifically of interconnection to let this gas get out of the state.

MR. MUNSON

Harmon, would you consider temporarily withdrawing your amendments and to say "shall be made available to utilization within the state," as it is in the proposal?

MR. DREW

I'd be glad to, Bob, since there's some objection on that with . . .

MR. MUNSON

One other question before you do that, then, Harmon. You did intend to leave out that last part, "as well as to the citizens of other states"?

MR. DREW

"Other states?"

MR. MUNSON

Yes, as it is in the committee. . .

MR. DREW

That was the purpose--main purpose--of this.

MR. MUNSON

To add oil, and then to leave out that portion that refers to the citizens of other states?

MR. DREW

Well, I mean, that's what I was trying to get out. But, I think if you put a period "." after "within the state," I think maybe you would run into a little problem there, Bob.

MR. MUNSON

You don't have any objection, then, to say, "to be made available for utilization within the state," which is what you say you intended to do, anyhow?

MR. DREW

With permission of the Chair, I'd like to withdraw it, temporarily, and make that change, Mr. Chairman.

[Amendment withdrawn. Quorum Call:
72 delegates present and a quorum.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

On page 1, line 26, immediately after the word "utilization" strike out the remainder of the line and strike out line 27 in its entirety, and insert in lieu thereof the following: "to the best interests of the citizens of the state."

Explanation

MR. DREW

Mr. Chairman, what this does . . . the committee has asked me to delete "oil" because this deals specifically with gas and, if necessary, we can have a separate section on oil if it is necessary. What this does, it does away with the provision referring to "without the state," and it will be utilized to the best interest of the state. I think that cures most of the objections that I've heard from the floor.

Point of Information

MR. PEREZ

Point of information. Would the Clerk read the entire provision as it would now read?

MR. POYNTER

Yes. It would read as follows: First two lines would be the same: "Natural Gas is hereby declared to be affected with a public interest, and natural gas produced in Louisiana shall be made available for utilization." Then, you pick up with his text which is: "to the best interests of the citizens of the state."

Questions

MR. J. JACKSON

So, I can fully understand the context of your amendment. I know your previous amendment restricted it to the state, "made available to the citizens of the state." I just want to make sure in my mind that what you are saying that if it's in the best interest of the state to provide gas to the citizens of the state and at the same time provide gas to the other parts of the country, that would be a legitimate interest working, I mean, legitimate process working in the interest of the state. But, on the other hand, if presently what's happening now where you got gas going into the interstate system that if other parts are getting gas and Louisiana, let's say, is not getting his fair share then your amendment would kind of restrict that activity from continuing.

MR. DREW

What this does, Johnny, is pretty much what you said but the way the committee proposal was written it would appear to me there was an obligation to furnish state . . . I mean, gas out of state. I don't think we can prohibit interstate transportation of gas; under this, it does not prohibit interstate but says "it shall be utilized to the best interests of this state."

If there are no further questions, I move for the adoption . . .

MR. KEAN

Mr. Drew, as I appreciate your amendment, it would be the responsibility of the legislature to determine what would be utilization and the best interests of the citizens of the state?

MR. DREW

I think it would have to be their obligation to take care of it.

MR. KEAN

So, if the legislature felt it desirable to abrogate contracts, reallocate supplies under this provision this would give them the full authority to do so?

103rd Days Proceedings—December 18, 1973

MR. DREW

Mr. Kean, I don't think that we could ignore constitutional provisions against abrogation of contract. I don't think it would go that far, although, the monster bill does go that far. I was the chief proponent because of the abrogation of contracts in the original bill.

MR. CONROY

Mr. Drew, addressing ourselves to future contracts that might be entered wouldn't the provision, as you've got it now, make any future gas contract subject to judicial review to determine whether or not it was making gas available to the best interests of the citizens of the state? You have....

MR. DREW

David, I never say that there won't be a lawsuit, I know there can be lawsuits on anything. I think...I rather doubt that there would be a serious problem of a lawsuit to questioning the best interest. The whole purpose of this section is to try to provide a means to where we can keep as much gas in Louisiana as possible. I think we are opening the door for that type of legislation, giving them a basis for that type of legislation subject to your normal constitutional restrictions.

MR. KEAN

Mr. Drew, following up Mr. Conroy's question, if we adopt this paragraph as you have suggested, and we had a contract which was going to be executed sometime after this constitution was adopted, would that contract not have to be subject to this provision and, therefore, would the parties ever really know whether they had a binding contract because either the legislature or the courts might determine some change in that contract was necessary and the best interest of the state?

MR. DREW

I think they would have as much grounds to stand on, Mr. Kean, as any utility that's authorized to take action by the Public Service Commission, I mean, that certainly is supposed to be operating in the best interest of the state....citizens of the state, I don't think there would be any distinction there.

MR. LANDRUM

Mr. Kean, since we are living in changing times, your amendment does give the legislature the right to make such changes when needed that it also protects the rights of the people of Louisiana. Is that right, sir?

MR. DREW

That's the purpose of the amendment.

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Drew, I'm trying to understand what the legal effect of your amendment would be, if adopted. We already have under the Property Rights Section of the Bill of Rights the provision saying that the police power of the state is protected and the right to regulate the use of property is protected. What additional authority does this give to the legislature, if any?

MR. DREW

I would think it would set a policy, Woody, I mean that's about all we can do in the constitution is set policy and it would certainly give the legislature, I think, to try to take the proper action to insure as much gas used in this state as possible; I think it gives them some constitutional foundation for that action.

MR. JENKINS

So, your view is then that this gives the legislature no additional authority?

MR. DREW

No, it is not, I didn't say that.

MR. JENKINS

Well, what authority does it give the legislature?

MR. DREW

I said, I think it gives them the foundation for taking the action or possibly some of the action that we took in this past special session.

MR. JENKINS

Can you be more specific and tell me exactly what kinds of authority? Does it give them authority, as Mr. Kean said, to abrogate contracts or what does it give?

MR. DREW

No. I don't think it could be interpreted to abrogate contracts, Woody, but I think you have to read the section as a whole. We need the public interest in order to have the authority for the certificate to prevent interconnections and that is a serious problem, it's created already serious problems on the thing. I think this is a directive to the legislature to see that these matters are handled to our best interest and that's all.

MR. JENKINS

But, I still don't understand. Does this or does this not give any additional authority to the legislature? If so, what specific authority does it give?

MR. DREW

I think it's a directive, maybe not authority, but I think it's a directive, Woody.

MR. KEAN

Mr. Drew, if the first paragraph which we are dealing with at the moment is, as you say, designed to tie in with the second paragraph, would you have any objection to having the first paragraph start off with language which would read: "For the purposes of this section" and so forth? So, it would be clear that the two paragraphs...what we are talking about in the first sentence relates itself to what's in the second sentence and is not an independent declaration of policy as you have indicated you didn't intend it to be?

MR. DREW

I don't think it would be such a major change that I would object to it, Gordon.

I move for the adoption....

Further Discussion

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Chairmao, fellow delegates, I want to make several points once again if I might. First of all, the provision as it stands now, says nothing about abrogating contracts--has nothing to do with abrogating contracts, nothing--that was involved in Senate Bill No. 9. There was a provision in Senate Bill No. 9 which allowed the con...there was, I'm saying, it was taken out. The commissioner of conservation to break contracts so as--I'm going to tell the reasoning behind it as I understood it--to allow old contracts that had natural gas selling for fifteen cents a thousand cubic feet when it's for sale on the market today for one dollar a thousand cubic feet. It would have authorized the commissioner to break the old contracts to let the price seek a competitive level on the open market; this was taken out, there is nothing in Senate Bill No. 9 and that's really not what we are here to consider today, but for some reasons it's been brought up several times. There is nothing in Senate Bill No. 9 now that allows abrogation of contracts. There is a provision, however, that allows the commissioner of conservation to make allocations of natural gas. For example, during grinding season when a sugar mill can't get any gas or soy bean or rice dryers cannot get gas to harvest....completely harvest their crops, there is a provision to allow the commissioner of conservation to go into a line and take up to ten percent only when the governor declares an emergency--that's the way it's set up now. It also would provide for a hospital if they could not get gas or for the town of Opelousas if they could not get gas, for the commissioner of conservation to go into that line and give them enough gas. When you are talking about gas, the sugar mills in Louisiana use one percent of all of the intrastate gas, one percent, that's all you're talking about. I might even point this out that many of the industries involved agreed to that, they did not object to that. They did not want the abrogation of contracts in it which, I agree, was most distasteful. Mr. Kean is very familiar with all of this because he was there during the whole special session. In response to a question by Mr. Johnny Jackson and I saw an amendment along the same lines by Reverend Landrum wherein they basically are concerned, as I understand it, about maintaining gas for Louisiana use first, obviously, that is exactly what we are concerned about. But, if you put language like that in the constitution according to what I have been told by constitutional lawyers, then you are interfering with interstate commerce clauses and it's discriminatory. You see, that was the reason it was worded to make gas available within the state we would liked to have stopped there. But, we realize that if we don't acknowledge that other states do have a right to buy gas under the free enterprise system in this state and that's how they are getting gas now under that system because they have old contracts. The FPC, however, has come in and taken jurisdiction and they are holding the ceiling down on prices but that was the purpose, Johnny, for putting that in there. Right. I don't think it's critical language, I mean, if it's removed that portion of it, I don't think it really makes that much difference. But, I will say this, that it was carefully worked on and the language was carefully drawn and the committee studied it for a long time, in my opinion, it's worded in a good manner. I would ask you, for that reason, for the reasons I have stated to oppose this amendment because it's just a play on words now that's all we are doing, as far as I'm concerned.

Questions

MR. LANDRUM

Senator Lambert, do you know that my amendment will be withdrawn?

MR. LAMBERT

No, sir, I didn't mean....I just saw it and Tony had asked a question along those lines.

MR. LANDRUM

Yes. Yes. But, I am interested in the Drew amendment.

MR. LAMBERT

Right.

MR. LANDRUM

I do believe that the adoption of that amendment would take care of mine, do you know that?

MR. J. JACKSON

Senator, my concern was basically the concerns that you have. I have no problem whatsoever in seeing to and having the desire that Louisiana gas be given to Louisiana citizens on priority. But, I did not want to at any point suggest, by any ways, that we ought not forget that we are still a part of the country and there are other places who may want to buy gas. I felt very seriously if you kept it to the state with the way the language is presently drawn on the amendment that I just want to very seriously....did that limit the state capacity to sell gas in case there was, let's say, new fields explored and there was a sufficient amount to sell to the rest of the country; so, I was with you.

MR. LAMBERT

O.K., Johnny, let me just say this that I'm asking you to defeat the amendment in an effort to keep the provision intact. But, I will acknowledge this, that it's in my opinion, it's six one way and one-half dozen the other.

Further Discussion

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I would hope that you would pay attention to what I'm about to tell you because I think we are embarking upon the possibility of making some very serious errors which could have far-reaching effects upon the most important single industry in the state, an industry which provides for over half of the economy of this state. I know that in addition to this amendment there will be many others which will attempt to put in the constitution certain types of restrictions. I want to plead with you, "Please, let's don't cut off our nose to spite our face. Please, let's realize that this question of the producing and marketing of oil and gas is a very complicated subject matter and one which has been studied by the legislature, by the courts for many, many years." I do not believe that it would be in the best interest of the people of this state for us to have someone to come up here and to offer an amendment or a series of amendments which could have such far-reaching effect upon the biggest industry of the state, the industry that supports over half of the economy of this state. So, therefore, I would plead with you, "Please, let's not adopt any amendments the total effect of which we would not know and realize." We must recognize that the oil and gas industry is the most heavily taxed industry in this state, that it supports our public school system as well as many other areas of our state, our highway program and so forth. So, I ask you again, please before we vote to put anything more into this constitution, let's know what we are talking about; let's be sure that what we are doing is not going to seriously hamper or hamstring the most important industry we have in this state. So, therefore, I reluctantly rise in opposition to the amendment which is on the floor now and would generally ask you, "Please, let's vote down these amendments unless we are totally sure that they are not going to do such great violence."

I'll yield to questions.

Questions

MR. ROEMER

Mr. Perez, I want to commend you for your comments, I agree with them wholeheartedly. Don't you think that the danger....the convention at this point on this particular subject that the subject now is making headlines daily across the nation and there's a lot of excitement and some panic over this matter. I think what you are asking us to do is let's not panic in writing a constitution that's going to be dadgum difficult to change; isn't that what you are saying?

MR. PEREZ

That's exactly correct, and I might comment that I am strongly in favor of that part of the committee proposal which would attempt to hold within this state the natural gas produced within the state. I am very much in favor of lines 28 through 32 and so forth and going onto the second page so that we can attempt to try to stop the connection by these interstate pipeline companies of the intrastate gas lines with the interstate gas lines which have the effect of putting them under the jurisdiction of the Federal Power Commission, that's the real battle, that's what we are really talking about. Can we find a way to hold natural gas in this state? I think that the committee has done a commendable job on lines 28 through 32 and onto the next couple lines of the next page in making an attempt to try to hold the natural gas in this state and that should be our objective and our main and sole objective, but let's don't get too far beyond that, please.

MR. BURSON

Mr. Perez, along the same lines of your remarks, do you see any intrinsic value in putting broad, sweeping policy statements about oil and gas into our constitution that would be of any particular advantage, let us say, over or against the statute that could be passed by the state legislature if we got into court with the federal government on this question.

MR. PEREZ

That's the reason I made the statement that I was in favor of lines 28 and so forth because it would be a positive attempt to try to keep the gas within the state now only to the extent that is necessary to show a public purpose for that would be the only reason that I would see that we should have to have any provision in the constitution concerning the oil and gas industry.

MR. O'NEILL

Mr. Perez, in other words, you would call this a bad, bad, bad amendment, right?

MR. PEREZ

No. I don't say it's necessarily a bad, bad, bad amendment--and by the way, you'll notice I haven't used that term in a long while because there are so many others that have picked up on it. But, I'm just cautioning the delegates, let's don't even adopt them if we think they are fair amendments because we are dealing in a very sensitive area and one which could cause headaches to this state for many years to come.

Further Discussion

MR. CONROY

I, too, with regret, join in opposing this amendment and carrying forward the idea which Mr. Perez mentioned to this convention. I want to point out specifically why I regard this particular amendment as dangerous. It's my understanding that the intention of this amendment is to authorize certain action by the legislature, but the amendment does not say that. The amendment simply says that "natural gas produced in Louisiana shall be made available for utilization to the best interests of the citizens of the state." Now, I believe that any attempted future contract dealing with the sale of gas would be subject to judicial review to determine whether or not that contract was entered and made available for utilization of the best interest of the citizens of the state, the gas sold under that contract. I think that, again, carrying forward Mr. Perez's ideas we have to be very careful in this area of dealing with oil and gas, tremendous sums of money are involved in these contracts. People are willing to litigate over the slightest thing when as much money as is involved can be involved. I, too, urge extreme caution in watching the precise language that's used because this will be the subject of extensive litigation in which people are willing to fight at great lengths over the significance of a single word used in the document such as this; so, I urge you to reject this amendment.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

[Amendment reread. Record vote ordered.
Amendment rejected: 43-51. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

MR. DREW

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I respect the formidable opposition to this amendment, but let me bring one thing to your attention that each of those speakers have overlooked in their argument against the amendment. I don't believe that I have ever seen, and I hope that I shall never see, a constitution of this state or any other state that makes it obligatory upon the State of Louisiana to furnish gas to out-of-state consumers and that was the sole purpose of this amendment maybe it's not perfectly drawn, maybe it is open to question, I don't think there is many that's not open to question and lawsuits. But, when you say "shall be made available for utilization to citizens of other states," are you not making it an obligation of this state to furnish out-of-state consumers? That question was raised earlier, that was the purpose I was hoping that I could solve something rather than stir up a hornets nest. But, I think that the provisions of this amendment--I'm sure there will be other amendments to come behind it--but I think this--and in answer to Mr. Johnny Jackson's question--this amendment does not prohibit interstate transportation of gas, Johnny, that's....there's no way to interpret it in that manner. What it does it says it's to be used in Louisiana when it's to our interest....only thing but...at a lot of times and you may in the future see where it would be to the interest of the citizens of this state to sell to interstate pipelines if the price gets right. We are not going to be forever bound by these low prices--I sincerely hope we are not. I think we would make a serious mistake if we left Paragraph One of Section 2 to read so it would be made available, "shall be made available within the state as well as to citizens of other states." We have no obligations to the citizens of the other states to furnish them with gas if we have use for that gas here. Like I said earlier, on one of the other amendments, our biggest problem in the State of Louisiana is transporting gas. If we can get the means, the pipelines--the intrastate pipelines--to transport the gas, we can use so much more of what we are producing. I don't think that this amendment is going to do any harm. I think it is going to remove the obligation to force us to ship gas out of the State of Louisiana. I sincerely hope you will adopt the amendment.

Questions

MR. JONES

May I ask you a question, Mr. Drew?
Mr. Drew, with that word "shall" and we owe an obligation as one state of fifty to the United States and if it was divided on a population basis assuming we have four million people in our state over two hundred million in the nation, we would be entitled to about two percent of our gas; isn't that correct?

MR. DREW

Just about.

MR. JONES

...ninety-eight percent would go to the rest of the nation?

MR. DREW

That's right, and we are making it mandatory that we....

MR. JONES

All right. Now, if they divided it up on the basis of need, probably ninety-nine percent would leave the State of Louisiana and one percent would stay here. One other thing I would like to point out to you as I am in favor of your amendment. We are trying to give a policy to the state as a direction to the legislature to keep our gas in Louisiana without doing violence to the Commerce Clause of the United States Constitution. All right, suppose we may be on close grounds here but assuming that we are wrong, and we are in violation of the Commerce Clause of the constitution, we are right back to the same effect of the amendment, I believe, of Mr. Derbes which is to eliminate lines 22 through 27; isn't that correct and, our protection would be under the general policy statement under Natural Resources? So, in effect, we really haven't lost much but at the same time that we have directed from this constitution to the legislature what we believe to be the sincere public interest of this state; is that correct?

MR. DREW

I think that's correct, Mr. Jones, and let me add this. I think the purpose of state government is to look out for the interest of the citizens of that state. I don't think this word to the best interest of the citizens of this state is any radical change of government's obligation at this time.

MR. JONES

I agree.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendment sent up by Mr. Singletary reads as follows: (words have been imposed around a little bit unusually...) On page 1, line 25, after the word "interest" place a period "." and delete the remainder of the line and delete lines 26 and 27 in their entirety.

Explanation

MR. SINGLETARY

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, all this amendment does is put a period after the word "interest" on line 25, and it deletes the rest of that paragraph. It doesn't change Paragraph 2 at all so that with this amendment the committee proposal would simply read "Natural gas is hereby declared to be affected with a public interest." I move its adoption, and if there are any questions, I'll yield.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Delegate Avant sends up amendments reading as follows: Amendment No. 1. On page 2, between lines 2 and 3, insert the following: "Subsequent to the effective date of this constitution no petroleum as natural gas produced from lands or water bottoms owned by the state or its political subdivisions shall be marketed outside the state of Louisiana except that in excess of the needs of citizens of the state and manufacturing concerns in this state. This provision shall not impair the obligations of any contract in effect on the effective date of this constitution. The legislature shall implement this Section."

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman, there's a typographical error in the amendment. The word "as" on line 2 between the words "petroleum" and "natural" should be the word "or". I would like to withdraw the amendment to make that technical correction.

[Amendment withdrawn and resubmitted with correction.]

Explanation

MR. AVANT

Mr. Acting Chairman and fellow delegates, I'm satisfied that there's substantial opposition to this amendment. I have been told that I offer it only because of my ignorance of the oil and gas industry, and that I just don't know what the score is, and I just don't know what's going on, and this is a horrible, terrible amendment. I don't buy all that. I think I do know what's going on, and I think I have some understanding of what has gone on in the past. Now, this is a very simple amendment. I think you have to first look at this thing and try to analyze it. In the first place, you have the question of production of oil and gas from lands that are owned by the individual citizens of the state. They belong to John Brown or Pete Smith or somebody else. I don't think that you can without running into serious federal constitutional questions--particularly with respect to the interstate commerce clause in the federal constitution--put too many restrictions on what can be done with that oil and gas because you can't legislate and tell a citizen that he does not have the right to engage in interstate commerce if he wants to engage in interstate commerce. Now, on the other hand you have the question of oil and gas that is produced from state-owned land or land that is owned by the political subdivisions of the state. That oil and gas belongs to all of us; it belongs to all of the citizens of the state. Now, we can't do anything about contracts that have been made in the past. I believe and--of course, this is the law-- if you make a bad deal, you just made a bad deal; you've got to live up to it. But, we can do something about the future, and I think that the people in this state are in this position. We are much like the farmer who is in the position of producing food and there's a scarcity of food, but he has tied himself up, although he's producing beef and pork and eggs and all kind of foods, he has tied himself up and got himself in a position where he doesn't have enough food to feed his own family. Well, if he's made valid and binding contracts, he has to live up to them. He may have been a foolish man for having made them, but I'll tell you one thing: if he continues in the future, and when the next crop year comes around makes those same contracts, he's a real fool; he's a real idiot. Now, all that this amendment says is simply this: that with respect to oil and gas that are produced from state-owned lands that in the future the legislature is mandated to see to it that those contracts, those leases, make some provision that before our gas and our oil can be marketed outside of this state, that we have enough to take care of the needs of the citizens of this state and the industries of this state. I submit to you that there are no constitutional questions involved in that at all because in the first place I know of no way that the federal government can tell us that we've got to lease our land for oil and gas exploration and production at all. I don't think they can tell us you've got to lease your land, State of Louisiana; you've got to go and produce that oil and gas. As long as it's our land and our oil and our gas and we haven't messed ourselves up with some contract in the past--I'm talking only about the future--we'll have a certain constitutional right to say that if you want our oil and gas and you want the right to produce oil and gas from our land, you've got to agree that when you go to market your share of it, that we've got first claim on it for the needs of the citizens of this state. This has absolutely nothing to do with any type of contract that any private individual or private corporation might want to make with respect to their property. This is the state's property, and I think that we would be derelict in our duty if we didn't say that in the future we're going to see to it that insofar as this very, very important natural resource is concerned, we're going to insure that the citizens of this state, to whom it belongs, have enough of that basic resource for their own needs before we start selling it or disposing of it to strangers. That's all it does; it specifically says that it will not impair the obligations of any contract that is in effect at the time this constitution may become effective. I don't try to spell out the details; we leave it up to the legislature. This is simply a simple constitutional mandate to make sure that the legislature, the mineral board, the governor, all of the powers that be or political leaders of the state know how the people of the state feel.

Questions

MR. STINSON

Mr. Avant, you said from land or water bottoms owned by the state....

MR. AVANT

Or its political subdivisions.

MR. STINSON

Well, in view of the fact that the state has sold a lot of land, patented it, and reserved the minerals, don't you think--you just say if they own the land and the water bottoms--don't you think where they own the minerals? Because, a lot of it, they don't own the land or the surface....

MR. AVANT

Well, I would accept an amendment to add that, Mr. Stinson. I just didn't think about that. That would be other oil and gas that belongs to the state--the right to take it belongs to the state.

MR. STINSON

If this is adopted, I think that should be in there.

MR. AVANT

Well, I wouldn't object to that, and I think you're certainly correct. I just didn't think of that.

MR. JENKINS

Jack, I'm trying to take your concept and apply it to real life situations and see how it works. Let's suppose that I have a mineral lease...

MR. AVANT

You, Woody Jenkins, has got one?

MR. JENKINS

Yes.

MR. AVANT

Okay.

MR. JENKINS

On state-owned lands, and I produce that oil; I extract it: now I want to sell it: let's suppose it's natural gas.

MR. AVANT

All right. Now, let me ask you one other question. Did you get that lease and acquire it before this constitution became in effect?

MR. JENKINS

No, after.

MR. AVANT

After. Okay.

MR. JENKINS

Now, I have different buyers for this gas, and to make it a really competitive situation, we'll assume that there's no price controls on gas. Now, I have offers outside the State of Louisiana to buy it, say, for fifty cents per thousand cubic feet from one person and seventy-five cents per thousand cubic feet from another and a dollar per thousand cubic feet from another. Now, there's people in Louisiana who'll pay, say, twenty-five cents a thousand cubic feet, twenty-eight cents a thousand cubic feet. Do I have to sell it to those people simply because they're in the State of Louisiana?

MR. AVANT

If you signed a contract to that effect which you would have to do after the effective date of this constitution, the legislature would have to in some way implement this provision, and if you signed that contract, yes, sir, you sure would have to live up to that contract just like we have to live up to the foolish ones we've signed in the past.

MR. JENKINS

So, in other words, if there were any person in the State of Louisiana who would pay any price at all, I would have to sell to that person ahead of someone out of the state.

MR. AVANT

Well, Mr. Jenkins, this is not...the purpose of this amendment is not to gig anybody. It's not to take advantage of any of these big oil companies; it's only to ensure that the people of this state retain enough of their oil and gas to heat their homes, to operate their sugar mills, and to take care of their other needs. I'm perfectly willing to leave it up to the wisdom of the legislature, of which you are a member, to work out the details because I don't think that details can be worked out in the constitution. This is a simple statement of principle, a mandate to you as a member of the legislature and the other members of the legislature, to the Mineral Board, to the Department of Conservation, to any other state agency or body that has anything to do with this particular subject matter to say that, before you can take our oil and gas which belongs to the people of the State of Louisiana and take it out of the state, you are going to have to make sure that it is surplus and that we have enough left to heat our homes and run our industries and run our sugar mills.

MR. JENKINS

What you are saying here, that you can't sell outside of the state that which is produced inside the state unless it is excess over the needs of the citizens of the state.

MR. AVANT

That is correct.

MR. JENKINS

But the concept of needs is a subjective thing. What one person needs, he's willing to pay forty cents a thousand cubic foot; what someone else says he needs, he's only willing to pay five cents a thousand cubic foot.

MR. AVANT

Mr. Jenkins, that is no more difficult concept to deal with than the idea of public convenience and necessity, which the courts and the Public Service Commission deal with all the time. You can't go out here and open up a freight line and carry freight from here to Monroe just because you want to do it. You have to get a certificate of public convenience and necessity. There are many concepts in our law that are not just nailed down like two times two equals four, and I'm willing to leave it up to the wisdom of you and the fellow members...your fellow members in the legislature to work this principle out in a fair and equitable fashion to accomplish my goal. My goal and my aim is to make sure that the people of this state who own untold quantities of oil and gas--it belongs to them; it's managed by them for them by a group of elected and appointed public officials--is to make sure that those people have enough gas to heat their homes, to cook their food, to grind their sugarcane, to dry their soybeans, and that sort of thing. I don't want to be like that farmer who's starving to death because he sold everything he produced, and it's scarce, and he can't buy it, and he and his family are just up a creek.

103rd Days Proceedings—December 18, 1973

MR. JENKINS

Just one more quick question, Mr. Avant. Isn't it true without your amendment it is left up to the legislature, and that the only thing your amendment does is further hamstringing the legislature?

MR. AVANT

No, Mr. Jenkins, that is not true. It's been left up to the legislature since the first oil well or the first gas well was brought in in this state. The legislature has not done anything about it for one reason or another; perhaps because they never thought it was going to happen--until just recently. It's like closing the door when the horse has done left the barn. We want a mandate to continue that good practice, and I think that it is good practice. I'm not familiar with all the technical details of the bills, but I think that what the legislature was trying to accomplish was a good thing. This is to make sure that that remains the policy of this state, and that some future legislature can't go back to the old way and forget the people of the state and give all our oil and gas or market it here, there and yonder without thinking of the needs of the people of this state.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Mr. Avant, wasn't the interstate commerce clause in the Federal Constitution put in to prevent the restraints that took place under the Articles of Confederation?

MR. AVANT

The interstate commerce clause of the Articles of Confederation, I think so, perhaps. Yes.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Okay. Then, any time you restrain the total volume of a product in interstate commerce, have you not gone against the interstate commerce clause?

MR. AVANT

No, I don't agree with that, Mr. Velazquez. If I'm sitting here in Baton Rouge, Louisiana and making shoes and making them by the hundreds of thousands of pairs, there's no law in the world that can be passed to tell me I've got to sell those shoes in interstate commerce. If I can sell them all in Baton Rouge, Louisiana and that's what I want to do, I've got that right. I think that the State of Louisiana has got the same right. There's no law says that the state has to engage in interstate commerce.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Also, do you believe that there's a law that says you can take extraordinary methods or extraordinary efforts to restrain interstate commerce?

MR. AVANT

This is no restraint on interstate commerce.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Don't you believe that any time you decrease the total volume available for interstate commerce you have in effect restrained interstate commerce?

MR. AVANT

No, I don't agree with that because if I'm running a sawmill, and I'm selling lumber in interstate commerce, and I sold a hundred million feet last year but this year I choose to only want to manufacture fifty million feet, and that's all I'm going to manufacture, and all I'm going to sell, and I decide that I'm going to use half of that to build me a barn just for myself, I haven't interfered with interstate commerce one bit in the legal sense.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Have you not just now beginning to talk about allocation, and that's not the FPC in their problems with Louisiana have a problem of allocation?

MR. AVANT

This is not the type of allocation that you're talking about. This is just a simple statement saying that if I'm raising mustard greens, I'm going to keep enough mustard greens to eat myself before I sell them all to somebody else.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

But, in effect isn't one of Louisiana's basic problems, not the fact that the gas is leaving Louisiana, but that the FPC wants to restrain the way it is actually used in Louisiana, that some of the uses in Louisiana are lesser uses than the uses in other states?

MR. AVANT

But, they have done that, Mr. Velazquez, only because our gas has become commingled with interstate gas.

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Avant, I certainly applaud what you're trying to do. I'm just wondering what effect this has. When does the FPC regulate the production of natural gas?

MR. AVANT

When? I don't know. I don't know when they first did it.

MR. DUVAL

Well, you see there's a lot of things we don't know, and that's what I'm suggesting to you is perhaps by putting this mandate in the constitution, it might be totally unfeasible.

MR. AVANT

Well, I don't see how in the world it could be unfeasible, Mr. Duval. It's a very simple proposition. Here we are with the State of Louisiana. We have still future reserves of oil and gas, I hope, that we have not yet leased. We are simply saying that in the future when we lease those reserves or lease those lands that we are going to make sure that we retain enough of the production therefrom to take care of ourselves before we start disposing of it elsewhere.

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Avant, I guess you realize this is becoming real complicated, but I was under the impression that you said this is state-owned lands that you're talking about.

MR. AVANT

That's what my amendment says.

MRS. WARREN

That's what I thought. Now, aren't you really trying to say that charity begins at home?

MR. AVANT

That's right, Mrs. Warren.

MRS. WARREN

Thank you.

MR. AVANT

In other words, the Lord looks after him who looks after himself. I believe that.

Further Discussion

MR. JACK

I rise in opposition to this amendment. I'm a member of this committee, and I believe, if not all, practically all of them are against this amendment. To begin with, the amendment would not stand the constitutional test. It would interfere in interstate commerce, would be thrown out. We've done a lot of work on this committee proposal, and I go right along with the committee. I think you should. You know the purpose of all this material on the gas in the proposal is to do all we can legally to see that our gas goes to Louisiana people. You know that. If you are going to put something in here that obviously is unconstitutional, you're not going to get the chance that we do have of keeping here gas that's strictly in the intrastate commerce. Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I hope that you were listening a little bit earlier when I attempted to caution this convention against adopting amendments which could have such far-reaching effects. Now, this is one of those type of amendments which could seriously affect the future leasing of state-owned property and the future production of minerals in our area. The state is by far the largest single landowner in the state, holding I'd say between five and ten percent of all production. Now, if a producer were to realize and to know that, if he took a lease from the state, he could only market those products within the state, then it would depend upon the location primarily of a natural gas intrastate pipeline as to whether the man would be willing or not be willing to take a lease or to produce that well. You've got to realize and recognize, particularly with respect to natural gas, that the cost of transporting that natural gas is the larger part of the cost that the consumer pays for the gas. For example, if you have a well producing here, two or three miles away you may have an interstate pipeline; thirty or forty miles away you may have an intrastate pipeline. The cost of transporting that gas the extra twenty to thirty miles in order to be able to market that gas would make the production of that product so costly that no one would be willing to drill the well because, after all these people who drill these wells, they're in business to make money, and they're also in business worldwide--these big companies that have been referred to. Believe me, folks, we can chase these people away from here, particularly in the latter stages of production as this state is today as far as our inshore production, we can chase them away awfully easy. They're going to go where they can operate agreeably and where they are in a position where they can make a fair profit off of their investment. So, let me suggest to you that this is one of these amendments which could have tremendous far-reaching effects which could cripple the biggest industry in this state which produces over fifty percent of the income of the state. I, therefore, strongly urge you: please let's reject this amendment.

Questions

MR. LEBLEU

Mr. Perez, isn't it true that under Senate Bill 9 which the legislature just passed, the commissioner of conservation has the privilege of doing this very same thing? However, he is not mandated to sell to an intrastate line where an interstate might be more convenient.

MR. PEREZ

It's my understanding that that's correct. Of course, the regulatory authority to do that, if used reasonably, can be a very good thing for the state, and the purpose of this amendment is good, but the net effect of it would be very bad when you have an absolute prohibition against these products going out of the state.

MR. BOLLINGER

Mr. Perez, don't you think that with amendments like this we're getting into areas where we're not sure of the effect they're going to have, and very possibly you're going to be doing some harm rather than good?

MR. PEREZ

Well, hopefully, that most of the delegates were listening to me a little bit earlier when I cautioned against passing amendments unless we were absolutely sure that this was not going to do a great deal of harm to the biggest industry in this state. I think this is one--I not only think but I know that this particular provision would seriously cripple the mineral industry, but more important than that, seriously reduce the future income of the state because people just are not going to be willing to drill wells under these conditions.

Further Discussion

MR. LAMBERT

Very briefly, Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, for a number of reasons I ask you to oppose this amendment. Some of the reasons are because the legislature did provide basically what Mr. Avant is asking us to do in the constitution. This was basically done in the special session of the legislature. It's an area, when you talk about natural gas, where you need a basic concept; you need some roots. I think we provided the root, but we need to allow flexibility now so that the legislature can make the necessary changes and add the flexibility as times change, as the energy crisis changes, and so forth. For that reason, I ask you to please vote against this amendment.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, there's absolutely nothing in this amendment that's inconsistent with the concept of Senate Bill 9. As a matter of fact, the whole purpose of this amendment is to make sure that under the new constitution, if it's adopted, that the legislature will have the authority to act in the public interest as they have tried to do in Senate Bill 9. All this amendment does is to tell those elected officials of our state, who are charged with the responsibility of administering our oil and gas resources, to say: administer those resources but make sure in doing so that you retain enough of our oil and gas to take care of our needs and dispose only of the surplus. It's a very simple amendment. I don't see how it complicates anything; I don't try to draw any details. I'm perfectly willing to leave it up to the sound judgment of those people in the legislature and on the Mineral Board, but it's a mandate. It's a mandate that says these are our resources. They belong to all of the people of the state, and we don't want to be, as Mr. Perez says, one of the biggest oil and gas producing states in the United States, and yet have a good friend like Mr. Sandoz come in here two or three weeks ago and tell me that his city of Opelousas was faced with an eminent shutdown of the natural gas that it takes to run their utility plant over there because of a shortage. Now, if that makes sense to you, then vote against my amendment. But, that's the kind of thing that I'm trying to prevent. I want to make sure that there's a mandate in our constitution telling our officials to look after our interests in that fashion.

Questions

MR. BOLLINGER

Mr. Avant, you brought out some excellent points, and I think the delegates all agree with you that we don't want that situation to occur again. But, do you know, for one, that I didn't agree with everything in Senate Bill 9 that you were referring to, and I agree that nothing is inconsistent? But, if Senate Bill 9 is not feasible and does not work, can it be changed?

MR. AVANT

Well, sure it can be changed. There's nothing in this amendment that would keep it from being changed.

MR. BOLLINGER

But if we adopt this and this does not work and it does provide a lot, a lot of heartaches for the state in the future, it's not as easy to change this constitution; will it be?

MR. AVANT

Well, Mr. Bollinger, in the first place, I don't see how it could possibly say that there's anything in here that's not going to work because there are no details, no mechanics provided in this. This is simply a statement of principle and leaves it up to the legislature and the Mineral Board and whoever has the responsibility under the law to implement that principle in the way that they best see fit at the particular time, and they can change it from day to day or week to week or month to month as long as they operate within that principle, and that is, that we're going to keep enough of our oil and our gas to heat our homes and grind our sugarcane before we start selling it to people in New York and Maine and Chicago and elsewhere.

MR. BOLLINGER

Do you not think that the legislature is responsive to the needs since they did have a special session and did enact Senate Bill 9?

MR. AVANT

I think they are now, Mr. Bollinger. I do not think that they always have been, and the purpose of this is to make sure that in the future they always will be.

MR. DREW

Jack, let me ask you two or three questions. Talking about late in taking action, do you know that the legislature passed the Louisiana Pipeline Authority Bill in 1972 which would have provided for the construction of intrastate pipelines which has never been appointed or implemented?

MR. AVANT

I understand that. Yes, sir.

MR. DREW

Now, let me get to your amendment, Jack. You use the word "needs." I had suggested "available market," but suppose you found a large gas field in South Louisiana on state lands. Shreveport, Louisiana was operating on fifty percent of their needs; there is no intrastate line to get it to Shreveport. Could that gas be sold to anyone else?

MR. AVANT

Now, wait a minute. Run that one by me again because....

MR. DREW

You have a gas field...you discover a gas field on state lands in South Louisiana. There is no intrastate pipeline to Caddo Parish who is running at fifty percent of their needs for heating purposes. There's no way to get it to Shreveport to meet their needs. Now, can that gas be sold or do those wells, under your amendment, wouldn't they have to be capped and left there?

MR. AVANT

No, I think that there can be legislation that can provide that the gas can be gotten there by means of a shipment through an interstate line where you can withdraw it.

MR. DREW

You mean that the legislature can override the FPC?

MR. AVANT

If you put this particular provision in the constitution, I think that they may well be able to do that.

MR. WILLIS

Mr. Avant, take this at face value as my knowledge of oil and gas law. I own a hundred acre tract of land, and I lease it to an oil company. They give me...at a one-eighth. They give me one-eighth of the money, the net money, that they sell that gas, less the cost, etc. of transporting it; isn't that correct? Assume that to be true.

MR. AVANT

Yes. One-eighth.

MR. WILLIS

Why can't I not tell that oil company, "I don't want one-eighth in money; I want my one-eighth in kind. That is called royalty in kind. There ain't nothing wrong with that; is there?"

MR. AVANT

No, and there's nothing wrong...

MR. WILLIS

That's what your amendment does.

MR. AVANT

And there's nothing wrong with this either, Mr. Willis, with respect to the seven-eighths, putting a provision in the lease and say, "We are giving you the right to market that seven-eighths anywhere you want to subject to one condition: when we are hurting, we can say we want three more eighths which we'll buy at the going price, and you've got to put that in all your contracts to take care of that...."

[Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected:
23-79. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Chairman Henry in the Chair

[Previous Question ordered on the Section.
Section passed: 93-6. Motion to reconsider pending.]

Point of Information

MR. BOLLINGER

He didn't ask for it to lay on the table, but why would we reconsider the vote? Wouldn't that leave it open again, and we're going to have to vote on it again to close it?

MR. HENRY

It leaves it open, so that it's susceptible. The motion is hanging, so the gentleman just moved to reconsider. We're not going to dispose of it, sir.

MR. BOLLINGER

I don't understand why we moved to reconsider unless we want to open it up again or unless we're going to lay it on the table.

MR. HENRY

The gentleman doesn't have to move to reconsider. We just weren't going to take care of the motion. I just assumed... I thought I understood him to say he wanted to move to reconsider, but not table the motion to reconsider. It's the same difference. You make the motion to reconsider at some other time, Mr. Bollinger. It's really not worth arguing about or wasting time on, if you know what I mean.

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

"Section 3. Geopressure-Geothermal Resources Section 3. The state shall conserve, manage, and regulate the development and utilization of geopressure-geothermal resources for the benefit of all people, including future generations."

Explanation

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this is a real simple section. What it does is establish a policy for the state in a new area of energy: that being, geopressure-geothermal resources. As you know, we are in the midst of an energy crisis. For this reason we find ourselves in a position to have to look to new sources of energy--atomic energy, solar energy. Geopressure-geothermal energy is another area that has not been tapped. It's located many feet below the earth's surface, but it's within reach of drillers. In an effort to establish a policy in the future in this particular area, we have set up a separate section on this particular subject matter.

I'm going to yield the balance of my time to Mrs. Miller, who proposed this to our committee.

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I do request your attention because you're going to ask questions about this because it's a new field for all of us. We have in Louisiana a very unique resource which is called geopressure-geothermal energy. This is unique to the Northern Gulf Basin. Its region extends into Texas and to part of Mexico. In Texas they are already beginning to look at the development of geothermal energy. You have some...

We have been looking at...our geothermal team in Louisiana has been looking at federal resources that we might bring into the state to use to develop the geothermal-geopressure energy. We refer to it as geopressure first to distinguish what Louisiana has as being different from the geothermal resources that you've heard about in California. Virtually all the electricity for the city of San Francisco is now being supplied by geothermal energy from their wells, from the geysers. This is not the thermal energy that we have available. There is a surface type operation. They have a different legal regime because they are not going deep down into the surface of the earth. We are talking about a resource that is found at depths of fifteen thousand feet, that to be utilized, will have to be brought up in wells with much bigger pipes and casings than we have been using for conventional oil development. We're talking about maybe seven and eight inch wells that flow a hundred thousand barrels of hot, steamy water a day. We're talking about a resource that has to be carefully structured because it is the nature of water resources that the best well will ruin a well that it's close to. The latest well will be the well that will put the first well out of business. This is the nature of water wells. This pressure was built up when the continent split off, and it left a great basin in what we call the Gulf of Mexico. As the sedimentation came down from the Rockies, it came with clays, with all type of molds, and leaf molds, and trees which were capable of holding vast quantities of water. These things settled and resettled and more settled, and they held the water and compacted chemical processes took place in all of this which solidified the clays. So, what we have is a vast, I would like to say, hot water bottle that extends over the North Gulf Basin. The part... it might fluctuate as you squeezed out part, parts would leave and go elsewhere. But, it might be that the knowledge it be... it's more like a sponge with little pockets because you will have some faulting as you have in your oil and gas areas. What this means is that if we develop this resource, we may need a different legal regime under our property laws. This is what I would like to discuss with you for a few minutes because it's very difficult to grapple with the legal problems that are going to be attendant upon the development of the geothermal-geopressure resources of Louisiana. This high pressure in itself constitutes a resource. With high pressure, you can convert the pressure itself to a form of energy to run the generators. The thermal waters are a resource. By all of this the engineers have developed the processes they know they can handle the high pressure. Already some of the major companies and the Shell Oil Company own patents for the process of developing these and converting into electrical power. They estimate there is enough of the geopressure-geothermal resource to supply all of the electricity for it in Louisiana. This would be a very important thing to us. We are not talking about something that can be transported out of this state easily. This is for us to consider, when we see how the Federal Power Commission has reached down and taken our gas because you do not transport electricity the great distances that you do some of the gas. On the other hand, the federal government is already looking at the geothermal resources in the nation and is moving forward in the field to develop the geothermal resources on the federally-owned land. We are talking about a legal regime that is different because you are not going to be able to put geothermal wells down just every forty acres or unitize under conventional forms of oil and gas. The engineers and the geologists think of a geothermal plant as being a cluster of five or six, maybe seven or eight wells flowing a hundred thousand barrels a day. Now, that's a vast amount of water. You may be talking about a million barrels a day. You are going to have, perhaps, subsidence problems. You are going to have disposal problems. What are you going to do with a million barrels a day from a plant? These plants cannot be closer together than perhaps a hundred square miles. So, under the conventional oil and gas regime...property regime, you're thinking in terms of unitizing a hundred square miles. I think every lawyer here can see that the transactional cost...the administrative cost of getting leases from every landowner in a hundred square mile unit would make the development of this energy...make the cost prohibitive. The only way this energy can be economically developed is if as many costs are kept down as practical so that this will be competitive with other forms of energy. We may come to the point, though, that energy is so valuable and so priceless to us that we will pay any price. In looking at the legal regime and which you may develop, I will read a letter from Professor Yiannopoulos at LSU Law School, which he wrote to me after studying the problems of geothermal-geopressure development. The professor says:

"I believe that the new constitution of Louisiana may well contain a provision declaring that geothermal energy is a wealth that belongs to all the citizens. Perhaps geothermal energy ought to be enumerated among the public things. In my opinion this appropriation by the state of geothermal energy would not run counter to the provisions of the United States Constitution. Valid argument may be made that according to the fundamental notions of Louisiana Civil Law, geothermal energy is up to the present time re nullus, namely a thing that belongs to no one in particular. This is like your fish and animals, which the state long ago appropriated as a thing that belongs to all the people and not capable of private ownership. Like running water and wild animals, geothermal energy may be appropriated by the state without payment of compensation to landowners under whose land subterranean reservoirs are located. Moreover, valid argument may be made that the subterranean lakes are public things. If you think of this as a giant lake buried fifteen thousand feet under the ground, vast resources of water... These are public things."

I will finish reading Professor Yiannopoulos's letter. Excuse me. That long, Greek name sure gives me a problem. I'll finish reading it because this is what he suggests to us, and this comes from one of our authorities in civil law property in this state.

"...Be this all as it may, I believe that it is not properly a matter of constitutional law to justify the appropriation of geothermal energy by the state. The matter might have to be litigated all the way to the United States Supreme Court. However, a constitutional provision would only need to establish the principle of appropriation of geothermal energy for use by all the people. The legislature could be specifically authorized to enact a statute dealing with all aspects concerning the exploitation of geothermal energy." Now, I want to point out to you delegates what you are voting on. You are not voting on the section as it now stands, that this is a thing in the public ownership. You're voting only at this time that the geothermal energy is a resource that must be conserved and managed and developed by the state for the benefit and use of all people. I am proposing an amendment which I think has been distributed to you, that when we get through voting...I want you to think about this--whether you want to put geothermal resources into the public domain and make them insusceptible to private ownership. So, after we finish discussing this article my amendment will give you that choice. So, I think it's something you can think about now. This is a matter for constitutional concern. I don't want to hurt the committee proposal that does not put it in the public ownership. So, remember that the committee proposal only asks for the control and regulation of the geothermal resource.

Questions

MR. DUVAL

Mrs. Miller, just to get a few things clear, you referred to Professor Hardy. You've read his article, I'm certain, from your knowledge on the subject.

MRS. MILLER

Yes. Professor Hardy had looked at this problem and so has our staff member, Dr. Lee Hargrave.

MR. DUVAL

I understand you...are you advocating the public ownership of this resource, rather than how we normally treat oil and gas and other minerals?

MRS. MILLER

Of course, you know, I will answer it this way, too, Mr. Duval: Having traveled with the geothermal team of Louisiana, composed of Dr. Richardson of LSU School of Engineering; Dr. Billy Hise, a petroleum engineer; and Dr. Durham with the geothermal school--Durham and...well, I can't think of all their names now...a group of men--the more we looked at this, we could see that if a lawyer is asked by an electrical company to give an opinion on whether the electric company is going to be able to build a geothermal plant, I, as a lawyer would say, "It's too much of a legal undertaking if you're going to have to lease everybody's property." On the other hand, you are going to have...you know, we have subsidence in Baton Rouge because of the removal of waters. I'll get to your answer. We're going to have subsidence probably if we don't handle this resource properly. They don't sue the industries in Baton Rouge because Baton Rouge is sinking because there are too many of them and they don't know who to put the blame on. But you let great subsidence begin to take place, and they can see a plant sitting out there that they know who they can sue, they will sue. We know that. So, my point is that after all these studies, I believe that the only way--in my own opinion--that the only way we can accomplish the right kind of property regime for the development of the resource is by having the ownership in the state.

MR. DUVAL

Would this mean that the state could come expropriate one's own land in order to drill a well and put a plant there? Is that what that means?

MRS. MILLER

I think that would have to be...wherever they put the plant would be a matter provided by the legislature. What I am saying is that when I bring up a million barrels of water a day, you as a private landowner a hundred miles away could come in and say, "You're draining me a hundred miles away; I want to be in the unit."

MR. DUVAL

But, can you answer my question? If it is a matter of public domain, does that give the state the right to put plants...to come put a plant on someone's private property and appropriate the property to extract the minerals? In other words, how are you going to get to extract the minerals unless you have a lease to begin with?

MRS. MILLER

You will have to have surface leases, like you do now because you know when you bring in a conventional oil and gas lease, you unitize things that are way below the ground that extend out for miles and acres and acres. What I'm saying...I'm sure the legislature will have to provide and we have to provide that.

MR. DUVAL

When you say "for the benefit of all people," let's take the committee proposal as it is. Does this committee proposal lay the predicate to put into effect what Professor Yiannopoulos and Professor Hardy talked about? Is that the intent of your committee proposal?

MRS. MILLER

No, the intent of the committee proposal--and I think as it differs from what my amendment will be later--the intent of the committee proposal is that it recognizes the existence of this energy resource and is really telling the legislature, please do something to protect it, don't let it be dissipated and wasted before we have a chance to harness it. I think this is what the committee proposal says--protect it and take care of it; don't waste it.

MR. CONROY

Mrs. Miller, I'm puzzled by your response to Mr. Duval. As I read the last part of this after the reference to the fact that "the state shall conserve, manage, and regulate the development and utilization of geopressure-geothermal resources," if you stop there, it would seem to me that the sentence would say what you just suggested. But, where the committee proposal goes on and says that it will be for the benefit of all people, doesn't the committee proposal as written already go a long way toward the objective which you said, which that is the public ownership of the geothermal resources?

103rd Days Proceedings—December 18, 1973

MRS. MILLER

No. I believe...I think the intent of the committee proposal was to bring it in line with the first proposal...the general statement that all of these things would be for the benefit of all the people of the state, including the future generations which kind of goes back to your first section. This seems to have been their philosophy in committee. They were thinking in terms of all the people and future generations.

MR. WILLIS

Mrs. Miller, I think that the trouble that the delegates have in understanding the terms "geopressure" and "geothermal." May I suggest to you that "geopressure" means the pressure of water from underground which comes through a pipe which was dug in the ground. "Geothermal" means...thermal meaning heat; the heat of that water under pressure makes it steam. Isn't that correct?

MRS. MILLER

This is true.

MR. WILLIS

Now, I have a oil well---well, I never had one and I don't expect I will--but, assume I have a oil well on my hundred acres of land. It ran dry, and all it "sputes" now is geopressure or geothermal energy. Now, isn't what you envision on a larger scale that which I could do with my no-good oil well...that is to say, harness that steam to a turbine and make that turbine turn a generator which will generate electricity, and which can be controlled. Isn't that what you envisage to harness the energy?

MRS. MILLER

In the philosophy this would seem to be very...a very simple explanation. Yes. Of course, as we know in practice these geothermal plants are very large and will, you know, have to cover large areas, plus the fact of your disposal.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Jenkins sends up the amendment that reads as follows:
Page 2, delete lines 3 through 7, both inclusive, in their entirety.

Explanation

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, when I first read this section I thought it was unnecessary because the legislature obviously has the power to regulate these resources now. After hearing Mrs. Miller's explanation I think it's absolutely imperative that we delete it because of the philosophy behind her discussion of it. You may notice she has an amendment coming that says "geothermal resources are hereby declared to be in the public domain. The state shall have the exclusive right to provide by law for the exploration, production and distribution of these resources." Now, if we had done that a hundred years ago to the oil and gas industry, all of that would be owned now by the state, and I dare say that we wouldn't have near the production or exploration that we have today because government when it comes to operating enterprises doesn't seem to do too well or be too efficient. We don't need this section because the legislature has the authority to regulate these resources. In the past it has been a superabundance of such regulation which has put us in the position we're in with regard to a shortage of energy resources. It's been regulation of the wellhead price of gas, curtailment orders by the Federal Power Commission, restrictions on offshore leasing, environmental controls that have restricted the exploration of natural resources, the transportation of natural resources, the building of oil refineries, the use at the consumer level. Government controls and regulations have done that in the past, and maybe there would be some benefit in the future of regulating geothermal power--maybe. Maybe not. That's a legislative matter, and we should not try to mandate it here. In any case, how is the state going to manage these resources? As I appreciate Mrs. Miller's remarks, the state would appropriate all geopressure-geothermal resources and large tracts of land--appropriate. That means take without compensation, not expropriate; wouldn't even pay for it, but, take over vast tracts of land and use it for the state. I don't believe that would meet the constitutional requirements of this constitution or the federal constitution because when private property's taken, it has to be with just compensation. Now, all of the arguments raised that vast tracts of lands are involved, and that drilling in one place and utilizing these resources can affect other lands, all of that applies to the oil and gas industry, and we've managed to work those things out through out mineral law. We've worked out a very good system. It's a workable system that can be applied, I think, in large part to geopressure-geothermal resources when those are developed. The last clause of Mrs. Miller's provision that says "for the benefit of all people including future generations," what does that mean? All people, all people in the world, all people in the country, all people in the state whether they produce it or not? If we're going to take some of our private property owners' property, it ought to be used for their benefit, not for somebody else. I don't feel any right to the geothermal energy that might be on the land of someone down there in southwest Louisiana. It's not my property. So, it would be unjust to take it from them and use it for my benefit. My benefit comes in if I want to buy some of that energy from them, through electric power plants or whatever. So, I just think we don't need this section. It's a legislative matter. The legislature has authority to regulate it if it so desires. But, we certainly don't need this concept in the constitution and certainly not the amendment that Mrs. Miller would submit about giving the state the exclusive right to explore, distribute these resources.

Questions

MR. O'NEILL

Woody, I only heard the letter from Professor Yiannopoulos so I'm not absolutely sure of this. Under this section as it's currently written would the legislature have the power to set up the machinery to appropriate these vast amounts of land and then go into the enterprise of taking this earth water from underneath the earth and producing power with it?

MR. JENKINS

Even without Mrs. Miller's amendment--and she tells me she's not going to offer it--I think that that's a possibility because it says that the state will manage these resources "for the benefit of all people." Well, I don't see how it could do that for all people unless it owned it or took total...all the value from it. I don't see what other purpose this section has other than to do that.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Doesn't the State of Louisiana have health regulations in reference to restaurants for the benefit of all people? Yet, the State of Louisiana has never made any effort to take over all the restaurants in Louisiana.

MR. JENKINS

They don't conserve, manage and regulate those restaurants for the benefit of all people, no; I don't think that. That indicates...that would indicate that the profits of the restaurants would go to all the people in the state, and I don't think that that's what we do now in restaurants, and I don't think that that's what we should do in the case of geopressure-geothermal power.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Don't you think that many of the laws that we pass are stressed for the benefit of all the people, yet, we have not had any mass expropriations in the State of Louisiana?

MR. JENKINS

No, we haven't had a constitutional provision like this in that regard. I don't see how we need this. The legislature has authority to regulate these things.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Do you think the Louisiana Legislature is going to go around expropriating people's property on a mass basis?

MR. JENKINS

Well, under this provision it says "the state shall do these things for all people." It says the state shall; it's a mandate

MR. VELAZQUEZ

It doesn't say the state shall expropriate anybody's property, does it? It says the state shall make a due exercise of its police power. That's all it says.

MR. JENKINS

How is it going to conserve, manage and regulate for the benefit of all people unless it does that? That's what Mrs. Miller said; she said that was the purpose: to grant authority to appropriate geopressure-geothermal power in the state.

MR. JUNEAU

Mr. Jenkins, one thing that concerns me in connection with the appropriation: as I understand it, the theory of this thing is that there are marketable minerals associated with hot water that would be depleted when geopressure-thermal resources are developed; isn't that correct?

MR. JENKINS

Yes.

MR. JUNEAU

All right. In essence, if we do that, and we appropriate these minerals, we have, in essence, indirectly taken away from the landowner those minerals which he would now have which would be subject to income to him, would he not?

MR. JENKINS

That's correct.

MR. JUNEAU

So, in essence, we're going beyond just geothermal appropriations; we're affecting what the landowner now has with regard to some marketable minerals. That's what concerns me about the appropriation.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: 69-33. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

Next section reads as follows:

"Section 4. Alienation of Water Bottoms

Section 4. The legislature shall neither alienate nor authorize the alienation of the beds of navigable water bodies, except for purposes of reclamation by the riparian owner to recover land lost through erosion if the reclamation is effected within ten years from the date the erosion occurs. This Section shall not prevent the leasing of state lands or water bottoms for mineral or other purposes. Except as provided herein, no bed of any navigable water body may be reclaimed except for public use."

Explanation

MR. LAMBERT

This particular subject matter is found in our present constitution with the exception of a very few changes that were made in committee. First of all, the legislature, this language is as it is in the 1921 Constitution as follows: "The legislature shall neither alienate nor authorize the alienation of the beds of navigable water bodies." We retained that provision; that's the same--no change. "Except for purposes of reclamation by the riparian owner to recover land lost through erosion." There was a general exception in the '21 Constitution which said "except for purposes of reclamation." In our committee, proposals were offered to alter this language and qualify the term "reclamation." For those of you who do not know the definition of reclamation, I'm going to read it to you. The word "reclamation" has no technical definition in Louisiana law. In the past the exception for reclamation in the present law has been thought to extend to filling in of land on a water body. Black's Law Dictionary gives as one definition of the word "reclaim," in an analogous sense, to reclaim land is to reduce marshy or swamp-land to a state fit for cultivation and habitation. So, it basically says in this provision that the state cannot alienate the beds of navigable water bottoms except for purposes of reclamation by the riparian owner. The riparian owner is the property owner adjacent to the water body. The riparian owner would have this right to reclaim only land lost through erosion. I'm sure all of you know what erosion is. This is a fairly technical area, and I hope I'm explaining it properly. We place a prescriptive period on the amount of time in which a riparian owner can effect the reclamation, and the period is ten years, and the prescriptive period starts to run from the last known date of the erosion. Erosion obviously would have to be determined as a factual matter. The section, to go further along with the section shall not prevent the leasing of state lands or water bottoms for mineral purposes or other purposes. This is in the present constitution. We retained that language. Then we have one sentence at the end: "Except as provided herein, no bed of any navigable water body may be reclaimed except for public use." Now, this makes a change in the present law in that for example, a parish that governing authority may want to reclaim land adjacent to their boundaries; if they reclaim the property, the property reclaimed would have to be used for a public purpose. In the 1921 Constitution it did not restrict its use to a public purpose. It could be used for other purposes. I'll yield to any questions.

Questions

MR. SHANNON

Louis, you said the property reclaimed must be used for a public purpose. Let me give you an illustration. I believe in New Orleans the levee board has reclaimed part of the lake bed down there and subdivided it. Under this amendment here that would not be permitted. Is that right?

MR. LAMBERT

That's correct. As I understand it, Mr. Shannon--correct me if I'm wrong--in response to your question, the Orleans Levee Board--I believe it was the Orleans Levee Board--did reclaim the property in Orleans Parish, and I think what they did was they...I believe they sold lots to...or they turned it over to private developers, or they sold lots to private individuals for homes and so forth. In other words, what it basically would do...it was debated at great length in the committee...what it would basically do would say that reclaimed property by a public body would be restricted to public use.

MR. SHANNON

I said it could not be reclaimed by a governmental agency and developed and then sold for private property as residential use.

MR. LAMBERT

That's correct.

MR. SHANNON

Thank you.

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Shannon, it would not prohibit the leasing, however.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Senator, in reference to those lands in Orleans Parish that were filled in by the levee board, did you know that they were sold on a ninety-nine year lease at the end of which time all land reverts back to the State of Louisiana?

MR. LAMBERT

No, I did not know that.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Bollinger sends up amendments, read as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, line 12, immediately after the word "erosion" insert a period "." and delete the remainder of the line and delete line 13 in its entirety.

Explanation

MR. BOLLINGER

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, the effect of this amendment deletes the words, "if the reclamation is effected within ten years from the date when the erosion occurs." Let me read to you from Article IV of Section 2 of the 1921 Constitution. It says, "nor shall the legislature alienate nor authorize the alienation the fee of the bed of any navigable stream, lake, or other body of water, except for purposes of reclamation."

The committee was concerned with the language because it left open the possibilities of mass reclamations and destroying of the lakes and streams and other bodies of water that are there for the public good, and the alienation of these water bottoms. So, we got together and devised the language, "except for purposes of reclamation by the riparian landowner to recover lands lost through erosion." This limits which lands can be recovered by private individuals or private people only to those lands that they have owned and that they lost the ownership because the land eroded away. I'm not sure which law it is, but one of the statutes says that eroded land becomes the property of the state. We have limited, to a great extent, the flexibility that is offered by the present constitution and safeguarded the possibility of the legislature ever massly giving away land to private individuals. Then, further down, we explain that it can be reclaimed for public purposes. Now, the portion that this amendment deals with is a prescriptive clause, which is almost impossible to administer. How in the world can anyone say, "Well, this land eroded ten years ago"? Mr. Poret, with the state land office said that he doesn't see how that office could administer a prescriptive clause like this. I just think that the whole section would be much better off; it would provide all the limitations required if this prescription was not in here, and it could be administered by a state agency.

I move the adoption and yield to any questions.

Questions

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Bollinger, was there a reason why the committee put that "ten years" in there?

MR. BOLLINGER

Senator, we even had more than that at one time. We had that it could not be done except after the effective date of the adoption of this constitution. They thought it was necessary to have a prescriptive right now, but then it became evident that it would be almost impossible to administer. So, that's why, and then we never did get to go back into this section and discuss it again, because we got around the time to have to report the committee proposal out. I think, however, if we had gotten back into it in committee, it would have come out before it hit the floor.

MR. NUNEZ

So, by taking it out, what . . . there would be no time limit on the reclamation of eroded lands by . . .

MR. BOLLINGER

Well, no. There's no time limit now. I read to you the present constitutional provision, and this restricts it greatly by allowing only the riparian landowner to reclaim land and reclaiming only those lands lost through erosion.

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Bollinger, was it not your proposal to put this language in our section. . . in this section?

MR. BOLLINGER

Fardon?

MR. LAMBERT

Was it not your proposal in the committee, now--just for clarification purposes so I can understand this--was it not your idea to put some language in this Section 4 dealing with reclamation?

MR. BOLLINGER

Yes.

MR. LAMBERT

Specifically what you're taking out, now?

MR. BOLLINGER

No, Mrs. Miller. . . this was Mrs. Miller's language. My language was to add the words "by the riparian landowner to recover land lost through erosion," and Mrs. Miller added the prescription.

MR. LAMBERT

All right. Now, let me ask you this question: If you don't place a prescriptive period on it, in other words, this right would exist for a hundred years. Correct?

MR. BOLLINGER

If you could prove that you owned the land and that it was eroded away, yes, sir. You had the right, and I think it's a basic property right of every citizen in the state, that he should have the right to own property and for no reason should he lose his right to own property.

MR. LEBLEU

Mr. Bollinger, doesn't your amendment put the language in the new proposed constitution just about the same as it is in the existing constitution, and that has served us well since 1921?

MR. BOLLINGER-

Basically, it does, Representative LeBleu. In fact, it even limits what individuals can do and gives more probability of the state getting land.

Further Discussion

MR. SHANNON

Mr. Bollinger, if I understand what you are trying to say here, before that, is if you own land along the banks of a river, and you lose it through erosion--maybe not all of the property you own--by accretion, someone else may pick up some more property down there, but later on through the years, by accretion, you may pick some property up back here. Now, is that what this is trying to say, that they still own that by accretion as it comes back?

MR. BOLLINGER

No, sir. I think you're trying to imply that we're changing the law with regards to accretion and dereliction, and we're not. We're not at all effecting that. I'm just saying that if you have land which is eroded away, the legislature may authorize you to reclaim only that land that you have lost through erosion--only that land. If you look at the whole section, it deals with the legislature's authority to . . . or prohibition on the legislature to alienate the state's ownership of any water bottom. This just says if you have land that becomes water bottoms, you lose. . . the law says you lose your ownership and the state retains your mineral rights and the ownership of that water bottom. This only allows, like the present constitution does, for an individual to retain his property rights, to go back and reclaim his land, to retain his mineral rights; because this, as you know, could amount to a lot of money for any one individual, any corporation or anybody's property rights.

Questions

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Bollinger, the present law is not limited at all, is it not?

MR. BOLLINGER

No limitation whatsoever.

MR. DUVAL

Now, all your amendment does is to take out the 'ten years,' is that right?

MR. BOLLINGER

That's all.

MR. DUVAL

What would happen, Mr. Bollinger, if the committee proposal stood, and somebody's property had been eroded nine years and six months ago before the date of this constitution? He would only have. . . under this proposal, he would only have six months to reclaim his land. Isn't that right?

MR. BOLLINGER

It seems to me that's right.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

If your land has eroded away, in effect, you have no land. So, it is now water bottom, and it now belongs to the state. Is that not correct?

MR. BOLLINGER

Yes, under the present law that is correct.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Then, what the committee proposal as written, here, does is give you back--give you back--some of the state's land, because the land is now the state's. The reason for putting this prescription in was to limit the amount of the state's land that we are giving the riparian landowner. Isn't that the purpose of the committee amendment, to limit the amount of the state's land that we are giving to the riparian landowner?

MR. BOLLINGER

We thought that was the purpose, Mr. Velazquez. We thought that was the purpose, however, we. . . at least, I found out, I don't know if you did anymore research on it, that it was almost impossible to administer a prescriptive clause of this type and almost impossible to say how much land eroded within ten years.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

In effect, isn't what you're doing going to allow the man to go ahead and reclaim more than he has a right to reclaim? Some of these deeds. . .

MR. BOLLINGER

No, right now he has a right to reclaim anything the legislature allows him to do. This says only the individual who is a riparian landowner can reclaim and only that land which he lost through erosion--no other land.

103rd Days Proceedings—December 18, 1973

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Did not the old. . .

Further Discussion

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I just wanted to say that as far as I'm concerned, this. . .we're not opposed to this amendment. Basically, what it does is to expand on the rights of a private property owner, in this particular case. So, we have no opposition to this.

I'm speaking for myself. I haven't had time to poll seventeen members of the committee, but if they disagree, feel free to come up here and. . .

Questions

MR. CONROY

As a matter of fact, Lewia, isn't it so that the legislature, if they wish to, could implement this provision any way they want it with whatever restrictions they wanted with regard to the time limit or anything else, because this simply authorizes the legislature to allow reclamation by the riparian owner, isn't that correct?

MR. LAMBERT

That's correct.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment rejected: 89-4. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The next set of amendments sent up by Delegate Avant.

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, line 27, delete the period "." after the word "use" and insert the following language:

" , and then only when authorized by law enacted upon the favorable vote of two-thirds of the elected members of each house of the legislature."

Explanation

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this is, I think, a very clear amendment as to what it does, so I'm going to be very brief. The last sentence of this says that "except as provided in this section--or herein"--which is this section, "no bed of any navigable body of water may be reclaimed except for public use." Now, first, it doesn't say who makes the determination as to whether it's a public use. I would point out to you that our publicly owned water bottoms and places that can be used for public recreation--boating, hunting, fishing, and that type of thing--are rapidly diminishing. So, the purpose of this amendment is to make it clear that a public body of water, a navigable body of water, which belongs to all of the people cannot be filled in, even for a public use, except when it has been approved by a favorable vote of two-thirds of the elected members of each house of the legislature. I think it's a very serious thing when you start filling in places like Lake Pontchartrain, Lake Maurepas, our various rivers and lakes and streams in this state to do away with them.

Further Discussion

MR. PEREZ

Well, unfortunately, we're dealing with matters of such grave importance and to see an amendment just hit the floor like this and have it go through without objection, I'd like to ask for possibly a three or four-minute recess so we can take a look at this thing.

MR. HENRY

All right, sir, we'll stand at ease for a couple of minutes. Mr. Avant. I'm having all kind of problems today with you. The gentleman has not completed his remarks.

Further Discussion

MR. AVANT

I'm not closing, but I just want Mr. Perez to know that this amendment was sent up way early this morning. I apologize, I mean, if it's not on your desk. It's been on my desk, Mr. Perez.

Further Discussion

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I very much dislike having to get up here and oppose this amendment, but, again, this is one of these situations where quickly we might be doing something which we would very much regret, later.

You take, for instance, in the area in which we live, we have been, for years, trying to develop hurricane protection levees. In connection with the building of those hurricane protection levees, it is necessary, at times, to use small parts of navigable bays in order to be able to take a spoil area which, in essence, is reclaimed because of the fact that we have to use certain materials which are not available or which are not suitable for the building of levees, and we have to have a place to dispose of that. They are a small part of our lands--and by the way, we are ninety-five percent water and marsh, and only about five percent highlands. We have no other place to dispose of these things, and it is a good thing and not a bad thing. When you would require a two-thirds vote of the elected membership of each house of the legislature, it might have the effect, in my particular area, of delaying the construction of hurricane protection levees which would give the people of our area the protection they need to stop them from these devastating hurricanes. I know that this could possibly have a very serious effect in many other areas. I think we have just gone too far when we add this language: "and then when authorized by law enacted by a favorable vote of two-thirds of the members of each house of the legislature." This is a very, very serious amendment, as far as my particular area is concerned. I ask you to reject the amendment. It could have the effect of stopping the construction of all of our hurricane protection levees which we have been working on for twenty years to try to develop to give our people hurricane protection levees.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, now, for the life of me, I really don't understand why Mr. Perez is disturbed. I see nothing in here that's going to interfere with his hurricane protection levees. This refers to the bed of a navigable water body--not marshlands or something like that, but, lakes, such as Lake Pontchartrain, Lake Maurepas--there's a many of them all over the state. Let me tell you what you do. You do two things when you reclaim that land. Number one, you. . .the title to that is in the public. You are depriving the public of the right to use that land for recreational purposes such as hunting, or fishing, or boating. You are destroying the lakefront. There's another thing that you are doing when you fill in a portion of a navigable water body. You are raising the water level, and you are affecting the rights of everybody, all the way around the periphery of that body of water. It is a very serious matter, and the only thing that we are asking, the only purpose of this amendment is to require that before such a project is undertaken, that two-thirds of the legislature be convinced that it is a public purpose, and it's in the public benefit. That's all that it does. The legislature can do that by a general law, I respectfully submit, saying that local government, for certain specific purposes that they have declared to be public purposes--such as a hurricane protection levee or some other beneficial purpose--the legislature could pass a general law saying, "You can do it for these purposes." So, I don't see how it could possibly interfere with Mr. Perez's hurricane protection levees. It's not intended to do that, and as a matter of fact, I respectfully submit, doesn't do that. But, it does protect the interests of the people of the state.

Questions

MR. PEREZ

Do you know that the courts have held that anything that you can float a pirogue in, under certain conditions, is navigable?

MR. AVANT

I know that the courts have held to the contrary, Mr. Perez.

MR. PEREZ

No, sir. Well, I'll be glad to show you an awful lot of other cases. . .

103rd Days Proceedings—December 18, 1973

MR. AVANT

Well, Mr. Perez, I just happen to know that the United States District Court here for the Eastern District of Louisiana, is now the middle division, held that a barge that exploded on an arm of False River which was, in fact, being used to lay a pipeline, that that was not a navigable body of water. We're getting into some legal technicalities, and you just can't make the statement that anything that can float a pirogue is a navigable body of water. That's a euphemism.

MR. PEREZ

Did you know that that rule that you talk about applies to a federal law? But, the rule that I'm talking about applies strictly and only to the ownership of lands by the state, and that we have had many Supreme Court decisions which have said, depending upon the type of commerce in the area, including pirogue, that it's navigable under certain circumstances. Water bottoms as little as two and three feet deep have been declared to be navigable water bottoms owned by the state. Did you know that?

MR. AVANT

If you say so, Mr. Perez, I won't argue with you. But, let me answer your question. . .

MR. PEREZ

Did you further know that with respect to the program I'm talking about--and I want you to know it--that in the event this amendment passed, it probably will jeopardize the hurricane levee protection program which protects thousands of people in my area?

MR. AVANT

Mr. Perez, I don't agree with that because I don't think any legislature--if you have to do what you say you have to do--I don't think any legislature in this state is going to keep you from doing it or stop you from doing it if you've already started it. You're going to have plenty of ways to protect yourself. What I'm trying to do is to protect the people of the state whose natural resources in the form of public water bodies are fast diminishing, and fast becoming unsuited for recreational purposes and to make sure that when anymore of them are taken away from then, that it is truly in the public interest. This is the only way I know to do it, Mr. Perez. Nobody wants to interfere with your business, or the protection of your people. I think you know that, and I think you know why this may be inconvenient to you. It's not going to stop your program.

MR. LEBLEU

Mr. Avant, in effect, wouldn't your addition to the committee proposal, your amendment, really do exactly the opposite of what you intend to do? I mean, if some community wanted to go to the . . . some local governing authority or wanted to go to the legislature and reclaim some property on the navigable water bottom, they could do so simply with a two-thirds vote of the legislature. I don't believe you intend for your amendment to do that.

MR. AVANT

Well, no. It has to be a public purpose and two-thirds of the legislature has to agree that it's a public purpose, Conway. Do you follow me? In other words, I'm not taking out the requirement that it be for a public purpose.

MR. BURNS

Jack, if Mr. Perez has a real critical problem down in his section with reference to construction of levees for emergency purposes or something of that nature, would you object to him putting in an amendment which would take care of that particular situation?

MR. AVANT

I certainly would not. I certainly would not. What I want to do, Mr. Burns, is to keep from filling in our public lakes and streams that are used for recreational purposes by the general public, that belong to the public.

MR. BURNS

When you mentioned Lake Pontchartrain, that's what stirred my interest, sir.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected:
43-53. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The next set of amendments offered by Delegates Gauthier and Conroy.

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, line 17, after the word "except" delete the remainder of the line and insert in lieu thereof the following: "as provided by law."

Explanation

MR. GAUTHIER

Mr. Chairman and members of the delegation, the natural response when I get up here and I say we have scratched the words "for public use" everybody says, "Oh, you are going to steal all the river bottoms, take all the land away from the state." I guarantee you this is not our intention; quite to the contrary, it is to allow certain parishes to continue to conduct certain programs that they have worked on for many years. For instance--and I might add--we also presently have constitutional authority to do this in the '21 Constitution; Lake Charles has it; New Orleans has it; Jefferson has it and St. Charles Parish. To give you an idea of how broad some of these programs are--in Jefferson we have expended approximately five hundred thousand dollars working on a reclamation program for part of Lake Pontchartrain. It's a ten year project that we have spent a lot of money and a lot of effort on. We are now in the process of preparing a referendum to go to the people of our parish so that they may vote on this reclamation project. If you do not adopt this amendment, what you are in essence doing is saying to our people that they do not have a choice as to what they want done with property along Lake Pontchartrain, whether or not they can use it for a reclamation project. This project is to be construed as such; they would reclaim part of it and develop it. Now, this is where the conflict comes in--the part they first develop they want to sell to raise money to finance the rest of the project which would be recreation areas, marinas, parks, and things to be used by the citizens, and other citizens of the state as well as Jefferson Parish. So, by reclaiming part of the land and then subdividing it and selling the plots----if you put in this section, as is, without the amendment you would be denying us in Jefferson the right to consider to go ahead with this project. I ask for your favorable adoption of this amendment.

Questions

MR. SINGLETARY

Wendell, is Jefferson going to....their reclamation project, I believe, they are reclaiming about twenty-five square miles of lake, is that right?

MR. GAUTHIER

I wouldn't know the statistics, Alvin, I'm really not certain as to how much they're reclaiming.

MR. SINGLETARY

All right. Well, let me ask you this. Is this reclamation project going to be for a public use or is it going to be for the development of a subdivision?

MR. GAUTHIER

All right, that's where the conflict comes in, Alvin. What we want to do to lighten the burden on the taxpayer is reclaim a portion of it, subdivide a portion of it and sell lots to individual homeowners to finance the rest of the project. It's our intent to save the taxpayer money by putting some of this use into....some of this land into private hands through sales, so that's where the conflict comes in; part of that property will be sold for private use. I'm being completely open with the convention in telling you we will take some public land and then sell it for private use, but we intend to do it at a profit to our parish and allow us to construct a park, and a recreation area, and a marina that we feel is very important. We've worked on this project for about ten years now and as I've said, we've expended quite a bit of funds.

MR. SINGLETARY

Well, frankly, the idea of the committee proposal was to try to curb these reclamation projects for private development. That was the idea of the committee proposal.

MR. GAUTHIER

I understand what the idea was, but I'm afraid it doesn't do this. If we put in "as provided by law," it will allow the legislature to examine each and every case. I'm certain that none of you in here would want to deny another parish who may want to take just one block in a reclamation project to establish a little marina. Yet, if we leave it as is by constitution, we have prohibited this.

MR. ABRAHAM

Wendell, in the reclamation of this portion of the lake and, of course, it would apply to any other body of water, what would be the effect on the neighboring parishes or the neighboring communities who might border on that lake?

103rd Days Proceedings—December 18, 1973

MR. GAUTHIER

If they wanted to conduct a reclamation program, they would have to get legislative approval and then they could do so.

MR. ULLO

Mr. Gauthier, do you know that I disagree with you? I feel we have lots of land in Jefferson Parish; I can't see why we have to go ahead and reclaim Lake Pontchartrain. As you already know, about two or three years ago we had a hundred million dollar bond issue on the reclamation of Lake Pontchartrain that was voted down by the people. I feel that the committee proposal, as is....

MR. HENRY

Dr. Ullo, ask him the question, please, sir. Go ahead and ask the question, please, sir, we've....

MR. ULLO

Do you not agree that the....

MR. GAUTHIER

No, I don't.

MR. ULLO

...the committee proposal as stated is much better than "as provided by law"?

MR. GAUTHIER

Jack, if I agreed with that I wouldn't be standing up here with this amendment and I'm not at all shocked at your position, Doc. I might add that apparently you weren't aware that a constitutional amendment passed by this state overall, did pass allowing the parish to do this.

MR. ULLO

Well, as far as...it didn't pass as far as I was concerned.

MR. GAUTHIER

We'll take that into consideration.

MR. BURNS

If you all keep filling in Lake Pontchartrain over on the Jefferson side, you'll finally have the land coming all the way over to St. Tammany, won't you? We won't have any lake.

MR. GAUTHIER

Well, Jim, that would alleviate the problem of another causeway.

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Gauthier, if you decide that you're going to do this, then all the parishes should have the same break. You say the legislature could decide who. Well, if the legislature decided to let one parish have this break and don't let the other one have it, don't you think that would be wrong?

MR. GAUTHIER

Well, it's hard to project whether it would be right or wrong because right offhand you don't know the effect on that particular coastline, on that particular area.

Further Discussion

MR. RIECKE

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I don't use very much time on this microphone, but I speak in favor of this amendment because if it is passed without this amendment, Jefferson Parish would be precluded from creating this recreation district which they so badly need. I happen to know, working with the chamber of commerce.... I'm on the board of the Jefferson Parish area--that the Jefferson Parish people were asked to vote on this hundred million dollar project, as was brought out by the doctor and, of course, a hundred million dollars is a lot of money for the taxpayers to put out and they voted it down. This project has been planned for years, working with Tulane University architectural group and a beautiful recreation area is being worked out, financed by a private institution which will develop land for homes just as we have in New Orleans. Now, in Jefferson Parish all they have on the lakefront is a horrible, messy, swamp area. This we had in Orleans Parish too, until the Orleans Parish Levee Board pumped in this land, financed it with the sale to private residential builders. Now, in Orleans Parish we have a beautiful lakefront which is enjoyed by all of the people, that we have a swimming area; Jefferson Parish needs this very badly. Although I don't live in Jefferson Parish, I think it only fair to give them an opportunity to finance this thing without a dime taxpayers' money and to provide this recreation in this lakefront area to the people of Jefferson Parish. Mr. Burns, I don't think we got too close to your area when we pumped the three miles of Lake Pontchartrain into Orleans Parish. I think it's helped Orleans Parish so much that I want to help Jefferson Parish, too. I hope you will support this.

Questions

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Riecke, I wanted to see if I understood something you said. Did you say that if the amendment is not adopted that Jefferson Parish would not be able to create a recreation area by reclaiming some of the property. Did you say that?

MR. RIECKE

Yes. I said that because under the committee proposal you say "except for public use." Now, some of this is going to be for private use because they are going to sell the land for residential area in order to finance it for public use.

MR. LAMBERT

Oh, I see. Well, I didn't know about the private part of it, but I just wanted...for purposes of clarification a recreation area would certainly be considered a public purpose.

MR. RIECKE

It's a beautiful project, and we ought not to deprive Jefferson of having it. Thank you.

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Riecke, you realize that we are not writing this constitution specifically to take care of the problem of Jefferson. If we pass this the way it's been submitted, then all parishes on all lakes can reclaim these lands for eventually private use, and I think it might be going just a little too far on this particular one. Don't you agree if we....suppose we....look on Rigolets they are reclaiming land for private use, across the lake -- on the other side they are reclaiming land for private use---that lake is just about a dead lake right now. How far do you think we should go in killing it?

MR. RIECKE

Well, that...Senator, that depends on what part of it is for private use. If it's all for private use, the legislature according to this amendment can turn them down. But where so much of it is going to be used for public recreation and public use--I believe Lake Charles wanted to develop an area....

Further Discussion

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise to oppose this particular amendment. It seems to me that if they want to create a marina and some other facilities for public use, they can do it without this amendment. Why do they want to have a hundred million dollar project when, in effect, all they want to do is have a marina and some other recreation facilities? Why do they want to go ahead and build a huge subdivision and then put the marina out beyond it? Why not just come there, make it a smaller project and take care of the recreational needs that they have? It seems to me that we have a problem, when you fill in on one side of the lake, you mess up everybody on the other side of the lake. Don't those people have some rights? Isn't their property of some value to them? Why should they lose the benefits that they have now because somebody is going to put a subdivision in there and draw more untreated sewage in the lake and further pollute it? What are they going to do after they finish putting all of these projects on all sides of the lakes--give everybody a picture of the lake the way it use to be? It seems to me we've got to kill this amendment otherwise we are just asking ourselves; we can destroy every large body of water in the state.

Questions

MR. CONROY

Mr. Velazquez, did you realize that the reason for the provision for the private sale of some of this reclaimed area is to permit the financing of these improvements for public purposes which otherwise the state couldn't afford to do?

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Mr. Conroy, I realize the people of Jefferson Parish voted down your last bond issue when you tried a grandiose scheme like that. I realize you tried to get around the wishes of the people over there in Jefferson who voted that bond issue down. I didn't vote that bond issue down; people in Jefferson Parish voted that bond issue down. Take your argument to them.

103rd Days Proceedings—December 18, 1973

MR. STAGG

Mr. Velazquez, isn't it true or have you heard about it, that they had filled in so much of San Francisco Bay that they were about to change the climate of San Francisco until they finally decided they better quit filling it up with dirt? Isn't that same thing likely to happen if each of these parishes around Lake Pontchartrain has a worthy project that causes them to fill in the lake with some more dirt?

MR. VELAZQUEZ

You're quite correct, Mr. Stagg, and worthy projects start... as soon as one person finds a "worthy" project everybody is going to find a "worthy" project.

MR. RIECKE

Mr. Velazquez, how in the name of common sense is filling in three miles of the lake in Jefferson Parish going to affect the other side of the lake seventeen miles away? Will you answer that question?

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Every time you fill in that lake it would get smaller and smaller and they are having problems on the other side of the lake right now...around Slidell and the other side of the lake they are thinking about limiting construction of other projects there right now because the lake is not as good as it used to be.

MR. RIECKE

Well, do you or don't you believe that the fill-in of the lake in Orleans Parish was helpful to all of the people? The black people in that area have a swimming area where there are thousands of black people that are enjoying the lakefront which was formally swamp? Do you think that was wrong?

MR. VELAZQUEZ

I've gone to several funerals of good friends of mine who went out in that beautiful area you provided for them and they didn't make it out.

MR. ULLO

Mr. Velazquez, do you know that I feel this is strictly a political, a sort of internal, political amendment as far as the parish of Jefferson is concerned?

MR. VELAZQUEZ

You know, Mr. Ullo, because you are an expert on Jefferson Parish politics, I'll have to take your word for that.

Further Discussion

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I'm not going to say much but I'm going to say that with everything that I've got, "Please don't vote this amendment on us." This amendment does away with the requirement that the reclamation of the public's water bodies be for a public purpose. It permits the reclamation and the filling in of these water bodies for private purposes. I just had to get up here because of the statement made by Mr. Riecke whom I respect, and I disagree with him, but he talked about that stinking boghole swamp, or something. That stinking boghole swamp plays a very important part in the ecological balance of this area; it plays a very important part. I wish that I was smart enough and knowledgeable enough to tell you the part that it plays, but I'm not. But, when you fill in a portion of that lake, you are destroying that lake and you are upsetting not only just that particular area but the entire area around the periphery of that lake. You are damaging it, and you are damaging the people. I think that it only makes sense to say that since that lake belongs to the people, not just the people of Jefferson Parish but all of the people of the State of Louisiana, that when you do that it's got to be for a public purpose. I urge you to reject this amendment. You did not see fit in your wisdom to require that it be done only for a public purpose....by a two-thirds vote of the legislature. But, please, please do not say that it can be done for private purposes: to fill it in just so that you can sell it and make money, because if you give every police jury and every local governing body around the periphery of that lake or any other lake, the right to fill that asset in, which belongs to all of the people, for revenue raising purposes, I think you would be making a terrible mistake. I beg you, please don't do that.

Questions

MR. BURNS

Mr. Avant, did you know that Lake Pontchartrain, the area we're talking about, the further west it goes the narrower the lake gets?

MR. AVANT

Yes, I'm familiar with that.

MR. BURNS

...bounded by St. Tammany and Orleans, and by St. Tammany and Jefferson, and then by Tangipahoa and St. Charles, but it gets narrower and narrower. Now, if you fill in over on one side and we take a notion we want to do the same thing over on the St. Tammany side, we'd wind up with a ditch right down the middle of what is now a lake.

MR. AVANT

Well, not only that, Mr. Burns, and somebody said, "Well, what difference does it make if you fill in three miles of the lakefront?" Well, maybe it don't make any difference if you fill in three miles this year, but then next year somebody's going to want to fill in another three miles, and you keep on doing that and where are you going to be down the road fifty, or sixty, or seventy years from now?

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Avant, even though this amendment says "as provided by law," could it not be possible that someone who wanted to build a marina or something over the lake could come to the legislature and those people in north Louisiana that wasn't really concerned they might vote for it and the people that lived in that particular area might be bitterly opposed to it, but they could still be out-voted?

MR. AVANT

That is correct, Senator Rayburn. That's why I wanted the two-thirds vote.

MR. CONINO

Mr. Avant, do you realize that this little ditch that you are talking about is twenty-four and three-quarter miles wide at this particular spot that we are talking about in Jefferson Parish?

MR. AVANT

Well, Mr. Conino, I don't know just how wide it is but every time you fill up part of it it's going to be that much narrower and you keep on, and keep on, and keep on you're going to have a ditch.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. GAUTHIER

Mr. Chairman and members of the delegation, I'm glad to see first of all that so many delegates are environmentalists. I side with you in a lot of these efforts, however, I would like to answer some of the charges made. It seems like to adopt this amendment would be a tragedy to all land that was reclaimed for public use. Now, ask yourself this question: Are you sure that you know what the definition is for "public use"? Are you positive? Also, bear in mind that if you don't adopt this amendment you will be hurting some parishes that have expended quite a large amount of funds and undertaken a project for some ten years now. We are in the process of now submitting it to the people of our parish in referendum form for a vote. You will deny them the chance to make this choice. The amendment simply does this: It deletes the last three words and it puts "as provided by law." It will allow the legislature to define first of all what "public use" is and second of all, whether or not certain projects should be carried forward. Now, really, stop and think a while. Do you want to now forever prohibit any reclamation projects in this constitution? I ask you, is that really what you want to do, or would you rather let each particular case be examined on its own and then let the legislature decide? I ask you if you think that you are in such a position that you can foresee in the future that there should not be any reclamation projects and, therefore, in this constitution you are going to deny them, except by constitutional amendment. I don't think this is what you want to do. I ask you to adopt the amendment.

Questions

MR. ALEXANDER

Mr. Gauthier, do you feel that a parish of the state has some rights, especially since the state has some rights relative to the sea? For example, Louisiana has been granted the rights at least three miles out—we claim ten, but we have been granted three miles—to do as we see fit along the Gulf of Mexico. Now, for the last hundred years Holland has been reclaiming the ocean. How long do you think it will take before the Atlantic Ocean becomes a ditch? Now, that's facetious. Let's get back to...this is my question: Do you think that this project would endanger the ecology of Lake Pontchartrain by additional pollution or do you think the effect of what it will do similar to Orleans Parish which has reclaimed some fifteen miles along the lakeshore....

MR. HENRY
Reverend Alexander, ask your question, please, sir. There're still other people waiting.

MR. ALEXANDER
Do you think...I say it, Mr. Chairman, do you think...don't you think that would improve Lake Pontchartrain?

MR. GAUTHIER
I most certainly do, Reverend, and I thank you for the question.

MR. ALEXANDER
And, how long do you think before it will become a ditch?

MR. GAUTHIER
I would think it would take quite a number of years, and I don't foresee that happening ever, Reverend.

MR. AVANT
This authority that Jefferson Parish has now to fill in a part of Lake Pontchartrain, which is what they are doing, was obtained by a constitutional amendment; right?

MR. GAUTHIER
That's right.

MR. AVANT
Now, could you say you have an investment there that you don't want to lose; right?

MR. GAUTHIER
That's correct, Jack.

MR. AVANT
Couldn't that provision be put into the schedule to let you complete whatever authority you've got now and subject the future to this requirement that it be for a public use?

MR. GAUTHIER
Jack, I would be very pleased, speaking for Jefferson Parish only, if this body elected to do that. Certainly, I would go along with this.....

But, I'm not sure if we as delegates want to deny another parish from at one time taking on a reclamation project. I'm not sure if we are in a position to say, "From here on out we don't want any more recreation projects except by constitutional amendment." I don't think we are in that position now. I urge the adoption of this amendment.

[Amendment rejected: 37-60. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 97-5. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER
"Section 5. Reservation of Mineral Rights
Section 5. The mineral rights on all property sold by the state shall be reserved, except where the owner or other person having the right to redeem may buy or redeem property sold or adjudicated to the state for taxes."

Explanation

MR. LAMBERT
Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this provision makes no change in the present constitution. It provides that the state retains the minerals on all property they own except where a person would lose his property for taxes. When he redeemed the property, he would have the right to get the minerals back with it. Other than that, the state retains and reserves all mineral rights on its property.
I yield to any questions.

Questions

MR. CASEY
Senator Lambert, just for the record, I just want to clarify one point. It's not intended that this would in any way....referring to what we commonly call its patent titles. Under patent titles, the state would retain the mineral rights. Is that correct? Where you're talking about redemption from straight adjudications to the state by the tax debtor.

MR. LAMBERT Correct.

MR. CASEY
Is that correct?

MR. LAMBERT
Correct. Exactly right.

MR. WILLIS
Senator, don't you think that the word, tax issued be modified to provide ad valorem or property taxes?

MR. LAMBERT
I would have no objection to that 'cause that's exactly what we are talking about.

MR. WILLIS
Well, I envisage a way that the state could, for income tax lien, to get property, don't you see?

MR. LAMBERT
The only property, correct me if I'm wrong, the only property that I can think of right now that you can lose the taxes would be real estate. Isn't that correct?

MR. WILLIS
Ad valorem tax is the only tax....

MR. LAMBERT
I move final passage if there's no other questions.

Amendment

MR. HARDIN
Amendment No. 1. On page 2, at the end of line 18, add the following; "Prescription" Amendment No. 2. On page 2, line 19, immediately after "Section 5" and before the word "The" insert the following:
"(A) Reservation of Mineral Rights."
Amendment No. 3. On page 3, between lines 22 and 23, add the following"
"(B) Prescription. Lands and interests of neither the state nor levee districts shall be lost by prescription."

Explanation

MR. SHANNON
Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, this article gave the state the right for all the prescriptions I think they needed. But I wanted to make it crystal clear. This amendment only, in reality, only adds a Paragraph (B) to what you have here, because on page 2 at the end of line 18, it just adds the word "Prescription" in the title. Then come on down in this reservations of mineral rights and we make it Paragraph (A) and (B) is what I'm making it. In (B), everything stays the same except what I'm adding in (B) is "Prescription", lands and interests of neither the state nor levee districts shall be lost by prescription. In our Local and Parochial Government, our definition of levee boards falls under "Governmental Subdivisions," and I didn't want to use "Governmental Subdivisions" here for the fear of including all of your municipalities of the state. But, let's remember this, the only lands that the levee boards of this state own are lands that were given to them by the State of Louisiana. In reality, they belong to the State of Louisiana. They were given to the levee boards in order to provide some revenues for their use within the respective levee districts of this state, and for no other purpose. In Caddo, we have had the problems up there in the past of prescription applying to levee district land.
About five years ago, I believe, we had passed in the legislature an act where this was not permitted to do....to prescribe any more. Prescription today, statutorily is not allowed. But I think it is very, very important to this state, that the state lands--and which this is a part of the state lands--be not allowed to...where prescription might apply.
I would be glad to answer any questions.

103rd Days Proceedings—December 18, 1973

MR. LEBLEU

Can a levee board dispose of the property that it originally received from the state as a grant?

MR. SHANNON

Under certain conditions, yes, sir, they can.

MR. LEBLEU

What are those conditions?

MR. SHANNON

In the past, they are restricted, well, they have to be advertised, I believe, is about all that they can sell in the range now. I believe that is the present law.

MR. LEBLEU

But, a levee board can advertise the land for sale and dispose of them at whatever price that they determine? Or they advertise subject to the approval of the vote of the people?

MR. SHANNON

No, not subject to the rule of the vote of the people. No.

MR. LEBLEU

In other words, the levee board can advertise them and sell them and make their own deals?

MR. SHANNON

Yes, sir. That's correct.

Questions

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Shannon, did you know that in the Local Government Proposal No. 17, Section 29, it reads as follows:

"Prescription against state: Prescription shall not run against the state in any civil matter unless otherwise provided in this constitution or expressly by law."

Did you realize that this had been covered already?

MR. SHANNON

That's the state, only, Senator Lambert. That does not apply to the levee districts and municipalities.

MR. LAMBERT

Let me ask you this question, then.

Suppose, and it concerns me, because in the area where I live there are, in chains of title, they do show up, with the levee district, for example: the Pontchartrain Levee Board at one time owned a piece of land. And over a period of ten transactions, the property changed hands. A person built a forty-thousand dollar home on that property; they bought it in good faith; they had it for over ten years. If this passes, that man would lose his house to the state. Is that correct? That's what I want to know. That's what worries me.

MR. SHANNON

That's the one that I've been advised by the staff that is not correct. That this would not affect anything only from the date of this constitution forward, as far as any sales like that.

MR. LAMBERT

Let me see, why is this necessary? The legislature would have the authority to handle this particular matter. Why do you want to lock that...especially...specifically levee districts in the constitution, because it could create problems that could not be changed...there was no flexibility.

MR. SHANNON

Senator Lambert, I could give you one good illustration of why I want this locked in the constitution; whereas, these minerals would be retained. There are some levee districts in this state in the past that have sold land to be delivered to them when the purchaser wanted it. They waited until such time...this was a contract...and they waited until such time as the mineral development got good in that area, and then they called on them to deliver this land to them. They had to do it. That was the time when minerals went with the land. That's what I want to try to avoid in the future is the sale of lands like this where the minerals go with it. I want that reserved to the state in perpetuity.

Further Discussion

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, Mr. Shannon covers a particular area that, in my opinion, that if you look at Local Government Proposal, Committee Proposal No. 17, is basically covered. I feel, and I hope you can consider this position, that this is repetitious, and it possibly could create situations where property owners, private property owners, may be subjected to the loss of their property because prescription is being locked into the constitution specifically on levee board property. In the area where I live, for example, the Pontchartrain Levee Board District goes into Ascension Parish and St. James and so forth. The levee district owns lands that's nowhere close to the Mississippi River--way out in sections scattered all over. They got this land because at one time when they were lost for taxes, the register of state lands would transfer the property to the levee district. I certainly commend Mr. Shannon who has worked in the levee board system for many years, for his effort in this particular case. But for the reasons that I have just stated, I'll ask you to please consider voting against this proposal because it's already covered in the Local Government Provision. There is sufficient flexibility in that provision to allow the legislature to take care of specific instances I think that Mr. Shannon may have in mind.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. SHANNON

Yes, sir. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Ladies and gentlemen, may I read to you from the Local and Parochial Government Article, Section 29. Prescription Against the State. "Prescription shall not run against the state in any civil matter unless otherwise provided in this constitution, or expressly by law." This only runs against the...this is only protection for the state property, and under definitions in this section; the levee boards come under governmental agencies and is not covered. So, I wish that you would think, and think hard, because as I said before, and I repeat again, all of this acreage was given to the levee districts by the State of Louisiana, and it should be treated as such.

I ask for your favorable support of this amendment.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted: 58-31. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Amendment No. 1. Page 2, between lines 22 and 23, add the following:

"A mineral servitude or royalty interest in land reserved by a vendor shall not expire through the prescription of nonuse."

Explanation

MR. GUARISCO

Mr. Chairman, members of the convention, this is a technical amendment....

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Guarisco...before we go on, I would presume, it's difficult to say, but we ought to indicate one way or the other whether this would follow the Paragraph (B), and be part of Paragraph (B) on prescription, or come before it. I would, perhaps at second thinking, it might fit into that Paragraph (B) on prescription and add it at the end of the Shannon amendment. All right?

MR. GUARISCO

All right.

[Motion to limit debate to fifteen minutes adopted: 58-24.]

MR. GUARISCO

Mr. Chairman and members of the convention, the state of the law now in Louisiana insofar as minerals and the land thereon is like this.

A person who sells his land cannot reserve his minerals for more than ten years, or ten years from which time bona fide drilling operations cease. That is, I don't have the freedom to sell my property, or to sell my minerals separately. If you come to me as a vendee and say, "Tony, I want to buy your property," and I say, "No, I don't want to sell my property because of the prospect of minerals..." I might have minerals on my property one day so I think I'll keep it. You can't pay me enough for the minerals and the land. So that land remains in my hands. I'm able to board that property. I don't have to sell it. I mean, I won't sell it because... not because of the land, but for the prospect of drilling, and the prospect of oil wealth. Now what this amendment will do is simply this; now, those of you who don't understand this prescription, it works like this: suppose the same fellow comes to me, asks me for that property, and I say, "Look, I'll sell it to you, but I want to keep the minerals."

And the fellow says, "All I want is the land. I don't want the minerals. You can have them. You can keep them. All I want to do is build a subdivision, or what have you, on the land."

I look in the law book and it says, "I'm sorry. I would give you...I would keep the minerals and sell you the land, but I am prohibited by law from

....I cannot reserve the minerals." After ten years, the minerals are going to vest title in the new owner of the property, whether or not I, in fact, wanted that to happen. I can put in the deed that I want to keep the minerals for fifty years...I want to keep them for myself forever, or to sell them to some other party. I cannot do that by law. I am not free to contract.

Now, what happens in this situation? First of all, let's go back to why that's there. It's not there because the Louisiana Legislature necessarily...it's there because that is in the French Civil Code. In Fourteenth Century France, the French did not envision futuristic wealth under the ground. Therefore, we are stuck with that archaic law that in the Twentieth Century. Now, what's happened is a practical result. Persons all over the state, especially in south Louisiana where land is scarce--there's a lot of water, but not much land in some places--industry wants to own land. They don't want to lease land. But the owner won't sell his property because they may have minerals there one day. Small owners, middle owners, large landowners, no one will sell their property because in ten years they are going to lose the minerals, come what may. What I propose to do here is to allow a person to sell his land, and keep the minerals, if he, and the contracting party agree. Like in any other contract. If he keeps the minerals, he can either enjoy the wealth if it comes one day, or he may decide to sell it to someone else sometime. But, at least it will take this land and put it into commerce.

Now, someone might argue. Yes, but you are going to have all the mineral wealth in the hands of a few. Well, that argument doesn't hold weight for the simple reason that now you have...that the precious few have the land and the minerals. They have both. A classic example of that is in St. Mary Parish near the community of Berwick. The Whitney Bank, years ago, foreclosed on some property--thousands of acres of land--near the community of Berwick. The Whitney Bank has no reason to keep that land. They don't want to develop it. They would like to dispose of it. But they cannot dispose of that land because of the possibility of its prospective minerals. So, what happens? The bank has the minerals and the land. Now, with this amendment, they could sell the land for whatever development that might ensue, and they could keep the minerals. Or they could sell them, and what have you. The other forty-nine states have this possibility. Now, some people are going to come up here and say, "Yes, but what about title examination?"

Well, that's just the job of the attorney. He can simply check the title, parallel to parallel title of the minerals, or, as opposed to the title of the land. I don't see any big problem in that area.

I yield to any questions.

Further Discussion

MR. SMITH

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this is not only a bad amendment, it is a terrible amendment. I've practiced law for forty-four years, and forty of those have been in oil territories where I do a lot of mineral practice. If a vendor reserves the minerals for ten years non-usage, they come back to him. But, this will not only keep property out of commerce. When a person buys a piece of property and it goes to a....check the title.... a lawyer checks the title....he can find out the minerals have been reserved. He don't know, I mean, he never can get titles straight. I don't think he needs any argument in favor of it because I think this is a bad amendment. I think it will.... we shouldn't have it in Louisiana. It'd be just like Texas and Arkansas. So, I ask you all, please, to vote against this amendment so we can keep titles to property straight in Louisiana. Keep it like it is--ten years non-usage, and it will go out of date.

Question

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Smith, because this amendment...I'm asking you a question.... don't you think that this amendment is so bad, and such a terribly cataclysmic change in Louisiana law, and actually, that almost everybody speaking on it is against it, don't you think that we could move the previous question. We could move on to something else?

MR. SMITH

Yes, sir. I'll do that. We don't want to be like Texas and Arkansas. That's the way they are. So....I now move the previous question....

[Previous Question ordered: 59-27. Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected: 9-86. Motion to reconsider.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, between lines 22 and 23, delete Floor Amendment No. 3 proposed by Delegate Shannon and adopted by the convention on the 18th in its entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"(B) Prescription. Lands and mineral interests of the state, any school board, and any levee district shall not be lost by prescription."

Explanation

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this amendment retains the concept of the Shannon amendment, but makes two additions to it. The first addition is the change that we have discussed with Mr. Shannon. It was his intent that the interest he was speaking about which could not be prescribed against, were mineral interests, so we add the word "mineral" to make that plain.

Secondly, we have added "school boards" to "levee districts", the reason being, the same reason that Mr. Shannon set forth with regard to levee districts, that the Supreme Court has stated in prior cases that the state, although we have classified it in this constitution, and although rationally it should be so classified as a political subdivision of the state, we have called it here a local governmental subdivision, did not share the attribute of the state's immunity from prescription. There have been school boards in this state that have lost land as a result of this interpretation.

Therefore, I am asking you to put school boards in here to make it plain, to leave no room for interpretation.

In the local government article, we made the simple statement that prescription would not run against the state in any civil matter. We did that in Section 29. I'm afraid we would run into the same interpretation, perhaps, in the courts again. But, since you didn't specify school boards, that we are going to apply the same law that existed prior to this time and say that school boards are not immune from prescription.

Questions

MR. SHANNON

Mr. Burson, you already stated that I agreed, but I would like to agree to this full convention here that this is a good amendment, and I approve of it.

MR. BURSON

Thank you, Mr. Shannon.

MR. BOLLINGER

Jack, I think you have a good amendment, also. My question is this. If we include school boards, do we have to include local government subdivisions and municipalities in every other branch of local government?

Or does school boards have a special class that have to be included?

MR. BURSON

I considered using the term, "local governmental subdivisions," but the problem there is, we included "special districts" in that definition. Frankly, I've never looked at the law in that area. I don't know what it is now at all. I do know what the law is in the area of school boards, just as Mr. Shannon did with regard to levee districts, and that's why I felt that the question would include this.

103rd Days Proceedings—December 18, 1973

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

Section 9. Minerals Beyond Three-Mile Limit
"Section 9. All revenues and royalties from minerals located beyond the three-mile limit of the coastal waterways of the state shall be the property of the state. All funds derived therefrom shall be deposited in the state treasury and used in the purchase, retirement, and payment of the bonded indebtedness of the state".

Explanation

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, as you know the... as I understand it the United States... the Supreme Court has ruled that the State of Louisiana does not own any minerals beyond the three-mile limit. We discussed this at great length in our committee and thought it would be wise because there always is the possibility since this particular area is always centered around controversy and in litigation, etc., that maybe one day down the road that this may be changed. In an effort to take into consideration this possibility out of an abundance of caution we voted, I think, unanimously, I believe, I think I'm correct, to leave this section in. What it basically does is dedicate any funds derived from minerals beyond the three-mile limit if there should be some down the road in the future to the retirement of the state's bonded indebtedness.

Questions

MR. ABRAHAM

Why did you put in this specification of the dedication that they must be used for the retirement of the bonds?

MR. LAMBERT

Because it was in....

MR. ABRAHAM

What particular reason for that?

MR. LAMBERT

We didn't change... we left it as it was. In other words, we shortened it somewhat, but we basically did not change the substantive meaning of the provision and it was just this way in the present constitution and we left it just as it was.

MR. ABRAHAM

Well, I appreciate that, but in view of the fact that we were trying to undedicate as many of these funds as we can and in view of the fact that Revenue and Finance Article says that the first monies received will go toward the retirement of the bonds; do you feel that this language is necessary?

MR. LAMBERT

Well, I don't see any particular reason why we couldn't leave it as it is unless you just want to amend that section... that part out of it on dedication of revenues. As I said, and I'll be the first one to admit, this may be unnecessary the entire provision, but we didn't want to be accused of not taking sufficient caution to provide for something that possibly could occur down the road in the future, so we left it as it was.

MR. WILLIS

Senator, I, of course, applaud the provision; however, do you think that "coastal waterways" is the right word? Would it not be "coast" or "coastline" or "coastal boundary"? You know the... where the coastline is is also litigious matter. Do you understand what I'm talking about?

MR. LAMBERT

Yes, sir, I do and I think that .....

MR. WILLIS

"Coastal waterways" does not signify. Does that come within the ambit of the word to use?

MR. LAMBERT

What we did is that we did not change the language that was in the present constitution and that is the reason we left it as it was.

MR. WILLIS

I understand, but that's....

MR. LAMBERT

You may be correct, but it....

MR. WILLIS

Does that conform with the criteria used by the United States Supreme Court in all of the tidelands litigation with respect to the three-mile limit? It does; I'm sorry.

MR. LAMBERT

It does. Yes.

MR. CHATELAIN

Senator Lambert, just a point of clarification, the first line it says "all revenues and royalties from minerals located beyond the three-mile limit." Isn't that a little ambiguous? Shouldn't it be all state revenue... looks like the word "state" should be because we don't have any control over three miles beyond that point. That's a question that has kind of got me bugged a little bit.

MR. LAMBERT

Well, I just... I prefaced my remarks by stating that the U.S. Supreme Court as I understand it, has decided that we do not have a claim beyond the three-mile limit. However, there are times when positions are reversed and out of an abundance of caution, and in an effort to be extra careful we didn't want to do anything to jeopardize any possible future claim that the state may have down the road. That's the reason we left it as it was.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Senator Lambert, I know this might be very far distantly in ideas, but you didn't make any provision in the event that all of these bonds indebtedness was paid off. What happens to the funds if they're paid off?

MR. LAMBERT

I can't hear you, Senator. I'm sorry.

MR. DE BLIEUX

I say I see no provision in the article for what's going to happen to the funds if all of this indebtedness might be paid off? Now, I know that's a farfetched possibility, but in the event that it does happen looks like we ought to take care of that.

MR. LAMBERT

If that happens we'll offer... you and I will coauthor a constitutional amendment to change that provision. How does that sound?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, I have an amendment to do just that right now on that.

MR. LAMBERT

That would be a glorious day in our state when we have no bonded indebtedness.

MR. STAGG

Senator Lambert, at glancing at this PAR analysis I found something for the first time I did not realize that in the present law that any monies we get from the settlement of the tidelands dispute would be used to retire existing indebtedness and in their comment they state that you could use this... these monies under the language of Section 9 to pay off current and new bonds; is that the purpose of your section?

MR. LAMBERT

I think that it would put the state in a position to... first of all the bonds, as I understand it, they would have to be callable and redeemable. I don't think you can pay off just any bonds that you want to pay off. But, I think it would place the state in a position to be selective on choosing the bonds that would be most advantageous to have paid off looking at the interest rate. In other words, the higher interest rate obviously would be the ones that I would like to see the state pay off first, and I'm sure you would and I'm sure that's what would occur. If it's a three or four percent interest rate, of course, it would be to our advantage probably to leave them alone.

MR. STAGG

I need to stretch your mind a little bit now and I know what I'm about to tell you or say to you is a relatively hypothetical question. There is litigation now... I mean legislation now going to be proposed mostly by states along the eastern seaboard. Some of this legislation has been fomented by the governor's committee on offshore revenues. The purpose of the legislation is to get these eastern states to allow drilling off of their shores and a part of the package is going to be the thirty-seven and a half percent of the revenues from those drilling operations will go to the adjoining states. If such legislation passes the Congress under the current engery crisis that will redound to Louisiana's benefit and we will get thirty-seven and a half percent of the revenues out beyond the three-mile limit.-

MR. LAMBERT Correct.

MR. STAGG
Under this set of facts, is your language in Section 9 too restrictive?

MR. LAMBERT
Mr. Stagg, I don't think it is, but I may be incorrect. I think that it's, in my own opinion and from the people that I've watched in government looking at it from a prudent standpoint, it's always wise, as I understand it, to put your first dollar on bonded indebtedness if you're in a position to do that, because that would obviously free more money to go into... that's not that doesn't have to be set up in the... I think it's the Bond Redemption Fund and it, of course, it would go into the general fund and free money to be used for hospitals and schools, etc.

MR. STAGG
If in five years that source produced a billion dollars....

MR. LAMBERT
If that occurred....

MR. HENRY
Gentleman has exceeded his time, sir.

Amendment

Explanation

MR. POYNTER
Mr. Casey is going to handle them.
Amendment No. 1. On page 3, delete lines 8 through 14, both inclusive, in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:
"Section 9. Tidelands Ownership
Section 9. Revenues and royalties obtained from minerals located beyond the three-mile limit of the coastal waterways of the state belong to the state."

MR. CASEY
Mr. Chairman and delegates, I think it has been adequately brought out already by some of the questioning that indicates that the last sentence of Section 9 may possibly be too restrictive in that, if we do have a windfall of money coming in from revenues and royalties from offshore areas, that it may be, for instance, more profitable to the State of Louisiana to invest that money and get a ten percent return on it rather than being forced into a position of retiring bonds at three, four, or five percent. So, it could mean millions each year if we got a hundred million dollars in any one year; it's certainly better to invest that at ten percent and get ten million dollars a year rather than retire bonds at four percent and, therefore, lose what's the equivalent of six million dollars a year. I'd urge adoption of this amendment.
I understand the committee has no objection to it.

Questions

MR. CONROY
I was just going to ask you, Mr. Casey, that doesn't Section 11 of the Revenue, Finance and Taxation Committee proposal already take care of allocating some of this to the appropriate payment of bonds, so that this in a sense is unnecessary; the language that was in here about bonding indebtedness?

MR. CASEY
As I recall, I think, it does.

MR. JENKINS
Tom, you said that it would be much better for the state to invest this money and get nine or ten percent than to pay off these bonds that may be three or four percent bonds. That would be fine if the state were going to invest all of this money at nine or ten percent, but in fact, won't this money simply be budgeted and spent rather than retiring these bonds if we delete this provision?

MR. CASEY
Woody, I think the legislature would hesitate to spend this type of money on frivolities. I think it would be.... it's certainly good to retire bonds if at all possible, but to mandate the retirement of bonds, I would question the prudence of doing... mandsting that requirement. Perhaps, it may be better to use money coming in on capital improvements, for instance, and I think we must maintain the flexibility in order to accomplish that in the future.

MR. JENKINS
But, haven't you seen a number of legislators propose and even pass resolutions and even acts in some cases dedicating this money--particularly tidelands money--time and time again, and that hasn't been too responsible, has it?

MR. CASEY
Woody, there's no question that a legislature, whether it be Louisiana or any other state can certainly act irresponsibly, but my point is we should maintain the flexibility whereby if the funds become available, that wise use would be made and put to this money that would come in.

Further Discussion

MR. PEREZ
Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I really do not have any strong feelings as to whether these funds be dedicated or not dedicated, but I would like to explain to you the origin of this particular provision and to try to straighten out some of the language in it. This provision was included because of the fact that we had the hope that someday we might receive some settlement from the United States Government of the tidelands beyond the boundary of the State of Louisiana. Unfortunately, that whoever prepared the original provision lived under the misconception that Louisiana has a three-mile limit. It has been the position of the state from the very beginning that the boundary of the State of Louisiana is three leagues from coast and not a three-mile limit. I realize that we have had our reversals before the United States Supreme Court, but I do believe that it would be very, very bad practice on the part of our constitutional convention if we know that the position of our state is that we hold to the claim of three-miles from coast and we would put in a provision which would reiterate a three-mile limit. So, therefore, I have no serious objection to the amendment provided the author is agreeable to striking the words "three-mile limit of the coastal waterways" and putting in there "beyond the boundary of the state" because I repeat again, that the purpose of this provision was to use the funds which we might receive from the federal government such as thirty-seven and half percent which is paid to some of the inland states for mineral production on lands owned within the state. Those are generally called in lieu of taxation type of payments because of the fact that because the federal government doesn't pay taxes on the land it owns it in turn returns to the states at the local governments a percentage of its royalty income to compensate it for the taxes which cannot be collected. The same theory was being used and that same claim is being made in Congress today to attempt to receive from the federal government a portion of those royalties which are produced outside of the boundary of the state. I would therefore, like to urge that if the author is agreeable to an amendment to say "outside the boundary of the state," I don't really care one way or another whether we dedicate it or don't dedicate it, but please, let's don't put this constitutional convention in a position of not knowing what the claim of the state is with respect to its offshore boundaries.

Questions

MRS. MILLER
Mr. Perez, I'm sorry this is not in the nature of a question, but I do want you to know I think it is a true technical amendment that makes us technically correct in our verbiage here and I certainly want to go along with you on that.

MR. PEREZ
All right. I might say to you that the United States Supreme Court held in a case of Florida that because it did have a provision in its constitution with respect to its boundary, the State of Florida ended up getting everything it claimed because it was in the constitution. The one thing I don't want to do here is to have something in the constitution which might take something away from us, a very serious error.

Further Discussion

MR. CASEY

Mr. Chairman, I think, Mr. Perez is correct. I see he has an amendment up there to change the words "three-mile limit" to "boundary." I think it would certainly... I think it would be appropriate to withdraw the amendment and merge Mr. Perez's wording into this particular amendment, and I so....

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Would read the text as follows: --one change--
"Section 9. Tidelands Ownership
Section 9. Revenues and royalties obtained from minerals located beyond the seaward boundary of the state belong to the state."

Explanation

MR. CASEY

Mr. Chairman, I've already explained it. The wording "three-mile limit of the coastal waterways" has now been changed to the "seaward boundary" of Louisiana for the reasons that were explained by Mr. Perez.

Questions

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Casey, when it says "revenues and royalties obtained from minerals located beyond the seaward boundary." Does that mean that all minerals out there belong to the state not to those who exploit them and not to anyone else? What does it mean, revenues and royalties obtained from minerals belong to the state?

MR. CASEY

That's correct. That's what it's intended to mean...

MR. JENKINS

All of them belong to the state.

MR. CASEY

... belong to the state.

MR. JENKINS

So, in other words, if the state or the federal government grants a lease out there then those minerals belong... or the revenues from those minerals belong to the state?

MR. CASEY

Yes, that's correct. Then what?

MR. JENKINS

Why would anyone ever exploit them if all the revenues belonged to the state?

MR. CASEY

Well, Mr. Jenkins, as I understand it, that's the dispute. They either belong to the state or the federal government and we're claiming them.

MR. JENKINS

How... you say "beyond the seaward boundary." The "seaward boundary" I suppose, would begin where the sea begins; is that correct?

MR. CASEY

Well, of course, that's what Mr. Perez explained. That's what he feels is still open to dispute and interpretation and may be another court decision... is it three miles or is it ten miles?

MR. JENKINS

Well, how far out does that boundary... how far out does the area go, the complete continental shelf or what?

MR. CASEY

The boundary, as I understand it, even in the court disputes has not really been permanently decided yet.

MR. JENKINS

Now, the United States of America claims territorial jurisdiction only to three miles, but here we are claiming all revenues and royalties for minerals located as far out as you can imagine; I suppose the entire continental shelf, is that correct?

MR. CASEY

That's correct, Mr. Jenkins.

MR. ALEXANDER

Mr. Casey, is not the intent of the last addition to the amendment to clarify the question that Louisiana is not surrendering between three and ten miles, that in effect, Louisiana is saying as we've always said that Louisiana has a right to ten and half miles out? Isn't that correct? Now, notwithstanding what the government said... the federal government said; isn't that correct?

MR. CASEY

Well, Reverend Alexander, there are two purposes in the amendment. First, is to delete the second section of Section 9 so that there will not be a permanent requirement that bonds be retired. That's primarily the reason for the amendment. The Perez amendment was merged into the Derbes amendment, and I just happened to be handling the Derbes amendment. The Perez amendment deletes the three-mile limit and intends to use boundaries because the boundary line has not been definitely decided yet, and there's some question about the use of the words "three-mile limit," and that is even subject to a final decision by a court.

MR. ALEXANDER

But, if the federal government which imposes the three-mile limit and Louisiana says, "No, it is not three, it's ten and half or three leagues," isn't that right?

MR. CASEY

That's correct, Reverend...

MR. ALEXANDER

We're saying that in court, aren't we?

MR. CASEY

We're not giving up the ship yet.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: 88-3. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Point of Information

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Chairman, would you be good enough to ask the Clerk to read the amendment you just asked me to punch my machine on because I'm not sure exactly what I voted on?

[Section 9 reread as amended. Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 91-3. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

Next section -- you want to go on to ten, Senator--is that right? All right.

"Section 10. Offshore and Mineral Revenues; Use of Funds

Section 10. Funds derived from offshore mineral leases and held in escrow under agreement between the state and the United States pending settlement of the dispute between the parties shall be deposited in the state treasury. Those funds and the interest from their investment, except the portion otherwise dedicated in this constitution to the Royalty Road Fund or to public education, shall be used by the treasurer in the purchase, retirement, and payment in advance of maturity of the bonded indebtedness of the state.

If any of these funds cannot be so expended within one year, the legislature may annually appropriate for capital improvements, or for the purchase of land, ten percent of the remaining funds, not to exceed ten million dollars in one year."

Explanation

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, Section 10 headed... entitled Offshore Mineral Revenues; Use of Funds. Section 10 deals with mineral revenues located not beyond... within the three miles boundary. Presently, as I understand it, our state is involved in litigation concerning the disposition of funds located within the three mile limit. One of the issues or possibly the main issue that's involved, as I understand it, is to determine actually where our coastline is so that we will know where the three mile figure starts. What this does, it keeps any funds that in the future we may get from a settlement of this dispute, puts them in escrow under the agreement between the state and the United States pending settlement of the dispute. It also provides for the investment of these funds, except the portion otherwise dedicated in this constitution to the royalty road fund or to public education. It provides that the balance be used to retire the state's bonded indebtedness as did the previous article. It also provides that if any of the funds cannot be expended within one year, the legislature has the authority annually, to appropriate money for capital improvement or for the purchase of land, ten percent of the remaining funds not to exceed ten million dollars in any one given year. Basically what this does is retain the source provision in our present constitution.

I'll yield to any questions.

Questions

MRS. ZERVIGON

Senator Lambert, as Mr. Smith says, "It's getting kind of late," and maybe I'm kind of thick. Can you tell me exactly why you put this in, in view especially of the fact that we took the dedication out of the previous section? Is there any reason to pass this section? Is there anything the legislature could do under this that they couldn't do otherwise?

MR. LAMBERT

Why we put what in? The dedication?

MRS. ZERVIGON

Section 10.

MR. LAMBERT

The entire section? We left it in because it was in our present constitution and the committee just did not want to do anything to jeopardize the tidelands dispute or settlement. This had been set up in accordance with an agreement between the, as I understand it, the United States government and the State of Louisiana; pending any settlement it provided for a place to escrow the money. We did not want to do anything to take away from the intent of the constitutional provision. As a result of that, we adopted it almost as it was. We tried to shorten it as much as we could, and we shortened it quite a bit. But, we tried to retain the substance that was in the source provision.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Well, it's your opinion, then, that the federal government is going to care how we dedicate these funds after we get them?

MR. LAMBERT

No, the federal...no, it's not. I mean I'm not...Look, if you don't agree with the dedication of funds, that's your prerogative, certainly. Is that your objection, Mary? Is that your main objection or is it just....

MRS. ZERVIGON

I'm kind of thick on this subject overall, but I just don't quite understand why this particular section is here, that's all.

MR. LAMBERT

Because it's in the present constitution and there was a purpose for it there. We felt that the purpose still existed, so we left it the part of the section that deals with the dedication of funds is certainly left up to the wishes of this body.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Well, now escrow would still exist even if we didn't have this here; any such monies would still be going into escrow, isn't that so?

MR. LAMBERT

Yes.

MR. ABRAHAM

In view of the fact that this whole section will become obsolete in time, would not it be better to simply let the transitional measures take care of transposing the present constitution into the statutes to be... "could only be changed by a super majority of the legislature"? The thing would still exist, would it not?

MR. LAMBERT

All I can say to that...in response to that, Mr. Abraham, is this: You may possibly be right. But, we just did not want to do anything to tamper with the existing tideland dispute and in an effort to not do this, we tried to keep intact as best we could the existing, the source provision, in our present constitution. We shortened it as much as we could and certainly this is an area where we certainly...our ears are open, and we certainly don't think we have the final answer.

MR. STAGG

Senator, isn't Section 9...doesn't Section 9 have to do with those minerals that are beyond our seaward boundary and Section 10 have to do with those mineral leases and the revenue from them that are within our seaward boundary?

MR. LAMBERT

That's exactly right; that's what I said earlier.

MR. STAGG

All right. Now, this refers in Section 10 simply to those mineral leases that are held in escrow. Would it not be appropriate to eliminate the distinction about offshore mineral leases and just have the funds derived from all offshore mineral leases to be deposited in the state treasury and their use, or as further provided in your proposed section?

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Stagg, what you say makes good sense.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

First amendment sent up by Delegate Derbes, joined by Delegate Casey.

Amendment No. 1. On page 3, delete lines 15 through 29, both inclusive, in their entirety.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I'm just handling this for Mr. Derbes who submits this to delete the entirety of Section 10. It is my understanding that the only purpose, or the real purpose, of Section 10--and I'll certainly stand corrected by the committee if the committee deems appropriate--the true purpose, as I understand, is the dedication of the funds, that there's no requirement that this provision be contained in the constitution for the purpose of whatever agreement may exist between the State of Louisiana and the United States and that the true purpose is the dedication of funds which we have already deleted in the preceding paragraph. I urge the adoption of the amendment.

Questions

MR. BURSON

Tom, I can understand as a legislator that you have some hostility to dedication of funds. But, don't you think it would be a good idea that if the state gets a substantial amount of money in the nature of a windfall that the first call on that money be to pay off some outstanding indebtedness?

MR. CASEY

Mr. Burson, at the time of receipt of the funds if it would be in the best interest of the state, I should think that would be the first priority. However, as I mentioned in arguing on the amendment on Section 9, rather than have this requirement contained in the constitution---it may not be in the best interest of the state at that time to retire the bonds because of the possibility of investing the money, first of all, at a higher interest rate because of the importance of projected capital improvements that may be pending on the legislative plans and proposals at the time; it just depends. All I'm suggesting is that it may be better to remain flexible. So, the answer is yes. That's the ideal, I think, to retire the bonds, but is it the best five years from now? I really don't know.

MR. BURSON

Well, would you see, also, the possibility though that the money could be squandered, as it often is unfortunately when it's not budgeted ahead of time?

MR. CASEY

Mr. Burson, I think Mr. Jenkins asked a similar question during the argument on Section 9, and I'm the first to admit that maybe the money may not be used prudently. But, I think on money of this type, onwindfalls of this type, the news media and the people of Louisiana are looking very closely over the shoulders of the legislators. I think the legislators know full well that they have got to use these funds prudently and invest them properly.

103rd Days Proceedings—December 18, 1973

MR. KEAN

Mr. Casey, as I read Section 10, it is talking about funds held in escrow pending a dispute with the United States government and no other funds, is it not?

MR. CASEY

That's my understanding, Mr. Kean.

MR. KEAN

And, it further provides that those funds and the interest from their investment would be used for these purposes. As I read that, it would permit the wise investment of these funds if it was desirable to do so. All it does is commit the funds ultimately to the retirement of these bonds. Don't you think that's a reasonable approach to the handling of these one-time funds?

MR. CASEY

Well, it's hard to determine exactly what this means, Mr. Kean, because as I understand the reading of this requires that the funds be used in accord with the requirements contained in lines 21 through 24 and then maybe 25 through 29, as somebody mentioned in my ear. The investment probably...the interest from the investment might be just on those funds that are left over. I'm not sure exactly what it means. I just don't think we need it and, of course, if there is a need for it being contained in the constitution, I'm the first to admit that leave it there, but I just don't think that it's necessary.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

I have two short questions, one is: Can we spend money that's in escrow? And the money's in escrow; can you spend it?

MR. CASEY

Well, Mr. Champagne, that's the very question I have. If money's in escrow I don't see how it is available to us.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

And, the next question I have is: If we did pay off the bonds, do you think the legislature would have any trouble creating others, so that we'd have something to spend it on?

MR. CASEY

Well, Mr. Champagne, I think you hit the nail on the head. Let's face it, what you can't do through the front door can be accomplished through the back door, so I think you are exactly right, we are just kidding ourselves.

Further Discussion

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, let me see if I can get this situation in its proper perspective. Some many years ago when the tidelands controversy had been hanging for many years, the State of Louisiana and the federal government entered into an agreement in which they established Zone 1, Zone 2, Zone 3, and I believe Zone 4. With respect to Zone 1, it was acknowledged and recognized that the State of Louisiana had title to all the water bottoms in there. With respect to Zone 2, the area in which there was the greatest controversy, there was an agreement that whichever agency, whether the state or the federal government, was holding royalties attributable to that particular area, that they would put those funds in escrow and hold those funds until the final termination of the suit. Well, as you know, the tidelands controversy is still in litigation, the location of a coastline from which the boundary of the state is measured is still in controversy. We have been working on that for a number of years and it will probably be another two, three, or four years before that's finally decided. So, that the purpose of Section 10 was to say those funds which are being held in escrow--held by the State of Louisiana or for that matter held by the United States, because it says "and held in escrow under the agreement between the state and the United States." So, it's possible either both the state or the United States may be holding those funds...holding those funds; that any monies derived from this Zone 2 or possibly Zone 3 upon the final settlement of the tidelands controversy would be used for the retirement of the state debt. Now, that's basically what this provision calls for. Lines 25 through 28 are an attempt in three or four lines to shorten and codify what goes on for several pages in the constitution --I'm not sure it really does it. But the primary purpose of lines 15 through 24 is to say those funds in escrow in the tidelands dispute, if and when we ever get any part of it, those monies will be used for the retirement of the state debt. I, therefore, suggest we should keep the provision. If this particular so-called windfall ever comes or this particular large sum of money comes, it would help tremendously in reducing the burden of the taxpayers of the state with that high interest cost.

Questions

MR. AVANT

Mr. Perez, I'm confused and I'm really seeking information. You talk about an agreement on escrow funds and then...escrow funds to me are funds that are idle, I mean, they may not be idle, they may be drawing interest, but it's money you don't spend because you don't know who it belongs to and you may sooner or later have to give it to somebody else.

MR. PEREZ

That's correct.

MR. AVANT

And, yet, this thing...this section doesn't speak about spending that money when there is a settlement and it's determined what we get; it talks about spending it, and the way I read it, spending it now. The only thing that bothers me or that I'm concerned about is I wouldn't want to put anything in here that would be contrary to some agreement that had been made with the United States so that it would give them an excuse, then, to come in and say, "Oh, you've violated the agreement, now we are going to take it over."

MR. PEREZ

Well, I must agree with you, sir. This is not as articulately prepared as I would like to see it, but that's the meaning of it.

MR. AVANT

The meaning is then that it will only be spent when there is a final settlement?

MR. PEREZ

There is no other way because they can't violate the provisions of the escrow agreement.

Further Discussion

MR. CONROY

All right. I join Mr. Perez in opposition to the Derbes-Casey amendment. I think to understand the opposition you really have to understand that Section 10 is vastly different from Section 9 or from other revenues which the state has. The other revenues which the state has are continuing matters. Section 10 explicitly deals only with one situation in which the state will receive, hopefully, a great deal of money in one year; it is not a continuing thing; it won't continue after that point as far as what Section 10 deals with. Section 10 deals only with the receipt by the state of a significant sum of money in one year. What it says is when the state gets that money, the first call on that money is going to be to retire state debt. Then, thereafter, the state can spend off, if there is anything left over, over a period of ten years at ten percent a year not to exceed ten million dollars a year. The possibility is envisaged here that it could be a really tremendous sum of money. I think we cannot guess...we can always hope that we have a fine legislature but it may just happen that in the particular year that that sum is paid out of the escrow fund, that maybe that year we don't have such a red-hot legislature and they may have some other ideas about how to spend all that money that suddenly comes into their hands. I think that this provision as written in the present constitution and carried forward in Section 10 is a most wise provision. I think it would be very unwise of this convention to adopt the amendment before you. I urge you to reject the amendment that's been presented.

Question

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Mr. Conroy, in spite of anything I might have said, I agree with you thoroughly; it's just the words I don't like.

MR. CONROY

Well, I think Mr. Perez and I would both say the same thing about the wording here...the wording in the present constitution isn't all that great either. But, I think the intent is clear, the intent is to avoid the possibility of a legislature expending monies that are suddenly received in one year in a great windfall for something other than first seeing to it that this state's debt is taken care of.

103rd Days Proceedings—December 18, 1973

Further Discussion

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I'll be very brief. I rise in opposition to the Derbes amendment. I voted against the Casey amendment which, in effect, made Section 9 of no moment. The only purpose that Section 9 really had to begin with was to dedicate the funds. But, I can see a difference between Section 9 and Section 10. Section 9 was dealing with oil revenues and royalties derived from lands located beyond the seaward boundary. It seems to me there is some merit to the point that all of those funds should not be tied up with bond retirement. But, in Section 10 where we are dealing with a special fund, then it seems to me that the recommendation of the committee which carries forward language in the present constitution which was placed in that constitution--and a relatively short period of time ago--is a good use of the funds. I would urge that you defeat the Derbes amendment and adopt Section 10 as recommended by the committee.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Stagg, you want your amendment, sir?

Mr. Stagg sends up amendments reading as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 3, delete lines 17 and 18 in their entirety and at the beginning of line 19, delete the words "the parties".

Explanation

MR. STAGG

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, at this particular time there is a lawyer up in Memphis named Armstrong whom the Supreme Court of the United States appointed to be a special master to determine where the seaward boundary of the State of Louisiana actually begins. In this litigation which has been going on since 19... well almost twenty years, the State of Louisiana hasn't come out too well. We have a certain area that is all ours. In the amendment or in the provision in Section 10, as contrasted with Section 9, remember Section 9 only deals with revenues that the state might get from some future happenstance where the state would gain from those parts of the federal domain way beyond our boundary and that money ought not to be dedicated. But, I think the money from the lands that are those of the State of Louisiana, not just those that are in escrow, ought to be used for the payment of bonded indebtedness of this state. The benefits from it will accrue to every citizen because of the enormous amount of our annual appropriations that go to pay interest on outstanding state bonds. When those bonds have been paid off, then the state citizens can gain a long needed tax break because a great deal of money would be available for that purpose. The effect of the amendment which I have offered is to make the sentence read beginning on line 16: "that funds derived from offshore mineral leases shall be deposited in the treasury and that, thereafter, those funds and interest shall be used in the purchase, retirement, and payment in advance of maturity of bonded indebtedness of the state." Now, you are going to have a choice this afternoon as you have had since this convention began because right behind the amendment which I have proposed comes an amendment by Mr. De Blieux to knock out everything beyond line 19 which would cause the funds coming from offshore leases to go into the state treasury to be used any way the legislature sees fit. I don't agree with that amendment. I think this money which is in the nature of a birthright of our people should be used for the benefit of all the citizens by getting off of the backs of all of the citizens of this state our enormous growing bonded indebtedness; that's the purpose of my amendment. I urge you to adopt it.

Questions

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Stagg, these funds if they are offshore funds, what do you consider, how do you define offshore funds? Wouldn't it be any money that we get outside of the boundaries of the state?

MR. STAGG

All of the monies received by the state in that area between our boundary and it's three mile limit out from that boundary which will be eventually determined by the Supreme Court.

MR. DE BLIEUX

I don't believe we have a definition to that extent, you see, and that's where I think that...what you have left in there is important because we do have, as you know, don't we have a dispute existing now about that? Isn't that those funds which we are talking about? Shouldn't it be defined as to exactly what funds, because otherwise, it looks like to me any funds we get offshore would be included in what you say in this part?

MR. STAGG

You have understood my amendment perfectly.

Further Discussion

MR. CONROY

I, also, oppose this amendment because this does violence to what was proposed by the committee in a different way. The proposal by the committee as I explained before was to take care of a one-time situation and to dedicate that to the payment of debt; I think that's appropriate. I think it's just as inappropriate to dedicate to the payment of all debt the continuing revenues from all offshore revenues as I do the relieving of that single fund. What Mr. Stagg does by this amendment is saying not only the funds from the area in dispute offshore but all funds from offshore leases, that's including a great number of leases within the three mile limit that the state presently derives rather substantial revenues from, that all of that would first be dedicated to the payment of debts; monies the state is presently receiving and using for other purposes would now have to first be dedicated to the payment of debt. I think that that is inappropriately restrictive on the legislature. I think that there are other purposes that may suffer a great deal of violence in this state, many projects which are funded by such revenues that I think would suffer badly from the Stagg amendment. I, therefore, urge you to reject the Stagg amendment.

Questions

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Conroy, am I correct in assuming that Mr. Stagg's amendment would provide that all revenues derived, whether offshore or not--I mean offshore so to speak, whether beyond the three mile limit or within the three mile limit, would have to go to retire the bonded indebtedness of this state?

MR. CONROY

That's correct; that's what it would do. I don't know what you all would do for money to spend for the...to appropriate....

MR. RAYBURN

Let me ask you one other question. I know and I'm sure that you know and I know the delegates know that it's awful nice and awful good to say retire the bonded indebtedness. But, do you know that we've got some bonds in this state that are bearing a three and four-tenths percent interest, three and six-tenths, three and eight-tenths, and the money today we have invested in the banks is bringing into this state eight percent? Did you know that?

MR. CONROY

Yes. I understand that. I don't think the committee proposal, as written, would require this immediate disposition of it. But, I think that Mr. Stagg's amendment, as broadening it, would really cripple the state, I feel.

MR. RAYBURN

But, Mr. Conroy, don't you think that the state treasurer or someone should have the authority. If you have a bond that is now sold and is bearing 3.3 percent interest, what are you doing for the people of this state if you pay that bond off and draw money out of a bank that's drawing eight percent interest and pay that bond off? I mean, do you think that's good business or bad business?

MR. CONROY

No, I don't. I don't read the section as requiring that as written.

MR. STAGG

Mr. Conroy, in deference to your views I would like to withdraw my amendment.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendment No. 1. On page 3, line 21, immediately after the word "constitution" insert a comma "," and delete the remainder of the line and at the beginning of line 22, delete the words and punctuation "road fund or to public education,"

Explanation

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Chairman, I would like to withdraw that amendment at this point but before I do so, I want to state the purpose of the amendment and want to make sure that there is no conflict with what this convention has done. The purpose of this amendment was to delete the words "royalty road fund" and the dedication to education. We do not have, based upon what we have done up to this time, we do not have any dedication to the royalty road fund. The royalty fund that was dedicated has no restriction on use for road purposes or any other specific purposes such as are contained in the present constitution, and we have not dedicated any funds for education. Now, the reason I want to withdraw the amendment is I've just talked with Mr. Perez and there is some question in his mind about whether or not this would adversely affect the royalty dedication that we now have in the proposal...in Committee Proposal No. 15, Section 4 (D). I want to satisfy him so that and make sure there is no problem on it. But, I want to state the purpose of the amendment; I'm going to come back with it in perhaps some slightly changed version.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Senator De Blieux sends up amendments.

Amendment No. 1. On page 3, at the end of line 19, delete the word "Those" and delete lines 20 through 29, both inclusive, in their entirety.

Explanation

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, we took out a large portion of Section 9 and I think this is only a dedication of these funds right here. Now, as Mr. Gravel told you and it's been explained before that what we're actually doing is handicapping the operation and management of our funds. Now, I think that the present provisions that we have enacted into law give us a very good management of our funds. I certainly feel like that the proper portion of this is to get those funds and deposit them in the state treasury and then let the set-up that we have that we have enacted by a statute, now incorporated into our law by constitutional amendment, manage those funds so that we can get the best use out of them. Now, here, if you take these funds and use them for the retirement of the state debt as has been indicated, as Senator Rayburn told you, we are just going to lose the management of our funds and possibly lose a great deal of interest which the state is now being able to get from these funds if they should ever come into the state treasurer. So, I ask that you adopt this amendment and, therefore, you might say undedicate these funds so that we can get the best management out of our funds.

Further Discussion

MR. CONROY

I have explained my position on these amendments in the prior two times I've been up here. This, again, totally undedicates the funds that would be received in this lump sum disposition out of a particular fund. I think it's a mistake to unfreeze that particular dedication. It's a one-shot proposition, and I think that it ought to be used, first, for the retirement of debt.

I urge you to reject the amendment.

Questions

MR. THOMPSON

Don't you think this is wishful thinking when we have between eight and nine hundred million dollars of indebtedness already? I don't think they're going to get that bonded off. I don't know what the purpose of an amendment like this would do.

MR. CONROY

Well, I don't know what it would do, either, except it would undoubtedly be. . . I think the danger is the money would be used for some other purpose. It's well worthwhile to use it to retire the debt.

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Conroy, Mr. De Blieux has several amendments. This is the one to delete 19 through 29, isn't it?

MR. CONROY

That's my understanding, yes.

MR. JENKINS

If we delete that, do you really think that the political factors in a legislature would permit the legislature to retire bonded indebtedness, or do you think that they'd just spend this money for sort of a slush fund operation?

MR. CONROY

Well, I think if there were great political pressures for funds at that particular time, that they would probably welcome the chance to have some money to spend on any number of other projects for which they may have political pressures at that particular moment.

MR. JENKINS

So, really, this is one of the few opportunities that we have in this state, right here, right now, to insure that that money will be used in a fiscally responsible way?

MR. CONROY

Yes, and I think we should remember that this is the basic content of an amendment that was passed by the voters of this state. I don't think we should undedicate these funds in a fashion that the voters of this state had indicated they wanted it dedicated.

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Conroy, it's always been my understanding of one of the main reasons why we are here is to not tie up state funds that we have in the past, in the old constitution--that we undedicate some of these funds. Don't you agree with that?

MR. CONROY

Well, I think that's true for continuing revenues. This is a one-shot disposition of funds, Senator. I think that, as I said, I think the voters of this state have spoken on this one, and I think we should respect those views and avoid the temptation in just a one sum basis. That's all.

MR. NUNEZ

Well, Mr. Conroy, don't you agree, also, that for the first time since January of this year I'm going to be able to vote with Senator De Blieux? He's got a good amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. STAGG

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, there has been some question about the amounts of money in the disputed area that. . . in escrow that Louisiana will eventually obtain. The findings by the special master are not complete. In the back of the audience, one of the lawyers on the tideland team and I have been discussing these things, and while the funds are not exactly ascertainable, for the benefit of the delegates, we're talking about a sum somewhere in the neighborhood in excess of a hundred and fifty million dollars, at this time. Quite hopefully, on final settlement by the Supreme Court, that sum might be double that amount, but probably no more than that. For that onetime, windfall set of monies, they ought to be as the people have voted in a constitutional amendment applied to the state's bonded indebtedness that can be called and paid. I do oppose Mr. De Blieux's amendment.

Questions

MR. LANDRUM

Mr. Stagg, how much money did you. . . what was that figure again?

MR. STAGG

I stated that the funds that they may get out of those funds on escrow will be somewhere in the neighborhood of a hundred and fifty million dollars. If we are considerably fortunate by the settlement given by the special master, if that's carried forward and approved by the United States Supreme Court, it might be even more than that sum.

103rd Days Proceedings—December 18, 1973

MR. LANDRUM

Well, at that figure, then, you're talking about around ten percent?

MR. STAGG

I don't know what the total sum is in the escrow right now, Reverend Landrum.

MR. LANDRUM

Well, it's been stated that it's over a billion dollars.

MR. STAGG

I think that Louisiana's portion of the funds in escrow will likely be in the neighborhood, if not in excess of a hundred and fifty million dollars.

MR. LANDRUM

Well, so that would be somewhere near ten percent.

MR. SINGLETARY

Mr. Stagg, what about the situation where the bonds are three and a half percent interest? What you're saying is those bonds that the state only has to pay three and a half percent interest on, you want those paid off, when the money could be deposited in banks and draw eight percent for the state?

MR. STAGG

That was the point that Senator Rayburn made, but there is a constitutional amendment passed by the people that that would be what the monies would be used for.

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Stagg, isn't it true under the section, as written, that the only requirement is that the funds and the interest have to be used to pay off the bonded indebtedness? What could be done, is if we get this lump sum, it can be invested so long as we use the interest to pay off the bonded indebtedness. If we can get nine or ten percent, then we can use that nine or ten percent every year to pay off the bonded indebtedness, plus the interest, and we can come out ahead just by keeping it in the bank, as long as we don't use. . .

MR. STAGG

That's exactly correct, Mr. Jenkins. That would be the proper use of the funds.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Mr. Stagg, I agree with you that Senator De Blieux's would be a bad amendment. But, are you aware that it says, here, that the treasurer. . ."may be used by the treasurer in the purchase, retirement, and payment in advance of maturity of bonded indebtedness." So, there four percent deals, you could really make a good deal on those. In addition to that, if you wanted to further, you could add at the end, "or invested," and you would take care of this. . .

MR. STAGG

That is entirely correct, Mr. Champagne.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I'm just trying to get some good management of our funds. You've heard Senator Rayburn tell you here from this mike before, that we've got a lot of our bonds outstanding at the present time that are less than four percent. On our idle funds that we don't have the necessary need at this particular time, we are making eight percent or more on them. Now, to me--and I think anybody who has to borrow money like I have to do sometimes--it's very foolish to take eight percent money and go and pay off three percent money or four percent money when you don't have to. That's what you will be obligating this state to do, here, if you place this particular provision in this constitution. It just doesn't make good business sense. So, therefore, I ask you to go ahead and approve this amendment and let us get on and adopt this section and go on to other business.

Questions

MR. JONES

Senator, what I'd like to bring to your attention is insofar as those bonds are traded publicly, I've got some of those bonds. They are worth about sixty-five or seventy cents on the dollar. As Mr. Champagne pointed out, you've got the right to purchase. If you've got this money, you can buy your own bonds back at the market value, and if you own them, then you don't have to pay a hundred cents on the dollar. You're buying your own money back. This idea of eight percent is ridiculous, because they're all traded in the open market. All you've got to do is move out and use your money and buy my bonds--you can't buy mine, because I'm going to wait until they go to a hundred and one. But, you can buy these bonds on the open market at sixty-five percent of their current hundred percent value. This idea you're going to get eight percent is ridiculous, because what you do is--you live in a free enterprise system--and what you do is use your money to the best advantage and that is what you'd do, is you'd buy your bonds back.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, you can buy them back. . .the reason that you can buy them at that particular rate. . .

MR. JONES

I'm supposed to say, "Did you know".

MR. DE BLIEUX

The reason you can buy them at that particular rate, Mr. Jones, is because the people are not getting enough interest on them. But, I don't know whether they would be salable to the state for that particular interest, if we had to go ahead and pay them off. Now, what I'm saying is that we ought not to use eight percent money--that is, money we could get eight percent for, and we are getting eight percent on some of our money now--and use it to retire three and four percent bonds. It's just not reasonable.

MR. BURNS

Senator, do you think that anybody had any bonds that you could buy now for sixty-five or seventy cents on the dollar, that if the state got in that hundred and fifty million dollars that bond wouldn't come right back up to par or even higher?

MR. DE BLIEUX

I'm sure that it would, Mr. Burns. I agree with you. I'm sure it would if they found out the state could buy them right now, or would buy them. So, I. . .it's just good business management, and I just ask you to go ahead and approve the amendment.

ROLL CALL

[83 delegates present and a quorum.]

PRAYER

MR. STOVALL

Let us pray.

Eternal God, Father of us all, we look upon You not as a distant Creator, but as One who comes to us and is present with us in every experience and every decision. We celebrate Your presence with us in this moment, as the One who stands by us, and with us, and for us; as the One who has given to us our past, our present; and as the One who seeks to lead us into a new future. Yet, in this moment, we confess that oftentimes we have tried to hold on to the past, instead of moving with You into a new day for ourselves, our state, and all mankind; that oftentimes we have acted on the basis of expediency instead of principle; that oftentimes we rationalize what we want by saying this is what the people want. Make Yourself known to all who are assembled here this day, and enable us by Your grace, to move forward into the future You desire for us and for all mankind. For we offer our prayer in Your name, and for Your sake. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

READING AND ADOPTION OF THE JOURNAL

UNFINISHED BUSINESS

PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

MR. POYNTER

Committee Proposal No. 34, introduced by Delegate Lambert, Chairman on behalf of the Committee on Natural Resources and Environment, and other delegates, members of that committee. A substitute proposal for Committee Proposal No. 16, a proposal making provisions relating to natural resources and environment.

The convention has adopted the first five sections, as amended, a section of Section 3 which was deleted, passed over Sections 6, 7 and 8, adopted Section 9 as amended, considered Section 10, voted to pass over said section.

MR. HENRY

I believe Senator Lambert wants to go ahead and take it.

I think they resolved the problems. Am I right, Senator?

All right.

Do we have amendments to Section 10?

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Gravel sends up amendments. On page 3, line 21, immediately after the word "otherwise", delete the remainder of the line. At the beginning of line 22 delete "road fund or to public education," and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Allocated or dedicated in this constitution,"

Explanation

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Ladies and gentlemen, this is a simple amendment. Mr. Gravel was up there at the same time I was to present it yesterday. He called me and said he'd be a little late, and he asked me to present it. This is more or less of a technical nature.

What it does, it says, it would read, "except a portion otherwise dedicated in this con....no....otherwise allocated or dedicated in this constitution shall be used by the treasury in the purchase retirement, etc., in payment in advance of maturity."

What this does, it takes out of the royalty road fund, or to public education. Now, public education, there is at the present time no dedication in the constitution. The royalty road fund has been taken care of--that's the five hundred thousand dollars for each parish with, you know, some getting six, or the possibility of six. So, some get more than that. But, that has already been covered in Revenue, Finance and Taxation. There is a royalty road fund in Section 8 here. But, it's a repetition of what we've done already, and I expect that it will be deleted.

So, this simply says the same thing without referring to them by name, except public education, there is no such dedication in the constitution at present.

I urge your adoption of the amendment. It's nothing other than simply saying what we actually mean. There should be no problem. Any questions?

Questions

MR. LANIER

Mr. Champagne, this amendment could not in any way be construed to affect the ability of the local units that receive these royal road funds from making their own investments in receiving the interest therefore? Is that correct?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Positively not, sir.

MR. LANIER

This is, in no way, intended to affect the dedication of funds for the royalty road--what was the royalty road funds to the local units?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Positively not. No, sir.

MR. LEBLEU

Mr. Champagne, as I understand the section, it would take those funds from oil in gas production offshore and put them in escrow where there is some misunderstanding about who actually owns them.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Well, they would be in escrow until....they are in escrow right now. Let's put it that way. When they get out of escrow, what we are saying here, those that are dedicated in this constitution shall be given as dedicated, you see?

They are....these funds are presently in escrow, as I understand it.

MR. LEBLEU

Yes, sir. But, under the article that we adopted the other day, ten percent of those funds in escrow would go to the royalty road fund.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

That's correct, sir.

MR. LEBLEU

But, under your amendment, you delete that portion, and since there's no reference made to the royalty road funds, that would deprive the royalty road funds of those escrow funds, as I understand it.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

No, sir.

In the other section that we had the other day, we said how those funds would be dedicated to the parishes. Now, what we are saying here is simply saying that that governs....that governs....any amount of this money that is for those parishes, goes to those parishes. This is what we are saying in this amendment. There's no....in other words, it's just trying to make it clear that it is, by using less words and actually referring to....in other words, the other sections of the constitution govern. That's what we are saying.

MR. HAYES

Mr. Champagne, I noticed this Section 10 deals with offshore mineral lease and money held in escrow. Do you know how much money is in escrow, or if there is any money in escrow, in fact?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

I understand that....I understand that all of this money is held, I don't....more than a billion dollars, they tell me.

MR. HAYES

Do you have any figures on that? Now, you say more than a billion. I notice you've got some information there. Do you have that information available? I've been trying to get it even for the last year, and I have been unable to find any money in escrow. It's my understanding that the government spends that money. Now, if you have that information, would you give me some of it, please. Let the research people give me some of that information?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Well, you see, this is in....the federal government has it in escrow. We don't have it. The suits that are filed, when decided one of these days, we may get it....we may never get it.

MR. HAYES

One question....I want to get the information from whoever has it now. If you know, tell me, and I'll pick it up.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Right. Well, they have it right here--the research staff has it.

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

MR. HAYES

All right. I'll come over and get it.

MR. STINSON

Mr. Champagne, as I read this, the original said that all of this would go into the retirement of bonds except the royalty road fund and the public education. Now, what your amendment is doing, it says that all....you bring out there that all of it will be going to the retirement of bonds. Isn't that correct?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

No, sir. This says, "except the portion otherwise allocated or dedicated in this constitution."

That refers, in this case, to the royalty road fund which we didn't call the royalty road fund any longer.

MR. STINSON

But what you are doing, then is--what else is dedicated in here....allocated and dedicated besides the royalty road fund?

MR. STINSON

Well, so all of that that's dedicated will go for that purpose, and not for the retirement of bonds.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

That's right, sir.

MR. STINSON

Now, as written here, everything would be for the retirement of bonds with the exception of royalty road funds and public education.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

What we are saying is that those monies which are already dedicated are going to be dedicated. That's what we would want it to do, sir. The rest of it has to go to pay off debts.

MR. STINSON

Well, it doesn't read that way. It says "all dedications would cover here the retirement" the way your amendment does.

For your information, it's my understanding that there is no dedication for public education.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

That's correct. That's why we took it out, sir.

MR. STINSON

Therefore, under this, though, what dedications there are, and I don't have that information, I don't know whether you.... do you have that information as to what is, or what will....?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Dedicated the royalty road fund as we'd wrote it up in Revenue, Finance and Taxation.

MR. STINSON

That's the only dedication in the constitution?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

At the moment time. There may be some others, but as far as I know, that's the only one, sir. That is it. That is it.

MR. STINSON

But, if there are other dedications, they would be used for that purpose prior to the retirement of bonds.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

If there are other dedications of these funds, of which I know none at all, they would positively be covered. Yes, sir. Because that's what the constitution would say, you see.

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Champagne, you mean you are taking these three or four words out just to concisè the language and make the constitution smaller? Is that my understanding?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

No, sir. Not at all. What we're doing is, we're taking those one, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten, eleven, twelve, thirteen words out because road fund or to public education doesn't mean anything. We're making it clear that what we say is otherwise in the constitution, is, an exception. There is no dedication to public education in the constitution any longer.

MR. NUNEZ

Don't you believe that it's a lot clearer when you leave the words in rather than take them out?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Well, I don't know how you're going to say "funds dedicated to public education" when you read it and you don't find it anywhere in your constitution.

MR. NUNEZ

Well, why don't you just take public education out and leave royalty road fund in? That makes it pretty clear to me, doesn't it?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Because...Senator, in our committee, we didn't call it the royalty road fund. We called it something else. You remember.

MR. NUNEZ

But, you still have Section 8 with royalty road fund in it, and you don't know what the convention's going to do with that.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Whether you leave it in, or you take it out, this has no effect, sir. But, it would be ambiguous, if you do take it out, and you do adopt what we adopted in our committee, and you don't call it the royalty road fund. Then, you refer to a royalty road fund that is not called that, you see.

This does the same thing....it's not a....it's nothing sneaky. It's a just to clear up the language. That's all.

Further Discussion

MR. STINSON

Fellow members of the convention, as I see this, the only explanation I can see is that if this amendment is put in here, then, every bit of this can be used for the purchase of new bond purchases, or issuance of new bonds. It says "purchase." Purchase....it means they can negotiate new bonds. Whoever the governor may be, he can take every bit of that and issue a bond issue and perspective, and use it for any purpose.

Now, public education, it is my understanding, is not in any way dedicated in the constitution at present....the new constitution. But, on this royalty road fund, it is needed for that purpose. This is taken away from that. If that's the only thing that we need it for, I think it should be left in there. Then, what's over, then, can be used for the issuance of new bonds, and maybe, for the retirement of the old. I have my doubts on that. So, I think it's much more than what has been explained up here. I think if they want to delete public education because there is no dedication, then I certainly feel that the royalty road fund should be left in there.

Questions

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Stinson, I want to refer to you the point you brought out on line 23 that this would allow the state treasury to issue bonds. As I understand it, and I may be wrong, but is it not correct if you read that carefully, what it allows the state treasury to do is to purchase bonds that we've already sold--in other words, buy them back....in other words to pay....to help retire the state indebtedness. It doesn't have anything to do with issuing new bonds....new bond issues.

MR. STINSON

Well, under this, though, couldn't they purchase any bonds of any type? It doesn't say. It just says to purchase bonds.

MR. LAMBERT

So, the intent of it is to allow the state treasurer to purchase bonds that have already been issued, and that the state owes money on. To buy them back....in other words, like you'd buy a note back. Do you follow me?

MR. STINSON

Sure. I followed all of it, but the way it's worded, I don't think it says to purchase the bonds....don't you think?

[Previous question ordered.]

Closing

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Ladies and gentlemen, I really didn't think there was any objections to it whatsoever, but I just want to read to you what it'll say. It says:

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

"Those funds and the interest from their investment, except the portion otherwise allocated or dedicated in this constitution, shall be used by the treasury in the purchase....and so forth and so on."

Now, the only thing we are saying is, we didn't refer by name to the royalty road fund or to public education. There is no dedication to public education. In the Revenue, Finance and Tax Commission Proposal that you adopted, we definitely took care of what was originally the road, royalty road fund. However, we didn't call it that. Now, you voted on that, and it takes care of it. This says that that comes first. Then, after that, what is dedicated in the rest of the constitution goes to the retirement of bonds. It's very simple. If you have any trouble with the rest of it, don't object to this portion. In other words, if you don't like the words "purchase, retirement, and payment in advance," this has nothing to do with that. This simply says that the first fund is taken care of first because we have a dedication and it's taken care of.

I'll answer any questions.

Questions

MR. LANIER

Mr. Champagne, as I understand it, this section is intended to apply to the money that's presently in dispute between the State of Louisiana and the federal government with regards to our three-mile limit.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Right, sir.

MR. LANIER

Well, if that's correct, would the effect of this amendment in this sentence that we are dealing with now mean that that portion of the money which will ultimately go to the royalty road funds cannot be invested?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

That is correct, sir. Absolutely.

MR. LANIER

Which means that the state will draw interest on their money, but the local governments won't draw any interest on their money.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

The local money--we have already said, that those monies are given to the local governments. We provided that.

MR. LANIER

But, not under this. They are held in escrow until the matter is finally concluded. Right?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Well, that's right. But, when they are in escrow, you don't have them. You see, you don't get them. Once you get them, then this provides that those monies not dedicated will be invested. Nobody has the money--but when you do get it, you see.

MR. LANIER

But, what I'm saying is that the state treasurer will be investing the state's and drawing interest on it, but the local's is going to be tied up interest free. Is that right?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

No, sir. They are going to get theirs....

MR. LANIER

I know they are going to get it, but they are going to get it without the interest. Is that correct?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Oh, they'll get it and invest it as they want, sir, as they wish.

MR. LANIER

Out of an escrow account?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

That's their money.

MR. ROEMER

Mr. Champagne, are you saying that we took care of the royalty road fund in Revenue, Finance and Taxation?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

That's what I was trying to say. Yes, sir.

MR. ROEMER

That's what I thought you were trying to say. I'm suspicious of your amendment. It looks like good government. Is that right?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Well, that's what I think it is.

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Champagne, I just spoke with Mr. Gravel whose amendment it is I think you are handling. He said that eight is still pending and the convention hasn't acted on eight. I wish you would withdraw your amendment. I think you are premature with it. If you take eight out, I don't think....I think you don't need it. If you leave it in, then you might need it. So, if you would withdraw it until we act on eight, I think you'd be acting wisely.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Senator, you were on that committee. Can you understand how you'd have two sections in the constitution opposing each other? Have you ever seen that?

MR. NUNEZ

Well, it's there, now, Mr. Champagne, and the convention hasn't acted on it. So, I don't know why you want to do something prematurely. That's what you are doing.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Are you suggesting we pass over this section until we get through with eight?

MR. NUNEZ

No, I suggested you'd withdraw your amendment until we do something with eight. If you take eight out, then you take out the wording, the language that you want to take out, and I think you'd be consistent.

But, if eight stands the same way, then I think you're inconsistent, and you're doing something that might destroy the royalty fund.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Yes, sir, Senator. But, I want to know how you're going to get back to this section after you complete it?

MR. NUNEZ

Just don't lay it on the table like we do everything else, Mr. Champagne.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

I'd rather not withdraw the amendment. I think it's a good one. Either vote for it or vote against it. I suggest that it's a good amendment.

[Amendment adopted: 64-29. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Champagne sends up further amendments at this time. Amendment No. 1. On page 3, line 19, after the words "the parties" and before the word "shall" insert the word.... Amendment No. 2 the gentleman does not wish to go with.

Explanation

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Ladies and gentlemen, I hope you won't get tired of seeing me, but the other one was not my amendment; this one is. I just carried it for Mr. Gravel. The point here is what we're doing is just explaining what the committee wanted to do. There was some question yesterday how you can deposit money that's in escrow, because this is what it says--it says "deposited in the state treasury." How are you going to do that when you don't even have it? So, this "when received" after the word "parties" will make it clear that you will deposit it when you do get it. But, as it is now, it says it's in escrow and you'll deposit it. Now, you can't deposit money you don't have. This is a very simple amendment. It just simply explains clearly that you're not going to deposit until you get it. Everybody knows that. You can't go to the bank till you have some money to put in it. Any questions? Everybody agreed on this one. I talked to everybody, and they were in complete agreement--that I've talked to.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

MR. POYNTER

First of all, delete the first amendment, as it's identical, is just adopted by the convention, proposed by Mr. Champagne. Make Amendment No. 2 Amendment No. 1.

Amendment No. 1. On page 3, line 24, after the words "maturity of" delete the remainder of the line and insert in lieu thereof the following: "then existing bonded indebtedness of the state or invested for such purpose."

Explanation

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Yesterday, when it was discussed, there were some people who were aware of possible possibilities that this money would be used for other purposes than to retire state debt. There were others-- I think Senator Rayburn asked the question: Suppose you can get a higher rate of percent than you can on retiring bonds at, for instance--or at four percent--and you can get eight percent on an investment? This provides that, beyond doubt, the bonded indebtedness will be retired first. In addition to that, it does allow the state, if they so choose to invest this money, to make money in which they have to retire the bonds of the state, or the indebtedness. So, this makes it abundantly clear that you're not going to handicap them in any way. They can get all the money they can; but, in making this money, it's for the purpose of retiring the state debt. So, they could, in essence, if they had some unusually low rates that they didn't want to pull out at that time, but they wanted to invest the money for the purpose of making additional money to retire those--this is just good banking policy that the state could engage in--and I think there should be no objections other than those people who might want to use this money, if we ever get it, to just dish out for some other reasons other than to retire the state debt. Now, the next paragraph, which we are leaving alone from 25 to 29, explains how you might use it for other purposes if you can't retire all the debt. I don't think that there'd ever be that much money in this state, available, that we couldn't retire debts--that we'd have a debt too small to retire--but that's neither here nor there. I'm only explaining. I don't think there's any objection to this whatsoever, but I would answer questions.

Questions

MR. ALEXANDER

Mr. Champagne, I think the sentiment in this convention and in this state is that, whenever this money comes from the federal government, that they don't want it available to the legislature for pork-barrel projects. This amendment prevents it.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Yes sir. This amendment takes care of it. Any other questions? I urge the adoption of the amendment.

MR. HAYES

Mr. Champagne, I would assume that whatever bonded indebtedness you're talking about you would retire, you would also dispose of whatever tax you have on the people at that time. You didn't say that, but it is assumed, I guess, here; or do you think we need to say it?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

I really don't think so, Mr. Hayes, because you know, if you had a bonded indebtedness that was created and a tax was done to pay for it, I'm sure we can give that much discretion to the legislature. I'm sure they would do it.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: 91-1. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 101-0.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

"Section 11. Commissioner of Agriculture
Section 11. The Department of Agriculture shall be headed by a commissioner of agriculture who, notwithstanding Article IV, Section 23, shall be elected every four years for a term of four years by the electors of the state as prescribed by law. The commissioner shall have the powers and perform the duties authorized by this constitution or provided by law. Qualifications of candidates for commissioner of agriculture, in addition to those in Article IV, Section 2(A), shall be provided by law."

Explanation

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I don't see any reason for me to spend a great length of time on this particular section, as this convention has devoted a lot of time, in the Executive Department Article, on this particular subject matter. However, I want to say to you that this matter was debated at great length in the Natural Resources and Environment Committee. It came out of the committee as an elective office, remaining elective. So, basically, you might say that everyone here today is going to have an opportunity to vote on something that obviously, because of the controversy involved over it, a subject of great importance--not only to the delegates, but to the voters throughout the state of Louisiana. We are affording you--and I cannot speak for the committee as a whole, because it was a close vote on the committee--you are being afforded an opportunity to vote on something of significant importance, after you have previously cast your vote several months ago. You have had the opportunity to, I'm sure, get feedback from your constituency. You may find yourself in a position today to make a decision opposite from what you previously made; then, on the other hand, you may have found that your previous decision has been since reinforced by the feedback that you have received in your particular area. Without belaboring this point--this subject matter--any longer, I'll close by just saying that you have a philosophical decision to make: whether or not you want to elect someone who has been elected for many years in this state, the commissioner of agriculture; or if you want to leave the position as it was finally adopted in the Executive Department Proposal, which made it subject to being made appointed by a vote of the legislature. That's all I have at this time. I'll yield to any questions.

Questions

MS. ZERVIGON

Senator, I frankly don't remember. By what margin did we pass that Section 23 of the Executive Article?

MR. LAMBERT

I don't know, Mary, but that's a good question. We're checking that for you.

MS. ZERVIGON

They're checking it twice?

MR. ROY

Senator, I appreciate the, you know, your disinterested manner in presenting the article; but I want to ask certain things that'll make something clear, I believe. Isn't it a fact that, since we dealt with this in the Executive Article and we did provide for the superintendent of education and the commissioner of insurance, as well as the commissioner of voting machines...of elections, we have continuously voted: would be subject to the Executive Article provision with respect to appointment, if two-thirds of the legislature does agree to that, after 1976? Is that correct?

MR. LAMBERT

Yes sir. I don't think I said anything...

MR. ROY

No, I know you didn't, but I just want to remind the delegates, by way of questioning, so that...

MR. HENRY

I think they remember that, Mr. Roy. We've got something to take care of that right now.

[Motion to limit debate on Section 11 to thirty minutes adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendment sent up by Senator De Blieux: On page 3, delete lines 30, 31, and 32 in their entirety and on page 4, delete lines 1 through 7, both inclusive, in their entirety.

Explanation

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen, there's not much explanation to be needed on this, as Senator Lambert can already tell you--or has already told you. We took care of this in the Executive Article. To pass this particular section of this proposal as we have it would be inconsistent with what we've already done, and we'd have to go back and do one or the other. Since we've already argued it at length and we were entered into a compromise agreement in the Executive Section, I just filed this amendment that we delete this particular proposal so that we can have it in line with what we have already done and accomplished in the Executive Section. That's all it is. I ask your approval of the amendment.

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted: 65-38. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

The next section is:
"Section 12. Wildlife and Fisheries Commission
Section 12. The wildlife of the state, including all aquatic life, is hereby placed under the control and supervision of the Louisiana Wildlife and Fisheries Commission, which shall consist of seven members appointed by the governor, six of whom shall serve for a term of six years and one of whom shall serve for a term concurrent with that of the governor. Three shall be electors of the coastal parishes and representatives of the commercial fishing and fur industries, and three shall be electors from the state at large.

No member who has served for six years or more shall be eligible for reappointment.

The functions, duties, and responsibilities of the commission, and the compensation of its members shall be provided by law."

Explanation

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I would say that, in my own opinion, this is a most important provision that we retained in our proposal. I say that for a number of reasons, one of the primary reasons being because of the great amount of concern that was demonstrated before our committee, and individually-- I can speak for myself--a number of sportsmen and conservationists, wildlife enthusiasts throughout our state, that have expressed great concern over retention of some language in our constitution, setting up a Wildlife and Fisheries Commission. In the committee, what we did was take a lengthy constitutional provision--very lengthy--and I would estimate that we reduced it to about, possibly, one-tenth its original size. Basically, what we have here is a policy statement, in the constitution, whereby we express to the people of this state, in their constitution, that we care enough to preserve the wildlife of the state, the aquatic life. We care so much that we put in the constitution the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission, to make sure that this most important area is not forgotten and that it's covered as best as we are able to cover it in a constitution. I might also point out that, obviously, it's an area where we have many people involved, and they are concerned to the point that it probably would give a great boost to helping to get this new constitution adopted. I'm not suggesting that you should vote for it on that premise, or on that basis, but I think that, in order to be completely frank about, this is an obvious consideration. As far as I'm personally concerned, I would love to see the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission left in the constitution. We've done a lot to cut it down, to remove a lot of excessive, unnecessary language. One of the arguments that may be made against it would be the fact that we're keeping a commission in the constitution, and I think Mr. Stagg asked that question yesterday at the beginning of the proposal. Yes, we are retaining a commission. We feel that it is an important retention--it's necessary--and we ask you, when you cast your vote on this particular section, to please give it careful consideration. I'll yield to any questions.

Questions

MR. BERGERON

Louis, I'm just wondering--I don't have my old constitution with me--are there seven members now on the commission?

MR. LAMBERT

Yes. We didn't change that.

MR. BERGERON

And we left their terms, etc., as they are in the present constitution?

MR. LAMBERT

We did. Right. Correct.

MR. BERGERON

Thank you.

MR. CONROY

Mr. Lambert, as Mr. Bergeron just pointed out, there are seven members. Then, on lines 15 and 16, you say "three shall be electors from the coastal parishes, and three shall be electors from the state at large." Shouldn't that last one be four--to add up to seven?

MR. LAMBERT

The governor has the prerogative to select....

MR. CONROY

The seventh one could be a nonelector?

MR. LAMBERT

From at large, you see, David? The governor has authority to select the seventh one from at large--anywhere in the state.

MR. CONROY

He doesn't even have to be an elector, the way this is written. Is that correct? That's the way it is now.

MR. LAMBERT

We retained the source provision and stayed with it as best we could.

MS. ZERVIGON

Senator, can you explain to us why this is a more important commission than the Highway Board, for example, or the State Market Commission or some of the others that we haven't even thought of sticking back in here?

MR. LAMBERT

Mary, to be very frank and candid about it, I think I stated earlier that, in my own opinion, it's an emotional thing, you might say. There are many, many wildlife enthusiasts and conservationists throughout this state; and when you talk about hunters and fishermen and outdoorsmen and pleasure-boat people, etc., you're talking about a lot of people. They are interested in conserving our wildlife, etc. In order for me to say that it's more important than the dock board in New Orleans or it's more important than the Department of Highways--retaining that board in the constitution--or some other boards, I really can't say that it's more important. I think that it is important enough, however, to deserve serious consideration for the reasons that I've stated previously. For those reasons, I think it should be retained.

MS. ZERVIGON

Did you travel the state with the Composite Committee?

MR. LAMBERT

What is that?

MS. ZERVIGON

Remember when the Composite Committee of this convention was traveling the state? Did you travel with them?

MR. LAMBERT

Yes. I was in New Orleans.

MS. ZERVIGON

No, I'm talking about the rest of the state.

MR. LAMBERT

I traveled a number of times, yes. Why?

MS. ZERVIGON

Because, well, I traveled with them about three-quarters of the way; and if my memory serves me correctly, not one person stood up and asked to have this commission retained in the constitution. Does your memory tell you the same about those hearings?

MR. LAMBERT

Let me just say this, Mary: if I had to base my decision on what I observed on the tour of the Composite Committee, it would not be anything like what I observe within my district and within the state as a whole, from the people that I come in contact with. I don't think that's a good rule to use to measure the importance of this Wildlife and Fisheries Commission. That's my frank opinion. You know as well as I do that not many people turned out for the meetings of the Composite Committee--for anything. They didn't ask many questions about anything, because there weren't that many people there.

MS. ZERVIGON

Well, I'll agree with you on that. We heard L.S.U. Board

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

everyplace we went, but would it surprise you to know that I've gotten not one letter on this subject?

MR. LAMBERT

Well, you're from New Orleans, and....

MS. ZERVIGON

Well, I've got a vote to cast.

MR. LAMBERT

I know you do. You're from New Orleans; you're not in an area where you have, probably, as many wildlife enthusiasts--as far as hunters and fishermen, etc.--as they do out in the country areas.

MR. KELLY

Louis, to follow up on what Mr. Conroy was questioning you about earlier, you have no objection to substituting the word "four" in line 16, where it says "four shall be electors from the state at large"?

MR. LAMBERT

No, I would have no objection.

MR. KELLY

All right. Now, would you explain to me one other thing? What is the rationale of dictating that three of these commission members be "electors of coastal parishes and representatives of the commercial fishing and fur industry"?

MR. LAMBERT

The rationale behind that, as best as I can explain it, is that this is an industry in the southern portion of the state that's the fur-bearing and the commercial fishing. It's related to the coast of the state, the coastline. It's off the coast of the state of Louisiana. For that reason, it was placed in the constitution a number of years ago, and we saw no particular reason--since that is still an industry in that area, and we were told that it was very important in that area--we left it as it was. We did not receive objections, as far as I can remember, from other areas of the state: that is, we retained the source provision in our present constitution.

MR. JENKINS

Louis, I'd like to ask you, with regard to the property status of wildlife as stated in your first sentence, you seem to make a change from the present law. The present law saying, "The natural resources of the state shall be protected, conserved, and replenished. For that purpose, the wildlife of the state, etc., are hereby placed under the Louisiana Wildlife and Fisheries Commission." When you say here, "The wildlife of the state, including all aquatic life, is hereby placed under the control and supervision of the Louisiana Wildlife and Fisheries Commission," you have no intent there to change the property status of wildlife? Is that correct?

MR. LAMBERT

That's correct.

MR. JENKINS

You intend to maintain the property status of wildlife exactly as it is now.

MR. LAMBERT

That's correct, and I might, if you will let me, in response to your first question, you refer to "The natural resources of the state shall be replenished"--I forget the rest of the sentence--but, that is the source. . .that was. . .before we adopted Section 1, that had been our policy statement on the environment, you might say. What we did was to take that out of the wildlife and fisheries section and expand upon it and put it in Section 1. That is now Section 1, and that is why we changed that language.

MR. JENKINS

Your view of what the property status of wildlife is is that it is res nullius, property belonging to no one until captured and taken under their control. Is that correct?

MR. LAMBERT

We make no change in the present status of wildlife.

Amendment

MR. HENRY

Read the Stagg amendment.

Explanation

MR. POYNTER

Copies of this have not been distributed as yet. I have the desk copies. It's a deletion amendment.

Amendment No. 1. On page 4, delete lines 8 through 22, both inclusive, in their entirety. (8 through 22)

MR. STAGG

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, the Clerk has stated the purpose of the amendment, and I know that there are delegates in this room who feel the strength of the efforts of the sportsman and wildlife enthusiasts who want their commission left in the constitution. I'm a paid-up member of the Louisiana Wildlife Federation. . .

I'm a member of the Louisiana Wildlife Federation and of the Sierra Club and the Wilderness Society, and a number of groups whose interests lie in the field of the preservation and proper management of wildlife and the natural resources of this state. But, that does not blind me to the fact that we are writing a constitution to set up the framework of this government. In the Executive Article, this convention voted, without change, those portions of the executive proposal that concern the reorganization of state government into twenty departments so that the functions of state government could be by allocation and reorganization made more efficient for the benefit of all of the citizens of the state. In studying the constitutional provisions pertaining to the Executive Article, we've left out a considerable number of very important boards so that the reorganization could be made without being hampered by constitutional provisions. The state banking commissioner isn't in the constitution; the Bond and Tax Board is not in the constitution; the Commerce and Industry Board is not there, the East Baton Rouge Park Commission, the Board of Highways and the director of highways is not there, the Pontchartrain Sanitary District, the Orleans Levee Board, the Pontchartrain Levee Board, the Market Commission, the Mississippi River Bridge Authority, the Orleans Aviation Board, all of the port commissions, the Sewerage and Water Board of New Orleans, the Stadium and Exposition District, the State Parks Commission, the Tax Commission and the Vieux Carre Commission, one after the other. We have eliminated from the constitution such boards and commissions as being unnecessary constitutional impediments to a proper reorganization of state government. I share with the members of the Natural Resources Committee the feeling that the wildlife interests of this state are strongly representative and do strongly wish this matter to be left in the constitution. But, I strongly feel that we are writing a constitution for everyone in this state--those who tramp the fields and marshes as well as those who walk the city streets. When judged in the balance as to all of the interests of the State of Louisiana, those covered by Section 12 of the committee proposal do not outweigh the principles that we have already written into this constitution.

I do, therefore, Mr. Chairman, move the adoption of the amendment.

[Motion to limit debate on the Amendment to fifteen minutes adopted: 64-31.]

Questions

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Stagg, do you realize that when this amendment was placed in the constitution that we had a very strong coalition of the commercial fishermen, the fur dealers and trappers, and the wildlife sportsmen all over the State of Louisiana in definite support of this, and the constitutional amendment was carried by a tremendous majority when this was placed in the constitution in 1952? Are you aware of that, sir?

MR. STAGG

Yes, Pete, I am. We are faced with this amendment a vote straight up or straight down. Do we put matters not necessarily in the constitution in here in order to serve the particular interests of several groups of people, or do we write a constitution worthy of the name? That's the question before the house at this point. I understand where the support for this comes from. I'm part of the operation, so to speak, and have paid my dues, and I'm a regular member of those organizations. But, I don't feel that this belongs in the constitution.

MR. ANZALONE

Mr. Stagg, do you agree that some of the things that we have put into this constitution is not. . .are not constitutional material?

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

MR. STAGG

Yes, Joe, and on a number of occasions I've sat in my seat and just plain voted and not spoken. Today, I think we need. . .

MR. ANZALONE

Do you further agree that this would not hamper the reorganization of the Executive Department?

MR. STAGG

This what, Joe?

MR. ANZALONE

The placing of the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission into the constitution.

MR. STAGG

I don't know that it would, Joe.

MR. ANZALONE

It would not hurt it. Do you agree that possibly that this constitution as it stands today is in dire need of whatever assistance that it can get for passage?

MR. STAGG

You are entirely correct.

MR. ANZALONE

Do you agree, Mr. Stagg, that if you wanted to, shall we say, go out and do battle with the passage of this constitution that the sportsmen of this state could have a wonderful time listening to the arguments of why their Wildlife and Fisheries Commission was not given constitutional status? Why such things as the Royalty Road Fund, etc., were given constitutional status?

MR. STAGG

I think a good argument could be made for support of the constitution without this section in there.

MR. ANZALONE

Do you think that in generations to come just because we have put this into the constitution that all of us are going to have a black eye, and we are not going to be known as constitutionalists?

MR. STAGG

Some of us. . .

MR. MUNSON

Mr. Stagg, if we're not writing a constitution for the various groups of people of the state, who are we writing it for?

MR. STAGG

We are writing it for the state as a whole, Mr. Munson.

MR. MUNSON

Well, that's what I thought. But, in answer to Mr. Hernandez just now, I believe you said group or groups of people.

MR. STAGG

I meant special interest areas as in the Wildlife and Fisheries area.

MR. MUNSON

Well, don't you think that a great majority of the people of this state, since they've expressed themselves twice, are in favor of leaving this in the constitution?

MR. STAGG

Bob, you know how many people vote on constitutional amendments in this state, and it's a disgrace. So, you don't need to use figures like that when we have a million six hundred thousand voters and two hundred thousand of them vote on a constitutional amendment. You can't tell me a great majority of the people have voted on any constitutional amendment in this state--ever.

MR. MUNSON

Then we should just ignore the wishes of the people because a majority of them don't vote.

MR. STAGG

We are writing a new constitution, Mr. Munson, not adhering to the old one.

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Stagg, who do you refer to when you talk about special interest groups?

MR. STAGG

In different times in this convention, Mr. Nunez, when we were on the fire and police civil service, that was a group that was identified as being a special interest group.

MR. NUNEZ

Do you refer to the hundreds of thousands of small boat owners who go out in the coastal marshes and earn a living trolling and trapping, etc.? Is that special interest?

MR. STAGG

That's an industry in this state just like all the others.

MR. NUNEZ

Do you refer to the hundreds of thousands of sportsmen in this state, for recreational purposes, that take their children out hunting and fishing? Do you call that special interest?

MR. STAGG

Are we doing anything that damages them by eliminating this article, Mr. Nunez? That's a good question to ask back to you.

MR. NUNEZ

Well, I think you very well might could do something to damage that.

MR. STAGG

Why?

MR. NUNEZ

If I get the microphone, I'll tell you.

Further Discussion

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I urge you most strenuously to reject this amendment. I haven't said this about any single thing that has been before this convention since it started, but in my humble opinion, if you want to destroy any chance that this constitution has got to be accepted by the people of this state, you take the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission out of it and put it back in the statutes. I'll tell you why. You heard what Mr. Hernandez said. Well, not only is that true, but two times, at least two times--and I ask some of the members of the legislature who have been there all this period of time to tell you exactly when--but at least two times since 1952 there have been constitutional amendments on the ballot to take this commission out of the constitution, and they were overwhelmingly defeated by three and four and five to one. Now, let me tell you something, there's been some talk about special interest groups. The people in this state who hunt and fish--I'm not talking about commercial operations, and I'm not casting any aspersions on people who are engaged in commercial fishing operations because they're serving a very good purpose, and I'm all for them--but, when you talk about the hunters and fishermen of the state and people who like to use our fields and streams, you're not talking about a special interest group, because you're talking about a group that cuts across all lines--all lines. People from New Orleans, people from the rural areas, rich people, poor people, white people, black people, all kinds of people--hunting and fishing is the most popular sport in the nation. More people fish than engage in any other single recreational activity in this country. If you take this out of the constitution, let me tell you something, every newspaper in this state, to my knowledge, whether it's a daily or a weekly, has got a wildlife column in it, and I'll guarantee you every single writer that writes one of those columns is going to chastise us severely and raise almighty sin, if you take this out of the constitution. Now, there are lots of things that are in this constitution that I, individually, perhaps don't think ought to be there. But, you take the question of civil service. I don't necessarily agree that it ought to be there, but I believe the people of the state want it there. You take the Vieux Carre Commission in New Orleans; I think we've managed to protect it in this constitution. But, if you're talking about one single thing that will get more people stirred up and against what we're doing, you take this out of the constitution.

MR. BURNS

Mr. Avant, you answered, in your remarks, my first question. That is, that if there was a body of people in the State of Louisiana that couldn't be referred to as a special interest group, it was the sportsmen.

MR. AVANT

That is absolutely right.

Questions

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

MR. BURNS

You referred to the hunters and fishermen. But, there's a lot of other groups that would be interested in this Wildlife and Fisheries Committee other than the actual hunters and fishermen--the nature lovers, the bird watchers, the Kodak enthusiasts. . .

MR. AVANT

That's right. That's right, Mr. Burns. You are absolutely correct.

MR. BURNS

In fact, every family in the state--would you say--was interested in Wildlife and Fisheries Commission, one way or the other?

MR. AVANT

Mr. . . I agree with you, Mr. Burns. As I said before, this is not a special interest group, but this is something that cuts across any kind of line you can imagine and want to draw. You're going to find people on both sides of that line that are interested--and vitally interested--in this question.

Further Discussion

MR. DREW

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in opposition to this amendment. In addition to what Mr. Avant said, let me bring this to your attention: Certainly, the wildlife sportsmen, the hunters or fishermen, are very much interested in having some type of provision in the constitution. But, in addition to that, you have your fish and fur industries which are one of the biggest industries in the State of Louisiana who are very much interested in having something pertaining to wildlife and fisheries in the commission--in the constitution.

I will submit an amendment, later, which I think will remove many of the objections that have been made at this podium to this entire section. I think that the average sportsman in the State of Louisiana probably confuses the commission with the department. The commission is appointed by the governor with very little requirement as to qualifications. The Department of Wildlife and Fisheries is where you find the marine biologists, the wildlife and management people, those with the expertise and know-how of handling this situation.

I ask that you defeat this, that we go ahead and allow these other amendments to be offered. I think that the amendment I'm coming with will remove most of the opposition to this section. One of the arguments of Mr. Stagg was that we had left no other commissions in the constitution, or any other boards. In this, there will be an attempt to remove the commission and leave the Department of Wildlife and Fisheries or Agency of Wildlife and Fisheries, if that would interfere with the reorganization Mr. Stagg was speaking of. I earnestly urge you to oppose and vote against this amendment, and let's proceed with the other amendments.

Questions

MR. ARNETTE

Mr. Drew, have you looked at the last line of this section?

MR. DREW

Yes, sir.

MR. ARNETTE

It says that there shall be. . . the functions, duties and all the powers shall be defined by law. Is that not correct?

MR. DREW

Right.

MR. ARNETTE

So, in other words, we're putting a commission in here that's got absolutely no power unless the legislature gives them something. Is that not true?

MR. DREW

That would be correct. Yes, sir.

MR. ARNETTE

So, in other words, what we're doing is saying, "Yes, we've got a Wildlife and Fisheries Commission holding out an empty promise to the people of the state." Is that not correct?

MR. DREW

That could. . . it could amount to that, Mr. Arnette, and further, if you give the complete powers and duties. . . or powers to the commission who do not have the qualifications, then you are doing away with the expertise and know-how of wildlife management by doing it.

MR. ARNETTE

So, in other words, you don't want to put the commission in here either?

MR. DREW

No, sir; I do not.

MR. ARNETTE

Well, why don't you vote against the section? Then we can get the commission out, and we can put in what you want to put in.

MR. DREW

You are not. . . you are not listening to what I said, Mr. Arnette. There is a very definite distinction between the Department or Agency of Wildlife and Fisheries and the Commission of Wildlife and Fisheries. The commission, I am violently opposed to.

MR. WOMACK

Mr. Drew, I believe Mr. Stagg referred to this as a minority group, and I'm trying to get out just exactly what constitutes a minority or special interest group. Do you realize that there's over eight hundred thousand fishing and hunting licenses sold each year for sportsmen?

MR. DREW

I thought it was more, really, Mr. Womack.

MR. WOMACK

No, it's slightly over eight hundred thousand. Now, did you realize there's another untold thousands given to those over sixty-three and those under sixteen, free--or sixteen and under?

MR. DREW

I'm aware of that.

MR. WOMACK

So, that puts it up over the million mark. That doesn't include then, did you realize, the commercial fishing aspect?

MR. DREW

I expect you could add quite a few thousand more from your fur and fishing industries; yes, sir.

MR. WOMACK

Now, the next thing--and I'm trying to educate the man that I couldn't ask any questions to--do you realize the Wildlife and the Wildlife Federation has gone on record supporting leaving the commission in the constitution, or leaving this set-up in the constitution?

MR. DREW

I understand that, Mr. Womack, but I have found in my inquiries that there is a great deal of confusion among the sportsmen, and probably among the Wildlife Federation, that they believe that if the commission is abolished, the entire wildlife and fisheries is abolished.

MR. WOMACK

There's some dissension among the legislators and convention delegates, also.

MR. DREW

In other words, you can have an Agency of Wildlife and Fisheries without the commission.

If there's no other questions, I ask that you defeat the amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. JACK

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I'm against Mr. Stagg's amendment. I'm not surprised to find a stag would be against the hunters. They always have and always will be. How's that! Now, I want you to listen to this because I'm going to give you a little history of this. A lot of you wasn't even born. Back in 1940 you had the forestry, the wildlife, and the oil and gas was all under one governing body, a commission. If you don't believe Mrs. Zervigon, that the hunters and fishermen and the others are interested in retaining a commission in this constitution, you should come to North Louisiana. You should see the numbers of them all over the state. Now, in New Orleans you may not see as many. They've got a different type of wild life down there, maybe. But, I'll bet you there are plenty of hunters and fishermen in New Orleans, in all seriousness. I believe there're over a million people that have some type of license for hunting and fishing. Let me tell you what has made Louisiana go forward, with Ducks Unlimited, with oil conservation and replenishment of wildlife, is because of the vast numbers of people that fanatically believe in having this commission in the constitution. It's a symbol to them. Take my word for it; I've seen it. I've been a fisherman and hunter all my life. Today the restocking of lakes, and the great numbers of lakes that have been built--and let me tell you those things, hunting and fishing, they're important to your health. Boating, all those things, takes the stress and strain of life--the hard work you do, the relaxation. Let me tell you: just for the sake, Mr. Stagg, of being a professor and saying that is statutory; this is constitutional. I don't buy that. If the people want something in the constitution, it's their constitution. They want this to stay in there. The progress has been made under it being there. So, I say let's don't tamper with it. I don't care what other umbrellas are there, and what other departments and commissions are no longer there. This is one that's different from the others, and I say let's defeat the Stagg-Abraham amendment.

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. THOMPSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I know the time is short. We're about to run out of time so I just want to rise and object to Mr. Stagg's amendment. I want to tell you this much, that there are more people that hunt and fish and love their sport in the State of Louisiana than will probably vote on this constitution. If you leave this out, I think you're going to find one of the best reasons to vote against this constitution. I urge the defeat of the amendment.

Questions

MR. CHEHARDY

Mr. Stagg, are you aware that we're talking about fishing licenses and hunting licenses? Now, to ask you this question I'm going to have to give you background. As long ago as fifteen years, there was a bond issue, for example, to float enough bonds to raise money, hundreds of millions of dollars, to dig a canal from Westwego to the Gulf of Mexico. Now, forget the financial aspects. It was proven beyond a shadow of a doubt had they dug this waterway that the natural habitat of the wildlife and fisheries in that entire area would have been destroyed--oyster fishing, shrimp fishing, etc. The agency that provided the background for this fight to stop this disaster in one community of our state--and this is almost fifteen years ago--was Wildlife and Fisheries. Can you say that an agency which has provided this type of service is not valuable to this community? They have been aware and have done things protecting the environment of our state for years and for generations. It goes far beyond my fishing license or hunting license. What I would like to ask you in view of this knowledge now that probably you hadn't understood before, would you just withdraw your amendment?

MR. STAGG

The answer to your question, Mr. Chehardy, is no.

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Stagg, would your amendment abolish the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission?

MR. STAGG

No, sir, it would not.

MR. JENKINS

Would it abolish the Wildlife and Fisheries Department?

MR. STAGG

No, it would not.

MR. JENKINS

Would it prohibit fishing and hunting in Louisiana?

MR. STAGG

No, it would not.

Mr. Chairman, I'm not going to take up any more time. I'd like to comment to Lantz Womack that of the eight hundred thousand fishing licenses issued last year, not one less will be issued next year. Of the millions of people that I'm told by you that hunt and fish and enjoy it, not one less will enjoy it. All you're looking at is another sacred cow that you are preserving from the slaughter pen by the acts of this convention. If you fully realize that that's what you're doing, then it's up to you. I have given you a vehicle by which you can do what we were sent here to do, and that was to write a proper constitution. I urge the adoption of the amendment.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected:
17-86. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Drew sends up amendments at this time.

Amendment No. 1. On page 4, delete lines 8 through 22, both inclusive, in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Section 12. Department of Wildlife and Fisheries Section 12. There shall be a Department of Wildlife and Fisheries. A director of said department shall be appointed by the governor, with the consent of the Senate, for a term concurrent with the appointing governor. The department and the director shall have control and supervision of the wildlife of the state, including all aquatic life, and other powers and duties authorized by this constitution or provided by law."

MR. HENRY

All right. I believe Mr. Drew wants to change the word "department" to "agency" in there every time; is that right, Mr. Drew?

MR. DREW

Yes, sir.

Each place where "department" is used, change it to "agency."

Explanation

MR. CREW

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I think that this amendment will satisfy your sportsmen, your fish and fur industries, for this reason: Under the constitutional provisions as now existing, a seven man commission is appointed which is the Commission of Wildlife and Fisheries. By that amendment which created the commission, the Department of Wildlife and Fisheries was placed completely under this commission's control. This is another one of those blue ribbon boards that we've had so many of in the past. Now, what this amounts to, and the reason I am so insistent on this amendment, is this--and I hope you will listen to it. In the department, and I am making a distinction between the commission and the department because to me there is an agency there--it formerly was called a department--you have your director; you have your personnel who are educated, trained, and have experience in marine biology, lake management, all of the things that are necessary for the proper carrying out of the purpose of this agency. That is where your personnel, your qualified personnel, are situated. They are under the control, or administrative control of the director, which is appointed by the commission. But, any decision made by this personnel with the expertise and know-how and experience can be overridden by a commission that is an appointed commission. There are no specific qualifications for the commission, and four of them, even under the proposal as offered, only have to be elected of the state; that's all. If you would look--and I'm very sorry--I had the makeup of the personnel of the present commission, and I don't mean to say anything derogatory towards any of those gentlemen, but as I recall the majority if not all of the members of the present commission have one qualification for having the final say so over these people with the knowledge and know-how, and that qualification was that they have a hobby of fishing or hunting. Now, I don't think that that makes sense. If a commission that is not trained in a particular subject has the absolute right to override the decisions of trained, experienced, educated personnel, we either don't need the trained personnel or we don't need the commission. I think you'll agree with me that we do need the trained personnel for our wildlife and fisheries management. For that reason I am asking that we do put into the constitution, to satisfy the million or so of people who are so interested in this subject--and as I said when I was at the podium before, there are so many that are confused that if we abolish the commission we have done away with wildlife and fisheries entirely. Well, that is not so, and under this amendment it certainly would not be so. We will have an agency of wildlife and fisheries which will meet, I think, most of their desires. We will have the qualified personnel who can make the decisions. We will do away with another blue ribbon board that is unnecessary, and by naming it an agency rather than a department as it was formerly called, we have not interfered with the probable reorganization into the twenty departments. I urge that you adopt this amendment. It will take care of the sportsmen; it will take care of the fish and fur industries which is a tremendous industry in this state; and it will give the people with the experience, the know-how, the proper authority to run the Agency of Wildlife and Fisheries. I'll be glad to answer any questions.

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

MR. KELLY

Harmon, one of the things that bothers me is since you have now changed your amendment to read "Agency of Wildlife and Fisheries." I suppose, instead of "Department of Wildlife and Fisheries," am I to understand that what you're trying to do is to set this thing up in line with what was passed in the Executive Article to allow consolidation or merger in the future?

MR. DREW

I'm not...I made that change, Don, for the purpose of not being in conflict with that. As I understand it, if it is called a department in the constitution, it constitutes one of the twenty departments.

MR. KELLY

Yes, but I meant, by putting the word "agency", what's to keep the legislature at a future date from running this agency, or this department, into some other department and making it, this all important agency here, a stepchild of some other department?

MR. DREW

It could be consolidated with another department, Don, but with these constitutional provisions I don't think there'd be any way to do away with it or with the powers that it would have, as it's constitutionally provided.

MR. AVANT

Harmon, you've made the statement that the lay commission, under the present law, had the authority and the right to overrule the decisions of the professional staff. Correct?

MR. DREW

Right.

MR. AVANT

Well, this director, who's going to be one man rather than seven who deliberate, will have the same authority, will he not?

MR. DREW

He would.

MR. AVANT

And you have prescribed no qualifications for the director, have you?

MR. DREW

I understand that there is an amendment to be offered to set qualifications for a director, Mr. Avant, which I would have no objections to.

MR. AVANT

But your amendment provides no qualifications for a director?

MR. DREW

That is correct, but when you look at it this way, Jack, when you have a man who is in authority of an agency who has the right to hire qualified personnel, I don't think he's going to hire qualified personnel and ignore their opinions.

MR. AVANT

Well, wouldn't that same thing apply to a commission?

MR. DREW

Not necessarily.

MR. AVANT

Well, wouldn't the argument that you advance, then, be an argument against any type of multimember commission, such as the Civil Service Commission or any other commission?

MR. DREW

I think you have a little different situation here, Jack. I don't know, it may be the same as some of the other commissions, but my objection is the fact that you have people with absolutely... there's no requirement that they have any knowledge in the field.

MR. AVANT

Well, that's true of many other of these lay commissions that are established, is it not?

MR. DREW

Yes, and I disagree with it. I certainly do.

[Motion to limit debate on the Amendment to fifteen minutes adopted: 56-28.]

Point of Order

MR. ARNETTE

Mr. Chairman, this is just a parliamentary inquiry. Are these amendments germane to the section? One seems to have to do with the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission, and one has to do with the Wildlife and Fisheries Department, which are two entirely different things.

MR. HENRY

I think you'd be straining at a gnat to say that they weren't. You're just changing the word "department" to "agency," or "commission" to "agency." I think it's sort of straining at a gnat, Mr. Arnette, so far as this is concerned. So, I agree that they're in order.

Questions

MR. ABRAHAM

Harmon, if in the reorganization of the executive branch there were a Department of Conservation created, could not this agency and the Forestry Agency, and the Register of State Lands Agency--all that could be in this one department, could it not?

MR. DREW

I'm sure that's where it will wind up, Mack.

MR. ABRAHAM

We don't have any qualifications anywhere else in this constitution for other agency heads or offices, do we?

MR. DREW

Not that I know of, no.

MR. ABRAHAM

Do you see any real need why this needs to be put in this constitution?

MR. DREW

I don't see that there's any serious objection to this amendment.

MR. HENRY

Will you yield to a question from Mr. Fulco?

MR. FULCO

Representative Drew, according to your amendment, and if the legislature saw fit, couldn't they create an advisory commission?

MR. DREW

Certainly, certainly. You could always create that.

If there are no further questions, I move for the adoption of the amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in opposition to the Drew amendment. I regret that I have to take issue with Mr. Drew on this because I'm sure he feels, as I do, that there should be active management of our fish and game. But I'd like to ask you to consider first the fact that our fish and game, both commercial and sport, is a renewable natural resource. Now before this constitution was... Before this commission was placed in the constitution, the Wildlife and Fisheries Department, as it was known then, had very little support all over the State of Louisiana. They could not possibly, ladies and gentlemen, do the job that was expected of them without the support of the people of the State of Louisiana. So, back in 1952, the sportsmen and the commercial fishermen, trappers, and fur dealers, and all the seafood dealers, all got together in a common effort to create a commission and place it in the constitution. Now, it had a psychological effect like I've never seen before. I've never seen as many diversified interests in all my life get together behind one common cause. They all got together. If you think there's been some firemen and policemen down here in this thing, you should have seen...

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

MR. HENRY

Please take your seats, gentlemen, and let's hold down on the noise. Proceed, sir.

MR. HERNANDEZ

You should have seen the number of sportsmen and commercial fishermen, commercial trappers, and all these dealers, all come to Baton Rouge in support of this Wildlife and Fisheries Commission. It had tremendous support; it carried, and the people of the State of Louisiana, on every occasion it's been presented, have voted strongly in favor of this commission in the constitution. Now, they...after this was placed in there, this Wildlife and Fisheries Commission has enjoyed tremendous support of all forms of all the different ones who take our wildlife and our fish, the sportsmen especially. But, they also have had the support of the commercial fishermen and the commercial trappers. The sportsmen have gone into programs of propagation, and they have supported the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission, and there has been excellent relationship between the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission and the sportsmen all over the state in propagating game. There are a lot of areas in this state that have a lot of deer now, that have deer on which they have open season. The same thing is true of turkey; we have brought the turkey back. There have been numerous attempts to plant feed. The sportsmen's group go out and plant food for quail. They have brought those back, brought the quail back in a lot of places. Just to make a long story short, the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission has enjoyed excellent support of the sportsmen and commercial fishermen and hunters all over the state. Now, to take away this commission from these men is going to be discouraging. Frankly, I'm afraid it'll have the same psychological effect on the sportsmen that they had when they put this commission in. That is, the opposite.

I ask you, please defeat this amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. JACK

Mr. Chairman, and members, I rise against this amendment. This amendment does the same thing as Mr. Stagg's. It takes out the Louisiana Wildlife and Fisheries Commission. Like Delegate Hernandez says, there are a million people, a million sportsmen in this state. That's a large, large segment of this state. They are...want to take part in their government. Their spokesmen, in their government on wildlife and various kinds, fishing, hunting, are the members of this commission. It's the very thing that keeps their interest alive. It's a symbol also, like Joan of Arc; she didn't win any war, but she was a symbol to the French people. This is very important. You remember we had I believe, four constitutional blue ribbon commissions put in the constitution under Governor Kennon. I was in the legislature; I voted for those. Twice, different governors tried to take those out. It went to the people. The people voted them down. This...I'm sure Mr. Drew has good purposes in mind. But, the people in north Louisiana--I'm thoroughly familiar with the members of the wildlife organizations, and all the fishermen--they want this commission there. You'll be doing a great injustice to the people if you pass this amendment. I vigorously oppose this one just as much as I did Mr. Stagg's amendment. Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. KELLY

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I, too, rise in opposition hesitantly to Mr. Drew's amendment. But, in essence, the way I read the amendment, if we were going to go this far as may as well have gone on and adopted Mr. Stagg's amendment, which was overwhelmingly defeated earlier. I acknowledge one thing that Mr. Drew does. He says that the department and the director shall have control and supervision of the wildlife of the state. The way this amendment is drawn, this could mean that one man would have the control and supervision of all the wildlife of the state. I think it's a bad amendment. Let's go ahead and defeat this and let's come up with a workable system somewhere down the line in line with what the committee has already proposed.

Further Discussion

MR. ASSEFF

Mr. Chairman, delegates, I want to ask Mr. Drew a question, but I was not recognized for that purpose. Mr. Drew stated that by changing the name from department to agency it would not be included in the reorganization of the Executive Branch. I suggest that Mr. Drew read Section 1(B) of the Executive Branch and also Section 22, which says, "reallocation of the functions, powers, and duties of all departments, offices, agencies, and other instrumentalities of the Executive Branch, except those functions, powers and duties and departments allocated just by this constitution." So, of course, agencies will be covered just as much. This proposed amendment says less than the committee proposal. I agree that the entire matter is statutory. There isn't any question of it. But, the people want it in the constitution, and to leave it out will jeopardize its adoption, and that is why I favor it. I consistently favor provisions, though statutory, that will strengthen the chances of adoption. There's no question that it's statutory. Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, one of the areas which I think is so often overlooked in connection with the functions of the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission is the commercial end of the business. I think there are very few people who realize that the area along the Louisiana coast is the most prolific area in the entire world for the production of seafoods. This has been substantiated by the United States Chamber of Commerce. I'd like, for instance, to give you some of the figures which show that the shrimp industry is valued over two hundred million dollars. The fur industry, another twenty million; the menhaden industry, another hundred million; the crab industry, another five million; and the oyster industry, another twelve million. The point I'm trying to make to you is the fact that in years gone by there has been little or no representation in the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission with respect to this...to one of the most valuable industries which we have in our state. It was for that reason that some years ago that the provision was included to appoint three electors from the coastal parishes in order to represent the commercial fishing interests and the fur interests. I suggest to you that this is most necessary in order that we can continue to be able to produce the hundreds of millions of dollars of seafood which have been and will be produced off of the coast of Louisiana in the future. So, I, therefore, urge you to reject the amendment in order that the coastal parishes who have such a vital interest in the continuation of this most important industry so that they can have a voice in the continuation of the proper type of operation by the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission.

Closing

MR. DREW

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, let me straighten out two mistakes. I'm sure they were honest mistakes that were made here. One by Mr. Jack and one by Mr. Kelly when they said that you may as well adopt the Stagg amendment as the Drew amendment, there is no way in the world to relate those two amendments. As presently constituted in the 1921 Constitution as amended, had you adopted the Stagg amendment, and abolished or deleted this entire section, you would have deleted the entire wildlife and fisheries, period. You would have deleted the entire wildlife and fisheries. Here we are not deleting the wildlife and fisheries. What we are doing is we are removing a blue ribbon board and putting the responsibility upon the party who should carry the responsibility, the director of the agency. As I said before, he hires qualified personnel to advise, and I don't think any director would ignore the advice of that qualified personnel. I don't see too much merit to what Mr. Perez's argument is because of the way the act reads; it says that you have to have three of the coastal parishes and representatives of the commercial industries, fishing and fur industries, and four at large. So, you have four without...with absolutely no qualifications, three that merely have to be from the coastal parishes, and supposedly represent the fur and fish industry. What does represent the fur and fish industry mean, gentlemen? Look at the composition of your present board and tell me how many of them are actual representatives of the fur and fish industry. This is a blue ribbon board that we can do without. We can put the responsibility where it belongs--on the director--and do the same job and do it in a better manner. I move for the adoption of the amendment.

[Amendment rejected: 26-84. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. PLYNTER

Next amendment sent up by Delegate Avant.

Amendment No. 1. On page 4, line 10, after the word and punctuation "life," and before the word "hereby" delete the word "is" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "are recognized as renewable resources, belonging to the people. The right of the --and this is a change; strike out the word "people" in the second line; insert in lieu thereof "citizens of the State". Strike out "people" and insert in lieu thereof "citizens of the State." The right of the citizens of the State to harvest these resources is recognized, subject to private property rights and reasonable regulation, as provided by law, to insure their preservation for the future. They are"

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

Explanation

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this is, I would hope, a noncontroversial amendment. It simply recognizes that these resources...that is, aquatic life and wildlife are one renewable resource, with the idea that they will be managed as such, and that they do belong to all of the people of the state, and not to particularly any particular individual. It further--and this is the main thrust of the amendment--at the right of the citizens of the state to harvest these resources is recognized subject to private rights of property and to reasonable regulation as provided by law to insure their preservation for the future. Now, the thrust of that amendment is simply this: to recognize that the people, the citizens do have the right to harvest these resources because from time to time and in place to place, there develops a movement to outlaw hunting, outlaw fishing for various and sundry reasons, from well-intentioned people with whom, I think, the vast majority of our citizens would violently disagree. So, we want to recognize that the citizens have the right to harvest this renewable resource subject only that they have to recognize private property rights and they are subjected to reasonable regulation in the form of management to make sure that this resource is not destroyed or dissipated and done away with. I'll answer any questions.

Questions

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Avant, it would seem that the Section 12 as written would probably cover what you're trying to do. What concerns me...

MR. AVANT

I didn't hear you, Mr. Nunez.

MR. NUNEZ

Well, it's hard to hear myself to tell you the truth.

MR. AVANT

Well, start over, would you, please, sir?

MR. NUNEZ

I say it would seem like Section 12 as written would cover what you're trying to do. What concerns me is in several years ago when we had wild oyster reefs all throughout the state, we've almost depleted our oyster supply. Anybody could go on any reef and dredge and take oysters that they saw fit that were marketable. We established a leasing procedure whereby an oyster fisherman was able to lease "X" number of acres of ground, and thereby plant his oysters and cultivate them and harvest them as he saw fit. I wonder if you were protecting his rights to assure their preservation for the future. Are we doing something that would allow anyone to go on his lease and get his oysters that are there under his cultivation?

MR. AVANT

No, Mr. Nunez, we're not interfering with the lease system with respect to oysters because that is a private property right. The right has been leased by the state on state-owned land to a particular individual to raise oysters at that particular place. There's nothing in this amendment that is designed or intended or will, in fact, disturb that system.

MR. NUNEZ

But, you state in the opening statement here "or recognizes renewable leases belonging to the people, the right of the people to harvest these resources is recognized."

MR. AVANT

"Subject to private property rights and regulations to insure that they will be preserved for the future."

MR. LANIER

Mr. Avant, I'm very concerned about giving a constitutional right to harvest this wildlife. In particular, I'm thinking about the situation with alligators and snipe. For many years the season was closed on these animals because they had been depleted to a point where they were about to be hunted out of existence.

If we constitutionally give everybody a right to harvest these things...if we put in a closed season on something, wouldn't we be building in a lawsuit every time we try and have a closed season?

MR. AVANT

Now, Mr. Lanier, you're too competent an attorney to really believe that. ... is subject to private property rights and to reasonable regulation as provided by law to insure their preservation for the future. So, if they think that it is a resource... a particular species, it's going to disappear, they've got every right in the world to put a closed season on it. I think you...

MR. CHATELAIN

Mr. Avant, along with that same subject, you're referring to the normal Louisiana hunting and fishing laws, aren't you, sir?

MR. AVANT

Yes, sir. Those are those regulations that I'm referring to; where they close the season here, they may open it there. They say you can only kill six squirrels, or ten squirrels; that's a reasonable regulation to insure that this renewable resource renewa itself and doesn't become destroyed or lost.

MR. CHATELAIN

You don't take away the right of the legislature to pass those reasonable laws.

MR. AVANT

No, sir, I'm not taking away that right...

MR. CHATELAIN

I think you've got a good amendment, Mr. Avant.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Avant, I would like to bring out that as provided by law covers everything that the ...and gives the legislature the right to regulate the taking closed seasons and to insure propagation or anything else that they care to do. They are not limited.

MR. AVANT

It certainly does, and that was the intent of the amendment.

MR. HERNANDEZ

The statement that you made up there is one of the best statements that I've seen made.

MR. ANZALONE

Mr. Jack, a little bit concerned about: suppose a man is doing some commercial fishing in a nonnavigable stream. Are you saying here that the property rights as to the riparian landowners extending to the thread of the stream would force this commercial fisherman into a situation of having to lease a particular area from a riparian owner?

MR. AVANT

Well, I'm not changing the law. If it's a nonnavigable stream and the bed of that stream and the water in that stream belongs to a private individual, under the law now he's got no right to go out there and start operating a commercial fishing operation.

MR. ANZALONE

Oh, I beg to differ with you, just slightly because that's not what the law says...and it's a serious question.

Further Discussion

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise to oppose this Avant amendment. We've already taken care of this in our policy statement in Section 1, which states that "the natural resources of the state shall be protected, conserved and replenished insofar as possible and consistent with the health, safety and welfare of the people." We've already covered this. There's no necessity to cover it twice. I respect Mr. Avant's position, and I sympathize with it, but we've already taken care of this. Let's not start messing into the problems of the commercial fisherman and the problems of the individual fisherman. It's all going to be taken care of. This thing could lead to all sorts of problems, the way it's written. I respect Mr. Avant, and I recognized he's trying to fulfill his function as the delegate appointed to represent wildlife and fisheries, but we've already done this job for him in Section 1, and I urge you to vote against this amendment. Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this is a very, very dangerous amendment, and in spite of the fact that Mr. Avant feels that this would not have any effect on our oyster industry, I am certain, and I've asked and discussed this with some other lawyers who have interpreted this language and there is no question in my mind that...if all of these resources belong to the people, that means that every oyster on every oyster lease in the state belong to all of the people of the state. The right of the people to harvest these resources is recognized, subject to what? Private property rights, but this is not a private property right. A lease is strictly a personal right, not a property right. In my judgment the words are so ambiguous that we're playing with fire, and we should not jeopardize or even adopt language which could jeopardize one of the very, very important industries in the coastal area of Louisiana. I therefore strongly urge you to reject the amendment.

Questions

MR. CHATELAIN

Mr. Perez, what you're telling us then, if a person is given a right to retrieve, we say, oyster shells from a body of water, then anybody could go in there, even though he had a right from the state to retrieve these shells, sir?

MR. PEREZ

Well, I didn't quite understand your question.

MR. CHATELAIN

Well, if the state gives certain rights...

MR. PEREZ

The state, at this time, gives rights to certain people to go in to dredge clam shells, yes, under applicable laws.

MR. CHATELAIN

That's what I mean. That wouldn't give...if the state gave Mr. Lanier that right, I couldn't as a private citizen...

MR. PEREZ

I don't know whether it would or not. It just depends upon whether or not this savings clause, in the end "subject to reasonable regulation" would adequately take care of it. I'm not sure what the course would say about that. That's why I say this is such a dangerous amendment when you adopt something like this in such general terms that it's so very difficult to try to interpret that it just possibly could do a tremendous amount of violence to the fisheries' interest of this state.

MR. CHATELAIN

But, you do agree, though, Mr. Perez, that the wildlife and fish of this state belong...in fact, do belong to the people?

MR. PEREZ

We have all of the Civil Code Articles that we need on that subject right now, and there's absolutely no need to have such a provision as this in the constitution.

Further Discussion

MR. TOBIAS

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I agree with what Mr. Perez just said, but I would point out one further thing that this amendment does which I don't think Mr. Avant intended, and that is that it goes much further in allowing certain people to hunt. For example, presently, children the age of eight years of age are not allowed to use firearms hunting—legally, that is. By stating in here that the right of the citizens of the state to harvest these resources is recognized, subject to private property rights and reasonable regulation to insure their preservation for the future, would have the effect of saying that anybody, no matter what his or her ages, could hunt. I think that there's some reasonable restriction that the legislature should be allowed to put on this type of thing. I urge the rejection. Mr. Chairman, how many further speakers are there?

[Motion to limit debate to five minutes adopted without objection.]

Further Discussion

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, for many of the numerous reasons previously stated, and due to the fact that our committee debated this particular area at great length, and we were very careful so as not to get into areas where we hopefully would create many of the problems that are being mentioned at this time, I ask you to oppose this amendment. The committee spent a lot of time on this area. We tried to retain the source provision in the present constitution in this particular area as closely as we possible could so that we would not create some unforeseen problems. For those reasons, I ask you to please oppose this amendment. Thank you.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

These are the Duval amendments. Amendment No. 1. On page 4, line 12, after the word and punctuation "governor," and before the word "six" insert the following: "subject to confirmation by the Senate,"

Explanation

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this amendment merely requires that the Senate confirm the appointments of the governor on this commission. I think this is a good thing and in keeping with the balancing off of the branches of government and to insure that you won't have a situation where you will have an appointment where there may not be an income tax return filed, etc., because as I understand it, the Senate Committee reviews these things. Moreover, it certainly will insure the interest of wildlife and fisheries because you might appoint someone, the governor might appoint someone who has nothing at all to do with wildlife and fisheries and this basically, this keeps a good balance and I think it's necessary. I urge the adoption of the amendment.

Questions

MR. ASSEFF

Mr. Duval, in view of the fact that in some sections we have said "confirmation" and in others "public confirmation" I wonder what you mean by the term "confirmation" public or ...

MR. DUVAL

My "confirmation" is how we've described it in the Executive Article, whatever that amounts to.

MR. ASSEFF

We have included it both ways is why I asked the question, Mr. Duval; it's all right with me.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Kelly and Bergeron. Amendment No. 1. On page 4, line 16, at the end of the line, delete the word "three" and insert in lieu thereof the word "four".

Explanation

MR. BERGERON

Mr. Chairman, fair lady and men delegates, I've checked with most of the committee on this amendment and it's met with full agreement. It seems like it's in more or less in line of a technical amendment. What we've provided for in the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission of Section 12 is a seven man board. As I read this section, Section 12, I see that it only provides that six members be electors from the state. This amendment would simply provide that the seventh member be an elector from the state also. If we pick up on line 13, "and one whom shall serve a term concurrent with that of the governor; three shall be elected from coastal parishes and representatives of commercial fishing and fur industries; and three shall be elected from the state-at-large." This amendment would simply provide that not six, but seven members would be electors. That's simply the intent of the amendment, it's more or less in line of a technical amendment, and I would urge the adoption.

Questions

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Bergeron, as I understand it, you would leave in there ... as I understand it, you would leave in the committee proposal the provision that three members should be representatives of the commercial fur and fishing industry; is that correct?

MR. BERGERON

Yes, sir that is correct.

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

MR. DENNERY

Now, under the recent ruling of the... under the recent ruling of the Ethics Commission, wouldn't that be considered a conflict of interest if they had to vote on their own rules affecting their industries?

MR. BERGERON

Mr. Dennery, I understand that there is an amendment coming up which would take that out, following my amendment.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Next set of amendments sent up by Delegate Burns.

Amendment No. 1. On page 4, line 17, at the end of the line, immediately after the word "large" delete the period "." and add the following: "other than representatives of the commercial fishing and fur industries."

Explanation

MR. BURNS

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, my amendment was classified non-controversial by the huddle up here a short while ago and I may say in addition to that I discussed it with the chairman of the committee and several of the committee members and they, likewise, had no objection to it, so I hope you'll find it non-controversial. The last sentence in the committee proposal provides that three of the commission, three shall be electors of the coastal parishes representing commercial fishing and fur industries and three shall be electors from the state-at-large. My amendment substitutes a comma "," for the period "." after the word "large" and provides that the electors-at-large shall be other than representatives of the commercial fishing and fur industries. In other words, I think, it's necessary because it could easily be otherwise that some governor may appoint all of them from the fur and fishing industries or may appoint two of the ones-at-large from the fur and fishing industries. Now, I think that is certainly not the intent of the commission... of the committee's proposal and I, therefore, ask adoption of this amendment.

Questions

MR. BOLLINGER

Mr. Burns, I share your concern, but my question is this: you're going to have three mandated to be representatives of the fur and fishing industries; your amendment would say three are going to be representatives of other than—that's one less if the governor would appoint someone not associated—then you would have four people not associated with the industry and three associated, the majority controlling the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission may have no interest at all with wildlife; don't you think it's a problem?

MR. BURNS

I don't think so. This amendment is solely intended to take care of what I think the intention of the committee is or was in preparing this which has been substantiated by my discussing this with them. The only three members should be appointed from the fur and fishing industries and the other four should be some other groups or some other industry throughout the state-at-large and not wind up with maybe seven members.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Mr. Burns, is it not true that your amendment, the way it's written, doesn't make for any substantive change from the present situation?

[Previous question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted: 100-5. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The amendment is sent up by Delegates Brown and Kelly. Amendment No. 1. On page 4, delete lines 15 through 19, both inclusive,--and we need to add now, Senator--"including all Floor Amendments thereto".

Explanation

MR. BROWN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, what this does is try to alleviate the problem that Mr. Dennery raised earlier about some of the recent decisions by the Ethics Commission stating that it is a conflict to receive monetary gain by being a member of the commission and also voting on policies that affect that commission.

So, this deletes the section that says that you have to be representative as such, from commercial fishing and fur industries because under the recent decision of the Ethics Commission affecting the Mineral Board, for instance; if you're in the oil and gas business, you can't be on the Mineral Board. It leaves that discretion to the governor to balance on the interest on this particular section, so that's why it's put in. I ask for your favorable adoption.

Questions

MR. NUNEZ

Senator Brown, you quoted a ruling from the Ethics Commission. I haven't seen that ruling, I read about it, but the members of the Mineral Board that have conflict of interest evidently are still serving. Is that a ruling or was it an opinion or what's the official action taken by the Ethics Commission on this decision?

MR. BROWN

Senator Nunez, my sources of information are Mr. Dennery and what I've read in the paper. I see exactly what you're saying, but I think that there is no doubt as to what's going to be finally ruled; there would be a direct conflict. I haven't read any definitive decision.

MR. NUNEZ

Well, from my knowledge and sources there's been no ruling. It's just been rumors and opinions and some newspaper accounts of what somebody said. Now, if in fact, we have commissions and boards running these various interests of the state such as the mineral interest or the oil and gas interest and the seafood interest; who do you think should serve on these things, people who are completely unfamiliar with them, people who are in other lines of business, people who do not have a background, or people who do have a background that could rule intelligently on some of the decisions? I think that's what we have got to decide here today, not what the Ethics Commission has rumored they're going to do.

MR. BROWN

I think it comes down to monetary gain. I think is what we're talking about; the question of monetary gain. If you make your living off decisions handed down by a particular board of commission then you shouldn't be a member of that. There's some discretion involved. There's all kinds of people who are very familiar with particular commissions such as what we're talking about right now who have good solid backgrounds in wildlife and fisheries, who could be excellent members of this commission who don't have to have monetary gain from it. I think that's what we're talking about. I don't think we should appoint someone who is completely unfamiliar with the particular commission involved; I think they ought to have... be good in experience in the background and I feel confident that the governor will appoint people experienced in these particular fields. But, you can't have monetary gain. I think that's what we're talking about.

MR. DERBES

Senator Brown, you don't have to be involved in highway construction to be a member of the Highway Board, do you?

MR. BROWN

Not at all, Mr. Derbes.

MR. DERBES

You don't have to be necessarily involved in oil and gas exploration to be a member of the Mineral Board, do you?

MR. BROWN

You don't have to, but you can certainly be... have a good solid background with experience over the years in a number of related fields to give you background to make good value judgments. I agree with you.

MR. DERBES

So, all your amendment does, is it creates a certain amount of flexibility and it.. and possibly it anticipates what might ultimately become, and I think, should become the public policy of this state, namely, the people who have economic interests in certain activities shouldn't sit on the boards that regulate them; isn't that correct?

MR. BROWN

Definitely, I agree with you.

MR. GINN

Jim, why did you in your amendment include deleting lines 18 and 19 about "no member shall be reappointed after serving a six year term." Am I correct that you included that, and why did you delete it?

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

MR. BROWN

David, I did and that wasn't the intention. That wasn't the intention. I... so as to say if ... I'd certainly have no objection to putting that provision on there, that just was not the intention; that was an oversight.

MR. GINN

Well, would you consider withdrawing it and resubmitting it by leaving 18 and 19 in there--those lines?

MR. BROWN

If there is no objection, yes, I would withdraw it and delete that, if there's no objection.

[Amendment withdrawn and resubmitted with correction.]

Questions

MR. WOMACK

Mr. Chairman, or Senator Brown, I just wonder how far you can expand this and I'm wondering if you, as an attorney, pass laws in the legislature and then come back and make money defending the cases as a result of those laws if this doesn't come under about the same thing the Code of Ethics Commission ruled?

MR. BROWN

Well, I think it comes down to where you draw the line, when your dealing with setting prices or, for instance, determining who gets leases on oyster beds and you... or who gets a mineral lease where you can drill a well and you give the mineral lease to the.....you've got....

Further Discussion

MR. BOLLINGER

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise in opposition to the amendment. I don't think you can compare the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission to the Mineral Board, and for one major reason: when you're talking about minerals you're talking about depletable resources. When you're talking about wildlife you're talking about renewable resources. The decisions that the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission makes reflect the future of the wildlife in this state and reflect on these people who are in the industry. Without the proper decision the industry could be short lived. I think it is essential that someone representing the commercial fisheries and fur industries is on this board because without this representation their industry might be short lived. I move the rejection of the amendment and yield to any questions.

Questions

MR. ABRAHAM

Boysie, assuming that the three representatives from the commercial and fur industry might be prejudiced; would not the four other members of the board constitute a majority to protect the interest of the people of the state in that respect?

MR. BOLLINGER

They would, Mack, and that was Mr. Burns' amendment that just added that language.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Mr. Bollinger, doesn't the committee proposal as written strive for balance between those who are commercial fishermen and hunters and those who are hobby fishermen and hunters?

MR. BOLLINGER

Most definitely, Mr. Velazquez. I think without realizing that that you can't understand the true meaning of what's written into the committee proposal.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Since someone has discussed about benefits, would this mean that nobody who is a hunter or a fisherman would be eligible, and that nobody who is a processor or a fisherman, or professional... commercial fisherman would be eligible? Who would be left to be on this board?

MR. BOLLINGER

Very few people and the ones who would be left wouldn't care much what happened to the wildlife.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

You think it would be good to have a board of seven bird watchers?

Further Discussion

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, if I can just give you a little bit of a history with regard to the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission, for many years the people of the coastal areas had little or no representation on the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission. The commission has generally two main functions: one is to preserve the wildlife of the state for the sportsmen, and I'm a sportsman myself, and an avid hunter and fisherman. I think we need that and we very badly need it, but we... what we also very, very badly need is someone to look after the interests of those thousands of people who make their living fishing in trawling and shrimping, oysters, etc. The... any provision of the Code of Ethics could certainly not override any provision of this constitution. There is no reason whatsoever that a person who is knowledgeable in that field should not be qualified to serve as a member of the commission. I, therefore, very strongly urge you to reject this amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. DERBES

I'd like to rise in support of Senator Brown's amendment. I think we've reached a point now in this country where we can say that it has not always been in our best interest to have people sitting in important places where judgments are rendered and policies are made when they have economic interests and in fact, when they make a great deal of money or can make a great deal of money involved in the economic activities which they regulate. It's nothing new to this nation that judges, for example, should not be involved in the cases that they have judgment over, and what this amendment does, is it does not require, it does not require the origins of certain appointments, it merely creates a certain amount of flexibility. With this amendment, with the passage of the amendment appointments may still be made from commercial fishing and fur people, but if we decide in the future, if we decide in the future, that it is not in the best interest of the state that such people should sit in regulation of the activities in which they are engaged for profit, the appointments can be discontinued, and perhaps more objective people can be appointed in their places. I'm not suggesting that there is anything wrong with the present constitution of the board, but I do think, Senator Brown's amendment raises a good point of flexibility and creates an atmosphere where people who are not necessarily involved in the system can sit in regulation of it. So, I suggest to you that the amendment is a good one and I urge your adoption of it.

Questions

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Derbes, since this would let the Duval amendment stand, wouldn't it then be up to the elected representatives of the people to make sure we had very well qualified people on this commission and yet, they didn't have a pecuniary interest in their own decisions?

MR. DERBES

That's correct. I might add that in other instances of appointments throughout the state I know of no constitutional requirements and not... and very few statutory requirements that people who are appointed should be appointed from commercial interests. The Highway Board, for example, has a great deal to say about awarding highway contracts. I don't know of any requirement that says that people who sit on the Highway Board have to be actively involved in highway construction. The Mineral Board is an excellent illustration of this problem where people who sit on the granting of mineral leases over state lands are frequently also involved in oil exploration.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Derbes, if we follow your rationale to its conclusion, would we have to conclude that the State Ethics and Grievance Committee of the Louisiana Bar Association should not be composed of lawyers?

MR. HENRY

Gentleman has exceeded his time.

[Motion to limit debate on the Amendment to five minutes adopted: 41-37.]

Further Discussion

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, you know we keep limiting debate on this particular subject, and I'm going to take a minute of my time to tell you--it might be the last proposal--but it's a by far not the least important to us in this state. In fact, I... many of us consider it the most important. You know how this came about; many people have started talking about there is no representation from this section of the state, there's no representation from the federation of sportsmen's league, there's no representation from here, well, I think all these people should be represented. Let me read you the present representatives of the board and let you make up your own mind. There's a Mr. Luttrell from Delville; he's a retired principal. There's a Mr. Thompson from Alexandria; he's a real estate and banking man. There's a Mr. Dupuy from Marksville; he's an attorney; I don't know what his other interests are, but I'm sure he's a sports and fish fan. There's a Mr. Berry from Berwick which is a south Louisiana area; he's a contractor. A Mr. Autin from Houma who's a packer, I understand he's a seafood packer. There's a Mr. Jones from Cameron who's an attorney and a Mr. Wille from Bossier who is a newspaper editor. I don't even know if we're complying with the present constitution, but I'm sure all these people have an interest that qualifies them to meet the conditions that is now in the present constitution. I think if we take these provisions out, we no longer need a commission representative of a particular segment of what we're doing in this state--what are we going to put on there, people who are completely unfamiliar with it--I just don't believe that if we go ahead and if we're going to have a commission, we should have people managing or supervising or making the rules of that commission that knows something about it. Can you picture some people that have no interest at all in the dates of seafood trying to set the dates on the shrimp industry of this state; it's just ridiculous. We have enough confusion with the people who know about it. I think if we don't adopt something that would guarantee us, or guarantee the various industries, or guarantee the sportsmen, I think the federation should be represented on it. There are hundreds....you heard there's a million licenses issued in this state. Mr. Burt Angelle informs me that their best estimate is that four hundred and fifty million dollar industry is involved in the sports-fishing industry of this state. It's a big industry. You heard Mr. Perez--and I'll elaborate on that a little bit--there's almost a half of billion dollar industry when it comes to the commercial seafood, the oysters, shrimp, the crabs, the muskrats and this--I would say this industry is almost the largest industry of this state pretty close up to the top with tourism and the other industry....in the oil industry, etc. It's a great industry. It's a fantastic industry and the recreational business of this state is expanding every day. I would say if we keep the commission that we should....we should spell out very clearly that there should be commissioners that are representative of these various groups. Whether they should be directly involved and have a financial interest, I think, we should delineate that part that they should not have a....but there should be some way we can say in this constitution that the commission members should know something about the business of which they are regulating. I think if we don't do that, we're just making a mockery of the commission. So, with that, I'll yield to any questions. I was against the amendment by the way.

Questions

MR. DUVAL

Senator Nunez, don't you think that all these people who were in Mr. Stagg's amendment came up and said how well the commission had operated; don't you think all these people who said how well it was won't know how it's going to operate now if this amendment passes?

MR. NUNEZ

Would you repeat that, please?

MR. DUVAL

I said, don't you remember all these people who said how well that the commission operated when Mr. Stagg's amendment came up. You remember that they said that, don't you?

MR. NUNEZ

Yes, you're right, Mr. Duval.

MR. DUVAL

This is a friendly question, Senator.

Now, sir, don't you know that when we change this commission we have no idea how it's going to operate, do we?

MR. NUNEZ

You're absolutely right. I think the commission has operated very well. I've disagreed with them on a lot of occasions and I don't have representation from some of the areas I'd like to see represented. You heard... you people from central and northern Louisiana, you have four representatives on this commission right now. There's a... from central and north Louisiana, you've got one from Bossier, one from Marksville, one from Alex and one from Deville. Now, I don't know where Deville is, but I think it's pretty close to central Louisiana. You've got three from south Louisiana, but I think it's working well.

MR. WOMACK

Senator Nunez, what I'm trying to get out to you now is that the seafood industry in that area is south Louisiana's cotton crop, soybean crop, sugarcane crop and timber crop, etc.

MR. NUNEZ

You can throw in a few squirrels, Mr. Womack, if you'd like, but that's the fact.

Further Discussion

MR. BROWN

I want to briefly just say one thing. The intent of this is not to hurt any industry, we've got a fine industry that comes and derives from our wildlife and our fishing and this is not the intention at all. We're not here talking about hurting any industry whatsoever. We're merely talking about a conflict of interest. Let me say that again, Senator Nunez. We're strictly talking about a conflict of interest. Now, the Ethics Commission recently ruled you can't serve as a milk processor and also serve on the milk commission to raise prices of milk, it's a conflict of interest, number one. Number two, Mr. Denny just checked with the Board of Ethics and they have rules, Senator Nunez, that in a case here not too recently that an individual who owns an oyster lease can't serve on the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission it's a conflict of interest, there is a monetary interest involved. The governor has the right to appoint anyone he wants to look after any industry he wants and definitely we have a very valuable industry in our fishing industry throughout the coastal waters and definitely they should be well represented, very well represented but not to the tune of having a conflict of interest, all this does is do away with the conflict of interest. I ask your final passage.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected: 33-68. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendment sent up by Delegate Tobias, read as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 4, line 13, after the words "serve for" and before the words "of six" delete the words "a term" and insert in lieu thereof the words "overlapping terms"

Explanation

MR. TOBIAS

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this amendment continues the Article VI, Section 1 (A) 2 of the 1921 Constitution which provides overlapping terms; I move its favorable adoption.

Point of Information

MR. PEREZ

Probably I'm not opposed, but I would like to see the amendment, I just want to be sure it does what I understand it does.

MR. POYNTER

It's been passed out, Mr. Perez.

Inserts on page 4, line 13, after the words "serve for" and before the words "of six" delete the words "a term" and insert in lieu thereof the words "overlapping terms"

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Avant and Mr. Ginn sent up amendments at this time; it's a set of three amendments if you are kind of searching through the group there. Set of three amendments sent up by Delegates Avant and Ginn.

Amendment No. 1. On page 4, at the end of line 8, add the following: "; Director"

Amendment No. 2. On page 4, line 9, immediately after "Section 12" and before the word "The" insert "(A) Wildlife and Fisheries Commission"

Amendment No. 3. On page 4, between lines 22 and 23, insert the following:

"(B) Director. The commission shall appoint a director. He must hold a degree in wildlife management or marine biology from an accredited university and have at least five years of wildlife management or marine biology experience as provided by law. However, these qualifications shall not apply to the director serving on the effective date of this constitution."

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

Explanation

MR. GINN

Mr. Vice-Chairman and delegates, we're talking still about the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission and the aspect I'm concerned with is the director of the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission. I want to tell you a little bit about what we want to do and what he does and why I'm offering this amendment. What we are trying to do is to provide that the director of the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission have a degree and to have experience, and I want to talk about that. In my opinion, the director has a very important position, he manages all the staff and the personnel in conjunction with civil service. He has the administrative responsibility and I would say the supervision of the day-to-day operations of the commission. He also prepares a great extent of factual information and recommendations on the current problems that the commission deals with and in conjunction with that in making regulations and certain policies. The director also prepares a recommended budget, a budget, and I think that's a big responsibility you have to be concerned with. He also has operations in carrying out the programs of the commission. Now, under the director is another aspect that you have to consider of his importance. He has two assistants, one dealing with commercial and fishing laws and another assistant who deals with wildlife and game laws. So, I'm trying to impress upon you the importance of the position of this director. Mr. Avant and I believe that the director should have a degree. We want a certain degree of competency in his position. We feel like he should have experience in the field of conservation and game management, in that regard, he would have a better insight of wildlife and fisheries problems. We feel like there is just no substitute for experience. Now, the director has to consider many, many state biologists reports and many studies that he has to study, and he uses these reports in making certain regulations that the commission enforces. Now, if you look over on page 5, Section 13 (B), you'll see that the Committee on Natural Resources felt that it was wise to have the state forester to have a degree and to have experience and this Natural Resources Committee wants the forester to have a degree and experience. We feel like the director of the Wildlife and Fisheries should also. I just feel like that it's just a matter of competency and experience. If you want to hire a math teacher, you don't get a geographer. I feel like we need that experience and that degree for the director.

Questions

MR. ABRAHAM

David, do you believe that the director of Wildlife should have more technical qualifications than the superintendent of education?

MR. GINN

More technical qualification?

MR. ABRAHAM

Yes, as far as degrees and this type of thing is concerned.

MR. GINN

I think he needs it. I want to remove....I would say, I would want to remove some politics, or this, or that; I just want competency; I want experience in that position.

MR. ABRAHAM

So, he should be more qualified, experience wise and education wise than the superintendent of education?

MR. GINN

No, sir, I'm not saying that at all.

MR. ABRAHAM

Well, do you realize we haven't put that anywhere else, all these qualifications, anywhere in this constitution?

MR. GINN

Yes, sir, it's in this....it's over in the Forestry Commission. We haven't.....

MR. ABRAHAM

We haven't done that yet, but we haven't put these type of qualifications in for the commissioner of agriculture or superintendent of education, have we?

MR. GINN

No, sir, because the commissioner of agriculture is elected and the superintendent is presently elected; this man is appointed and if he is going to be appointed by the governor, I want him to have some qualifications. I want him to have that experience, that degree.

MR. ABRAHAM

Well, don't you feel this could be handled statutorially as well as it could constitutionally?

MR. GINN

Well, you're dealing....if you leave it up to the statutes and put it in the hands of the legislature, there's no telling what might....could be done although I do trust the legislature. I want this safeguard in the constitution and I'm trying to improve this commission is what I'm trying to do.

MR. BOLLINGER

David, didn't Mr. Bergeron's amendment add the fact that all seven of these individuals are going to be electors of the state?

MR. GINN

Yes.

MR. BOLLINGER

And, isn't it very possible that we would have trouble finding someone living within the state being an elector of this state having the qualifications you are setting forth in the constitution and who is willing to take the job?

MR. GINN

Boysie, I don't see that; I certainly do not. There are many men that would like this job for political reasons and there are many men that want it because they have careers in this field. I don't feel like we will have a problem. I think there are adequate men who would want this position, quite a good number.

MR. GOLDMAN

Mr. Ginn, just because we might have--and remember--I said might have made an error in the superintendent of education, is that any reason to make an error here?

MR. GINN

Well, I don't think we are making an error; no, sir. I understand your question; yes, sir.

MR. BURNS

Mr. Ginn, just for information, in your Amendment No. 3 and No. 1, too, you refer to: "The commission shall appoint a director." Now, is that a different director from the one Mr. Drew was discussing this morning or would this be a director of the commission?

MR. GINN

I'm concerned with the director of the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission who is selected, who is hired by the commission, by the commissioners themselves. He served as executive officer and administrative officer; he's selected from the commissioners.

MR. BURNS

Yes. Well, now what I'm getting at....

MR. GINN

He's kind of an employee I might add.

MR. BURNS

Would this be a different director from the director that Mr. Drew was talking about this morning in which it just provided for one director, no commission?

MR. GINN

No, sir, this is different because you will have the commission and a director here; he is an employee of the commission; he is the manager somewhat.

MR. BURNS

But, you wouldn't have a director of the commission and then a director of the agency, too, would you?

MR. GINN

Well, the agency....no, sir.

Further Discussion

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise to oppose this amendment, there is no need for this--this is simple straight-forward legislation--it can best be left in the hands of the legislature. Like all of you, I want the best possible man who is degreed and who has experience. But, who are we to sit right here in 1973 and say that the degree must be in wildlife management or marine biology. Many experts in this field have other degrees. Some of the greatest experts in this field have law degrees. Others have degrees in plain, simple, ordinary biology. Others have degrees in zoology. Others have degrees in systematic parasitology. Others have degrees in comparative zoology. Others have degrees in comparative vertebrate zoology. Others have degrees in comparative invertebrate zoology, I mean, this is just too confining---this best can be handled in the legislature. Now, some people have said this ia going to take it out of politics. There is no way this is going to take it out of politics. What's a keep a politician from having a degree in wildlife management? In fact, if he's a good enough politician, he'll get some school to give him an honorary doctorate in wildlife management or an honorary doctorate in marine biology, and suppose the best man only has four years, nine months of experience; suppose he only has four years, ten months of experience; suppose he only has four years, eleven and a half months of experience? I mean, it seems to me that this thing can best be handled in the legislature and that we are just running in circles trying to introduce something like this here. We need the best man, but in no way does this amendment guarantee us the best man.

[Motion to limit debate on the Amendment to five minutes adopted: 48-33.]

Explanation

MR. THOMPSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, the time is short, so I won't have too much to say. I think....Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to this amendment. I think if we'll remember back about four or five years ago we had a director that would probably fit in these qualifications barely. We've had some others before and some after, and I just ask the general public and the people in here to see which ones have made the best director for the State of Louisiana. I urge defeat of this amendment because education doesn't make a man qualified for a job as big as this is. I think education, experience, know-how, and to be able to get along with the general public is what should be counted here. I urge you to vote against it.

Further Discussion

MR. HAYES

Ladies and gentlemen, just one minute, I rise in opposition number one. We are not going toward ' ' degrees any more too much, you go toward practitioners. Practitioners are people who can actually do the work. I think a director of Wildlife and Fisheries would be a person who can decide who that was that could help him do the job. I think we should go more toward practitioners rather than people with degrees. A degree guarantees you nothing, no more than in the Judiciary Article. They put this in the Judiciary Article, the only other place I know it is and I even opposed it there.

Questions

MR. WILLIS

Mr. Hayes, don't you think that the words "accredited and experience" are flexible as a rubber band and that there's no way in which to find out how far accredited...who accredited by who, what, and which? Isn't that correct?

MR. HAYES

I agree; you can't take a degree and guarantee anything with it. But, you can take a person who is practicing in a particular area, use them as a practitioner, I think, the word would be and a person could hire who they wanted to do, whoever could do the job rather than saying a degree guarantees it.

MR. WILLIS

So, you agree with me, then, that that would depreciate our appreciation of the attributes that the commissioner is expected to have; isn't that correct?

MR. HAYES

That's correct.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Hayes, I know you do a lot of fishing yourself and haven't you met a lot of people who probably have never been to college in these fields, but yet are quite expert in the area of wildlife management and game control?

MR. HAYES

We have people, Mr. Lanier, teaching in our schools who do not have degrees--our welders, air-condition men are practitioners--they don't have degrees, they make more than the teachers with degrees; that's the only way you could get them; we call them practitioners.

Further Discussion

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, the director of the Wildlife and Fisheries is more of a management person, a person who has the direction and control over all those under him. We already have many, many, many well-qualified people working for the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission as biologist and so forth. The technical knowledge comes from those people, the general managerial authority comes from the director. So, I, therefore, cannot see under what conditions we would have to have a person with these technical qualifications. I, therefore, urge you to defeat the amendment.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. GINN

Ladies and gentlemen, I have a committee selecting a list of pallbearers, therefore, I withdraw the amendment.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

[Motion for suspension of the rules to allow withdrawal of the Amendment adopted without objection. Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Next set of amendments sent up by Delegate Ginn. Amendment No. 1. On page 4, delete lines 17 in its entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "shall be selected from a list of names submitted by the Louisiana Wildlife Federation as provided by law."

[Motion to limit debate to thirty minutes on all remaining Amendments to Section 1 rejected: 33-50. Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Senator Rayburn has a set of amendments. On page 4, line 17, in Floor Amendment No. 1 proposed by Delegate Burns and adopted by the convention on today, on line 2 of the language added by the amendment, after the word "industries" change the period "." to a comma "," and add the following: "as provided by law."

Explanation

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Chairmen and fellow delegates, all I'm attempting to do.... it might happen in the near future or in years to come where we might want to specify by law the qualifications of the members of this commission. My amendment only says "as provided by law" in the event we do want to establish some. You state out here in this language that "three shall be electors of coastal parishes and representatives of commercial fishing and fur industries." In my opinion, I could buy a commercial fishing license and maybe have never owned one before, and I think it would qualify me to serve on the commission if I owned a commercial fishing license. The others, it makes no references as to what their qualifications may be. I feel that some day if the legislature sees fit, they should have the right without submitting it back to the people to set up the qualifications by law if it so desired and that's all my amendment says "as provided by law."

Question

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

MR. SCHMITT

It seems to me that you're really not changing anything by putting "as provided by law" because it still would have to be the commercial...have the commercial requirement in there. You could add extra requirements, but is that your understanding of what you are doing?

MR. RAYBURN

No. Mr. Schmitt, you have seven members and it says three of them shall be from coastal parishes and it don't say... make any reference to where the others will be other than just electors of the state. I'm thinking maybe some day if the Code of Ethics or somebody says "This fellow can't serve or that fellow can't serve because of a conflict of interest, then by adding this language the legislature could set up the qualifications.

....and, the Chairman of the committee has no objection, he so informed me before I offered the amendment.

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted: 90-9. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 92-10. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

"Section 13. Forestry Commission; State Forester Section 13. (A) Forestry Commission. The practice of forestry is hereby placed under the Louisiana Forestry Commission. The commission shall consist of seven members, five of whom shall be appointed by the governor for overlapping terms of five years each, and two of whom, namely the head of the Department of Forestry at Louisiana State University and Agricultural and Mechanical College....

[Motion to waive reading of the Section adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. SINGLETARY

This section just has two subparagraphs. Paragraph (A) sets up the Forestry Commission and Paragraph (B) sets up the State Forester. Paragraph (A) provides the practice of forestries placed under the Louisiana Forestry Commission and would consist of seven members, five appointed by the governor for overlapping and two, namely the head of the Department of Forestry at L.S.U. and the director of Wildlife and Fisheries serve as ex officio members. Two members are owners or executive managers of interests owning and operating timberlands; one of owner of farmlands interested in reforestation; one of pulp and paper mill owner or executive manager; and the fifth is an owner or executive manager of interests manufacturing or treating poles, piling, crossties, or veneer. The commission will appoint a state forester who must be a graduate from an accredited school of forestry and have at least four years of forestry experience, as provided by law. Basically, what we did was aim down about....reduced a page and a half down to a short paragraph and just as we did in Section 12 under Wildlife and Fisheries, we basically retained the constitution just as it is, just eliminated some language.

I'll yield to any questions. I move it's adoption.

Questions

MR. DUVAL

Alvin, I'm sure it's clear, but I just want to make positively sure, ex officio members they wouldn't be voting members; would they?

MR. SINGLETARY

Really, I'm not clear about that; it stays just as it is now whatever the practice is now.

MR. DUVAL

Well, I mean, we don't know whether these are voting members or not? When you say ex officio members, what does it mean?

MR. SINGLETARY

I don't believe they are voting members, Mr. Duval.

MR. DUVAL

If we could perhaps ascertain that information, it might help us to understand the composition better.

MR. SINGLETARY

I'll try to have our staff find the answer to that question.

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Singletary, I'm seeking information where you say "one shall be a pulp and paper mill owner or executive manager." I happen to know in a few cases where the company recommended, say, the assistant forester to be on this commission. Would he qualify if you leave the word "executive manager" in there if he were an assistant forester? I'm just wondering if that would be better if you would have an owner or an employee....I just....I'm wondering did the committee discuss the definition of executive manager?

MR. SINGLETARY

Well, just briefly, Senator. But, I don't think...I personally wouldn't have any objections to an amendment if you want to send one in.

MR. RAYBURN

I'm just seeking it for clarification. I don't know, but it might be highly possible that a paper mill company would want someone other than their executive manager on the commission, they might want their assistant forester or someone like that.

MR. SINGLETARY

Well, possibly....it's been suggested that maybe he could be name executive manager, I don't know.

MR. BOLLINGER

Mr. Singletary, did you know that a company can have more than one executive manager? If someone's an executive and a manager, he is an executive manager and it doesn't mean there only has to be one man but a vice-president could be a title only but if he is considered an executive and a manager that this would, I think, would comply with the provisions of this article?

MR. SINGLETARY

Thank you, Mr. Bollinger, I didn't know that. If there are no further questions, I move....

MR. ALEXANDER

As I look at this section, I see everybody here is more or less tied down to a position. Is there any room anywhere here for the general public to serve on this commission?

MR. SINGLETARY

As it stands, Reverend, it would have to be in one of these classifications that we have established, they would have to have some qualifications that are....as established in the section.

MR. ALEXANDER

Well, I have no quarrel with the qualifications but my question is: Is it possible for the general public to be represented on this commission in any way outside of the industry?

MR. SINGLETARY

Well, you have the head of the Department of Forestry from L.S.U. should presumably give some representation to the public.

MR. ALEXANDER

Is there any chance, under any conditions, any time within the next million years for a black to ever get on this commission?

MR. SINGLETARY

Well, if he's in the pulpwood business or something like that, I would think so.

MR. ALEXANDER

Or, if he's....

MR. SINGLETARY

If he's an owner of farmlands interested in reforestation or....

MR. ALEXANDER

Or be the head of the Department of Forestry at L.S.U.?

MR. SINGLETARY

That's correct.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendment sent up by Mr. Abraham first, which reads as follows: Amendment No. 1. On page 4, delete lines 23 through 32, both inclusive, in their entirety, and on page 5, delete lines 1 through 10, both inclusive in their entirety.

Explanation

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

MR. ABRAHAM

Ladies and gentlemen, you might call this a technical amendment. Seriously, though, I just don't see the need for writing this type of language into the constitution. All of this can be handled by the legislature; they can set up the requirements they need for the board; they can set up the requirements if they want a state forester. We have not mentioned any other office such as a state forester in this constitution. We've taken out the fire marshall; we've taken out the director of highways; we've taken out a lot of other offices. But, even looking at the present language here it says that one of these members shall be the director of the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission. Well, we haven't said anywhere in this constitution there is going to be a director of the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission. In the section above we simply provided for the commission; we didn't provide for a director. We say that these various people who are going to be on the commission might be owners of timberlands, owning and operating timberlands; owner of farmlands interested in reforestation. Well, there might be all kind of farmers or anybody around here that might be interested in reforestation but may never do it. There's nothing in here about providing for the people who operate sawmills, or for lumber dealers, or anything like that. I just don't see the need for having to include this type of language in the constitution. I don't think that our forestry industry is going to suffer in anyway if this is not included in the constitution. We have developed over the years the need for the practice of good forestry and this has been done without a constitutional amendment....a mandate or a constitutional sanction. So, I don't think there's any quarrel with the things that we are trying to do. We all sit here and we all agree that we are interested in natural resources, preserving them and caring for them, the statement has been made time and time again. Why do we keep insisting that we have to put it in the constitution? I think the language is unnecessary and could much better be handled statutorially because then if there is any change that needs to be made in the law it could be made very easily without the need of a constitutional amendment. I urge the adoption of the amendment.

Questions

MR. BURNS

Mr. Abraham, we just a few moments ago put the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission in the constitution, didn't we?

MR. ABRAHAM

Yes, we did, much to my regret.

MR. BURNS

Do you realize that the forestry industry is about the third largest industry in the State of Louisiana in terms of what it brings into the state and its products--timber, by-products of all kinds....

MR. ABRAHAM

Mr. Burns, let me answer you this way. It's my understanding that the agriculture industry is much, much larger than any other industry in this state. Nowhere in this constitution have we provided for an agriculture commission; nowhere have we set up specifications for who is going to be the director of agriculture. I don't see any need why we have to do this for the forestry commission. What about the dairy industry, and the cattle raising industry, etc?

MR. BURNS

In other words, if there's an amendment introduced which is being prepared right now giving a better diversification--better overall coverage--on the commission, would that make you feel more favorable towards this section?

MR. ABRAHAM

No, sir. Because I think one of the biggest single expenditures of state money is the education system, but we haven't really set up any specifications on which people are going to be represented on the boards of education.

MR. BURNS

Well, leaving the composition of the commission itself out of it, just tell me why you think--and I'm not against the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission because I supported it--but why do you think it should be in the constitution, and the forestry commission should not?

MR. ABRAHAM

Mr. Burns, I don't think that the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission should be in the constitution. I voted against that.

But, simply because I lose on one thing, and it's in there, then I can't keep fighting that hattle. But, this does not mean that I am going to continue to put other things in there, simply because one may be in there. I think we should still continue to try to eliminate these things in the constitution.

MR. BURNS

In other words, Mr. Abraham, you are just against putting all these commissions in the constitution?

MR. ABRAHAM

Yes, sir. Very much so.

I thought maybe you were just against the forestry commission.

MR. ANZALONE

Mack, do you know I disagree with your statement about a commission on agriculture, because to protect the agricultural interests of this state, we do have an elected commissioner of agriculture?

MR. ABRAHAM

Well, I appreciate the fact....

MR. ANZALONE

Well, you know how many millions of acres of this state are covered by timber?

MR. ABRAHAM

No, I don't know.

MR. HENRY

Will you yield to a question from Mr. Hernandez?
Mr. Hernandez. Wait, Mr. Anzalone.

MR. ABRAHAM

Gee, I hope you can tell me how many billion of acres are covered by timber.

MR. HERNANDEZ

My question is, simply, do you realize that since this present setup for the handling of the reforestation program in the State of Louisiana has been placed in the constitution, that Louisiana has made rapid strides?

As was pointed out the other day, there are two hundred and forty thousand families in the State of Louisiana. You wouldn't want to affect that program in any way, would you?

MR. ANZALONE

Pete, I'm not after affecting the program in any way. But, surely you don't believe that the strides that have been made in reforestation, and conservation, has been done strictly because you have some language in the constitution? It's all been through enacting enabling legislation. I see no problem in that respect.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Forestry is handled in this state through the Louisiana Forestry Commission, and the Louisiana forester, as...proposed in this provision here...in this section. Now, they have been carrying on this work a good long time. Don't you realize that they have done a good job, Mr. Abraham?

MR. ABRAHAM

Pete, I'm not quarreling with the job they do. I'm saying that the job will still be done through statutory law rather than through constitutional sanction.

MR. HERNANDEZ

We're not sure of that, and the forestry industry wants it in the constitution. They need it in the constitution for their protection.

MR. ABRAHAM

Pete, I think you will agree with me that this program was started long before you had all this stuff in the constitution.

MR. HERNANDEZ

No, sir. No, sir, I won't agree with that. Not a bit.

[Motion to limit debate on the Amendment to fifteen minutes adopted without objection.]

Further Discussion

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

MR. ARNETTE

I rise in support of Mr. Abraham's amendment for several reasons.

Probably the basic reason that I object to having this particular commission in there is because we chose to take out over sixty boards and commissions in the Executive Branch Article already...over sixty we have taken out...many of them much, much, much, more important than this particular board or commission. We took out the highway board. We took out anything having to do with welfare. We took out the commissioner of conservation who is probably the most powerful man in the state having anything to do with the major industry in this state, which is the oil and gas industry; we took him out. We don't have the mineral board in here, which has to do with all the uses of minerals by the state. My gosh, I don't see any reason why we ought to have the forestry commission in here. We've taken out people who are much, much, more important to state government.

Now, when you take this out, that doesn't mean they're not going to do their job anymore. That doesn't mean we're not going to have reforestation, or we're not going to have forestry conservation, and we're not going to have a state forester. It doesn't mean that at all. It simply means they are going to function under the statutes--which many, many boards and commissions figure they could do a lot better, anyway, functioning under the statutes.

Now, the argument of putting wildlife and fisheries, was that you got so many people that are fishermen and like to go hunting. Well, maybe that's a valid argument. But, my gosh, let's don't put all these boards and commissions in here simply because we think a lot of people might like to have them in here. It doesn't do any good. It's not going to make any difference in the law. We've already taken out many, many, much more important boards. So, let's pass Mr. Abraham's amendment.

MR. HENRY

Would you yield to a question from Mr. Burns?
The gentleman yields.

MR. BURNS

Mr. Arnette, you just made a statement that they had so many people engaged in the fishery industry that that should have given it priority. That it should have been...it should be in the constitution.

MR. ARNETTE

No, Mr. Burns. You misunderstood me completely. I voted against having that in there. I think it was bad to put it in because it is totally unnecessary. I agree with Mr. Abraham's position on that particular thing. He said it was unnecessary; I think it's unnecessary. But, the convention chose to put it in. But, I say just because we put one bad thing in, let's not put in two.

MR. BURNS

Did you vote to put the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission in the constitution?

MR. ARNETTE

No, I did not, Mr. Burns. I voted against it. I voted against the section, if you'll check the record.

MR. BURNS

Your position is like Mr. Abraham's. You're against putting all these in there.

MR. ARNETTE

Mr. Burns, I'm against putting anything in the constitution which means absolutely nothing.

MR. STOVALL

Mr. Arnette, do you have any idea how many constitutions in the United States have a forestry commission in them?

MR. ARNETTE

No, I don't. But I doubt that there were very many at all.

MR. STOVALL

Can you imagine our ever having a legislature in this state that would do anything to weaken the forestry program of the state?

MR. ARNETTE

I don't think the forestry program of this state will be affected one iota by what we do here and now on having the forestry commission in or out. I don't think it's going to make any difference. You're still going to have forestry conservation; you're still going to have reforestation; you're still going to have a state forester. I don't think the legislature is going to change that one bit.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Arnette, do you subscribe to the theory of government which says that all commissions which are in the constitution are doing a very good job, and all those ones which are not listed in the constitution are doing a rotten job?

MR. ARNETTE

No, I don't believe that at all, Mrs. Zervigon. I believe that the commission is going to do its job, and do it well whether it's in the statutes or in the constitution.

Further Discussion

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in opposition to this amendment. Forestry was reborn in this state a few years ago. Our virgin, long-leaf yellow pine forests were completely denuded. We had no virgin pine forests left in the state. Our hardwood had been, for the most part, used up. So, in 1952 when this present program was started--or 1954, I'm sorry--1954, when this present program was started, we had a long ways to go. In spite of what Mr. Abraham says that this started before this, there were hundreds of thousands of acres of denuded pine land that was absolutely in no production at all--hundreds of thousands of these acres. Now, since this new program has started, there has been planted one million, three hundred and fifty thousand acres of forest plantations. Now, that has reached the stage now, where this new, renewed natural resource is supplying large wood using plants scattered pretty well all over the State of Louisiana. It has made this progress with the present set-up that we have.

Therefore, I beg you not to disturb this. I don't mean that it's the...whole thing is going to be shot out of the saddle if this is taken out of the constitution. But the people in the business definitely want this constitutional protection. Remember, there are two hundred and forty thousand families in the State of Louisiana that depend on this forest industry for their livelihood. Since it has proven successful, nobody has asked that it be taken out of the constitution. There has been no objection. Actually, there has been no scandals of any kind connected with the...with this progress that we have made in this state. Nobody has suggested that there has ever been anything...any wrongdoing in it. It's worked well. It's worked tremendously well. Therefore, since nobody wants it taken out, I ask you to please leave this in there for fear that it might be disturbed if we start making changes in the set-up. Remember this, the Louisiana Forestry Commission, that we ask to be left in this article, has, and is continuing to work with the landowners. Another good thing about the Louisiana Forestry Commission, there has been no dissension between the forest land owners and the forestry commission. They have worked well together. They...even though the industry itself has supplied most of the know-how, the forestry commission has cooperated to the very fullest. They have helped with their research in developing a better pine tree--one that matures--that grows to merchantable size in shorter time. The forestry commission has helped provide forest protection...the fire suppression--because that is one of the deadliest enemies of forest production is fire. They have all worked together.

I ask you, please don't disturb that. That is a working relation like we have not experienced with any other industry. Please leave it just like it is. There is no need for a change. It has proven to be successful. Let's let it continue to...continue in this successful operation. Thank you very much, ladies and gentlemen.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Hernandez, do I understand your argument correctly that you feel that constitutional status is helpful to the forestry industry?

MR. HERNANDEZ

Definitely it is. The people in the forest industry definitely want it left in the constitution.

MR. LANIER

Now, if we take the opposite, is it also your view that if this commission were removed from the constitution, it would have an adverse effect on the forestry industry?

MR. HERNANDEZ

I am fearful that it would have, yes, sir. I can't say positively it would have, but, I am fearful it would have. It might be discouraging to these people that are producing these fine plantations.

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

MR. LANIER

Would you take the same point of view with reference to the state mineral board?

MR. HERNANDEZ

Frankly, Mr. Lanier, I know nothing about the state mineral board, and we are discussing forestry here.

MR. LANIER

Well, what I am getting to is if being in the constitution is helpful to the forestry commission, don't you think that being in the constitution might be helpful to the state mineral board?

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Lanier, I'm sorry, but I know nothing about the mineral board. I couldn't possibly answer your question....

Further Discussion

MR. BURNS

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, we're talking about an industry now in the State of Louisiana which I don't know whether it's second, or whether it's third. I think we all agree that the oil and gas industry, possibly, is the largest. But I would daressay the forestry industry is second; or, if it's not second, it's definitely third. This has been in the constitution since it had its inception in 1921. Mr. Hernandez said the actual reforestation project began, I believe he said, around 1940. But, this is a vital and most important industry to the State of Louisiana. All that I'm asking--I'm not going to take up any more time to present a line of argument as to the difference, the importance of it. But, this is what I would like to present to you, in all sincerity. Let's not be inconsistent. If we provided for the wildlife and fisheries commission to remain in the constitution just a few hours ago, here's an industry just as important, and it's statewide, it's not confined to any particular area of the state. Let's at least be consistent and if we voted to keep the wildlife and fisheries commission in there, let's at least vote to keep the forestry commission in there.

Now, I know that with all due deference to certain of the delegates, they are against this because as they truthfully and properly said-- not because it's the forestry industry, but because it's just for putting...against putting these commissions in the constitution, period. So, I ask all of you that are not against that concept, and that did vote to...keep the wildlife and fisheries commission in, to at least keep the forestry commission in, because it's just as important to the people in the industry, and to the welfare and progress of this state, as any other of these major industries. So, I ask you to please vote against this amendment.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. ABRAHAM

Ladies and gentlemen, if we follow along with Mr. Burns' philosophy that we've got one in, we ought to be consistent and put the other in, well, then, if we're going to follow this policy, then I think we'd better go back and put all these other boards in there which we do not have.

Let me make two points. First of all, I don't know of any other state in this union that has a constitutional forestry commission.

Secondly, when the composite committee met in Lake Charles in the spring, the President of the Louisiana Forestry Commission, or the Louisiana Forestry Association, appeared before that committee. On a direct question to him by me, I asked him whether or not he felt the Forestry Commission or the state forester ought to be in the constitution. His answer was, "Well, if all the other commissions stay in, we'd like to be kept in, but if you take the various other commissions and boards out, I see no need for us to be in."

Thank you.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected:
31-71. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

Amendment sent up by Delegate Sandoz; amendment reading as follows:

Amendment 1. Page 4, line 28, immediately after the word and punctuation "esch," and before the word "and", insert the words and punctuation,"as provided by law,".

Amendment 2. Page 4, line 32, immediately after the word and punctuation "members.", delete the remainder of the line. On page 5, delete lines 1 through 6, both inclusive in their entirety.

Explanation

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Ladies and gentlemen, Delegate Sandoz had to leave. He and I had spoken about this amendment. We were in complete agreement. I've discussed it with the people up here, and there are no objections to it.

I want to explain to you the reason for it. It simply says, "as provided by law" rather than specifying what each one of these people would do. I think it eliminates a lot of explanation. It also enables us not to have to amend this constitution in the event a new industry is created within this field. I give you just a very short example. Some of you may have read, and I have been reading, about some very unusual materials being used at this time in the feeding of livestock. Now, we may, at some day, and I have been hoping on my farm, that we could feed cattle with sawdust. Now, it's not impossible if you read the same article I did. So, I want to suggest to you that that might be one of the great segments of the forestry industry of this state. It would mean at that time we'd have to amend the constitution. We simply say, "as provided by law." I'm sure it's a good commission, but this continues it. We had no objections that I know of. I'll be glad to answer any questions.

Questions

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Champagne, I notice that you have left in there the two ex-officio members. Correct?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Yes, sir.

MR. DENNERY

Well, now, do we know that there will be a director of wildlife and fisheries?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Yes, sir. This is still in there, sir.

MR. DENNERY

No, my point is, that we have not provided in the constitution for a director.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Well, Mr. Dennery...this doesn't make any difference to me. All I'm saying is these other people...you see...I'm not going that far into it. I'm only talking about this amendment. It has no change whatsoever.

MR. BOLLINGER

Mr. Champagne, is it not true that the way the committee proposal is written, and I just noticed this myself, that it's possible to fill the requirements specified in that section? You could have all members of the forestry commission coming from outside Louisiana?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Right.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Duval sends up the following amendment.
Amendment No. 1. Page 4, line 27, immediately after the word "governor" and before the word "for" insert the words "subject to confirmation by the Senate"

Explanation

MR. DUVAL

This is merely like the other amendment we had to the wildlife and fisheries commission requiring Senate confirmation of the appointments by the governor. I move the adoption of the amendment.

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Next set of amendments sent up by Delegates Hernandez, Burns, Kilbourne, and others, reads as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 4, line 23, immediately after "13." and before the word "Forestry" insert the following:

"Forestry; Acreage Taxes;"

Amendment No. 2. On page 4, between lines 23 and 24 insert the following:

"Section 13. (A) Forestry shall be practiced in the state, and the legislature is authorized to make provisions therefor. The legislature may authorize the governing authorities of the parishes to levy acreage taxes, not to exceed two cents per acre, for the purpose of this Section. The provisions of this constitution relative to the exemption of homesteads from taxation, are hereby extended and made applicable to the tax herein authorized.

Amendment No. 3. On page 4, line 24, at the beginning of the line, delete "Section 13 (A)" and insert in lieu thereof "(B)"

Amendment 4. Page 5, line 7, at the beginning of the line, change (B) to (C)

Explanation

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, you will recall that back in the taxation proposal, Mr. Bollinger pointed out very aptly that the phrase in there relative to forestry was out of place that it should be in this proposal. So, we eliminated this paragraph from the taxation proposal to put it in here.

Now, this Section 13.(A) that I propose here, simply provides for all of.....it replaces Article VI, Section 2, of the present constitution, and tracks it almost word for word. It reinstates the forest acreage tax. Now, bear in mind this is a forest acreage tax. I would like to make this clear to Mr. Lanier. It has nothing to do with drainage. It's in the forestry section. Now, this money is collected from the forest landowners, two cents an acre, and it's collected by the sheriff in each parish that levies such a tax, and goes directly from the sheriff of that parish to the Louisiana Forestry Commission who is obligated to use that money in the advance of forestry. It's considered as a contribution from the forest landowner to the forestry commission to provide for fire suppression crews. Now, as you know, the forest industry must be protected from fire. Even though all of the larger timber producers have their own fire suppression crews, they work with the state fire suppression crews. There has been a lot of harmony developed between the large landowner and the small landowner. In fact, so much so, that a lot of the large landowners are planting forty acres a year at no cost to the small landowner. Now, they encourage the practice of forestry because of the fact that the small forester, or small landowner, will help with fire prevention.

Now, the fire suppression crews are necessary. When a big fire breaks out, of course, the large companies send their fire suppression crews, and they join and work with the Louisiana Forestry Commission fire suppression crews. Therefore, in that way, they have been highly successful in their efforts and they have reduced the amount of acreage lost by fires tremendously. I haven't seen any statistics on it, but there's much less loss by fire now than there was before this came to pass. It's only two cents per acre. It goes directly to the Louisiana Forestry Commission. It costs the landowner the two cents an acre. They are not complaining about paying this two cents an acre. It helps the forestry commission. They are free to use that in any way they want, in the development of fire suppression. It's copied from Article VI, Section 2. There is nothing new in it. I ask you to please support this. In fact, it costs the state nothing. It helps the state out because it reduces the amount that is necessary to appropriate from the general fund of the state to the Louisiana Forestry Commission.

Questions

MR. LANIER

Mr. Hernandez, as I previously discussed with you, the forestry acreage tax authorized herein is not designed in any way to limit the legislature in levying other types of contributions for the benefit of land or acreage taxes. Is that correct?

MR. HERNANDEZ

Absolutely, in no way. This is the same verbiage that's been in the constitution for a long time. It has not in the past prevented your levying your type of acreage tax at all. It has nothing to do with it. It takes away from it..and neither takes away or adds to it.

MR. LANIER

So, for drainage purposes or levy purposes, if the legislature wanted to authorize say two dollars per acre, it certainly could do so and would not be subject to this limitation.

MR. HERNANDEZ

No, sir, this says clearly, for the purpose of this section.

MR. LANIER

Which is forestry.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Which is forestry, yes, sir.

MR. LANIER

The only other thing I'm concerned about here is, if you ever wanted to get an increase in this tax for forestry purposes over two cents per acre, you would have to get a constitutional amendment. Is that not correct?

MR. HERNANDEZ

That's correct, sir.

MR. BURNS

Mr. Hernandez, I don't think, perhaps, you've brought it out forcefully enough, but this two cents per acre forestry tax is permissive in that only those parishes that want to vote it on themselves, can vote it, if they see fit.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Yes, sir. That is correct, Mr. Burns. Only those parishes that desire to levy this tax. ....The pine producing parishes levy that. I have not heard one single landowner object to it.

MR. BURNS

In other words, any coastal parishes, or any parishes that don't want this two cents an acre tax for forestry improvement and fire protection, do not have to vote it. Therefore, they won't be affected by it one way or the other.

MR. HERNANDEZ

No, sir. They are not affected by it. It neither hurts them nor helps them.

MR. BURNS

Is it not a fact that this two cents an acre provides fire protection that saves thousands of acres of pinelands every winter--every fire season?

MR. HERNANDEZ

Yes, sir. I thought I pointed that out awhile ago. It, in increasing the efficiency and the equipment in fire suppression crews has greatly reduced the loss by fires.

MR. BURNS

One more question. Have you ever known of a parish--a timber-growing parish that voted down the two cents per acre tax?

MR. HERNANDEZ

No, sir. They want it.

MR. SHANNON

Mr. Hernandez, does this two cent tax yield enough money to carry out its intended use in the beginning?

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Shannon, this is a tax that never goes into the general fund or to the parish. Every bit collected is remitted directly to the Louisiana Forestry Commission and they use the money they get.

MR. SHANNON

But, now, the forestry commission gets an appropriation from the legislature, do they not?

MR. HERNANDEZ

Yes, sir. This causes that appropriation to be less by the fact that this is contributed by the landowners.

MR. SHANNON

O. K. Thank you.

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

MR. DERBES

Mr. Hernandez, I've got several technical problems with this amendment. First, it says, "The legislature may authorize the governing authorities of the parishes to levy the taxes." Now, how does this tax, if....how does this tax get to the forestry commission if it's assessed by the local governing authority?

MR. HERNANDEZ

Yes, sir, it's assessed by...you see as Mr. Burns pointed out, this tax has to do only with the pine timberlands...the pine timber producers....

MR. DERBES

Well, how does it get to the local governing...how does it get to the forestry commission if it's levied by the local governing authority?

MR. HERNANDEZ

All right. I thought I made that clear. Mr. Derbes, this tax is collected by the sheriff from these landowners and remitted directly to the Louisiana Forestry Commission. The parish gets no portion of it at all.

MR. DERBES

Now, you also say that it's an acreage tax, but there's no specific provision that it's a forestry acreage tax. Isn't... I don't mean to be...you know....to be difficult here. But it says "the legislature may authorize governing authorities to levy acreage taxes." Now, an acreage tax doesn't have to be on forestry acreage. It could be on....it could be an ad valorem tax on any kind of land.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Well, Mr. Derbes, let me answer it this way. It's for the purpose of this section. This section has to do only with forestry. This is the present provisions of the constitution. It's in Article VI, Section 2. This is copied from that.

MR. DERBES

You don't see any reason to qualify the word acreage with the word forestry acreage, or forest acreage?

MR. HERNANDEZ

No, sir. I see no thing...and there's never been a need arise for that that I know of.

MR. DERBES

Finally....

MR. HENRY

You've exceeded his time, Mr. Derbes.

MR. HERNANDEZ

I would deeply appreciate your support of this amendment. Thank you very much.

Further Discussion

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen, I rise in opposition to this amendment. The first thing it does...it puts back the very language that we took out of this proposal just a few days...that is, Proposal No. 15 just a few days ago, when we said that forestry shall be practiced in this state. We don't say that plumbing shall be practiced. We don't say that medicine shall be practiced. We don't say that dentistry shall be practiced or law shall be practiced, so why is it necessary to say that forestry shall be practiced. That would take care of the first sentence. The second sentence says that the "legislature may authorize"...well, if you don't prohibit the legislature from doing it, certainly they may authorize it. They have the full power to do it, so therefore, that particular portion is unnecessary. Furthermore, with the reference to the election which Mr. Hernandez spoke about...there's nothing in here to authorize an election. It only authorizes the local governing authority to pass such a tax. They could pass it, certainly, without any need of an election if this particular article is passed. Another thing about this particular section is, the amount of the tax is locked in, and you cannot change it if it becomes necessary. I certainly feel like that we ought to leave it flexible enough in the event that they need to levy more than two cents. It might happen. Just for your information I might tell you at the present time the state treasury is supplementing and subsidizing the forestry industry to the tune of about 5 million dollars a year. That's how much it costs us over and above the amount that we collect in the severance tax. I certainly think that it might come an occasion when we need to change that allocation a little bit, and

I hope that you will vote against this amendment so as to let us equalize it the way we should, certainly, in view of the fact of the way that we have been stripping the state of its right to have revenue.

Questions

MR. ROY

Actually, Senator, all this does is it prohibits the legislature from ever...or the local governing body...from ever getting some meaningful income from forestry lands by limiting it to two cents. Isn't that true?

MR. DE BLIEUX

It does that and furthermore, you might say it handicaps the legislature from ever having a meaningful forestry program, too.

MR. ROY

It probably would take all of the money that it would generate just to advertise that they are going to do it, wouldn't it?

MR. DE BLIEUX

That's right.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Senator De Blieux, you are correct about this is levied by the local governing authority, but I have never heard an objection raised by one of these timber...land companies yet to this tax. That is their contribution to the assistance that they receive from the state for fire.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Hernandez, there's a lot of things we have done up here that we haven't heard objection to because the people haven't had a chance to object to it before we did it.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Thank you, sir.

MR. STINSON

Mr. De Blieux, did Mr. Roy say that if this amendment is adopted that the legislature never could levy any tax? What in here prohibits that?

MR. DE BLIEUX

No, that wasn't his question. The legislature could never increase the allocation of the tax. It's locked in at two cents.

MR. STINSON

But, they could put some other tax on there if they wanted to, couldn't they?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, they couldn't put an acreage tax on something. They'd have to find...I don't know where they would find it from. Everything else is limited and locked in, just about.

Further Discussion

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I hesitantly arise to oppose this amendment of my good friend, Mr. Hernandez, and his associates. It just seems to me that this provision is just too confining. We're going to sit here and say that this tax should not exceed two cents an acre. Suppose they need two and one-half cents an acre. Suppose they need three cents an acre...or four cents an acre. Like everyone else I want fire prevention. We all need timber. We are all users of lumber. It seems to me that this entire matter could best be left in the hands of the legislature. Mr. Hernandez and his associates bring out the point that this particular thing is permissive. If it's permissive why do we have to have it in our new constitution? All of this particular matter on exactly the amount of the tax is legislative material, and the legislature has shown no indication in the past that it is inimical to the interest of our friends in north Louisiana or anywhere else here in Louisiana who grow timber. So, there really is no need to place this...to say that this tax should not exceed two cents an acre. This particular tax doesn't raise the necessary funds to do the job that is necessary to be done. The state still has to spend sums out of the general fund. I'm sure the state is willing to do so, but to put this two cent limitation in, just confines it too much. It even confines those who are willing to permit themselves to be raised. Suppose the people who actually are in the area want to have their tax raised to three cents or feel a need that the additional services that they require, require three cents. We will then have confined them to two cents and we will have to face another constitutional amendment at an additional expense of a constitutional amendment to all of the people. I urge you to vote against this particular Hernandez amendment.

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

Further Discussion

MR. KILBOURNE

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I just want to say a word in support of this amendment. I want to tell you that in my experience it is my feeling that this is the best buy you get for your taxes that exist. I live in an area where there are lots of forest lands, and I see how it works. Now let me tell you what these people do. When a police jury votes this acreage tax, they come in...they build fire towers. They maintain watches in the fire towers. They watch for these fires, and when they see a fire they've got the equipment and the crews to go out and put it out. Not only that, these foresters go out and assist the law enforcement officers in apprehending these arsonists. At certain seasons of the year they go out and set fire to the forest, and that's a very common practice in some sections of the state, and I feel that this is very important. I think it's a real good thing. It's worked well everywhere, and if the people don't want it the police juries can take it off. But, they don't come in with the fire protection unless the police juries vote for them to do it. In other words, without putting this tax on they don't have the...they don't come into a parish and build these fire towers and maintain this forestry protection. So, I ask you to vote for the amendment.

Questions

MR. SCHMITT

How far can one of these fire towers cover? How many hundreds of thousands of acres can one person watch in one of these fire towers?

MR. KILBOURNE

How many persons, what?

MR. SCHMITT

How many hundreds of thousands of acres can one person watch from these towers?

MR. KILBOURNE

Well, I can't answer that, but they put them wherever they are necessary. They put them on a high place and they can certainly see a long way, and they have a telephone....

MR. SCHMITT

Twenty thousand acres?

MR. KILBOURNE

I don't have any idea.

MR. SCHMITT

Well, let's assume it was twenty thousand acres. Then the gross amount that you would receive from that tax would only be $2,000 per year. That wouldn't even pay for that man's salary for three or four months.

MR. KILBOURNE

Really, I'm sorry....I just can't follow you. I mean....

MR. SCHMITT

I am saying...what percentage of the gross cost will this two cents per acre... acre generate?

MR. KILBOURNE

I don't have that information, I don't have any idea that it pays all of it. But it is the material assistance to it. In other words it....

MR. SCHMITT

How much.....

MR. KILBOURNE

....let me finish. It's a method for a parish to cooperate with the forestry commission. In other words....

MR. SCHMITT

... How many millions of acres are presently under this system right now?

MR. KILBOURNE

I don't know that either. I just know we have it in the parish where I am and two parishes I know of....in fact I think they have it in East Feliciana, West Feliciana, St. Helena, and I don't know how many more. Surely....

MR. SCHMITT

Well, if you had a million acres, this would only be twenty thousand dollars per year. How many millions of acres do you have under this?

MR. KILBOURNE

Mr. Schmitt, I would love to have that information at hand but I simply do not have it. I'm trying to tell you I can't answer your question.

MR. BURNS

Just one question, in answer to Mr. Schmitt's question to you doesn't it state....forestry fire fighting service also have spotter planes, helicopters that can look over miles and miles of forest, and radio down to the appropriate fire tower....

MR. KILBOURNE

That's correct, Mr. Burns. They have all of that; they have telephones in the towers and everything else.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I just want to make a few things clear. This tax--the reason a limit is placed on this.... this provision in the constitution provides for the governing authority of the parish, which is the police jury, to levy this tax on these landowners. Now this tax, I want to make clear again, is not kept by the parish, it is collected by the sheriff and remitted directly to the Louisiana Forestry Commission for them to use in fire suppression, or in any other work that they hope to do with forestry. Now it's true that this does not provide all the money that the Louisiana Forestry Commission uses, but I know of no department in the State of Louisiana that is not supported by the appropriation from the general fund. It was never intended that this should supply all the money that the Louisiana Forestry Commission uses. It does contribute to it, and if the parish wants to not levy this tax, that is left entirely up to the governing authority. They just have authority to do it; that is all. Now, the fire suppression crews of the Louisiana Forestry Commission operate all over the state. Now, I don't know whether all of the parishes that produce pine timber provide for this tax or not. We in Vernon Parish do; we feel like it's a contribution that should be made by these large landowners and they work together; it's a harmonious operation. They have worked together well, and they have done a good job. We ask you not to disturb that. Thank you very much.

Questions

MR. STOVALL

Mr. Hernandez, how long has this tax been in effect?

MR. HERNANDEZ

About 1954.

MR. STOVALL

What's happened to the price of timberland during that period of time?

MR. HERNANDEZ

What's happened to the price of timberlands? Like everything else, they've gone up.

MR. STOVALL

Well, shouldn't the...legislature be free to raise the tax on the land? The legislature....since the value of it has gone up.

MR. HERNANDEZ

This does not hamper the legislature....this only limits the police jury of that parish...the legislature is not limited in any way, under the provisions of this agreement.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted:
65-42. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Hayes sends up amendments at this time.
"Amendment 1, on page 5, delete lines 7 through 10, both inclusive in their entirety"---since that has been relettered now, better make that "and all amendments thereto".

Explanation

MR. HAYES

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this amendment is very simple. I want to delete Section (B), where we have "the commission shall appoint a state forester. He must be a graduate from an accredited school of forestry and have at least four years of forestry experience". What I am saying is that a degree and four years of experience in forestry guarantees nothing, and I think we will be making a mistake if we write this into the constitution. If a degree from a certain school would guarantee you so much, why do the lawyers require you to take the bar exam? That means that they don't believe in the degree so much. They want you to take the bar exam and if you don't pass it, they don't let you practice. I'm saying again, the best way to go about this is use your practitioners. Let's let the people in the forestry, or let the people who are running this, appoint the best people they think can do the job and this way I believe you will get the best people to do the job and let's take out these qualifications. It's a very simple amendment, and I ask you to support it. Any questions?

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected: 41-60. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 93-19. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

"Section 14. Public Service Commission Section 14 (A).....

[Motion to waive reading of the Section adopted without objection.]

Point of Information

Mr. Nunez

Mr. Chairman, we've passed over Sections 6, 7 and 8. When will we be getting to those, if I may ask?

MR. HENRY

Whenever the committee decides they want to take them up, Senator. We handle this like we have every other. Usually the committee determines the way to approach it and...we handle it that way.

Proceed, Miss Perkins.

Motion

MISS PERKINS

Thank you. Mr. Chairman, if there's no objection at this time I would like to move that this section be considered paragraph by paragraph. I think it will be .....

MR. HENRY

Lettered paragraph by lettered paragraph, Miss Perkins?

MISS PERKINS

Yes, sir.

[Motion to suspend the rules to allow consideration of Section 14 by lettered paragraphs adopted: 83-10.]

Explanation

MISS PERKINS

Thank you, sir. Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, Section (A) involves the composition of the Public Service Commission. There is a change in that we currently have a three member commission, and of course have three public service districts. This will make a change to five. I'd like to state at this time...prior to going any further into the section...I was asked to present this particular portion of the article to the convention and I would like to state that I do not necessarily agree with all the contents therein and do not know that I will vote with each and every part of the proposal. However, I will do my best to answer any questions that you may have as to the reasons of the committee for making these decisions. The reason the committee decided to change the composition from three to five members, is it was felt that there was a need for the members of the commission to get in closer contact with the people...of these...of their respective districts and this was pretty difficult to do on the basis of three districts, because the areas were so large. So they felt that this in fact could be changed to a five member board and the legislature could reapportion to form two additional districts. I'll answer any questions.

Questions

MR. KELLY

Lynn, I hope this is a fair question. Now, you said the committee decided to go to the five man commission. Do you recall what the vote was, in the committee, on that?

MISS PERKINS

It was not unanimous, but it had a very strong vote. I don't remember the exact vote though, Mr. Kelly.

MR. KELLY

Well, being that you are at the mike. What is your personal opinion on this?

MISS PERKINS

I'd like to reserve my opinion, and simply cast my vote.

MR. BURSON

Miss Perkins, do you share my view that the Public Service Commission, perhaps as much or more than any agency of state government in Louisiana, has done a good job protecting the public interest?

MISS PERKINS

Yes, Mr. Burson, I do share that view and I think that the members of the committee share that view, but, this...the change was made because they felt that the members might be more responsive if the districts were smaller.

MR. BURSON

Well this is going to be my next question. Don't you think they've been very responsive to the needs of the public up to now?

MISS PERKINS

To my knowledge. Yes, sir.

MR. BURSON

And don't think that when you meddle with something that works well, that you always have the danger of messing it up.

MISS PERKINS

Yes, sir.

MR. JUNEAU

Lynn, in your committee did...wasn't there some discussion about how much money it would cost to staff two more commissioners?

MISS PERKINS

No. In fact, one of the members of the Public Service Commission came down and stated his personal opinion with reference to the increase in the proposal, but no figures were ever given to the committee as to additional cost.

MR. JUNEAU

Wasn't...wasn't it projected that it very likely could cost between seventy-five thousand and a hundred thousand dollars, just to add a commission member? Wasn't...wasn't that the figures they were talking about?

MISS PERKINS

That might have been projected, but I was not aware of it.

MR. JUNEAU

Wasn't it brought out in your committee that the one problem that the Public Service Commission has had, is not the number of commissioners, but the lack of revenues to hire expertise in the area of engineers, auditors, so they could get the knowledge to make the decisions?

MISS PERKINS

Yes, sir. That was very definitely brought out.

MR. JUNEAU

Now, if that would be true and we don't have the staff and we're using additional money just to add more elective positions. Have we really solved the problem that the commission might have had in reaching it's decisions?

MISS PERKINS

This is what this convention will decide.

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

MR. BROWN

Miss Perkins, why the number five? What was the feeling of the committee to pick the number five?

MISS PERKINS

Well, actually the way five was determined is they felt that there needed to be an increase. The committee also discussed the possibility of an increase to eight per congressional districts. But, they felt that there should be an increase so that they would be more responsive to the people, but yet they did not want an even number of eight or as many persons on the committee as eight.

MR. BROWN

So the committee turned that...is that your view--that you would rather have five than eight--or....

MISS PERKINS

No, sir. I'm going to reserve my opinion. The committee chose five.

MR. BOLLINGER

Lynn, with reference to Mr. Juneau's question, possibly you weren't there that day, but is it not true that the staff went out and found out the salary of the Public Service Commissioners, that they had an office here and an office in their home district, a car, what staff they had? The committee did research what it would cost approximately to add to commissioners what the commissioners were now getting; is that not true?

MISS PERKINS

Mr. Bollinger, as a member of that committee, I'm sure that if you say it occurred, it did.

MR. STOVALL

Miss Perkins, are you aware that the Executive Branch Committee also dealt with the Public Service Commission?

MISS PERKINS

Yes, sir.

MR. STOVALL

Do you know that the members of the Executive Branch Committee recommended at least five members of the Public Service Commission?

MISS PERKINS

Yes, sir.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

A set of amendments sent up by Delegates Ginn, Reeves, Kelly, Roemer, Juneau, Tobias and Jenkins.

Amendment No. 1, on page 5, line 13, delete the word "five" and insert in lieu thereof the word "three".

Explanation

MR. GINN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, we're fixing to get into what I think is a very, very important area. We're talking about the Public Service Commission and, specifically, the composition of the Public Service Commission...three, five, eight, nine...whatever it shall be. My amendment retains it at three as it is today, and that's what I want to talk about. Ladies and gentlemen, historically, we have had three ever since the commission's inception in 1898 when it was the Railroad Commission that had three, and they have three now; and it's been that way for 75 years, and I think it's worked well. Historically, the commission has also been underfunded. As an example, in 1963 the budget was only $262,000, and in 1972, alone, litigation--court costs exceeded the budget of 1965. So, with inadequate money now, by adding new commissioners and all the related expenses, it's going to cost even more money--much more money. Figures indicate that an additional commissioner would perhaps increase the cost $144,000 or more. Now, the additional cost, if you increase the commission, is going to include many things. It's going to include salaries---salaries of the commissioners, of their assistants, of their clerical staff, office rent and expenses, and all expenses related. I think it's just better to put this possibility of this additional expense...put them on experts, on trained specialists instead of new commissioners. Now, ladies and gentlemen, the problems of the Public Service Commission are increasing, and I think that adding new commissioners is not going to alleviate that problem, necessarily. What you're going to need...you're going to need experts, trained specialists, engineers, career people, people of this sort. Another aspect: it is my opinion as of now the coordination of the commission is somewhat confused. It is extremely difficult today with three with the coordination, such as emergency situations, such as restraining orders and hearings and meetings and decisions and decision dates, with three, and if you increase that number it's going to be more confused. It's going to be more complicated. Now, just a few years ago the Public Service Commission districts underwent alteration, and if you create new districts, new commissioners, you're going to have another redistricting--more cost, more money. It's going to cost money to do that. You're putting more dollars on those taxpayers. Another reason I'm against an increase and in favor of three is because, if you increase the number, I'm afraid it's going to inject more politics into it---more sectionalism, more regionalism. I would hate to see the day when we have the commissioners representing certain areas of the state instead of the state at large. I don't want to see that sectionalism injected into the commission. I'm also afraid that if you get new commissioners, new districts, smaller districts--due to increasing the number--that you're going to perhaps enable certain big businesses or utilities or telephone companies or somebody...you might enable them to elect one of their own---someone to represent their interest and not the interest of the people at large, even from a large district. I'm concerned with that. Now, one of the main reasons...one of the main facts that I can give you as to why I'm against an increase is that 40 out of the 50 states...40 states have three commissioners or less. Three out of that 40 have only one. It is the rule, not the exception, the rule that states have three or less commissioners. So, ladies and gentlemen, it's going to cost a lot more money to increase it, so let's keep it at three. I'm afraid of sectionalism or regionalism, and I will reiterate, it is the rule--not the exception--to have three. I ask for your favorable vote.

Question

MR. O'NEILL

David, the recent legislature passed the energy bill, and I'm sure you probably know about it, and I'm sure you know that the new commission they created was granted some powers that, you know, that the Public Service Commission won't have. Don't you think that your amendment is in keeping with, you know, the services that the Public Service Commission now renders, and that maybe we should put some attention on this other commission that will be created since it will have powers as well?

MR. GINN

Yes, Gary. You can talk about that all day, but, yes, I do agree with you, and I think you're right.

Further Discussion

MR. ALEXANDER

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I rise at this time to oppose this amendment for the following reasons. I think it has been a well known fact in this state that when the Public Service Commission was created some 70 years ago...because it used to be the Railroad Commission; for example, there was no trucking industry in the state. There was no utility industry in the state. The telephone industry: that is, communications was infinitesimal at that time, which means that its workload was very small. Now, the members of the commission say that they need more funds, and they need more technicians. That is true. I would vote to do that. But, the major problem with the commission now is that it takes them sometimes as long as two years to render some decisions. Now, why? The reason for that is the full three-man commission must sit down every time there is a hearing and listen to the debate and the evidence. Then, that same three man commission must sit down somewhere after taking the evidence under advisement and make a decision among themselves. I'm saying to you that a five-man or a seven-man commission would permit those commissioners to divide into subcommittees--at least two subcommittees--and hear cases separately, and then sit down together and make decisions. It would accelerate their work. It would cut, in effect, their workload in half. Nothing would prevent them even from dividing into three subcommittees if they have seven members. Let two commissioners hear a case and then sit down together and make decisions based on the recommendations from their subcommittee. So, I say to you that the population of Louisiana has increased; the technology of Louisiana has increased; transportation has increased; the workload has increased; and I say to you that the commission should be increased. Please vote this amendment down.

Further Discussion

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise in support of this amendment. We have a Public Service Commission in this state which in my view has been one of the most responsive and responsible agencies of government that we have. I have practiced before the Public Service Commission. My law firm has quite frequently. In my experience they do their work expeditiously, and they do it well. I see no warrant; I've heard no demand, no outcry, from the public to increase the members of that commission from three to five or any other number. What would the consequences of this increase be? The immediate consequence, of course, is a whole lot of new salaries and expenses for the taxpayers to pay which I don't think we want to do. Another consequence is we're going to be meddling with the situation of three presently elected state officials of some influence who, if I were in their place, I don't think I would appreciate it at all. I think it might lead me very well to get out and oppose this constitution. Especially, since I thought that I had been doing a good job, and didn't understand why the Constitutional Convention would want to create new offices. Of course, there is one explanation for creation of new offices. This creates new offices for somebody to run for. I'm not suggesting that this is motivating anyone, but it certainly might be a motivation; I think you would agree. I don't think that the public sent us here to create new offices for us or for anybody else to have to run for. I happen to live in St. Landry Parish which is at the very tail end of the Third Public Service Commission District now served by Mr. Kennon who lives way up in Minden, and I find that far from being unresponsive that he has been extremely responsive to the peculiar needs as far as utilities are concerned in the area in which I live. It seems to me that if you boil this down, you consider that it is the rule in most other states that commissions of this type have small memberships and that, where you have had Railroad Commissions that have become highly politicalized, is where you inevitably wind up with scandals in this area; that it is foolhardy and extremely unwise on our part just to pick a number out of the air--whether it be five, eight, or twelve--and change a system that has been working well. I submit to you we should not do it. I hope you adopt the amendment.

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

Questions

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Burson, I listened real intensely to your argument about the number of Public Service Commissioners we now have in this state, and I just happened to think while I was listening...I wonder how many judges we had back in 1921, and how many assistant D.A.'s, and I wonder why they have been increased? Since, after all, some of those don't even get increased and don't even have to run for office. They just get appointed.

MR. BURSON

As far as I know, Senator Rayburn, we only had seven Supreme Court justices back then, and that's still the same number we have right now, and I think they do an adequate job taking care of their work....

MR. RAYBURN

I know, but is there any difference between...they represent the people of this state and, in this instance, three people represent the people of this state. It looks to me like there's quite a bit of difference between seven and three.

MR. BURSON

I think that those particular three have primarily a decision making duty much more attuned to the duties of, say, the Louisiana State Supreme Court than district attorneys, which is an entirely different and really not a comparable situation.

MR. DESHOTELS

Jack, in reference to the Senator's question, actually, D.A.'s have not been increased that much in the past years, but we have given them more assistants; isn't that correct?

MR. BURSON

That's correct.

MR. DESHOTELS

And, couldn't we give the commissioners more assistants to help them with their work if they are overloaded?

MR. BURSON

I think we could very well increase the staff of the Public Service Commission.

Further Discussion

MR. SINGLETARY

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I rise in opposition to this amendment. My district stretches from the Mississippi to Texas, and both committees--both the Executive Committee and Natural Resources Committee--recommended five. I'd favor five or possibly eight. But, I think the commission needs to be more representative, and I'd like to see it at least stay as five, as the committee recommended, or possibly eight.

Further Discussion

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in support of the amendment. I'll just make this very simple; I just don't think that it's more politicians we need in this state. I think this commission has functioned very well. You've heard very few complaints. I do say that you could use that money that would go to financing two more, or three more, or four more politicians, you could use it better--and I suggest this to the legislature--giving them more professional help. Then they can turn out the opinions faster. But the decisions are being well-handled even now, and I say, it is not more politicians we need and that the commission should be left at three.

I hope you will adopt the amendment.

Questions

MR. CHATELAIN

Mrs. Miller, I'm sure you and I both supported amendments here that would bring about...closer to the people, the districts. . .the court of appeal's judges and stuff like that. I think we did a great, great thing for Louisiana, there. Right now, are you familiar with the fact that the second Public Service Commission runs from the Texas border to the...it takes in the upper...to the Mississippi or the Florida parishes. Are you familiar with that, ma'am?

MRS. MILLER

I'm familiar with that, but I think you have...I don't think you can compare apples to oranges or oranges to bananas. I think you have an entirely different situation. In the judiciary, we are trying to take judges out of politics; this has always been the philosophy. This ever is a political job in the sense that it's an administrative job in state government. I don't think it really matters how large or small the districts are. The people that have been running for them have really not complained. If you go into congressional districts, you're going to have some complaints, if you make them concurrent with congressional districts because then you'd be creating a little political domains that might be a threat to the congressmen. So, then we might find ourselves confronted with the situation that the congressmen in our areas are opposing the constitution because we have something concurrent with them which would be building up, in effect, competition for them, perhaps.

MR. CHATELAIN

Let me ask you a question. . .

MRS. MILLER

So, I think at this stage you are not putting these people where they are able to make tickets with anyone to run. You are keeping them from being able to get in with a lot of local officials on local races. I think the very size of it was helpful.

MR. CHATELAIN

Did we not discuss the cost of a candidate running in that large of an area would be, really, a great cost on modern day costs, wouldn't it, ma'am?

MRS. MILLER

It would be a great cost, but this is not a problem when you run for other political offices. As I say, I don't compare it to the judiciary because we're keeping the judiciary out of politics. We don't want them to have to go out and campaign in big areas. So, I think it's entirely different, and that this is a political race. We acknowledged this.

MR. DERBES

Mrs. Miller, is there any other state in the United States where you can go to a pay phone and call your elected public service commissioner for a nickel?

MRS. MILLER

Well, Mr. Derbes, I have traveled all over the United States; and I have called home on pay phones, and I've had to look for dimes in other states, but I can always scare up a nickel in Louisiana. I think that this has worked very well, and I think that we would...the concept of three should be kept and retained.

MR. ANZALONE

Mrs. Miller, did you know that in my Public Service Commission district I guarantee you that you can't call my public service commissioner from Independence, Louisiana, to wherever he's living over there around Texas, somewhere, for a nickel?

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected: 40-69. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Anzalone. . .
Amendment No. 1. On page 5, line 13, immediately after the word "consists of" delete the word "five" and insert in lieu thereof the word "eight".

Explanation

MR. ANZALONE

Ladies and gentlemen, to acquaint you with what this amendment does, it changes only one little bitty word in this provision. You have heard some arguments against having three public service commissioners in this state. I would like to give you some of the arguments as to why some of us feel that it should be increased. The philosophy of the Public Service Commission is to have elected and not appointed officials insofar as the regulation of public utilities are concerned, to enforce the statutes and regulations of this state to insure that the general public--I repeat, to insure that the general public--receives adequate utility services at a reasonable and just rate. Insofar as the regulation of your public transportation, I submit to you, again, that it is the philosophy of this state to have elected public officials to enforce the statutes and regulations of this state to insure that the general public--and I repeat, the general public--receives adequate transportation services at reasonable and just rates. Now, let's go back to 1921 when this original Public Service Commission was created; it had three members. The areas of representation you have on your desk, now, showing you three Public Service Commission districts. The first is by far the smallest. It extends from the tip of Orleans Parish to the tip of St. Mary Parish. My particular Public Service Commission district extends from Pearl River County in Mississippi to Orange County in Texas. The Third Congressional District goes from Port Allen to Texas. Now, if these people. . . and we ought to maintain the philosophy of elected officials protecting the general public in the areas of regulation of public utilities and in the area of regulation of public transportation, plus the other duties that we are going to give them in this particular convention is to be maintained, I submit to you that the answer is not to appoint more assistants, but to have more elected officials. These are the people who are going to be responsible to the public, not their assistants. We have gone over this time and time again in this convention. We started out with three elected officials; we got to five, and we now have nine. I think that it is the philosophy of the people of this state as well as the philosophy of the delegates to this convention that it is going to be the elected officials of this state who are going to govern this state. I would like to correlate the business of the Public Service Commission to that of the judicial districts and the judges as contained therein. In 1921, we had a judicial district comprising the Twenty-first Judicial District of this state composed of Tangipahoa, St. Helena and Livingston Parish. In that district, at that time, we had one judge. Now, we have four maintaining the philosophy of an elected judge who is going to decide lawsuits. We did not appoint assistants; we got more elected judges. Now, there's been some speculation as to why do we not tie into the number of public service commissioners to the congressional districts. A very simple reason: if we come to a point where we are to gain a congressman, then the number eight is going to be out of kilter. We're going to have nine congressional districts and it's going to certainly fall incumbent upon the legislature to reapportion. If we come up and we lose a congressman, the same thing is going to happen. Ladies and gentlemen, I submit to you that those of us who live in the southeastern part of the State of Louisiana who don't even know nor have most of us ever seen--and I daresay that I'm thirty-eight years old; I think my public service commissioner is named Clemett, and if I'm not mistaken, I've seen him one time in my life. Now, this man does not have the interests of the people that live around me at heart. But, I'll tell you what, if we had eight, we'd have one a little bit more closely to home, and we'd have somebody that would be a little bit more interested in getting St. Helena Parish some light lines and the northern part of Tangipahoa Parish a little better telephone service. That particular area about two miles east of Amite where we've got fifteen or sixteen people on one telephone line right now, we may be able to get down and have some that's got only eight. What I'm telling you is that the closer you bring government to the people, the better off you are going to be. This is what this amendment does, and this is what I ask you to do.

Questions

MR. BURSON

Mr. Anzalone, are you going with the eight amendment or the seven amendment?

MR. ANZALONE

The eight.

MR. BURSON

Well, one thing that immediately comes to mind is: What are you going to do when you get a four to four split? How are you going to make a decision?

MR. ANZALONE

Mr. Burson, as in the case of my police jury back home, we have operated with ten members on the police jury for, if I'm not mistaken, the past sixty-one years. One member serves as a non-voting chairman, and we have never had any problem with it yet.

MR. BURSON

Is that contained in your proposal?

MR. ANZALONE

It is going to be.

MR. BURSON

Oh. Now, my next question is: I assume you are familiar with the mode of practice before the Public Service Commission.

MR. ANZALONE

Slightly.

MR. BURSON

Isn't one immediate increase that's going to have to be made is to increase the size of the table about three times to get, in an administrative hearing, that large a group around there together?

MR. ANZALONE

It would be just about the size of the bench on the Supreme Court--one seat bigger.

MR. BURSON

Do you think that it is a proper analogy as all the discussion here that's been carried on to a legislative function and representing people and a quasi-judicial body--administrative body--which is supposed to be reaching a decision on facts presented to them by litigants?

MR. ANZALONE

Jack, I could take one or two ways of answering that question, but I'm going to try to answer it to you in a country, practical way. I've never yet seen a man who wanted a telephone that called the telephone company and got it. Whenever he was out of lights, I never saw him call the light company and get it. But, by some mysterious reason, if you had somebody that knew somebody that knew the public service commissioner and you got in touch with him, and you could convince him of that, then it got out of the realm of rate-making and it got into the realm of telephone-getting.

MR. BURSON

Do you think it would be any more difficult for you to pick up the telephone and call the man if you had eight rather than three, as you do now?

MR. ANZALONE

No, sir; it would be a lot less difficult, because I don't even know who I got, now.

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Anzalone, what are we going to do with the existing three commissioners? How would they serve out their terms? Would they lose their terms of office? Would we get all new ones? How are we going to work out that detail--that problem?

MR. ANZALONE

Well, Mr. Perez, you are familiar with Act 2 of 1972 which provides that we can't shorten anybody's term. So, what we're going to have to do is that we're going to get into the schedule and make some type of a provision to. . . of necessity, retain these people until such time as the transition period is over.

MR. PEREZ

Well, did you know that there was a provision in the present constitution. . . in the '21 constitution which took the old Railroad Commission provided that they would serve their terms out? My question is: whether you would be agreeable, if this amendment passes, to another amendment which would guarantee that the presently elected people serve their terms out, and they would represent the district in which they presently reside?

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

MR. ANZALONE

I have no objection whatsoever.

MR. ROEMER

Hey, Joe, the problem was raised about the even number on this board. Well, don't we have an even number in this convention, a hundred and thirty-two, including the chairman?

MR. ANZALONE

Sure do. Yes, sir.

MR. ALEXANDER

Mr. Anzalone, would a vote for your amendment be tantamount to a vote to do away with the nickel telephone? Will it have anything to do with the nickel telephone?

MR. ANZALONE

Reverend Alexander, if we got this thing a little bit closer to the people, we probably could get two calls for a nickel.

MR. ALEXANDER

Mr. Anzalone, further, did you know that I have an amendment to neutralize the chairman, the man who is the acting chairman, for one year so that he can't vote while he's chairman, and you'll have an uneven number voting?

MR. ANZALONE

Yes, sir.

MR. SMITH

Mr. Anzalone, with eight men on the commission, do you think you'd ever be able to get any decisions from them?

MR. ANZALONE

I would. . .

MR. SMITH

With eight members?

MR. ANZALONE

I would certainly hope so, Mr. Jap.

MR. SMITH

It would take a good while, wouldn't it?

MR. ANZALONE

Well, I don't see why it would take any longer than it's taking now.

MR. SMITH

With eight men to decide it, don't you think that's way too many? Three too many. . . Don't you think that's three too many?

MR. ANZALONE

No, sir.

Personal Privilege

MR. LOWE

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I have prepared the financial statement for the month of November and for the period January 5, 1973 through November 30, 1973. Through this date, we had budgeted a total expenditures of $378,000--excuse me, that's for the month of November, $378,000. Our actual expenditures are $257,000. So, we are under budget for the month of November by $120,000.

Now, the budget for the year to date, the ten months or eleven months, was $2,347,000. We have actually spent $1,645,000. So, for the eleven month period, we are $702,000 under budget.

Mr. Chairman, I move that we make this financial report part of the official record of today's proceedings.

[Motion to make the financial report a part of the official Journal adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendment No. 1. On page. . . sent up by Delegate Anzalone. On page 5, line 13, immediately after the word "of" and before the word "members" delete the word "five" and insert in lieu thereof the word "seven".

Explanation

MR. ANZALONE

Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I cannot impress upon you enough the problems of the rural areas insofar as your Public Service Commissions are concerned. There may have been a great deal of objection against the number "eight" because of the congressional districts, even number or what have you. I am now offering an amendment that would create "seven." Now, if some of you are concerned about how hard it would be to reapportion the state into seven Public Service Commission districts, I would offer to you the fact that there are one hundred and five representative districts at the present time, based upon the one man, one vote proposition. It's a very simple matter of taking seven representative districts per Public Service Commission district. You would have absolutely no problem in your reapportionment. I ask you once again, please realize the problems that we in the rural areas have with our public service, in getting service, in getting adequate service. I think too many people here are concerned about the nickel telephone. In a lot of places where we don't even have them, we'd like to get them. People are worried about low rates on lights. There are a lot of places that can't get it. I ask you, please realize the problems that we do have and give me your favorable consideration.

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected: 45-66. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The next amendment is offered up by Reverend Alexander. Amendment No. 1. On page 5, at the end of line 17, after the word and punctuation "chairman." add the following:
"The chairman shall have no vote except to break a tie."

Explanation

MR. ALEXANDER

Mr. Chairman, my amendment was put in in the event the Anzalone amendment of "eight" would have passed. I therefore withdraw it and call for the previous question on the section.

[Amendment withdrawn. Motion for the Previous Question on Paragraph A rejected: 13-79.]

MR. CASEY

The Clerk will read the Perez amendment.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Copies are being run. We do not have the distribution copies as yet. The amendment reads as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 5, at the end of line 17, add the following:

"Each commissioner serving upon the effective date of this constitution shall be the commissioner for the new district in which he resides and shall serve out the term for which he was chosen."

Explanation

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, the courts have many times held that an elective officer does not have any constitutional right to that particular office. It would be possible, by act of the legislature, to terminate the terms of the men who are presently serving. If you will recall, Mr. Anzalone offered his amendment, and the same situation applies here, where you're increasing the number. It would be possible that these people could lose their offices. All that I wanted to do was to insure that they would serve their terms out. What this provides is that each commissioner serving upon the effective date of the constitution shall be the commissioner for the new district in which he resides and shall serve out the term for which he was chosen."

I'll yield to questions.

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

Questions

MR. LANIER

Mr. Perez, isn't it true that under the act that called the convention that although we are prohibited from limiting any term prior to 1976, that we are authorized to limit terms after 1976?

MR. PEREZ

That's correct, and some of these offices would extend beyond that time.

MR. BOLLINGER

Chalin, my only question is this: Why wouldn't we have to do the same thing in the article where we lowered the term of office for the Supreme Court justice, because that would be after 1976, some of these?

MR. PEREZ

I did not understand you.

MR. BOLLINGER

I said, if Mr. Lanier. . .if your answer to Mr. Lanier's question was correct, why would not we have to go back into the article on the judiciary and put the same provision in because we lowered the term of office for the Supreme Court justices? These, in some cases, go into--after 1976.

MR. PEREZ

Well, as I would understand it, what has actually happened is to reduce their terms of office, unless we had a provision such as this. Of course, if somebody wants to go back into that office, fine. But, in this particular case, these people should be continued in office until their terms expire.

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Perez, I have no objection to your amendment, but I just thought we ought to get something clear. I think Act 2 prohibits us from shortening the term of any official, not necessarily limited to 1976. That's my understanding of Act 2. Now, I may be wrong.

MR. PEREZ

This, however, would give the legislature certain authority, and the legislature might be able to actually do away with the man's office.

MR. DUVAL

I agree with your amendment. I'm just saying I think there's some misunderstanding as to--like the Supreme Court justices.

MR. PEREZ

I move the adoption of the amendment.

MR. SINGLETARY

Mr. Perez, couldn't something like your amendment be in the schedule?

MR. PEREZ

No, sir; I don't believe so. We have a very comparable provision. When we went for the Railroad Commission into the Public Service Commission in the 1921 Constitution, it provided that the members of the Railroad Commission would serve out their terms of office and thereafter that the parties would be elected. This is a very similar provision when we transferred from the Railroad Commission into a Public Service Commission. I do believe that this should be in the constitution.

[Amendment reread.]

Personal Privilege

MR. ABRAHAM

Mr. Chairman, I object to voting on these things or passing on them before the amendments are passed out. I think we ought to have them in our hand before we do anything with them.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Abraham, I can't argue with you on that.

Point of Information

MR. SHANNON

Does. . .aren't we prohibited from shortening the term of any elected official?

MR. CASEY

Yes, Mr. Shannon, under the act which established this.

MR. SHANNON

Yes, that's what I thought.

MR. PEREZ

I just wanted to answer the question that this gives the authority to the legislature to provide the districts and terms, etc. I don't believe there's any prohibition against giving the legislature the right to do it. There is no such thing as a constitutional right to a public office.

Questions

MR. BURSON

Mr. Perez, since this is the only reapportionment that we've done in the midst of this convention, don't you think that it would be only fair and appropriate that we inform the gentlemen occupying those offices, now, that while we have reapportioned, we have not gerrymandered them out of office, necessarily?

MR. PEREZ

I think that's a very good idea, and it's something that we should definitely do.

MR. CHATELAIN

Mr. Perez, do you envision any problem since they had to be staggered--those commissioners had to be staggered--you know, according to this section? They are to be staggered. Do you envision any problem with that, sir?

MR. PEREZ

No, I don't see any problem whatsoever because as these terms of office expire, then there would be elections in the districts. These people would just be the commissioners for these new districts until their terms of office expire.

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Perez, it's true we are not gerrymandering them out of their office, but doesn't this have the effect of gerrymandering them in?

MR. PEREZ

Well, these people were elected for certain terms, for certain periods of time. I don't believe anybody here in this convention would want to say, "Well, these people are elected and there were three, now we're going to increase to five, so let's take their offices away from them." I don't think anybody here would want to do that.

MRS. MILLER

Yes, but aren't we pretty much making it possible, when the new elections come up, be sure that they have a district they can run in?

MR. PEREZ

I don't think that's necessarily so. That will be up to the legislature to determine the five districts as opposed to the present three districts.

Further Discussion

MR. SINGLETARY

Ladies and gentlemen, I just oppose this amendment for the reason that I think it should be in the schedule. If Mr. Perez would offer it at that time, I'd support it. I don't wish to gerrymander anybody out of office, but I just think that this is not the proper place to put such a provision.

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted: 98-11. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous Question ordered on Paragraph (A). Paragraph (A) adopted: 90-22. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of Paragraph (B).

MR. POYNTER

"(B) Powers and Duties. The commission shall regulate all common carriers and public utilities as provided by law. It shall adopt and enforce reasonable rules, regulations, and procedures necessary for the discharge of its duties, and shall have other powers and perform other duties as provided by law."

Explanation

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

MISS PERKINS

Ladies and gentlemen, basically, this provision is the provision contained in the 1921 Constitution, but is put in far more general terms. However, one thing that is mentioned in the '21 Constitution that is not mentioned in this particular article is the exclusion of regulation of the industrial sales of gas. However, this would not be an issue at this time because it would actually go down to Section (F) jurisdiction. But, I didn't want to mislead you by saying there was no change when, in fact, there is a change to that extent. I'd also like to point out for those of you that possibly are a little bit unfamiliar with it, as I was, that a common carrier would be a person or goods for hire; and a public utility would include all utilities except the limitation contained in Paragraph (C), and that would be a utility owned by a political subdivision. I'll be happy to answer any questions.

Question

MR. BOLLINGER

Lynn, is it not true that on line 19, where we have the words "as provided by law" that these words were added because we thought in the future some utility might be deemed...might for the public good, be deemed not controllable by the Public Service Commission, or that some new utility we'd want to place under, so that this left flexibility for the legislature to dictate what would be controlled and what would not be controlled?

MISS PERKINS

Yes, sir. That's correct; it basically turns it over to the legislature.

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

Amendments sent up by Delegate Gravel at the present time, read as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 5, line 18, immediately after the word "Duties." delete the word "The" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Except for natural gas, the"

Amendment No. 2. On page 5, between lines 23 and 24, add the following Paragraph:

"The legislature shall provide for the regulation of natural gas by such regulatory authority as it may designate."

Explanation

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Acting Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this amendment is proposed in order to make it perfectly clear that the Public Service Commission does not have the constitutional and exclusive authority with respect to the regulation of natural gas. The amendment, in effect, will provide that the legislature shall enact statutes and provide for the regulation of natural gas by such regulatory authority as it may designate. The language of the committee proposal does not accomplish this purpose, and the issue is precisely before you, I think, by this amendment. The people who know a whole lot more about this than I do tell me that clearly the Federal Power Commission and other...and the jurisprudence that attends the activities of that commissioner...commission have designated natural gas as being a public utility. So, that there won't be any problem with the language contained in Section 2 on Page 1, as we finally amended and adopted it, and the provisions that are contained in the section that we are now considering, this amendment is proposed to make it clear that the legislature shall provide the...shall designate the regulatory body that shall regulate natural gas. I'll yield for any questions.

Questions

MR. KEAN

Mr. Gravel, suppose you have a pipeline company which engages in the transportation of natural gas--doesn't own the gas, simply transports it for a fee. Which agency would regulate that pipeline company, the Public Service Commission, or some other regulatory authority designated by the legislature?

MR. GRAVEL

Well, Mr. Kean, it was my intention, and I believe the language of Amendment No. 2 would cover it by the provision that says that "the legislature shall provide for the regulation of natural gas by such regulatory authority as it may designate." I think that....

MR. KEAN

In other words, that company would be regulated by whatever other regulatory agent the legislature designated.

MR. GRAVEL

That's correct. It could be the Public Service Commission. It might be the Agency Commission, or it might be some other agency that would be specially designated by the legislature.

MR. KEAN

Then, you'd have to give that other agency all of the authority that the Public Service Commission had to regulate rates and to take into consideration profit factor and other matters of that kind. So, in effect, the legislature could set up two public service commissions: one that would be related to natural gas and the transportation of natural gas; and then this one that's established in the constitution. We've got nothing in the constitution with respect to any restraint, with respect to the organization and composition of this other agency that's going to exercise all those powers, do we?

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Kean, the legislature really has to implement the authority and powers of the Public Service Commission anyway under the provisions of this proposal because the proposal here before us says that the commission shall regulate all common carriers and public utilities as provided by law. So, the legislature's got to, of course, implement this particular provision. The purpose of my amendment...the clear purpose of it is to authorize the legislature to devise regulatory procedures with respect to natural gas either within the Public Service Commission or such other regulatory agencies it may designate.

MR. KEAN

What is your objection to simply leaving it in the Public Service Commission as this would presently provide for?

MR. GRAVEL

The purpose of this amendment is to leave the option with the legislature and not make it mandatorially controlled by the Public Service Commission.

MR. KEAN

My point is, assuming it is now under the Public Service Commission...

MR. GRAVEL

It's not now under the Public Service Commission.

MR. KEAN

All right. But, under this provision, would it not be under the Public Service Commission?

MR. GRAVEL

In my opinion, under the provision as it presently exists, it would be.

MR. KEAN

You are unwilling to leave it in that posture. You want it to be up to the legislature as to whether they want to change it?

MR. GRAVEL

That's what I've been saying all along.

MR. DERBES

Mr. Gravel, I am in sympathy with your purpose, but I suggest to you that your amendment doesn't do what you say it does. Let me explain my criticism of it to you. As amended, the first sentence of Section (B) would say "except for natural gas, the commission shall regulate all common carriers and public utilities as provided by law." Now, as I read the sentence as it would be amended by your amendment, the legislature could never invest the Public Service Commission with the power to regulate natural gas.

MR. GRAVEL

No. I'll...

MR. DERBES

Do you see that?

MR. GRAVEL

I see your point, and I think I can answer that. My appreciation of the language of the committee is that the commission shall regulate all common carriers and public utilities which would include natural gas. That makes it mandatory. The legislature could only provide methods and procedures within this particular mandatory direction. I think by utilizing the Second Amendment, it's clearly stated that there is no mandatory requirement that the Public Service Commission regulate natural gas, but that the legislature could so authorize it. Now, I must concede that when you consider the amendment and the language together that perhaps some question could arise.

104th Days Proceedings—December 19, 1973

MR. DERBES

Let me try just by way of explanation say that essentially I wrote the section as it stands, and checked it out with the staff. Our position on it was that it permitted the legislature to authorize essentially the jurisdiction, the length and breadth of the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission, to either derogate from it or supplement it. Now, if that's...if it's not clear enough to you, I would have no objection to a provision which would say "the legislature may essentially take away the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission over natural gas." But, I don't like the language that says "except for natural gas" because it seems to say that the Public Service Commission constitutionally can never regulate natural gas.

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Derbes, you may well have a point there. It might be confusing. Let me say this: I think it's such an important area that I would hope that the persons representing the committee would be willing to move that this section then be passed over until we can come up with clear language at least by way of alternatives so that the convention could act upon language that would be clear and that there would be no misunderstanding. I want to be sure that there's presented before this convention, and I want to strongly support a provision that will authorize the legislature to designate the regulatory agency that will control the transportation and sale of natural gas. That's what I hope we can do, and I believe we might better get off this and try to work it out.

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Gravel, let me ask you this, then: your objective, as I understand it, is not to forever prohibit the Public Service Commission, say, ten years from now from getting into this area. That's not your objective, correct?

MR. GRAVEL

No, sir. My whole objective is to permit the legislature to designate either the Public Service Commission or some other regulatory agency to control the transportation, disposition, and use of natural gas---but, to leave it up to the legislature.

MR. LAMBERT

Well, the committee's intention was the same thing: to provide the flexibility in the future.

MR. GRAVEL

Well, I've got to agree with Mr. Derbes. I think there needs to be some clarity of language here, and I would hope...as a matter of fact, if you would permit me to do so, Mr. Chairman, I would like to move at this time that we pass over this section in the hope that we can devise some language that will clearly set forth what I believe might be the intention of most of the members of this convention.

MR. LAMBERT

All right. Why don't you withdraw your amendment, and then the committee would ask that we pass over this section and go to the next one if Miss Perkins has no objection.

MR. GRAVEL

I move to withdraw my amendment at this time, Mr. Chairman.

[Amendment withdrawn. Motion to take up other orders adopted without objection. Adjournment to 9:00 o'clock a.m., Thursday, December 20, 1973.]

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

READING AND ADOPTION OF THE JOURNAL

UNFINISHED BUSINESS

PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

MR. POYNTER

Regular Order No. 1. Unfinished Business.

Committee Proposal No. 34, introduced by Delegate Lambert, Chairman on behalf of the Committee on Natural Resources and Environment, other delegates and members of that committee.

A proposal making provisions relating to natural resources and environment.

The status of the proposal: convention has adopted the proposal basically with these exceptions: Still has under its consideration, at the time of adjournment yesterday, Section 14 dealing with the Public Service Commission. On yesterday, and under a suspension of the rules, the convention voted to consider said Section 14 dealing with the Public Service Commission, lettered paragraph by lettered paragraph with the view that all the rules applying to section by section consideration would apply to the consideration of each paragraph and had, then, considered adopting Section (A), had under consideration Section (B). In addition two sections have been deleted from the proposal, that being, Section 3 and also Section 11, which dealt with the commissioner of agriculture. The convention had voted to pass over Sections 6, 7 and 8 which have, as yet, not been considered.

At this time, Mrs. Miller is going to make a motion in light of the fact that neither Miss Perkins nor Senator Lambert is going to be able to be at the convention for the first couple of hours this morning. Mrs. Miller is going to move to revert and, in particular, she will wish to take up a proposed Section 1.1 and then in successive order take Sections 6, 7 and 8.

[Motion to revert to Section 1.1 adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

All right. The lady at this time offers an amendment which would propose the addition of a new section, Section 1.1, to be inserted between lines 21 and 22 on the first page of the proposal. Copies...I'll ask some of the pages to come up here and get the copies from Mr. Lamar so they can be passed out.

The proposed text of the section would read as follows:

"Section 1.1. (A) The navigable water bodies and bottoms, the sea and its shores, and lands, title to which is in the state and its agencies at the effective date of this constitution, are hereby declared to be a part of the public domain, and for the use, benefit and enjoyment of the people, as provided by law.

(B) No conveyance, contract, compromise, or lease involving lands, minerals, or other interests therein, title to which is in the state or its agencies, shall be made without prior public notice or public bidding, and other safeguards as prescribed by law.

No transfer of a real right or of minerals taken in kind belonging to the state and its agencies which do not comply with such requirements shall henceforth be valid."

Explanation

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I do ask for your careful attention on this. This is relating to the Dracula and the Frankenstein discussion we had the other morning.

It is an attempt to tell to the legislature....I know you all don't want me to make the Dracula and Frankenstein speech all over again. I do point out that this is the thing we discussed the other morning, and we've been joined in this with several co-authors: Miller, Asseff, Avant, Derbes, Tobias, Warren, Schmitt, Arnette and Mr. Carmouche. This has also been worked over by several other delegates who have contributed to try to make it say what we meant it to say. I think what we are trying to say to the legislature is, "We're not going to interfere with your management of the natural resources. You may manage, and regulate, and do as you please for the good of the state." But, we are saying that when you do tamper with the natural resources for goodness sakes give public notice, have some public bidding, have some safeguards as provided by law. I think this is very popular with the people. I think, of course, this is the one type of thing that must be done if we are going to ever have competence in government and in our public officials. I don't think it's a changing any basic laws. I believe most of you have considered this and it doesn't need a lot of discussion on my part and it speaks for itself. I will answer questions.

Questions

MR. BOLLINGER

Mrs. Miller, in reading Paragraph (A) and in its reference to the water bottoms and then in the same paragraph at the end you say "to be a part of the public domain, and for the use, benefit and enjoyment of all the people." Could this, in any way, interfere with the state's leasing of these water bottoms for drilling or any mineral purposes? My question being this: If they would lease it, could a citizen come back and enjoin the state for doing such because it was interfering on a fishing right or a trapping right or some other right that he could claim to this water bottom since it is part of the public domain?

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Bollinger, your point is well made, and I think it points out really what the law is now. All mineral leasing in any kind of top lease or service lease that you give to anyone...that the state gives to anyone is going to interfere to some extent, you know with other uses of the land. I think that the state through all kind of environmental controls and through other of its agencies has to say, "Well, if you're going to have to put an oil well in the middle of the lake, let's do it with a minimum amount of inconvenience to the public in regard to the use of the land and the public. I don't think this changes the basic law and jurisprudence of this state as we now have it. I think it only solidifies and makes concrete the concepts so that when the people of this state go to vote on this document they see a statement of public policy. The thing we are preventing--now, I said this the other morning, may I reiterate--I want you to look again at the Dracula bill, that is the blood-sucking bill whereby this is what the legislature said to the Mineral Board--listen, ladies and gentlemen--the legislature said to the Mineral Board, "This Board may contract under terms which it deems to be most advantageous, to the state with persons or corporations engaged in the storage, transportation, sale, or use of oil, gas and other minerals. The Board is specifically authorized to negotiate such contracts and public bidding shall not be required. What we are saying, ladies and gentlemen, You may let a board that is created by the legislature do things but don't do it under the table; don't do it behind closed doors; don't do it without notice, without giving the public a chance and where it's a practical way to do it, do it with public bidding." I think that if we don't do this that we are going to destroy faith in government. We are going to have our oil and gas sucked from under our feet just as the blood was sucked from the victims of Dracula. I say only that what we are proposing is to solidify the concepts that are cherished by the people of this state that they will have a right to know and be put on notice what is being done with their resources. I don't think it's really very controversial. I know that the philosophy of almost all of you here, if not all of you here, is that you are protecting the resources of the state and that you approve of the concept of public notice and public bidding. I ask for the adoption of the amendment.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mrs. Miller, I noticed in the last paragraph as compared to the other Paragraphs (A) and (B), the last part of (B), you state "real right or of minerals taken in kind belonging to the state and its agencies" rather than "or its agencies." Shouldn't that word "and" be "or" on the second line of that last paragraph instead of as you have it?

MRS. MILLER

Well, I think you may be right, Senator, and I believe that's something that Style and Drafting could take care of, it might be a better....

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

MR. DE BLIEUX

Because I noticed that you used the different language above in the Paragraphs (A) and (B). I just wondered why you changed it in the last part of Paragraph....

MRS. MILLER

Well, I think it was possibly an oversight, but I do believe that you are right, but that is something Style and Drafting will pick up in their parallel constructions.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, maybe we could change it right now if you think so and save that difficulty.

MRS. MILLER

Well, I'll be glad to withdraw it if you would make that change for us with the Clerk and then to resubmit it.

[Amendment withdrawn and resubmitted with correction.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

There are two changes all of them in the third unlettered paragraph, the second paragraph of lettered Paragraph (B) which would now read:

"No transfer of a real right or of minerals taken in kind belonging to the state"—strike out the word "and" and insert in lieu thereof the word "or"—"or its agencies which"—strike out the word "do" and insert the word "does"—"does not comply with such requirements shall henceforth be valid."

Questions

MR. DUVAL

Mrs. Miller, I'm just trying to get your intent here, I don't see any real objection with your amendment. But, I was wondering just for your intent, as you know, the Civil Code divides property into— things either into common or public. The Civil Code provides that the seashores, for instance, are common things and other things perhaps are public things. By saying that the seashore is a part of the public domain you don't intend, do you, to abrogate the provisions of the Civil Code in reference to seashores? I'm just trying to get your intent.

MRS. MILLER

I believe you will find, in addition to that, that there's been a general statement that the seashore is a public thing, though, that sometimes they may use the word "common" in relation to it. But, I believe the public domain concept of these things is pretty well established in our law and not....

MR. DUVAL

This isn't intended to change the law on that; is that correct?

MRS. MILLER

That's right. I think it just really brings these philosophies together.

MR. TAPPER

Mrs. Miller, in Section 1.1, Paragraph (A), you haven't changed that in your resubmission, have you?

MRS. MILLER

Well, we had in the beginning, we had the word "political subdivisions" in the original....

MR. TAPPER

No, I'm talking about in your resubmission of the present amendment.

MRS. MILLER

No, no, we did not change that. This has been only changed from its original submission a few days ago.

MR. TAPPER

Well, is it now your interpretation that the phase after the last comma and before the last period "as provided by law," in effect, does away with everything that comes before it; isn't that true? Doesn't the last phrase "as provided by law" just delete your whole paragraph and put it back to what the legislature might enact from here on? What I'm saying, isn't it a fact that this Paragraph (A) is not really doing anything because you end up by saying "as provided by law"?

MRS. MILLER

No. What we are saying, Mr. Tapper—and I think your point is really well taken—but what we are saying—you know we have a great many laws that apply to the use and benefit and enjoyment. You know, if one person enjoys something they can interfere with the enjoyment of somebody else. We are leaving to the legislature to provide regulatory laws, which I think is the law now, that you regulate the use of the waters, and the streams, the way you catch fishes, to lease out these things. So, this is that they can regulate the use of them for the benefit and enjoyment of the people, but your protection is in Paragraph (B) in which you say that when you get down to conveyances, and contracts, and compromise, just give us some public notice and let us know what's going on. Everyone can see rules and regulations, but the legislature may provide for the use and enjoyment, you know, those are published and you know whether you can go swimming in this water or what you can do, you know. I think the legislature has done very well in the past in regulatory laws pertaining to the use of public things.

MR. TAPPER

One other question, Mrs. Miller. What you are saying is that in the past there has not been this public notice that you are requiring in this privilege?

MRS. MILLER

What I'm saying is that as recently as 1972 that by Act of 749, which was passed in your House and Senate without a dissenting vote, the legislature did say that the Mineral Board could enter into these contracts without public bidding. This is the point at which, of course, my blood pressure rose and when I read that I went into really a tail spin, because I just don't think this is in the public interest.

MR. TAPPER

Mrs. Miller....

MRS. MILLER

...and, neither did the Natural Resource Committee of the legislature when they met and heard about it.

MR. TAPPER

Isn't it a fact that there is also another statute which must be read in pari materia that there must be public bidding on all public contracts?

MRS. MILLER

Well, you know, statutes are subject to change by the legislature and this act of 1972, in effect, changed that by saying they didn't have to have public bidding; this is what the act says.

MR. TAPPER

Don't we have in another place in this constitution that we have already adopted a provision that requires public bidding for all state contracts?

MRS. MILLER

We may, but this is something of such immense important to the people of this state, and I think they.... I think when they look at this, they aren't going to be sophisticated people; they are going to be the common man and woman of this state. I think this is language they can read, and understand, and appreciate, and feel that we've given them a few protections; it's been the mood of this convention, I think, to protect the public.

MR. CONROY

Mrs. Miller, I had two questions: the first was I wondered why this provision or something like it was not included in the committee proposal, because you are a member of the committee as I recall it? I just wondered why this wasn't brought up and made a part of the committee proposal.

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Conroy, I must say that when we began meeting in that committee, we had very little, very frankly, very few among us knew much about the natural resources of the state. Most of our work was spent on a form of education of trying to learn where we stand. Now, I think all of the other people on all of your other committees were experts in their fields.

MR. CONROY

Well, my second question really leads from that because I wondered whether we could get any clear indication of what the effect would be of Paragraph (B) where you prohibit any contract at all with regard to involving lands, minerals, or interests therein. It seemed to me that prohibiting all contracts involving mineral lands at all without public notice was a very broad prohibition. I wondered if you had any information as to whether that would, in any way, affect the routine operations of any of the state agencies. I don't know, and I just wondered whether you or the committee had looked into that aspect of this.

MRS. MILLER

No, I think it...I really do think this expresses the philosophy now in the state and the existing statute. But, what terrified me is that as late as 1972 we've had a very clear indication that statutory provisions can just be waived and that the legislature will absolutely give away its rights to supervise and control, and we are saying, "Keep this right with the legislature. Don't let them give away all their rights to supervise and control."

MR. LEBLEU

Mrs. Miller, I was concerned about the seashore portion of your amendment. I think you will recall in our committee some of the folks from L.S.U. Law School testified that the Civil Code should be changed in some instances that wouldn't be necessarily advantageous to the state. Now, as I interpret your amendment, even though you say "as provided by law" the Civil Code might not be changed except if it were advantageous to the state. Am I incorrect in interpreting your amendment in that fashion?

MRS. MILLER

Well, no, I don't believe...I wouldn't say incorrect, Mr. LeBleu. I would say, though, we are leaving with the legislature the authority to enact the necessary Civil Code changes or to reenact existing statutes to bring us in line with all these coastal management agencies--our wet land agencies, our wildlife and fisheries thing. You know, we are going to have to have some statutory changes probably in order to come in line with some of the federal guidelines on wet land managements and marshlands and this type of thing. But, we are leaving to the legislature all the room in the world it wants to maneuver, and negotiate, and provide by statutes for the good of the state, but we are just saying when you do it. All we are saying is when you do it, for goodness sake; let us know it's being done; put us on notice. I think is the concept that everyone accepts and is really needed in this state to restore confidence in government.

MR. LEIGH

Mrs. Miller, in your Paragraph (B) you have "No conveyance, contract involving state lands," any contract involving state lands. Now, then, occasions arise continually where unitization agreements have to be entered into involving leases where the unitization agreements arise where state lands are unitized with adjoining lands for a unit under a conservation program. Would this require those unitization agreements to be advertised? That's a contract.

MRS. MILLER

That is a contract, Mr. Leigh, and I tell you it's those voluntary unitizations that also gave me this high blood pressure for which I have been suffering from the last year and a half. But, we are saying you can do it, just let the public know what you are doing. I agree with you. What we are saying is, I don't care whether it's a voluntary unit, or a letter agreement, or a compromise, the Mineral Board is doing these kind of things all the time.

MR. LEIGH

Aren't they doing it in public session?

MRS. MILLER

If they are doing it in public session...by public bidding, and by public notice, and by the safeguards by law they have no reason to complain.

MR. LEIGH

There is no public bidding involved, but it's in public session. You don't bid on a unitization agreement, you're just simply agreeing on the division of the royalty within that unit; this has no bidding involved; it's simply agreeing on a proper division. Are you saying that that would have to be advertised and take public bids on it?

MRS. MILLER

Well, I think your point is well taken because...and this does not change what is the procedure now because when you have these meetings of the Mineral Board, these meetings are not behind closed doors. We are saying, "Let's keep it that way. Let's don't have any meetings behind closed doors regarding unitizations, letter agreement, compromises, and so forth." Docket meetings are supposed to be open to the public and, as you know, when you ran the board you had everything open and gave everybody plenty of notice.

MR. LEIGH

Well, isn't it open at the present time? I mean, there's nothing secret about it.

...its routine business.

MRS. MILLER

I must say, I know you see the board as the way it was when you ran it and I can tell you that I heard your praises sung all the time, and I wish you were often still over here. But, under this Act of 749, this is saying you can do it behind closed doors and that's how they were working up that refinery deal down in New Orleans; all that was without notice; no one knew it really until they had it pretty well worked up.

MR. LEIGH

Well, one final question, what I'm getting at: Do you construe your amendment as requiring public bidding or public advertisement for the Mineral Board to enter into a unitization agreement? It's a contract.

MRS. MILLER

It might well be that the legislature as they look at more and more of the unitization agreements--those are pretty big economic agreements they are entering into as you and I know. You know, under the name of voluntary unitization you can do an awful lot of things.

MR. LEIGH

But, this does require that, in your opinion?

MRS. MILLER

Yes, and it requires....

MR. LEIGH

And, it requires public bidding and...

MRS. MILLER

...and public notice. We worded this that it will be by public notice or public bidding and other safeguards as prescribed by law."

MR. JENKINS

Mrs. Miller, once more for the record, that Subsection (A), is it your view that that makes any change in the law or is this the state of the law now?

MRS. MILLER

In my view this is the state of the law now, Mr. Jenkins. I think the purpose of Section (A) is to clarify it so that Section (B) has...so that you know what Section (B) is applying to. If you don't do this, it's kind of hard to define what you're talking about. We are leaving the legislature all the leeway in the world to manage the resources. We're just saying, "Don't give...Legislature don't give away all of our safeguards. You can provide by law. You can set up the agencies. But, just keep things open and on top of the table, keep the doors open and let us know what's going on." I think this is the philosophy that you've expressed very well throughout this convention.

Further Discussion

MR. TAPPER

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, let me begin by saying that I certainly agree with the principle which Mrs. Miller puts forth here at this rostrum. I disagree, however, violently, with her accusations and insinuations, especially, with reference to the last legislative session's Senate Bill No. 9.

Let me point out that that, yes, is already the law. There is no chance for state realty without public notice and public bidding...bidding. There are no state contracts without public bidding today, and you all know that. The things that are in this particular amendment are really not necessary, although they are not onerous. In Paragraph (A), as I read it, it ends with "as provided by law." Which means that the legislature could provide anything they wanted. So, that paragraph really means nothing.

Paragraph (B) also ends with the same phrase, "as provided... as prescribed by law..." changes it from provided to prescribed. Then, of course, the transfer of minerals taken in kind belonging to the state, any transfer thereof, is not valid unless you conform with the requirements. Henceforth, I rather give it a belt.

My main objection to this amendment; Number 1, it's not necessary. It's additional language in the constitution which is not necessary. But, the main objection is, the vein in which it was introduced; the arguments that were put forth in the initial submission of this amendment before it was taken back and changed very drastically; the arguments that were put forth the second time it was introduced, and then withdrawn because there had to be some more technical amendments. Also, the so-called Dracula, and so-called monster bills. I believe, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, that if we pass this amendment, which, in my opinion, means nothing, if we pass it in the vein, and because of the reasons that Mrs. Miller put forth, that we are doing a terrible injustice to this state and to the legislature. I know some of you...some of the people don't trust the legislature, but, I think most of you here do. You have shown by your votes on many, many of these amendments that you do by and large trust the legislature. I think that by the adoption of this, you are putting a cloud not only on the legislature, but on the integrity of the people of this state. I urge that you defeat this amendment. This is not necessary. If it were, for the purposes that Mrs. Miller says that it is necessary, I wouldn't be here opposing it.

Further Discussion

MR. SINGLETARY

Ladies and gentlemen, I rise in opposition to this amendment primarily because of Paragraph (A) which says that "lands, the title to which is in the state and its agencies, from the effect of this....effective date of this constitution, are hereby declared to be a part of the public domain, and for the use, benefit, and enjoyment of the people."

Does that mean that the governor's mansion is part of the public domain and that anybody can go play tennis on the governor's tennis courts? So, I urge you to think about the meaning of that language. I urge you to reject this amendment.

Questions

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Singletary, isn't the words following that paragraph... that is, the end of that paragraph, "as provided by law." Couldn't that be regulated in use? Doesn't it just mean that we should use it for a public....for the public good? That wouldn't necessarily mean that, as you spoke about the governor's mansion and something else like that, that it was anybody's right to go in any time. It'd be regulated by law, wouldn't it? Couldn't we set up whatever rules and regulations for the use of that property as we saw fit--which would be for the benefit of this state?

MR. SINGLETARY

I don't know, Senator. It says that it's "declared to hereby be a part of the public domain, and for the use, benefit, and enjoyment of the people as provided by law", sir.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Wouldn't that "as provided by law"...wouldn't that govern it?

MR. SINGLETARY

I don't know. It still is declared to be a part of the public domain.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, all lands, as I take it right now, that are owned by the government are a part of the public domain.

MR. SINGLETARY

Well, it goes on to say it's "for the use, benefit, and enjoyment of the people." So, I don't know. Really, I think this is...the intent is good in all three paragraphs. But, really, I don't....I think it's a statutory material and we don't know exactly what the scope of this would be.

Further Discussion

MR. CONROY

I think everyone here agrees with the basic concepts of Mrs. Miller's proposal. But, I have been trying to find out from questioning on the floor, questioning to Mrs. Miller, as to exactly what the effect of Paragraph (B) of this section would be....trying to ascertain to what degree this had been studied or any investigation made of it. I am concerned about the part...the breadth of the language that says "no contract involving stateowned lands would be made without prior public notice."

The term--the prohibition against any contract at all, seems to me to be broader than is really intended. I don't know whether it would affect, for example, the temporary leasing of....say, a state recreational area for a day, or something like that where you let it out to some particular group that they are able to use it that day. Or whether it applies to contracts that just relate to minor things pertaining to state lands. I don't know. I was trying to find out. I think the concepts are good. But, I think that the section as written here, without some prior....some better assurance of what it's effect would be on the state's day-to-day operations with regards to its lands, I think is dangerous. It's a good statement of principle. But, I think it's dangerous as written. I urge you to reject the proposal.

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I do think the few fears that have been expressed are without, really, any foundation because, if the public agencies are doing right, anyway, what does it matter to tell them they should do right? If they are doing nothing wrong, this is not going to hurt them. The mineral board now has always, under Mr. Lee, and it still does, it enters into its voluntary unitizations, its letter agreements, its compromises, by public notice. These things are put on a published docket and the meetings are open to the public. So, you are not going to have any serious effect on the state's operations as they go.

But, you are saying to the legislature---Yes, I agree with Mr. Singletary. A lot of this could be taken care of in the statutes. But, Mr. Singletary, I point out to you, what the legislature did is it said, "Mineral board, you can contract away fifty thousand barrels a day of the state's oil and gas and build a refinery, and give a windfall for three years...." which it did....which it was working on. You can do it without anybody knowing what you are doing; without any public bidding. Don't give any other companies in this state a chance to come in and bid on what they would pay for the fifty thousand barrels of oil and gas a day. I tell you, the deal they were working up in September, before the newspapers of this state began to put the spotlight on them. They were working up the little deal that they were going to contract away fifty thousand barrels of oil a day at five dollars a barrel, for twelve years. Now, what's five dollars a barrel...or fifty thousand barrels a day worth over a period of twelve years? Sure, they were going to get a little fourth of the net profits after the company had figured what its own net profits were, and after it paid big salaries and all to its own officials. I don't think that this is what the people of this state want. If the state has fifty thousand barrels of oil a day to contract away, it can put it out on bids every year or two, and let these refineries bid on it. We might be getting twelve, and fifteen, and twenty dollars a barrel....dollars a barrel for our oil. So, what we are saying to the legislature is, "Please, no more statutes like this. Please just remember that we want everything to be open. We want notice. We want all the safeguards we can get."

I call for the previous question.

[Amendment rejected: 58-36. Motion to table reconsideration rejected: 36-52.]

Reconsideration
Further Discussion

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Acting Chairman and fellow delegates, I listened very attentive to what Mr. Tapper had to say. One of his main objections was the accusations that were made. I want to remind you that pride goes before a fall. Whose fall? The State of Louisiana. I'm going to ask you to search your conscience this day and vote in favor of this amendment for the people of the State of Louisiana. Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. LEIGH

Mr. Chairman, and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I could not support the Miller amendment as it was drawn. I do ask that you reconsider it and leave the question open. I think that the principle that Mrs. Miller is trying to assert is sound. I would like to see the principle placed in there in some fashion. What I'm afraid of is that the amendment as it is drawn will, perhaps, disrupt the routine business of the mineral board. I would very much urge you to reconsider the matter and let's see if something can't be worked out that would attain Mrs. Miller's purpose, and not disrupt any routine business of the mineral board.

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

So, I ask you to vote favorably on the motion to reconsider.

Questions

MR. ALEXANDER

Mr. Leigh, if we vote favorably now, we will have adopted the amendment in its present form. I am wondering what are you suggesting?

MR. LEIGH

I think if we vote favorably now, we will simply have reconsidered the matter....

MR. ALEXANDER

Reconsidered....yes....

MR. LEIGH

....and leave it open to a new amendment, or an amendment of a different version which might straighten out possible objections to it.

MR. ALEXANDER

The amendment will not be resubmitted at this time? Is that what you're....

MR. LEIGH

It would not be adopted at this time. It would be open for revision.

MR. ALEXANDER

It could be adopted as resubmitted?

MR. LEIGH

It can be adopted in a different form....

MR. ALEXANDER

Yes.

MR. LEIGH

....if it is reconsidered.

MR. ALEXANDER

All right.

Point of Information

MR. ANZALONE

Mr. Chairman, on a point of information. If an amendment were to be sent up to the desk involving only Paragraph (B) of Mrs. Miller's amendment, would it be ruled out of order, or whatever?

MR. POYNTER

No....I

MR. ANZALONE

In the event that this amendment is defeated, would an amendment tracking the language in Paragraph (B) be out of order?

MR. POYNTER

No, sir. I don't think it would be out of order because it wouldn't put this same, exact question before this convention.

MR. ANZALONE

Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. STINSON

Fellow delegates, I'd like to urge you to support Mrs. Miller. You know, this is one of the most vital, important assets the state has. I think in times like these, all the precaution we can take to protect the right of the state, and all the people, we should do it. It may not be worded the way you like, but at least it gives some extra precaution. I don't think it should be left up to this group, or the governor, or the legislature, or the mineral board. I think everyone should be involved and concerned. We've got to protect it. We know from different lawsuits that are pending, back forty and fifty years ago mineral rights were taken away from the state that have made millionaires, and it could have been used much better to help the people of the state.

I'd like to urge you let's support Mrs. Miller in what she's trying to do. She's been on the mineral board, and she knows what is needed there.

Thank you.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

[Previous Question ordered on the motion to reconsider.]

Closing

MR. TAPPER

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I'm not going to waste your time. I'm just going to ask you to vote green on the motion to reconsider. Let's dispose of it once and for all, and let's go on to something else.

Thank you.

[Motion to reconsider adopted: 82-11. Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The lady now wishes to re-submit the amendment so it would simply read:

"Section 1.1." The first paragraph...unlettered paragraph of (B).

"Section 1.1. No conveyance, contract, compromise, or lease involving lands, minerals, or other interest therein, title to which is in the state or its agencies, shall be made without prior public notice or public bidding, and other safeguards as prescribed by law."

No Paragraph (A), and delete the second, unlettered subparagraph of Paragraph (B).

Explanation

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I ask your indulgence on this because it is so very important. It seems to be trying to solidify things in Section (A) that caused some of the problems with some of the delegates. So, what we are doing is to say we are taking only the middle paragraph, your Paragraph (B), that starts with "No conveyance" and ends "by law." I...think that this will satisfy some of the objections that we had previously to perhaps just repeating the civil code in the constitution. I don't really think this would...anyone would find that their philosophy were adverse to this to keep everything open and above the table in all our dealings with these very valuable state resources.

I ask your favorable consideration of the new amendment.

Questions

MR. RAYBURN

Mrs. Miller, under the language here where it says that "shall be made without prior public notice or public bidding." Would that language let anyone or state agencies, just as long as they gave public notice, and then go ahead and do what they wanted to do as long as they gave public notice?

MRS. MILLER

Along...of course you still have the provision that the public notice would be required or "as prescribed by law." We've used public notice, or public bidding, or as prescribed by law. This would still not prohibit the legislature from setting up very stringent requirements, which I think the legislature could do, and will do now.

MR. RAYBURN

Well, I was just a little concerned about whether or not if they just gave public notice, whether they would be in compliance with the law or not. They could disregard public bidding as long as they'd given public notice.

MRS. MILLER

Well, I think your "or prescribed by law" takes care of that. Because you all can, I'm sure when you draft a law providing the procedure that's to be followed, you will say that under certain circumstances prior notice has to be given; advertisements, and this type of thing. I can...this is the form that's pretty much been followed by the legislature in most of its action.

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

MR. LEIGH

Mrs. Miller, I'm still concerned about the routine business of the mineral board and the requirement that there be prior public notice or public bidding.

MRS. MILLER

Or as prescribed by law, now.
I'm not worried at all, Mr. Leigh, because I think that the mineral board procedures do follow "as prescribed by law." The part of the....

MR. LEIGH

What did you cut out of the...of Paragraph (B)? Anything?

MRS. MILLER

Nothing is cut out except the last paragraph "that no transfer of a real nature"...but that only repeats what the law in the jurisprudence is anyway. But if you've not conformed with form and legality, things are null and void, anyway.

MR. LEIGH

Frankly, it's the second paragraph that disturbs me, when you say that no contract shall be made without prior public notice. The mineral board, every month, enters into contracts of unitization and that type of thing, which is....there's no prior public notice... other than as adopted is distributed to interested parties. The meeting is public.

MRS. MILLER

Right.

MR. LEIGH

I'm afraid that your provision of your section there would proscribe, would prevent, the mineral board from carrying on its routine business of that nature.

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Leigh, I just don't share your fears at all. It's been my observation in sitting there that the one thing you have that lawyer to mineral board sitting there for is to examine everything performed in legality. Any time anything is undertaken, whether it's a letter agreement or voluntary unitization, he always comes forward, and we have to have his opinion of whether the form and legality have been observed. I just don't think this is any problem.

MR. LEIGH

Well, let me...

MRS. MILLER

...We are following the procedures that the law prescribes. What we are saying is, "Please, legislature, don't prescribe some laws that abolish all safeguards."

MR. LEIGH

Well, Mrs. Miller, for the record, is it your understanding of this amendment that the procedure which you just outlined where a representative of the attorney general, an assistant attorney general assigned to the board, passes on the form and legality of the instrument, and the session...the proceedings are held in open session and adopted in open session. Is it your thought that that would comply with your constitutional amendment for prior public notice?

MRS. MILLER

I can't say in the future what the legislature might prescribe as safeguards, which they will require the mineral board, the conservation department, or anyone else to follow. They might prescribe another form for type of things there. But, what we are saying is, whatever the legislature prescribes has to be followed.

MR. LEIGH

What I'm asking....

MRS. MILLER

'Cause you know they might, the legislature might well change what is being prescribed....you know....prescribed for safeguards.

MR. LEIGH

What I'm asking you, though, for the legislative history of this convention. Is it your belief that the present procedures of the mineral board, in open session, and the way the mineral board conducts its business, would comply under existing laws with the requirement that you have of prior public notice?

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Leigh, I haven't been over there examining those letter agreements and those compromises, now, for several months. I wouldn't want to commit myself right now and say that what they've been doing is proper, because I think that's a matter for...that you have to examine everything they've been doing and make sure. Because, I mean, I can't just off the cuff say what they've been doing is correct.

MR. CONROY

Mrs. Miller, I'm still concerned about the broad language that prohibits any contract involving lands of the state or any of its agencies without prior public notice.

For example, I would think that a port commission, or a levee district would be a state agency. They have to make routine contracts with regard to the lands under their administration. Now, wouldn't your provision here prevent, for example, a levee district from taking a needed immediate action with regard to a levee, or a port commission from taking a needed immediate action without public notice. Wouldn't your provision prohibit that?

MRS. MILLER

If you stop and put a period after public notice, and ignore that you have "or public bidding", or "other safeguards." You have alternate....you have three alternatives there. And I'm sure that all these boards....

MR. CONROY

My copy says "and other safeguards."

MRS. MILLER

We had withdrawn that and then had it changed to "or"... the "and", and it just got typed up wrong again. I'm sorry about this....when we went through the amendment, we had it "or"...had it changed to "or," Mr. Conroy, so that there are three alternatives there; prior notice, or public bidding, or safeguards as prescribed by law. I'm sure that your dock boards and all now follow....

Point of Information

MR. CONROY

Could you read the amendment as it presently exists, Mr. Poynter?

MRS. MILLER

I didn't understand you.

MR. CONROY

I was asking the Clerk to read it 'cause that's not my understanding the way he read it. But....

MR. POYNTER

My understanding was yours. But the lady would move to withdraw it so she could make that change.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Point of Information

MR. TAPPER

May we have, once she submits it, this will be the fifth time. May we have a copy at our desk so that we won't be so confused as we are now as to what is really in it before we begin arguing it again? I might be for it next time. I don't know.

MR. HENRY

Mr. Tapper, let's don't go through that. That's just prolonging the agony. I'll get the Clerk to read it real slowly this time. I hope we get the thing right because we need to finish this section today....I mean we need to finish the proposal today.

Personal Privilege

MR. LANDRUM

Mr. Chairman, now I know how close it is to Christmas, but I do believe that what Mrs. Miller is saying that we should pay attention to her. I think we are kind of rushing her along. I think we should hear her, even though if she has to submit a dozen amendments to get what she's saying, I believe that it is needed and that we should hear.

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

All right. It would read as follows now:
On page 1, between lines 21 and 22, insert the following:
"Section...and I've added title to this....Section 1.1.

Public Lands; Lease, Contract.

Section 1. No conveyance, public...no conveyance, contract, compromise or lease involving lands, minerals, or other interest therein, title to which is in the state or its agencies, shall be made without prior public notice or public bidding, or other safeguards as prescribed by law."

Explanation

MRS. MILLER

I think we....I think we've had really sufficient discussion on this. I would be....call for the previous question if there are no speakers on the list, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

MR. TAPPER

Mrs. Miller, in the event of a lawsuit involving realty of the state, let's say like water bottoms, or real estate of the state, in the event of a lawsuit, where the attorney general is defending the state. This, also, would require public notice before any compromise could be made on it, and any lawsuit, also, wouldn't it?

MRS. MILLER

What I'm saying is that the "or prescribed by law" can provide the procedure that the state is to follow when it's defending its claims. I think this is what, as lawyers, we like to have. We like to have the regulations promulgated and know what we have....know the steps we have to follow....one, two, three.

MR. TAPPER

The last question is. You have two "or's" in the present amendment. Now, that means we could have public notice. We don't have to have bidding if we have public notice. We could have public notice....let me finish the question....we could have public notice, or public bidding, or neither if it's prescribed by law otherwise. Is that correct?

MRS. MILLER

This is only saying, I believe, Mr. Tapper, that we expect the legislature to be alert to what it's doing. I don't think that in 1972 the legislature was very alert when it passed that Act 749.

MR. TAPPER

Yes, ma'am. Well, I don't agree with you. But did you know that I'm more opposed to your amendment in the manner in which it's presented than I was before?

Further Discussion

MR. LEIGH

To say that with the "or", "or other safeguards as prescribed by law," which, as Mr. Tapper pointed out, gives three alternatives, I would go along with the amendment.

[Motion to limit debate on the Amendment to five minutes adopted without objection.]

Further Discussion

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I have high regard for the intentions that Mrs. Miller has in offering this amendment, and her efforts in behalf of....well, in many other amendments that she has presented to this convention. But, I just suggest to you that this is the kind of thing in a constitution that can cause more confusion than almost any kind of provision that we could put into the document. There are three alternative possibilities which make this proposal meaningless, and, as a consequence, should not be placed in the document. As it ends up saying that "no conveyance, contract, compromise or lease involving lands, minerals or other interests of the state, or its agencies"....and that can affect an awful lot of operations within state government, that nothing in that regard shall be made without either prior public notice, or public bidding, or other safeguards as prescribed by law. Now, I suggest to you that with the triple alternatives there, with no mandate, with no criteria, with no direction, with no standards, it's just not necessary that we put this into the constitution. I would urge that you would defeat this amendment... laudable as I think Mrs. Miller's intentions may be.

I ask that you reject the amendment.

Questions

MR. CHAMPAGNE

You would agree, though, Mr. Gravel, that if the legislature so desired to provide by law, they could require the whole thing. In other words, they could have public bidding required, public notice required, or any other thing they wanted to require.

MR. GRAVEL

Absolutely.

In a definitive, well-planned statute that would set forth directives, criteria and standards. Yes, sir. They could.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Don't you think, though, perhaps, that what Mrs. Miller wants to do is to point out to the people that they want this done, or they would like to suggest so in the constitution.

MR. GRAVEL

Well, I think she'd like to be sure that it is done.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Champagne, there is a public bidding statute now. I don't know that....what the problem might be in connection with it. But, all I'm saying is, that you may have to have more than one law. You may have to have one dealing with the concept of minerals; you may have to have one dealing with the concept of state lands where there are no minerals involved; and you may have to have another law that might deal with the procedures by which agencies can compromise matters involving state land. You might have to have several laws to accomplish what this kind of a proposal might lead to.

MR. ANZALONE

Mr. Camille, what you are talking about is the absence of the word "shall" in this provision? The legislature shall....

MR. GRAVEL

Well, there's no....there is a mandate as an alternative mandate to the legislature. The way the amendment now stands, Mr. Anzalone, is that either you have to have a prior notice, or you have to have public bidding, or you have to have some legislative act....none of which, I think, meets the requirement of clarity and definiteness and certainty that we ought to have in the constitution.

MR. ANZALONE

Well, do you object to the philosophy of the amendment? Or do you object to the way that it's written?

MR. GRAVEL

I object to putting this in the constitution the way it is. I think we are talking purely about legislative matters. When you are talking about procedures for public bidding, procedures for public notice, and procedures that relate to safeguards in the handling of contracts, compromises, and things of that nature, I think you are talking about legislation.

Closing

MRS. MILLER

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I think that what we are talking about is policy and philosophy which should go into the constitution. We are not writing rules and regulations with this article. We are leaving it to the legislature to write the rules and regulations and the safeguards to which all state agencies must conform. We are putting into this constitution, with this amendment, philosophy and policy, and saying to the legislature and to the state agencies, "observe these safeguards." We are not saying that our elected public officials could write very few or a whole lot. But, I do say that the public bidding act was ignored in 1972 in Act 749. It can be ignored again. All the people of this state have in coming to these minerals that are so very, very valuable is this safeguard which says "watch out and beware." I say to you, ladies and gentlemen, in the words of Shakespeare that Shakespeare put in the mouth of Iago and Othello. These safeguards are necessary when it comes to great sums of money because nature does fall. It does fall into disuse when gold becomes its object. We are talking about black gold. We are talking about saving this.

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

I say, this is policy and philosophy. It is constitutional material. Put it in the constitution for the people of this state. I beg you to adopt it. Thank you.

[Amendment rejected: 60-36. Motion to take up Section 6 adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

"Section 6. Mineral Rights; Alluvion.

Section 6. Mineral rights to land formed or exposed by accretion or dereliction caused principally by acts of man, on a water body the bed of which is owned by the state, are retained by the state."

Explanation

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I really apologize for having to be before you so much at one time, but our chairman could not be here for awhile and neither could Miss Perkins, who were to explain some of these things. So, I ask your indulgence to have to put up with me. You have had distributed to you, I believe, several pages... a very thick little document. Do you have it before you? They are being passed out. This is a change from what is in your present constitution. It is in line with what the jurisprudence of the state has been until very recently in the Six-Mile Lake Case and which very recently was affirmed, we think erroneously, by the present Supreme Court in a 4 to 3 decision. You will have before you a news article in which it says that the last court decision which was handed down about two or three weeks ago, is a disaster financially for the State of Louisiana. It's really a catastrophe. This section comes in to try to correct the errors unto which our Supreme Court has fallen by split decisions. We are talking about hundreds of millions of dollars that are being lost to the state as the Atchafalaya Basin is being filled and built up through acts of man. It's going to be very difficult, ladies and gentlemen, those of you who are not lawyers, to try to explain the laws of accretion and dereliction, the build up of alluvial soil which is a full year's course in law school to try to explain in a few minutes why this is so vital and important to the state. What we are saying here to the Supreme Court of Louisiana is that the Civil Code of the state means what it says, is that accretion and dereliction apply only to rivers and streams. Do you know that four members of the Supreme Court, that they don't know what a lake is? You know, a lake is different from a river and a stream. Any fisherman in this state knows what a lake is and knows that a lake is different from a river and stream. But, evidently, we have had members of the court who cannot make this distinction. If it were just one judge it wouldn't hurt you so much, but when it's four judges who evidently can't make up their mind to distinguish between a lake and river and stream, then this section is going to be very necessary for us, if we are going to save what is known as the Atchafalaya Basin area because this is basically where most of this accretion and dereliction is now taking place in the state. Under the Six-Mile Lake Case and the Cockrell Case which was now recently confirmed by the Placid Oil Case that the Supreme Court handed down, we have the situation where the Corps of Engineers of the federal government is changing the whole geology of the basin. It's very easy for acts of man now to change rivers and streams. They can cut through a river and leave a big bend and leave it in... they could cut through the Mississippi Bends and leave part of Louisiana in Mississippi. When I was a very little girl, and my father was building the levees along the Mississippi, he used to take me to the Mississippi River Works where there was a whole layout of the Mississippi River from Cairo, Illinois, down to the Gulf. There I would stand and watch the sandbars change as the velocity and the currents of the rivers could be changed in miniature. It was a complete layout, and you can see this happening now. But, we are confronted with the fact that the Corps of Engineers is constantly dredging, building all type of bulkheads, breaking up the ramps in the river, and by doing this they have altered nature's way of making, maybe, these changes gradually. We can just absolutely give away the land under the Supreme Court decision if we do not adopt this article. Accretion is easily formed. It can be formed in almost any body of water by putting a bulkhead and building an obstruction out, as Mr. Bollinger can tell you. You build it out and then land is going to form up on either side. We have permitted a riparian owner to reclaim land. I think this was good, and

I supported Mr. Bollinger in his amendment because I do think that land that is lost along these bayous and all should be reclaimed because in a way the landowner is protecting the navigable rivers and streams, and we had many safeguards so that this will not be abused. But, is it our intention to permit the whole Atchafalaya Basin to be drained, to be built up with land, and to give these windfalls to a few, big out-of-state corporations? There are some small landowners, but most of the state's problems have been brought about not by a few small landowners but by some big, big rich influential companies that are getting the windfall because the State Supreme Court has not been consistent in interpreting the laws of accretion and dereliction which should apply only to rivers and streams. The Supreme Court doesn't know that a body water...

Explanation continued

MRS. MILLER

Ladies and gentlemen, it's been the problem in this convention that when we understand very little about something we're either for it a hundred percent or against it a hundred percent. So, what we are voting is not really an appreciation of the problem, but we're just voting either our ignorance or our greater knowledge. I do ask that you quickly look at the ramifications of the recent Supreme Court decision that has been handed down and read what was said in this news article that is before you. This decision--and if you will look at the article--involved a dispute between the state and private owners represented by a large corporation to land that was built up in a lake and what the Supreme Court decision says is that a lake is not a lake if it has a little current running through it. I say that the Atlantic Ocean is not an ocean because it has currents and streams running through it. Evidently, there are four judges that just can't seem to recognize a lake when they see one, and I wish the wildlife and fisheries people would take them out fishing sometime and show them the difference between fishing in a lake and a river and stream. But, under this decision, we are going to lose the Atchafalaya Basin. This has been something that's been recognized by the Atchafalaya Basin Commission. I do say that three judges dissented on that opinion that was handed down, and those three included Justice Tate of this convention and Justice Mack Barham wrote the dissenting opinion. I submit to you that it was Justice Barham's opinion that was correct. This amendment attempts to adopt Justice Barham's opinion as the policy of the state. If we do not adopt this accretion article, and if the opinion of the court stands, the effects on the state are going to be devastating. It will deprive the state and the people over the next few years of nearly two hundred square miles of public land that was a lake in 1812. We have no provision in our Civil Code for changing the state ownership of the bottoms of lakes. The legislature always took the position that the lake is a lake. It's the Supreme Court that is changing the definition of a lake and saying that a lake is not a lake. Under the Supreme Court decision the only way you can have a lake is to have a dead sea with nothing running in and nothing running out.

This is a... I know this is a very difficult concept for the nonattorneys to grasp. I do ask that you support it. By supporting this amendment you are not giving windfalls to a few big out-of-state corporations who have had smart attorneys to walk in and know where to stake their claims, and you're not taking anything away from the people. You are giving this to the people of Louisiana for all time. The committee asks for your support of the article.

Point of Information

MR. TAPPER

I guess it's a point of information, Mr. Chairman. We have an amendment before us by Mrs. Miller to this proposal. I don't think we've adopted it yet, have we?

MR. CASEY

As I understand it, Mrs. Miller was introducing Section 6, Mr. Tapper, and was discussing Section 6. The amendments will be coming up in due order.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. LeBleu sends up amendments which read as follows: Amendment No. 1. On page 2, delete lines 23 through 27, in their entirety.

Explanation

MR. LEBLEU

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I have an amendment that would delete this section and also another amendment for... to accomplish the same purpose with Section 7. The reason I offered these amendments is that all of these items are covered in the Civil Code, and in the testimony that we heard in the Natural Resources Committee, the people from the LSU Law School are... who are versed in these items indicated that some changes should be made, but we can do that in the legislature. Now, I'm all in favor of trying to help preserve the Atchafalaya Basin, but I can't recall anybody from the Atchafalaya Basin Commission who came and testified before our committee in behalf of an amendment or a section as being offered here. Maybe Secretary Martin did appear at one time when we first started our deliberations, but he is no longer with the commission. What I intended to do in the next session of the legislature is have our Natural Resources Committee, our joint legislative committee on Natural Resources conduct some hearings, which we are now allowed to do by our changes in the legislative rules, conduct some hearings where we could get some private landowners, large landowners, the state people, the legal people from LSU and so forth, and maybe come up with something that the judges will be able to interpret. I just felt that if we make no mention of this in the constitution, and settle it in the Civil Code that we'll be accomplishing the purposes that we're most interested in. I ask you to support this amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise in support of the amendment for the following reasons: we are playing with the law of Louisiana like it's a toy. Merely because we have a Constitutional Convention in 1973 does not mean we should, because of specific instances, contrive provisions which overcome a thousand years of jurisprudence and maxims. Now, let me tell you, this area is presently covered in our Civil Code, Articles 509 and 510. The Civil Code provides, "the accretions which are formed successively and imperceptibly to any soil situated on the shore of a river or other stream are called alluvion. The alluvion belongs to the owner of the soil situated on the edge of the water, whether it be a river or a stream, or whether the same be navigable or not." Now, Article 510 basically holds that when a landowner's...when the water comes in on a landowner's land, he loses it, and that's the equitable maxim that the landowner loses when water erodes, when there's dereliction that takes place and that the landowner gains when accretion builds up. There have been many, many cases on this. It's been...this is one Supreme Court case which Mrs. Miller certainly disagrees with as she has every right to do. But, we can't in this convention start monkeying around with the law of Louisiana without really knowing what we're doing because of one Supreme Court decision. This matter is covered in our code. I ask you to please stop legislating. Now, there's going to be an amendment to delete Section 7, and I'm going to support that, also. In my opinion, Section 7 hurts the state, and it should be deleted. Section 6, in my opinion, hurts the landowner, it should be deleted, and we should let our courts and our legislature handle this and not take advantage of this Constitutional Convention by continuing to attempt to put in specific instances that are occurring right now. Merely because we have a Constitutional Convention going on, we try to take care of it. I think that's wrong. This is covered in the Code. Now, I want to point out something else. The way this reads, here's the test, under the section, "mineral rights to land formed or exposed by accretion or dereliction caused principally by acts of man." Now, how does this change the jurisprudence of our state? How is one going to determine whether the riparian owner has the right to the accretion? As you know, accretion or alluvion is the buildup of sediment along the banks. Now, how are they going to determine what is principally the acts of man? What's going to be the test--fifty-one percent? How are you going to determine when the alluvion began to build up? It's a long process. How are you going to determine at what point the acts of man came in, what part of the accretion was built up by a man from this point on? I think it's totally unenforceable. We've got law covering it. It's certainly a mistake for us to fool with it. It's certainly a legislative matter where you can have involved committee hearings, where you can understand all the ramifications of what you're doing. Don't forget we're putting these changes in a constitution which is a rigid document. We don't know what we're doing. I suggest to you that this is a dangerous change in the law, that it's for one specific instance that the legislature should deal with these matters, and I suggest to you that we delete this section and the next section.

Question

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Duval, doesn't "6" and "7" deal principally or exclusively with acts of man and not by normal accretion erosion and etc?

MR. DUVAL

"Six" and "seven" changes the law completely, set forth in Article 509 and 510 of the Civil Code and it deals with all accretion and dereliction formed in the bed of a stream, and said you own it if it's not principally by the acts of man. The present Civil Code says "imperceptible...successively and imperceptibly," which implies that if some catastrophic or cataclysmic act happened which caused it to build up not perceptibly, then it wouldn't be owned by the riparian owner.

Further Discussion

MRS. MILLER

I rise in opposition of the LeBleu amendment, but for really a very basic reason at this stage. There are several amendments coming to this section, and I think you all should have an opportunity to hear them before we just began to delete the section. You will still have opportunities to act and to vote. I ask that you vote against the LeBleu amendment. Give us time to look at some of these problems a little more carefully. Right now, ladies and gentlemen, what you are doing by not acting is to permit four judges or a Supreme Court divided four-three, four judges write the law and change the Civil Code and change concepts of lakes. So, I think it behooves you as representatives of your people to say, "Whoa, let's look at this a little bit more." I think you owe it to the people you represent to say, "Let's look at it a little more before we just strip it out and toss it in the wastepaper basket." I beg you to defeat the Lebleu amendment. Let's look at some of the other amendments, and someone, of course, can always come with another one later. So, I'll call for the previous question if there are no more speakers, Mr. Chairman.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. LEBLEU

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, it's always been my opinion that a judge interprets the law as it's written. I think he's bound to do that. So, I can see no problem about these judges interpreting the law one way or the other, in favor of one person or another which he is not supposed to do; to me the law is in the way the law is written. All I want to do is remove this portion from the constitution and let the legislature handle it through the Civil Code to clarify some of these laws. Mr. Duval made a good point when he said that the Civil Code's been in effect for a long time; it's been the basis of a lot of our laws. I just think it's kind of a bad practice for us to come up here and just on short notice, change something without more study. I think we can do a good job in the legislature as far as changing the Civil Code because we have a lot of people who are interested, not only in the Atchafalaya Basin, but other coastal areas in this state. Lord knows, we have a lot of them in south Louisiana. Please adopt this amendment.

Questions

MR. CHEHARDY

Mr. LeBleu, isn't it true that if we passed this amendment the section would be wiped out and then we couldn't consider Mrs. Miller's amendment which in effect prevents the Atchafalaya Basin and possibly hundreds of millions of dollars, instead of going to a few individuals, going to the entire state, to all the citizens of the state? Wouldn't that be the effect of passing this amendment?

MR. LEBLEU

I can't see it that way, Mr. Chehardy.

MR. CHEHARDY

Well, if this amendment is passed, will Mrs. Miller be able to bring her amendment in?

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

MR. LEBLEU

What amendment? She's presenting the section. Are you talking about the section?

MR. CHEHARDY

No. She is putting in an amendment to the section which you're proposing to...to your amendment, which in effect knocks out the section.

MR. LEBLEU

Well, I was not aware that she had another amendment.

MR. CHEHARDY

...are we out of order, Mr. Nunez? I think that objection of yours...

Further Discussion

MR. LEBLEU

I think this matter deserves to be considered by the legislature in reference to the Civil Code, and that's all I'm asking you to do.

Question

MR. BOLLINGER

Conway, don't you think this is a drastic change in the law, in that the laws on accretion and dereliction are very, very, very complex, very hard to understand, and that if we deal with this at this time without the benefit of a lot of discussion that we could be endangering some of the future of Louisiana as far as the mineral laws and the accretion and dereliction laws are concerned?

MR. LEBLEU

You're absolutely right. That's what I was referring to about whose definition of a lake or a stream are we to take. It's the law's definition, not my definition or Mr. Bollinger's or any other person. It's a definition that's set forth in the law, and I think that's where we need to make the corrections.

Point of Information

MR. TAPPER

A point of information, Mr. Acting Chairman. Is it not true that Mrs. Miller has proposed Section 6, or is it Section 7?

MR. CASEY

We're dealing with Section 6. Mrs. Miller introduced the discussion on Section 6, and we're working on the first amendment right now which is a deletion amendment.

MR. TAPPER

Yes, sir. Then, Mr. Acting Chairman, isn't it a fact that in answer to Mr. Chehardy's question that Mrs. Miller's amendment which he's referring to comes after the period at the end of Section 6? Isn't that correct?

MR. CASEY

Mr. Tapper, I don't know where Mrs. Miller's amendment comes in. I'd have to ask the Clerk what Mrs. Miller's amendment does, even.

MR. TAPPER

Well, don't you think we should know before we just delete it, in the event some of us want to go with Mrs. Miller's amendment, which, of course, I don't think I do, but don't you think we should know what we're doing?

[Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected: 48-56. Motion to table reconsideration rejected: 31-68. Motion to reconsider.]

Point of Information

MR. VELAZQUEZ

If you wish to uphold the original decision of the body, how do you vote?

MR. CASEY

If you wish to uphold the original decision of the body, you would have to vote no. I would suggest you'd vote no if that's your intention.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Reconsideration
Further Discussion

MR. SINGLETARY

Ladies and gentlemen, I urge you to reconsider this vote. The committee was very divided on several of these sections, and for instance, Section 6 only applies to acts caused by principally by man. What about other acts? What about accretion and dereliction caused in the natural course of things? So, I urge you to please reconsider this vote.

Questions

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Singletary, isn't it true, we are not changing the Civil Code as it applies to accretion and dereliction that has already been accrued. We're not hurting anyone. We're only saying that henceforth, isn't it true that every time we've had a constitutional change, there have been some very significant basic changes in land law, and isn't it true that we've never before in the history of the world been confronted with situations where so many tremendous changes can be made by the Corps of Engineers? What you're doing now is you're letting...aren't you letting the Corps of Engineers write the land law of Louisiana?

MR. SINGLETARY

No, ma'am. I don't think so; in my opinion we aren't.

MR. BOLLINGER

Alvin, is it not true that in committee in one of our last meetings that we very nearly deleted Section 6 and Section 7 and had they come to a vote probably these sections would have not appeared in the committee proposal?

MR. SINGLETARY

I believe that's probably right, Mr. Bollinger, and I think the committee just primarily reported these things out to get them out on the floor because we were undecided and we knew that there were going to be a lot of floor amendments so we just voted it out to let the convention decide.

MR. BOLLINGER

Another thing I wanted to ask you, this is a large change in the law, and did we have anyone in committee or from outside the committee testify before the committee on this subject?

MR. SINGLETARY

I don't recall, Mr. Bollinger.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Am I correct in saying that this version is not mentioned in the present constitution?

MR. SINGLETARY

That's correct.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

So, this is an entirely new field in which you're asking... the committee has asked us to decide on?

MR. SINGLETARY

As far as the constitution is concerned, yes, sir. This is material that's covered by the jurisprudence and the statutes, primarily the Civil Code.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Singletary, these matters of accretion and dereliction, etc., have been treated in our Civil Code which comes from the Code of Napoleon, which originates as far back as 1804; doesn't it?

MR. SINGLETARY

Yes, sir.

MR. LANIER

This has always been a matter of statutory consideration in our state; has it not?

MR. SINGLETARY

Primarily, Mr. Lanier, primarily.

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

MR. LANIER

That is because of the nature of the beast that we're dealing with here, you have to have the statutory flexibility; isn't that true?

MR. SINGLETARY

Yes, sir. I would agree with that.

MR. LANIER

Don't you think we will be getting ourselves into very, very serious trouble if we start to attempt to tinker with this problem in the constitution and lock it in?

MR. SINGLETARY

Well, that's a possible.

MR. CHEHARDY

Mr. Singletary, admitting the premise that the matters under question are considered in the code and under statutory law, the effect of recent Supreme Court decision, has it not been to, in effect, throw over what these codal provisions provide for?

MR. SINGLETARY

Well, apparently not so in the view of the Supreme Court, Mr. Chehardy.

MR. CHEHARDY

Well, in other words, it has been interpreted to where the meaning is, we're being told it's intended, is no longer the case. That is no longer the present meaning or the intention of these provisions.

MR. SINGLETARY

Well, I believe that the court tries to interpret the law, and tries to apply it as it believes the law is. If there's a feeling that that's the wrong interpretation I think then that the legislature should pass a statute to correct the situation.

MR. CHEHARDY

But, you are...are we not legislating even more basic law than the legislature ordinarily legislates when we're preparing a constitution to govern the enactment of laws? Am I correct in that...?

MR. SINGLETARY

Well, the idea in my opinion of what a constitution is is it should be a basic broad document, and I think this goes beyond that.

MR. ROEMER

Mr. Singletary, I'd like to look at these things on both sides of the coin. What do we lose if we take this out of the constitution?

MR. SINGLETARY

I don't think we lost anything, Buddy. The legislature's authority to deal with the situation would be just as it is now.

MR. ROEMER

Right. So, it's not presently in the constitution now, but if you take it out of the proposed new constitution, we won't have changed the law any, will we?

MR. SINGLETARY

That's correct.

[Motion to limit debate to fifteen minutes adopted: 54-35.]

Further Discussion

MR. TAPPER

Mr. Acting Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in support of the amendment and in opposition to returning this in the article. I know we've put some legislative material in this constitution thus far, but this is one of the things that just cannot be put in the constitution. This is something that we, here, cannot predict what the necessities will be in the future. When you're talking about accretion and dereliction, you're talking about ownership of property--the difference between the ownership on the part of the state and the ownership on the part of the individual. This type of law needs to be flexible because of what may come in the future and the changes in the different streams and lakes and water bottoms. This is something that will affect everyone who owns property in areas where there is water--whether it be rivers, lakes, lagoons, or what have you. This is something that, from the beginning of time in this state, has been handled by the legislature. Now, just because you may not agree with certain legislative acts, or just because the court has a hard time interpreting some of these acts of the legislature, is no reason to lock this in the constitution in its present form. It's not in the 1921 Constitution, and it should not be in this constitution. Ladies and gentlemen, I implore you, if we leave anything out of this constitution, let's leave this matter out of the constitution. I'd answer any questions that you might have.

Further Discussion

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, we all recognize this is a cataclysmic change in the law. It repeals 509 and 510 of the Civil Code. How much have we studied the effect this is going to have on all property owners in Louisiana? How many committee meetings have we had to determine all the ramifications here? There's one instance. Now, if we're going to write this constitution for every bad court decision, for every specific instance, we might as well just start supplementing the Constitution of 1921, rather than to try and to modernize it. We're fooling around with basic statutes. Everybody talks about the big man. What about the little man who owns water...river front and... Every property that lies along streams and bayous is affected by this--and rivers. Every piece of property. So, we're not only affecting the Atchafalaya Levee Basin; we're affecting every landowner in the state who has property along the stream. I suggest to you that we're making very violent changes to the law. I suggest to you that we should not put this in the constitution--that if, every time a situation comes along we disagree with, we try to cure it in this constitution, it's a mistake. Moreover, by this constitution, we cannot retroactively have an effect on a decision which is res judicata. I submit to you it is a dangerous mistake to do this. We are legislating. You see the amendments that are going to be coming. Further legislation. We have to ask: 1) Is this of constitutional sanctity? It might be a good concept, but there are many ramifications. I suggest to you that we delete this committee proposal. I yield to questions.

Questions

MR. ROEMER

Stamwood, if you were a legislator, you would hesitate to pass favorably on legislation, the result of which you didn't know. Isn't that true?

MR. ROEMER

But, isn't it paramount, as constitutionalists, that we don't make the mistake, because it's compounded by the fact that it's difficult as hell to change it?

MR. DUVAL

Buddy, that's just what I'm trying to say.

MR. BURSON

Stan, if we hadn't rewritten the Code of Criminal Procedure in the Bill of Rights, I might give more validity to your puristic constitutional argument. What do we do about the fact that--as in this news release that's been handed out by Mrs. Miller--that Dow Chemical Company is threatening to file a suit claiming thirty thousand acres in the Atchafalaya Basin, because it owns a few hundred acres in there?

MR. DUVAL

Is that threatening to file suit? So they file suit--we don't know what the court is going to do, do we?

MR. BURSON

Well, we know what they did in the first case.

MR. DUVAL

All right. What were the facts of that case, Mr. Burson? Are you familiar with the facts of it?

MR. BURSON

The way I understand it, it simply said that the accretion and alluvion, even though it is caused by a man-made dam or anything of that nature, still goes to the adjoining landowner--which, if that holds true, I would think that all the silt, etc., that got into the Atchafalaya Basin in the last big flood; you'd have to reach the same conclusion.

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

MR. DUVAL

Let me ask you this, Mr. Burson: You haven't read the record of the case, have you? Or the decision?

MR. BURSON

No, sir, I haven't.

MR. DUVAL

All right. Also, what concerns me is that, if this is a cataclysmic problem to the state, certainly the legislature can take care of it. But, I'm wondering how it affects every landowner who's got property along any river or stream, when it changes the basic concepts set forth in 509 and 510. That's my concern. I'm wondering about placing in a constitution a very complex subject, a very esoteric subject, which we have not studied. I'm wondering about, merely because the Supreme Court allegedly made a bad decision, overturning that in a constitution. I don't think that's what we're here for.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Duval, another point here is: Can we, in the constitution, retroactively divest somebody of a vested right?

MR. DUVAL

No, sir.

Further Discussion

MRS. MILLER

Ladies and gentlemen, Mr. Chairman, this is what we're talking about. We're talking about landfalls, windfalls, that go to a few people of this state, a few corporations. It's been my experience in life that it doesn't take long for the little adjoining landowner to be gobbled up and have his little interests bought out by some smart corporation who has plenty of lawyers looking at where the money is. This is not divesting any present landowner of the title to which he is presently entitled, but this is saying: Your title is established at this place now; whatever rights you have now, you have them; but, from now on, we're not going to let the state lose the rest of the last great wilderness area of this state: the Atchafalaya Basin, composed of lakes that sometimes are eighteen miles wide and thirty miles long, and which the Supreme Court of this state doesn't seem to recognize as lakes. We're taking nothing away from landowners, but you are going to save what is left that is the state's for the state. Traditionally, historically, geologically and geographically, the Atchafalaya Basin has belonged to all the people of Louisiana. The Roman law that is two thousand years old, which we've adopted into our code, never anticipated such an area as the great Atchafalaya Swamp. The Romans moved on and on to greater and new territories; they conquered more; they built roads, and they built aqueducts. Yes, they were builders, and they knew how to alter, to some extent, the streams. No country in the world has used their waterways more than the country of Italy for transportation. They were doing it back in the fifteenth century, and the writers were writing about it; so they knew that rivers could change their course, accretion could be built off, there could be cut off. But, that Roman law did not anticipate anything that compared with the great Atchafalaya Swamp of Louisiana. This is all we're saying that this is going to change, basically. We're saying---freeze the titles now. The French law never contemplated anything such as the lakes and the wide streams of Louisiana which may be lakes. The French streams are narrow, and they distinguish, in the French law, between streams and rivers. They do not have the type of lakes that we're talking about in the Atchafalaya Swamp. So, we're saying we're freezing titles now. We're not taking anything from the landowner. What's yours when this constitution passes will always be yours, but we're saying to the big companies---like Dow Chemicals---that are trying to pyramid some less than fifty acres, which you will see on this map outlined in blue, into some forty to fifty thousand acres, which you see outlined in red: that's a windfall that an out-of-state corporation domiciled in another state, doing business in Louisiana, because they had some smart lawyers to come down here and see where to go and pick up a few pieces of land. We don't have to give it to them, and I don't think we should give it to them. It's not taking anything away from landowners; it's only freezing the titles now. I cannot agree with Mr. Duval's and Mr. Singletary's philosophy that this is anything difficult to understand. What we're saying is corps of engineers, your levee districts, all the levees that are built---everything is altering the course. Right now, we're letting four judges....one judge can change and change this law right today. If one judge changes, on rehearing, and hears this case that was decided three weeks ago, we won't need this. But, if they don't change, we're going to need it if we are going to save the Atchafalaya Basin. I ask you to defeat the LeBleu amendment, and let's look at this a little more closely. You have a chance, believe it or not, to overrule the Supreme Court; and I sure hope that you will.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. SINGLETARY

Ladies and gentlemen, we're not dealing with just the Atchafalaya Basin; we're dealing with land all over this state. Suppose that you were a landowner and lost your land to the state. This amendment just deals with accretion or dereliction caused, principally, by acts of man. So, I urge you to please reconsider.

Questions

MR. LANIER

Mr. Singletary, we have been told that we can overrule the Supreme Court. If we change the law in the constitution, that will only be effective to those rights that would accumulate after the effective date of the new constitution. Wouldn't that be correct?

MR. SINGLETARY

Yes.

MR. LANIER

If this case becomes final prior to that time, then we can do nothing to change the outcome of that case. Is that correct?

MR. SINGLETARY

I believe you're right, Mr. Lanier.

MR. LANIER

Further, suppose all of these people file suit prior to the effective date of this constitution and we have a judicial determination that this body of water is considered as a stream in accordance with the code, don't you think collateral estoppel would require that the same ruling be in all of those cases that are filed prior to the effective date of this constitution?

MR. SINGLETARY

Yes, I do.

MR. LANIER

So, really, with reference to that situation, we're in a real bad spot, aren't we?

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Singletary, the landowner loses--does he not?--when the water encroaches on his property? Doesn't he lose that land?

MR. SINGLETARY

That's correct.

MR. DUVAL

And doesn't this amendment not only affect the Atchafalaya Levee Basin, but everybody who lives on a bayou, river, or stream in the State of Louisiana?

MR. SINGLETARY

I believe so, Mr. Duval.

MR. DUVAL

And doesn't it, Mr. Singletary, change the laws to all those people? Isn't that right?

MR. SINGLETARY

Yes, sir.

MR. DUVAL

Thank you.

MR. SINGLETARY

And, we cannot change it by statute, if it turns out to be a bad decision.

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Singletary, did I understand you to say you were trying to preserve the rights of the individual landowner?

MR. SINGLETARY

I think you should give that some consideration, Mrs. Warren.

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

MRS. WARREN

All right. Wasn't it brought out at the mike that this was not to take anything away, but to freeze what you had---not give you anything, but just let you keep what you've got?

MR. SINGLETARY

I don't believe so, Mrs. Warren.

MRS. WARREN

I think it was, if it was read back. If the tape was put in a spinning wheel now, I think you would find that that statement was made. It was to freeze what you had, but not give you any more.

Further Discussion

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Singletary, it would appear that this problem that we're dealing with is a serious one and is caused by, mainly, the Corps of Engineers and that we're attacking the effects of their action. I think somewhere in this constitution people like you and I--I know you are affected by it on the north shore of Lake Pontchartrain--we should be attacking the destructibility of the United States Corps of Engineers and their destructive products which is causing this particular problem. Isn't that true?

MR. SINGLETARY

I believe so.

Point of Information

MR. O'NEILL

Mr. Chairman, a lot of delegates are confused as to the significance of the vote they cast. Would you explain exactly where we are and exactly what each vote will stand for?

MR. POYNTER

We're on the question of Section 6. Mr. LeBleu had previously sent up an amendment which would have had the effect of deleting Section 6 from the proposal. That amendment failed to pass. So, motion to reconsider and table the motion to reconsider. Mr. Duval objected to tabling the motion to reconsider. The convention refused, by vote, to table the motion to reconsider. Therefore, the question immediately before you is the question of whether you wish to reconsider the vote by which the LeBleu amendment failed to pass. Therefore, if you want to consider the LeBleu amendment again--a second time--you would vote yes. If you do not wish to consider the LeBleu amendment a second time, you would vote no.

[Motion to reconsider adopted: 57-46.
Previous Question ordered on the Amendment. Amendment adopted: 62-42.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

"Section 7. Mineral Rights; Erosion

Section 7. Mineral rights to land lost by erosion caused principally by acts of man, on a navigable water bottom, are retained by the riparian landowner."

Explanation

MRS. MILLER

Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, Section 7 is a very basic change in law. It does more than try to attempt to change a court procedure....a court ruling. It has to do with the ownership, too, of who owns the land...of the fact that the state owns the land between the low and the high watermark on your seacoast.

This section was really put in after the committee adopted Section 6, on the feeling--a divided question--but on the feeling that if you adopted Section 6, then it was only fair to maybe reverse it and give something to the adjoining landowners. However, I do point out that there is a reason why this could not really work out; and that is because, when it comes to the seashore and you're talking lands lost by erosion, the state owns the property between the high and the low watermarks. So, it's an entirely different concept that's trying to be changed here. I don't believe that there is any--we haven't had a committee meeting on it--but I don't believe there's any serious objections to deleting this. I believe there's an amendment coming for that effect, so we won't spend much time on this.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Yes, Mrs. Miller, I do have an amendment sent up by Mr. LeBleu now to do that very thing. You want to go ahead with your amendment, Mrs. Miller?

Amendment sent up by Mr. LeBleu reads as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, delete lines 28 through 31, both inclusive, in their entirety.

[Motion to limit debate on each Amendment to the Section to fifteen minutes adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. LEBLEU

Well, let me go ahead. I think I was responsible for this section of the committee proposal in the first place. The reason that I proposed it is because in looking out for the landowner, if he has some property that's set out by posts, stakes or otherwise marked--other markers--and these are delineated in his abstract and over a period of time, whether he has any water frontage or not, but over a period of time if for some reason, some act of man, the stream, Gulf, or otherwise starts eroding his property, then the state, by law, gets that water bottom. They also take the minerals. It was just my idea to kind of give the landowner some protection, since the state takes his, under the present law, takes both the water bottom and the minerals. But, when the convention decided to go along with the deletion of Section 6, I think it's imperative that we also delete Section 7 and maybe let the legislature straighten these matters out in the civil code. That was the reason I offered both amendments.

Motion

MR. CASEY

Mr. Burson was next on the list. You wanted the floor, though, Mr. Burson.

MR. BURSON

Because it seems to me that Sections 6 and 7 have to be considered together, and I think most people here have made up their minds, I move the previous question.

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted: 93-7. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

"Section 8. Ten percent of the royalties from any mineral lease heretofore or hereafter granted by the state shall be placed by the treasurer in a special fund to the credit of the parish from which the mineral was severed. This special fund shall be known as the Royalty Road Fund and shall be used by the state to acquire, construct, and maintain transportation facilities in the parish."

Explanation

MR. BOLLINGER

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, the concept of the Royalty Road Fund came up in the article on Revenue, Finance and Taxation, and it was decided by this convention at that time. However, some verbiage was left out that should be included, as far as the definition of lands, and also, as far as the authority for the local government subdivisions to bond the monies received from the Royalty Road Funds. The Committee on Natural Resources had jurisdiction over Royalty Road Fund as well as the Committee on Revenue, Finance and Taxation. I, for one, am not going to make a big issue over the dedication of the funds. There are many amendments to Section 8 as far as...in way of explanation, Mr. Chairman, I'll yield to any questions as far as the present constitution of the Section 8.

Questions

MR. BROWN

Mr. Bollinger, would you state specifically what Section 8 does here different than what was adopted by Revenue and Taxation? Why is this necessary at all?

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

I'm particularly raising the question, you talked about bonding capacity. This doesn't say anything about bonding authority or capacity. What, specifically, are the differences and why is this particularly necessary?

MR. BOLLINGER

The differences in this, Senator Brown, it dedicates ten percent of the royalties as does the Revenue, Finance and Taxation Article, but it retains the money in the state treasury to the credit of the parish whereas the Revenue, Finance and Taxation Article sends the money directly to the parish. It also dedicates the use of this money to the . . . by the state "to acquire, construct and maintain transportation facilities in the parish." Now, I just . . . in way of explaining, there are amendments to delete and there are amendments to change. I want to explain that before we delete it, there are some things that should be considered by this convention before we delete Section 8 in its entirety. I understand that we've covered it in the convention before, and I don't think we need another article on Royalty Road Fund per se. There is some language that should be placed in the constitution.

MR. BROWN

You say amendments are coming up to place that language in so you. . .

MR. BOLLINGER

Yea. Yes, sir; there is. But, I just wanted the convention to know this rather than just go ahead and delete it and say we already handled it in the Revenue Article.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Mr. Bollinger, do you know that in Revenue, Finance and Taxation representatives of the local government came to our committee and said they would just as soon have that money rather than have it in the state treasury, so if they wanted to invest it, they could invest it? That's the reason why we did it the way we did.

MR. BOLLINGER

Mr. Champagne, I'm not arguing what we adopted. I don't agree with it, but I'm not going to argue with it. I'm not trying to oppose it. This is what the committee offered in light. . . and we didn't know which committee proposal was going to come up first. The Committee on Revenue, Finance and Taxation Article was adopted. This is still in our committee proposal. But, before the convention deletes it in its entirety, I just wanted to let the convention know that there were some issues that should be discussed before it was deleted.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

MR. HENRY

Read the Perez, Miller, Gravel amendment, please, sir.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendment no. 1. On page 2, delete lines--this amendment is sent up by Delegates Perez, Miller and Gravel.

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, delete line 32 in its entirety and on page 3, delete lines 1 through 7, both inclusive, in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Section 8. Royalty Fund.

Section 8. As used in Article XI, Section 4 (D), 'state-owned property' means state-owned land, lake and river beds, and other water bottoms belonging to the state or the title to which is in the public for mineral development. The governing authority of a parish may fund its one-tenth of the royalties from mineral leases on such state-owned property into general obligation bonds of the parish in accordance with law. Neither the provisions of this Section nor the provisions of Article XI, Section 4 (D) shall apply to those properties comprising the Russell Sage Wildlife and Game Refuge."

Explanation

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, after Article XI, Section 4 (D) was adopted in which one-tenth of the royalties from mineral leases went to the various parishes, several defects were called to the attention of many of the delegates. This particular amendment would have for its purpose, first of all, to delete the Royalty Road Fund, as such; that is, another ten percent because we'd be giving the parishes twenty percent instead of ten percent if we were to leave this particular amendment in. So, we would delete the entire proposal as it is. But, we would clean up certain language in . . . or clean up the situation so that we would not do any violence to the present constitutional provisions. First of all, the present constitution, when it talks about what the royalties from what the levee districts or rather the parish is entitled to receive, it says, "state-owned land, lakes and river beds and other water bottoms belonging to the state or the title to which is in the public for mineral development." All we would do would be to say that when in Section . . . in Article XI, Section 4 (D) the words "state-owned property" were used, it means these various things so that we will continue, in effect, the present provisions of the constitution. Under the present constitutional provision, the local . . . the authority is granted for the funding of these proceeds and the bonds so that they can go forward with the building and construction of roads. Unless we have that authority, it might jeopardize the road program of the parishes because they need to be able to bond these monies in order to be able to build the permanent improvements. The last sentence deals with what is known as the Russell Sage Foundation and there is a provision in the donation where if any of the clauses in the donation of this 85,000 acres of land are not carried out, then the lands would revert to the original donors. In order to be sure that there can be no problem with this--and this is what is better known as Marsh Island--the Royalty Road Fund does not apply to this 85,000 acres of land. So, I submit to you, this is primarily just to clean the matter up. It's been gone over by most of the people that are knowledgeable in this subject matter.

I'd move the adoption.

Questions

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Perez, would you call the attention of the delegates to the sheets which are attached to my separate amendment which explains the problems with the Russell Sage Foundation, 'cause many of them may wish to keep it?

MR. PEREZ

If you will look at . . . there was a separate amendment by Mrs. Miller which would have taken the last sentence of my amendment. It gives an explanation on the Russell Sage Foundation and what the problems are with respect to it.

If there are no questions, I move the adoption.

Delegate Jenkins in the Chair

MR. BOLLINGER

Mr. Perez, in light of what this convention decided in the Revenue, Finance and Taxation Article, did you know that your amendment covers all of the objectives that the committee wished with Section 8?

MR. PEREZ

Yes.

MR. PLANCHARD

Chalin, how does that first sentence. . .

MR. PEREZ

I'm sorry, I can't hear you.

MR. PLANCHARD

How does that first part of your amendment differ from the present constitution?

MR. PEREZ

It's exactly the same as the present constitution with respect to the definitions. That's why we wanted to be sure it was included in this.

MR. LEBLEU

Mr. Perez, I just wondered if your reference to Russell Sage Wildlife and Game Refuge is the proper wording? As I understand it, the Russell Sage Foundation has different enterprises. I think what we were primarily wanting to refer to is the Marsh Island Game and Wildlife Refuge.

MR. PEREZ

All I can tell you, Mr. LeBleu, is I relied upon Mrs. Miller and the other persons who are knowledgeable in that field to prepare that part of the amendment. I'm sure it's . . . I'm reasonably sure it's all right.

MR. LEBLEU

Well, I talked with some people in the Wildlife and Fisheries

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

Commission yesterday morning who had asked me to submit an amendment which would do exactly what we're trying to do and they referred to it as the Marsh Island Game Refuge.

MR. PEREZ

Well, all this would refer to, Mr. LeBleu, is that provision where it says that these one-tenth of the royalties go to the parish. It would have no effect on anything else. So, I don't believe that there's any problem involved.

Further Discussion

MRS. MILLER

The committee has no objection to the amendment. I will mention, in answer to Mr. LeBleu's question about the Russell Sage Foundation, it does primarily concern the 85,000 acres of Marsh Island. But, with some of the royalty monies which the Russell Sage Foundation had derived along with the state, the Russell Sage Foundation has bought three other wildlife refuges in the state. So, we're talking about a considerable area of land that has been set aside for the wildlife in the state as well as the Marsh Island land. We think this is a very important amendment. The committee has no objection to the amendment by Perez and Gravel and would urge that you adopt it.

Questions

MR. DENNERY

Ruth, I didn't understand one thing you said. You said that the Russell Sage people had bought additional properties and created additional game and wildlife refuges. Is that correct?

MRS. MILLER

Yes.

MR. DENNERY

Now, is . . . if there are any minerals under that, do they come under the arrangement that was worked out for Marsh Island?

MRS. MILLER

Yes; this would be all within the Russell Sage amendment, here.

MR. DENNERY

Well, then, don't you think you ought to change the last word to make it plural, because there may be more than one Russell Sage Wildlife and Game Refuge?

MRS. MILLER

Well, it might be a technical amendment we might need, Mr. Dennery, but this was the language that the Mineral Board used. I don't think . . . I think that they have an understanding of what it's all about.

. . . and that it wouldn't be a problem.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mrs. Miller, is the Rockefeller Foundation . . . is the Rockefeller Foundation so affected?

MRS. MILLER

No, because they have different terms under which that property was . . . could entrust with the state. We had the problem with the Russell Sage Foundation because of the reversionary clause in it. It's taken many acts of the legislature to provide for the mineral leasing without violating . . . doing violence to the terms of the donation under which the heirs could call for the reversion of the property. But, we don't have that problem with the Rockefeller.

MR. HERNANDEZ

They don't have a reversionary clause in the Rockefeller deed?

MRS. MILLER

I can't understand . . . hear you.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Don't they have such a clause in the Rockefeller deed?

MRS. MILLER

Evidently not, because when the Mineral Board looked at this, they didn't think they had any problem at all as far as royalties going back to the parishes.

[Previous Question ordered.]

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Perez, in your opinion, here, in your amendment where you say, "as used in Article XI, Section 4 (D)," and you define "state-owned properties." Now, as you well know, under the present constitution, the Royalty Road Fund can only be used for roads. It can be used by mayors in municipalities for any road or any type of transportation. Well, can that money still only be used for roads, or can the . . . now, under this thing. . .

MR. PEREZ

Senator, under your committee proposal, it can be used for . . . it's just remitted to the parish. I offered . . . let me tell you, I offered an amendment together with Mr. Bollinger to limit it just to roads, but the convention decided against it. So, I . . . Mr. Bollinger and I tried to limit it just to roads, but unfortunately it was not passed that way.

MR. RAYBURN

What I'm thinking, though, this language here where you refer back to the present article, that would not give it back just to the roads would it? I . . .

MR. PEREZ

No, it would not. All it would do would be to clarify what the word "state-owned property" is. I might say that our suggestion is that Style and Drafting will put these words back into the Revenue Article instead of having a separate provision on it.

MR. RAYBURN

Well, in other words, now, under Article XV, what has been the Royalty Road Fund, the mayors will have no more use of that fund. It will go directly to the governing authority of the parish to be used at their pleasure. Am I correct?

MR. PEREZ

Well, for public purposes.

MR. RAYBURN

That's right, for public purposes. But, I mean, they can build . . .

MR. PEREZ

A hospital with it. . .

MR. RAYBURN

Anything they want to.

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Perez, the question just asked by Senator Rayburn, that money never . . . the mayors and municipalities never had specific use of it before. It was . . .

MR. PEREZ

No, it just continues the same as it was before as with respect to who has the control over or the determination of the use.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The gentleman sends up amendments which read as follows: Amendment No. 1. On page 2, line 32, in Floor Amendment No. 1 proposed by Delegates Perez, et al, and adopted by the convention just now, on line 2 of the text of the amendment, immediately after "Section 8." and before the initial word "As" insert "(A) and at the end of the language added by the text of the amendment add the following: "(B) No conveyance, lease, royalty agreement or unitization agreement involving minerals or mineral rights owned by the State of Louisiana shall be effected without prior public notice or public bidding."

Chairman Henry in the Chair

Point of Order

MR. PEREZ

I reluctantly object to the amendment. I don't believe it is germane to the subject matter of this particular section.

Ruling of the Chair

MR. HENRY

Mr. Perez, I'm going to have to rule that you're correct that the amendment is not germane to the section as has just been amended by you. So, the Chair rules that the amendment is out of order.

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

[Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 95-4. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Recess

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

[Quorum Call: 82 delegates present and a quorum. Record vote ordered on Quorum Call: 83 delegates present and a quorum.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Burson sends up an amendment at this time adding a section. There's been some confusion on reproduction of this. We're going to get some more copies of this run because of the fact that Mr. Burson previously was going to offer this as an amendment to the prior section which, of course, he withdrew at the time it was declared out of order as being non-germane. But, he sends up a new section--we'll get the copies momentarily-- which will read as follows:

"Section 6.1. Public Notice; Public Bidding Requirements

Section 6. 1. No conveyance, lease, royalty agreement or unitization agreement involving minerals or mineral rights owned by the State of Louisiana shall be effected without prior public notice or public bidding."

Explanation

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this morning sixty delegates voted for a much more sweeping clause suggested by Mrs. Miller, but there was objection by a number of delegates that her amendment included too much, that it might include routine state business of other state agencies than the one that she apparently intended to affect the most: that is, the business of the state with regard to the minerals. I suggest to you because oil and gas is the most important natural resource of the state that it only makes sense to require any conveyancing, leasing, royalty agreement or unitization agreement involving these minerals in these times to be on top of the table and done with proper public notice or public bidding. Now, it may be objected that this is already accomplished by the statutes, I don't know that to be the case, some people feel that it is not adequately accomplished by the statutes. I certainly see no harm that could be done by making this plain and simple statement in our constitution mandating that any transaction involving minerals owned by the State of Louisiana should be done after public notice or public bidding. It seems to me it would be anomalous in the extreme to require as we do today all public agencies on the local level to advertise any time they're constructing a project involving more than twenty-five hundred dollars and to permit the Mineral Board or any other state agency to engage in binding contracts involving the mineral wealth of this state without adequate public notice. The statement I propose to you is simple, it encompasses only one object and I do not see how it is subject to a great deal of interpretation. Therefore, I request your adoption of this statement as a section of the Natural Resources Article.

Questions

MR. AVANT

Jack, this is just one of those questions that's just for the record.

You mention in this "unitization agreement" and my understanding of the law is that the power and authority to create units for the production of hydrocarbons is vested in the Department of Conservation under what was Act 157 of 1940 and is now in the Revised Statutes.

MR. BURSON

Yes, sir.

MR. AVANT

That's the only authority for a unitization agreement.

MR. BURSON

Yes, sir.

MR. AVANT

Now, it would not be the intent of this amendment to lock into the constitution the provisions of Act 157 of 1940 and the concepts therein contained as to the conservation of oil and gas and other hydrocarbons?

MR. BURSON

Not at all. I just included unitization agreement because, of course, there can be voluntary unitization agreements and these could be entered into voluntarily by some state agency. That's why I included that phrase in there.

MR. DERBES

Jack, it seems to me that this principle is somewhat like the principles that we're dealing with in the Bill of Rights Committee Proposal where most everyone can agree that the principle is a good one, but it's difficult to state it succinctly and concisely and explicitly in our constitutional framework. As I understand it, the legislature would essentially have to prescribe the terms for the prior public notice and public bidding; isn't that pretty much the case?

MR. BURSON

Yes, sir. They have done so with regards, for instance, to local governmental subdivisions as I mentioned in my discussion.

MR. DERBES

Finally, why do you state "prior public notice or public bidding" in a disjunctive rather than the conjunctive?

MR. BURSON

Well, because I think, for instance, in the case of conveyancing or leasing you certainly would want to have public bidding as well as public notice. Whereas, in unitization agreements you probably would not. I wanted to include them all in as short a sentence as I could.

MR. DERBES

So, what does "public notice" to you mean as a term of art?

MR. BURSON

Well, I think, "public notice" as a term of art in our law as I know it would usually mean "notice of some sort in the newspaper." I look upon the press as the primary guardian of the public good in this instance as in all other instances involving money or important resources of the state. If the press has notice of it, I find usually a good reporter will go down and nose around into the thing and if there is something that is wrong with it, he'll let the people know about it. Also, in the area of mineral rights we've got a lot of private parties that are interested in what happens in these particular situations because of the competitive aspects of oil and gas industry.

MR. DERBES

But, "public notice" doesn't mean notice to the press, it means "notice in the press."

MR. BURSON

That would be my interpretation.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

This, Mr. Burson, is one of those for the record votes. Would my vote on this amendment be contingent on my right to ride back with you this afternoon?

MR. BURSON

No, sir, not at all, not after the three dollar license plates.

Further Discussion

MR. LEIGH

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, as I said to you this morning, I am not opposed to the concept that the state in disposing of its mineral rights or in contracting for the refinery of its oil or the possibilities raised by Mrs. Miller this morning, I'm not opposed to the concept that there should be public bidding and public advertisement on it. But, I am very much afraid that the language of this amendment would hamstring the routine business of the Mineral Board. The Mineral Board acts upon unitization agreements and arrives at a division of the--almost every month-- arriving at a division of the amount due in a particular unit as between the state and the private landowner based upon studies made by the experts in the Mineral Board and an allocation if it's a reservoir unit a calculation of the amount of the cubic content of that reservoir that should go to the state, or... if it's a surface unit, a calculation of the amount of the surface that should go to the state. If those unitization agreements cannot be executed without public bidding or public advertisement, I think, we're going to hamstring the operation of the Mineral Board in its routine manner. The powers and duties of the Mineral Board are spelled out very exhaustively in the legislature in the act creating the Mineral Board and it seems to me that this goes too far. I would oppose the amendment as it is drawn.

Questions

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Leigh, could you tell me how long it would take them to put an advertisement in the paper?

MR. LEIGH

I don't know, possibly a week before, I don't know how long it takes, but it's never always possible to outline the agreement in the newspaper advertisement. Just to say that a unitization agreement has been submitted to the Mineral Board conveys no information to the public whatsoever. Now, the operations of the Mineral Board are always open to the public. I think there is a public records act that they'd have to meet in public, and all of the contracts, unitization agreements or anything else adopted by the Mineral Board are adopted in open session after a discussion of it. The preliminary matters are open to the public and I can see no advantage to be gained from an advertisement that a unitization agreement has been applied for.

MRS. WARREN

Well, Mr. Leigh, what I was really trying to find out, you seem to think they would not have time and, of course, that is your opinion that it wouldn't be of any interest. However, some people do feel that it should, would you agree to that?

MR. LEIGH

Do I agree that some people feel it should?

MRS. WARREN

Right.

MR. LEIGH

Evidently, they do because the amendment has been offered.

MRS. WARREN

Right. But, I'm... what I'm really trying to get at, do you think it would take any significant length of time to get advertised in the paper what Mr. Burson was talking about?

MR. LEIGH

Mrs. Warren, what I think about it is that it would... it would just practically disrupt the routine operations of the Mineral Board. Most of these unitization agreements are strictly routine matters, letter agreements dealing with the allocation of royalty as between them based on engineering calculations, and I think it would just simply disrupt the routine operations of the Mineral Board if we put a provision like this in the constitution.

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Leigh, one more question: don't you think that some-time interruption would not be the prime interest, it would be the interest of the people?

MR. LEIGH

Mrs. Warren, I think that the interests of the people are amply provided for in the statutes that creates the Mineral Board and gives it the power that it exercises.

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Leigh, if I am understanding you right, aren't you saying that the Mineral Board likes it so they can work in secret and not have too much publicity about those unitization agreements. You know unitization agreements, isn't it sometimes just another name for a big giveaway?

MR. LEIGH

No, Mrs. Miller, I don't ... to answer your last question or to answer in reverse order, I don't think that a unitization agreement or the execution of a unitization agreement based on the recommendations of the professional staff of the Mineral Board, I don't think it's a giveaway in any sense of the word. Now, then to answer your first question: as to operating in secret, so far as I know, the Mineral Board does not operate in secret, and if it tried to operate in secret, certainly it would be illegal for it to do so because it's a public body and its meetings are open to the public. So far as I know, they are open to the public at this time.

Further Discussion

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I'm not going to stand up here and tell you that I'm an expert on the oil and gas law of the State of Louisiana. But, I don't think you have to be a weatherman, or have a degree in meteorology to know that it's raining out there. It's raining when it's raining. You don't have to have a degree in medicine to know if your arm hurts. Mr. Leigh says that all of this work is just routine. If all the mineral board is doing is routine work, how could they possibly object to letting the people know what's going on? No one says that what they put in the newspaper has to be a word-for-word rendition, or word-for-word copy of an engineering report. All they have to do is give a statement that expresses the totality of what they are doing. They don't have to buy twenty pages of advertising and tell us word-for-word, step-by-step what they are doing. But, in broad terms, since the mineral board works for the people, since all of these engineers, and all of these experts are paid their salaries by the people, why shouldn't the people know what they are doing? Why shouldn't the people know what they are doing with the property of the people, which the property of the state is? I think Mr. Burson has a fine amendment. I don't see how anyone could stand up here and say that no conveyance, lease, royalty agreement or utilization agreement involving minerals, or mineral rights owned by the State of Louisiana shall be confected of prior public notice or public bidding, and said this might interfere. How can anyone dare say that the people shouldn't know the people's business?

I urge your support for the Burson amendment.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, just a brief closing. I have great respect for Mr. Leigh. It just so happens in this particular instance that I disagree with him. I think that certainly you may, to some extent, hamstring, as he says, the routine business of the mineral board--just to the extent that the public bid law hamstring what used to be routine business in a lot of local government agencies--whether cities, parishes, or school boards. But, this is done for a very necessary purpose--to protect the public. To give the public adequate knowledge of what is being done on the one hand in the public bid law with its tax money. In this case, with the most important, natural resources that this state has. Some inconvenience may be necessary to achieve that purpose. I think we should also keep well in mind, here, that there has been legislation lately which has suggested some very unusual power be vested in certain agencies of this state with regard to oil and gas. It may be that this unusual power is necessary. But, when we vest this unusual power in some individuals or agencies, we'd better be sure that we have somewhere in our basic law a guarantee that before they can dispose or reach important agreements involving these resources, that they've got to notify the public about what they are doing. That is the purpose of this amendment. I think it's plain. I think it's simple. I think it's good business for the public. I urge your support.

Questions

MR. ANZALONE

Mr. Burson, I direct your attention to unitization agreements. Is it not true that these agreements are always subject to a great deal of confusion and conjecture?

MR. BURSON

There is no question about that, Mr. Anzalone. I never cease to be amazed how, in my few appearances for the conservation commission, that oil companies always seem to contend that the geology under the ground coincides with their lease lines.

MR. ANZALONE

Is it not also true that if we are going to have something that is subject to this great deal of conjecture, that it would be a good thing to state in this constitution that it is the philosophy of not only this convention, but of the people of this state, that at least we will have this conjecture in an open hearing?

MR. BURSON

Absolutely.

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

MR. JONES

Mr. Burson, this is more restrictive than the amendment we rejected down, because we had there, beforehand, three alternatives. Now, we don't even have the third alternative.

MR. BURSON

Mr. Jones, it was intentionally more restrictive. I'm not trying to mislead you there. I think you ought to have either public notice, or public bidding on these matters. I don't think other arrangements are satisfactory, because the motivation behind this is to let the people know when these important rights are being contracted about or dealt with.

MR. JONES

One other question, Mr. Burson.

Suppose we have a transfer of a mineral interest in which is from one...private individual to another--where he sells his mineral interest. Now, you know under the present system, the... you have to have the approval of the mineral board. Now, when "X" sells a portion, or all of his mineral interest on a state lease to another individual, is this going to have to be a subject of public notice, or of public advertising?

MR. BURSON

I don't think that's what this is intended to do if read in context.

MR. JONES

In other words, it's your opinion that when one individual transfers a part of his mineral interest to another one for a consideration, even though it's subject to approval of the mineral board, it has no necessity that this provision shall apply to that type of transaction.

MR. BURSON

No. I think anything that has to be subject to approval of the mineral board ought to be...noticed, too. I don't see the big problem with public notice. You know, I belong to a public body that has all sorts of public notice requirements. This is handled very routinely in the local newspaper. That's no big problem. Every city, every parish, every school board in this state has many public notice requirements that they have to adhere to. I don't see where the mineral board ought to have any great difficulty here.

MR. JONES

If I...sell you a part of my interest in a mineral lease that I have, then you would require that it be published in the newspaper before the approval was had by the mineral board. Is that correct?

MR. BURSON

Mr. Jones, you have indicated that it has to be approved by the mineral board. If it has to be approved by the mineral board, then it has to be on their agenda. If it's on their agenda, there's no earthly reason why they shouldn't give the public advance notice of what their agenda is.

MR. JONES

I just wanted to know what your reaction was.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Burson...this is just a question for clarification. Who would pay for the public notice?

MR. BURSON

I think that the mineral board, or the agency involved pays for the public notice.

MRS. ZERVIGON

The agency pays?
Thank you, very much.

[Amendment rejected: 60-40. Motion to table reconsideration rejected: 45-53. Motion to reconsider. Record vote ordered.]

Closing

MR. MILLER

Gentlemen, I just as...and ladies, I think it is just a very simple thing, if you want to keep your public officials and appointed officials honest, and help them to be honest. You know my grandfather used to say the best way to keep a man honest was not to ever put too much temptation in his way. Believe me, gentlemen, that's why I always go with my husband to conferences and conventions.

Now, I want to tell you, it's not if they're going to do anything right anyway. This is not going to hurt your appointed officials running that mineral board. They will object to it if they do want to have a lot of leeway to do as they please. It's this simple. I think you should consider this and get this thing sixty-seven votes. It will be sixty-seven votes for good government. I ask your reconsideration. Please vote yes.

[Motion to reconsider adopted: 57-46.]

Reconsideration
Further Discussion

MR. DERBES

If I could sway a couple of votes, it would be worthwhile.

Ladies and gentlemen, I rise in support of the amendment. If I were to draft a public bidding statute, or a statute requiring prior public notice, it would be a whole heck of a lot more detail, and more onerous on public officials than the one that we've stated in this amendment.

I'd like to point out to you that the amendment is stated in the disjunctive. It says that "either prior public notice is required, or public bidding." It doesn't necessarily have to be both. Prior notice is not only public advertisement in local newspapers. It can be much simpler and much more convenient for the local agency...for the various agencies than that. It can be the mere posting of notice on the courthouse door, or in some conspicuous place where people may see it. Advertising is something that public agencies have to do from time to time. It's very easy for them to do. They get special rates from newspapers. It is hardly a substantial inconvenience. It is hardly a substantial inconvenience, and it is something that we should be prepared to do by way of general requirement in order to promote disclosure in government.

If I can make any difference whatsoever in...encouraging a half dozen more votes for this section, then my time is not wasted. Thank you.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

Questions

MR. WILLIS

Mr. Derbes, don't you think that any public service who would oppose publicizing public business would be tantamount to advocating making them secret?

MR. DERBES

Where there's smoke, there's fire, Mr. Willis. I...that would be my response to the question.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Do you know, Mr. Derbes, that if it said, "as provided by law," that maybe I'd vote for it?

MR. DERBES

Mr. Champagne, let me explain that to you. I think it's very important. It...what that amendment says is that there has to be either prior public notice or public bidding. Now, the legislature can adopt, in the police power clause, the legislature can provide for methods of public bidding, or methods of public notice. That sets forth a bare minimum--a bare minimum. There must be either a type of public notice, or a type of public bidding as a bare minimum.

By way of further expatiation on that particular phrase, the legislature can incorporate and provide as much detail as it may deem necessary, but not below the constitutional minimum.

MR. AVANT

Why was this drawn so as to exclude, and I think it does exclude, political subdivisions of the state, or levee boards, or school boards, or other individual boards that may have oil producing or mineral producing property?

MR. DERBES

Mr. Avant, I only....I can only suggest to you that your question is addressed to the wrong person. I don't know who drew....I know that Mr. Burson has presented the amendment. I can't explain it for him except to say that as a basic requirement for state agencies, I support it. I would support it if it went to the extent that you suggest it should go. I would support it then, too. I can't answer that question.

MR. ARNETTE

Ladies and gentlemen, I think this amendment goes pretty much to the heart of the democratic process; that is, letting the people know what their government is doing. We went to great pains here at the convention to make sure that all our meetings would be public. Everything that we decided would be public. All of our votes would be public. The same thing is true of the legislature. This is merely...just says a state agency can't do something without it being public. I think if the state's mineral rights are being contracted about and with, or contracted away or sold, or given, the people of this state ought to know about it. That's all this says. It's a very bare minimum type of provision saying you have to have public notice. The legislature can provide what type of notice. We don't...go into anything in great detail at all. But, it just says "we have to have public notice." I think this is what the people of the state want. They don't want anybody voting in secret up here. I don't see how we should have our agencies voting in secret about some of the vital interest...probably the greatest natural resources, the State of Louisiana. I urge you to adopt the amendment.

Thank you.

MR. KILBOURNE

Mr. Arnette, when you put, you say "public notice" in the constitution, just what do you...envison by that?

MR. ARNETTE

What do I envision by it?
Well, it depends on how the legislature....

MR. KILBOURNE

How much notice would it be? Would it have to be on television, in the newspapers? How would the public be notified?

MR. ARNETTE

It would probably be the same way they are notified about everything else like a public land sale, or something like this; a couple of publications in the newspaper. But, at least the people would have an opportunity to know that it would be happening.

MR. KILBOURNE

But, this doesn't say that, does it?

MR. ARNETTE

No, it doesn't, sir. That's why I'm saying the legislature can provide the method of notification just like they provided the method of notification in public land sales, tax sales, things like this. I envision that type of public notice. Just something to let the people know that their mineral rights of the state are being contracted away--or sold--or whatever.

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, with permission of the convention, I would move to withdraw the amendment and add, resubmit it adding words that would make it plain that the type of notice and of bidding would be provided by law, because this seems to be a concern--good faith concern of a good many people here. I would ask that permission now.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The gentleman resubmits the amendment with the following change: At the end of the text of the amendment after the "bidding" delete the period "." and add "as shall be provided by law."

Explanation

MR. BURSON

A number of delegates expressed concern that some court might conclude that it was the intent here to specify a particular kind of notice, which it was not. I assume that this would be covered by statute and that is the purpose of the change. However, I say "as shall be provided by law," so that it's not a maybe but there must be a provision for either public notice or public bidding in such matters. I think this achieves the purpose that I had in mind and removes some questions in the mind of many of the delegates.

Point of Information

MR. MUNSON

Since this amendment was up for reconsideration and it's been withdrawn and resubmitted, is it still up for reconsideration?

MR. HENRY

Yes, sir, it certainly is.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: 74-28. Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 97-5. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

MR. HENRY

Now move to Section 14, Paragraph (B).
All right, Mr. Clerk, read it as amended.

Reading of the Paragraph

MR. CASEY

As amended to date, Paragraph (B) reads as follows:
"The commission shall regulate all common carriers and public utilities provided by law. It shall adopt it and enforce reasonable rules, regulations, and procedures necessary for the discharge of its duties, and shall have other powers and perform other duties as provided by law."
(B) hasn't been amended, (A) was amended.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendment No. 1. On page 5, at the end of line 23, insert the following:
"Such rules, regulations, and practices shall, insofar as practicable, encourage competition in production among the common carriers and public utilities subject to the authority of the commission."

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

MR. CASEY ( IN THE CHAIR)

Mr. Jenkins will explain his amendment.

Explanation

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, delegates, I don't think this will be controversial; it's an attempt to provide in our constitution that if it's practicable, in other words, if it's practical, or if it's possible, or if it's reasonable that there be competition in a given industry or area then the commission shall adopt rules and regulations that will be consistent with that and that, insofar as practicable, the rules and regulations of the commission should also encourage production. So, I urge the adoption of that amendment. I think it will cure some ills.

Questions

MR. BROWN

Woody, I don't fully understand the intent, you talk about encourage production, well, of course, common carriers don't produce. You talk about public utilities, I guess you talk about what they generate. I don't see where production is relevant to common carriers and public utilities. Would you explain that to me, number one? Number two, what is your...would you elaborate a little bit more in terms of what you mean by competition? Just by what we have done in the legislature under the Energy Bill, for instance, with the common carriers it's nothing that really stimulates competition, it's a more a way of getting them together and regulation under what we've done almost by definition greatly limits competition. What are you trying to get at in this amendment when you're talking about competition and production? They seem to run counter to what we are doing in the article and what the Energy Bill did in the legislation, and I just don't fully understand.

MR. JENKINS

Well, obviously, in some instances it's not practical or reasonable to have competition in a given area. For instance, it might be generally agreed that it's not practicable to have more than one light company in the city of Baton Rouge and so forth. But, in certain areas particularly with regard to common carriers it is both practical and reasonable because we are talking about truckers that haul between Baton Rouge and Shreveport. It would certainly not be reasonable to say that only one firm could do that if there was a great demand for use of that. With regard to production, we're talking about really productivity, efficiency—things like this—production as it applies to common carriers would mean that they operate in such a way that it's going to maximize the production available to them and that might mean cost per man hour, or cost per pound, or mile, or however you might want to compute it. We've had some problems in the past, there have been a number of cost decisions that have upheld all sorts of rulings of regulatory commissions that are really borderline on being arbitrary, situations where you...commissions have required back-hauls to be empty and things like this; things like that just are counter productive. So, what all of this is saying, insofar as its practicable to have competition and to encourage production that the commission should strive to do that. Now that would, I think, in limited circumstances give people a little bit of additional legal authority to demand that they be given a competitive situation; that's what I'm talking about.

MR. SINGLETARY

Woody, the Section 2 refers to rules, regulations, and procedures and your amendment refers to "Such rules, regulations, and practices;" is that an error?

MR. JENKINS

That's a typographical error; let me withdraw that and resubmit it, if I may.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

All right. The word "practices" ought to be "procedures"; is that correct, Mr. Jenkins?

All right, that's the only change.

The first line of the text of the amendment the word "practices" ought to be "procedures."

MR. JENKINS

I move the adoption, Mr. Chairman.

Further Discussion

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen, I have read this amendment as proposed by Mr. Jenkins very carefully and I can't see that it adds a thing in the world to this constitution; it doesn't do any harm; it doesn't do any good and for that particular reason, I just don't feel like we ought to put it in the constitution. As far as I'm concerned, it don't make that much difference, but I'm just going to vote against it for that particular reason because I don't see where it can do a bit of good in the world. If the legislature can provide the rules, they can fix them up like they should be, that is, they can make the Public Service Commission provide the type of rules that we need in order to promote competition if they say that's what we ought to do and for that particular reason, I'm going to vote against it.

Further Discussion

MR. SINGLETARY

Ladies and gentlemen, I think Mr. Jenkins' intent is good but the idea of the Public Service Commission is to regulate utilities. Utilities by their nature are necessarily monopolistic, so I urge the rejection of this amendment.

[Previous question ordered.]

Closing

MR. JENKINS

The reason that this is necessary, really, is there is some doubt when you have constitutional commissions to what extent the legislature can direct their activities and control them. While it is true that in general most public utilities are monopolistic in their nature, there are instances where you don't have to have it that way and certainly with regard to common carriers that's particularly true; so, I urge the adoption of this amendment.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected:
37-65. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Abraham sends up amendments at this time.

Amendment No. 1. On page 5, line 21, after the word and punctuation "duties," delete the words "and shall" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "and shall render decisions on applications, petitions, and proposed rate schedules in the manner provided by law. It shall"

Explanation

MR. ABRAHAM

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, the purpose of this amendment is to provide the language in Paragraph (B) which will leave the procedures by which the Public Service Commission will do its business in the statutes rather than in the constitution. Now, before the section was divided so that we will take it by paragraph and by paragraph, I had one amendment which was going to delete the language of Paragraph (D). Now, Paragraph (D) if you will look at it—Mr. Chairman, I'm going to have to talk about Paragraph (D) even though we are on Paragraph (B) right now—because this is the heart of my amendment. Paragraph (D) sets out a lot of statutory language which spells out how the Public Service Commission is going to render decisions on rate schedules.

And, from time to time we have written lots of statutory material in this constitution. But, I think in this one particular instance here, we are writing too much because we are spelling out in detail how a commission is going to operate. We are spelling out how it's going to...what time limit it has to render a decision and what happens if it does not render a decision, how the rates are going to be put into effect on the bond requirements and so forth. Now, I see no need for all of this language in the constitution. I don't think we spell it out in this much detail any where else. Now, I understand some of the problems we have had in the past where the Public Service Commission has failed to render decisions as it should have. But, I say to you the place to correct this is in the legislature, and in the statutes, and not try to correct this thing in the constitution where we try to set up a procedure that may not work and may have to be changed. If you will look at what we are getting ready to put in there, we're saying that rates can go into effect without even having a hearing. What we are doing we are going to place the burden on the consumer to take the Public Service Commission....

We're going to place the burden on the consumer to have to go to court or take the Public Service Commission to court in order to get a decision out of it. The language in here states that rates will go into effect after six months on temporary basis. It states that the commission has to render decision in twelve months, but what happens if the commission does not render a decision? There is nothing in here to say whether the rates are finally approved or what. But, the point is this, that we are just writing a lot of language in here that I don't think we're going to be able to live with in the long run and it's being put in here for one reason and one reason only that I can see and that's to correct the situation which happened one time to my knowledge and instead of the parties going to the legislature and try to get it corrected, they are trying to do it in this constitution.

MR. CASEY

Do you yield to questions?

MR. ABRAHAM

I'm not through yet. What I am attempting to do here is simply saying that these various rate schedules, petitions, applications will be handled in the manner provided by law prescribed by the legislature, it makes it all statutory. They set up the rules by which it will operate. Even in the present language....

Point of Information

MR. SHANNON

What are we discussing? Are we discussing Paragraph (B)? Is that what we are considering, Mr. Chairman?

MR. CASEY

Mr. Shannon, we're on Paragraph (B), that's correct.

MR. SHANNON

I find it hard to follow the explanation that's being given here in Paragraph (B).

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

Explanation continued

MR. ABRAHAM

Well, Mr. Chairman, if I might explain to Mr. Shannon and the delegates, that in order to know what is being...the amendment as it applies to Paragraph (B) you must know what is going to follow and the language I'm attempting to place into this Paragraph (B) right now is so that we can eliminate the language of Paragraph (D). Even in the present language there is reference to the provisions that the legislature will have to prescribe on the bond requirements and so forth. So, I'm saying we should put all of this language into the statutes and not burden our constitution now with a bunch of language, with a lot of language here that to me is purely statutory. We have not done this anywhere else. We are being asked to correct something here in the constitution that I don't think we have any business getting into. I say to you again that we are legislating rather than writing a constitution. I ask you to support this amendment.

Questions

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Abraham, I'd like to know what the legislature could do under your amendment that it couldn't already do under the language that's already provided in Paragraph (B)?

MR. ABRAHAM

This makes it clear that the legislature will describe the manner in which the Public Service Commission will render its decisions.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, doesn't it already have that power under the provisions of Paragraph (B)?

MR. ABRAHAM

Well, Mr. De Blieux, we have stated time and time again in this convention that the legislature has the...whatever authority that's not denied to it by this constitution but we come back time and time again and say that the legislature shall do this as prescribed by law.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Now, couldn't they do that under the provisions as presently under Paragraph (B)? Isn't that....

MR. ABRAHAM

Yes, they can do it under those provisions. I just want to make it abundantly clear that the legislature will prescribe how the Public Service Commission will operate in the area of rate increases and schedules.

MR. DE BLIEUX

So, as a result of the provisions that's already in Paragraph (B), your language really wouldn't add very much to that except just to say that they had the power to decide what time the Public Service Commission would have to render their decisions; isn't that correct?

MR. ABRAHAM

I think it adds quite a bit to it, Senator.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Don't you think this is just additional language that's unnecessary?

MR. ABRAHAM

No, because it says that "the Public Service Commission must render decisions," and this, as I understand it, is a problem right now because they are not forced to render a decision; there's no mandate that they have to render a decision within a specified period of time and this is what I'm attempting to make clear here.

MR. O'NEILL

Well, Mack, let me get it started then, if this amendment passes you intend to come with another amendment to delete just about the whole rest of the section; right?

MR. ABRAHAM

Paragraph (D) not the whole rest of the section, just Paragraph (D).

MR. O'NEILL

O.K. Now, let me ask you, would you tell me what the Committee on the Executive Department reported and then tell me if it's not, if it doesn't coincide with what this committee has reported.

MR. ABRAHAM

The Committee on the Executive Department was split on the report that we made.

MR. O'NEILL

But, their report was virtually the same as this committee report; am I correct?

MR. ABRAHAM

That's correct, but it was almost an even vote.

MR. O'NEILL

But, you disagree with that committee report?

MR. ABRAHAM

Correct.

MR. TAPPER

Mr. Chairman, Mr. O'Neill asked the same question I was going to ask. I would like to have the floor, Mr. Chairman.

MR. CHATELAIN

Mack, you wouldn't consider withdrawing your amendment at this time and let's discuss this later on in (D), would you?

MR. ABRAHAM

Do what now?

MR. CHATELAIN

Would you consider withdrawing your amendment? I mean, I think you are getting ahead....putting the cart ahead of the horse a little bit here. It looks like that you are trying to do violence to (B)...to (D) and (B) and you're trying to put this....throw it back to the legislature; is that right?

MR. ABRAHAM

Well, I'm taking it in the order in which we are handling the paragraphs, Mr. Chatelain. If we can come back and put this language in Paragraph (B) or if we feel that it is not necessary and we eliminate the language in Paragraph (D), then I would have no objections.

MR. CHATELAIN

Well, O.K., I can't understand what you are trying to do myself.

MR. ABRAHAM

Mr. Chairman, I request to withdraw the amendment.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Arnette has amendments at this time. Amendment No. 1. On page 5, line 19, after the word "utilities" and before the word "it" delete the words and punctuation "as provided by law".

Explanation

MR. ARNETTE

I trust this is a very simple amendment to understand, but I'm going to go over it very carefully to make sure that everyone does understand it.

The first sentence of Paragraph (B) as it is presently written in this proposal, says that "common carriers and utilities are regulated if the legislature provides that they are regulated." That's exactly what it means. Or, conversely, it means that...utilities and common carriers are not regulated at all unless the legislature provides that they are regulated. There is no point in putting the Public Service Commission in here at all if there is no constitutional function that it serves. I think what we're going to have to do is put some kind of definite jurisdiction on the Public Service Commission if we are going to have it in the constitution at all.

Now, if you want to limit this jurisdiction, that's fine. Paragraph (C) is for that, and the oil limitation is put into Paragraph (C). But, if we keep this proposal in Paragraph (B) just like it's written now, there is no way whatsoever that the Public Service Commission will have any constitutional jurisdiction whatsoever. It will only have the jurisdiction that the legislature provides that it shall have. I think this is a mistake. I talked to Louis Lambert, the chairman of the committee, and he said, yes, they intended that the Public Service Commission should regulate all these common carriers and utilities, except the limitations in (C), and natural gas. Since the problem has come up during natural...having to do with natural gas. If you want to put this additional limitation on the Public Service Commission, that is fine with me. But, put it in Paragraph (C), and let's give some constitutional jurisdiction to the Public Service Commission.

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

I'll answer any questions that anyone has.

Questions

MR. DERBES

Mr. Arnette, we considered this problem quite lengthily and extensively in our committee deliberations. I'd like an opportunity to explain it to you. But what I suggest....

MR. ARNETTE

Could you talk a little bit louder, Mr. Derbes. I can't hear you very well.

MR. DERBES

Yes. I said we considered this problem very extensively in our committee deliberations, and I'd like an opportunity to explain it to you. But, what I would request at this time, is if you would consider changing your amendment to say that "the Public Service Commission shall regulate common carriers, and public utilities as they are defined by law."

See, the problem is a definitional problem--whether or not the Public Service Commission has jurisdiction over certain common carriers, and what constitutes a common carrier--whether or not certain types of pipelines are common carriers or not. It's one of definition. We did not intend to reduce the Public Service Commission's jurisdiction, but we wanted to give it a certain amount of flexibility so that industrial sale of natural gas as it's currently occurring in Louisiana, could not necessarily be abrogated by the Public Service Commission. Do you understand what I'm saying?

MR. ARNETTE

Well, I'm glad you asked me a question on the end of that.

No. I'll agree with what you are saying. I think maybe you ought to put in there something, "as defined by law," or something to that effect. But I think that we are going to have to have some constitutional jurisdiction for the Public Service Commission, or there is absolutely no reason to have it in there.

I would agree to an amendment to put that in there in the way that you have chosen to phrase it. I see no reason other than that, except for the fact that the legislature could decide, or they could say "the only common carriers in the state are the taxicabs." That would be their definition of common carrier. No one else would be regulated other than taxicabs. That is a flaw that I see in your particular amendment, and your idea.

I think common carrier and utility is a pretty well-known legal term. I think it would be well recognized, in decisions throughout this state, and throughout the United States, as a matter of fact. So, I don't see any....

MR. DERBES

You don't trust the legislature to define common carrier and public utility?

MR. ARNETTE

Well, I think if we are going to leave it up to the legislature, let's leave the thing completely up to the legislature. In other words, just give the whole thing to them and say, "If you want to have a Public Service Commission, you form a Public Service Commission." But, if we're going to leave all the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission up to the whim of the legislature, then we may as well not have anything about it in the constitution at all because we could be paying either three men, or in this case, five men, now, for doing absolutely nothing unless the legislature chooses to give them something to do. I see no point in having something in the constitution that means nothing at all.

MR. TAPPER

Mr. Arnette, Mr. Derbes hit upon the real gist of my question. However, I'd like to go a little bit further. I think the committee had in mind when it said "as provided by law" certain laws that can be adopted by the legislature, but not to take anything away from the Public Service Commission.

But, don't you believe that if we have a hundred and forty-four representatives of the people deciding what the laws are, that we are in better shape than having only three in the whole state?

...what I objected to is that I think that you're....

I agree with what you are trying to do. But, if you take "as provided by law out", I don't think that's really what you want to do.

MR. ARNETTE

Well, Mr. Tapper, that's exactly what I want to do, because, unless we are going to have a Public Service Commission with constitutional jurisdiction over something, then we may as well not have a Public Service Commission at all, and let the legislature decide everything. That's what I'm getting at. Unless we take these four words out, then you may as well not put any of these words in the constitution because the rest of it is going to mean absolutely nothing. The legislature is going to be able to make all the decisions having to do with common carriers and public utilities.

MR. TAPPER

Well, Mr. Arnette, isn't it a fact that the Public Service Commission is a quasi-judiciary body?

MR. ARNETTE

That's exactly right. That's why I think we need a Public Service Commission instead of having the legislature make the decision because the legislature is a political body. It is a legislative--it's a law-making body. It's not a judicial body. That's why we need a Public Service Commission, and we need definite jurisdiction. We don't say that the court of appeals shall have jurisdiction as defined by the legislature. We tell them what kind of jurisdiction they are going to have.

MR. TAPPER

Well, now, there's one final question. I'm glad you mentioned the court of appeals. But, isn't it a fact that the court of appeals interprets the laws that are made by the legislature, and isn't this what the Public Service Commission should do, also?

Further Discussion

MR. DERBES

Ladies and gentlemen, if you would please give me your attention for a minute, I have some relatively important information to disclose to you which is very germane to the way we vote on this section.

I'm in great sympathy with Mr. Arnette's proposal. But, I want to explain a couple of things to you. When you say by virtue of a clear constitutional mandate, that the legislature shall... rather that the Public Service Commission shall regulate common carriers and public utilities. When you say that, then, if something qualifies as a common carrier, it is subject to Public Service Commission jurisdiction and to Public Service Commission regulation. The only way to make it not subject to Public Service Commission regulation, is by a constitutional amendment.

The problem that we encountered, and on which we heard a great deal of testimony, is what is known in the State of Louisiana as the direct sale of natural gas for industrial purposes. By direct sale, I mean where a supplier sells directly to a consumer without necessarily going through an interstate pipeline. If a pipeline serves more than one consumer, though it may not necessarily be an interstate pipeline, and though it may not necessarily serve a great number of consumers, it is considered, and it may be considered by the courts to be a common carrier. If it qualifies in the definition of common carrier, then it would be subject to Public Service Commission regulation. In order to encourage industry in the state, there was enacted, and approved by the people, a constitutional amendment which exempted from Public Service Commission regulation the direct industrial sale of natural gas.

Now, I, for one, don't necessarily think the Public Service Commission should regulate the direct industrial sale of natural gas. But, I wanted to create in the constitution, an atmosphere of flexibility whereby in the future, if Public Service Commission regulation of such direct industrial sales was deemed expedient and in the public interest, it could, in fact, regulate such direct sales. If you say "the Public Service Commission shall regulate all common carriers," I say to you as a matter of law, that any pipeline where there is more than one consumer, is a common carrier and shall be subject to Public Service Commission regulation.

Now, there is one way out of this problem...there is one way out of this problem. That is to adopt Mr. Arnette's amendment, and then to adopt Mr. Gravel's amendment, which is not before you at this moment, but which shall be before you very shortly. That would have the effect of saying that the Public Service Commission shall regulate common carriers and public utilities. Then, later on in our document, it will say that "notwithstanding these provisions, the legislature shall decide on how and when natural gas shall be regulated." So, although I have no strong opposition to Mr. Arnett's amendment, I suggest to you that conditioned upon its passage should be the passage of Mr. Gravel's amendment which would permit the legislature flexibility in dealing with the sale of natural gas, both industrial and otherwise. I hope you can understand all that jargon. But, it's a very important problem. It affects a great deal of Louisiana industry, as well as a great deal of domestic supply and consumption of natural gas.

MR. ARNETTE

Well, Jim, in other words, you don't oppose my amendment as such.

MR. DERBES

I don't oppose your amendment....

MR. ARNETTE

You've been talking about natural gas. That's what your big concern is.

MR. DERBES

The only....the reason why "as provided by law." The phrase that you seek to delete. The reason why that was placed in this material was to create an exception, a possible exception, so that later on the regulation of industrial, direct industrial sales of natural gas could be affected by the Public Service Commission if the legislature felt that it was in the best interest, and a constitutional amendment would not be necessary. But, I only support your amendment if you support Gravel's amendment.

MR. ARNETTE

Mr. Derbes, in other words, you've been talking about natural gas and everything. But, would you agree that unless these four words are taken out, the Public Service Commission has absolutely no constitutional jurisdiction whatsoever over anything?

MR. DERBES

Not entirely. But, my technical disagreement with you is of no serious moment. I think the words "shall regulate all common carriers and public utilities" are, in essence, an original and fundamental grant of authority. What the legislature would be doing in filling up the phrase, "as provided by law," it would essentially be defining what a public utility or a common carrier is.

MR. ARNETTE

But, in that definition....couldn't the legislature completely disregard anything as a common carrier?

MR. DERBES

I don't think so. But I do think it's arguable. Yes.

Further Discussion

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Vice Chairman, fellow delegates, I agree with Mr. Derbes. It's arguable as to whether or not this amendment is necessary. I ask you for a number of reasons to reject this amendment.

The first reason being, the committee worked hard in this particular area in an effort not to make any substantive change basically in that provision. The reason for that was that apparently it had worked fairly well in the past. We didn't see any particular reason to tamper with it.

Now, "as provided by law," on line 19 in the committee proposal, is what he's asking you to remove in this amendment. A number of years ago in the town of Denham Springs there was an explosion in a home, and one of the reasons attributed to that problem, was that they did not have the malodorant (I think that's the proper word) in the gas system. Now, the Public Service Commission does not have jurisdiction to go inside the city gates, into the municipalities, unless by a majority vote the electors in that municipality request the Public Service Commission to come in. In this particular case, the Public Service Commission, nor the town of Denham Springs, nor the gas company supplying the gas to the home where the explosion occurred, had jurisdiction. No one acted. The Public Service Commission was prohibited, except for the fact that this language, "as provided by law," gave the legislature the authority to enact legislation to add the requirement that malodorants be placed in these systems. The Public Service Commission did this. This is one of the prime reasons why this language is necessary, and why I urge you, please not tamper with this particular language.

Thank you.

Questions

MR. TOBIAS

Louis, I'm reading the language that the Arnette amendment attempts to delete. If we do not say "as provided by law," could not the legislature define what a common carrier and a public utility is, since we do not prohibit it to them?

MR. LAMBERT

Possible. Or the Supreme Court could.

MR. TOBIAS

I know. But, if the legislature steps in and defines it, don't you think that the Supreme Court would bow to that definition?

MR. LAMBERT

It depends on the majority vote on the court, obviously. Let me, Mr. Tobias, let me just say this. In the past, the Public Service Commission has operated under this provision. "As provided by law" has provided the flexibility in the constitution allowing the legislature to take care of situations like the Denham Springs incident that I just mentioned to you. For that reason, if for no other reason, I ask you to please reject this amendment.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. ARNETTE

I just want to make one thing fairly clear. Senator Lambert stated that they wanted to keep it just about like the present law is now in the constitution. Well, I submit they didn't do a very good job, substantively, as it is in the old constitution. Well, I submit they didn't do a good job at that, either, because it stated in the old constitution exactly what jurisdiction the Public Service Commission shall have. I can go through the list. It's common carriers, railroads, street railroads, express, telephone, telegraph, gas, electric light, heat, water power, waterworks, common carriers, pipelines, canals...the list goes on and on, plus many statutes that also list the jurisdiction. But, there is definite constitutional jurisdiction in the old 1921 Constitution. Under the new proposal, there is none whatsoever. The legislature must provide any jurisdiction that the Public Service Commission has by virtue of these four words. That is the entire difference between the 1921 Constitution, and the new committee proposal to go into the constitution. Unless we take these four words out, you're not going to have any constitutional jurisdiction whatsoever in the Public Service Commission. Now, if that's what you want, that's fine. We'll have a commission with no powers at all. We'll have it in the constitution with no powers. But, if that's what you want, I just want to let you know for sure that's what you're voting on.

Questions

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Arnette, obviously for the reasons you just mentioned, that's why, would you not agree, that we need the clause, "as provided by law." What we tried to do...why don't you mention some of the stuff that was in there. It was so detailed it was statutory material, much of it. What the committee was trying to do was retain the substantive law in that article. The "as provided by law," would allow the legislature to go into the other matters. Many of that....of those words in that provision that you are looking at, were put in there by constitutional amendment.

MR. ARNETTE

I realize that, Mr. Lambert.

MR. LAMBERT

Afterwards. They were not in the 1921 Constitution. They were added. Would you not agree that the legislature could, by legislative act, add what they feel to be necessary, and we....

MR. ARNETTE

They surely could.

...let me finish. Would we not accomplish what one of the main objectives that we are here for, to, if possible--not all the time, but, if possible--to remove some of the unnecessary language when we can provide a vehicle whereby the legislature can put it back? Without removing any substance?

MR. ARNETTE

Well, that's exactly what I wanted to point out to the convention, Senator. I just wanted to point out that the legislature can put in what jurisdiction they want. They can also take away what jurisdiction they want. Which means that you have no constitutional jurisdiction at all. It's completely up to the legislature. If that's what you want.... that's what you can have by voting against my amendment. If you want a Public Service Commission with jurisdiction in the constitution, vote for my amendment. It's very simple. It's your decision.

MR. ANZALONE

Mr. Arnette, are you aware, since you are closing, and I'm going to ask you one of those "speechifying" questions, are you aware that if your amendment is adopted that the legislature, by legislative act, could attempt to define what common carriers and public utilities were?

MR. ARNETTE

They....could attempt to do that. But they could not....

MR. ANZALONE

But, if your amendment is not accepted, and no law is provided for the regulation of common carriers and public utilities by the Public Service Commission, that they could, in effect, turn this over to the Department of Agriculture if they wanted to?

MR. ARNETTE

Mr. Anzalone, no, they could not for the simple reason that the legislature does not define what the words in the constitution mean. The Supreme Court of Louisiana defines those words.

MR. ANZALONE

I've just a small point of disagreement. My second....

MR. ARNETTE

Now, if the Supreme Court would define a common carrier in a very restrictive manner, that's one thing. But the legislature cannot ever attempt to define words in the constitution, and how they are meant in the constitution, as you should well know.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected: 21-88. Motion to reconsider tabled. Quorum Call: 87 delegates present and a quorum.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The next amendment to (B) is sent up by Delegates Lambert and Nunez.

Amendment No. 1. On page 5, at the end of line 23, add the following:

"Notwithstanding any provision in this paragraph, the legislature shall provide for the regulation of natural gas by such regulatory authority as it may designate."

Explanation

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, what this amendment does is to make sure that what we adopt in the constitution does not make legislation that was adopted in the special session unconstitutional. Now, it does not lock anything in the constitution regarding intrastate natural gas. All it says is that "Notwithstanding any provision in this paragraph, the legislature shall provide for the regulation of natural gas by such regulatory authority as it may designate." In the special session, the legislature designated the Louisiana Energy Commission as that authority. But, with this provision, if the legislature should feel that it was in error in that Senate Bill No. 9, and they would like to change that, this gives the legislature the authority to put it in some other authority. For example, if they wanted to put it under the Public Service Commission, they could. If they wanted to put it under some other state agency, they could. I don't think it's controversial. I certainly hope you can go along with it.

Questions

MR. BOLLINGER

Senator Lambert, just now this convention strongly rejected an amendment by Delegate Arnette to delete the words "as provided by law." Is that correct?

MR. LAMBERT

That's correct.

MR. BOLLINGER

Was not it the intention of the committee that these words would give the legislature the authority to include or not include the regulation of natural gas by the Public Service Commission?

MR. LAMBERT

No, there's some question, obviously, as to whether or not there could be overlapping authority between the Public Service Commission or the Louisiana Energy Commission. I, personally, think that the Public Service Commission. . .in fact, I know they cannot regulate it as the constitution exists now because there is a prohibition, as you know, against the Public Service Commission regulating the sales of industrial gas to industries. However, in an effort to be abundantly careful, this provision basically leaves the authority up to the legislature. It specifically says they have the authority, and as they have acted in the special session, they have given that authority to the Louisiana Energy Commission. Now, if the legislature feels that they would like to repeal some of those provisions in the next session of the legislature, or two years from now, or three years from now, or ten years from now, they would have the authority to do that. That's the only purpose of this amendment.

MR. BOLLINGER

I agree with you that the present constitution does not allow the Public Service Commission to regulate the industrial sale of natural gas. But, does it prohibit any other regulation of natural gas?

MR. LAMBERT

In the city gates, yes--municipalities. The local subdivisions. . .

MR. BOLLINGER

Political subdivisions. . .

MR. LAMBERT

Municipalities, political subdivisions that have their own systems. There's a provision in here, though, to allow the municipality or the local governing authority that generate their own. . .that have their own supplies or their own systems to elect to come under the Public Service Commission. That provision was in our present constitution, and we retained it.

If there are no further questions, I ask for the adoption of the amendment.

MR. ARNETTE

Senator, do you realize that since my amendment failed your amendment is unnecessary because the legislature can do anything with natural gas they want to do? They can let anyone regulate it that they designate to regulate it, without your amendment.

MR. LAMBERT

I think that with my amendment that it makes it abundantly clear that the legislature definitely must designate some authority. Yes.

MR. DESHOTELS

Mr. Lambert, assuming, first of all, that the constitution is adopted as amended to this date, and secondly, assuming that your amendment fails, then there might be a possibility of having a five man elected body control natural gas in Louisiana rather than an appointed commission; isn't that correct?

MR. LAMBERT

If this amendment passes, that could happen. It's left up to the legislature. But, on the same token, it could not. It could be left where it is now.

MR. CANNON

Mr. Lambert, you are aware of the amendment that I have on the next section which. . .

MR. LAMBERT

No, sir; I'm not. No, sir; I haven't seen it.

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

MR. CANNON

This one . . . it pertains to the cities not being exempt from regulation by the Public Service Commission in matters effecting safety. You know, the safety such as putting odor in the natural gas. If your amendment were to pass, where would this leave the concern for safety for the people who live . . . who are serviced by municipal gas distribution systems?

MR. LAMBERT

In view of the fact that in the special session in Senate Bill No. 9, there is a specific section on pipeline safety requiring the commissioner of conservation to come up with a set of rules and regulations in conjunction with the rules and regulations that the federal government have affecting interstate pipelines to conform with that. I haven't had a chance to look at your amendment, but I think it . . . in my own personal judgment and opinion, I feel like it might be a good amendment in the next section. But, I don't think it has any . . . it affects this section at all, 'cause this amendment only applies to Section (B).

MR. CANNON

Well, the fact is that natural gas and its distribution, you could . . . the legislature could designate this regulatory authority to any agency or shall designate some agency to regulate it. Would it be proper if they have designated someone other than the Public Service Commission to regulate these safety features, say, such as putting of the malodorous in gas? If they designate someone else, it wouldn't be proper to put the Public Service Commission to . . . into the policing of the safety for the people's benefit. Am I correct?

MR. LAMBERT

It's possible, but I don't . . . it puts the public safety . . . the Public Service Commission . . . if the legislature should give them the authority to require that they adopt rules and regulations providing pipeline safety, it would probably be a good idea.

Further Discussion

MR. BOLLINGER

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I have no objection to the concept of this amendment, but I think that Delegate Arnette's amendment would have covered it. Assume this situation for a minute: we all know that this country is in a stage of a fuel shortage, not only with natural gas, but with all fossil fuels. With the shortage of natural gas, it's going to become more and more imperative that power generating plants revert to other fuels--diesel and heating oils--for the production of electricity. So, how about next year, we'll have an electricity crisis, and we don't have enough electricity. The legislature thinks it's wise to place all electric co-ops and companies in the state under this Energy Commission because electricity is the energy. It can't, according to the definition that has been given to the words "as provided by law." I think that's wrong. I think the amendment that . . . or the words "as provided by law," in the first sentence, allows the legislature to remove certain public utilities from under this jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission. This is good. It can deal with situations of emergency. So, why do we have to specify that natural gas doesn't necessarily come under the Public Service Commission. It can be placed under some other agency. If the words "as provided by law" do not provide this, we had better seriously look into this whole paragraph, because if next year electricity becomes a shortage in Louisiana, and the legislature tries to deal with the problem and says, "Oh, no, I'm sorry. The Public Service Commission has sole control over regulating electricity." This nice Energy Commission we have created has no jurisdiction. Please consider this and consider if the amendment, as proposed, is necessary. If it is necessary, I would advocate someone offering an amendment to include other forms of energy as coming under some other regulatory agency.

I move the rejection of the amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Acting Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this is the same amendment that Mr. Gravel had yesterday, and after some objections from you all--some of the delegates and some of the other people involved in this--we worked on it last night and then again. It was changed this morning because it would have created a new section. We just included it in this section. Let me tell you what happens where . . . where I think we would stand in this state if we don't adopt this amendment. We had a ten day special session, as you know. In that session we did three things: we raised taxes to the tune of $350,000,000 and we lowered taxes on income tax that you all wanted, it seems from the dictates of this convention, on sales . . . on use of sales tax on food and drug, and we gave out teachers' pay raises, etc. Now, those things are good, but the main purpose of that session was to get more gas for Louisiana residents from Louisiana's natural resources: that is, from natural gas. After many hours of debate, and after many hours of work by several attorneys--I think Mr. Camp from southwest Louisiana was one of them--they put together a bill that is commonly called a "czar bill," or the energy crisis bill or whatever you want to call it. It was sixty pages long. They weaved and weaved in the confines of the constitution to make it constitutional. It's the understanding that the people that put it all together that if we don't put this provision in there, they seriously doubt whether we can handle it in the energy . . . in the Senate . . . what's commonly called Senate Bill No. 9. I think that this amendment is essential, because I, at first, was sort of against the whole concept of this special ten day session. But, if you hear the alarming and the frightening news that we heard, I'm sure you would agree with us that we are now in an energy crisis, that very soon our own industries, and our own cane fields, and our own aluminum plants, that vitally affect me, and our own sugar refineries, and our own oil refineries will not have the natural gas to run those plants. So, what has happened is that almost ninety percent of our gas is under control of the FPC, and it's in the interstate lines. What we were trying to do, the whole concept of what we were trying to do was to get more gas in the intrastate lines and get more new oil or more new gas finds in the intrastate lines. What we did, and what the creation of the czar of the . . . under the Conservation Commission, this will all be under his jurisdiction. I believe it's vitally essential that we adopt this amendment. All the amendment says is "Notwithstanding any provisions of this paragraph, the legislature shall provide for the regulation of natural gas by such regulatory authority as it may designate." Well, for your information, that authority has already been designated. Now, if that don't work, what you're doing, you're giving the legislature the authority to designate a new authority. I think it's a very simple. In my mind it is, and then I hope it is in yours. If we leave it like it is--if you read the amendment as it is before this section--specifically has powers and duties, "The commission shall regulate all common carriers and public utilities." This would take it and let the Public Service Commission or let the Energy Commission regulate, and in regulating, the only way he can reallocate--let me tell you this because many of you have popped this question, because it seems like this new Energy Commission that we have created can go ahead and reallocate the various gas allotted to industry or utilities in this state to various other people. That's not so. Before he can make that reallocation, the governor--the governor--must declare an emergency, under existing contracts. When he declares that emergency, the only amount of natural gas that he can reallocate from those various industries or users, whether it be industry or etc., is ten percent of his allocation. We specifically put that in there because a lot of people thought we were abrogating contracts, but we aren't doing that. The only thing this would do would be to . . . and I know this might sound not like the amendment, but it all deals with the amendment, gentlemen and ladies of the convention. If we don't do this, I think we might find ourselves in probably some problem somewhere along the road.

I would certainly urge you . . . I thought that this was worked out to where it would benefit the state and what we were trying to do: that is, number one--number one--conserve our new finds on natural gas in this state. When you sit down and realize that over ninety percent of our gas is going to the eastern market, when you sit down and realize that it's under the control of the FPC, which this state has nothing to say about, it sort of frightens you. Five years down the road, or four or five years down the road, we might have additional gas finds in this state that would be vitally essential to the well-being of our citizens. I think if we don't adopt something like this and allow us to go ahead with what we have done, then the special session went for nothing but a tax raising session and a tax repealing session.

So, I would ask you very seriously to consider . . . to give this amendment all your consideration. Please vote for it; it doesn't jeopardize anything in the Public Service's domain. But, it does give to the Energy Commission the right to regulate natural gas.

Reading of the Paragraph

"Paragraph (C) Limitation. The commission shall have no power to regulate any common carrier or public utility owned, operated, or regulated on the effective date of this constitution by the governing authority of one or more political subdivisions, except by the consent of a majority of the electors voting in an election held for that purpose; however, a political subdivision may reinvest itself with such regulatory power in the manner it was surrendered."

Explanation

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Vice Chairman, fellow delegates, this is basically a, I feel, relatively simple section. It retains in the constitution basically what is there now. It prevents the Public Service Commission from going into city gates, by that I mean municipalities that own their own systems. Under the present constitution, the Public Service Commission does not have jurisdiction over these areas unless an election is called in that municipality and a majority of the voters so request that they come in. Now, it also provides that should they elect to have--the majority of voters in the subdivision, political subdivision--elect to have the Public Service Commission come in, and they come in and then one day they want to call an election and get the Public Service Commission out, they retain that authority. Basically, that is all that this particular paragraph does.

If there are no questions, I ask for your support.

Questions

MR. LANIER

Senator, as I understand it, that's basically the present law, isn't it?

MR. LAMBERT

Yes, sir; it is.

MR. LANIER

Has it appeared in work that your committee has done researching this subject, has that appeared to work well throughout the state?

MR. LAMBERT

Yes, sir; it has.

MR. LANIER

There's been no hue and cry by anyone to change that, has there?

MR. LAMBERT

Correct, that we know of.

MR. DERBES

Senator, just for the record, because I think there's some . . . a possibility of the provision not being entirely clear, the election that's required in order to change the provision is an election held in the local governmental subdivision.

MR. LAMBERT

With only those people there voting. Correct. Home rule, local option.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Senator, am I reading this correctly in that there is no way for a city which does not now regulate its public utilities to gain the right to regulate its public utilities?

MR. LAMBERT

By the Public Service Commission? I can't. . . I'm sorry, I didn't hear you good, Mary.

MS. ZERVIGON

It sounds to me, when I read this thing, as if those cities which are now regulating their public utilities may continue to regulate their public utilities unless they surrender that right.

MR. LAMBERT

Correct.

MS. ZERVIGON

What I'm asking you is whether there is a way in the future for any city which is not now regulating its public utilities to gain the right to regulate it?

MR. LAMBERT

I don't think there's any prohibition against a city, to my knowledge, regulating its own public utilities. I think that what this deals with is not with that particular area, but it's whether or not they want the Public Service Commission to come into their, for example, municipality and regulate. If they do, they have to by a majority vote within that municipality so request; at the same time the right is reserved for that municipality by a majority vote of its electors to remove the Public Service Commission if they are not satisfied with the way they regulate.

MR. DESHOTELS

I'm referring to the language on line 26 which I think, that Ms. Zervigon is referring to. You have on the effective date of this constitution "seeming to be a delineation between which municipalities would be affected by this provision and which would not.

MR. LAMBERT

What we did, Errol, is to repeat what was in the source provision in our present constitution.

MR. DESHOTELS

But, it would seem to say...

MR. LAMBERT

Undoubtedly did not cause a problem back at that time so we assume that it would work effectively today, so we readopted basically the same language.

MR. DESHOTELS

But, do you see the problem and do you see a question there?

MR. LAMBERT

I see what you're talking about, yes, sir.

MR. KELLY

Louis, I'd like for you to explain to me just as briefly as you can, how this election--you say "except by consent of the majority of the electors voting in an election." Are the electors... is there going to be some process where they can go and call the election themselves or are they going to have to depend upon the governing authority to call the election?

MR. LAMBERT

It would be... this would be found... this could be done; there's nothing prohibiting the local government in this particular instance from adopting a procedure whereby they could elect to either select or reject this option.

MR. DESHOTELS

That's not the question. You say that in the first place you've got these premises. First, they... the municipalities say utilities are not under the Public Service Commission; is that correct?

MR. LAMBERT

Yes.

MR. DESHOTELS

All right. Now, let's suppose that John Doe, citizen, and a group of citizens want to put them under the Public Service Commission. How is that going to be done? Who can call the election? Can a group of citizens go and call the election?

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Kelly, we did not go into that in the constitution, obviously. We left it to either the legislature or the local government involved.

MR. CANNON

Senator Lambert, you're talking about the election which can be held within this political jurisdiction, this municipality...

MR. LAMBERT

City of Baton Rouge... East Baton Rouge Parish.

MR. CANNON

East Baton Rouge Parish possibly, if they're operating their own utilities. Let me ask you this: what happens, or what recourse do the people have who are served by a municipality who live outside of that jurisdiction; they have no say--so on this whatsoever. I'm talking about let's say:..

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

MR. LAMBERT

That is right. Let me say this, Harvey, you're right. If, for example, the city of Baton Rouge had their own system and they were providing services outside of the municipal limits of East Baton Rouge, the system obviously is supported within the parish. . . I mean within the city of Baton Rouge and, of course this, I would assume this could occur, but, I mean, I don't see how you could set up the machinery any other way than to provide for the electors within the municipality affected if they do provide services outside of the limits of the municipality. Of course, that's going to create a problem, but I don't know how you could take care of it.

MR. CANNON

Well, I think your main concern. . . the main concern is, and has been, the power of a municipality which puts up its bonding credit and what have you to build these systems within and without its jurisdiction.

MR. LAMBERT

Correct.

MR. CANNON

Within and without its jurisdiction.

MR. LAMBERT

I guess you could argue that the...

MR. CANNON

No one is talking about setting the fixing of rates. I don't think anyone has any qualms with a municipality fixing the rates on its own citizens. But, now, I still have this question about people that are outside of this jurisdiction having no, no political recourse. You know if the rates go too high the voters have a recourse every four years.

MR. LAMBERT

As you know, I don't. . . of course, I don't want to do anything to harm the people that live outside its jurisdiction. I know you don't, but I think, that probably. . . I think there is a provision in our law now whereby a special district could be created in that particular area and they could sell bonds and set up their own system.

MR. CANNON

Right.

MR. LAMBERT

I mean it's a situation that, you know, I don't know if there's any other way to handle it. This is the way it's been handled in the past. One solution might be to extend the city limits to include them.

MR. CANNON

Right. But, we have had some situations where a municipality serving another area which was completely outside of its city limits as well as the parish in which it was located failed to maintain an odor level in the natural gas.

MR. LAMBERT

Denham Springs system?

MR. CANNON

I didn't say that, sir.

MR. LAMBERT

I said it.

MR. CANNON

That was the case, yes, sir. By virtue of this negligence a family of four was burned to death because they just simply refused and they. . . after a petition and contacts by people, myself and others trying to get them to maintain this odor level. . . this odor level in the gas and they still didn't do it and then a tragedy like that happens. My concern is again for these people who have no political recourse.

MR. LAMBERT

I'm concerned as much as you are, Harvey, about it. I don't think, there's any way that if somebody has an idea, I think they should propose it here. I don't know how we could handle that in the constitution. It is a definite problem and I agree with you.

MR. LANIER

Senator Lambert, isn't it true that under Section 26 of the Local Government Article that the legislature has been mandated to set up a uniform procedure for calling all of these various types of noncandidate elections such as the one that would be called for in this provision?

MR. LAMBERT

That's correct.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Cannon has one amendment here.

Amendment No. 1. On page 5, line 31, after the word and punctuation "surrendered." add the following:

"This shall not apply to safety regulations pertaining to the operation of such utilities."

Explanation

MR. CANNON

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this amendment which was passed out yesterday, reads: "This shall not apply to safety regulations pertaining to the operation of such utilities." Senator Lambert alluded to a solution to the problem particularly where people have no political recourse. These people... people living outside of a political jurisdiction such as the city limits, and being served by. . . served natural gas by that city. This. . . the systems being owned, this is in no way an attempt to bring rate regulations that. . . which the city may impose to bring controls over things such as their right-of-way, the selection of where the distribution systems go. It's merely the safety factor and primarily malodorant in gas. As you all know, natural gas has no odor. When it is distributed by a private concern the Public Service Commission and I would assume that now since these duties are being passed to the Energy Commission, the. . . that they will take over these regulatory functions. The thing that I am really concerned about is the fact that people in the cities who are served by a municipal gas system. . . the people living within the cities they have a recourse, a political recourse come next election time particularly if the Board of Aldermen or the City Council, or what have you, are not responsive to the safety and welfare of the people. It's really not that important within the political jurisdiction. But, when these. . . when gas is sold and distributed outside of the political jurisdiction these people have no recourse and I think it's in the public's interest that we mandate that someone, somebody regulate these safety features, primarily odor and gas. I think it's very important since we are shifting the regulation of natural gas from the action of the special session to another agency, I think we ought to make it clear that municipalities cannot completely ignore the safety of the people they serve. I'll yield to any questions.

Questions

MR. DERBES

Harvey, I. . . I'm not exactly sure I understand what you want to do, but are you saying that the. . . that the local governmental subdivision that regulates safety factors in the delivery of natural gas is not as well able to do as the Public Service Commission?

MR. CANNON

Not necessarily. What I'm saying is that when you take a problem to a governing body now and they have no -- and these people have no political recourse they're talking to strangers, outsiders-- that when you take this problem to them they say we're not regulated by the Public Service Commission, this is a. . . you know we don't have to put the odor in the natural gas, you know because they are not regulated. But, . . .

MR. DERBES

To just draw on that a little bit more, I've heard a lot of things said here in argument against expanding the number of Public Service Commissioners: that they don't have enough staff, they don't have enough funds and so on to do their job as presently constituted. What makes you think that the Public Service Commission will do a better job regulating safety in the local governmental subdivisions, I mean isn't that your basic thesis?

MR. CANNON

My basic thesis is safety for the people who have no political recourse. These are people living outside of the political jurisdiction which is the sponsor and owner of this gas system. Let me bring in one thing, Act 352 of 1970, offered by Senator De Blieux, required that the Public Service Commission regulate this malodorant in gas. This follows the situation like Senator Lambert alluded to, the city of Denham Springs, which serves an area running all the way to the Airline Highway in East Baton Rouge Parish. Now, we did try to get them to keep a level of malodorant in there--you know that foul smell is a wonderful thing when you come right down to it-- but.... and a family of four was burned to death.

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

MR. DERBES

Another one final question, if you don't mind, isn't safety just another part of overall rate setting? I mean, what I'm saying is, when you take into account the rates at which the local utility must deliver its gas you also have to take into account the cost of safety factors, etc. It would seem to me as a basic administrative task that when the person addresses his safety requirements and his rate schedules to the same body that the consideration of both of those together would be more effective and more efficient. Don't you... you see what I mean?

MR. CANNON

No, sir, I don't because I think nobody here is trying to question the rate setting ability of a municipality over its service.

MR. DERBES

No, but the rates are in part a function of the safety requirements. I mean, when I have certain costs for safety, I have costs for delivery and, therefore, those costs have to be taken into consideration in setting rates.

MR. CANNON

You're not going to sell it at list.

MR. DERBES

So one person would be setting the rates and the other person would be setting the safety requirements.

MR. CANNON

You're talking about ten cents a day per thousand users of natural gas on malodorant.

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Cannon, you know that our committee with the exception of several, we do not object to this amendment; we feel it's a good amendment, and we feel that it would provide for a uniform safety code throughout the state in municipalities. Do you realize that?

MR. CANNON

Thank you, Senator Lambert. I appreciate that.

MR. LAMBERT

Do you remember the explosion, for example, in the Denham Springs system?

MR. CANNON

The Denham Springs system which is now inside the city of Baton Rouge.

MR. LAMBERT

Right. There was problems with the safety regulations.

MR. CANNON

There were none existing at the time.

MR. LAMBERT

Correct. This would provide some. Do you remember the explosion in Natchitoches several years ago? Do you remember the explosion in Houma?

MR. CANNON

I remember all of these, sir.

MR. LAMBERT

Is it not your motive to try to provide a statewide uniform safety code on pipelines transporting gas so as to protect the citizens?

MR. CANNON

Not so much pipelines, but the distribution system going to people's homes. That's what I'm concerned with.

MR. LAMBERT

Correct. That's what I'm talking about, domestic users.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Cannon, the way this thing is written this would apply in home rule units of government; is that correct?

MR. CANNON

Would apply in home rule units? Yes, Mr. Lanier, it would. But, again, I am not as concerned about the distribution of gas and the safety and whether or not the city is responsive within its political jurisdiction. Where the problem comes is when this city extends its lines beyond its political jurisdiction and the people that it serves have no political recourse against the councilmen, the aldermen or whoever is not looking out for their safety. I think the public--the citizens of Louisiana who are served by municipal gas systems, just as those who are served by private gas distribution systems, deserve the right to feel safe. That's my concern.

MR. LANIER

But, Mr. Cannon, I appreciate the fact that you're trying to protect these people outside of an incorporated area. But, is it not a fact that your amendment as presently written would give the power to the Public Service Commission to tell a home rule city how to run its gas business or electrical business, etc.?

MR. CANNON

Only insofar as safety, Mr. Lanier. Primarily, this is malodorant, that the city will be subject to a uniform regulation. I certainly don't feel that the city such in your case, the city council of Thibodaux is going to be unresponsive to the people within the city of Thibodaux, because after all, they are going to have to come up for election every four years. But, when they extend their lines outside and we're not talking about rates, we're not talking about right-of-ways, we're not talking about the location of gas lines or . . . that's all within the domain of that municipality and the parish governing authority if these lines are outside. I just am concerned that the city council--I, having served on a municipal body myself--you don't quite feel the responsibility to persons who don't elect you; it's a natural thing. I would certainly hope that this, at least, a minimum level of safety and a standard of safety can be maintained.

MR. LANIER

Don't you feel that if, what you wish to do is a uniform safety code, that that is better done for the State of Louisiana by the legislature than by the five-man Public Service Commission?

MR. CANNON

Well, I'm not sure who has the regulatory power right now over natural gas. I would think that this is the prerogative of the legislature to assign it and whoever it is assigned to, that's who will control it.

Further Discussion

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, Mr. Lanier might address these remarks to you with reference to the situation. Several years ago, of course, you've heard several references to the Denham Springs situation. This system of gas that goes into Denham Springs is... I don't know whether it's owned by Denham Springs or whether or not it's a private company that has a contract to supply gas with Denham Springs. But, they had a lot of difficulty in getting gas treated so that you could tell whether or not there were gas leaks. They test it and in a few months thereafter, after the testing, it would come right back and nothing was done about it. You can't force a municipality to have safety rules against its own self. You've got to have some outside body. As a result of that, the legislature passed Act 352 of 1970 to do exactly this: to force that municipality under the jurisdiction of Public Service Commission to put that malodor in that gas. Now, maybe you might say this is taking away something from home rule. That's the only thing we're taking away from, the fact that local municipalities for the safety of their citizens must obey the rules, and that's what this amendment is all about. The committee has no objection to the provision in there, and I think it's a good one for the safety and protection of the homeowners, of the users of gas in your municipality, my municipality and anybody else's, so that we can keep these things from happening. I see no reason why we should oppose an amendment of this kind.

Questions

MRS. ZERVIGON

Senator De Blieux, I don't fully understand the situation you're describing. Are you describing the situation in which the city council of Baton Rouge has different regulations for the gas delivered to customers within their boundaries than to customers without their boundaries?

MR. DE BLIEUX

I didn't get the last part of your question, Mrs. Zervigon.

MRS. ZERVIGON

I say, are you describing a situation in which the city council of Baton Rouge has made differing regulations for gas delivered within the boundaries of Baton Rouge than for gas delivered outside the boundaries of Baton Rouge?

MR. DE BLIEUX

No, that's not the situation. The present provisions in the constitution does not give the Public Service Commission any jurisdiction over municipally-owned gas distribution systems. It has no authority because the legislature has to give them that authority. Now, as a result of the accidents we have had the legislature did give the Public Service Commission, not rate-making power, only the power insofar as being sure that the natural gas systems were complying with the state regulations insofar as the malodor was concerned. This is to protect those provisions alone. That's all it's for.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Well, what you're talking about is not so much a problem of regulation as a problem of enforcement. Isn't that correct?

MR. DE BLIEUX

That's correct.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Well, who enforces it? Who comes and knocks on the door and makes you be good in a situation like this?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, you mean, knocks on the door of the municipalities?

MRS. ZERVIGON

Yes, sir, or whoever owns the gas.

MR. DE BLIEUX

The Public Service Commission has that jurisdiction right now, and that's where we want to keep it because we're trying to preserve what's in Act 352 of 1970.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Well, Senator, you don't think the words "as provided by law" in the earlier paragraph continue this right?

MR. DE BLIEUX

But, this is a limitation. That's not in the same paragraph, Mrs. Zervigon. You're reading Paragraph (C) now, and that has the limitations in it, that the Public Service Commission has no jurisdiction over those systems. We're only saying here that they have no jurisdiction except for safety regulations. That's the only reason--except for safety.

MR. BOLLINGER

Senator, doesn't the Oscher Act, which was enacted into Congress, give a commission regulatory powers over industry without their consent?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Bollinger, Act (C) gives the limitations of the power of the Public Service Commission over commentaries and public utilities that are owned by municipalities. Where they are owned and operated by municipalities, then the Public Service Commission has no jurisdiction over it. What this amendment says is that the Public Service Commission will have jurisdiction only insofar as safety is concerned, not...

MR. BOLLINGER

You missed the point of my question. Let me start over. Did you know that there is a federal act which establishes safety regulations for industry?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Oh, yes.

MR. BOLLINGER

Does this not do the same thing as far as allowing the Public Service Commission simply to set some minimum safety standards that all utilities will have to follow?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Yes; you're correct. Now I understand your question. You're right.

MR. BOLLINGER

Don't you think this is a very good amendment?

MR. DE BLIEUX

That's right. I agree.

Further Discussion

MR. HEINE

Senator De Blieux, he touched on the point that I wanted to ask you. You are aware that the Federal Pipeline Safety Act that municipalities that own their utility systems do come under their minimum safety rules and this would include the people within the municipality and the people that served outside of the municipality. Just recently, my city had to spend twenty-five hundred dollars complying to these safety rules, and I know I just talked to Delegate Fayard and Denham Springs had to do the same thing. We have...every municipality that owns their gas system has a certain length of time that they have to comply with these safety rules. So, we are under their jurisdiction, so to speak, and although I'm not opposed to this, I really don't think that it's necessary.

MR. DE BLIEUX

That must be a recently passed act, Senator Heine.

MR. FLORY

Mr. De Blieux, isn't it true that the local governmental units do not come under the Occupational Safety and Health Act?

MR. DE BLIEUX

That may be right, Mr. Flory. I'm not sure. I don't know.

MR. FLORY

Isn't it also true that under the Federal Pipeline Safety Act that that would relate to as far as pressures and so forth, and the types of line, how deep it's buried does not affect the malodorance in a water system, for example, as to the pollutants in the water system?

MR. DE BLIEUX

You may be correct about that. I'm not sure about that.

[Previous Question ordered.]

MR. CANNON

Thank you, Mr. Chairsmn. I urge your favorable consideration of this amendment. Thank you.

Closing

Excuse me. Mr. Denney had brought to my attention one little point, and I'd like to have it stated just for the record. The city of New Orleans does have rate review power over their private operator, and this would in no way stop the city of New Orleans and its city council from regulating its rates over Louisiana Light and Power or whoever it is. At the same time, this would not preclude the city of New Orleans or any other municipality from placing more stringent standards upon itself. This would not in any way affect this. Thank you.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted: 103-5. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous Question ordered on the Paragraph.]

Question

MR. KEAN

Mr. Lambert, as I read Subsection (C), it's clear that a publicly-owned common carrier or a public utility would not be subject to the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission. However, a municipality or a parish acquired some common carrier or public utility after the effective date of this constitution, it's not clear to me that that would be outside of the jurisdiction of the commission. But, it seems to me that under Subparagraph (B) that the legislature would have a right to provide by law that publicly-owned system even though acquired after the effective date of the constitution would not be subject to the jurisdiction of the commission. Would you agree?

MR. LAMBERT

You are exactly correct.

[Paragraph passed: 107-3. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Paragraph

MR. POYNTER

"Paragraph (D) Decisions on Applications, Petitions, and Schedules (1) The commission shall render its final decision on applications, petitions, and proposed rate schedules..."

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

Chairman Henry in the Chair

[Motion to waive reading of the Paragraph adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MISS PERKINS

Ladies and gentlemen, I realize this is a very controversial section. There was a difference in opinion among the committee members, but I will present to you the section as adopted by the committee. I must admit that this is the first time since I've been here that I felt that I had a bear by the tail, and I'm just hoping I can convince you to give me a bear hug instead of annihilating me. So, here's the committee's report: Section (1) provides that the Public Service Commission shall have twelve months within which to render a decision on an application. Section (2) provides that if no decision be rendered within six months from the date of filing, then the schedule is deemed tentatively approved. Section (3) provides, if approved, the schedule may be put into effect subject to a protective bond. If disapproved, the schedule may also be put into effect subject to bond. Any refund claims filed by the customer are to be filed within one year of the date of final action on the claim. Section (4) presents a change in that we are putting a burden on the utility to file notice of the application of filing in the state journal and in each parish journal where the schedule would go into effect. The change is basically from the source provision or that we have taken out a great deal of the detail in that we have eliminated the requirement that any appeals from an order must be made within ninety days, that the orders will be tried with preference in the district court, and that if appeal is taken to the Supreme Court, that the court would have ten days within which to grant a return. Ladies and gentlemen, I'd like to point out that as you are aware, the procedure is when the commission makes a decision, if an appeal is lodged, it goes into the court of the commission's domicile, namely the Nineteenth Judicial District. If you'll refer down to Section (E), you will see where we have maintained that provision. At this time, I would like to point out to each of you that I realize that there is substantial opposition, and everyone will be given the opportunity to add their feelings on it. But, I also point out that there will be an amendment coming up, as Mr. Abraham attempted to submit earlier, "as provided by law". Let me discourage your support of this amendment because I do feel that we have reasonable compromise amendments to be presented to the convention. I'll answer any questions, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

MR. DUVAL

Lynn, of course, I admire your courage for presenting this particular proposal, and I'm glad that the Natural Resource Committee chose their big gun to present it. But, let me ask you a few questions about it. Do you realize that under this proposal, the way it reads, that a rate could go into effect without a hearing, and it can become final? Do you realize that that's possible?

MISS PERKINS

Yes, Mr. Duval.

MR. DUVAL

Do you think that's a...well, of course, I don't want to ask you your personal opinion, but you realize that is possible?

MISS PERKINS

Yes, sir.

MR. DUVAL

Do you also realize that under this proposal that the ordinary everyday consumer would then have to pay rates which were much higher without the elected commissioner ever deciding on the case?

MISS PERKINS

That's correct except you're assuming that they're much higher. They might be reasonable.

MR. DUVAL

This is true.

Also, Lynn, do you realize that under this proposal, that even if the rate proposal is rejected by the Public Service Commission, that the utility company can put the rate into effect with a bond?

MISS PERKINS

Yes, sir, that's right, a protective bond.

MR. DUVAL

That's even if they lose?

MISS PERKINS

Yes, sir.

MR. DUVAL

Now, if in a law case, if the person is the plaintiff and sues for a hundred thousand dollars and loses, they can't get their hundred thousand dollars by putting a bond in effect, can they?

MISS PERKINS

No, sir.

MR. DUVAL

O.K., one other question: what happens with this protective bond in the event, for instance, it's a taxicab rate? How do you refund that if the commission was wrong?

MISS PERKINS

Well, I would assume that the customer would have to file as is so provided in this particular section.

MR. DUVAL

So, if this happens, you better keep all your taxicab receipts, then?

MISS PERKINS

Yes, sir.

MR. DUVAL

O.K.

MR. ALARIO

Lynn, when they say if the commission disapproves the increase in whole or in part that the rates would go into effect, that meant the whole rate would go into effect, right? In other words, if the commission approved part of it, and even if the utility company was satisfied that that was it, then the rates would still go into effect until the court of last resort made their decision. Is that right?

MISS PERKINS

Yes, sir, the entire schedule would go into effect.

MR. ALARIO

I see. Now, Lynn, on the refund claims, as the committee proposal has it now, the customer would have to apply for the refund?

MISS PERKINS

Yes, that's correct.

MR. ALARIO

Those that wouldn't know what the law was, then, would probably not get the refund as such.

MISS PERKINS

That's right.

MR. ALARIO

Don't you think, maybe, that responsibility should be on the utility company rather than the customer?

MISS PERKINS

Possibly so.

MR. ALARIO

Lynn, what is the reason for putting in the rates ahead of time, I mean, after even the commission would disapprove it? What's the theory there for the utility people?

MISS PERKINS

The big problem is that the utility company cannot apply their rates retroactively. So, in this manner, they can put the rate into effect, but yet, they're putting up a protective bond. So, if the rate schedule doesn't go through, then they have to pay back the money to their customers.

MR. RAYBURN

Lynn, I notice here where in the event refund claims are in order that you have to make them within a period of twelve months. Is that correct?

MISS PERKINS

Yes, sir. They put a prescriptive period and the prescriptive period is set as of the date of final action.

MR. RAYBURN

That's after it's been through the lower courts, the higher courts, and the final courts...that's after the final action from all appeals. Is that correct?

MISS PERKINS

Yes, sir.

MR. RAYBURN

Now, is there any provision here that says they've got to refund that money within a given period of time?

MISS PERKINS

No, sir, there is not.

MR. RAYBURN

Is there any provisions that say you shall get a little interest on those monies that have been erroneously invested for that period of time?

MISS PERKINS

No, sir, but I would like to refer to you the "as provided by law" statement, so I would think statutorially, this could be so provided.

MR. RAYBURN

Is there any law now that provides for that?

MISS PERKINS

Not to my knowledge.

MR. RAYBURN

In the event that the telephone compny applied for a twenty-five percent pay telephone rate, or ten cents, may we say....

MISS PERKINS

Yes, sir.

MR. RAYBURN

...and the Public Service Commission did not act within twelve months which is an elected body that has that power; am I correct?

MISS PERKINS

Yes, sir.

MR. RAYBURN

They did not act. How would refunds be made on a public telephone if I happen to use it ten times or twenty times or thirty times, and how would they know it was me that used it?

MISS PERKINS

Well, the only thing that I could say there is that the utility would have given faith to the statement of the customer, and I'd like to also say, to my knowledge, in the past when a claim has been filed because of a malfunction of a phone, the customer has been reimbursed his loss.

MR. RAYBURN

Well, Lynn, in a sense of fair play, since this is so urgent to the telephone company, and if they don't get relief within a six-month period, don't you think the people who are entitled to a refund should have some date established or some time limit established as to when they'll get their refund?

MISS PERKINS

Yes, sir.

MR. RAYBURN

Thank you.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendment sent up by Mr. Abraham which reads as follows:
Amendment No. 1. On page 6, delete lines 1 through 23, both inclusive, in their entirety, and insert in lieu thereof the following: "The commission shall render decisions on the applications, petitions, and proposed rate schedules in the manner prescribed by law."

[3016]

Explanation

MR. ABRAHAM

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, this amendment deletes all of the language in Paragraph (D) and simply specifies that the manner in which the commission will operate shall be prescribed by law. Now, at the risk of repeating myself, when I was up here before, as I see this particular proposal, everything in here is in favor of the utility company, and the consumer is the one who is going to suffer. There is no protection for the consumer whatsoever in here that I can see. A schedule can go into effect without even having a hearing. The Public Service Commission can sit on its hand, the schedule goes into effect, and after twelve months, I would assume that it's considered permanently approved, and if the people start to holler then, well, then the Public Service Commission can say, "Well I didn't have enough time to make a study of it. I couldn't render a decision. You people wrote this into the constitution. Our hands are tied." I think that we need to keep this thing as flexible as it can be. Now, there's twenty-three lines in this particular section, subparagraph. We've got fourteen amendments on it. But, the thing is--and I say again to you--I don't think we should be trying to write this type of statutory material into the constitution. This is a legislative matter. Let's leave it in the hands of the legislature.

Further Discussion

MR. TAPPER

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I just had a revelation. I understand that the great Senator Rayburn is going to close on this amendment--how much time do I have, Mr. Chairman?--and I know that I can't outdo him because he's going to give you that "little man" speech. So, I'm going to try to anticipate some of the things that he's going to say, and I also am going to give you that "little man" speech, or attempt to. I know that this is going to be one of those things where you're going to have to make a decision, so they will tell you, whether or not you're going to go with the big utility, or either go with the little man. All I want to make very clear to you is this: that if you're sitting out there in an area away from all of the utilities, and you want a little telephone, and you can't get it, you need to call a doctor in the night, it's tough. It's tough. Those of you who have been there, know it. I've been there. Now, what are we talking about? A question was asked of Lynn a while ago about the interest. Is this going to bear interest? Well, what we're talking about to the average consumer is a pittance, if these rates go on. The interest is infinitesimal. Don't let anybody come up here and tell you that they are opposed in this, or opposed to this amendment because they thought of the little man. You figure it out. Three or four pennies a month--what's the interest on that in six months or a year? You tell me. Ladies and gentlemen, in forty-two states, this same proposal has been in effect; it has been operating to the benefit of the people and the consumer for years and years and years. Now, what is the reason for this? Why should it be in the constitution? Why should it not be legislative? Well, it's been legislative for many years, but we've had experiences in this state where the public utility has lost millions of dollars because of nonaction on the part of the Public Service Commission. Now, I'm not faulting the Public Service Commission, but they didn't act. Now, let's just compare. What are we talking about? How much is it going to cost the individual consumer, and how much will it cost the public utility? Yes, let's get down to brass tacks. How much will it cost the telephone company, if they have to wait two years for a decision? Pennies to the consumer; millions to the company. Let's fact it. We have only one, don't we? Suppose we had none. I urge that you defeat this amendment.

Questions

MR. ABRAHAM

Elmer, you said that these poor little people out in the country couldn't get a telephone. Now, why can't they get a telephone? Is the telephone company that broke that it can't provide telephone service for them?

MR. TAPPER

Well, Mr. Abraham, if your amendment goes into effect, it will continue the same as it did, and in effect, continue to lose millions of dollars because the Public Service Commission doesn't act; yes, that's very possible.

MR. ABRAHAM

On what basis are you assuming they're losing millions of dollars?

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

MR. TAPPER
I beg your pardon.

MR. ABRAHAM
On what basis are you assuming that they're losing millions of dollars? Do you have their financial report?

MR. TAPPER
Yea. They've lost millions of dollars because of inaction on the part of the Public Service Commission, yes.

MR. ABRAHAM
Has the telephone company ever failed to pay a dividend in the last umpteen years?

MR. TAPPER
I can't hear you.

MR. ABRAHAM
Has the American Telephone and Telegraph Company ever failed to pay a dividend in the last umpteen years?

MR. TAPPER
I'm not a stockholder, Mr. Abraham. I don't know. Are you?

MR. ABRAHAM
Well, I do know. I'm not a stockholder, but I do know. They have never missed a dividend.

Now, do you know that I have spoke to other utilities--now, we've not just talking about the telephone company--but I spoke to other utility companies, and all of them said they did not necessarily have this type of language in the constitution at all, that the legislature could give them the relief they needed. Only the telephone company is the one who's insisting to putting this in the constitution.

MR. TAPPER
Are you asking me the question, or are you telling me?

MR. ABRAHAM
Did you know that, that this was the answer I got?

MR. TAPPER
No, I didn't know that you discussed anything with any other utility companies.

MR. ABRAHAM
I discussed it with other utility companies, and did you know that they both said...they all said that they did not have to have this in the constitution; it could be handled by the legislature?

MR. TAPPER
I didn't know that. I think you could take up your time when you close to explain that to everybody.

MR. JUNEAU
Mr. Tapper, I was interested in your statistics where you said forty-two states had a similar provision. Was that what I recall you said?

MR. TAPPER
Yes, I think so.

MR. JUNEAU
Well, I think it would be important for this convention to know how many of those forty-two states put time delays of six months and so forth in the constitution.

MR. TAPPER
There are forty-six, Mr. Juneau, instead of forty-two.

Further Discussion

MISS PERKINS
Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in strong opposition to Mr. Abraham's amendment. If a time limitation was going to be put on the Public Service Commission with reference to the time that they had to render their decision, in all probability, legislature would have and could have already done it, but they had failed to do so. Probably for the very same reason that the decisions will be difficult to make with reference to the compromise on this proposal, that is two interests have to be weighed. You have the little people and the big corporation. But, equity demands that we weigh each of their interests and make a reasonable decision because we represent all the peoples of Louisiana, and I know a lot of little people who have some stock in big corporations. I also know that if I'm in business, I've got to get a return on my money, on my capital outlay. I strongly urge that you defeat this amendment and let us proceed with trying to resolve the difficulties facing this convention. Thank you.

Questions

MR. ROY
Lynn, don't you agree that if this is not in the constitution and it's going to be dealt with by the legislature that when any poor little folk wants a telephone out in the country, he's going to have to call his legislator, who in turn is going to put the heat on the Public Service Commission, and that's the only way they may get it? Isn't that true?

MISS PERKINS
Yea, sir.

MR. ROY
It's really a legislator's holiday for them to try to say "just let us handle it," rather than be constitutionally protected and let the commission handle it. Isn't that true?

MISS PERKINS
Yes, sir.

MR. ABRAHAM
Lynn, have the utility companies ever been to the legislature for relief from this so-called inaction of the Public Service Commission in the past?

MISS PERKINS
I really can't answer that question, Mr. Abraham, but I would say this, that in all probability nothing would have been done because the Public Service Commission has improved substantially with reference to the time in which they render their decisions, and I think if anything could or would have been done, that the utility companies would have gotten relief by now.

[Motion to limit debate on the Amendment to thirty minutes. Substitute motion to limit debate on the Amendment to fifteen minutes for proponents and opponents respectively adopted: 52-34.]

Further Discussion

MR. J. JACKSON
Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I'll speak very briefly on it. I recognize that as the proposal presently is constituted that many of you, whether you are against or for it, have some problem. My reason for being against the Abraham amendment is that I think that within this body here that whatever side of the fence that you're on concerning rate increases that it can be resolved. But, I think--and I thought I would never have the opportunity to say this--but, I think that this matter, what we're talking about, ought to be clearly laid out under a constitutional framework. I suggest to you that this is not a precedent in the fact that I think many of you have seen the need, and voted for, by a majority, to constitutionalize the need for the three-dollar license plate. Let me say that I'm not saying that I'm against this or against that, but I'm against Mr. Abraham's amendment because I think the subject in which we are talking about needs to have, particularly since we've laid the foundation for other sorts of, what I think, are people concerned, that we ought to provide some framework in the constitution for it. Now, I'm saying you could do that with some flexibility where it'd be just to the people and just to the utility company. I'm not taking a position on that. I'm just saying that it's of grave importance that it ought not just be left, be deleted and left without any particular reference to what's going to be the vote requirement within the legislature. I ask that you favorably vote against the Abraham amendment, and that we do have an opportunity to hear, particularly, one who has very limited information, like to hear as much argument as I can on this very vital issue that I think affects at least every citizen in the state.

Further Discussion

MR. LEBLEU

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, in one sense of the word I can see that this might work. However, the Public Service Commission is also an elective body. I think if we leave this up to the legislature, what we're actually doing is getting back to some of the opposition that people had against our present constitution--the way the legislature was voting to add amendments to the 1921 Constitution because they said they were ducking the issue. But, I don't think it's right for the legislature to...in session to enact laws that'a going to be detrimental to what the Public Service Commission might want to provide in its rules and regulations, because they also have to answer to the voters. If the voters don't like the way they are operating their office, they have the right at the end of six years to kick them out of office.

Another reason I say that we shouldn't leave this to the legislature is because I think simply by the actions that the Public Service Commission has not taken in resolving speedily some of these settlements indicates that they might be doing...taking no action simply for political expediency. I think there's a....I believe Mr. Abraham said there were fourteen amendments and twenty-eight lines. But I think there's enough amendments here, if we just continue, and consider these amendments, we can come up with something that's going to be a clear mandate for the Public Service Commission to take action. I think it'a going to be satisfactory to everyone of us and the Public Service Commission and the utilities people, as well. I have some reservations about the time limits, etc. But, let me tell you this, I've been fooling with some of the agencies of the federal government for five years and trying to get an evacuation route right-of-way. They continue to take no action or put off, or refer to someone else. It'a not good. I say, just put yourself in the same place as some business man who might need a rate increase, and can prove that he needs a rate increase. But, the Public Service Commission sits there and takes no action on it. I mean, it's not fair to the people in business.

So, I say, if we reject this amendment and consider some of the other amendments, I think we can clean up this whole section to the satisfaction of everyone.

Questions

MR. JUNEAU

Conway, talking about the delay periods, as I read this, if you would adopt the Abraham amendment, you would still have in Section (E) the one-year period that an appeal could be taken therefrom. Isn't that correct?

MR. LEBLEU

As I understand it, yes, sir.

MR. JUNEAU

So, even with the adoption of the Abraham amendment, we still have the mandate that there is that cut-off period of one year. Isn't that right?

MR. LEBLEU

Well, as I understand Section (E), that...at the end of one year, that would just allow the utility, or whoever is involved, to go directly to the Supreme Court. Is that right?

MR. JUNEAU

That's what I mean. You get it out of the commission, though.

MR. NUNEZ

Representative LeBleu, evidently everybody here knows you are a representative. I see you're for not deleting, or leaving this in the constitution.

I take offense. I'm sure you should, also. The remarks like Mr. Roy, that not to take this out, and give it to the legislature would give a legislative holiday, so to speak. Do you agree with a statement like that?--a wild statement like that?

MR. LEBLEU

Yes, sir.

Further Discussion

MR. ROY

Ladies and gentlemen of the constitution, and Mr. Chairman, I rise, of course, in opposition to this amendment. Let me point out one thing that, on it's face, makes it totally inconsistent.

Mr. Abraham tried to pass an amendment to Section (B) earlier, with respect to providing for this to be done by law. This amendment is totally inconsistent with (B), page 5, which gives rule-making authority to the commission. Now, what are you going to have? You are going to have a commission that'a elected by the people, five in number, from all over the state who represent the people, and who make certain rules. Then, you are going to have the legislature turn around and say, "Well, we don't like that rule, so we exclude it." Then, you are going to have the commission come back and make another rule, and legislature try to exclude that one because you are having it all as provided by law. It just doesn't make any sense. I stand, I don't accuse every legislator of what Senator Nunez is worried about. But, I'll tell you this...what's your problem, Senator Nunez?

MR. HENRY

Well, wait just a minute, Mr. Roy. Senator Nunez, do you have a question? Would you yield to the gentleman for a question?

MR. ROY

No. No, I'm not going to yield to him.

MR. HENRY

The gentleman refuses to yield.

MR. ROY

I've got to discuss the issues of this matter.

I have an amendment coming later I think that is a good compromise on this. I was against the committee proposal as it was because it was too much. But, don't be misled by these people who say that they are talking for the little people, because, the only way the little people are going to get something, now that we have a five man commission, is to make sure that that commission is responsive to the needs of those people and after studying what have you, will make the rules necessary to see to it that they get the services that they needed.

You're not going to get anywhere with respect to services for people unless the utility company can make some type of a profit on it. That'a just the way the capitalistic system works. The people are going to hurt in the end....are going to be those little people...unless we make sure that the legislature cannot, from day to day, and session to session, impose some type of whimsical rule on the commission that has been elected by the people. If that'a it, then we ought to appoint the commissioners instead of having the people of this state elect the five we are talking about.

Further Discussion

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Chairman, and fellow members of the delegation, Mr. Rayburn came up here when we were in the huddle and he said that "the committee was caught with its pants down."

I say to you, when I went to the Natural Resources Committee, I didn't even have any. I was so ignorant of what was really going on. It was not my choice to be on this committee, but I stayed on it after being put on it so I thought I could learn something. Of course, as I looked at parts, recommendations, I came up with what I thought that we had left out. So, I want to ask you to please defeat this amendment so we can do our job, and let the legislature do what it's supposed to do. Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. CHATELAIN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise to strenuously oppose this amendment for the reason that we came here to write a constitution, not shirk our duties. I'd like to pose about three questions to you and let you go on your own.

Question No. 1. Why do we have a Public Service Commission? Because the Public Service Commission is set up to defend the people--to look out for the rights of the people--because the most of these utilities that have come under the province of the Public Service Commission are of a monopoly nature. You think about that for a while. If this is, in fact, a monopoly that they have jurisdiction over, shouldn't they have a right to look out for our interests?

All right. Fact No. 2, is why should we turn this over to a hundred and forty-four man, or forty-four person, annual legislative number rather than five commissioner? I say to you that we are going to have an annual session of the legislature, sixty days each year, and there would be a hundred and forty-four people subject to this problem every year. So, why should we, the consumers, be subject to that kind of a situation? Let's go ahead and put some provision in the constitution. I do wish that you'd vote against this amendment. Let's try to work out the problems. I'll grant you there are some problems in this proposal, but let's try to work them out as delegates to the constitutional convention.

Questions

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Chatelain, precisely what are you for?

MR. CHATELAIN

I'm against this amendment, sir.

MR. DUVAL

I know. But, I'm asking you, what are you for?

MR. CHATELAIN

I'm against this amendment because it deletes this section.

MR. DUVAL

Well, what....do you like the section as it is?

MR. CHATELAIN

We are not debating that, Mr. Duval. I'm coming up with something later.

MR. DUVAL

Well, let me ask you something else, Mr. Chatelain. You talked about the whim of these hundred and forty-four people. Now, you know these hundred and forty-four people haven't tampered with the Public Service Commission at all. We are tampering with them right now. What do you think about that?

MR. CHATELAIN

That's your pain, Mr. Duval.

MR. SHANNON

Mr. Chatelain, it's seldom that you will be bothered with this when you get in the legislature. Is that correct?

MR. CHATELAIN

Mr. Shannon, we are here trying to write a constitution, sir. I'm not concerned about the future so far as it relates to your question.

Further Discussion

MR. DESHOTELS

Mr. Chairman, I might say that you might have brought this on to yourself.

Ladies and gentlemen, Mr. Chairman, I'd like to address myself to the non-attorneys in the convention. They are talking about a procedure in a hearing. Now, we went over the judiciary article, and we gave jurisdiction to district courts. We gave jurisdiction to city courts, and the other courts. In none of these provisions did we say what procedure they must follow. Now, these district courts are trying people. Their lives are in the balance. But, we left that up to the legislature. We have a court of criminal procedure. There are many cases that come before the courts that involve millions of dollars; in fact, a copy of one was put on your desks by Mrs. Miller this morning. That procedure is taken care of in the court of civil procedure. Now, they come and tell you today that the utilities, for some reason or other, cannot be treated like the rest of the people of the State of Louisiana, and that the five man board of the Public Service Commission, which we will have, once this constitution is adopted, cannot be trusted to treat them fairly. That's a lot of bunk! Because, anybody knows that our utilities have to be protected, they have to be healthy, or we cannot get services. If they don't give the people the services, it won't be long before those commissioners are voted out.

So, that's a lot of bunk! Now, they are wanting....listen to this....they are wanting, ladies and gentlemen, to institute schedules and rates immediately upon filing a petition. Paragraph 3 says that. Now, we have a Public Service Commission that will hear their application on the merits, will listen to evidence. Now, after that Public Service Commission rules that they are not entitled to the rates, renders a decision, in spite of that, they can continue with their rates--they can continue with their rates. That's what the proposal says. Now, I grant you that possibly....possibly they may be entitled to everything they ask. For that reason, we have a one-year....a one-year limitation in which to reach a decision. Subsection (E) provides for that. The commission must reach a decision in one year. But for the commission to reach a decision....to reach a decision....and in spite of that....in spite of that, collect rates from people is ludicrous. Now, some of these people can't afford to have saving accounts. But, we are going to have them pay rates....we are going to have them pay rates that we are told will be refunded in possibly two years, or three years, with interest. Well, these people can't afford to pay the extra rates. They have a hard time meeting their bills as it is.

Ladies and gentlemen, to say that the legislature cannot take care of this business as well as it takes care of criminal procedure, and civil procedure, in the remainder of our judicial proceedings in this state, is not a valid argument. It is not a valid argument. The legislature knows they must be responsible, and when they are setting out these rules of procedure, where do you think those people sitting up there are going to be? Where do you think they are going to be? They are going to be in the lobby over there, of the House of Representatives and the Senate. They will be represented then. No legislature is going to enact legislation that will cripple our utilities. That is not responsible legislation. I will not indict....I will not indict our commission, and I will not indict our legislature. That is what the committee proposal does.

I ask you to adopt Mr. Abraham's amendment and let this go where it belongs. Now, Mr. Tapper's waving over there. He says it's an issue of the little man versus the utility. Well, Mr. Tapper, if this proposal is adopted, my friend, you will have an issue of the utility versus the little man because you try and explain that to that person that's having a hard time meeting his utility bills, that he has to pay a utility rate that the commission says he should not be paying. He has to pay it in spite of the commission's ruling. Now, you explain that, and you will make it an issue. You will make it a false issue. It is not....it does not do that.

Further Discussion

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, it has been an implicit assumption in most of the debate by the opponents of Mr. Abraham's amendment, that the Public Service Commission has long and protracted delays in making all of its decisions. Well, I submit to you that I don't represent the telephone company or any utility company. So, I don't know about them. But, in the matters which I have had before the Public Service Commission, that is mainly in the area of transportation, I have found them to be exceedingly quick in rendering decisions, and have been very well pleased as in contrast to the courts, even, on that score with the Public Service Commission. I'm going to suggest to you that the reason for delay, if there is any, in making decisions with regard to setting utility rates, is because this is a very complex matter. Setting a utility rate is not like deciding a divorce case, as another implicit assumption seems to be in the debate here. You don't just decide, "Well, those fellows from Southern Bell, or from one of the utility--electric utility companies are pretty nice guys, and they didn't make enough profit last year. So, we are going to give them that rate increase." You really owe an obligation as a member of the Public Service Commission to send your staff up and to do as thorough an audit as possible to see whether the facts and figures you have been given are correct. Now, you know you always have lawyers on both sides of a case. But, don't kid yourself. You can have accountants on both sides of the case, too. There have been an awful lot of lawsuits in recent years involving the correctness, or lack of correctness, of accounts rendered by CPAs--particularly with regard to large corporate business transactions upon which stock is sold. If there have been misstatements made in accounts rendered in those events, you can be sure that the beauty is in the eyes of the beholder, also, in rendering accounts when it comes to utility rate making. You can take the same set of books and turn them over to two different accountants, just like two different lawyers, and get a little different story from each one. You can be selective in the figures you tend to emphasize. I'm just mentioning this to point out that this is a procedure that requires careful study, and by its very nature, is going to be more involved than many other decisions that the Public Service Commission has to make.

I'm not saying there ought not, perhaps, to be a time limit. And, the one year period in Section (E) doesn't particularly disturb me. It does disturb me, however, to say that a rate would automatically go into effect within six months if a decision hasn't been rendered, because I submit to you--now think about this a minute and be practical---if the utility company knows that a rate is going into effect within six months if a decision is not made, how cooperative do you think they are going to be in disclosing the facts of their operation to the people from the Public Service Commission who are charged with the duty to investigate it in order to reach a proper decision? I submit to you they might be most uncooperative indeed, and would have indeed a great inducement to be uncooperative.

I finally would urge you, as did Mr. Deshotels, to the fact that the court of criminal procedure and civil procedure, which effect the most important legal rights of our state, are entrusted to the legislature. If a six month period, or any other period is appropriate, let the legislature decide it after having proper hearings on the matter so that if the period of time they select doesn't work out, they can come back the next session of the legislature and change it. Let's not us be audacious enough to put that in the constitution where it would take an amendment to change it.

Further Discussion

MR. SCHMITT

Miss Perkins said that this would be a legislator's holiday if this amendment was passed. My father is a legislator, and I can tell you it would be no holiday to have people calling up on the phone all the time in order to get these things done.

Mr. LeBleu said that he doesn't think that the legislature should control this activity. I say to you, it's a lot better to have the legislature to have the flexibility to control this than to require for a constitutional amendment to be passed if we make a mistake in these procedures which we adopt.

Now, there are claims here that these utilities do not get quick enough decisions, and that they are not getting large enough increases in their rates in order to provide financial income to the companies. Why does it cost more for an intrastate, within the state, phone call than it does for a long distance phone call across state lines? This is not regulated by this commission. If you pass the next section, this gives relief to the utilities. An appeal would be automatic after twelve months. This appeal would be to the district court. Then, as a matter of right, they could go to the Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana. This right is not given to people who are injured in workmens' compensation cases, or injured and come to court and seek justice. This type of appeal is not given to the mother who seeks custody of her child, if the custody is in that of the father. These rights are very severe rights, and important rights to these individuals, but these are not given to them.

However, as a matter of right, you are going to give it to the utility companies. I don't think that this should be a constitutional right. If it should be decided to be given, let the legislature be the one to bear that burden--not let us. We've got enough things that are in this constitution which are going to make it hard to sell to the people. Let's not make it impossible. I believe that we should allow the legislature the flexibility and the ability to change these particular provisions in the future.

Thank you.

Closing

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I thought long and hard about this particular proposal. I have many, many friends with the telephone company. In the years when I actively practiced law, I represented many of the public utilities. I have always offered them my full and total cooperation.

When the telephone company people came to me, and I read this proposal, I thought to myself, "How, and why, should any company ever think that it should be in a position in this state where it could get what no one else in this state can ever get, and that's an automatic decision." As an active practitioner for many years, as many of you lawyers are, you know that you'd love to be able to be in a position where you could automatically get a decision of a court, regardless of how ill-founded your claims may be.

Now, let me tell you that most public utilities that have to appear before the Public Service Commission are satisfied with the operation of that commission, and the manner in which they hand down their decisions. But, ladies and gentlemen, let's get to the gut situation here...what the real problem is. The real problem is the fact that it costs more money to make a telephone call from New Orleans to Shreveport, than it does from New Orleans to New York. What the real issue is that we have before us, is that the Public Service Commission has been properly representing the people of this state. Ladies and gentlemen, please, let's don't be so misguided as to believe that we should allow anyone, under any condition, to get an automatic judgement for any reason whatsoever. Now, I can't say that the Public Service Commission has not, at times, been at fault in not rendering decisions quickly. But, these matters are complicated in nature. These matters, sometime, acquire more than a year of taking evidence before the matter can be submitted. Yet, this proposal would say that while the evidence is still being submitted, that a company could put an automatic rate into effect--in effect, get a judgment in their favor. This is the most ill-conceived idea I have ever seen. What gets me, and the reason I'm a little overwrought at this time, is because of the fact that I just never thought I'd ever see the day when a responsible company would come before a group like this and ask them to vote for such a ridiculous proposal.

That's the reason that I say to you, this provision is not amendable. Don't believe that any of these fifteen amendments coming along will do any good for this proposal. It's not going to. You know what's going to happen? We're going to spend two, three, four, five days of debate, and this proposal will never get sixty-seven votes to pass it, believe me. I, therefore, urge you to adopt the Abraham amendment. Let's leave this thing to the legislature where it belongs. Please, folks, let's don't take up two, three, four more days of valuable time fooling around with something which will never get sixty-seven votes to pass in the end. I, therefore, urge you to adopt the Abraham amendment so that we can move forward.

Amendment No. 1. On page 6, delete lines 5 through 17, both inclusive in their entirety.

Explanation

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Chairman and fellow members...fellow members of this constitution...Mr. Stagg, my amendment proposes to delete Article 11 and 111. They are the provisions that allow for an automatic increase in case the utility companies have applied for a raise in rates. Let me say here and now, we have a Public Service Commission. They are vested with the power and the authority to look at all problems and all evidence presented to them. If you leave these provisions in this constitution, you are circumventing public officials that were elected by the people of this state; and, you are attempting to do what they were elected to do. I, personally, don't think that's a right. Maybe you do. But, I don't. I am not trying to disturb the provisions where if they don't act within twelve months, then it shall go to the court-- to the lower court--and a provision for a direct appeal to the higher court. I am a little lost. I don't know who...what attorney prepared this language. If he's not well-paid, he should be well-paid. I'm not looking for a job, Mr. Tapper. The only job the telephone company could give me is a ditch-digging job, or a wire-twisting job connecting cables. I don't think you fit in that category. They might could do a little something better for you.

But, let me just tell you what this says. This says that in the event that they apply, there's no action taken within six months--six months, believe me--we adopted a salary schedule for the teachers. It took us six years to implement it. We weren't gerrymandered by the courts. But, if you pass this, any time they apply, if they don't act within six months--I talked to Mr. Earnest Clements who is my commissioner; and Mr. Roy, as far as the remarks that you made about legislators, other than voting on the commission, you know who's the public service commissioner in my area? You're looking at him--old Rayburn. Everybody that can't get a phone, they come to me. Everybody that is dissatisfied about their rates, they come to me. I'm the closest to them. We...my public service district goes from Pearl River County in Mississippi, to Orange, Texas. All the way across our great state. I try to help them; I call Mr. Clements; I make known their request to him. Some of them have never seen him. About half of them ain't never heard of him. I'm leveling with you; I'm telling you the truth. But, I do the best I can. But, here we're asking to do this for a public utility which, in my opinion, like you talk about a labor organization, has got a closed shop. If they ask for an increase and they don't get it, and he told me no later than a few days ago that they have got to audit all their holdings all over this country--sometimes it takes six or seven months. I'm not an auditor. Some of you are. Mr. Vick, you probably know about that; I don't. I can get my business together in about fifteen minutes--tell you whether I'm winning or losing, or what I made and what I lost. Now, my friend, Lawrence Chehardy, it might take him thirty. But, I can get all mine together in about fifteen minutes. But, they tell me something as big as the Southern Bell, that it takes months, and months, and months to know what they are really making, or what they are not making. I don't know how big they are. But, I know this, if they had a took the money they've spent since this convention convened buying these steaks, I see some of them here with the "Steakitis." They'd eat 'em in the morning. I meet them in the White House. They get bacon and thought they had steak. If they'd took the money they spent on steaks and wining and dining these delegates, they could give us all a reduction. You believe me? I know of what I speak. They ain't took me too much because I told them this is the most ridiculous language I've ever read. You're go and elect the Public Service Commission to decide on rates and facts. Then you are coming here and asking this constitution to circumvent those elected public officials and just give it to them when they ask for it.

Now, they're going to give you a refund. Let's see how they are going to do that. They say here that after you've had your last day in court of the highest in the land, that refunds shall be made if you make an application within twelve months. You've got to make the application. You've got to ask for to give me back what you've done took; you've got to ask for it. Well, now, at the end of twelve months you ask for it. There's no provision here when you'll ever get it; don't say one word about when those refunds will be paid; no limitation. They didn't put that six months formula on this refund. Read it. Oh, yeah, if they want a little relief, we've got to have it in six months. But if they get those poor little ole devils' increase out there, they can give it back to them in twelve months, eighteen months, fourteen months, or thirty months, or forty months. Read the provision. You've just got to ask for it in twelve--twelve long months. Why didn't they say that we shall promptly return your refunds in case the rate's denied within the same six months period that they are so striving for in this article? Why didn't they do it? Is that fair? No. Well, in the event something would happen that this thing passes, I've got an amendment that says they are going to give it back in six months--'cause they're six month babies--and they're going to pay a little interest on it. Let me say here and now, one of the biggest problems I have representing my people is trying to get them a telephone. There's not a day, or week, of my life that somebody don't call me about "try to get me a telephone."

Now, if you are going to allow this to happen, and you are going to write language like this into our constitution, you might as well say that any time the courts don't act on a workman's compensation, or any other case, go ahead and give them what they sued for. Then later, if you make a mistake, give it back to them--bond it or do something else. Give it back to them. Is that right? Do you really think we ought to do that? Do you really think there's a chance to come to the legislature and say we want a raise, and you've got to give it to us within six months, or we automatically get it--school teachers or anyone else. That's what this language says. It circumvents what the people elected--three people in this state to decide on, and to look at the facts and to act on them. You are going to take away their power. I don't think it's right. I've got some good friends in the telephone business. Course, they haven't fed me lately; they heard how I was voting--which is all right with me. But, we'll work that out on down the road. But, I don't think it's right for them. I cannot conceive that a company as big as Southern Bell, could come before a body like this...intelligent people...and say to you that you elected a Public Service Commission, but, if they don't act in due time to suit us, just run over them, run by them, or run around them. If you start that in this state, they are going to be running around the courts; they are going to be running around the legislature, and every other public body. I am leaving the provisions where if they make an application, if they do not act within twelve months, then they go directly to the court. I'm leaving the provision in there where it can go to the highest court in the land and get it over with. That's the way I operate if I've got a claim; that's the way you operate if you've got a claim; that's the way you lawyers operate if you've got a client that's got a claim. I see nothing wrong with it.

I ask you to adopt my amendments.

Further Discussion

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise in support of the Rayburn amendment. Perhaps if we can ever consider discussion on what we have before us, we can arrive at an intelligent and reasonable decision.

Under the committee language, as has been so eloquently pointed out by Senator Rayburn, a rate can go into effect. If the commission does not act, this rate can become final without ever a public hearing being held. This, of course, is insidious and totally against the interest of the people of Louisiana. I think we can achieve that oh, so delicate balance that is sometimes necessary, by adopting the Rayburn amendment in that it does mandate the commission to act. It gives the utility some remedy in the event the commission does not act. Under the committee proposal, even if the commission does act, and disapproves the rate, it can go in effect with a bond. Now, I ask you...I ask you to please think. Did the people of Louisiana, did your constituents, send you up here to allow that to happen? Is this the reason they wanted a new constitution? Is this why? I seriously doubt it. I seriously doubt that they sent you up here so they could pay higher rates, even when their elected officials disapprove a rate. If they happen to move or change their residence, they'll never get that money back. Besides, they have to go through the bureaucratic process of making a claim. This is so terribly statutory, it isn't funny. We'd be so terribly irresponsible by adopting this committee language. I think the only reasonable way to handle this is by adopting the Rayburn language, and arriving at a compromise here. It's saying that "All right Public Service Commission. You have to decide it in twelve months. If you don't, the utility has a right to go on to the district court without benefit of your decision, and without a presumption against you." But, to allow the other things that this committee proposal has, is totally statutory. Besides that, it would be a bad statute--much less a constitutional provision. How is this going to work? Do all of you know? Have all of you thought about it? Have you talked to your people back home, if they like this? Who do you represent here? I ask you that again. Now, let's be reasonable, please.

Question

MR. BURSON

Mr. Duval, with the large number of functionally illiterate people that we have in our state, who have difficulty in reading and writing, do you reckon that the telephone company and the utility companies might get to keep a whole lot of the money that they realize from illegal rate increases?

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Burson, that's an excellent question. I think that particularly in my area, it would really be a problem because a lot of people can't read and write and wouldn't know what the heck to do to get their money back.

Further Discussion

MISS PERKINS

Ladies and gentlemen, I rise in opposition to the amendment before this convention. Let me first state that Sections 2 and 3, or the bonding provisions, are not to circumvent public officials in that if the Public Service Commission does their job, then they won't be circumvented if they render a decision. Now, admittedly under the committee proposal, they can do this, but as you will note, there are several amendments on your desk that are attempting to achieve justice. What will happen under this Roy amendment which will be coming up, if there's a denial, then there will be no right to put the schedule into effect. If there is an approval, it won't go into effect until the date that the commission assigns. Now, if the decision is not made within six months, then under Section 1 they can go ahead and take an appeal. Now, something else that the Senator spoke of was the burden being on the customer, under this section, to file for a refund of the excess charged him. You will also note in the Roy amendment that that burden will be put on the utility company. They'll not only have the burden of making the refund, but it also states "as provided by law", and if we provide it by law, the legislature would have the authority to set any interest rate or any other provision that you might particularly be concerned about. I'd also like to point out to you, ladies and gentlemen, that we're not talking about Southern Bell alone. This is a big utility company. I understand why you have made mention to them, but don't make your decision on the basis of Bell Telephone Company. We have a lot of small, privately owned--well, publicly owned--but utility companies in parishes. For instance, my parish is not under the Bell Telephone System. We are under a private company. Yes, exactly. The service is poor, but let me say this: possibly if they could put their rates into effect prior to or right after the six month's decision, then you could be or receive better service. In the rural areas, this is a major problem. The utility companies do not have the funds to expand. So, I strongly urge that you defeat this amendment and give this convention the time to discuss the Roy amendment and other amendments that will be fair to the utility companies.

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

Thank you.

Question

MR. DUVAL

Lynn, do you think if we adopt a provision in this convention that allows rates to go into effect without a hearing by the commission, it'll help the passage of this document?

MISS PERKINS

I will agree that there will be some problem, but I'm also saying this: that we are trying to be fair. In fact, the only way, when we consider these amendments, that that rate will go on and go into effect--remembering that it's being bonded, remembering that the utility company is going to have to make refunds for the excess charge--the only way it will go in is if your public officials don't do their job. Because if they render their decision, then the schedule won't just go into effect without hearings. I am sure that these gentlemen would attempt to be as conscientious as Commissioner Rayburn is.

Further Discussion

MR. ARNETTE

Perhaps I shouldn't get up here and speak in favor of the Rayburn amendment because I might be the kiss of death, but I think a few things ought to be said anyway. First of all, I voted against the Abraham amendment because I think it is fair to have the utility companies get a decision within twelve months. That's why I voted against his, but I'm in favor of the Rayburn amendment because it takes out many provisions that are not only statutory in nature, but very, very bad provisions. I'd like to list a few reasons. First of all, if after six months a rate goes into effect, it can remain in effect forever--not just for another six months, or not just for another year--but forever. If the Public Service Commission never decides that case, that rate goes into effect forever under bond. I don't think this is fair to either the people of the state or the utility company to have to pay such a bond. The next thing is, if it does go into effect and the Public Service Commission never renders a decision on it, that a citizen can never demand a hearing except possibly through a mandamus proceedings on the Public Service Commission. Next thing is: let's talk about refunds. Senator Rayburn pointed out very well what effect these refunds are going to have. You've got to file for a refund. Now, this is fine with certain things like maybe your telephone bill or something like this. Everybody has been talking about telephone companies. Well, let's consider maybe bus rates or something like this. You don't even have a record of when you rode on a bus, or when you shipped a package on a bus. A lot of you own businesses, and you have things shipped all the time on buses, railroads, all kinds of common carriers that are regulated by the Public Service Commission. You'd have to keep a record of every time that you spent money and what amount of it was in excess of the legal rates, and then you'd have to file for refund. Now, this is totally ridiculous. I'm not going to keep a record of every time that I ride on a bus somewhere, and maybe I was charged a nickel too much each time. Even if these rates do go into effect under bond, a lot of times you're never going to have a refund of all the money because nobody is going to remember a lot of times when they were charged an excess. Now, the next thing that was said was that we can clean this up with certain amendments. Well, I think that's the main thing that's wrong with this section because if we need to work out amendment after amendment after amendment to clean up the section, that just shows you how statutory in nature it is, and we ought to leave it up to the legislature. I think that's probably the main thrust of Senator Rayburn's amendment, and that's why I'm really in favor of it.

Question

MR. J. JACKSON

Mr. Arnette, when Miss Perkins was up there, I was concerned about a comment that the Senator made about the process of determining...at least one of the criteria for determining any rate increases and audit of certain financial records. The Senator indicated that it would take more than the six months to ascertain if, in fact, this rate increase was necessary. So, my question is to you has that been a problem in the past of the Public Service Commission, to your knowledge, not deciding because they did not have the information?

MR. ARNETTE

Representative Jackson, I really don't have any idea about that. We had some testimonies that the commission needed more people, but I don't know if there's a six month cutoff date or an eight month cutoff date or a ten month cutoff date.

But, I think a year would be plenty long to render a decision. The thing that I quibble with is the fact that these rates would go into effect without a hearing ever being had on that particular provision. If the Public Service Commission never rendered a decision, I don't think the people, and even the utilities, would like that because they would have to have these rates under bond forever, not just for a certain period of time, for the next hundred and fifty years. I don't think it would help out a utility company to have to pay such a bond for that length of time.

Further Discussion

MR. JUNEAU

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I will make my remarks very brief. You know it seems to me that what we're talking about is that there has been a problem in the past with regard to utilities in getting the hearings held and rates established, and that may very well be correct. But, I submit to you what Mr. Rayburn did and what Paragraph (E) has done, even under the Abraham amendment, is give you that mandate that the commission shall render its final decision within twelve months from the date the application is filed. That's very clear. Now, you know a lot of discussion has transpired as to, you know, if you'll wait just a minute we got something better coming. I'm getting tired of waiting tomorrow, tomorrow and tomorrow. Let's get the issue before the floor. The discussion has been with regard to the Roy amendment. That is the one that says that if they don't act in six months, it'll be put into effect. Well, now let me just give you an example of what can and very likely could occur. Southern Bell applies for a rate increase which is extremely complex. The auditing engineering problems are extremely complex. That is filed on January 1, 1974; it is docketed on the docket of the Public Service Commission. They say that under our docket we have hundreds and literally thousands of cases. This case will be heard within three months for a public hearing. That's reasonable. I consider that a current docket, and I think any lawyer here will say that's an extremely current docket. They commence having hearings on the third month. It is ascertained that there's a lot of information that's needed--not only from the point of expertise in auditing these engineering--but from the public as to what they think. They find it necessary to have hearings in the balance--in the rest of this state. It is found that those hearings, very likely, could go on for a period of two and a half months. The evidence is then assembled, and then it's six months and one day--one day--the Public Service Commission who was elected by this state says we do not think that the rate is correct. We disapprove the rate. Under the Roy amendment, and I submit to you, under any other amendment, that rate, even though disapproved, would be put into effect under a bond, and then the people have to wait till that issue is finally decided by the final court of jurisdiction in this state. I say that's wrong. I submit to you that the problem is that the telephone company in particular has sustained in this state, or has incurred in this state, as a time delay problem. I think that that ought to be cured, but that problem is cured by the mandate that within one year--one year--the decision has to be rendered by the Public Service Commission. If you'll look at Subparagraph (E), if it is not acted on in one year, they have got a right, an automatic right, to take an appeal. I submit to you that's much greater, much stronger than any right that you as a litigant have in any other civil action in this state. I submit to you that the Rayburn amendment is a good amendment. It's a mandate to do exactly what we are attempting to do, and I ask for your favorable consideration.

[Motion to limit debate on the Amendment to fifteen minutes adopted without objection.]

Further Discussion

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I just want to say that I just don't believe that the people who sat on this committee subjected themselves to the "steakitis" in writing this provision. I think they meant well; I think the provision goes too far, but I think that my amendment is better. I think that we ought to leave it there and just adopt my amendment later, that other people have endorsed. If you don't like some of the things in it, I think they ought to be amended also, and I think you ought to know a couple of things. Number one is: the law provides that this money, that one of the speakers spoke about, that the commission gives...the utility gets to keep in case it's reversed is not true. That money goes back to the state for any money that cannot be refunded to people. The other thing is in answer to Mr. Juneau's question about the number of months it takes, as you know that under Provision (B) the commission itself has the power to make rules. Now, to me this is just like a person applying for a bank charter. When you apply for that bank charter, it is not considered filed, your application, until you have furnished the banking commission with everything with respect to the necessity or the requirements for issuing a charter. It's a very simple in this case what the commission can do. It can say that any time a utility company comes in, or a carrier, and requests a rate increase, it is mandatory that you furnish to us at that time that you file your application an audit prepared not only by you but an audit prepared by people whom we want to prepare it and for which you must pay. You all are not being told all the story. The commission has the right to make a utility company, or a carrier, subject its books to an audit by an independent auditor or someone appointed by the commission and charge the carrier or utility company for the charges of that auditor as well as any other experts. Now, the commission has the power to make rules, and it can say that your application is not considered filed with this commission until such time as you have furnished us with the audit that we want, and by our people at our request, and all other information that we need. At that time the six months begins to run. I ask you why shouldn't now a five-man commission, that we have allotted for, be able to decide a case within six months. It's got everything before it. If they can't decide it to obviate this company being able to bond it--as some of them suggest is so unreasonable--it can simply say on the fifth month and the twenty-ninth day, no, you don't get it, and there's no bonding of anything. The Supreme Court generally can decide cases of as great a complexity as this in less than that amount of time. The appeals that ultimately go to the courts of this state are decided in less than six months. You've got an independent commission, which has no other job but to decide those cases that come before it. I submit to you that they can do it. I don't disagree with some of the comments Sixty Rayburn has made. I'm just saying that I think you ought to know what all the facts are, and that there is a need for some type of constitutional provision with respect to the Public Service Commission and its powers.

Delegate Reeves in the Chair

Questions

MS. ZERVIGON

Chris, it's getting late, and we're all kind of tired. Where does it say that the money that's not refundable to customers goes to the state?

MR. ROY

That's provided by law at this time.

MS. ZERVIGON

Well, is there any reason, then, why we shouldn't provide everything else by law? That's a pretty crucial thing.

MR. ROY

Well, Ms. Zervigon, we've already provided in the first part of the article or the section, if you read it, that as provided by law, certain things may be done. My amendment even says that.

MR. DUVAL

Chris, being an old Jacksonian Democrat that I know you are,...

MR. ROY

Wait, what?

MR. DUVAL

Being a Jacksonian Democrat, as I think you are, if you went back to Rapides Parish and you said--you talked to all the citizens there--and you said, "You know what I did? I got a provision in there that if the Public Service Commission which you elected disapproves the rate, it still goes into effect, and you got to pay that higher rate." Do you think they'd say, "Hey, that's a good idea," or do you think they'd say, "You lost your mind?"

MR. ROY

I thought my amendment said, if they disapprove the rate within six months, they don't have to bond it.

Further Discussion

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Acting Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, Mr. Speaker, or Mr. Chairman, if you would stop me at three minutes, I would like to yield two minutes of my time to the Chairman. He'd like to say a few words on this also, I understand.

Further Discussion

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Acting Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, certainly it's a little difficult to get up here and oppose such friends that I've had that are here lobbying for this position, and I'll tell you why. It looks like they always send the nice guys down when they want to do something like this, and it makes it difficult. But, so be it, and you've got to do what you've got to do. I think the problem lies--and we've changed that problem already. You had a three-man commission, and that three-man commission rotated the chairmanship. That three-man commission was elected on a basis of every two years, see. They ran for six, and they were reelected. When the chairman was running, if he had a rate increase come up, they probably held it off, and I think that's probably what happened in a lot of cases. You now have a five-man commission. I think you've cured some of the evils. But I think if we go ahead and adopt this, we're putting in more evils than we've cured. We keep talking about the telephone company. Let me say to you here that I was amazed to find out how many people are regulated that this will effect. As a legislator, we get these notices from the Public Service Company. My bus line applies for rates; the trucking industry applies for rate increases. The other electric companies apply for rate increases. The bar pilots--do you remember five years ago or eight years ago or ten years ago in the legislature all the problems we had with the bar pilots, and we had to transfer them from the rate making body of the legislature over to the Public Service. They've done a good job there. Can you imagine these people when they find out that in six months, gentlemen and ladies, if you don't rule on me, my rate goes into effect. Now, that's the way I read this--not the telephone companies only--everybody who's regulated by the Public Service that applies to rates. Now, if I'm wrong, I wish one of these bright boys would get up here and correct me. But, I think I'm right. I also realize this: I know that a lot of you have said, "I'm committed to this", but I know that you're honorable enough that if you know all the facts, that you'll get uncommitted if it's going to do a.... be a detriment to this state. I think, and I've told the people that have asked me, I could not go along with a six month mandatory provision. I think it's bad.

Well, I think we're tampering with a balance of government here, and I think that if we went ahead and just said every agency that asks rate increase--the multimillion dollar insurance companies. I asked Sherman Bernard: he said, "Heck no," he said, "They've got to wait just like until we give it to them." These things are not automatic; don't make this automatic. I ask you to vote for Mr. Rayburn's amendment, and I yield the rest of my time to the Chairman.

Further Discussion

MR. HENRY

Mr. Chairman and members of the convention, it disturbs me a great deal if we don't adopt the Rayburn amendment because there're too many "what iffers" in this proposal that's being submitted today. What iffer we adopt it like it is; now, we foul it up and we lock it in the constitution. I don't think it's been thought out enough--and it's no discredit to the committee at all--but some of the questions that were just raised by Senator Nunez; some of the things that were pointed out by Mr. Duval; some of the things that were brought out by Senator Rayburn confuse me and they concern me, and we're talking about something that's awfully serious right now. If we adopt this, we're going to have to live with it because if this constitution is adopted--and I think it will be, and I believe you do, too--we're going to have to live with it from now on. Far too much in this convention we've legislated; far too much we've been lobbied, and lobbying is alright. Lobbying is fine, but I think we find ourselves in a situation here this afternoon, wanting to get through and wanting to go home and wanting to work toofast, and maybe just saying let's lie down and go to it because they were nice and because they are friends of ours, and let's help them out. Well, we're going to think about those people back in those little House districts and those little Constitutional Convention districts that we're representing because the people that are promoting this don't have their business in shape. They have not successfully explained to us the "what iffers" that are contained in this proposition. If it's that good, the legislature can take care of it. I know you've heard this probably far too much, but I don't want to take a chance on something that's this important. I don't want to take another chance on defeating this document. I ask you to vote for the Rayburn amendment so that we can get on with the business at hand and not take another unnecessary dangerous chance at killing this constitution. Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I hear the cries of moving the question, and I would do it except I was so astonished by the last vote that I feel like I have to bring out a few points here. Points that those of you in here, who fought so hard for agriculture, stop and think what automatic rate increases on railroads and truck lines are going to do to your people that's living in agricultural areas, like the one I come from where they ship all their rice to market on freight cars. For goodness sakes, the property tax issue was peanuts compared to this. Those of you here that were concerned and voiced great concern about the poor homeowner and the property tax that he has to pay, do you think that he's going to appreciate a thirty or forty dollar a month utility increase? That's what you're talking about. In other words, all the company's got to do is propose a rate increase, no matter how ridiculous it is, and they get it automatically if the commission doesn't decide. I submit to you that the commission regulating every truckline that hauls interstate, the railroads, the public transportation--the bus lines, taxi cabs--as well as all the electric utilities and the telephone companies, they'd have a stack of rate increase requests you couldn't see over if this went into effect. They wouldn't be able to decide them in six years if they wanted to and do an intelligent job on it. You're asking for so much trouble in this thing that it's simply unbelievable that we could seriously sit here and pass this committee proposal the way it is. If we take the Rayburn amendment and adopt it, as far as I'm concerned, we will have removed, certainly, the most objectionable material--the automatic rate increase facet of it. It mystifies me at the end how you could have been so concerned, as we have been on many, many votes in this convention, about the rights of the poor people, of the ordinary man, or whatever we want to call him, and saddle him here with automatic utility rate increases, is something that each and every person in this state is subject to whether they're on social security, welfare, or what have you. I plead with you, if you've done anything since this convention started, think about this amendment and adopt it because if you don't, we're in serious trouble.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

Questions

MR. CHATELAIN

Mr. Burson, you mentioned the fact that there'd be an automatic raise. After what period of time, sir?

MR. BURSON

Six months.

MR. CHATELAIN

I'd like to ask you this question, sir. Number two, how in this age of inflation and how could the average man operate a business if he had to wait six months to get relief the way things are going these days?

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chatelain, the only answer I can make to you, sir, is that before the age of public utility regulation, that farmers in the midwest--what caused the creation of railroad commissions in most states were that the utility rates were so prohibitive they couldn't ship their produce to market. If you allow this to stand, I predict to you that the Public Service Commission will be so deluged with rate increases they won't be able to rule on them if they want to rule on them, and they'll automatically go into effect no matter how outrageous, how ridiculous they are. I point out in this regard that this would affect all the trucks that bring the gasoline around, for instance. We're talking about...we're affecting so many things here it's inconceivable. We couldn't even name them all; you have to sit down and think about it for awhile.

MR. KEAN

Mr. Burson, there's been a lot of talk about the fact that the commission had delayed in making its decisions, and therefore, we ought to make it possible for someone to put something into effect in six months. But if I read this proposal correctly, even if the commission was diligent in its efforts and got all the information together and, based on that information, denied the request for the rate increase, the utility could nonetheless put that increase into effect pending final court action?

MR. BURSON

Absolutely. Only...

Closing

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I'm going to try to be very brief. The language contained in this proposal affects far more than just the telephone companies. I know that they have been most active here. I have had no truckers, no taxicab operators, no wrecker operators, who are now under the Public Service Commission, or no other utilities to contact me about this proposal. I want to say to you people from the rural section, the language contained herein proposes the rates on hauling all of your commodities--rice, soy beans, cucumbers, strawberries, tomatoes, and many other things. I do not think that we should tell, to some people who's elected by the people to look over the rates, that if you don't act within six months we are going to put them into effect. Maybe you want to do that; I don't. I don't want to let my Public Service Commissioner say that "I didn't want your rates increased, but old Rayburn voted for a proposal where I couldn't do nothing about it and they increased them because old Rayburn gave them the authority and the right to do that." Maybe you won't answer those questions. I don't have the answer. I've been in a lot of campaigns and I voted for a lot of things that I really didn't know what I was voting for. But, I'll tell you what, when I got to running I found out a little more about them. I want to say here and now that I don't think this convention was called to take away the rights of elected public officials to do their job. Once this is started you could say to the governor of this state that if the Sheriff's Association applied for a raise--the clerks, the school teachers, and all the state employees, and if you don't give it to them it shall go into effect automatically after they request it and six months had lapsed. We are not writing a constitution to put these provisions in it. Why are those people here asking us to do this? Are they afraid? Are they scared? Do not they want to look at the facts? The law now says that before the Public Service can increase the rates or decrease it, they've got to have an audit made to find out whether they are in financial trouble or not; you're going to take that right away from them. I talked to my commissioner and he tells me that in some cases it takes six to eight months to get an audit completed before they make a final decision. I don't want to take that right away from him because the people elected him; I hope you don't. I have no quarrel with the telephone company. I've got some of my best friends that work with them and for them. But, I'll say this, they embarrass me when they ask me to write this language in the constitution of our great state. They are operating here, they are business people like all other business people in this state. Has any other business people come here and asked you for this right and this privilege? No, they haven't asked me.

All my amendment says is this: if they apply for a rate increase, if it's not acted on in twelve months, they go to the courts; that's what we have a court for. If you file a lawsuit, the courts decided and they decide this.

...and, I hope you adopt the amendments.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected:
52-53. Motion to reconsider.]

Further Discussion

MR. DUVAL

Fellow delegates, I urge you to please reconsider this very close vote which is so crucial to the fate of this constitution. I think the Rayburn amendment as it has been said certainly is fair to the utility companies in that it does mandate the commission to act within a certain time. But, it also mandates the very insidious proposal which allows rates to go into effect which have been disapproved by the commission. This constitution and the press, and the people will be...the people will raise such a furor about this you will never hear the end of it when you tell them they have to pay rates that have been disapproved by the elected commission. This vote is too close; it certainly demands reconsideration and I implore you to please vote to reconsider it. One vote and I think the fate of this constitution can ride on this vote.

Questions

MR. BOLLINGER

Stan, will the passage of the Rayburn amendment preclude the offering of any other members to put some language in?

MR. DUVAL

No, it would not.

MR. BOLLINGER

Will it just not delete the parts that scare so many delegates?

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

MR. DUVAL

That is correct.

MR. JENKINS

Stan, I'm wondering if an attorney wants to increase his prices or if the State-Times here in Baton Rouge, which is a monopoly in the daily newspaper market in this city, or if a local retailer wants to increase his prices in an inflationary situation, does he have to wait six months, or a year, or years, and years while things are in court to do that?

MR. DUVAL

No, sir, Mr. Jenkins, he does not, but utilities in Louisiana have been historically regulated because of the many abuses of the past. Moreover, I might answer your question as an attorney, when he represents a client and he doesn't get a decision in six months, he doesn't get the money either; that's another thing.

MR. JENKINS

You say there have been many abuses in the past. Haven't the abuses in the past been the political demagoguery on the part of some of the people on these regulatory commissions who have artificially held prices down and thus prevented people from getting the service that they could have gotten?

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Jenkins, the reason for a commission was because of the monopolistic utilities which had usurious rates, and I think the people of Louisiana would agree with that.

Further Discussion

MR. CHATELAIN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I wish you would give me about three minutes of your time and I'm going to speak to you from my heart. I think that you have seen displayed here this afternoon some of the greatest political pressure ever spoken, some of the greatest oratory, the rhetoric you've heard here this afternoon is...you have no equal to this. You've seen the greatest chairman a convention could ever have step down from the Chair and speak to you and it was all this pressure we have withstood. I say to you, let it be as it is. Let's not reconsider this. I say the people have spoken. You've heard words about steaks and feeding people. I think this is ridiculous and a personal affront to me and an insult to me and many of you, that they claim that the people took us out to feed us. I'm not speaking for the telephone company; I'm speaking for many people in this state. For twenty-seven years of my life I operated a transportation company in this state and I know the problems with the Public Service Commission. I say to you that they can and they should render a decision in six months time; that's what we are talking about. I don't buy this poppycock that they are feeding us steaks, every delegate here can buy his own food, but we still had the common decency to at least listen to the people. The people here from my parish, from my district, are decent people, people who serve in capacities of chambers of commerce presidents, and other great offices in the parish of Lafayette trying to render service to people. "Who owns" the utility companies in this state? The people. Don't the collective people have a right as the individual people have rights? I pose that question to you. Don't people have a right to get together and form little corporations and it so happens they have to go under the province of the Public Service Commission? Don't they have rights? Let's think about that for a while.

Further Discussion

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I urge you to reconsider the vote on the Rayburn amendment. In answer to Mr. Chatelain, of course, the people don't own these companies, the stockholders own them. But, what's more important, they are monopolies and that's why they're regulated at all. I can't just go out and open up a bus line, or a truck line, or a railroad freight line in Louisiana if I want to. I can't just go out and open up a telephone company if I want to; I've got to be certified by the Public Service Commission. If I've got a truck line, I've got to get approval for the routes that I want to carry freight on before I can carry so much as a stalk of bananas on that line. Now, I urge you again, for goodness sakes, consider what you are doing here. I know we've had some effective lobbying on this thing and let me hasten to add, lobbying is part of the American political process, and I don't blame people for trying to protect their interest. But, I'm just trying to tell you, as Mr. Perez did earlier, that they went overboard in protecting their interest here and after all, we are supposed to look primarily to the public interest and it just...I can't understand how people who have been so concerned about the property tax and the effect that it would have on the small homeowner could now be voting in favor of allowing that same small homeowner to get exorbitant increases in the rates on his utilities. I submit to you that homeowner might be a lot happier to pay an extra fifty or a hundred dollars on his property tax than he would be to pay that on a month for his utilities. There is no way in the world that you are going to avoid this eventuality. If you think for a minute now you're sitting in this building today and you are insulated to a great extent from discussion with anybody except the delegates who are here and the people in the back, whatever interest they may be representing, but if you think for a minute that when this story hits the street tomorrow that you're not going to get some telephone calls from your constituents wanting to know whether you were momentarily bereft of your senses when you allowed an automatic rate increase on freight rates, telephone rates, electric rates, and every other thing that's controlled by the Public Service Commission in this state to go into effect that I'll be very surprised, because I know a lot of things that affect people a lot less...I would simply conclude by asking you again to consider not only the wisdom of this policy but whether or not you want to see this frozen into a state constitution where it would take a constitutional amendment to change it. For goodness sakes, you know we have been acting like a legislature an awful lot, but we ain't one. Whatever we submit, if it's adopted--although I'll tell you frankly that if this is in there when it goes out, you're looking at one man that's going to be on the street opposing it. I'll tell you flat out and frankly as I know how; I don't believe in being devious about it at all. I'm sorry if that upsets anybody, but if it does it will just have to upset you because it's a fact. But, the point of it is, if it is accepted it will take a constitutional amendment to change this six month period of time that you are freezing in the constitution. Now, we haven't frozen periods of time in for people to file workman's compensation suits or anything else that involves bread and butter. If there is anything that involves bread and butter more than utility rate-making, I don't know what it is. That's the whole justification for having it regulated at all in the first place.

Point of Order

MR. O'NEILL

Point of order, Mr. Chairman. I thought we were speaking on reconsideration.

MR. HENRY

We are, but usually in the course of the discussion on reconsideration it opens the whole area to debate, Mr. O'Neill.

Questions

MR. FULCO

Mr. Burson, do you think it's fair to cause any business, telephone companies or any kind of business, to have to wait twenty-four months for a decision?

MR. BURSON

Mr. Fulco, I've represented workman's compensation claimants that didn't have a dime coming in that have had to wait for twenty-four months for a decision. I think Ma Bell is doing well enough to be able to afford to wait that long if it's necessary; yes.

MR. FULCO

Well, do you think it's necessary?

MR. BURSON

It depends on the particular circumstances of the case. If it's a complicated case, it may be necessary, to find the facts in that length of time.

MR. FULCO

Don't you think that by waiting that long that we are causing our own people to suffer, to be deprived that much longer for service?

MR. BURSON

I haven't ever heard anybody claim that they were deprived because their utility rates weren't raised; no, sir. We are keeping the one year period in under the Rayburn amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. TAPPER

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I'm going to ask you not to reconsider, but to vote to lay it on the table. I would like to point out just a few things: (1) it was said that this was carried by or defeated by one vote. Well, let me remind you that we have adopted many, many measures here by one vote, not only by one vote but I've seen measures here that were not adopted, they were ties and the Chairman has had to cast a vote to break the tie; those are in the constitution. I have heard someone say here that we are dealing with the people's rights. Well, the gentleman that was here just a little while ago fought bitterly against the right of the individual to be represented in the grand jury when his life could be taken away from him and yet we went ahead and voted on that, and I think that was by one vote, so, let us not quibble over the one vote difference. But, on the subject at hand, we're talking about pennies on the part of the individual, don't let anybody confuse you on that. But we're talking about millions on the part of the utility. Now, what they want you to believe is that we are doing them a favor, we are doing these companies a favor by regulating them; they say they have a monopoly. Why do they have a monopoly? Is there anyone to compete with them? Is there anyone who wants to compete with them? We are doing them a favor by regulating them. Anyone else in private business can raise his prices, can raise his commodity and if you want to buy it, you're going to have to pay the price. Now, the people are crying, and hollering, and screaming to get rid of the regulation, get rid of the milk commission; you remember that, the milk commission. Yes, that's a regulation and if you don't think that's a monopoly just talk to your constituents. So, I ask you, let us not in the... be hoodwinked into believing that we are helping the little man by stifling decisions that sometimes take as high as twenty-three months. All we are doing by that is keeping people who need service from getting service. I urge that you vote against reconsidering and vote to lay this matter on the table and let's move on with the business of this convention. I will not yield.

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

Further Discussion

MR. JUNEAU

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, as indicated I think this is a very serious issue but let me point out one factor that I don't think has been brought out. You know a statement was made from this microphone, forty-two other states have similar provisions. I defy anyone to come up here and tell us which of those forty-two states have put a six month provision in the constitution. Now, let me offer this for your consideration. Let's say that two years from now--two years--we find that six months is unworkable because they can't get the information to make the decision and that's the reason. How are you going to change that?

Wait just a minute, let me submit to you this one final point. What we are talking about, then, is are you going to automatically put something in effect in six years or are you willing to accept Senator Rayburn's amendment which mandates and says "it shall be decided in one year," and if that's not good enough, you've got an automatic right of repeal. I submit to you, what more do you want? If you want to sit out on a limb and say we've got the constitution that's got a six month provision in it, you explain it because I frankly can't explain it. I'll yield to questions.

Questions

MR. DUVAL

Pat, this...even if the Rayburn amendment is adopted, the law is changed in that the Public Service Commission is mandated to decide within one year; isn't that right?

MR. JUNEAU

That's exactly...Mr. Duval, the problem has been--and that's what's been overlooked--there is no time requirement under present law as to when they've got to rule. The Rayburn amendment puts a one year time limitation on that; that's the point.

MR. WILLIS

Mr. Juneau, don't you think that the constitution is the place to remedy bad experiences in government?

MR. JUNEAU

I don't think that the constitution, Mr. Willis, can project into the future between three months, four months, six months, and seven months as to what's appropriate; no, sir, I don't believe that.

MR. WILLIS

Don't we gauge the future by the past, what's the present?

MR. JUNEAU

Yes, sir, I think we have taken care of that, Mr. Willis, because Mr. Rayburn has said in one year you'll make a decision, so I think we've taken care of that problem.

MR. WILLIS

Let me ask you this next question. Don't you think that we are forgetting and are oblivious of the provision previously adopted to the effect that the commission can make reasonable rules and regulations, and that those rules and regulations could be, "Mr. Public Utility when you come for a decision, you put all your chips on the table"? Don't you think then we don't have this loss of time in that six months and that to say that decision makers cannot make a decision in six months is rather ludicrous?

MR. JUNEAU

When a company or, as in a lawsuit, Mr. Willis, is asked to put all their cards on the table and ask for something in the neighborhood of a . . . million dollar increase, don't you think and hasn't experience shown, that you have to go back and get more information? I submit to you that that's about the case in eighty percent of the cases that come before the commission.

MR. JENKINS

Pat, you know I'm concerned about who is doing the regulating here. Isn't it true that the legal profession is regulated by lawyers, the medical profession is regulated by physicians, right on down on the line? But, in the case of these particular categories of enterprise, they are regulated by the customers' elected representatives. How would it be if all the lawyers had their clients elect a board to regulate lawyers? What would be the state of the legal profession, do you think?

MR. JUNEAU

I submit to you, Mr. Jenkins, because you are not talking about the same thing. I would gladly accept, as an attorney, the same benefits that we have under expropriations and so forth that's been afforded the public utilities in this state, so it's not the same thing.

MR. JENKINS

Don't you think when we have this situation where the customers of a business elect those people who will regulate that business that we be particularly careful to build in safeguards so that that business cannot be abused?

MR. JUNEAU

That's right, Mr. Jenkins, and that's entirely correct. I submit to you, you do that with a one year provision and you have circumvented that by turning back around and say "Even if you can't make a decision in six months and you don't have the information that we are going to automatically put that rate into effect." It does violence to me of what we are trying to do in this constitution in putting a six month provision in the constitution.

MR. JENKINS

But, you will admit that neither attorneys, nor retail dealers, or anyone else has to wait six months, or a year, or two years for some decision from some board. Don't you admit that?

MR. JUNEAU

I admit that, that's correct. As I said, this convention has decided there's a distinction between a private individual and a public utility.

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

[Motion to limit debate on the motion to reconsider to fifteen minutes adopted: 64-28.]

Further Discussion

MR. ASSEFF

Mr. Chairman, delegates, I resent some of the statements made from this podium as if some of us are "ogres" for voting the way we did. Let us argue on the merits of the proposal. I can understand a difference of opinion. However, I don't like being threatened and I don't like a lot of things that have been patched. It was said, for example, that the proposal was poorly drafted. The proposal was considered by two committees of this convention and we agreed on the drafting and it was done with the aid of a law professor. Two, it was said that we were wined and dined. It is very apparent that I was left out of something because I was neither wined nor dined. I don't think I saw any wine. It also was said that we were momentarily deranged. I assure you I was not deranged momentarily or permanently. However, I oppose the Rayburn amendment. I urge you not to reconsider. Is it fair to delay and delay and delay? The purpose is to force the Public Service Commission to act and reasonably promptly; after all, the employees need to know what to expect. I see no reason for the commission to delay it. I came here an independent and I shall leave here one. However, I do believe in fair play. I urge you to reject the Rayburn amendment and let us clarify any points which anyone says is not fair play. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, delegates.

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

Further Discussion

MR. LOWE

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, contrary to many that's come before this mike, I find it difficult to get emotional about this problem because I don't really believe it's an emotional problem. I can frankly say that I'm not upset about those that criticize those delegates that voted one way or the other; we have a right to do that. I'm not upset, but I can frankly say I know how I voted and I know why I voted the way I voted; I have no regrets; I'll continue to vote that same way on this issue. We have a problem that we are trying to correct in this constitution that will probably never get corrected any other way and there's been a lot of things subjected into the arguments from steaks to people that don't know what they are doing. I think that everyone that voted on this issue knows what they are doing. Now, there's a couple of arguments that we had about the short time of six months. Well, we know that the rules are there for the Public Service Commission to set and those people that come under this Public Service Commission have to abide by it. Now, accounting is not an exact science, not to the penny, but accounting is a science; don't forget it. The free enterprise system that we work under evolves around accounting because we are able to tell investors and everyone interested in what's happening what the profits of a corporation is. If we couldn't tell them that, the free enterprise system wouldn't work. So, the Public Service Commission can mandate those people that come under their jurisdiction to furnish information and furnish the type of information that they want, they--the Public Service Commission--want. Now, you know and I know that once you have that information and you are satisfied that you have it all, six months starts to run if that's the rules of the game. Now, there is adequate time in that six month's time for any reasonable, prudent man, or group of men, to make a decision, and I'm not concerned about that. I'm concerned that maybe later on it might be too long. We are living in a sophisticated society, people can go broke in a month; they can go broke in a lot less than six months. I'm not concerned that once the facts are there that people can't make decisions. So, I'm not concerned about any of those arguments and I think that's the answer to the six months question. So, I'm here to tell you that I'm satisfied with the vote that we had. I hope that we don't reconsider. I hope that we lay it on the table and in the interest of time, I'll answer no questions.

Further Discussion

MR. ABRAHAM

Let me make a couple of points in answer to Mr. Willis' question to Mr. Juneau as to the rules and regulations that the Public Service Commission can make or require them to bring information in. Well, Mr. Willis, they can make all the regulations they want to requiring them to bring the information in, but there is nothing, nothing to prevent the utility from just not bringing the information, because all they've got to do is wait six months and they are going to get their raise into effect, so why should they bring it in? But, the thing I wanted to ask you people is, think what we have done now. We've placed a limit on our elected officials. We've placed a limit on a property tax. We are not allowing our elected officials to determine how much taxes they need in order to run our affairs and provide the services for us. Now, these people provide service for us too, just like utilities. We've placed a limit on license tax; we've frozen that into the constitution. We've placed a limit on the income tax. We have limited our elected officials in every way so that they can't tax us and these are the people who are supposed to provide services for us. Now, we are about to turn right around and say, O.K., no limit on the utilities. They can get their rate increase, they can charge anything they want. How can we reconcile these two positions, they are exactly a hundred and eighty degrees apart? I ask you to just think about this. I think we should reconsider this amendment and let's get this trash out of here.

Questions

MR. ZERVIGON

Mack, there's something that troubles me terribly. I've watched rate-making...rate-setting bodies trying to set rates; it's a terribly complicated thing. Is it your opinion that if the periods of time we've set in here are too short and we've left no flexibility, that the only option open to the Public Service Commission is to tell everybody if there's a backlog on the docket, no, tell them no and then they would have to start the procedure all over again? Can we be certain that we are doing a favor even to the people who are asking for this procedure?

MR. ABRAHAM

That's correct, Mary. There is no assurance that even this time limit will do it.

MRS. ZERVIGON

And, then the only option left open is just for the Public Service Commission to say no, and we are back where we started, just about with almost no decision at all; isn't that correct?

MR. ABRAHAM

Not only that, but do you know what position this places the Public Service Commission in? All they've got to do is say no to everything without having a hearing or anything else, the rates go into effect and the Public Service Commission can sit back and say "Look, you all have tied my hands in the constitution."

MRS. ZERVIGON

Thank you.

Point of Order

MR. STINSON

Yes. My point of order is we should instruct the former Chairman to get his seat and not be politicking all over the floor. He's been standing here and going all over. He's over there now talking to Mr. Chehardy.

[Quorum Call: 92 delegates present and a quorum.]

Personal Privilege

MR. STINSON

I rose because Mr. Henry was still going around talking to people after you ordered him to sit down, and I don't think he should be exempt from our rules.

Point of Information

MR. RAYBURN

Since all delegates have a right to vote and walk among the other delegates--they've been doing it ever since I've been here--why should the Chairman be excluded? After all, he represents some people, also.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Rayburn, no delegate is prohibited from walking around and collecting votes in a very quiet manner; but, if anyone is going to disturb other delegates and disturb the convention and congregate in small groups, that's what I'm obligated to call down. Thank you, Mr. Rayburn, and thank you, Mr. Stinson.

Further Discussion

MR. SMITH

Mr. Chairman, I think we've heard enough speaking. I think they're all inebriated by the exuberance of their verbosity. I've been wanting to use that quite a while.

MR. CASEY

Would you repeat that, Mr. Smith?

MR. SMITH

I say I think all these speakers were inebriated by the exuberance of their verbosity. Mr. Willis taught me that. Anyway, I think we've heard enough from both sides. We've all made up our mind, and I....

[Previous Question ordered.]

Chairman Henry in the Chair

Point of Information

MR. TAPPER

I think the Acting Chairman said Senator Rayburn has a right to close.

A point of information or order: What is on the floor?

MR. HENRY

The motion to reconsider, which you made and you have the right to....

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

You're both incorrect. Mr. Duval made the motion to reconsider, and he has the right to close.

Point of Information

MR. O'NEILL

Mr. Chairman, the question is not whether to table the motion to reconsider?

MR. HENRY

No, the delegates just voted to table the motion to reconsider. No. There was no motion to table the motion to reconsider.

Closing

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, Mr. Smith's remark was probably well-taken. I guess I just consider this a very serious thing and something that requires a lot of thought. I certainly don't blame the utility companies for attempting to help their position. I think the constitution is not a place to put such a one-sided proposal in. I think one thing we've all failed to talk about and, perhaps, emphasize enough: Even if the Public Service Commission decides in one month, against the utility companies, their rate still goes in effect. There's no way you can justify that. I know you realize that, and I know you will vote for reconsideration.

Questions

MR. ALEXANDER

Delegate Duval, you say their rates will go into effect after six months?

MR. DUVAL

No, sir, I said: Even if the commission decides in one month from the time of filing, the rate goes into effect, and the people have to pay the increased rate, even though their elected commission decided against the utility company. That is what it says. If the commission disapproves the rate--it's what it says--if the commission disapproves the rate, the rate goes into effect under bond. That's what it says. Now, you read it.

MR. ALEXANDER

Oh, no, I think you're incorrect.

MR. ARNETTE

Mr. Duval, I have to admit I do agree with your interpretation of that particular point. But, don't you think what's going to happen--if we don't pass Senator Rayburn's amendment--is that the Public Service Commission will just deny all rate increases and say, "Well, I didn't raise your rates or anything, and I'm safe politically; and, yet, I didn't hurt the utilities too much because they can put it in after six months"?

MR. DUVAL

That's a good point, Mr. Arnette.

In answer to the question, it says: "If the commission disapproves the proposed increase, in whole or in part, the carrier or utility may place and continue the schedule in effect under the bond or security." I think any first grader can understand that language.

MISS PERKINS

Mr. Duval, did you know that your interpretation of the committee proposal is correct?

MR. DUVAL

Yes, ma'am.

MISS PERKINS

Did you also know that there would be amendments that would change the committee proposal with reference to this?

MR. DUVAL

Well, I think this amendment gets this bad language out now. It doesn't preclude anybody else from bringing in an amendment to let it stand on its own.

MISS PERKINS

Doesn't it delete the entire two sections--(2) and (3)?

MR. DUVAL

It deletes (3) and (4), but it doesn't prevent any amendment to this section--to this paragraph.

MISS PERKINS

Thank you.

MR. HAYES

Mr. Duval, is there a limit to what the utility company can propose and put into effect?

MR. DUVAL

No.

[Record vote ordered.]

Point of Information

MR. NUNEZ

Just please explain it: that red and green mean--oh, go all you want; just please explain it. I would make that request of the Chairman.

MR. HENRY

The gentleman moved to reconsider the vote by which the Rayburn amendment failed to pass. If the group does not reconsider the vote at this time--does not vote to reconsider the vote--then, the Rayburn amendments are dead.

[Motion to reconsider rejected: 50-54.]

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

Mrs. Warren sends up the following amendments:

Amendment No. 1. On page 6, line 1, immediately after the word "decision" and before the word "on" insert the following: "after a public hearing".

Amendment No. 2. On page 6, line 15, immediately following "resort." delete the remainder of the line and delete lines 16 and 17 in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "After the final rejection of a proposed rate increase, the applicant shall refund all monies paid pursuant to any increase placed in effect pending final approval."

Explanation

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I know all of you are saying: I want to be home for Christmas. So, I'm not going to be real long; I'm going to be real brief. I noticed in PAR's comment where they referred to "the present rules of Public Service provides for public hearings on utility requests or change in the rates of return earnings on their investments, but such hearings are not required by law. In order to assure the continuance of such hearings, the constitution should require public hearings on requests for change in the rates of return." This is what my amendment intends to do--to see that we have hearings, public hearings. My second amendment was: In the provisions where it said, "The provisions that any rate increase tentatively imposed would be under bond, subject to refund, would give consumers the corresponding protection against losses for an unjustified rate increase," they mention that the clause that requires refund claims to be filed within a year, however, would cause to be interpreted as putting the burden of initiating funds on the consumer. I wanted to take that burden off of the consumer and put it on the company. This is my amendment. I ask your approval. Thank you.

Questions

MR. ALARIO

Mrs. Warren, on your second amendment, you don't have a deadline as to how long the utility company has to refund the customer.

MRS. WARREN

No, I didn't, Mr. Alario; I wasn't up on it. As Mr. Rayburn says, "I didn't quite have my pants on"; but I would appreciate Mr. Rayburn and anybody else--Mr. Rayburn has an amendment, and also Mr. Roy has an amendment that I think would be good.

Point of Information

MR. ALARIO

Mr. Chairman, are the amendments divisible?

MR. HENRY

Yes, they're divisible, Mr. Alario.

Questions

MR. ARNETTE

Mrs. Warren, you have a provision saying these funds will be returned. Will they be returned automatically?

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

MRS. WARREN
Right. Without any burden on the consumer, that they would automatically come back.

MR. ARNETTE
Right. Suppose somebody...there's a rate increase, say, for a city bus system, or something like this, from, say, ten cents to fifteen cents. Are you going to require the bus system to keep a record of every extra nickel that each passenger rode? In other words, how will they refund this automatically? How will they know who to pay and how much to pay?

MRS. WARREN
Well, Mr. Arnette, I'm not quite sure. As I said to you, I took my action because I knew that we had left this out, and I wanted to be sure that we got something in here. I'd appreciate any help you can give me

MR. ARNETTE
But, Mrs. Warren, you do see the problem with your provision, don't you?

MRS. WARREN
Yes, Mr. Arnette, it is a problem, and I'm saying that you probably could help me.

MR. ARNETTE
I would if I could.

MRS. WARREN
Thank you.

MR. TATE
Mrs. Warren, have you checked to know what sort of things the commission handles without a public hearing that are sort of perfunctory applications that don't need a hearing? Have you checked to see what that might do to that, Mrs. Warren?

MRS. WARREN
No, Judge, I didn't. I think I told you, from the beginning, where I got my idea from. I thought it was a good one, and I thought I wouldn't let it pass. I know you're a little bit better than I am, so you can help me out. Help me, please.

[Division of the Question ordered. Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment No. 1 adopted: 86-11. Motion to reconsider tabled. Motion to suspend the rules to allow withdrawal of Amendment No. 2 adopted without objection. Motion to take up other orders rejected: 42-50.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER
On page 6, delete lines 5 through 17, both inclusive, in their entirety (Mr. Roy, we need to add: including all floor amendments thereto) and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"(2) If a proposed rate schedule is approved in whole or in part within six months, it shall become effective on the date established by the Public Service Commission order; if no decision is rendered within six months from the filing of any proposed rate schedule, it may be put into effect, as provided by law, subject to such protective bond or security requirements until final action by a court of last resort.

(3) If the proposed increase is finally disallowed, in whole or in part, the utility or carrier shall make refunds within one year after any final action, and as otherwise provided by law."

Explanation

MR. ROY
Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this amendment does about five things that, I think, most people were concerned about. First of all, it presents the present law which is if the commission makes a favorable ruling in favor or the rate increase, then it goes into effect, subject to the order of the commission: that is, whenever the commission declares it goes into effect. Now, the way the law presently is--and the way it works is--that within ten days of the order of the commission, any party--and that is anybody who's affected by it--has a right to ask for an injunction to either prevent the order from going into effect or not. If no injunction is asked for, if it is asked for and is defeated, then within ninety days thereafter, a person has a right to appeal. Now, so this thing provides that the commission would determine when the pay raise would go into effect. I think that's good because you may have a commission that decides 5 - 0 for a rate increase, and they can determine when is the best time to put it into effect. The other thing it does is, following the semicolon--and you may get into a philosophical discussion about it--but it's my judgment that, if you mandate that commission to act within six months--and if not, that rate increase may be bonded as provided by law--you'll see that, from the other amendment I had, that I now put the words "as provided by law" immediately following "effect" so that the legislature can deal with that particular aspect of the rate increase to some extent--if the commission fails to act. Now, we may argue about it, but it's still my judgment that the problem has been that the commission has not acted. The commission can make rules and regulations, as I said, saying that the filing of the application is when you furnish us with these six, five, four, three, ten things. Until that's done, you have not filed an application for a rate increase. That would be constitutional; it would be upheld. Thereafter, I think any commission of five people ought to, within six months, be able to make a decision. If they cannot make a decision, and if they want to prevent the utility company or carrier from having an automatic rate increase, then they simply deny--on the fifth month and twenty-ninth day--the rate approval. Once they rule adversely within the sixth month, there is no bonding of these provisions as the original provisions provided, which I was against. Now, it also provides, of course, that the "as provided by law" means what type bond you have, etc.--those things of a legislative nature. The third thing it does is: it provides, unequivocally, in number (3), that after a final decision, if the rate allowed has been now disallowed, in whole or in part, it makes it the obligation of the carrier or the utility company to make refunds. There's nothing about a person having to file a claim for his refund. The company is mandated to make the refund and to make it within one year, and "as otherwise provided by law," which will then allow the legislature to fool with that only with respect...the legislature will be able to do only one of certain things: it can set the amount of interest you will get on your refund: it can say how the refund will be made: that is, whether it's made in the form of a credit or whether it's made in a form of direct payment back to the consumer. But, the one thing the legislature may never do, without a constitutional amendment, is to make it incumbent upon the consumer, in some fashion or another, to have to file some type of claim for his refund. That's what it does. I move the adoption of the amendment.

Questions

MR. ABRAHAM
Chris, I believe you stated that, if the Public Service Commission waited until the twenty-eighth day of the fifth month and then disallowed the rate increase, then the utility could go to court.

MR. ROY
It can't bond the rate increase, but it simply allowed its appeal to the court.

MR. ABRAHAM
But, it cannot put the rate increase into effect: is that correct?

MR. ROY
No, it cannot.

MR. ABRAHAM
Now, what happens if the Public Service Commission, on the twenty-eighth day of the fifth month, rules that we will allow one-tenth of the rate increase to go into effect six months from this date? What position would you be in?

MR. ROY
The utility company may put that portion of the rate increase into law, if the Public Service Commission says, on a certain date; but the part that is denied, it has no recourse because it has been denied within the six months. Its only recourse is then an appeal.

MR. ABRAHAM
No, no, wait a minute. It says: if the rate schedule is approved "in whole or in part within six months." So, I have complied with this provision. I have approved in part, and I'm saying that if....

MR. ROY
Wait. Are you reading number (3)?

MR. ABRAHAM
No, I'm reading in this number (2). It says: "If a proposed rate schedule is approved in whole or in part within six months, it shall become effective on the date established by the Public Service Commission."

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

MR. ROY

That's a rate increase, man.

MR. ABRAHAM

So, I, as the Public Service Commission, am going to approve a part of this rate increase. I'm going to approve one-tenth of it. I'm going to say it goes into effect one year from this date. So, the utility now has no other recourse to the courts--do they?--because I have complied with your provision there.

MR. ROY

You don't understand the mechanics. Sure, they have recourse to an appeal in that case. They even have recourse to an injunction. What you did ask that you've forgotten to rebring up is the fact that the part that is denied within the six months cannot be bonded, but the part that is allowed--the rate increase that is allowed--the utility company can put it into effect and then appeal to the district court on the part that was disallowed. But, it cannot bond it and put that portion into effect.

MR. JUNEAU

Chris, as I read Subparagraph (1), we're mandating the commission that, within one year, these elected officials, they have to make a decision--isn't that correct?--even with your amendment.

MR. ROY

Shall render its final decision. Right.

MR. JUNEAU

Right. O. K. Then, we're turning back around in Paragraph (3), and we're saying if you don't render a decision in six months, that it's going to go into effect anyway. Isn't that right?

MR. ROY

If the carrier or the utility chooses to bind that portion that it will not rule on, yes.

MR. JUNEAU

O. K. Let me ask you this hypothetical situation. A rate is applied for on January 1; it's docketed three months later; the information which the commission has requested is allegedly furnished by a utility. It develops, though, that, in the opinion of the commission, that they have a lot more information; and because of the confrontation between the commission and the utility, it takes three months and one day--which would put us six months and one day--and in six months and two days, this elected body says: Rate is denied. Under your amendment, isn't it true--even under those circumstances--that the rate, at the option of the utility company, would still go into effect?

MR. ROY

Very plain, Mr. Juneau--you can read--it says, if after six months they have not ruled, that the carrier or the utility may bond it, subject to the provisions of law. So, you're right.

MR. JUNEAU

Yes. Right?

MR. ROY

You're right! I thought that was clear. But, the fact of the matter is, if they're not sure, all the commission has to do is to rule no on the fifth month and twenty-ninth day, and then cause them to go to the district court, at which time they can put in more evidence.

MR. JUNEAU

Mr. Roy, let me ask you this question. Why are we, on one hand, mandating the commission to rule within one year, and we turn back around and say: You can obviate that rule because we're going to tell you, under the constitution, in six months you're going to get it anyway?

MR. ROY

The reason that we are is because, in my judgment, most people see that sometimes the commission has sat when it should not have; and, as a result, the consumers suffer a lot when they're not able to get the services and the utilities they need because the company... The commission, on certain occasions, has not even considered something for eight or nine months, and they say: we need more material. It's sometimes been two and a half years before they ever get around to ruling on anything, under present law. That's not right.

MR. JUNEAU

All right. Mr. Roy, even under Mr. Rayburn's amendment, that wouldn't occur because there's a one-year time limitation. Isn't that right?

MR. ROY

I told you we could argue whether one year or six months, seven months, seven months-one day, you know....

MR. JUNEAU

One last question, Mr. Roy: If the experience of this state shows, in 1985, that six months--this magical figure of six months--is not adequate, how do we change that, Mr. Roy?

MR. ROY

Well, we can amend it, or the commission can simply act every time within the six months--like it should. If the experience shows that it's not in good in twelve months, like it has in the past, why do we keep it?

MR. JUNEAU

So, we'd have to go back to the people, possibly, for a constitutional amendment on a six-month provision?

MR. DUVAL

Chris, I heard you say it, but I merely wanted the intent for the record. In the event the commission would decide unfavorably within six months, the utility would have no right to bond, under this proposal; is that right?

MR. ROY

Absolutely right. No right to bond.

MR. DUVAL

Chris, it may not be clear to some people, under this: You would not oppose an amendment which only made that part of this amendment clear?

MR. ROY

Absolutely not. That's the intention of this amendment.

MR. DUVAL

Chris, one other question. The first sentence says: "If a proposed rate schedule is approved in whole or in part within six months, it shall become effective." Does the "it" mean the proposed rate schedule?

MR. ROY

No, it means the increase.

MR. DUVAL

I know, but what if it's only a partial increase? The "it" refers back to the proposed rate schedule.

MR. ROY

Then, that partial increase becomes effective, but the one that they disapprove does not become effective. They can't bond it.

MR. DUVAL

So, the pronoun "it" only refers to whatever was approved, then?

MR. ROY

Well, certainly.

MR. DENNERY

Chris, my question relates to the situation, if the proposed schedule results in a rate increase. Now, under the committee proposal, that increase could be put into effect--and you have added that such will become effective on the date established by the commission, with which I have no quarrel....

MR. ROY

Noise, I didn't hear your last part. I....

MR. DENNERY

I say: Under the committee proposal, if the proposed schedule results in a rate increase, it may be put into effect. You have added to that, that it shall become effective on the date established by the commission, with which I have no quarrel. But, you have deleted--and I want to know why you have deleted--that it may be put into effect, "subject to such protective bond or security requirements," etc. The reason that I ask that question is not with regard, for example, to the telephone company, but to the smaller utilities and carriers who have previously been mentioned. The committee proposal, I believe, protected the public so that if-- on an appeal by the public or by an individual, from the commission's ruling--the rate schedule was disapproved or lowered, under your provision the carrier or the utility must refund; but there is no protection for the public with a smaller utility or carrier. Was there a reason for deleting that?

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

MR. ROY

Moise, that's the present law. I'll tell you that, when I looked at Section (3) of the committee proposal, I thought it said what you said; but, if you read it closely, it refers to the tentatively adopted approval and does not refer to where you have....

You see, it refers to the automatic a'option which comes about as a result of no action.

[Motion to limit debate on the Amendment to thirty minutes. Substitute motion to limit debate on the Amendment to fifteen minutes rejected: 39-44. Motion adopted: 70-21.]

Further Discussion

MR. DESHOTELS

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I know we're getting tired, but let's hold on and not vote just yet for this amendment. I'll tell you why, Mr. Roy came out with the point that it was a good philosophy and a good concept to try and get the commission to arrive at a decision. I'm for that; I'm for them arriving at a decision as fast as possible. But, keep in mind that my understanding is that when a utility files a petition for a rate increase, it files its audit, its affidavits, its support for the rate increase. Now, some of them would have you say, "Well, the commission can rule on what the utility provides them." Well, obviously, whatever they provide them will be to their benefit and to their advantage. There has to be an audit. Some of these corporations have branches that extend throughout many states, and sometimes it takes more than six months. Well, I would propose to you that we allow utilities to institute, I would propose that we allow them to institute their rate schedule under a bond or security as provided by law, at the end of six months. But... but listen, but, if that commission arrives at a decision between the six months and the twelve months, then you have a decision and there is no reason in the world why--why--that rate increase should go on as the utility has proposed, because then when you have a decision, you have what the law is, until reversed. Now, Mr. Roy's amendment provides that there cannot be any rates instituted until after the first six months. But, he failed to tell you that if that commission, after gathering all of the facts and all of the evidence--and they need the time; even the utilities admit they need a year--if that commission comes in with a decision six months and one day--six months and one day--after the initial filing of the petition, then no matter what the rate schedule is, it continues under bond. That is not right.

I have an amendment--I have an amendment--that would provide for them to institute their rates at the end of six months, if there's no decision. But, gentlemen and ladies, if there is a decision between the six month period and the twelve month period, then there is no reason, in my mind, there is no reason why that rate should continue. If we're going to allow a rate to continue in spite of decision pending an appeal, well, then why have the Public Service Commission pass on it at all? Let's have the district court here in Baton Rouge give us a final decision, because we are circumventing--we are circumventing--five elected people. There's no reason for that. If you think about it, even the utilities admit that it may take a year to get a decision. So, why use the six month period? Gentlemen, think about that. I have an amendment, if you would take the time to go through your papers and look at it, I think that we might be able to settle on that. But, Mr. Roy's amendment is not the answer. I submit to you that it was not done intentionally, I'm sure, but Mr. Roy failed to point that out to you. But, ladies and gentlemen, I can't implore you too much that once we have an elective body make a decision, then by God, let's honor it, or let's not let them make it at all.

I thank you for your time. Vote against the amendment, and let's hold off a little while longer. Let's try and get at least something that's better than what we have now. Thank you very much.

Questions

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Deshotels, you are an attorney, so maybe you can help me understand something. Most of the speakers have directed their attention to Subparagraph (2). I direct your attention to Subparagraph (3) which says, "the utility or carrier will be required to make refund claims within one year." From whom is the utility claiming something? I don't understand what Subparagraph (3) means. Can you explain it to me?

MR. DESHOTELS

Mrs. Zervigon, the only thing I can tell you, I think what Mr. Roy's intent was that one year after the Supreme Court's final ruling on it, or the United States Supreme Court, after a final definitive decision, then, then you would have a refund.

I may not have understood your question, and I beg your pardon if I haven't. But, I think that was the thrust of Paragraph (3).

MRS. ZERVIGON

It says the utilities shall make "refund claims." Does that mean make good on claims? Is this the wrong amendment?

MR. DESHOTELS

I see your point. I have no way of knowing that. It's an excellent point.

Further Discussion

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I have great respect for the political acumen of the members of this body. Most of them have proven in other areas before they got elected or appointed to this convention that they had such acumen. I am still mystified as to why all that accumulated political wisdom has suddenly deserted this body this evening. Those of you who are in local politics, as I am, think back over the times when people in your community got mad at locally elected public officials. I'll book you that you can think of a whole lot of times when that was tied to either utility rate increase--if it's a publicly owned utility--or a garbage collection increase, natural gas rate increase, if they've got a city gas utility. Why? Because this is something that affects every citizen in this state every single month of his life when he comes to pay his bills. Do you think, by the wildest stretch of your imagination, that the present members of the Public Service Commission who have proven their political acumen, some of them over many, many years, are going to be meek and mild enough to let this affront to their present operation go by without informing the people of the pending increase in their gas bills and in their light bills and in their freight bills? I don't think so, not having had the pleasure, over the years, of listening to Mr. Ernest Clements from the stump. I believe he's going to be able to do a dandy job with that, and I think he will do it. I think the other members of the Public Service Commission will, too. I would, if I was in their place. Now, maybe that's all right with you. Maybe you don't mind throwing away a year's work that I think, by and large, has been good and seeing this document that we've worked so hard on go down. If you don't, that's fine. I'm giving you one man's opinion, but if you'll use that political acumen that you have and think about people who are going to go to the polls not voting on a new constitution, but whether or not they want their light bill increased, and see what kind of vote we're going to get. If you don't think they'll go to vote on that basis, then you don't have the political acumen that I think you do. This item about refunds is the biggest joke I have ever seen in my entire life. How in the world is a utility company, even if they want to, going to give people a refund with the mobile population that we have, particularly in the urban areas, to apartment dwellers and other people who may move quite frequently who have had their utility rates increased when the appellate process may not be finished for another year? I would really be... and how, in heaven's name, are they going to give a refund to the man who rides a bus or the other public transportation? Are we all going to have to start bringing around a pocket notebook and keeping a record of every-time we rode the bus and get the receipt from the bus driver so that we could put them together and ask for a refund after it's all over? How are we going to get a refund under increase in freight on all the goods brought into this State of Louisiana under the increased freight rates that we're going to get from the trucking lines? Would you mind explaining that to me? I'd be very interested to hear it.

Further Discussion

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, in view of some of the questions about the word "it," what it refers to, Mr. Willis suggested some things that I think are right. We would put "any increase that is allowed," instead of just the word "it." It would be "from the effective date of filing" rather than just the "date of filing," so there'd be no question but that the Public Service Commission could say that the filing has not occurred effectively until you do these things, to obviate what some other people say may occur: that is, that the utilities will in bad faith file something and not give any information. So, by putting the words "the effective date of filing" instead of just "date of filing," I think there's no question but that that will solve a lot of problems. That's what I was going to do, Mr. Chairman.

[Amendment withdrawn. Motion to take up other orders. Substitute motion for the Previous Question ordered on the entire subject matter.]

Point of Information

MR. PEREZ

A point of information. What is the entire subject matter at this time, now, if this particular amendment has been withdrawn? Are we talking about on the entire section?

MR. HENRY

No, sir. I think it would be on Paragraph (D), Mr. Perez, because we're going paragraph. . . letter paragraph by letter paragraph.

Point of Information

MR. JUNEAU

Is the amendment before the floor?

MR. HENRY

He's withdrawn it.

Point of Information

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, I just really thought that the Chair understood that those were technical amendments to take care of some questions that were asked. In good faith I withdrew it to resubmit the other. Now, if. . .

MR. HENRY

Well, now, Mr. Roy. . .

MR. ROY

I didn't withdraw it so that it wouldn't be resubmitted. I'll go with what I got. I was just trying to make it more clear.

MR. HENRY

I don't believe that Mr. Kelly's motion had anything to do with the fact that you withdrew your amendment.

MR. ROY

I cannot withdraw it and resubmit it like we've done in the past?

MR. HENRY

You. . . certainly you can, if that motion is not made, or if this motion or substitute does not pass. But, the gentleman has the right to make the motion.

MR. ROY

All right. I've learned my lesson. It will be all right, Mr. Kelly.

[Record vote ordered. Motion for the Previous Question on the entire subject matter rejected: 7-86.]

Point of Information

MR. ROY

Can I move to resubmit my amendment, or am I out of order in view of the motion by Mr. Anzalone and Mr. Kelly?

MR. HENRY

You would be out of order because he's moved to take up other orders, sir.

MR. ROY

Well, all right.

[Record vote ordered. Motion to take up other orders rejected: 75-59.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Chairman, I do have the Roy amendments at this time. Amendment No. 1. (Now, the copies of these are being run off by the staff)

Point of Order

MR. SCHMITT

I'd like to see a copy of it before he begins speaking.

MR. HENRY

Now, may we proceed, Mr. Schmitt?

Point of Order

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman, we are involved in a most important matter and one which I think may hinge the. . . whether or not this constitution may be adopted. I do believe we ought to stand aside long enough to see these amendments before they are presented. I'm tired, just as everybody else is. But, this is a very serious situation. I think we ought to stand at ease until we get these copies of these amendments.

MR. HENRY

We'll stand at ease pending the distribution copies of the amendment.

Point of Information

MR. AVANT

Why are we standing at ease? I understood the Clerk had a copy. Can't he at least read it to us?

MR. HENRY

Well, that's what we started to do. Let's just wait till we get them all so everybody will have a chance to look at it.

Point of Information

MR. LOWE

Mr. Chairman, I was under the impression that we had already limited debate and that we were actually on the same amendment, that there was just some technical amendments he had made to it. So, I would think that we're under the time limit that we had already imposed.

MR. HENRY

I'd like to be able to agree with you, Mr. Lowe, but it is a new amendment.

MR. LOWE

Well, Mr. Roy is agreeing that we are under the same time limit. Of course, I know he doesn't make the rules, but. . .

MR. HENRY

Well, the problem that it's going to cause me is there are all kinds of hands being. . . that people are raising to speak. I know where we cut off out there, but I don't know how I'm going to administer it. If we. . .

Point of Information

MR. BOLLINGER

Mr. Chairman, how much time was remaining on the other amendment?

MR. HENRY

About twenty minutes.

Substitute Motion

MR. BOLLINGER

I would like to make a substitute motion that we limit debate on this amendment to twenty minutes.

MR. SCHMITT

I'd like to speak on a motion.

MR. HENRY

Mr. Schmitt, I have you on the list, sir. On the motion to limit debate?

MR. SCHMITT

I'd like to speak on the motion before us at the present time. Yes, sir.

MR. HENRY

All right, sir. Proceed.

Further Discussion

MR. SCHMITT

We are seeing before us at the present time an attempt at the utility companies of this state to railroad us into making an ill-advised decision. I believe that each person who believes that we should consider this problem in depth should come forward and speak at the present time so that we might effectively have a filibuster so that we could come back tomorrow and after we get a chance to get some response from the people across this state. We have heard from the utility companies. We have heard from those people who want to get the money out of our pockets, rightly or wrongly. We haven't heard from the people back home, and I can assure you when those people see the newspapers tomorrow, that they will . . . revolt at what. . .

Point of Order

MR. CHATELAIN

Mr. Chairman, I'd like to know: Did he arise on personal privilege, or is he speaking to this error?

Ruling of the Chair

MR. HENRY

He is speaking on the motion to limit debate and is out of order, sir.

MR. CHATELAIN

Well, thank you, sir.

MR. HENRY

In my late evening manner, I made a mistake, because a motion to limit debate is not debatable, Mr. Schmitt. So, I'll have to rule myself out of order.

All right. We have a motion to limit. . .

The gentleman appeals the ruling of the Chair, and it's not debatable because it's not. . .

You withdraw your motion? He withdraws his motion to appeal the ruling of the Chair.

[Previous Question ordered. Substitute motion adopted: 66-25.]

Explanation

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, I'm not going to take any time because other people want to speak. I'm sure Mr. Schmitt does. I want to say several things. One, I am not now, nor have I ever been, nor do I know that I ever will ever be employed by a public utility or what have you. Number two, we exchanged the word "it" to "any" on the second line so that there wouldn't be any mistake but that the only thing that could be bonded. . . the only thing that would go into effect would be the increase that the commission gives. Number three, we put the effective filing date so that you would have no problem in knowing that the commission may say "The effective filing date of this particular application is on the day that you do these things and the day we stamp them as having been effectively filed." Four, for Mrs. Zervigon, the last sentence on the (3), the last phrase, "and as otherwise provided by law," I thought I'd explain. I don't want the legislature to ever be able to say that it will impose upon the consumer the obligation to file any type of refund claim, but that if there is a disallowance of what was previously allowed as a rate increase, it will be incumbent upon the utility or the carrier to make those refunds themselves. "As otherwise provided by law" simply means that the legislature may say at what rate of interest it will draw at the time, whether it will be paid back in the form of a credit on a bill or whether they will have to make a direct cash payment or payment by check. That's all the questions I have. I'm going to yield to one question from Mrs. Zervigon because I know she is interested. I'm not yielding thereafter because I think you all know what the issues are and you all want to discuss it with somebody else.

I yield to Mrs. Zervigon.

Questions

MRS. ZERVIGON

Chris, I appreciate your explanation on that last sentence, but let me ask you, why didn't you just say "as provided by law," and not stick the word "otherwise" in there which makes it sound like they can provide other than a year or other than a refund or other than something in the paragraph?

MR. ROY

Well, the "otherwise" is redundant, really, in my judgment. We can take it out, if you want. All I'm saying is that I don't want the legislature to ever impose upon the consumer the obligation to make any type of a claim to be filed to get his money back.

All right, Mr. Alario, I'll yield to you.

MR. ALARIO

Thank you, Mr. Roy.

Mr. Roy, you changed the word "it" to "any," now, so that your language now reads: "If the proposed rate schedule is approved in whole or in part within six months, any increase shall become effective." Now, did you change any language from "it" to "any?" Did we really do anything? Shouldn't it say, "any increase so approved?"

MR. ROY

No. No, because they. . . you can't, of course, approve a nonincrease. You can't approve a decrease. You either approve the increase or you don't. The "any" means that only that portion will go into effect. Let me tell you one last thing. For the benefit of those people who are worried about the discretion of the commission and to help out, the commission can say, "Yes, we're going to allow you an increase on fifty percent of your requests not effective until six months from today." So, the commission has all kinds of discretion.

Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. SCHMITT

One thing I really don't understand, the committee proposal, itself, is essentially the same as the Roy, Lanier, et al amendment. Very few things in here are actually changed, yet there appears to be a lot more support for this amendment than for the original committee proposal. I certainly do not like to feel the pressure of lobbyists, no matter whom they might be. I listen to their plight, and I think they have a just cause. That cause being that in the past, there was an indeterminate amount of time between the time when they requested a rate increase and the commission acted upon that request. However, I do not feel that a six month period of time is a reasonable period of time. I think that the way that Senator Rayburn's original amendment was, was quite adequate in that it required the commission to make a decision within the one year period of time. Subsequent to that, they would have a right to go to the district court and immediately to the Supreme Court of Louisiana. I once again point out that this is something which is not given to many of the poor people who go before the courts and request rights from the courts and decisions from the courts. Many times, cases die in the courts because the party who was injured either on the job or in some type of accident or through some other cause dies, and as a result of our laws, no one has the ability to take their place. I do not feel that these people, these utility companies, should be given such special preference as we have been giving them throughout each and every one of these amendments. I don't know whether the six month period of time is the proper period of time. I really don't know whether the one year period of time is the proper amount of time. I do feel that this section of this article is entirely statutory. I do not feel that in any way it can be considered constitutional material. It really amazes me the number of delegates who have stayed around throughout this entire argument when many other times when we have had things which I have considered a lot more important, these people did not stay and remain. I certainly do feel that at this time we should make a stand, a stand to protect the interests of the consumer. Mrs. Brien, who originally was one of the strong advocates in this area has apparently backed down in this particular section. I certainly do hope that we can all get together on this and come up with something that's fair for all the people, not just the utility companies and the other companies who would benefit from this.

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

I request you defeat the amendment. Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. JACK

Mr. Chairman and members, I rise in support of this amendment. Now, the Chairman has just asked me if I'd yield to a question before I started. Of course, if I start that, I may run out of time and never get to make this talk that I want to hear. Now. . . that was a pretty good one, wasn't it?

Now, I'm sixty-six years old, born in Louisiana. I've heard those arm waving talks since I was a kid about these big fat corporations and the poor man and all that. Let me tell you, the utility companies are not bad guys. Tonight, in all this cold weather, you're going to be glad you've got that heat. Up in my town, I'm glad we've got that Arkanaas-Louisiana gas company. They're drilling their own wells and are smart people. We're not going to be short on gas. I'm glad we've got SWEPCO up there on lights, so we're going to have plenty of lights. That's a good utility. I'm glad on that phone company up there. Tonight, when I get to my room, it's going to be warm, I'm going to have an electric pad on my feet, I'm going to read a Hitchcock detective book, talking on that phone to that sweet wife. Now, I'm not going to run these utilities down. I'm going to tell it like it is. Now, forty-one years of practice in law, I ought to know any case can be decided in six months. Three Public Service commissioners, we've passed it to have five. Now, if they don't decide them in six months, it's their fault. I'm not running for anything, so I get up and say what is a fact and what I believe and what is so. Now, you can't have good service unless you pay for it. You know that. The poor man wants heat just as much as the rich one. He wants good phone service; he wants lights; he wants all these other things. Utilities are regulated by law as to the percentage of profit they make. I want good service, and I'm telling you there's no reason why they can't be decided in six months. Now, someone was talking about this amendment not any difference from the proposal on the yellow paper. It's a whole lot of difference. The proposal states about the middle of No. (3), "If the commission disapproves the proposed increase, in whole or in part, the carrier or utility may place or continue the schedule in effect under the bond or security." The amendment doesn't do that. If it's lost, you don't get under that bond or security. . . I mean, you. . . if it's lost, under the amendment, then they can't get under the bond or security and charge the increase unless they get a reversal. Now, this whole thing boils down to requiring a decision in six months. All courts, Supreme Courts and all of them, never take that long. I say, the thing is--and you watch it--we pass this, there won't be any decision that's delayed over that six months period and the penalty occurs because the public won't stand for it. Now, I say, this is a good amendment, and I'm tired of hearing people say, "Your constitution is in danger if you do this or do that." If we do what's right, the people will pass this. I. . .

Questions

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Perez, I'm reading the amendment and I don't know your position on it, but is it. . . am I reading correct--no I don't, you know he's an off and on fellow-- I knew his position on mine, I don't know on this one. I hadn't discussed it with him. Am I reading correct here where this company is asking that if they ask for something and don't receive within six months they shall receive; is that what this amendment does? Am I further reading under (3) where it says that they've got twelve months to refund my money if they took it without the proper permission? In other words, they want to keep it twelve long months, but they want that six month action. Am I reading this amendment correct?

MR. PEREZ

Senator, you're reading it exactly right and that is. . .

MR. RAYBURN

With no interest or no nothing they. . . in other words, they're going to have to have their action in six months, but when they get my action they can keep it twelve months and do what they want to with it?

MR. PEREZ

Exactly right, Senator.

MR. RAYBURN

Am I reading it right?

Further Discussion

MR. PEREZ

Let me. . . folks we have got to get this thing in proper perspective and I would hope that you would listen to what we're talking about. A rate-making decision is a very, very complicated procedure. It not only affects the rates which are being charged locally, but it has its effect with regards, for instance, with the telephone company as to how they operate in other states. Let me tell you I've tried cases before the commission, and I can tell you that it is very difficult for me in the relatively simple cases I have tried to expect to get a decision out of the commission within a six month period. So, let's don't kid ourselves folks, if we put this sixth month provision in here we are putting an automatic rate increase provision in for these public utilities because there is no way in a complicated rate making procedure for an intelligent decision to come out of the commission. Now, folks, understand that, please. Understand, that sixth month period of time is a virtual impossibility to comply with. Now, I might--and you might reflect upon this a little bit--these public utilities may be doing themselves a great disservice because what they're going to force the commission to do is to render judgments against them and then, they'll have to appeal it. Then, it will have to be reversed and sent back down for further trial below. This is the most ill-advised suggestion or proposal that I've seen come before this convention. I want to do what is right, as Mr. Jack has said, and I've got a lot of friends in the telephone company and I've always considered them to be my friends, but I am so positive on this subject matter because of the fact that I consider this to be the most ill-advised proposal that we've seen and the present proposal is no better than the others. You know in many rate-making cases they not only increase certain rates, but they decrease others. But, what this says is that only the increase goes into effect, but if they order to have a decrease in other areas, they get to continue to charge their decrease until final judgment, but they get immediate increase with regard to the other rates. For instance, say you have rates with regard to various kinds of customers on the sale of natural gas, they may increase some, decrease the others. But, what would happen under this proposal, the utility company would get the increase, but as far as a decrease is concerned, they continue that decrease in effect until final judgment. In addition, I don't know whether you understand that we're dealing over a long period of years into hundreds of thousands and millions of dollars of thousands and thousands of people's mon. . . of the user's money. Yet, we have absolutely no provision in here that this company or any one of these companies would have to pay back any interest. So, the effect of the matter is that, they jam through an increase in six months, have the use of the public's money for two, three, four years until this thing is finally decided and then give them their money back afterwards and they make a fortune off it with the high interest rates we have today.

Further Discussion

MR. GUARISCO

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I'm a coauthor of this amendment and I'll support its concept. At the outset let me say that I carry no grief for the big utilities. I know not what demons are bedeviling this august body over this issue, but this proposal, I feel, is a reasonable exorcism. One delegate said that-- I heard him call another delegate a prostitute for voting against the Rayburn amendment. Another one I heard him say, "You're a sellout." Let me say to that person or those people that I neither embrace their morals nor their mistress. I fail to see the visceral connection between a steak in one's vote, but I yield to the experience of my elders. Our government has long suffered under the demagoguery or the intellectual rip-off so to speak of the nickel phone call and commission members who simply use the office as a way station on their voyage to the governor's chair. Or worse, those who fail to have the resolve or the inclination to rise from their chair. I feel that was a stable, orderly and deliberate disposal of rate request to economic and political climate to result in superior services for our citizens. Remember, that a regulated monopoly can be a friendly giant, and those of you who feel that rate increases are necessarily against people I don't think you're correct necessarily. It is not as night follow day, but the reason for the rate increases in most instances is to improve the services of the people. Do you know that we probably have some of the poorest, for example, telephone service in the country? I don't think it's because South Central Bell is picking on Louisiana. I'll yield to any questions.

Questions

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Guarisco, are you aware that if you took all of the people in the United States who are on party lines waiting for single unit service and all of those who don't have service and added them all up, you'd find that one out of five of those people live in the State of Louisiana?

105th Days Proceedings—December 20, 1973

MR. GUARISCO

Yes, Mr. Jenkins, I'm familiar with that, party lines, and... yes, single service, yes. That's correct.

MR. JENKINS

That the people here are not getting service. Are you aware that the reason for that is the fact that the capital has not been here for investment because the rate of return by the telephone company in this state has been the second or third lowest in the entire nation?

MR. GUARISCO

That's right.

MR. JENKINS

Isn't the only one way that we can give service to the people of this state is by, to some extent, removing this from politics?

MR. GUARISCO

Yes.

MR. BURSON

Mr. Guarisco, from the remarks that you made, do I take it that the ultimate purpose of this amendment as far as you're concerned would be first of all to do away with the nickel phone call?

MR. GUARISCO

Of course, not.

MR. BURSON

Well, you said that this would. . .

MR. GUARISCO

Now let me say. . . let me answer your question. The nickel phone call is, of course, . . . it's good for both sides. It's good public relations for the telephone company, they won't push to raise it from a nickel because the rates are in the long distance calls; it's not from the nickel. It's great politics for the commission members.

MR. BURSON

Now, the second question that I have is: can you tell me why this amendment and the whole committee proposal are framed in terms of increases in rates and nothing is provided for bonding or otherwise paying decreases in rates?

Closing

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, I have only three comments to make. In my judgment, Mr. Perez is a very astute attorney. I'm surprised he could not read though under Number 2, that the words "as provided by law" means that the legislature can cause the refund to have to carry interest of whatever amount the legislature chooses whenever a bond is put in effect. Number two, and Mr. Chatelain pointed this out to me: On October 6th the Middle East War started, the governor recognized the oil crisis and by November 23rd, 25th through December 3rd, he was able to call the legislature into session and get all the expertise if you will--some people may disagree-- to come up with a bill providing for some redress style of people. Now, I ask you, if you elect a commission and you increase it from three to five people and that commission has the daily task of concerning itself with the issues that. . . about which we're speaking, why is it after they can require you to put everything before them that they can't make a decision within six months? It defies logic to think of that in any other way. I'll ask you to vote for the amendment and then let's move on to something else. Thank you.

ROLL CALL

[95 delegates present and a quorum.]

PRAYER

MR. DE BLIEUX

Our heavenly Father, we thank Thee again for the privilege of gathering here. Be about Thy Father's business. We ask Thy blessing upon us during this Christmas season that we may have the true feeling of peace, that we may have a feeling of fellowship and compassion for all of our fellow beings; those that we have control over through this convention through the efforts and laws we make here that can be in Thy service. Let us have a true fellowship and friendship for all of our fellow men. We ask all of this in the spirit and name of the Christ child of the Christmas season. Amen.

READING AND ADOPTION OF THE JOURNAL

UNFINISHED BUSINESS

PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

MR. POYNTER

Committee Proposal No. 34, introduced by Delegate Lambert, Chairman on behalf the Committee on Natural Resources and Environment, and other delegates, members of that committee.

A proposal making provisions relating to natural resources and environment. Status of the proposal--the convention has adopted the proposal with the except of Sections 3, 6, 7 and 11 which have been deleted from the proposal. Presently, the convention still has under consideration a portion of Section 14. The rules have been suspended so as to provide that Section 14 will be considered lettered paragraph by lettered paragraph. The convention has adopted, as amended, Paragraphs (A), (B), and (C) of said Section 14, still has under its consideration Paragraph (D) of the proposal and the remaining paragraphs thereafter.

Motion

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Chairman, at this particular time, obviously we're involved in much controversy in this particular Section 14. I am concerned about final adoption of the entire proposal. As you know, you need sixty-votes--as I understand it--in order to do that. What I would like to propose at this time, and I hope that the membership would go along, it's in the interest of the committee as a whole--the Natural Resources Committee--what I would like to ask for is a suspension of the rules to allow the convention to go back to handling this proposal on a section by section basis; we're now on a paragraph by paragraph. I would like to ask for permission to go back to a section by section basis to handle it; I want to tell everyone why. The Public Service Commission section has overlapping jurisdiction between the Executive Committee and the Natural Resources Committee. The Executive Committee's proposal is identical to this one, so that it will not jeopardize the passage of Committee Proposal No. 34. If the convention would let me, I would like to remove Section 14 from the proposal so that we can vote on the proposal. I think we can get it adopted without much trouble because there was not much opposition to the other portion of it. After that, we can handle Section 14 separately and everybody can do their thing on that particular section.

MR. HENRY

Senator, I think I heard what you said. You're going to ask that we suspend the rules and go back and did you say you had an amendment to delete this particular section if the rules are suspended for the purpose of salvaging the provision?

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Chairman, yes, sir, and it would be resubmitted in its same form as a separate proposal so that it does not jeopardize the entire committee work up to this point.

Point of Information

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, do I understand that yesterday my amendment got sixty-three votes? It's about right, what's the Chair worried about salvaging, you use that word. I'm just wondering why we can't amend things if they are not good and go on and keep on.

MR. HENRY

Mr. Roy, what I was trying to do was understand the intent of his motion, sir.

Point of Information

MR. CHATELAIN

He said something about bringing it up another time on a separate proposal, but when would that be, sir?

MR. HENRY

It would be after...it would have to be after....

MR. LAMBERT

Immediately following, hopefully, the adoption of Committee Proposal No. 34, which is....right after that, E.J., I mean, no delay.

MR. CHATELAIN

That's good.

Question

MR. GRAVEL

Senator Lambert, would your proposal with respect to Section 14, that is, deferring consideration of Section 14 also encompass removal from the article those provisions which we have adopted relating particularly to natural gas and the designation, of course, of natural gas out of the public utility provisions?

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Gravel, no, it would not. But, I would like to ask the Chair to comment on that.

Point of Information

MR. GRAVEL

Well, I just walked in and I'm running a little late and I want to apologize, but we had made an amendment to Section 14 (B) that particularly exempted natural gas from regulation by the Public Service Commission. I'm just wondering what would happen to that particular provision.

MR. HENRY

Mr. Gravel, as I appreciate what the Senator wants to do, if the rules are suspended and an amendment then were to be offered to delete Section 14, then everything that's been adopted, to this point, in Section 14 would fall at the same time. Then, what would happen is we would come back with a proposal from the Executive Committee on the Public Service Commission, etc.

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Chairman, may I ask for a recess for about five minutes so some of us could discuss this with Senator Lambert, because I think that a part of Section 14 is separable from that portion that deals with the Public Service Commission....

MR. HENRY

We'll stand at ease, then, for five minutes if it will help speed this thing.

[Quorum Call: 106 delegates present and a quorum.]

[Motion to revert to Section 2 adopted: 83-20. Motion to reconsider the vote by which Section 2 was passed adopted without objection.]

Reconsideration

MR. POYNTER

All right, it's been amended to read as follows: "Section 2. Natural Gas; Public Policy, Interstate and Intrastate Pipelines

106th Days Proceedings—December 21, 1973

Section 2. Natural gas is hereby declared to be affected with a public interest."--the rest of that paragraph has been stricken by way of the Singletary amendment--

"No intrastate natural gas pipeline or gas gathering line shall be connected with an interstate natural gas pipeline, and no interstate natural gas pipeline shall be connected with an intrastate natural gas pipeline without a certificate of public convenience and necessity issued as provided by law after due application for such connection and hearing thereon."

MR. HENRY

Read the Gravel amendments, Mr. Clerk.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendment reads as follows:

Amendment No. 1. Delete lines 24 through 27, both inclusive, including all floor amendments thereto and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Section 2. Natural gas is hereby declared to be affected with a public interest and notwithstanding any other provision of this constitution, the legislature shall provide for its regulation by such regulatory authority as it may designate."

Explanation

MR. GRAVEL

Gentlemen of the convention, under Section 14 which deals exclusively with the Public Service Commission, at least by title; we have already amended Section 14 (B) to provide that with respect to natural gas, the legislature shall provide for its regulation and shall designate the regulatory authority that you will have control, supervision, and jurisdiction of natural gas. That particular provision clearly does not now belong in any section dealing with the Public Service Commission. It's apparent to me, and I'm sure to many of the rest of you, that there is going to be a great deal of discussion about deferring or reconsidering Section 14 or doing some of the things that some of the delegates may want to do. So, just to... I think clarify what we have done so far and not to make any other change than one that has already been approved by this convention, I'm moving to put in Section 2 the provisions with respect to the regulation of natural gas that this convention has already adopted as an amendment to Section 14 (B). By doing this, then, we can have a clean, clear discourse and discussion about the Public Service Commission. Now, I urge that you adopt this amendment which is really repositioning, so to speak, the natural gas regulatory provision that we've adopted that has nothing to do with the Public Service Commission and does belong in the article dealing with natural resources. I'll answer any questions.

Questions

MR. BOLLINGER

Mr. Gravel, I think you have a good amendment in that it's better than what we have. But, tell me this: What does your amendment do? It doesn't say anything.

MR. GRAVEL

It's the same amendment that we have discussed; I think Senator Lambert and Senator Nunez had offered it previously. What it does is to make clear that the legislature shall determine whether the Public Service Commission or some other commission or agency will have jurisdiction over natural gas; it leaves it completely up to the legislature. Many of us had a problem with the language that was contained in the Public Service Commission Article. Mr. Bollinger, and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, we have already adopted this amendment by a vote, I believe, ninety to seventeen. We're just putting the provision, frankly, where it belongs in the article and getting it out of the Public Service Commission, telephone company, other utilities battle that seems to be surfacing at this time.

MR. BURSON

Mr. Gravel, one thing about this amendment that disturbs me; whenever I see "notwithstanding any other provision of this constitution" it wakes me up. Is this intended or would it have the effect of circumventing the public notice and public bidding requirement that we adopted yesterday?

MR. GRAVEL

No, sir, it would not and nor...and the reason for that is to make sure that no one could successfully contend that natural gas could be regulated by the Public Service Commission as a matter of constitutional directive or mandate as some of us feared from the language of [Section] 14 (B).

MR. BURSON

Well, isn't the real purpose of this amendment to give constitutional sanction to this monster bill that was passed in the last session of the legislature?

MR. GRAVEL

It's not necessary to do it, but it does...but the Senate Bill No. 9 does designate as the regulatory agency, an agency other than the Public Service Commission and, of course, that designation would be certainly valid under this provision; it would be invalid under any provision that the Public Service Commission...under any provision that would mandate the Public Service Commission to regulate natural gas. Now, Mr. Burson, let me be sure you understand me. This only repositions in the article what we have already done.

MR. BURSON

Well, I just don't see the need for the "notwithstanding any other provision of this constitution." I mean, if you make an affirmative statement that says, "Natural gas is hereby declared to be affected with a public interest and the legislature shall provide for its regulation by such regulatory authority as it may designate." it seems to me that would be plain enough without the other language.

MR. GRAVEL

Well, Mr. Burson, natural gas is a public utility, [Section] 14 (B) gives jurisdiction, mandatory jurisdiction to the Public Service Commission over public utilities. This particular provision here is to make it clear that notwithstanding that provision the legislature can designate as a regulatory agency some other state body besides the Public Service Commission.

MR. BURSON

Well, don't you think the proper place to put that language, then, would be right after where it says "the commission has jurisdiction over public utilities," where it would be plain you are only making that exception? It may open up another....

MR. GRAVEL

If it did, I wouldn't have proposed this amendment, Mr. Burson. I think this has to go in Section 2. I want to get this clearly out of the Public Service Commission mandatory provisions; that's what I'm trying to do. We all felt when this amendment was adopted, incidentally, that this could be done by Style and Drafting, but I don't want to take any chance on it.

MR. DUVAL

Just for clarity sake, the word "effected" is actually "affected" on your copy; isn't that right?

MR. GRAVEL

That was changed. I think the Clerk said it should be corrected.

MR. BOLLINGER

Probably, I misunderstood you when you first made your introductory remarks. You did say that if this section is adopted as you propose it, you will move to reconsider Section (B) as a Public Service Article and take out the language you put in at that time?

MR. GRAVEL

Yes, it should be taken out.

MR. DREW

Camille, referring to Section 14 (B) you had an amendment there that accepted...except for natural gas.

MR. GRAVEL

I don't think that passed, Mr. Drew.

MR. DREW

Well, what are you speaking of in [Section] 14 (B); what is the provision you're speaking of it?

MR. GRAVEL

The amendment to [Section] 14 (B) was a provision which simply stated that "notwithstanding any provision", I think, in that particular paragraph natural gas would be regulated by such agencies that would be designated by the legislature. Mr. Drew, this does the same thing that we've already done, but I think it did refer to that particular paragraph.

MR. DREW

Well, the reason I was asking the question, Camille, I missed the adoption of that amendment somewhere in the confusion yesterday. But, would you tell the convention what your objection to the Public Service Commission handling the transportation and sale of gas as long as they are handling other type of carriers? What is the objection to it?

MR. GRAVEL

Well, Mr. Drew, I'll get back to merits then if you want to, but we have already provided by this amendment--which I think you may have missed and as I stated before--was adopted by this convention by a vote of ninety to seventeen, I think. We have already adopted this provision and made it part of Section 14 (B). Now, let me read it to you: "notwithstanding any provision in this paragraph, the legislature shall provide for the regulation of natural gas by such regulatory authority as it may designate." This convention has already said that either the Public Service Commission or some other agency such as the agency set forth or the Commission of Conservation, rather, in Senate Bill No. 9 can be designated by the legislature to regulate natural gas. All I'm doing is transferring this amendment out of this fight on [Section] 14 (B) or [Section] 14 rather and putting this where it should have been put in the first place. I urge that you adopt the amendment.

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Gravel, is it not true that the way your language is drawn there's nothing in there that would keep the legislature from designating the Public Service Commission or any other state agency from handling...

MR. GRAVEL

That's correct.

MR. LAMBERT

...so, there's nothing to prevent public service or any other agency, it just depends on....

MR. GRAVEL

This is just....that's correct....

MR. LAMBERT

...provides flexibility?

MR. GRAVEL

That's right.

MR. LAMBERT

Thank you.

Further Discussion

MRS. MILLER

Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, Mr. Chairman, I do not object to most of what is in Mr. Gravel's amendment. I think that we can go with natural gas is declared to be effective with the public interest. We have gone with this much. We can go with the legislature providing for the regulation and the regulatory authority. But, when Mr. Gravel puts in there "notwithstanding any other provision of this constitution," he is trying to nullify the amendment you all adopted yesterday with the 75 vote, prohibiting the wheeling and dealing with the natural resources without notice, and public bidding, and hearings, and regulatory safeguards. That is a sleeper. I must say Mr. Gravel has more lives than nine cats, and nine times nine is you know what. You are not going to let this thing slip by you. I think you have too much good common sense for that. Why do we need in there "notwithstanding any other provision of this constitution" when you all have spent these many months writing all these provisions in to safeguard all these agencies. Let the legislature have it. We know it's perfected with the natural interest. I wouldn't oppose the amendment if Mr. Gravel would withdraw it and remove those words, "notwithstanding any other provision of this constitution." He's trying to do indirectly, what, to change indirectly what you all wrote into the constitution directly and openly and honestly yesterday. I ask that you either....that you reject the Gravel amendment. We'd be happy to come back in with another amendment which would delete those little words that give the loophole.

[3038]

What he's trying to do, in effect, is to give constitutional authority to the legislature to do what it did with the monster bill. But, if any of you read that monster bill, you can see that paragraph after paragraph, for forty-five to fifty pages, there's all kinds of loopholes. You must not ever let them get by without public notice, and bidding, and etc. He's trying to delete the very thing that you all wrote into the constitution yesterday. I say, just to please, don't let this happen.

Questions

MR. WILLIS

Mrs. Miller, the Lambert amendment...read that "notwithstanding anything in this paragraph" in Fourteen (B), you will remember. Now, if you were to properly supplant that amendment....

MRS. MILLER

I can't hear you, Mr. Willis. There's so much noise.

MR. WILLIS

If we were to properly supplant the Lambert amendment, or transpose it from Fourteen (B) to Section 2, then the Gravel amendment about which you properly found fault, I think, should read, if it has to read "notwithstanding"...."notwithstanding the provisions of Section Fourteen (B)", etc., instead of "notwithstanding the provisions of this constitution. Because, then his amendment, or Section 2, would be considerably superior to and would suppress the rest of the article. Isn't that correct?

MRS. MILLER

Well, I think you would be right on that....hopefully.

MR. THOMPSON

Is it, in your opinion, Mrs. Miller, what she said correct about this thing? Are we taking this public bidding out or not? What's your appraisal of this?

MRS. MILLER

Well, I don't....think it's needed. I think that you've written your safeguards in the constitution. I think by putting it in there, you are giving a hole for somebody to jump down when they want to do something under cover and kind of slyly. I think it's a dangerous thing to put in there. It absolutely contravenes everything else you all have done with natural resources in protecting them.

Point of Information

MR. THOMPSON

Mr. Chairman....may I ask you a question?

MR. HENRY

Proceed, sir.

MR. THOMPSON

Is this your appraisal, too?

MR. HENRY

Is it my appraisal? I think it would have the effect of undoing the Bureau amendment, yes, sir.

MR. THOMPSON

Thank you.

Question

MR. JENKINS

Mrs. Miller, do you think that this clause, "notwithstanding any other provision of this constitution" might allow the obligation of contracts to be impaired, or possibly some of the safeguards against taking or damaging of property to be done away with?

MRS. MILLER

I think you are right, Mr. Jenkins. It certainly could remove some of the safeguards. You were one of those who fought for some of the safeguards in that special session, and particularly not that you could abrogate contracts. I think this is an awfully dangerous little phrase in there "notwithstanding." I think you must defeat this....you really must defeat this.

Further Discussion

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I know some of the people that I'm aligned with on this Public Service Commission business want to get this amendment adopted so we can get the proposal passed and fight the other battles. But, let me point out to you, there's no question in my mind this "notwithstanding any other provision of this constitution" would completely circumvent and undo what we adopted yesterday requiring public notice and public...or public bidding with regard to state mineral interests, as far as natural gas is concerned. Now, we've seen time and time again in this constitution the effort to slip something through to a seemingly innocuous phrase, "notwithstanding any other provision of this constitution."

I submit to you, if you're really talking about the Public Service Commission provision, then say it. You could say, "Notwithstanding the provisions of Section 14 (B)," if that's all that you really meant to affect. But, when you mean to affect more, you say what's said here, "notwithstanding anything else in this constitution" because we've got sixty pages of legislation in this state right now that gives to appointed officials all sorts of dictatorial powers regarding the natural gas in this state. It gives them the power to make the wheel and deal, supposedly in the public interest....we hope in the public interest. But, we don't have any guarantee. I want to tell you after what I've seen with this utility rate regulation, you'd better believe I wouldn't take anything for granted on that score. I guarantee you that.

Questions

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Mr. Burson, wouldn't you say that if we passed this amendment as written right now, that we have every safeguard that we've placed in this constitution to protect the property of the people of this state gone for naught?

MR. BURSON

I don't think there's any question about it. I think, for instance, it could well affect expropriation, as Mr. Jenkins pointed out. In other words, the legislature, as far as I could see, could provide for expropriation through this blanket authority. I think if he means it only to take out of the definition "utility, natural gas," he ought to say that. We say what we mean when we want to.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

You know what they would say back in my district about this thing? They would say, "Look, as if it was written by slick and more slick."

MR. WILLIS

Mr. Burson, in the constitution is a provision for due process of law, equal protection, expropriation, and the like in the Bill of Rights? Isn't that correct?

MR. BURSON

Yes, sir.

MR. WILLIS

When you say in this environment article that "notwithstanding due process of law, equal protection of the law, the provisions set forth here, expropriation," this would give the authority to that person?

MR. BURSON

I don't think there's any question about it.

MR. WEISS

Delegate Burson, the most of the questions were already asked. But I just want to read to you that section on the right to property from the Bill of Rights which reads, "Every person has the right to acquire, control, own, use, enjoy, protect, and dispose of private property."

When it comes to natural gas, then, this particular amendment would delete that section of the declaration of rights. Is that correct?

MR. BURSON

I think you'd have to read that article, then, "except natural gas which can be taken away from you by the legislature."

MR. ARNETTE

Hey, Jack. I've got a quick question for you.

In other words, Mr. Burson, the way you read this thing, it could mean that the legislature would say "all natural gas in the state is the property of the state and no private individual will have any interest therein." Could they say that?

MR. BURSON

I think it is very clear if it's affected with the public interest, and can be regulated....

MR. ARNETTE

Without payment of any money to any individual citizen? They could do this, couldn't they?

MR. BURSON

I understand that the provisions that would have gone.... were teased around the last session.

MR. ARNETTE

Thank you, Jack.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I don't have any strong feeling about where this amendment is passed or not. The proposal that was already adopted by this convention, I think, forms an adequate safeguard in an improper place.

Now, just so there won't be any misunderstanding, if we had already adopted Section 14, and if there was contained in Section 14 (B) the language that says that the commission shall regulate all common carriers and public utilities, then, I would, instead of having put in the amendment, "except as otherwise provided in this constitution," would have said, "except as otherwise provided in Section 14 (B)." But, we haven't adopted 14 (B). It's only the intention of this amendment to make sure that the jurisdiction over natural gas is not exclusively with the Public Service Commission, and that it shall be with such regulatory agency as the legislature may designate. This amendment is for no other purpose. It's intended to serve the identical same purpose as the amendment previously adopted. I would certainly have no objection, if, when we consider Section 14, if we do today, or later on, and it's adopted, and the duties and the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission is maintained in the same posture and position as it's presently set forth in 14 (B), to then, in lieu of using the words "except as provided in this constitution," utilizing the words, "except as provided in Section 14 (B)." We can't do that now because it hasn't been adopted. I don't care, as I say, whether we adopt it or not. It's just essential that we get it out of the Public Service Commission fight because the provision that we have is not one that is strictly and exclusively within the authority of the Public Service Commission.

I urge that you adopt this amendment.

Questions

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Mr. Gravel, if you don't feel so strongly about this thing, why don't you just....tear it up and hold it back....withdraw it? It means nothing that you just said it means.

MR. GRAVEL

I feel very strongly about....

MR. VELAZQUEZ

You just said you didn't feel strongly about it.

MR. GRAVEL

Will you let me get finished, Mr. Velazquez? I'll answer your question.

I feel very strongly about this provision being in the constitution. If they don't want to take it out of the Public Service Commission article as a consequence of passing this amendment, then don't take it out or they'll be fighting natural gas and telephone company rates at the same time. You're not going to accomplish what I think this convention wants to accomplish. That's to make a clear choice as to whether or not it's going to consider the Public Service Commission article today.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Do you realize that the way this thing is written you could drill a pipeline down my backyard?

MR. GRAVEL

Would....any other questions?

MR. ARNETTE

Camille, I hope you didn't intend this. But do you realize under that language, the legislature by mere act of the legislature could confiscate all the privately owned natural gas in the State of Louisiana and not pay a nickle to the private citizens who previously owned it?

MR. GRAVEL

There is no more authority, in my judgment, Mr. Arnette, granted by this particular proposed amendment, than the authority that was granted by the amendment that's already been passed.

MR. ARNETTE

Would this particular regulation of natural gas by the legislature is not subject to the Bill of Rights or the expropriation laws, or paying fair market value or anything else. When you say "notwithstanding any other provision of this constitution."

MR. GRAVEL

That's not any different from the language that we've already adopted which simply gives the legislature already authority to regulate natural gas and to designate the regulatory agency.

MR. ARNETTE

Regulation I don't mind, Mr. Gravel. But if you are going to give them the authority to take away a man's property without paying him for it, in other words, this thing isn't subject to the Bill of Rights any more.

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Arnette, I don't agree with you at all. We are talking about the regulation of natural gas and the designation of the agency to regulate, which we have already adopted.

MR. ARNETTE

Well, why didn't you say, "notwithstanding any provisions of this article" perhaps?

MR. GRAVEL

Because this was not going to be in the article if we take it out and consider it separately in the executive article. There's not going to be anything else in the article.

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Gravel, it's your intention with respect to this particular amendment to strictly refer to the powers and duties of the Public Service Commission. Isn't that your real intention?

MR. GRAVEL

No, it's my intention by this amendment, as it was the intention of Senator Lambert, Mr. Nunez, and myself, by the other amendment, to authorize the Louisiana Legislature to regulate natural gas and to designate the regulatory agency whether it's the Public Service Commission, the Energy Commission, the Commission of Conservation, or whoever else might be determined by that....

MR. PEREZ

I understand that. But, possibly, you didn't understand my question. What I meant was that in the provision with respect to the powers and duties of the Public Service Commission, it was necessary to make this exception. Therefore, what you really intended was an exception to what was set up in the article with respect to the powers and duties of the Public Service Commission so as to allow the legislature to decide who would have that regulatory authority. Is that correct?

MR. GRAVEL

That's correct. It's an exception to what many of us considered a mandatory requirement that the Public Service Commission regulate natural gas.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected: 42-64. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendment No. 1. Page 1, delete lines 24 through 27, both inclusive, including all Floor Amendments, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

Section 2. "Natural gas is hereby declared to be affected with the public interest, and, notwithstanding any provision of this constitution relative to the powers and duties of the Public Service Commission, the legislature shall provide for its regulation by such regulatory authority as it may designate. The legislature in its discretion, however, may grant such authority to the Public Service Commission."

Explanation

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, when the Gravel amendment was offered, there was serious objection to the words "notwithstanding any provisions in this constitution." In order that we can go forward, I have hopefully prepared an amendment which would strictly limit those words, "notwithstanding any provisions in this constitution," to the relative....to the powers and duties of the Public Service Commission." Then, to make it perfectly clear that the legislature, if it so desired, could give this regulatory authority to the Public Service Commission, I added the last sentence, "The legislature in its discretion, however, may grant such authority to the Public Service Commission." I hope that this will clear the matter up and make it possible now for us to move forward.

I yield to questions.

Questions

MR. CHATELAIN

Mr. Perez, I don't quite understand the last sentence over here, "The legislature in its discretion, however, may grant authority...." but, couldn't it do it without putting this language in there? Is this....or what?

MR. PEREZ

Well, there was some question as to the way the wording of the first sentence read as to whether it might preclude the legislature from giving such authority to the Public Service Commission. In order to satisfy that....the objection that was raised to that possible interpretation, the last sentence was added. I don't think it does us any harm to have it in there. But, on the other hand, it makes it clear that the legislature can give that authority to whomever it please, including the Public Service Commission.

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Perez, would you agree that the main reason we have a natural gas shortage in this country today is because of the regulation of the well-head price of gas, and the curtailment orders, etc., that have resulted on the federal level?

MR. PEREZ

Yes, sir. I agree with that partially. But, that's not the answer....the entire answer to the problem. I could go on on that subject matter for hours because I'm very familiar with it. That is one of the reasons, not the only reason. But I don't, I hope we don't address ourselves at this time to that particular subject matter because all I'm trying to do here is to take something which we have already adopted....which this convention has already adopted, and just shift it from one place in the article to another. I was hopeful that we would not get into the merits of this particular situation because of the fact that overwhelmingly the convention already adopted this particular provision.

MR. JENKINS

Isn't it true that in the past, there has been no regulation of natural gas price in Louisiana, certainly to industrial users, and yet, your amendment here mandates the regulation of the sale of natural gas. It says "the legislature shall provide for the regulation of natural gas", doesn't it?

MR. PEREZ

All I'm saying here, Mr. Jenkins, is that this particular amendment with regard to the legislature, "shall", was adopted by this convention two, or three, or four days ago overwhelmingly.

106th Days Proceedings—December 21, 1973

Again, I would hope that we would not be getting into the merits of this thing because of the fact that we've already adopted it, and all I'm trying to do with this particular amendment is to move this provision from one part of the article to another so that we can facilitate the operation of this convention and move forward.

MR. JENKINS

But, what we are doing here is mandating the legislature to do something that it has not done in the past, and which we know has been one of the major causes of shortages in the past. Is that correct?

MR. PEREZ

I just feel that time is so short that I don't want to get into the merits of something which we argued extensively before, and the convention decided upon it.

MR. BOLLINGER

Chalin, I have two short questions. One, don't you think one of the reasons for Senate Bill No. 9 was the 1966 McKeithen amendment would have prohibited the Public Service Commission from regulating the industrial sales of natural gas?

MR. PEREZ

Yes, that's one of the reasons; as I understand it, they were trying to find some regulatory authority that might be able to do something about trying to keep some of the natural gas in this state.

MR. BOLLINGER

My second question is this: what is wrong with five elected officials, that being the Public Service Commission, regulating natural gas?

MR. PEREZ

Well, again, I go back to the same answer I gave Mr. Jenkins is that I hope we don't get into the merits of this particular situation since it was already adopted. But, this particular amendment does not give the authority to any particular agency. It just leaves it up to the legislature to decide, and the legislature in its wisdom may decide to give it to the Public Service Commission.

MR. ABRAHAM

Chalin, I understand the purpose of what we're trying to do here is simply so that we will be able to probably remove Section 14 from this article completely, and handle it as a separate article.

MR. PEREZ

I'm just hopeful that we can have a Merry Christmas and go home today, and that's the purpose of my amendment.

MR. ABRAHAM

Well, let me ask you this: we've wasted the better part of an hour now trying to get some language in here. We've reopened it to discussion and repetitive arguments and things like that. Wouldn't we be a lot better off simply to forget about trying to put language into the article now, and that way, whenever we handle Section 14 as a separate article, we use exactly the same language we had before that's already been passed? Wouldn't we save time by doing it that way?

MR. PEREZ

There are a number of people who are very much concerned about this particular provision. I think it properly belongs in this Section 2 instead of with the Public Service Commission. I'm trying to accommodate what I think is the consensus of the convention to try to get something solved so we can move forward.

MR. ABRAHAM

But, haven't we in trying to put it into Section 2, we've come right back and made reference to the Public Service Commission; so, can't it just as well be handled elsewhere?

MR. PEREZ

Well, it can be handled, I believe, at a later time depending upon what we do to the Public Service Commission by having Style and Drafting come back to the convention and make recommendations as to how to clean the language up.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Perez, isn't it necessary that we have this provision in order to validate the Senate Bill No. 9 that was passed too in this last regular session?

MR. PEREZ

No, not necessarily validate it. What it would do is that if the committee proposal went through, it would have taken the jurisdiction away from the Commission of Conservation and put it in the Public Service Commission. But, the act, as this now stands, of course, is constitutional as far as I know. I haven't gone into the details of it.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, that's the point I'm getting at. Now, at the present time, the act had to be passed in the way that it was because of the present prohibitions against the Public Service Commission regulating gas.

MR. PEREZ

The purpose of this amendment, as it was adopted and explained when it was adopted, was to give the discretion to the legislature to vest that authority in one of the agencies, and it's up to the legislature to decide whether it will be the Commission of Conservation, Public Service Commission, or possibly some other agency.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Later on, if the legislature sees fit to transfer this authority to the Public Service Commission, they could do so.

MR. PEREZ

Under this provision, yes.

MR. WILLIS

Chalin, we could have this morning decided upon this thing. You are on Style and Drafting Committee; I am, and so is Camille Gravel. Don't you believe that we could have transposed--and that's what Style and Drafting Committee does, is to regroup the language of the constitution--that we could have taken Section 14(B) and transposed it to "2" or vice versa. Don't you think we could have done that, and saved two hours this morning?

MR. PEREZ

Well, the problem is that we are now trying to delay consideration of the matter which has taken up so much of our time yesterday, and will take up today and tomorrow if we don't separate these issues. The whole purpose of this amendment is to put us in the posture where, if the delegates so decide, we can adopt the remainder of this proposal without adopting the Public Service Commission provisions.

MR. WILLIS

Well, I understand the strategy is to remove the "sweets" to you from Section 14 and put it in Section 2, and leave the "bitters" so that it won't be adopted. Is that your plan?

MR. PEREZ

No. It's to leave it so that hopefully we can get something passed because we have to realize that time is getting very short, that these proposals ...

Further Discussion

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I'll be very brief on this. I just want to speak in support of this amendment. This amendment clearly states exactly what I had intended by the other amendment. I can certainly see how many of you may have felt that the language that I employed in my amendment was maybe too broad. I don't think it was, but certainly, I can understand how some people did think it was. I urge that you do adopt this amendment so that we can go ahead and move to whatever other business we've got before the convention.

Recess

[Quorum Call: 94 delegates present and a quorum.]

Further Discussion

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, earlier this morning I had mentioned to the convention that I possibly would come before you and ask for a suspension of the rules for the following reasons: (1) Just as your committees have worked hard, the Committee on Natural Resources has done the same thing. We find ourselves in a position now we don't know whether the proposal will pass or not. It may pass. There are some people that feel that it would pass. There are some that feel that it would not. I am concerned because of the closeness of the votes on the Public Service Commission section which is Section 14. When jurisdiction was assigned on that particular section, the Executive Department Committee was given jurisdiction, and the Natural Resources Committee was given jurisdiction. The Executive Department adopted a proposal. I don't know what the vote was in the committee. I understand it was a split vote. They adopted a proposal that is presently ready to be introduced from behind me. The Natural Resources Committee took the Executive Department Committee's proposal, and adopted it, and it's included in the Natural Resources Committee's proposal. Now, what I'm preparing to ask you to do, and I would certainly appreciate it if you could see fit to go along with me on this, I'm going to ask you in the form of a motion to let me place the Natural Resources Committee Proposal No. 34 back on the calendar. If you allow me to do that, then our committee will come right back and offer Committee Proposal No. 37 which is Section 14 on our Natural Resources Proposal. It will be offered back to you just as it is amended at this particular point. So, you will not lose any time that you spent yesterday on debating it one way or the other. We find ourselves...I think I speak for a large majority of the committee, maybe not everyone. We find ourselves in a position of wanting to pass our proposal just like you did. The Public Service Commission section, if it's good, it can stand on its own two legs. It don't need a crutch. If it's bad, it won't stand. If it's good, that's fine. Whichever way you feel on it is your business. I'm not trying to tell you to be for it or against it. That's strictly your decision to make and I know that you'll make the decision that you feel is best. But, I would appreciate it basically if you would let us remove Section 14, and let it come right back as a separate proposal at the same time allowing Committee Proposal No. 34, the Natural Resources Committee Proposal to be voted on and, hopefully, passed. If we could do this, we would have adopted all eight committee proposals. I would appreciate your consideration on this particular matter.

Questions

MR. CHATELAIN

Mr. Lambert, do you...are you familiar with the fact that Mr. Roy has an amendment up there already, and that it's been some amendments made to his amendment, and would you have any objection to run with that? If so, I think we can resolve the whole thing in the matter of a few minutes.

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Chatelain, let me answer your question. Let me just say this: you may be right. Then on the other hand, you may be wrong, but if you do what I'm asking you to do, it won't prevent you from doing exactly that. But, the only thing that we could do is get our committee proposal adopted, hopefully. I mean, that's all I'm asking for.

MR. CHATELAIN

One other thing, you know you're talking about the other seven proposals that's been adopted. This would be the eighth one, of course. We're all anxious to adopt this eighth one. Believe you me we are. But, the same thing happened in the other... most of the other proposals. There were differences of opinions. There was loggerhead situations, and we finally sat down and resolved them. We were to be treating this one just a little bit different from the other seven. That's my only concern.

MR. LAMBERT

I don't think we would, but you're entitled to your opinion. Today's the last day. Everybody kind of would like to go home for Christmas, I believe.

MR. ROY

Senator Lambert, you are aware of the fact that my amendment passed yesterday 63 to 36, so that's not really a close vote on it.

MR. LAMBERT

Well, if your amendment's good, Chris, I don't think this is going to affect it. This don't have anything to do...it's not going to bear one way or the other on your amendment. If you have a good amendment, it's going to pass. That's not the problem. I'm concerned about...All I'm asking you to do--if you don't want to, that's fine--all I'm asking you to do is let us adopt our basic proposal which the Public Service Commission, there was questionable jurisdiction on it. We, therefore, put it at the end of our proposal as Section 14. The Executive Department had it; they introduced it here as a separate committee proposal. If you got the votes for your side or for your position, whatever it may be, that's fine. I mean this is not going to take...make one vote or take one vote. That's not the point. I'm not trying to get involved in that part of it.

MR. ROY

It's 11:30. Don't you think it'd be better for us to work the rest of the day here and see if we can't do something rather than get into some type of ..... to deny the delegates a chance to vote on it?

MR. LAMBERT

Chris, this wouldn't keep us from working the rest of the day. It would let the committee finish its work, and then let this stand on its own. If your amendment's that good, and if it's going to pass, it will come right after that and pass...

MR. ROY

Well, in the past, it's a matter of fact that when we've had controversial things, we've worked them out like Mr. Chatelain said, and if they didn't pass, they were reconsidered or not laid on the table, and I'm just wondering what the reason is here for this. I just don't see why we should change our procedure just because you all want to get out a proposal right now, for some reason or another.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Senator Lambert, ineffect, what you're asking is for a division of Committee Proposal No. 34 into Sections 1 - 13 as one division, and Section 14 as amended as the other division?

MR. LAMBERT

Well, that's one way to put it, but I think, technically, it would become a separate committee proposal which would not... it would be severed from the basic committee proposal that has been adopted up to this point.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

The point I'm trying to make is couldn't you make your differentiation or your division and still keep Section 14 as amended as a separate proposal of the Committee on Natural Resources and Environment?

MR. LAMBERT

That's exactly what I would do if the convention would allow me. I have it in front of me. I have a Committee Proposal No. 37 drafted. It's a Natural Resources Committee proposal, and it has every amendment that's been adopted by this committee in it, and it's ready for any amendments that want to be offered to it...Mr. Roy, or whomever would have an amendment could go right into it.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

So, in effect, what you're saying is, let's, since we generally seem to be in accord on Sections 1 through 13, let's go ahead and accept that as one committee proposal of the Committee on Natural Resources and the Environment, and let's accept Section 14 as amended as another proposal of the Committee on Natural Resources and the Environment, and then go into doing whatever we're going to do to Section 14 alone, and leave it for Style and Drafting to combine those two sections into one again later on, as part of the overall constitution.

MR. LAMBERT

In other words, that's exactly right. What I'm asking is to allow us to introduce a separate committee proposal I think just as many other committees have done.

MR. J. JACKSON

Senator, if it remains as a section, it's going to take sixty-seven votes. If it says a proposal, it's going to take sixty-seven votes, also; right?

MR. LAMBERT

Yes, sir.

106th Days Proceedings—December 21, 1973

MR. J. JACKSON

So, that, as chairman of your committee I think you explained that you all adopted this, but it should have been in the Executive Committee's proposal. But, you all just adopted it as a part of Natural Resources. So, in order to, since there's some controversy on this section, as Mr. Velazquez says, let's take your proposal 1-13, and make this another committee proposal, which is going to require sixty-seven votes either way; right?

MR. LAMBERT

Yes, sir. Thank you, very much.

MR. ROY

Senator Lambert, doesn't...how can you amend a proposal that's already on the calendar, and if so, doesn't it have to be read on three different days in all these things?

MR. LAMBERT

Yes, I'd ask for a suspension of the rules to allow for that. The Chairman would ask for that.

MR. ROY

Well, but the suspension of the rules can't govern how we operate in the committee; does it?

MR. LAMBERT

I think it can be handled technically and mechanically. If you'll agree to go along with it, I think it can be done.

MR. ROY

I don't agree on the merits at all. I just think that we're wasting our time and doing something we shouldn't be doing here.

MR. ALEXANDER

Would the effect of what you're asking the convention to do negate everything that has been done yesterday?

MR. LAMBERT

No, sir. It would not.

MR. ALEXANDER

The three sections that...or subsections that have been passed would remain with the amendments...

MR. LAMBERT

They would remain intact and be offered in the form of Committee Proposal No. 37 and at which point we would just take up right immediately where we left off, and Mr. Roy could offer his. If he has a compromise, that would be the time to offer it. I don't think it would take hardly any time at all.

MR. ALEXANDER

Thank you.

MR. LANIER

Senator Lambert, if the convention does not approve Section 14 by a 67 votes, then it's not a part of this proposal anyway; is it?

MR. LAMBERT

That's correct.

MR. LANIER

So, really, it doesn't make an awful lot of difference whether we consider it as a separate proposal or as the same proposal. If it's not adopted by the necessary amount, it won't be in here anyway, will it?

MR. LAMBERT

Well, the thing about it, if it's left in, and our committee—we're unable to get sixty-seven votes, of course, the whole committee proposal will fall.

MR. LANIER

That's what I'm concerned about.

MR. WILLIS

Senator, you answered the question I wanted to ask, but I want to ask it again for emphasis. You want to divorce Section 14 from the rest of the proposal because it is a bitter pill to almost a majority of the delegates, so that you can pass your proposal Sections 1 to 13, and then with this divorce, you'll let it be maculated; isn't that correct? Let it float its own way. You don't care about that part of your proposal anymore.

MR. LAMBERT

That's exactly what I'm saying. I don't think it matters if...I think the Public Service Commission proposal is either going to stand...or should stand or fall on its own merit. That's all.

Point of Information

MR. SHANNON

Mr. Chairman, this is a question to be directed to you. Do we have a motion on the floor?

MR. HENRY

The gentleman is moving to...

MR. SHANNON

I have not heard a...he said he intended to make a motion.

MR. HENRY

Well, make the motion, Senator. It's not debatable when he makes it.

Motion

MR. LAMBERT

The motion is to put Committee Proposal No. 34 back on the calendar.

[Record vote ordered.]

Point of Information

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Chairman, is he moving to return the entire committee proposal back to the calendar or just...

MR. LAMBERT

The entire committee proposal.

MR. HENRY

Let me explain what he's trying to do. If you all will give me your attention, I'd ask that you take your seats, and give me your attention because unless you are in favor of going the whole route, there is no point in voting for the first motion. As I appreciate it, what Senator Lambert is moving to do is to move to return Committee Proposal No. 34 to the calendar. If that motion is adopted, then what he will do is ask for a suspension of the rules for the purpose of introducing a new proposal to this convention, which will in effect be Section 14 of the present Natural Resources Proposal as it presently stands with amendments. If the delegates allow him to introduce this proposal under a suspension of the rules, he will ask for a further suspension of the rules for the purpose of engrossing it and passing it to its third reading, which will circumvent the need for it going to committee, it having already been there and been debated. If that is allowed, then, that new proposal will be on final passage. If we get to that point, then as I appreciate it, he's going to move then to call from the calendar the Natural Resources Proposal at which time he will offer an amendment to delete Section 14 of the committee proposal. Now, it's just as simple as that.

[Motion to return Committee Proposal No. 34 to the calendar adopted: 59-42.]

MR. LAMBERT

I want to thank the convention for your consideration on that vote.

[Motion to revert to other orders adopted without objection. Motion suspend the rules for the introduction of a proposal.]

Motion

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, I ask for a suspension of the rules for the purpose of allowing debate on this motion.

[Record vote ordered. Motion to allow debate rejected: 32-72. Record vote ordered on the to suspend the rules.]

Point of Information

MR. ROY

If we vote yes, then the committee proposal that we've worked on excluding the Section 14 comes back, or including Section 14?

MR. LAMBERT
No.

MR. HENRY

If you vote yes on this, you're allowing him to introduce Section 14 as amended as a committee proposal.

MR. LAMBERT

Just as it is now, Chris.

MR. HENRY

Just as it is now.

MR. ROY

But, if you don't vote yes, then there's no committee proposal at all.

MR. HENRY

Yes, sir. There is a committee proposal, but it's on the calendar. He could move to call it from the calendar.

Point of Information

MR. ASSEFF

It is my understanding, Mr. Chairman, of the rules that it requires either sixty-seven votes to suspend, or two-thirds of those present and voting. What I'm trying to understand is, how is fifty-nine out of a hundred and one, two-thirds of those present and voting?

MR. HENRY

Fifty-nine votes, Dr. Asseff, was on a motion to return the proposal to the calendar.

MR. ASSEFF

Wasn't it a suspension of the rules?

MR. HENRY

No, sir, Dr. Asseff, it certainly wasn't.

MR. ASSEFF

Well, I misunderstood you.

MR. HENRY

Yes, sir. I understand.

Point of Information

MR. JENKINS

Point of information, Mr. Chairman. The motion is to suspend the rules to allow the introduction of a resolution. Now, would that suspend all our rules, say, with regard to the date for introduction of new proposals, which was three months ago?

MR. HENRY

Yes, sir.

MR. JENKINS

The requirement to print new proposals; the requirement that they be referred to committee; that they lie over for so many days; all of those rules?

MR. HENRY

Well, if the rules are suspended right now, it would suspend the rule that we adopted requiring that all proposals be introduced by the fifth of September, or whatever date that was. To advance it, would require further suspension, Mr. Jenkins. Why do you rise, Mr. Perez?

Point of Information

MR. PEREZ

Point of information.

It was my understanding that the motion was for one singular, particular purpose, not a general motion....

MR. HENRY

The motion is to suspend the rules for the purpose of introducing the proposal.

MR. PEREZ

One particular proposal...not generally to allow everybody to introduce a proposal?

[Motion to suspend the rules adopted:
86-22.]

INTRODUCTION OF PROPOSALS
[II Journal 1073]

Reading of the Proposal

MR. POYNTER

A proposal making provisions relating to the Public Service Commission, becomes Committee Proposal No. 37, on behalf of the Committee on Natural Resources and Environment.

Point of Information

MR. ANZALONE

Mr. Chairman, point of information. Is what's on the floor right now Section 14 of this article?

MR. HENRY

No, 'cause there has been some amendments to Section 14.

Motion

MR. ANZALONE

Well, what I was thinking about is that if there is not going to be too much debate on the first thirteen articles of this provision, that what we could do while we are waiting for these copies is offer for final adoption the Committee Proposal No. 34, less Article XIV.

[Motion to revert to Regular Order No. 4,
PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL
PASSAGE, adopted without objection.
Motion to call Committee Proposal No. 34 from the calendar adopted without objection.]

MR. HENRY

Gentlemen, please take your seats, ladies and gentlemen. Please take your seats and let me explain to you, because apparently some people don't understand what is happening, what has happened, or what might will happen.

We have introduced a new proposal, in effect, Section 14.

Now, when we get some copies ready for you, we are going to move back into proper order and Senator Lambert is going to ask for a suspension of the rules for the purpose of engrossing it and passing it to its third reading, so that you will...be able to have engrossed copies of it.

Now, we have called, moved back to Regular Order No. 4, and called Committee Proposal No. 34 from the calendar.

Senator Lambert is going to offer an amendment in a minute, to delete Section 14 of that proposal. But, before he does that, he's going to move for a suspension of the rules to allow us to proceed under the normal rules of the convention, inasmuch as when we began to debate on Committee Proposal No. 14 day before yesterday, a rule suspension was allowed to consider that section, letter paragraph by letter paragraph. Consequently, it will either be necessary for a suspension of the rules for the purpose of him offering one amendment, to delete Section 14. Or, we will have to have a separate amendment for each letter paragraph.

Point of Information

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, if we vote to delete Section 14, and the rules aren't suspended to make sure that we get what has just happened to us, that is that we consider my amendment again, you all can fail, or they can fail to bring it back up and it's gone. Isn't that true?

MR. HENRY

If this convention were to refuse another suspension of the rules for the purpose of ordering engrossing this new proposal passed to its third reading, then, it would be referred to committee. The committee, that is right, could defeat or kill the new proposal. But, I think Senator Lambert explained all along what he proposed to do there, Mr. Roy.

Personal Privilege

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Roy, let me just say this. That is not the intention of anyone....

106th Days Proceedings—December 21, 1973

...let me assure you of this that the intention is to put Committee Proposal No. 37 in its proper form on the floor of this convention so it can be considered properly. There's no... I don't know why...what you are thinking. But I can tell you, you can just dismiss those thoughts because I would not...do anything like that, I can assure you. I would not be a party to it. I think that's what you're thinking that a move might be made to delete Section 14 from Committee Proposal No. 34 before Committee Proposal No. 37 is properly put before this body. That will not happen. I will not be a party to that.

MR. ROY

Fine. Well, that's why we...not that I don't trust you... but some other fellows who've, you know, who have done me in a little bit. Why don't we clear Section 14 first to be considered, and then I will go ahead and vote with you on your motion there.

MR. LAMBERT

Well, it'll be the first time.

Questions

MR. STINSON

Senator Lambert, so we won't have to even trust each other where we don't, would you agree that we vote--this convention--vote for passage of No. 37. Then, if it fails, then we'll leave it where it is.

MR. LAMBERT

Yes. In other words, you're suggesting to use our committee's work as a lever? Is that what you are suggesting?

MR. STINSON

No, we don't want your committee...

MR. LAMBERT

Hold that over our head?

MR. STINSON

No, we don't want your....

MR. LAMBERT

I understand; you don't think you are.

MR. STINSON

Don't you know the story is in the slaughter pen, the sheep won't go? So, they put a billy goat to lead them so they all get knocked in the head. We don't want your committee to be the billy goat and lead us in there and let us get knocked in the head. Isn't that right?

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Stinson, I disagree with you. I don't think that's the intention. I don't think....

MR. STINSON

But, didn't you say that your fear was that the entire package would not be passed with this in there, even though you are for it?

MR. LAMBERT

I also said, yes. I said that there was questionable jurisdiction over who had authority of the Public Service Commission from the very beginning. For that reason, I'm asking that it be severed from the work that our committee has done--just as you did on your committee--and let it stand on its own, and let the Public Service Commission stand on its own. That's not going to make you vote one way or the other on it.

MR. STINSON

Well, why not in fairness, let us have the convention vote on that one first, then?

MR. LAMBERT

Why do you have to do that when it's on the floor? It's going to be on the floor before you. Why do you have to tie it to Committee Proposal No. 34? That's exactly what I'm asking you not to do. To let us go ahead and let the convention vote, and let us finish our committee report. Then, let what people want to do, do, on the Public Service Commission?

MR. STINSON

Well, when...the procedures that you are going to recommend -- when will 37 be up for a vote on the convention floor?

MR. LAMBERT

That would come as soon as it's passed out and it's reengrossed, and the rules are suspended, and passed on to third reading, as I understand. The Chairman can correct me if I'm wrong. After which it's on the floor...it's ready....alright?

Then, an amendment would be offered to delete Section 14 from the Natural Resources. All right?

All right. After that is done, then this...then we would ask the convention to approve Committee Proposal No. 34, 1 through 13. If they do that, then the next step would be to take up the Public Service Commission. It would all happen in a sequential sequence.

MR. STINSON

Then, there'd be a motion to adjourn, and we'd be left holding the bag, wouldn't we?

Point of Information

MR. KILBOURNE

I'm sorry.

Mr. Lambert, will all these things you are talking about doing, all these complicated maneuvers, every time we do one it's going to take sixty-seven votes?

MR. LAMBERT

You are going to have to ask the Chairman, because I don't understand the rules that well.

MR. HENRY

The rule suspensions will require sixty-seven, or two-thirds of those present and voting.

Point of Information

MR. THOMPSON

Mr. Chairman, it's bound to be some way, under the rules, that we could be gentlemen enough to go ahead and take No. 34, or No. 37, rather, and adopt it. By the same vote, put this in the same order that somebody won't be distrusting everybody when they vote. Is there any way to do this?

MR. HENRY

Yes, sir, Mr. Thompson. But there's no way in the world to do it with about forty hands up in the air. I realize that they are legitimate questions. But, this is the procedure that Senator Lambert is trying to get us to, either one way or the other.

Questions

MR. TATE

Senator, if I understand it, if you make a motion to advance No. 37 to third reading, suspend the rules, then it automatically will get printed, and the fears of those who are worried about something funny happening will be put to sleep, supposedly?

MR. LAMBERT

Yes, sir. Yes, sir. That's correct.

MR. TATE

Is that motion coming now?

MR. LAMBERT

Yes, sir. The only reason it hasn't been made is because I didn't have a copy, and we were trying to let everybody have... see what it was before they were asked to do anything on it.

Point of Information

MR. STAGG

We were at the point of voting to put Committee Proposal No. 37, which is Section 14 as it has been variously amended. That was about to come to the floor for action by this convention while Committee Proposal No. 34 was up on the calendar.

Then, Mr. Anzalone moved to call from the calendar No. 34, and then it would have required an amendment to delete No. 14 from it. It could have then been moved to final passage and been laid to rest.

Would it not be, or what would be the parliamentary situation if Mr. Anzalone's motion to call No. 34 from the calendar was either withdrawn or defeated? Would we not then be working on the proposition of Committee Proposal No. 37, lay it to rest, and then call No. 34 from the calendar?

MR. HENRY

Yes, sir. You are exactly correct, sir.

MR. STAGG
Then, I would like to pose whatever appropriate....

MR. HENRY
You would like to move to....

MR. STAGG
.....a substitute motion to Mr. Anzalone's motion that calls
No. 34 from the calendar.

Point of Information

MR. ANZALONE
Mr. Chairman, was not my motion adopted without objection?

MR. HENRY
The motion was adopted without objection. Your motion would have to be, Mr. Stagg, to return it to the calendar.

Motion

MR. STAGG
Mr. Chairman....my point is, I think we need to go to work on No. 14, and let....

MR. HENRY
Would you move to return Committee Proposal No. 34 to the calendar?

MR. STAGG
I do move it, sir, and urge it's adoption.

Questions

MR. LAMBERT
Mr. Chairman, let me ask this question, please. Let me just say this so that Mr. Stagg will understand my position.

As far as I am concerned, and the committee members who are in agreement with me on the Natural Resources Committee, if this proposal, Section 14, is handled as a separate committee proposal,
I see no reason why we have to....in other words, we can wait.... on that. That's what we were asking for is to have it severed.
It can be argued first. I....mean that....if that would allay any fears, Mr. Stinson mentioned that, I mean I certainly, I mean if you're going to vote....for Committee Proposal No. 34 without Section 14, you are going to vote for it later today, or are you going to vote for it now?

Point of Information

MR. ANZALONE
Mr. Chairman, just several points of information. With all of these suspensions that we were doing awhile ago, did not we at that time sever Article....or Section 14 from Committee Proposal No. 34?

MR. HENRY
No, sir. We have not. We're going to have to have an amendment.

MR. ANZALONE
We've got to have a motion to delete.
Now, what's before this floor right now is Committee
Proposal No. 34 for final adoption, which does include Section 14?

MR. HENRY
It does include Section 14.

MR. ANZALONE
There has been another motion made by Mr. Stagg to return
Committee Proposal No. 34 to the calendar?

MR. HENRY
That's right. To then call, as I appreciate it, the new Committee Proposal No. 37 from the calendar, and move it to final passage.

Substitute Motion

MR. KELLY
The substitute motion would be to suspend the rules regarding the taking up of Committee Proposal No. 34 in order to allow Senator Lambert to introduce the amendment to delete Section 14 from that.

MR. HENRY
That motion's out of order right now, Mr. Kelly.

Point of Information

MR. RAYBURN
Point of information.
Mr. Chairman, do we not have before us at this moment, which was just called from the calendar without objection, Committee Proposal No. 34?

MR. HENRY
You are correct, sir.

MR. RAYBURN
Why couldn't we go ahead now and just delete Section 14 because we already have just reintroduced Section 14, have we not?

MR. HENRY
Senator Rayburn, we could very well do that. There would be nothing wrong with doing that if we could get enough people to vote for it. But, the people are reluctant to go ahead and completely delete this Section 14 until they know, I believe, that the new committee proposal is in a posture to be adopted.
Now....

MR. RAYBURN
Well....that's....my point is this. I'm of the opinion that the new committee proposal has already been introduced. Am I wrong?

MR. HENRY
No, sir, you are absolutely correct.

MR. RAYBURN
It is introduced? Now, where....what is the status of it as far as coming up for action....advance it, do we have to advance it to a third reading?

MR. HENRY
We have to advance it for a third reading. I think that's what some legitimate concern has been expressed over in the convention. I think that's why Mr. Stagg has made his motion to return this proposal to the calendar.

....We just need to move, one way or the other on this thing. I think there are some people that are skittish. I think we can relieve their fears.

Point of Information

MR. ANZALONE
Mr. Chairman, in the process of deleting article or Section 14 from this committee proposal, could not the amendment to delete Section 14 be drafted in such a way that it would be incorporated as Committee Proposal No. 37, and placed on the calendar subject to call; and that if it were done, that any member of that committee could call it from the calendar?

MR. HENRY
Mr. Anzalone, we are in a position where we can do exactly that if we ever get to that point.

Substitute Motion

MR. RAYBURN
My motion is that we advance Proposal 37, I believe is the number of it, to third reading and final passage at this time.

MR. HENRY
We are going to have to return this proposal because your motion is out of order. Mr. Stagg has moved to return Committee Proposal No. 34 to the calendar. If that motion is adopted, then yours would be in order, sir.

MR. RAYBURN
Thank you.

Point of Order

MR. BURSON
I want to be very sure that we're just moving this thing on to third reading and final passage where it will have to come back here to the floor and be subject to full processes of debate and amendment.

MR. HENRY
Mr. Burson, you know we are not fixing to do anything contrary to that.

106th Days Proceedings—December 21, 1973

MR. BURSON
All right.

[Motion to return Committee Proposal
No. 34 to the calendar adopted without objection.]

Motion

MR. RAYBURN
Mr. Chairman, I now move for a suspension of the rules for the purpose of advancing Proposal No. 37 to the third reading.

MR. HENRY
The gentleman now moves for a suspension of the rules for the purpose of engrossing and passing Committee Proposal No. 37 to its third reading.

Point of Information

MR. CHATELAIN
Mr. Chairman, if you would be kind enough to explain to some of us who don't know all of these fancy parliamentary procedures exactly what happens there.

MR. HENRY
All right, gentlemen. Mr. Chatelain has raised a point of information. If the rules suspension by Senator Rayburn is adopted, it will mean that Committee Proposal No. 37--which is in effect, Section 14 on the Public Service Commission that we've been talking about all morning--it would mean that that new proposal would be in the posture of being called from the calendar for final passage at any time. It'd be printed, and it would be just a separate proposal, and it would be up for final passage.

Point of Information

MRS. MILLER
Now, where are we on No. 34? Are we in a position, a posture now, to be able to go on and adopt the rest of No. 34 minus Section 14?

MR. HENRY
If this motion for the rules suspension is adopted, and someone moves to call those Natural Resources provisions from the calendar, then if the appropriate amendment or amendments are offered, we could delete Section 14 and go on with final passage of that proposal.

MRS. MILLER
That's what we want to do. Now, whatever motion it takes, Mr. Chairman, I'd like to make that motion.

MR. HENRY
Well, we've got to dispose of Senator Rayburn's motion first, Mrs. Miller.

MRS. MILLER
Well, do we have to vote down Senator Rayburn's in order to go on?

MR. HENRY
If we don't support Senator Rayburn's motion, I shudder to think what might happen.

MRS. MILLER
O. K.

[Motion to suspend the rules to engross
Committee Proposal No. 37 and pass it to its third reading adopted without objection.]

MR. HENRY
Mr. Stagg now moves to call Committee Proposal....to advance to Regular Order No. 4, and call Committee Proposal No. 34 from the calendar. Is there objection? To which objection is urged.

Point of Information

MR. LOWE
Mr. Chairman, I see the look on your face, and I'm sorry. But we've talked about No. 37; we've talked about No. 34. I'm not--I don't have anything committed to memory on numbers.

MR. HENRY
Your point is well-taken.

MR. LOWE
If you tell me what No. 37 and No. 34 is at the moment, I'll be in good shape.

MR. HENRY
At the moment, I'm not sure, Mr. Lowe.
Committee Proposal No. 34 is the Natural Resources Proposal which contains the fourteen sections, including the Public Service Commission.

The gentleman now moves to call from the calendar Committee Proposal No. 34, to which objection....

Motion

MR. STAGG
My question was to move from the calendar to the floor, Committee Proposal No. 37, which is Article XIV.

MR. HENRY
I misunderstood you.

Substitute Motion

MR. RAYBURN
I now move that we call from the calendar Provision No. 34 where we can delete the fourteenth section from it, because we now have two proposals carrying the same language.

Point of Information

MR. ROY
Isn't it a fact that Committee Proposal No. 37 was brought to the floor without objection?

MR. HENRY
It was engrossed and passed to its third reading without objection. Yes, sir.

MR. ROY
All right.
Now, then, Mr. Stagg moved to consider No. 37?

MR. HENRY
Yes, sir.
Moved to call it from the calendar.

MR. ROY
Can't Senator Rayburn do the same thing after No. 37 is disposed of?

MR. HENRY
Yes, sir, he could. But, now, this motion is not debatable.

Point of Information

MR. ABRAHAM
Point of information, Mr. Chairman. As I understand our posture right now, we have a motion by Mr. Stagg to call No. 37 from the calendar.

We have a substitute motion by Senator Rayburn to call No. 34 from the calendar.
Now, if we...go ahead and adopt the Rayburn amendment, No. 37 stays on the calendar. We can dispense with Article No. 34, and then we can call from the calendar No. 37 and act on it, can we not?

MR. HENRY
That's certainly correct, Mr. Abraham.
Gentlemen, now this is just getting to the point that it's ludicrous. Now, there is no point in us acting like a bunch of children. Please, now, you either want to do one thing or the other.

Mr. Stagg, I apologize to you, I had misunderstood your motion. But, we're going to have to start proceeding in a reasonably organized manner.

The gentleman moves the previous question.
Mr. Stagg had moved to call from the calendar Committee Proposal No. 37, to which motion a substitute was made by Senator Rayburn to call Committee Proposal No. 34 from the calendar. To which objection is urged.

Point of Order

MR. STINSON

A point of order, Mr. Chairman. This to call it from the calendar takes sixty-seven votes?

MR. HENRY

It takes two-thirds of those....I mean it takes a majority of those....no, majority of those present and voting.

MR. STINSON

Majority?

MR. HENRY

Yes, sir.

MR. STINSON

Then, after he gets it here, it takes a majority to delete Section 14?

MR. HENRY

That's right, sir.

MR. STINSON

Then, when that is completely out, it takes a majority to pass it?

MR. HENRY

Sixty-seven to pass the proposal.

MR. STINSON

Then, No. 37 is still left hanging by itself and can be buried, couldn't it? Unless we get sixty-seven votes.

MR. HENRY

That's....it very definitely could be buried, Mr. Stinson. But, it could be adopted, as well.

[Record vote ordered. Substitute motion adopted: 62-43. Motion to recess rejected: 13-84.]

MR. HENRY

Senator Lambert is going to offer amendments, as I appreciate it, to delete all of Section 14. In order to accomplish that purpose, Senator, you are going to have to have a suspension of the rules.

The gentleman requests a suspension of the rules for the purpose of....let me explain it first, and what he's trying to do, gentlemen.

When we started debating Section 14, we elected and suspended the rules to consider it letter paragraph by letter paragraph. Consequently, when the gentleman comes with an amendment to delete the whole Section 14, then, we would have to suspend that rule which we adopted, to operate under the normal rules of procedure of this convention. That's the purpose of the motion.

Point of Information

MR. PEREZ

A point of information. If we do not suspend the rules, that means that the same thing could be accomplished, but you'd have to have amendment, after amendment, after amendment offered to accomplish the same thing. Is that correct?

MR. HENRY

That's correct. That's correct, sir.

[Motion to suspend the rules to consider Committee Proposal No. 34 Section by Section adopted: 76-30.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The amendment was passed out a few moments ago. Sent up by Delegate Lambert, reads as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 5, delete lines 11 through 32, both inclusive, in their entirety, and on page 6, delete lines 1 through 32, both inclusive, in their entirety and on page 7, delete lines 1 through 12, both inclusive, in their entirety and all floor amendments thereto.

[Motion for the Previous Question on the Amendment.]

Questions

MR. STINSON

Senator Lambert, if this is adopted, will you agree, then, to return 34 to the calendar and then bring up 37 for passage?

MR. LAMBERT

Yes. I don't. . .If you're that suspicious, I have no objection 'cause. . .In other words, all. . .the only thing you have left, Mr. Stinson, at that time, is Committee Proposal No. 34 which does not have the Public Service Commission. But, you have the Public Service Commission before you, ready to come up. It's been. . .

MR. STINSON

I'm not. . .I'm not suspicious, I'm just cautious. I always carry an extra in my car in case I have a flat. I don't like to have them, but we needed it.

So, will you agree and give your word as Chairman that if we go ahead and adopt this amendment that then you will bring up your Committee 37, first?

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Stinson, no I don't, and I don't know why you would want to ask me to do that. What's the reason for that?

MR. HENRY

All right. Gentlemen, this. . .

MR. LAMBERT

What's your purpose. I mean, what. . .

MR. STINSON

I'm just cautious is the reason.

Point of Information

MR. JENKINS

I have a question for Mr. Lambert.

MR. HENRY

You. . .He can close if the previous question is ordered, sir.

MR. JENKINS

Does he have the floor right now?

MR. HENRY

There's a motion pending on the floor for the previous question, Mr. Jenkins.

MR. JENKINS

Who made that motion?

MR. HENRY

Mr. Reeves.

MR. JENKINS

How could he make a motion for the previous question when Mr. Lambert had the floor? Then, after that, Mr. Lambert answered a question?

MR. HENRY

Yes, sir, Mr. Jenkins; he did.

MR. JENKINS

Well, then I guess he could answer my question.

MR. HENRY

No, sir; I don't guess he can.

Point of Information

MR. FULCO

Mr. Chairman, a point of information. I'm not straight on this in my mind. When you say, "and all delete....and all amendments" or do you. . .

106th Days Proceedings—December 21, 1973

MR. HENRY

Well, now. . .now, we can't explain the amendment.

MR. FULCO

No, I'm asking for a point of information. Now, we say, if we say "delete all amendments thereto," will that delete all the amendments that we have adopted to that particular section?

MR. HENRY

It's just getting rid of the whole section, sir. Now. . .

MR. FULCO

Yes, but does it delete the amendments, Mr. Chairman?
Mr. Chairman. . .

MR. HENRY

Wait. No, now. . .

MR. FULCO

Mr. Chairman, please, do we say with. . . "delete the section with the amendments" or do we say "and delete all the amendments thereto?" It makes a difference.

MR. HENRY

Mr. Clerk, explain it. . .

MR. POYNTER

The language, Mr. Fulco, simply instructs the Enrolling Room not to leave hanging some language in the middle some place. It would have the effect, as I appreciate it, of instructing the Enrolling Room to delete all of Section 14 as it is presently amended.

MR. FULCO

That's good, but the amendment didn't say that.

[Record vote ordered. Motion rejected:
33-70.]

Point of Information

MR. CHAMPAGNE

It seems to me that everybody is getting in the act, and I just wanted to ask if you'd mind if a Cajun got in the act, too? The next question, sir, is that there seems to be an awful lot of suspicion in this convention going on. Would you agree with me that nothing can happen that the majority will not vote for?

MR. HENRY

I think you're exactly right, Mr. Champagne.

Further Discussion

MR. LOWE

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I won't be long. I respect the fact that you are anxious to move along, but the train is rolling pretty fast this morning, and I think we understand what's happening. I believe that the people that were opposed to Section 14 are anxious to get it out. Senator Lambert has said that he's afraid the Proposal No. 34 will fail if we don't get Section 14 out. Well, I feel strongly about Section 14, and I don't believe like the press does that we had a rate increase. I think that we took a problem that couldn't be dealt with anyplace else and dealt with it. Now, I believe that the people that are the proponents of 34, that want to pass it, will pass it after we get 14 out, if we cooperate with them. Now, I believe that once that's happened, we're going to kill 37 because we're not going to have their support. If would have had their support, they would have agreed to take 37 out and let us dispose of it. After we had disposed of it, there'd have been no problem to take 34 off of the calendar, remove Section 14, and we'd be in the same posture we are right now. Now, I say to you that if we'll go along with them, 14 is dead now, it's dead once and for all. I ask you not to make that mistake.

Further Discussion

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, it seems to me that you've got a choice here. You can either choose to get something accomplished today: that is, to pass the committee proposal without Section 14, or to be here the rest of the day to consider the twenty-some-odd amendments that are pending. I tell you, frankly, as far as Section 14 being dead, I think after everybody here goes home for the holidays, if it isn't dead, you'll wish it was. If you look at the headlines in the paper this morning--and whether you like them or not, that's the headlines and that's what people are reading--"Rate Increase Vote By Delegates Given For Permitting Rate Increases Before A Decision Has Been Made." That is it. Now, I hate to burden you with the facts, but I've got a few that I want to let you know before I close, here, that the procedure for filing an application before the Public Service Commission involves, first of all, the filing of an application which must be published in the bulletin of the Public Service Commission. Then, under rules of the commission, twenty-five days are allowed for public protest or other filing. Because the bulletin is only published every fourteen days, this may well mean thirty-nine days at the outset before this can be placed. . . Mr. Chatelain, you just as well sit down, because I'm going to ask for personal privilege if I don't get to say it here. So, we could save everybody a lot of time. You've got to have a minimum, then, in some cases of thirty-nine days before the thing even becomes eligible to be put on the docket. Then, when it's put on the docket, at the present time, you get, in the normal course of things, a hearing within four to six months; because, you've got to remember that the Public Service Commission--now listen to this, listen; this is a fact--the Public Service Commission regulates four hundred motor carriers in this state and four hundred public utilities other than motor carriers, which includes twenty-six telephone companies, all taxis operating seven miles outside of any municipality. There are tank truck carriers in this state, right now, today, that have applied for three rate increases this year.

Point of Information

MR. CHATELAIN

The speaker is speaking. . . is it germane to the amendment before us? He's debating 14, sir.

MR. HENRY

Well, the. . . the amendment, as I appreciate it, is whether you delete 14 or not, Mr. Chatelain.

Question

MR. TATE

Mr. Burson, what you're talking about is on the merits of 14. Now, if I understand, in the sense of the convention action till now, it is for us, without regard to the merits of 14, to delete it from Committee Proposal No. 34 so that the noncontroversial part can pass and go on for drafting, and then for us to be able to debate the merits on the 37. Is that right, Mr. Burson?

MR. BURSON

Judge, that is probably correct. However, this is a motion to delete 14. It seems to me, to vote intelligently on that, you ought to know the merits of the case. That's what I'm trying to get into, if I can.

You will see. . .

Under the proposal as it stands right now, you'd have to make a decision within six months. So, if all the eight hundred of these utilities that are regulated file a petition for a rate increase simultaneously, which I think would be highly likely if such a provision became part of the law, the commission would have to accept or reject 4.4 petitions per day. Now, I ask you if this is designed to achieve intelligent rate regulation for public utilities in this state. Most important of all--and remember this--that an appeal from a Public Service Commission decision is an appeal only on the face of the record. The court can only examine the record. When a multibillion dollar corporation like A T & T sends in one of the Sears and Roebuck applications, to protect the public interests, the Public Service Commission does not have in its house utility rate-making experts. They've got to go out across the country and hire these men. Sometimes it might take them two or three months to even get access to somebody with that kind of expertise.

[Motion to grant an additional one minute for explanation rejected: Motion to limit debate on the Question to twenty minutes adopted without objection.]

Further Discussion

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentleman of the convention, if I knew with whom to deal up here, who was speaking for whom around here, maybe we could have shortened this debate a long time ago. But, you get one response, "Yes, I'll do something," and then later, "No, I won't agree to do that." It's just no reason--there's no reason in the world why this, what Mr. Stinson asked Senator Lambert, should not have been allowed. If we take 14 out of Section 34, then it appears to me that if those people are in good faith, who are on the other side, and if they're not going to then move to adopt 34 as a committee proposal and then move to adjourn and/or move to go to other orders of the day and not consider 37, then it appears to me that they should agree--if we take 14 out of 34--to put 34 back on the calendar, pull 37; let's debate 37; and then later, go on and adopt 34. Now, I don't see the reason why not. I saw a man respond, "yes," he was for it, and I saw somebody shake his head no, he was not, and it ended up that it was not, that there was something maybe sinister about this other thing. Now, I sat up here today--and they can run them rules besides me all they want because this is their ball park, and there's some of them have been in the legislature before. They know how it works, and they can get technical with me and beat me every time, but I know what's right. I know what we did yesterday. I know when we got sixty-three votes, and I know when this convention wants to discuss a certain issue. If you folks who are like me, who haven't committed to memory these rules and are not in with the people who know what the rules are, you're going to find yourselves going home without any issue on the Public Service Commission. For Mr. Burson to come up here and to quote some newspaper, some newscaster that didn't bother to stay here last night to see what we did do instead of what we did not do, I think is ludicrous. I am not bound by what the newspapers say. I don't care what they say as long as what I do is right, and we should debate the issue. They all reported this morning, and of course that's what some of the opponents wanted. They all reported, because I got a call from Alexandria, that we had allowed the public carriers and utilities to raise rates over the objection of the commission and without even a bond. You know that's not true, but it served its purpose. Well, I want to say one thing: I didn't come here to write a constitution for the newspapers, for PAR, for anybody else, and I'm not going to start doing it now. I urge you to, as long as they will not agree to what Mr. Stinson suggested, to vote against taking 14 out of 34.

Further Discussion

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Chairman, I think it's getting...I'm going to make a suggestion. I was hoping...I was going to make a motion to adjourn, but if it will placate somebody, if Mr. Lambert will withdraw his amendment and then move to adjourn, it might help this group because I think we're right at the standstill. We need to think about this thing when we come back.

Further Discussion

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, the intention in the very beginning I stated to you was to try to sever Section 14 from Section 34. I appreciate; you have done that, you have allowed us to do it. I appreciate that. So that there will relieve any suspicions--anyone, whenever they may be--I would like to withdraw the amendment. Well, that's allright, Earl, if you don't want to vote that way, don't. But in order to be fair with everybody I will ask you to allow me to withdraw the amendment. I'll put 34 back on the calendar, dispose of Committee Proposal 37, which is the Public Service Commission because I know that the ones that are asking me to do that are going to be fair enough and not hold the final adoption of Section 34 over anyone's head. I know that; so for that reason, I would like to withdraw that amendment and let this body move along.

Questions

MRS. MILLER

Senator Lambert, you know this is very fine to trust everybody--and I guess in the spirit of Christmas we should--but maybe we should have some record vote for everyone to go on record that we understand what you're doing, and we're going to honor this.

MR. LAMBERT

Mrs. Miller, I understand your question, but I don't feel that it's necessary. I don't want to request that.

MR. ABRAHAM

Point of information. Now, if we do as Senator Lambert requests--and let's just assume that 37 is defeated--then, still you have Section 14 in Article 34; do you not? And that would be debated all over again; would it not?

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Abraham, can I answer your question? If Committee Proposal 37 is defeated, as far as I'm concerned, I have been assured that Section 14 will be deleted from Committee Proposal 34. If Mr. Stinson is asking me to trust him, and I'm doing exactly what he's asking. I expect--and if it doesn't happen, then I'm going to be completely disillusioned and disappointed. But, if something happens to Committee Proposal 37--after it stands on its own, rides on its own, whatever happens to it--if Committee Proposal 34 is hurt with Section 14 that's in it, then I'm going to be completely disappointed; I can tell you.

MR. ABRAHAM

Well, don't you agree then if we can move this thing along, they both will stand on their own feet, and one should not harm the other.

[Motion to withdraw the Amendment.]

Point of Information

MR. ANZALONE

Mr. Chairman, is this a debatable motion?

MR. HENRY

Mr. Anzalone, I know of no reason why it's not, but I don't know any reason that it needs to be debated. Now, it just appears that so much confusion is reigning in this convention right now, that we're going to have to get off dead center one way or the other, because we're going to stand around and be so antagonized by one another in another hour or two, that we might as well put the ropes up in here and get after it.

Further Discussion

MR. JACK

Mr. Chairman, I just want to say this. I'm not obligated by anybody that's making any agreement for me. I want that clearly understood. This thing's difficult enough advising yourself, and I'm going to vote like I see. Mr. Lambert is my chairman of the committee, but I don't want him to misunderstand. I'm not obligated by what Mr. Stinson said, what Mr. Lambert, or anybody. I'm going to vote my own conscience all the way down.

Further Discussion

MR. STINSON

...I want you to know that when Mr. Stinson asked Mr. Lambert that he says no, and I haven't even talked to Mr. Lambert since then.

[Previous Question ordered. Motion adopted: 83-19.]

Personal Privilege

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen, I haven't taken any part in the debate upon this Section 14, but I certainly think that so far as what we've been doing here, we've been acting like a bunch of children. I'm getting a little bit tired of trying to wrangle out this and find out who doesn't trust who, who doesn't trust the other fellow. I don't believe we act that way in the legislature, and I notice you don't trust the legislature, but at least we have a little honor. I'm going to ask you to have a little honor. I'm not going to try to take an unfair advantage of one of you fellow delegates, and I hope you won't do that to me. I think Senator Lambert has well explained what his intentions were, and yet, he's been questioned and questioned, and sinister reasons, innuendoes leveled at him for that. I kind of resent that because I know Senator Lambert, and I know he wouldn't be a party to any of that stuff. I just ask you: please, let's have a little bit of trust in one another, at least here during the Christmas spirit, and get our work done. We were wasting a lot of time, and we're not accomplishing anything. I just spoke my piece because I just....

Motion

MR. CHATELAIN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I don't think it's a matter of trust and a matter of 'his and that and the other. I think we all trust each other. I think we've gotten to the point now where we ought to thank God that we've gone this far.

106th Days Proceedings—December 21, 1973

It's just a few days before Christmas, and I think what we ought to do now is adjourn and go home and come back and fight this on the third day of January, and I so move, Mr. Chairman.

MR. HENRY
Until what time, sir?

MR. CHATELAIN
Nine o'clock in the morning on the third.

[Motion to adjourn to 9:00 o'clock a.m., January 3, 1974 rejected: 46-56.]

Personal Privilege

MR. STINSON
Senator De Blieux, without calling names, I'm sure you were referring to me. Well, I was the only one that talked to Senator Lambert. I want you to know, members of this convention, I'm not a politician, but I've been in the legislature for thirty-four years, and I've seen people's throats cut and stabbed and all when they innocently stood by and were taken advantage of. There's no reason why the two opposing groups--and I'm not in either group--couldn't get together like we do on these other amendments and decide like we have all during this convention. But there's been nothing done this time. Now, Senator Lambert, I trust him. In fact, this is a bad thing to say, but I voted for him to be chairman of this committee...convention, and I think a lot of him. But I asked him the question, and he said, no, he couldn't agree to it, and he gets up and then says that I ain't in agreement and I ain't even talked to him. I said that you said that there was agreement, and when I questioned you, you said that you couldn't agree to take 37 up first, and I didn't talk to you after that. If there's anything to trusting or not trusting, I don't see why we can't work this the same as we have everything else that's been worked out. Mr. Roy has handled it, and Senator Lambert. I'm not even involved. But I think we should have a fair deal, and everyone should be treated fairly, and try to work it out. But, I haven't agreed; I haven't bound Mr. Jack; I haven't bound anybody; I haven't even bound myself. I have no authority to bind anyone. I'm not representing either side in this faction. I'm voting my convictions and what I think is best for my people. I don't intend to double-cross anybody. There's no reason for me to double-cross anybody, but I don't want to be double-crossed either, or the principles that I stand for.

MR. LAMBERT
I'm sorry if I offended Mr. Stinson. I don't know what I did, but I apologize....

Point of Information

MR. KEAN
Mr. Chairman, now that Senator Lambert has withdrawn his amendment and we apparently have two proposals on the floor, exactly where are we with...

MR. HENRY
We don't have two.
Gentlemen, please take your seats and let's get a little order in the convention.
We have Committee Proposal 34, Section 14, up for adoption, Mr. Kean.

Personal Privilege

MR. JENKINS
Mr. Chairman, I'm sorry to interrupt things as we're adjourning, but, you know, Christmas is upon us, and I really hate to see the convention depart on this note. For just a moment, I want to express my feelings as a delegate about the work of this convention. If you look back on the last five months, I think you'll see that we've accomplished many, many things that can substantially improve the condition of government and the condition of the people of this state. We're in the midst of one of many, many discussions we've had, and sometimes it seems like we won't ever resolve them. But, we will resolve this, and it's certainly an honor and a privilege for me to be associated with this group. I hope that when you're home for these few days, we talk to our people about some of the good things that we've accomplished instead of some of the things that we're having difficulty resolving, because if the people knew the things that we had undertaken, and the good we had done, I think we'd have a lot better public image than we have. So, I hope we can leave on that note rather than one of dissension.

MR. HENRY
Thank you, Mr. Jenkins, and a Merry Christmas to you all.

[Adjournment to 9:00 o'clock a.m.,
January 3, 1974.]

107th Days Proceedings—January 3, 1974

Thursday, January 3, 1974

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

ROLL CALL

[81 delegates present and a quorum.]

PRAYER

MR. WILLIS

Almighty and eternal God, shower your mercy upon us. Grant us the necessary blessings to make proper judgment on all issues which require decision. Strike here in our consciences to shun wrong, embrace right, and make proper decisions. Grant us the grace to conduct our proceedings with the requisite deliberation and speed. Deepen our faith, our hope, and our charity. Make us love what You have commanded and finally, guide us to make diligent, to make us diligent in our deliberations to present a pure plan of government to our people. So be it.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

READING AND ADOPTION OF THE JOURNAL

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES [II Journal 1077-1078]

UNFINISHED BUSINESS

PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

MR. POYNTER

On unfinished business, of course, is Committee Proposal No. 34, introduced by Delegate Lambert, Chairman on behalf of the Committee on Natural Resources and Environment.

A proposal making provisions relating to natural resources and the environment. Now, the status of this proposal is that the convention has adopted the first thirteen sections of that proposal with the exceptions of Sections 3, 6, 7, and 11 which this convention voted to delete. It still has under its consideration, however--has not completed work on Section 14. Of course, in addition to that on the last convention day, the twenty-first of December, under a suspension of the rules a separate proposal was introduced constituting Section 14 as amended and which proposal under further suspensions of the rules was engrossed and passed to third reading and presently appears in Regular Order No. 4, Proposals on Third Reading and Final Passage. In that light, I think, Senator Lambert at this time has a motion.

[Motion to return Committee Proposal No. 34 to the calendar adopted without objection. Motion to take Committee Proposal No. 37 out of its regular order adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Proposal

MR. POYNTER

Committee Proposal No. 37, introduced by Delegate Lambert, Chairman on behalf of the Committee on Natural Resources and Environment.

A proposal making provisions relating to the Public Service Commission. Article VIII, Natural Resources; Section 14, Public Service Commission.

Mr. Vice-Chairman, of course, this proposal now contains but one section, being Section 14; that section has been previously read.

Explanation

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I'm going to make this very brief. I just kind of want to touch base back with you where we were when we adjourned. This essentially is a different proposal from what was in Committee Proposal No. 34. If you will recall there was some statements made with respect to No. 34 that it allowed for an increase to be put into effect irrespective of whether the commission ruled favorably or unfavorably. I think that was misleading, but in any event, we later passed the amendment that I previously had submitted to the convention and this proposal essentially has those provisions in it. The first section, of course, (A) deals with the composition of the Public Service Commission which is increased from three members to five members. The second section deals with its powers and duties. I would like to call to your attention, rather Section (B), that the Public Service Commission is an autonomous body to a great extent other than the way we restrict it in this constitution and as we provide for it to be restricted by law, which means that the Public Service Commission can make reasonable rules and regulations with respect to the way rates and submission of rate increases will be filed, how they will be filed, what will be in them, etc. So, I want you to keep that in mind because it's very important when we later determine the issue of how long we are going to allow these folks to sit on an application for a rate increase without acting.

I'm explaining that Section (B) very clearly makes the Public Service Commission an autonomous type of rule-making body similar to the Civil Service Commission which can make rules and what have you. Now, it is to that extent restricted only by whatever we put in the constitution and, of course, what we allow as provided by law. Section (C) is strictly the limitations which I've just gone over. Section (D) is the controversial issue that was previously deliberated on. The first portion of it allows for or mandates the commission to render a decision within twelve months after a proposed schedule is filed; (D) (2) is a provision that provides that within six months from the effective date of the filing of the application the Public Service Commission shall render a decision or the increase which has been sought may be put into effect as provided by law and until action by court of last resort; (3) simply says if the increase is finally disallowed, in whole or in part, then the burden will be upon the utility or carrier to refund the money to the consumer and as otherwise provided by law--which would mean, in my judgment--the way that it would be refunded either as a credit or simply a cash payment back to the consumer. Section (4) of that proposal deals with the notice that shall be given. Section (5) deals with the appeals that may be rendered and it allows as you can see for the appeal by the intervenor or anyone else who is involved in the matter. Section (F) deals with the right of the Public Service Commissioner to regulate the sale of gas for industrial purposes and there was some other amendment that we had with respect to that. I think those are the issues. I understand Mr. Rayburn's got an amendment to delete the whole thing. I'll yield.

Questions

MRS. ZERVIGON

Chris, my mind is working slowly after New Year's, but the only case in which a utility could take an appeal is if a decision is not made? If a decision is made one way or another by the Public Service Commission, would there be no appeal?

MR. ROY

No, there would be an appeal one way or another.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Where does it say that? It just says "Should the commission not render its decision."

MR. ROY

Well, it says "Appeals may be taken by any party or intervenor and must be filed with the district court, within the time provided by law, at the domicile and direct right of appeal to the Supreme Court."

MRS. ZERVIGON

But, the sentence right before that just says if it doesn't make a....those two sentences don't get read together?

MR. ROY

No. I didn't read them that way, Mary, especially with respect to the "as provided by law" provision.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Thank you.

MR. ROY

Yes. Mary, I want to point out to you that in line 28 of that....well, that's alright.

MR. LEBLEU

It really wasn't a question. I just wondered if this amendment had been passed out; I don't seem to find one in my area over here and....

MR. ROY

It's the new proposal No. 37, Mr. LeBleu; I don't know if it was put on your desk....the yellow sheet.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Yes. We have several sets of amendments; the first one sent up by Delegate Rayburn reading as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, delete lines 10 through 20, on the second page, in their entirety.

Second Amendment--technical amendment--On page 2, at the beginning of line 21, change the number "(4)" to the number "(2)"

Explanation

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Acting Chairman and fellow delegates, the amendments I propose delete Paragraph (2) and (3) on page 2 of the printed bill you now have before you that takes out the mandatory rate and also takes out the bond provision. It leaves, then, the provision under Paragraph (1) under (D) where it says, "The commission shall render a final decision after a public hearing on applications, petitions, and proposed schedule rates within twelve months." In twelve months regardless of what decision they might have rendered you still have the provision where you can go to court. I still feel like I felt last week that, we as delegates of this convention have no right telling to elected public officials if you don't do something when there is a given period of time, we're going to say that you've got to do it even before they have had time, maybe, to study the matter. I realize in some cases maybe they have been dragging their feet. Maybe like a lot of people think members of the legislature often drag their feet--sheriffs, assessors, clerk of court, and other public officials. I'm sure you can find some people that think a lot of us in public life have on different occasions more or less drug our feet. I'm sure you can hear it about the judiciary. But, I think that by adopting this amendment, then, you will have a fair and a reasonable proposal. You will be saying to the Public Service Commission that you shall render a decision in twelve months. You are saying to the public utilities or the people that are directly concerned if you think they have rendered the wrong decision you can go direct to the courts and in my opinion that's the way that this country operates. I do not think it's right to say to anyone before the people that are elected have a chance to review the facts that if we wanted, we're going to get it. Then, later down the line if we've made a mistake, you can take it away from us. I can visualize now someone trying to get back a refund on an increase taxicab rate or a refund out of a pay telephone. I don't know how you would get it refunded; maybe you do. If you think that we don't need the Public Service Commission, just come up here with a proposal and let's abolish them. But, after all, they are elected officials just like you and I are elected and they came here....they came in their offices just like you and I came to this office. I don't think we should sit here and, more or less, mandate them out of office. If they are not doing what they are supposed to do, then we need to change the commission; we need to change the make up. But, I'm only deleting the mandatory rate increase provisions that are now in this schedule. I hope you go along with the amendments. I move the adoption.

Further Discussion

MR. ABRAHAM

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise in support of this amendment. I think it is a fair and equal way to treat this particular problem. The statement was made in here before we adjourned that forty-two other states or forty-six other states had provisions which provided for these automatic rate increases and bond requirements. Well, I submit to you that this may be true; I won't quarrel with that but none of this language is in the constitution in any of these other states. There are only thirteen states that even have the Public Service Commission in the constitution at all and Louisiana is one of them. Nowhere in any other constitution is there any language which spells out the manner in which the Public Service Commission shall operate; all of that is statutory material and it's handled by the legislature; I think that's the way we ought to do it here. There is nowhere in any other constitution, any requirement, that the Public Service Commission has to render a decision within any specified period of time. We are going further than any other state by even saying that they must render a decision within twelve months. I think that what we've got in this particular proposal now places the burden on the consumer to take the Public Service Commission to court in order to get action, and I think that's the wrong way around. If anybody should take them to court and get action, it should be the utility. The thing that we do not want to overlook is the fact that this applies to all types of public service organizations. We are not just dealing with any one particular group of people or any one particular company or anything like that. So, we're going to have to think further than what the arguments have been in the past where it centered around the telephone company. By allowing anyone to be able to go to court at the end of twelve months, whether a decision is rendered or not, I think is a fair way to handle it. But, above all, the legislature is the one who must oversee activities of these different things...types of organizations like this; We need to have flexibility. It may be that in a particular instance six months might be enough time and in other instances it may take twelve or longer. But, I think we need to leave it flexible for the legislature to be able to handle these particular problems when they arise and let the legislature decide the manner in which these type of thing need to be done. I urge the adoption of the amendment.

Questions

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Abraham, maybe I should have asked Senator Rayburn this question, but I'm going to ask you. He mentioned that someone probably come up there with a proposal to do away with the Public Service Commission completely due to the fact that they can go to the courts on appeal, do you think it would be wise or do you think it would save the state money if we just eliminated the Public Service period?

MR. ABRAHAM

Well, the Public Service Commission, Mrs. Warren is a regulatory agency and I think the only issue that he was speaking on is whether or not we wanted it constitutionalized or whether we wanted simply another regulatory agency in the state government. As I said, only thirteen states have the Public Service Commission in the constitution. The other states do have a Public Service Commission, but it's all statutory; it's all created by the legislature. Only thirteen states actually have elected public service commissioners. The other thirty-seven states have them appointed. So, I don't... I think we're all pretty much in agreement, we do want to constitutionalize the Public Service Commission, but the question now is whether or not we want to write this other detailed language on how they're going to operate into the constitution.

MRS. WARREN

Well, I'll put it like this, I'm not so sure whether I would like to see it in the constitution at all since I heard Senator Rayburn speak. Do you know that the thing that puzzles me most is how long does one wait in indecision to make a decision? If they can go get it without the Public Service, I just as soon see them go and save money that the legislature handle it and the courts. We could just do away with it. I'm just trying. . . I'm really trying to get down to the bottom of it to find out whether we're just going to have somebody, an elected official--you can't mandate them to do anything by putting it in there--and they shall do it, and if they don't do it, it's no way of forcing them to do it because they are elected officials. So, I mean these are the things that's going around in my mind right now.

MR. ABRAHAM

Well, this is why you need to leave the details up to the legislature, Mrs. Warren, so that they can work these things out.

Further Discussion

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in opposition to the amendment. At least today we didn't get some of the rhetoric that we got last time which I thought was a little misleading on this particular proposal. Now, let me tell you what I think is basically wrong with Senator Rayburn's approach to this subject. We have constitutionalized the commission, the Public Service Commission. We have increased it from three to five members. The sole and only purpose for the existence of a Public Service Commission is for five people in this state who presumably know something about business and about race, etc., can make decisions, can make initial decisions on applications for increases and for other types of service. That is a political body. It is elected by the people. Now, what Senator Rayburn's amendment ultimately does is, it says, "Well, boys, we like to elect you people to make decisions; however, we're going to say this, that if you can't make a decision, then you can pass the buck onto the poor district court and make the district court make the decision that you should have made." I disagree with that. There are a lot of times in this convention that I would like to have not to have had to make a decision. Particularly, one time when I sat up there I wish I could have said, "Let's think about it a little longer or let it pass by default, let somebody else make this decision." But, I ran for this job to make decisions that I thought were best for the people of this state. I don't represent any utility or carrier; don't care to; I'm not saying I dislike them. I just usually am suing them. All I'm saying is I'm for what's fair, and I'm for what makes sense in political science, and if we're going to elect a Public Service Commission, then those fellows ought to make decisions. If, after they require a carrier or utility to present to them, at the expense of the carrier or the utility all of the information they need to make a decision and they cannot make a decision in twelve months because -- I have an amendment later that changes the six to twelve-- well, then we don't need a Public Service Commission. I just don't like the idea of one politician passing on another politician the decision making power that the first guy should have made. You know what's going to happen, we've increased it from three to five, every time there's an election coming up one of those guys say, "Boys, let's not make a decision this six to eight months because I'm running, and I'd like for things to stay like they are." As a result it goes on to the court and the poor court has got to make the decision and then they all sit back and say, "Well, we didn't make that decision, go talk to your judges about it." Now, I've got another amendment that later changes the committee proposal and says that it is applicable the rate increase only to public utilities. It excludes carriers --because I think Mr. Rayburn has a good point-- it would be hard to have people who have some type of refund that may be owed back them by a carrier to keep tickets on every Trailways Bus ride he took and stuff like that. But, with respect to public utilities they keep the rates of people and the bills I mandate them later to refund within one year's time any increased allowance that they shouldn't been allowed with legal interest and as provided by law. I just think we ought to face this issue, and it's a very basic decision that you've got to make; either you're for allowing the buck passing or you're not. I believe, like the great President Harry S. Truman, who had a sign on his desk and it says, "The buck stops here." I say that that sign ought to be put on the Public Service Commission's desk and they ought to say, "The buck stops here," and we're going to make a decision or else we're going to allow the utility to be put into effect, the rate increase, for the benefit of the little consumer who doesn't have the swat and the stroke that you or I have with respect to getting a telephone or something else that he badly needs. I'm against the amendment and I hope you vote against it.

Further Discussion

MR. CHATELAIN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I stand in opposition to the amendment. I say that we do need a Public Service Commission, Mrs. Warren, and we need one very badly. The purpose of us being here today is to write a new constitution for the citizens of this state. If we've seen in the past we've had problems with certain constitutional situations, we should try to correct those. I say we've had great problems in the Public Service Commission in the past and that's one of the reasons why, in your wisdom, you have increased the membership from three to five here in this present constitution. I say we need a strong, viable Public Service Commission. Why do we have a Public Service Commission? We have one because it is supposed to look out for the interests of the people of this state in a business that has a monopolistic trend or a monopolistic business. It does not control Ethyl Corporation or some of these big, large corporations that has to do with your life on a daily basis, but it does have to deal with the transportation systems of this state. It has to deal with the telephone system of this state. We're getting down to the real net of this argument, it's the telephone company versus the Public Service Commission. Let's look at it realistically, and let's look at it honestly. You've heard people stand here and say that they worry about the taxicab rate. There's not a man in this room or delegate in this room who knows darn good and well that taxicab rates are not controlled by the Public Service Commission, that on the contrary, they're controlled by the local governments; has nothing to do with the Public Service Commission. The Public Service Commission controls the businesses of this state that are, as I said before, that have a monopoly type business. Who owns these monopolies? The people either in this state or other states of this union own the Southern Bell Telephone Company and other corporations that we are discussing here now. It's whether or not the Public Service Commission should render a service; should do it's duty. You say, "Well, why mandate in the constitution what the Public Service Commissioner should do and how soon they should do it?" I say that you have mandated for the governor of this state that he has to have a deadline for the budget. You spell out what day that deadline has to be; you tell the governor of this state when he has to call an election and all the guidelines on elections. You tell him when he must sign bills for them to become law; you have done that and it's reasonable. So, I say we need a Public Service Commission, but let's let the Public Service Commission render this service that they are elected for. They stand election for the purpose of rendering service to the citizens of this state. I, say to you that they certainly should be able to render a decision within six months or a year--and this talk about a bond-- I would rather have a bond of the South Central Bell System than many of the bonding companies in this state. Most of you people here know it, particularly you lawyers; and you insurance people know this. This is all a subterfuge; we're not talking about a realistic situation here. These bonds are just a factor in the overall allowing of these people to get a justifiable rate increase. Bear in mind that a Public Service. . . that any person under the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission cannot come before the Public Service Commission asking or requesting for a rate increase unless they have shown by a documented proof that they have lost money or lost less than their minimal earnings for a period of at least one year before they can even appear before the Public Service Commission.

So, I ask you in all sincerity even though we just started this convention here this morning--these hearings this morning, don't vote hastily; think about what you're doing and let's try to write a document to protect all the people of this state. I'll yield.

Questions

MR. BURNS

Mr. Chatelain, I'm a little bit confused about part of your argument. There's nothing in this amendment that has to do with doing away with the Public Service Commission; is it?

MR. CHATELAIN

No, sir, but there's other amendments and this bears on it, Mr. Burns, and we're trying to delete this. I'm in favor of keeping at least this much in the constitution. That's my only argument.

MR. BURNS

Well, I'm definitely in favor of keeping the Public Service Commission. That's the reason I wanted to understand your argument, but so much of it was based on that you were against doing away with it.

MR. CHATELAIN

Well, Mr. Burns, if you'll remember the previous speaker before me were asked questions by Mr. Abraham, by Mrs. Warren and others and they questioned the need of the Public Service Commission in the constitution, and that was the reason why I prefaced some of my remarks by trying to justify the fact we do need in fact, a Public Service in the constitution.

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Chatelain, did you know that you had enlightened me something on the taxicabs? This is something I didn't know. Now, I'm going to let a little bit more of my ignorance hang out. Are the Public Service Commissioners--is that a part-time job or is that a full-time job?

MR. CHATELAIN

It's absolutely a full-time job with a full-time staff. They have not in my honest opinion, the members of the Public Service Commission as it now stands are. . . do not report to Baton Rouge on a full-time basis as ordinary employees do, but they work from their homes. They have a staff either in their home or in the city where they reside and that staff is, of course, is what they stand behind.

MRS. WARREN

I have one more question to ask you: what is the salary of a Public Service Commissioner?

MR. CHATELAIN

I don't rightly know at this point, but I think it's seventeenfive; I'm not sure.

Further Discussion

MR. HAYES

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in support of the amendment. Number one, I can't see. . . there's one part about the whole program here, they say to put under bond; what I can't understand, they never say how much they were put under bond. Do you understand that if you permit the Public Service Commission or permit the utility companies to put under bond, they can put anything under bond they want to put? Don't you know they can double your utilities, put it under bond? You can put anything under bond. They can triple it and put it under bond. So, if they don't have any limit to what they can put under bond, your telephone bill could be doubled tomorrow under bond. Now, if we're going to have a Public Service Commission of five people, they have a job to do, just let them do it. After you leave the Public Service Commission you'd have a court to go to that's elected and paid for by the state to do another job. Now, what you're saying is if these two people fail to do their job you're going to send them to my pocket; this is what I don't want you to do under a bond. Once you get rid of this money under a bond it comes out of your pocket. Do you realize that? That's what you're voting for. To test, say, now if the Public Service Commission fails to do the job, you're paying them to do it; if the courts fail to do it, you're paying them to do it, then you say go in my pocket. I don't want them in my pocket. Now, if you can get them something without going into my pocket, all right. Now, this bond that they've put up means nothing. You can bond anything and justify anything; you want to. You let me bond something and tell me to justify it, I'll expand and show you where I needed the money. This telephone business is nothing but a bunch of cables under the ground hooked to a computer on the other end and looks like it should be cheaper instead of more. I can't see the need for such an emergency, so I urge you to support this amendment.

Questions

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Hayes, I'm still trying to find out and I'll probably be asking everybody that comes up to that Mike regardless of what side of the fence he's on, do you know how much money goes in the Public Service Commissioner's pockets since you. . .

MR. HAYES

I don't know, but I understand that they're full-time people and they have a job to do and what we need to do, Mrs. Warren, I believe is let them do that job and render their decision, but the exact salary, I don't know. I understand it's something like seventeen or eighteen thousand. But, they're paid enough money to render their decision just like any judge of competent jurisdiction. Then you have a court that would render a decision if they don't. But, what they're trying to do, Mrs. Warren, is to render a decision on my pocket. That's what that bond is all about. The bonds. . . they put up a bond, take the money from me and I don't have it.

MRS. WARREN

I understand what you're saying, but you still haven't answered my question because as far as I'm concerned, the bond that they put in their pocket comes out of the taxpayers' money too.

MR. HAYES

Everything eventually. . .

MRS. WARREN

I'm trying, . . . you don't get my point. . .

MR. HAYES

Go ahead.

MRS. WARREN

Now, I'm not on either side of the fence. I'm trying to find out how much these people make on full-time jobs in order to render a decision, and if you don't know, just tell me you don't know. Thank you.

MR. HAYES

I don't know the full-time salary of the Public Service Commissioner or the judges either, but they're paid on a full-time basis.

Further Discussion

MR. LOWE

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I'm sure that many of you recall the vicious battle that was going on before we left to go home for the holidays. I can't for the life of me understand why this issue is so emotional. We have a history of inaction on the part of the Public Service Commission. If we did not have a history of inaction, we wouldn't be here today talking about this particular issue. Now, you know and I know that the Public Service group and the services they render play an important part in the life of every individual in the State of Louisiana. We cannot doubt that; that's a fact. We have people say that we shouldn't be talking about this particular issue in the constitution, that it's legislative material. Well, perhaps it is legislative material, but the legislature hadn't seen fit to deal with it. I'm not sure that the legislature nor the Public Service Commission can look objectively at the problem that we have. The reason why they can't look objectively at it is because what we're talking about touches the life of every citizen, every voter in the State of Louisiana. So, if we have a history of inaction on the part of the Public Service Commission, we have a history of inaction on the part of the legislature to deal with the problem. I submit to you that we should be dealing with the problem that we're dealing with in the constitution. Now, I've heard one of the delegates stand up and say that by the bonding procedure your rates are going to be doubled. Now, you know and I know that if a Public Service comes before the Public Service Commission with a proposal that's unreasonable, they'll turn it down, the Public Service Commission will turn that proposal down in a New York minute. There's no doubt about that. The only time that there's no action is when a rate appears to be justified and the Public Service Commission won't act. Now, these men run for office, they're not drug from their homes and placed on the Public Service Commission; they asked for the job. When they run for the job, they tell you they're qualified. They tell you they know what they're suppose to do. It's a sophisticated operation, and they'll tell you about all of their qualifications and why they should serve and why they're qualified to serve, and if you put them in that position, that we'll have some efficiency in the Public Service Commission. Well, I grant to you when they run and they get elected, well all of a sudden some of the qualifications are gone. So, maybe we need. . . not maybe, there's no doubt that we need in the constitution some provision to see that these people act. Now, we've heard that it takes ten months to gather material to give to the Public Service Commission. Well, the Public Service Commission makes the rules about how to submit application and the time limit starts to run from the time the application is submitted and that means that the application is complete. It's not submitted until it's complete. So, once a Public Service Commission has all of the information that they need, all that they prescribe that they have to get before they act, they have twelve months. Now, that's enough for any prudent man that's knowledgeable in the area that he's dealing, to act. Now, what we're doing with Senator Rayburn's amendment has taken us right back where we were. We take twelve months to act; if you don't act it goes to the courts and the courts can kick it around for two years, so we're back to three years of the inaction. I say let's vote this amendment down and when Roy comes up with his amendment we get something that's workable for the State of Louisiana. So, I ask you to oppose this amendment and let's go on to something better.

Questions

MR. HAYES

Mr. Lowe, is there any limit to how much they can put under bond to your knowledge?

MR. LOWE

Not to my knowledge. The thing is, if the rates are too high, the Public Service Commission will turn them down, Mr. Hayes; you can bet your bottom dollar on that.

MR. JUNEAU

Mr. Lowe, you talked about a two year delay in the court; you are aware or you not that under the present law that the appeals to the district court are by preference and can be tried summarily; are you aware of that?

MR. LOWE

I'm aware of that.

MR. JUNEAU

Are you further aware that the appeal is direct to the Supreme Court and there's a specific time delay which all other lawsuits in the state do not have?

MR. LOWE

I understand that.

MR. JUNEAU

So, what are you talking two years in court?

107th Days Proceedings—January 3, 1974

MR. LOWE

I don't know; there's no mandate about how fast any court has to act that I'm aware of.

MR. J. JACKSON

Mr. Lowe, it's my understanding that you're a C.P.A. Could you give me some idea taking, let's say one corporation that a utility that applied for increase an estimated amount of time for you to . . . for someone to examine their books, some reasonable time to determine the financial basis or the financial rationale for an increase? Would you consider that would be a lengthy time?

MR. LOWE

Would I consider it what? I'm not hearing you very well.

MR. J. JACKSON

Would you consider --I'd assume that the Public Service Commission would have to do similar audits such as you would do in terms of a company if requested. Does that process take a lengthy amount of time or is it relatively short?

MR. LOWE

Well, . . .

MR. J. JACKSON

Let's say if it's large as some of these utility companies that we're talking about presently.

MR. LOWE

Mr. Jackson, I think you've asked a good question. Now, let me tell you what the answer to that is. As I appreciate it, the Public Service Commission can make the rules by which the application is filed. Now, if the Public Service Commission says that attached to this application will be an audit done by an independent certified public accounting firm to be selected by the Public Service Commission; well, all of the work is done the way the Public Service Commission wants it done before the application is ever filed, so that's really no problem. No matter how much time it takes it only works a hardship on the utilities because they're held up until the application is filed. But, once it's filed, it's filed with everything that they want on it.

Further Discussion

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise in support of this amendment. The amendment omits from the proposal things which are essentially legislative in nature. They involve . . . the language in the proposal that would be omitted by the amendment involves things which are essentially matters of day-to-day operation of the Public Service Commission. Before we broke for the holidays in the tumultuous last day, I attempted to make some points--and I was probably as tumultuous in making them as the general assembly was. I'd like to make them calmly today. The staff of the Public Service Commission at the present time consists of twenty-nine people. They have no inhouse capacity of the type of expertise that's required to analyze a Southern Bell rate increase application, particularly if the Bell Telephone Company has elected to file rate increase applications nationwide. The type of expertise that's required to analyze such an application is limited to a few individuals in the United States. These few individuals--and their services are in great demand. It's not uncommon, I'm told by lawyers who deal in this type of rate application in the defense against the request, to have to wait two or three months just to get together with the expert that you need to testify on your side. Any appeal from a Public Service Commission ruling is based entirely on the record made at the hearing before the Public Service Commission. If you provide for any kind of automatic or retroactive rate increase without allowing the Public Service Commission to build a record on behalf of the public--which after all it is there to represent--then you have in effect presented a situation where only the utility company's information will be in the appellate record. I think the results on appeal there would be obvious. The Public Service Commission at the present time regulates eight hundred utilities--four hundred motor carriers and four hundred phone companies and electric utilities. This includes thirty railroads, twenty-six telephone companies, and eighteen electric cooperatives. You can readily imagine what would happen if we provide for an automatic rate increase provision or a retroactive rate increase provision within a six month period of time, or even a twelve month period of time. If all of these utility companies or motor carriers file simultaneous requests for rate increases, it would simply be impossible to process them all with that staff of twenty-nine members that I'm telling you the Public Service Commission has. This is why this is a legislative matter. Any measures which would make decisions of the Public Service Commission move with greater probity must of necessity provide for a greater staff. I see no alternative to that. I've heard a lot of remarks here about the history of inaction of the Public Service Commission, but I've yet to hear a single fact or statistic to substantiate this. My own experience, which has been limited to representing motor carriers, is quite to the contrary. I find that I can expect a decision there much quicker than I can in the average court of law. I would submit to you that you should wonder why, with all of the utilities and motor carriers and other people regulated by the Public Service Commission, you have been deluged with requests for change by only one group--primarily the telephone company. Apparently the other people must be very satisfied with the treatment that they've received before the commission because I dare say you've not been contacted by a single one. Finally, I would make the obvious point that anything that provides for a refund on automatic rate increases is simply inoperable. When you consider the mobility of our population, the fact that you would have to require a refund on such things as freight rates, cab fares, bus fares, and so on, makes the impossibility of such a setup obvious. I submit to you that this amendment will take out the most objectionable features of this particular article and will leave it in a posture where the utility company, if it is agreed, will have recourse directly to the courts, and the courts can make the decision on the matter. That is really all that they should ask for.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Acting Chairman and fellow delegates, I would like, Mrs. Warren, to say that the salary of the members of the Public Service Commission is $17,500.00 per year. I know you were deeply concerned about their salary, and I checked it out to make sure that that figure was correct, and it is correct. Let me say once again that my main opposition to this proposal as it now is, is the provision that provides for mandatory rate increases. I have to disagree with my good friend, Mr. Roy, when he says, "Do not pass the buck to the judges." That's rather an unusual course for him to take. If he don't want that done, I don't know why he just don't amend this proposal and take out the appeals part of it. I'm sure that Mr. Roy did not really mean that when the Public Service did not act, that they were really passing the buck on to the judiciary. That's part of the judiciary's job: that if the legislature acts or any other public body acts--that if it acts unwisely and the citizens or some citizens of this state's mind--that they have the courts as a recourse. Thank God we still have the courts of this land as a recourse. Now, if you adopt my amendment, then the legislature at a later date wants to change it--they want to say, "Yes, we want to make it mandatory in eight months, twelve months, sixteen months or five months or four months--they will have the right to do it. But, I sincerely believe it is a mistake for us to take this trend and put language of this nature into this constitution. Whether or not it will ever happen, you're going to have the people of this state thinking that they're going to get their telephone rates raised or their other rates increased without a chance or an opportunity for them to be heard in the courts of this land. Later on they'll hear it. I really don't think in my heart it's right, and I've told the people that's asked me to support this, and the only people that's asked me to support it are the telephone people. Nobody else under the Public Service Commission has even mentioned this bill or this proposal to me. If it's so good, looks like they would all be over here. There's a lot of people, as Mr. Burson told you, that's governed by the Public Service Commission. Looks like they'd be standing in line waiting to tell us or ask us how to vote, or to give them a little relief, if all this business in the past is so bad, if all these delays have caused so much trouble. I have not heard it; maybe you have. I have heard a few people to tell me--and over the weekend I got several long distance calls, and if necessary, I can name where they originated and who they were from--telling me and asking me, say, "For God's sakes, don't let that proposal pass." Well, I says, "I'm doing all I can." I can't entertain; I can't take people out; I just got my big mouth, and I'm trying to use it. I hope the people will listen to me, but that's all I've got. Even had a former member of the legislature to call me. He said, "Do you think it would help any? I'll get a caravan on top of caravan and come down there." I said, "No, we're in enough trouble now." We haven't got but a few more days, and I hope I stand it. Let us ease out of it the best way we can. We've had enough commotion, enough turmoil, and enough strife. Now, if you think--and if you want that brand on you and on your conscience--that you done something that would let the public utilities of this state place an increase on the back of the citizens that you and I represent without having a fair hearing, without getting all the information, and without going through the courts of this land, then you vote against my amendment. But, if you believe I'm right, you vote for my amendment, and I move the adoption thereof.

107th Days Proceedings—January 3, 1974

Questions

MR. CHATELAIN

Uncle Earl--I mean Mr. Rayburn; I'm sorry.

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. "Want to Be Public Service Commissioner"...you might have been kidding some of these delegates when you said you didn't know what it paid, but any time you qualify for something, you're going to know all about the pay.

MR. CHATELAIN

Delegate Rayburn, Mr. Burson alluded to the fact that the staff of the Public Service Commission is a limited staff. Can you tell me, sir, whether or not it is a fact that when someone applies for a rate increase, or something to the Public Service Commission, that that utility in fact pays for the staff necessary to make that investigation? Is that right, sir?

MR. RAYBURN

I think they pay for the audit, yes, sir--for the audit.

MR. CHATELAIN

As a matter of fact, they pay for the staff necessary to look into the application; is that right, sir?

MR. RAYBURN

It's my understanding that they pay for the audit, not necessarily the application, but they pay for the audit.

MR. CHATELAIN

They pay for the staff, too, sir.

MR. RAYBURN

Let me say this, Mr. Chatelain. Even though the late and great Earl Long and I were good friends, I kind of resent somebody kind of trying to make a mockery out of one of my good friends that was a good friend of the people of our great state.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected:
48-56. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

Next set of amendments are sent up by Mrs. Brien. Mrs. Brien, do you wish your amendments?

Two amendments were passed out by Mrs. Brien. The set that she wishes to go with has three amendments on it. The set she is not going with only has two. Look for the set with three amendments.

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, line 8, delete the word "twelve" and insert in lieu thereof the word "six".

Amendment No. 2. On page 2, delete lines 10 through 20, both inclusive, in their entirety, including the amendment proposed by Delegate Roy and adopted by the convention on the twenty-first.

Amendment No. 3. On page 2, at the beginning of line 21, delete the numeral "4" and insert in lieu thereof the numeral "2".

Explanation

MRS. BRIEN

Mr. Chairman, delegates, I changed the twelve months to six months. I can see why the Public Service Commission cannot render their decision in six months. Quite a few states have only six months, and some of the states only have a hundred twenty days. I think the set time is very important. Forty-seven out of fifty states require prior authorization of rate changes by the Public Service Commission. Forty states allow the Public Service Commission interim rates. Justice delayed is always justice denied. All Louisianians, all human beings are consumers, but never forget that it is not all Louisianians who are fortunate enough to be consumers of the services of the public utilities and common carriers. Remember that the reason there are many or not is not only because of indecision, but also because of stifling decisions...or to any consumer because anyhow he's poor, he is glad to pay a few pennies more for good service. In the section, appeals, again it brings out very strongly the decision should have been made and rendered in six months, and the carrier has the right to direct appeal to the district court if the Public Service Commission fails to make its decision in six months. With the lead line... With the lead all about bonding, it takes out the whole bonding provision because we won't see no other way than the commission give their decision in six months, what is a sufficient time to decide. It also makes the commission more responsive to the people. When a regulated public utility applies for a rate increase, that utility has already experienced or shows that it will experience inadequate earnings. The utility, properly, must present hard, solid evidence to substantiate its application. That's why I want solid time for the commission to act otherwise. The utilities suffer inadequate earnings, and the consumer is left out without service. We see it's always the one what needs the service the most is the loser. So, I ask you: please, accept my amendment.

Question

MR. ROY

Mrs. Brien, the only difference between your amendment and Mr. Rayburn's amendment is that you reduce the term to decide from twelve months to six months?

MRS. BRIEN

Six months; that's right because six months is a sufficient time. If you research it, you'll see that most all the states have six months and less. We have a lot of states that have only a hundred twenty days.

Point of Information

MR. BURSON

This is really a point of information, Mr. Chairman. This amendment doesn't jibe with the copy of the proposal that I have as far as the line numbers. I think some other delegates find the same thing.

MRS. BRIEN

Well, it's the wrong amendment. It's the....

MR. CASEY

Just a moment, Mrs. Brien. Particularly, what line...

MR. BURSON

Well, none of them. I've got this typed copy that was handed out to us. It just doesn't...

MR. POYNTER

Do you have the amendment with three amendments on it, Mr. Burson?

MR. BURSON

Oh, you've got a yellow copy reprinted?

MR. POYNTER

Yes, sir.

Mr. Vice-Chairman, in light of the question, there's one thing in the amendment that is unnecessary. On Amendment No. 2 it says, "On page 2, delete lines 10 through 20, both inclusive in their entirety..." and it goes on to say "including the amendment proposed by Delegate Roy." That language is not necessary in that that amendment was adopted to the other proposal, and the text of it is incorporated here, but it's not necessary to recite that language. So, actually, after the word "entirety" on the second line, you ought to just delete the remainder of that verbiage. It's unnecessary; perhaps confusing.

MRS. BRIEN

Also, in the section of appeals, we added on "all appeals shall be tried summarily and in preference to all other suits." So it makes it strong again that they have to act on it, so there is not more time wasted about it.

MR. POYNTER

Mrs. Brien, that's not in this amendment as it's passed out now.

107th Days Proceedings—January 3, 1974

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Point of Information

MR. TATE
Mr. Chairman, is the amendment going to be divided?
She just withdrew it?

MR. CASEY
Judge Tate, there's a question as to...a parliamentary question as to whether it's a divisible or not. It has not been resubmitted anyway right now.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER
The effect of what Mrs. Brien wants to do, if you still have the other copy of the amendment--the other amendment that she passed out--she in addition wants what is on the other amendment is Amendment No. 2. It ought to be "On page 2, line 32, immediately after the period "," add the following sentence: "All appeals shall be tried summarily and in preference to all other suits." She wants to add that as Amendment No. 4, which would read: "On page 2, line 32, immediately after the period "," add the following sentence: "All appeals shall be tried summarily and in preference to all other suits." The text of that language can be found before you in the form of the other amendment she had passed out, and in particular, Amendment No. 2 of the other set of amendments. It would become Amendment No. 4 here.

Point of Information

MR. GOLDMAN
If Mrs. Brien is going to change her amendment, there's another place...isn't there another place that should be changed in Section (E). It still carries "within twelve months", and her other amendment says "six months." That needs to be corrected if it's going to be consistent.

MR. CASEY
I think that's correct, Mr. Clerk.

MRS. BRIEN
I don't think they passed it out.

MR. GOLDMAN
It's on line 28 on page 2.

That's right; "On page 2, line 28" it's your point.

MRS. BRIEN
Yes, well, that's on the other amendment here.

MR. CASEY
Okay. Let's stand at ease for about five minutes in order that the proper corrections can be made on the amendment.

[Quorum Call: 95 delegates present and a quorum.]

Amendments

MR. POYNTER
All right.
Mrs. Brien now has sent up the amendments. Copies have been distributed. These are the same amendments that have been read before. I'll read them in detail.
The first four amendments have the effect of reducing the time frame for the decision from twelve months to six months. Then, deleting the language on page 2, lines 10 through 20. The fifth amendment is a separate proposition, on page 2, line 32 adding the requirement that "all appeals shall be tried summarily and in preference to all other suits."

Explanation

MRS. BRIEN
Well, I think I explained it enough. I only would ask you one more question. What is wrong with our Public Service Commission when all other states have six months and less to make their decision? I ask your favorable vote on this amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. SMITH
Mr. Chairman, I think the only change this makes is six months. We argued out the other one pretty thoroughly. I now move the previous question.

Point of Information

MR. DESHOTELS
Mr. Chairman, could the question be divided?

MR. CASEY
Well, let's take care of the previous question first, Mr. Deshotels.

[Previous Question ordered. Question ruled divisible. Quorum Call: 100 delegates present and a quorum.]

Further Discussion

MR. TATE
Mr. Chairman, the No. 5 amendment--I didn't hear it discussed up there at all, and it involves serious questions of judicial administration. It looks like we won't have a chance to raise them.

MR. CASEY
Well, Judge Tate, the question has already been called...

MR. TATE
Yes. All right, sir.

MR. CASEY
And no one wished recognition for the floor.

MR. TATE
All right. I made my point, maybe, I hope.

Point of Information

MR. FLORY
Mr. Chairman, could we ask for a suspension of the rules so that we could discuss that? I agree with Judge Tate on Amendment No. 5.

[Motion to reconsider the motion by which the Previous Question was ordered rejected: 44-59. Amendments rejected: 19-89. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

MR. CASEY
The Clerk will read the Roy amendment.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER
Amendment No. 1. On page 2, delete lines 5 through 32, both inclusive, in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "(D) Applications..."

[Motion to waive reading of the Amendment adopted without objection. Motion to limit debate on the Amendment exclusive of opening and closing to twenty minutes adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. ROY
Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this amendment changes several things in the committee proposal that we adopted previously. If you'll follow with me...Of course, it still provides for the effective filing date of the application which means, as I pointed out under Section 1. (B) "Powers and Duties,"the commission may say that you've got to furnish us with all this information at your own expense before we'll even consider your proposed increase. Now, you'll notice that Section 1 mandates the commission to decide, rather mandates the advertising or the proposed schedule for common carriers and public utilities. Then, of course, Section 2 says that they should...shall render a full decision on the application etc., within twelve months. Now, getting to Section 3, there is a change from the committee proposal in that on the second line of Section 3, it is applicable only to a public utility. The reason that the change was made was because there were some legitimate issues brought up with respect to common carriers. You buy a ticket to ride Trailways or Greyhound or any other common carrier, and it would be impossible, as a bookkeeping record, to have anything with respect to the automatic increase because there'd be hardly any effective way that you could be-- if the increase were wrong--there'd be hardly any way that you could be repaid or refunded your money. So, the commission would be entitled to--under the first part of Section 3, the first sentence--to permit the proposed increase in rates in whole or in part to be bonded even prior to the time that the commission has rendered its decision. That's solely within the discretion of the commission, which is where I think it ought to be. The five men sitting there may have, as a general notion, that in this particular rate increase request that they think that it's probably valid, but rather than make a final definitive decision, they say go ahead and bond it subject to our approval. If we go ahead and approve it at the end of that time, you're all right. If they disapprove it within the twelve months, then of course the commission may order that the bonds, previously allowed filed in support of the proposed rate increase, would then be disallowed. Now, that just gives some more leeway to the commission in its discretion to allow the bonding to be put in effect. The second sentence is the one that really makes some substantive changes. It changes the six months on the effective date of the application to twelve months, within which time that the commission must rule. It provides that the increase may be put into effect as provided by law so that the legislature will still, in the final analysis, be able to make such rules and regulations appertaining to the way that this bond will be put into effect, and of course, subject to the security requirements. Finally, that bond, as provided by law, would be in effect until a court of last resort rules on it. Remember now, it's restricted only with respect to utility companies because they're the only folks that have a record of the amount of charges that were imposed on you, and they're the only ones that can really refund back to you whatever they overcharged in case they're ultimately reversed. Section 4 provides that the utility shall make a full refund with legal interest thereon, within the time and manner prescribed by law. Now, here again there's no question but that the legislature may provide the manner in which the refund will be made, whether as of a credit or whether a direct payment. However, the legislature may never change and impose any obligation upon the consumer to file anything to get his refund back in case any proposed rate was disallowed. Finally, Section (E) deals with the appeals. There were some questions as to how the appeal would be taken. This simply provides that the appeal may be taken in a manner provided by law as to any party to the law suit or to the rate increase request. The legislature can provide how many days you have within which time to get into the district court. It may provide that the district court may obtain other evidence to determine this particular issue. It may restrict the type of evidence that may come in subsequent to it, and it also provides for the time it may provide for time limitations with respect to filing an appeal to the Supreme Court. The only other thing the legislature may not do is: it may not take away your direct right of appeal to the Supreme Court. Let me tell you why that's important. We have provided all along in this constitution that our appellate courts would be able to review questions of law and fact in any decisions rendered by district courts. Now, what you have here in essence is an appeal, maybe, from a commission ruling to a district court when new evidence is taken in. The district court could make an error on the law or on the evidence, the facts, for which reason the Supreme Court would have a direct right of review over it. For those reasons, I ask that you adopt the amendment.

107th Days Proceedings—January 3, 1974

Questions

MR. DUVAL

Chris, under the...I think Paragraph 3 is really the salient paragraph to this article. In Paragraph 3, the first sentence, it allows the Public Service Commission, by its own rules, to allow a rate to go into effect prior to a decision: is that correct?

MR. ROY

Yes.

MR. DUVAL

Now, in the event the Public Service Commission did not decide that case ever, that rate would remain in effect forever; would it not?

MR. ROY

If it didn't decide, then you go to sentence number two which would permit the application to continue in effect as provided by law.

MR. DUVAL

Well, I'm asking you this though: why would the utility want the Public Service Commission to decide if the rate is already in effect, and it's in their favor? If the commission never decided, it's possible to have the rate remain in effect, is it not, without ever a decision being made? Is that possible under this?

MR. ROY

It's certainly possible. I don't think that a Public Service Commission would allow a rate to stay in effect and never rule... I don't think they would say, "Look, we're going to allow you the rate increase, and we're never going to rule on this thing, so in effect we're giving you a rate increase without a ruling." I just don't see that.

MR. DUVAL

But, it is possible under this?

MR. ROY

Well, yes, certainly.

MR. DUVAL

My next question is directed to the second sentence. It's a permissive sentence, is it not, where it permits the legislature to make such laws to implement bond or security if no decision is rendered; is that right?

MR. ROY

The legislature may provide the method and the provisions with respect to how it goes into effect, but in my judgment, it mandates...it allows the utility to put it into effect subject to whatever laws the legislature passes on it.

MR. DUVAL

In other words, the intent of it is to give them the specific constitutional rights to place this into effect if no decision is made, but it's subject to such regulations as the legislature may enact; is that correct?

MR. ROY

Right.

MR. DUVAL

But, don't you think it's subject to interpretation? Do you think it's clear that the utility has the constitutional right to put it into effect, or do you think there might be some question that the legislature would have to enact a statute to give them this right?

MR. ROY

No, I think that they have the constitutional right to put it into effect subject to whatever the legislature says with respect to it.

MR. SINGLETARY

Chris, in Paragraph 3 you refer to the effective filing date. In Paragraph 2, you just say the date of filing. Did you mean to say the effective date of filing in Paragraph 2?

MR. ROY

Yes, that's meant there too.

MR. HAYES

Mr. Roy, if I understand this correctly, you have a constitutional right to put this rate into effect, but you can only get your refunds provided by law which is something different altogether; is that correct?

MR. ROY

No, as provided by law modifies the...

107th Days Proceedings—January 3, 1974

MR. HAYES

All right. If it's not provided here, how are you going to get it back? You say as provided by law; that's not provided here; is it?

MR. ROY

Section 4, then provides how you're going to get it back. The two things Section 4 says is that you never have the obligation to file anything--you, the consumer--and that you get it back with legal interest and as otherwise provided by law within one year.

MR. HAYES

Is this something that the legislature will have to do in order for me to get it back--provide this by law? Am I correct?

MR. ROY

Yes, the legislature would provide by law within what period of time you get it back. They may say within six months.

MR. HAYES

Well, good, but they have a constitutional right to do this to me. Is that correct? That's what I'm trying to find out.

MR. ROY

I miss...The only constitutional mandate is that the obligation to remake the refunds is always on the utility company. But, the method and way of making it and time of making the refunds with interest is provided by the legislature.

MR. HAYES

You're confusing me. They have a constitutional right to impose this?

MR. ROY

Who?

MR. HAYES

The utility company.

MR. ROY

No.

MR. HAYES

That's what I see here.

MR. ROY

No, no. Section 4 deals with the...2 and 3. In other words, suppose the commission, six months after an application was filed with it, granted the rate increase and put it in effect. Then subsequently, a year and a half or two years later, the Supreme Court says you should not have granted the rate increase; then Section 4 is applicable, and the utility company must make the refund with interest subject to the method and time being developed by the legislature.

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Roy, I'm trying to get back again to that explanation you gave as to why we are now limiting this provision primarily to one which would primarily benefit the telephone company. Isn't it true that railroads who carry freight, or anybody else who carries freight, has Bills of Lading, and therefore, would be in a position to rebate in the event their rate increase was not upheld?

MR. ROY

Yes, sir, Mr. Perez, that's true, but I feel that a bird in the hand for the consumer is worth two in the bush if you're talking about, and you know that it's impossible to then adjudicate the issues of the little guy that gets on the Trailways bus, though, and doesn't ride on a bill of lading.

MR. PEREZ

Isn't it also true that the man who gets on that bus has a ticket, and that on that ticket is stamped the date on which he traveled? So, therefore, he'd be in a position to get a rebate.

MR. ROY

That certainly is true, and I can't see some poor little guy who's riding a bus keeping tickets for years and years to determine whether he should get a refund or not, and then having to go through the process of filing the application.

MR. PEREZ

So, again aren't we really saying what we're doing is limiting this thing to put a special provision in the constitution just for one company--the Southern Bell Telephone Company?

MR. ROY

No, because a utility can be an electric company. In response to your question--because I want it clearly understood as far as I'm concerned--I think the consumer of this state, be he a guy who gets electricity or gets...is entitled to good telephone service, is going to be benefited by this provision because it's going to make the Public Service Commission act. It's going to allow service to be rendered for money that's worth something now instead of fifty cents on a dollar later down the line where only the big shot gets anything in return.

MR. PEREZ

Well, have you seen Louisiana Power and Light Company or any of these other public utilities up here complaining of this thing? I can't see the only group of lobbyists that we've seen up here the telephone company people?

MR. ROY

Mr. Perez, I have not been around the legislature like some other people here, and I know no lobbyist. The only one I know that's here is a telephone company lobbyist, and I wouldn't know who the other people are in any event.

MR. PEREZ

May I suggest that you look up into the audience, and I'll be glad to point out a half a dozen to you?

MR. ROY

Well, you probably can. I understand you represented them at one time. I didn't.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Chris, you voted against Senator Rayburn's amendment; did you not?

MR. ROY

Yes, I did.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Didn't want to leave that discretion to the legislature to set up the sort of mechanism you're talking about here; isn't that correct?

MR. ROY

No, you're wrong.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Why is it you voted against that amendment?

MR. ROY

Because Senator Rayburn's amendment would have allowed, in my judgment, if we're going to have a constitutionally created Public Service Commission, it would have then not allowed what I intend to seek here which is: that they're going to rule on those applications or else they're going to feel the heat of the people one way or the other.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Well, he left in the part, or would have left in the part that said that they had to rule within twelve months.

MR. ROY

Yes, but saying that they have to and putting something that makes them rule, is a horse of a different color, Mrs. Zervigon.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Well, you have here that the commission may permit an increase. Right?

MR. ROY

That's correct.

MRS. ZERVIGON

And then following that, "after the twelve month period an increase may be put into effect." The second may refers to the utility company, right?

MR. ROY

Right.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Not to the commission.

107th Days Proceedings—January 3, 1974

MR. ROY

To the utility company.

MRS. ZERVIGON

But then after that almost everything that happens in your amendment after that is "as provided by law."

MR. ROY

Right.

MRS. ZERVIGON

So, aside from the fact that we have an automatic rate increase, your amendment is very little different than Senator Rayburn's in that everything is provided by law. Isn't that so?

MR. ROY

No, there's a lot of difference because the constitutional right for the rate increase as provided by law, in my judgment, would mean that the legislature could say, "look, the PSC has not acted; it's been fourteen months. These people have finally bonded this thing, and the rate goes into effect." Now, we're going to provide--the legislature would say--we're going to provide, though, that at that moment the case is then to be considered by a district court, and if that court then rules one way or the other on it, they could modify the constitutional mandate that was automatically allowed previously. There's just a lot of difference between my concept and Mr. Rayburn's. His is that: let the courts decide, and mine is: let the people whom we elect decide initially, and then let the courts review it.

MRS. ZERVIGON

But, to get back to this distinction between what's going to be constitutional and what's going to be statutory, in your Section 4 the consumer gets his money back in a manner prescribed by law.

MR. ROY

In a time and method, yes.

MRS. ZERVIGON

So, they could really make it rather difficult if the law read that way?

MR. ROY

Who?

The legislature? I don't think Sixty would let it happen.

Further Discussion

MR. ABRAHAM

Ladies and gentlemen, I rise in opposition to this amendment. Let me tell you what this really does--and this is the sleeper in here. The second sentence of Paragraph 3 states that "if no decision is rendered on the application within twelve months... the proposed increase may be put into effect as provided by law and subject to such bond or security requirements, until final action by a court of last resort." This places the discretion in the hands of the utility company as to whether or not they want to place these rates into effect, and they can go ahead and do so. As provided by law, simply prescribes the manner, and what can happen here is that they can post their bonds; they put their rates into effect, and nobody has anything to say about it because they have a constitutional right to do so. Unless some consumer, or somebody--the Public Service Commission or a consumer--takes them to court, they don't have to worry about going to court. The Public Service Commission can let it ride, and the rates will stay in effect forever. Now, I ask you: is this the proper way to do business in this instance? Words, "provided by law", doesn't really mean anything here. But, the thing that really bugs me is why are we insisting on putting this type of language into the constitution? We don't have any such language for any other elected official. We've got statewide elected officials. We've got the treasurer, commissioner of insurance, elections, agriculture, and what we have done with these people--now, these are statewide elected officials; they control our destinies in many ways too--and in about for five or six or seven or eight lines, we have written dissent language into this constitution which simply says that they will have certain general duties, and they'll have other powers and other duties as provided by law. Now, these are statewide elected officials. But, here we are taking the Public Service Commission which consists of five members, and we're going to write detailed language into this constitution to tie their hands as to what they can do and what they can't do. I repeat again there is no other language in any other state constitution similar to this. Those people that say that there are limitations in other states, these limitations are statutory. What we're saying in effect, also, that if an elected official doesn't act, the public has to pay. Now, we're saying this, well, we want this done in the name of providing good services, but I'd like for the legislature and the state government to provide me with a lot of services too. But, I don't see any mandate that we have that the legislature is going to either have to provide these services, or if they don't provide them, there's going to be an automatic tax increase so that they will be provided. This is what we're saying in effect right here that in order to provide a...supposedly provide additional services that we're going to have an automatic rate increase. Now, I have not gotten into personalities or companies or anything here before, but I say to you that we're writing one particular language in this constitution for one particular company. And that's all because I have not been approached by any other utility for any relief here. They all feel that their relief should be to the legislature. I say that the South Central Bell Telephone Company ought to have its relief to the legislature too. Now, I'm not going to quarrel with the fact that they do need some relief. I'm not going to quarrel with the fact that the Public Service Commission may not have acted responsibly in the past, but I say that the relief should be in the legislature and not in the constitution. Now, you see passed out on your desk some information that I had printed up. It shows you a comparison of these telephone rates in Louisiana with those in Texas. We pay more for our long distance rates in Louisiana than we do in Texas. Now, why if things are so bad here, why are we paying more? If you say Texas doesn't have the services they should have, still the relief, though, in Texas is in the legislature and not in the constitution. I've heard many, many people get up here during this convention and talk about the rights of the people. Well, I'm telling you you're taking away the rights of the people here. You're putting the burden of responsibility on the people to have to go to court to make their elected officials act. I think the responsibility should be on the utility company, but this particular amendment does not even require the utility company to go to court because they can place the rates into effect, and then they can just let it ride. I urge the rejection of this amendment.

Question

MR. ALEXANDER

Mr. Abraham, there has been quite a bit of discussion about the inability of the Public Service Commission to properly audit books, etc., within a specified period--six months or twelve months--because, possibly, of the wide spread operations of the company. But, is it not a fact that any kind of data gathering activity: that is, the auditing, etc., would be confined to Louisiana intrastate where the company operates?

MR. ABRAHAM

No, sir, Mr. Alexander, because in auditing the books of these subsidiary company, they must go all the way back to the parent company because the parent company can make the subsidiary make or lose money as it so desires simply by charging with overhead charges and other costs from other subsidiaries. So, you've got to go deeper than just what goes on right here in this particular company's books.

MR. ALEXANDER

But the operation....

MR. CASEY

You have exceeded your time, Mr. Abraham. I'm sorry, gentlemen.

Further Discussion

MR. WOMACK

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, there is one thing I would like to correct at this time where the former speaker said that the wording "as provided by law" meant nothing. If you will go back and reread that section or that paragraph or that sentence in Paragraph (3) it says "if no decision is rendered on the application within twelve months after such filing date the proposed increase may be put into effect as provided by law and subject to protective bond." In other words, the legislature... they can't put it in; the legislature has got to provide the manner in which it would go in. The second thing that I want to point out is it looks like a lot of people are missing the boat. It seems that someone here is operating under a theory or philosophy that this money is going into the pockets of the stockholders or the telephone company. I remember back just a few years ago when they applied for a rate increase and, of course, it wasn't politically nice for the Public Service Commission to grant it, so they just studied it. We studied it for four or five years. By the time they got through studying we had two or three elections, by that time, the rate increase that they had applied for was absolutely meaningless because times and economical conditions had changed. During that period of time literally thousands and thousands of people wanted better service that they couldn't get. Now, we've spent a lot of time talking up here about the money that it's going to cost the consumer. Well, I don't care what it cost me, I want the service and you give me the service within a reasonable fee, that's what I want. I've got many, many people that want to get away from that eight party line that they can't use. I've got a lot of people that I want to call that's on a eight party line where I can't use my private line because I can't get their's for an hour at a time. In order to get rid of that condition, the utility company, the telephone company has got to have a little profit. When you grant them a rate increase to show them that they are going to have enough money to pay off a bonded indebtedness, then they are going to sell debentures or sell bonds in order to make this service available. I would like to remind you of one other thing, when you get an area that they can't economically serve, nobody else can serve it because it's franchised out and it's franchised out by this same Public Service Commission that won't act, so the people are just caught between the rock and the hard place. This whole section here is designed to get a Public Service Commission to act. This suits me a lot better than the original because it does give the full twelve months. When they come in and file an application, they want the application considered on its total merits so they include every aspect of the economics in their application, there is just absolutely no reason to take longer than twelve months. At the end of this twelve month period of time, then, the rate increase can be put into effect according to this constitutional provision as provided by law and after bond is....or a certain security is put up to guarantee the payment and then it's paid off according to the court. What other protection you can give the consumer, I don't know. What this does is gives the utility company the opportunity to come up with a sufficient rate that will allow progress to be made. So, I'd urge the adoption of this amendment.

Questions

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Womack, I'm interested in your interpretation of the second sentence in Paragraph (3). Now, Mr. Roy, who introduced the amendment indicated that the utility would have the constitutional right to put its rate increase into effect, of course, the legislature would have to pass....would be mandated to pass laws regulating this and stipulating the type of bond or security. But you do agree, don't you, that the utility has the constitutional right to do this under this proposal; is that correct, sir?

MR. WOMACK

I think possibly it would have the right to do it, the legislature provide the manner in which it will be done. What you are trying to say is, probably, if you're opposing this--it sounds like maybe you are--you're saying not only does the Public Service Commission won't act but the legislature won't act. I certainly don't agree with that. I think the legislature would tie it down very well.

MR. DUVAL

That gives me another question. If we do make a mistake here in this constitution it can't be changed, but couldn't the legislature direct itself to this problem, I have a lot of faith in it? Couldn't it handle this problem? Don't you think it's primarily statutory?

MR. WOMACK

Well, I don't see any question but what it could be done. I think you could abolish about ninety-five percent of what we've done and say that you just shall have just one blank sentence pretty well covering everything and cover it all by the legislature.

Further Discussion

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, Mr. Womack's close makes a good beginning for my remarks because it seems to me that this is obviously a legislature matter. If the legislature will act to put into effect laws requiring a protective bond, if the legislature will act to provide for a refund with legal interest within the time and the manner prescribed by law. If the legislature will act to provide for an appeal to be taken in a certain manner, if the legislature will do all of these things, then I think it is obvious that the legislature can handle this entire matter and ought to handle this entire matter rather than this constitutional convention. It seems to me that this is the most presumptuous thing that we have done if we undertake to make a final decision on this matter. If the legislature were considering legislation on this point, it would have full scale hearings, would hear both sides of the question, would hear not only from the utility company representatives but also from the Public Service Commission who has the expertise in this manner, who could tell us about the procedure and what is involved. We, here, most of us delegates to this convention have not heard sufficient evidence to reach an arbitrary decision that if a decision is not made within a certain period of time that a utility should have the right to put an automatic rate increase into effect. We simply are not--I put it to you and I think if you will look into your heart you will agree that most of us are simply not that familiar with the kind of procedure that is involved here. Most of us, I submit to you, would find the average application involved here unintelligible if we had to sit down and read it and reach the kind of decision that we want the Public Service Commission to reach here with such dispatch. Now, there is a common misconception that invades most of the remarks that have been made in favor of this scheme, that is, that we are talking about one request for a rate increase by one utility company made once a year. Do you realize that it's entirely possible for a utility company to make three or four rate increase requests within a single year all of which would be governed by this same language? Do you know that as a matter of fact there are tank truck carriers in Louisiana because of the fuel situation that have this year, this past year of 1973, made not one, or two, but three requests for rate increases during this year? So, I adjure you to think of the fact that the ramifications of this provision go far beyond one rate increase request by Southern Bell or by any other public utility company. Now, I've heard a lot of conversation about what is the law in other states but no one's placed a memorandum on my desk or on your desk showing us what the law is in other states. I would bet that if they did, we would find that this is not in the constitution of any other state. But, if such provisions exist at all, they exist in the statutes where indeed they ought to exist. We've heard also the argument that Southern Bell or the other utility companies will pay for the necessary audits. Now, ladies and gentlemen, let's be realistic. Certainly if Southern Bell is paying for the audit, the auditor would be less than human if he were not inclined to view things favorably from their light. I don't think that that is the answer to protecting the public interest and public utility rate regulations. The only truly impartial auditor, the only truly impartial examiner or expert in those instances are either one who is in the full-time employment of the Public Service Commission or one who is paid by the Public Service Commission for the services that he renders. I think if you will look into your hearts on this matter and forget the emotional arguments that have overwhelmed us perhaps--and I have made as many as anyone on this particular issue--the proposal we are being presented with here is first of all legislative, secondly, it is impractical in that I defy anyone and I have not heard any of the proponents even attempt to do so to get up here and explain how refunds would be made in our highly mobile population. Finally.

...that what we are involved with here is the interest of the public and the public in the main is a rate payer.

Further Discussion

MR. WILLIS

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, you may leave your chair and kick facts out of doors but on your return you will see them nestled deep in slumber like a kitten near your chair. Recently I revisited that little glade of cool green shade, that gentle hush retreat that quiet sanctuary on the plantations where the birds converse alone and the bees exchange pollen for nectar with the flowers, not to learn about the birds and the bees, but to take this document under advisement. It did not take me twelve months, not even twelve hours to decide my course on this present question of the Public Service Commission. The most generous legal minds will assure you that one year to decide any case or controversy is ample for the dullest. Indecision or failure to decide timely is not public service. The commission issued to duly elected Public Service Commissioners implies the duty because they are fully paid to work full time and to decide if public service is to be rendered. If you value public service, you should mandate public servants by their commission to act by judgment and not by affection.....and by all means to act timely and deliberately. In the face of our facts revealed by experience and statistics to this convention not to set a day of decision or time for action for public servants would be as wise as reprovng the hot sun or the frost. I do not look with terror at the suggestion that such a course would raise rates, that in the language of the board is a tale told by an idiot without any significance whatsoever. The only thing it will raise is the level of service, popular applause, based on misguided or half truths mean nothing to me. I feast on the integrity of good conscience. The reason Texas has low, long-distance rates is because they don't allow their commissioners to play nickel politics; it costs ten cents to use their pay phone. In all good conscience, I proclaim that those elected to decide should decide because justice delayed is justice denied, only justice satisfies all. Those elected to decide should not drag their anchors and so ours and lose our position, our station, our bearing, or our heading. In nautical language or in the talk of the sea, let the theme song of all public servants be "Anchors Away." Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

107th Days Proceedings—January 3, 1974

Question

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Willis, as usual, I'm tremendously impressed with your erudition and eloquence and knowing, of course, that you have a distrust or at least a reluctance to trust the legislature in some instances, I'm wondering why the bird is going to the consumer here in the sense that his refunds are left up to the legislature but the utility is protected in the constitution.

MR. WILLIS

Well, first of all, your question is based on a presumption-- and I may say a vicious one--that I distrust the legislature; nay, I trust them very much. I might say that my legislators, both of them, are my first cousins--my Senator and my Representative. Now, to answer your question, the trust, dear sir, is not that it is lacking, it's just that I like a little assurance and this is irrepealable law.

Closing

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I just want to point out a couple of things. First of all, Monday Lowe just reminded me that financial statement preparations, etc., and reporting and auditing as assigned to a certain well established principle that one can require of the company and thereafter the rate of return on the investment can be figured out almost to a dollar and there shouldn't be any problem there. Now, I'm going to yield to some questions because I know Justice Tate has one.

Questions

MR. TATE

Now, Mr. Roy, would you accept an amendment that says on line... when it says "If no decision is rendered on the application within twelve months after such filing date the proposed increase may be put into effect" but add "but only as provided by law and subject to minimum requirements"?

MR. ROY

Well, Justice Tate, we've talked about that. I will accept that amendment and I'm sure that will satisfy Mr. Duval--wherever he is--with some of the questions that he had on it. Alright, Mr. Duval?

MR. TATE

Alright. Now, may I ask you this? Then, the text of that amendment would be the rates could not be put into effect unless the legislature provided a general law which perhaps could require a court review before they get put into effect; is that correct, sir?

MR. ROY

Well, the rate could not be put into effect unless the legislature passed a general law setting forth how it would be done.

MR. ABRAHAM

Chris, I think my question was partially answered, but what I was going to ask is that if the legislature did not provide anything by law under this present language the rates could be put into effect; could they not?

MR. ROY

That was my interpretation, the others dissgreed with me but to make it perfectly clear we are going to have that the legislature has got to set.....

MR. ABRAHAM

Alright. Let me ask you one other question and to answer a remark that was made by some other speaker, I don't remember who. Are you aware that the research staff prepared on May 16, Staff Memorandum No. 13, which did the research on other Public Service Commissions in the state and spelled out which ones have language in the constitution and which ones do not?

MR. ROY

No, I don't have that.

MR. KEAN

Mr. Roy, I was concerned about the point that Mr. Perez raised about the possibility that if the commission permitted the rate to go into effect by putting up bond, that the matter could just sit there for some indefinite period of time. It's not clear to me in Paragraph (E) dealing with appeals as to whether or not that paragraph is intended to apply to action taken under Subparagraph (3). I ask you whether or not you would be willing to accept an amendment to your proposal which would make it clear that if the commission did permit the rate to go into effect or the public utility did put the rate into effect with bond that the right of appeal in (E) would apply to that action as well as final action of the commission?

MR. ROY

Mr. Kean, the answer to that is yes. I think it could be a little redundant in view of Judge Tate's request that will be added "but only as provided by law," but if that makes you feel better that it will be in the appellate provision part, we would accept that amendment. So....

Mr. Chairman, in view of that, I would like to withdraw the amendment for the purpose of adding these...which I think are technical amendments as suggested by Justice Tate and Mr. Kean. I think we can get on and pass this thing right away.

[Motion to suspend the rules to allow withdrawal of the Amendment adopted: 93-4. Amendment withdrawn.]

MR. CASEY

O.K. Mr. Roy now resubmits his amendment, as corrected. Will you explain the corrections, Mr. Clerk?

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

There are only two changes in the amendment. The first one comes in Subparagraph (2), the first line of Subparagraph (2) would read: "Within twelve months from the effective date of filing." The second change comes in Subparagraph (3) and comes in the third to last line which presently reads "the proposed increase may be put into effect,"--add the words "but only"-- "but only as provided by law." We've got a third change.

[Motion to recess for lunch rejected: 27-69.]

Point of Information

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, I think that this is a very important matter, under the rules, I believe we're entitled to have in writing what we are voting on. I certainly would like to have it in writing. I don't care whether we go to lunch or not, but I would like to know what these changes are in writing.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Burson, it's my understanding that the amendment is being run off with the corrections and will be passed out in a couple of minutes, so let's just...

MR. POYNTER

The third change, I'll go ahead and read it, adds another aentence to (E) which reads: "The right of appeal granted herein shall extend to any action by the commission, including, without limitation, any action taken by the commission or by a public utility under the provisions of Subparagrph (3) above."

Explanation

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I'm going to be very quick---to accommodate Mr. Singletary, we put the word "effective" before the word "date" on the line at (2) so that it would be consistent. To answer Justice Tate's question, we added the words "but only" before the words "as provided" in Section (3). With respect to Mr. Kean's suggestion, we added the additional sentence that the right of appeal to the district court or to any court would be with respect to the bonding or any allowance that the commission had made for or against the utilities, so that leaves it completely up to the courts to review that particular issue so there is no question about the courts being able to review the issue of bonds and, with that, I submit the question and ask for a record vote.

Point of Information

MR. STAGG

The convention adopted a limit on debate on this matter. The rules were suspended simply for the purpose of making an amendment to the amendment. Now, I think the time for the question has long since arrived and I move the Chair so to act.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Stagg, I would have to rule that this is a new amendment, substantial changes have been made and it's more than just some minute corrections. We have a new amendment. If you wish to make a motion to limit debate that's certainly in order, but I feel compelled to recognize whoever wishes to speak under the rules.

MR. STAGG

Mr. Chairman, I would like to move to limit further debate on this to ten minutes.

[Motion to limit debate on the Amendments to ten minutes adopted: 65-36.]

Point of Order

MR. PEREZ

Does it require a suspension of the rules to limit debate?

MR. CASEY

No, it does not.

Further Discussion

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Acting Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, it seems like we have been on this provision for eternity and it just so happens that unfortunately it was probably the last paragraph that we would have adopted before going into adopting our full constitution, that we had worked on for a year. It's very unfortunate that the telephone company saw fit to inject this into this constitution. A lot has been said about how many states have this. There's a chart over there. There's forty-eight out of the fifty states require positive action from the Public Service Commission before any rate increase goes into effect. Now, what does this amendment do that Mr. Roy has injected into this new amendment, or the reamended amendment? It says, "But only as provided by law," which means to me in my way of thinking that none of it's necessary because it has to all be provided by law. Now, what are we going to do, sit here and placate the telephone company because that's all it applies to? Now, it applies to no one else. The way I read it, it doesn't apply to anyone. It just applies to Southern Bell, or any telephone company doing business in this state. I don't know how many you have, but I have one--Southern Bell. Maybe you call it a monopoly; maybe you don't. Maybe you're going to put a whole sheet of paper in a constitution to satisfy some whims of Southern Bell, and that's what you're doing. That's exactly what you're doing because now you say, "As only as provided by law," which means if the law don't provide, I can't see how any of it could go into action. I just don't see how we can sit here, and destroy what we have done on a provision of this magnitude. On the last article we were ready to adopt. Ladies and gentlemen, I wish you would reject this amendment and let's get on with the business of this convention.

I see no reason why we should continue, and it just amazes me that we sit here and see the power struggle going on to get this particular provision in the constitution. It's just amazing, and I'm sure you all heard like I heard over the holidays; my people didn't like this provision in the constitution. I can't find anybody who has in the parish. If you would bring up that last case on the Public Service Commission, I'd like the people to see just what that case consisted of. Mr. Alario, would you roll up the last case, those two voluminous boxes of stuff, that was the last rate increase by the Public Service Commission, or the increase requested by the telephone company to the Public Service Commission. Maybe you think that you can do this in six months or a year. Well, if you think a three hundred and sixty billion dollar company as the telephone company with the resources they have, with the legal services they have can outdo your Public Service with a nine hundred thousand dollar budget, I think you ought to go ahead and vote for this provision. That's what it amounts to. Look at the last case. It's volume on top of volume on top of volume. Just look at it if you're a mind. Take your time, and look at it. That's the last case. Now, you look at the limited resources of your Public Service Commission and how many attorneys they have, and if there's an appeal, if there's an appeal, mind you, Judge, this is what they base it on, if I'm not mistaken, is the record. Now, can you see a poor citizen or an individual bringing suit, bringing suit against this increase? I can't. I can't see any one of you all having the resources to match what you have here.

I'm trying to proceed orderly, and Mr. Chairman, let me reflect that. I don't mind the impoliteness on myself, but I think the impoliteness that's projected on this convention and the fraud projected on the people of this state by what we're trying to do here--I think that's impolite to the people of this state. I think somebody's going to reckon with it. One day we'll all have to bear for what we do here. You go ahead and laugh if you want. You can mock the people of this state if you want, and that's what you're doing. When you say "an automatic increase," that's what you're doing, gentlemen.

Further Discussion

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I hesitate to rise on a matter on which I have no expertise. However, I think at this stage of the convention's deliberations on this issue we have reached a point where we can reach a fair and practical compromise of the opposing views. I have voted with Senator Rayburn consistently. Those telephone people stop at nothing... I have voted consistently with Senator Rayburn throughout these proceedings because I believed with him, and I do believe with him that it would be most unwise to fix in the constitution an automatic rate increase on public utilities when the commission does not act, no matter for what good reason the commission has been unable to act. However, the proponents have pointed out--and I think the original Rayburn amendment would have permitted the utilities to go into court if the commission did not act within twelve months and show cause why a temporary rate increase might not be permitted, pendency... during the pendency of the proceedings, subject to bond. Now, as I read this amendment, and I am assured by the authors of it that this is the extent, and I think it unambiguously so provides, this amendment now cures up automatic constitutionally mandated rate increase if no decision's reached. It says as I read it--and you can read it better than I can--if no decision is rendered on the application within twelve months after such filing date, the proposed increase may be put into effect, but only as provided by law and subject to restrictive bond requirements. As I read that, it means unless the legislature provides for the mechanics of it by a general law, and this, in that general law thing that can go to court after twelve months and file a rule to show cause why they shouldn't have a temporary rate increase. The commission could show that they have volumes and volumes and can't reach its mark easily and efficiently. So, as I envision this amendment, it just says, "The legislature may in the future provide by a general law that the utilities may get a temporary increase providing they provide sufficient bond to protect the consumer if the commission doesn't act within twelve months." I think in summary, and in conclusion I think that this is a practical resolution of the computing requirements before us. I personally would have preferred the Rayburn approach. Leave it all subject to law. But, this apparently suits a preponderant number of delegates, and I'm willing to vote for it in the effort to get through with this matter with fairness to the people and conclude the question.

Questions

MR. TOBIAS

Judge Tate, is it not true that this type of provision would not only apply to the telephone company, but would also apply to every other public utility in this state, including gas companies, electric companies, etc?

107th Days Proceedings—January 3, 1974

MR. TATE

I don't know if it's a friendly question, but as I read it, any increase in rates is subject to this requirement.

MR. TOBIAS

Second of all, would you believe me if I told you that there was some duplicate material in that stack that was presented?

MR. TATE

I would not believe that because they are honorable men who labored under it and brought it up.

MR. RAYBURN

Judge, if the language that you just said where you include in there "but only as provided by law," if we're going to adopt that, why couldn't we just come back up in the beginning and say "within twelve months from the date of effective filing date, the commission shall render a full decision on each application as provided by law," and leave out all this other stuff here?

MR. TATE

Senator Rayburn, I voted with you on that approach. Apparently, we didn't have enough delegates to agree with us on it. I'm willing to accept this as accomplishing the same results, and allowing the ...our good friends up in the gallery to go home and say we brought home a little tiny piece of bacon.

MR. RAYBURN

Well, Judge, would you agree then that if you...if this language is adopted, that that's all it actually says "as provided by law" on any application or anything that might come before the commission, if they don't act on it within twelve months, it shall be in effect or not in effect shall be it provided by law?

MR. TATE

I would give you qualified agreement. I think the constitutional language says they have to decide it within twelve months. So, then it says, if they don't decide it within twelve months, then the legislature may provide for a general procedure by which they could put in the rates temporarily. The courts could or someone could put in the court the rates temporarily pending final decision.

MR. RAYBURN

Judge, would you believe the Supreme Court decides all these matters in twelve months?

MR. CASEY

You've exceeded your time, Judge.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted: 81-29. Motion to reconsider tabled. Motion for the Previous Question on the entire subject matter.]

Motion

MR. NUNEZ

I object to the railroading of this proposal. It's 12:30. Mr. Chairman, I move we recess for lunch.

[Motion adopted: 92-11.]

Recess

Chairman Henry in the Chair

[Quorum Call: 94 delegates present and a quorum.]

Personal Privilege

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, right before we recessed for lunch I presented you with a file on the filings of the telephone company for the rate increase to the Public Service Commission. There was a question as to the accuracy of that information. I've been asked by several people was it accurate, and was the documents in there accurate simply because, I think it was Mr. Tobias and Mr. Stinson questioning what we had in there as to the accuracy of them. Let me assure you that I would not get up before you on this microphone--or anybody else--on a matter as serious as what I consider we have before us and give you a false document. Every item in there was docket number by docket number from the Public Service Commission, and it's available for you to look at. When I was asked before, I personally went through it, and I found no duplications at all, and I found no false information. I just thought I would pass that on to you because I resent when I tried to make a point with the voluminous amount of material that's presented in a rate increase that someone would question that I would give you false information. I resent it very much. I certainly hope that you realize that I would not do that, and I consider the seriousness of this particular proposal as magnanimous with the passage of this constitution. I don't think I've made my feelings any clearer than I have. I've tried to. I think it's a very serious proposal. I think it can jeopardize our whole constitution, and I resent very much the fact that I was questioned as to the validity and the honesty of what I was trying to do. I thank you, ladies and gentlemen.

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 11, after the word "Term" and before the word "There" change the period "." to a semicolon ";" and insert in lieu thereof the following word and punctuation "Domicile."

Amendment No. 2.--and there is a correction in it.

Amendment No. 2. On page 1, line 19, after the word and punctuation "chosen." add the following: "The commission shall have its domicile at the state--and this is the change; not "ol" but "al"; state capital, but may meet, hold investigations, and render orders elsewhere in this state."

Explanation

MR. JUNEAU

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, if you will look at the provisions in the current constitution regarding the Public Service Commission, it establishes where the actual legal domicile is of the Public Service Commission. As I read the proposal relating to the Public Service Commission that's now before you, that particular aspect was not covered. I think it's appropriate to actually put the situs of the domicile of the Public Service Commission in the constitution because if you don't that...the legal domicile of the commission could be moved about. Now, I think of the magnitude it's of statewide significance and affects the whole state, and I think that the reason that they had it in the prior constitution should be carried over into this constitution to establish the actual domicile at the state capital.

Questions

MR. WOMACK

Mr. Juneau, as the broad term of "at the state capital" does that mean the state capital building or in Baton Rouge?

MR. JUNEAU

Well, it'd be the state capital in Baton Rouge. It's where your state capital is physically located, Mr. Womack.

MR. WOMACK

The reason I asked the question, you know normally they meet, I think, maybe a lot of times in the Natural Resource Building or in the Welfare Building, and I'm just wondering if that state capital is broad enough term there.

MR. JUNEAU

That's why the language which you see here, Mr. Womack, is the identical language that you have in the current constitution because it says "but may meet, hold investigations, and render orders elsewhere in this state," which, you know, other places in the state, but there's nothing to preclude them from having meetings as they now have. It's the current law in the State of Louisiana. But, I think it's imperative that we put the situs somewhere.

107th Days Proceedings—January 3, 1974

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, you weren't here earlier, and I had handled the committee proposal, and I think that's a good amendment. I think it ought to be stated where the domicile of the Public Service Commission is.

MR. BROWN

Why do you say it's so imperative, Mr. Juneau? You said, "It's just imperative that the situs be stated." Why is it so imperative?

MR. JUNEAU

Well, I can conceive of a situation where the commission could physically move the actual domicile, for example, to Monroe, La., in one year, then physically move it to Shreveport. I think it's important for the people in this state to know when they have problems relating to the Public Service Commission that they know that they can go to one place to address their problems concerned in the Public Service Commission; that is, the situs of the state capital.

MR. BROWN

Well, that may be true if you live in Baton Rouge, but maybe you live in Jonesboro, La.; you might want to know that it might come to Jonesboro one of these days.

MR. JUNEAU

Well, I think something as important as the Public Service Commission affects all areas of the state, and ought to be located, its offices in one physical location, the primary location.

MR. TOBIAS

Pat, are you familiar with the doctrine of forum non conveniens, the federal doctrine? We have the same doctrine in Louisiana which allows the district court to transfer an action from one district court to another district court if the parties to the case are involved there, for example, for the convenience of the party. Do you believe that that can presently be done under the present constitution?

MR. JUNEAU

No.

MR. TOBIAS

For the convenience?

MR. JUNEAU

No.

MR. TOBIAS

All the constitution says is that the domicile shall be East Baton Rouge, and the suit shall be brought there. Do you think that prohibits that court there from transferring it? It just says "suit shall be brought there."

MR. JUNEAU

No. I think it fits in with your appellate provisions and all the other provisions in this document which say that appeals should be brought at the domicile of the commission; the domicile of the commission has to be East Baton Rouge Parish. I just said it's almost imperative you put that language in.

MR. BOLLINGER

Delegate Juneau, as you know, my cohorts from Lafourche is continually worrying how everything affects Thibodaux. My question is, how does this affect Lockport?

MR. JUNEAU

I thought the question was, how did it affect Bollinger Shipyards? I really don't know, Mr. Bollinger.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendments adopted: 101-1. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

Delegate Abraham has two sets of amendments. He wants to go with the shorter. It's actually two amendments, but it's much shorter in length.

[3066]

The amendments read as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, delete lines 6 through 20, both inclusive, in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"(1) The commission shall render decisions on applications, petitions, and proposed rate schedules in the manner prescribed by law."

Amendment No. 2. On page 2, at the beginning of line 21, change the number "(4)" to the number "(2)".

Mr. Abraham, for clarity we need to say "on page 2, delete lines 6 through 20 both inclusive in their entirety, including all floor amendments thereto," to make sure that it clearly deletes the Roy amendment, your intent, I believe.

Then that would not affect the Juneau amendment, since that's to a different page, but it would delete the Roy amendment.

Explanation

MR. ABRAHAM

Ladies and gentlemen, in the Roy amendment we put in a lot of language, but all of the language hinges on "as provided by law" or "in the manner prescribed by law." It throws all of this a-till back into the legislature. To provide the manner in which these rates are going to be put into effect, provide for refund, the legislature will have to provide for the manner in which refunds are made. So, what my amendment proposes to do is simply say that this commission shall render its decision on applications, petitions and rate schedules in the manner prescribed by law. Let the legislature then go ahead and determine the time limits and everything else because I can foresee where it may be necessary that there may be different time limits placed on how long on the Public Service Commission for different types of public services. I don't think we need to tie it down in the constitution. I don't think we need all this language in the constitution. I think everyone here is in agreement they want a time limit placed on the Public Service Commission. I'll go along with that. They do need to be mandated to act. But, I think that with my amendment by putting this all in the legislature, we are more flexible, and that if a particular thing does not work, then the legislature is in a position to change it. I think we'll be far better off to go ahead and leave this thing in a flexible position. I don't think anyone is going to quarrel with the fact that the legislature now is going to have to come up with some rules and regulations by which the Public Service Commission can act. I urge the adoption of the amendment.

Questions

MR. ROY

Mr. Abraham, do you realize that you take away from the commission the power to enact and regulate and provide for reasonable rules and regulations of its own accord when you simply say that anything it does has got to be provided by law by the legislature?

MR. ABRAHAM

No, Chris, because in the paragraph (B) I believe it is, that we say "it shall adopt and enforce reasonable rules, regulation procedures necessary for discharge of the duties, and shall have such other powers and perform other duties as provided by law." So, I don't think we're doing a thing here than what we've already said before.

MR. ROY

You don't really mandate any type of decision or force any type of decision-making process like my amendment provides with respect to some type of almost automatic rate-making... that is, bonding process. Is that right?

MR. ABRAHAM

That's right because here again I think we need to be flexible in this because if one particular system does not work, we need the legislature to be in a position to change it, and I think that relief should be to the legislature.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment rejected: 41-65. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

Further Discussion

MR. POYNTER

Senator Lambert sends up amendments at this time.
Amendment reads as follows:
Amendment No. 1. On page 3, delete lines 1 through 13, both inclusive in their entirety.

Explanation

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this is Section (P) under Jurisdiction. This area, I think we've discussed before, has to do with Natural Gas, etc., and what we have done is left it up basically to the legislature so that it did not conflict with the Louisiana Energy Agency that was set up in the last session of the legislature. I think this point has been discussed at great length and there's no need for me to go into it in any detail at all, other than, it conflicts. . . it's conflicting language and this was put into our proposal prior to the special session of the legislature. Due to the actions that were taken in the legislature, this now would be in direct conflict with that. As a result of that, I'm asking that it be deleted. It's still left up to the legislature, we've set that up already --- that mechanism.

[Amendment adopted without objection.
Motion for the Previous Question on the entire subject matter rejected: 40-65.]

Further Discussion

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, my remarks will be very brief. In the posture that we find ourselves, I am convinced we would be far better off in not having anything in the constitution at all about the Public Service Commission. If we reject this committee proposal, then automatically the whole subject matter would be, unless another proposal were introduced, relegated to the statutes where I think it probably undoubtedly belongs. As far as the provision for rate increases, if in fact, the proponents of the last amendment that was adopted meant what they said, it could be only as provided by law, then it would have to be threshed out by the legislature anyway. But, if, as some of us feel, the first sentence in Paragraph (3) is a sleeper which would provide an escape hatch for the Public Service Commission simply to permit a tentative increase and then never rule on the subject thereafter, thereby effectively allowing a rate increase without a public hearing, which goes contrary to every tenet of administrative law of which I am aware, then I think we certainly ought to reject this proposal. In so rejecting it, we will leave it to the legislature where the legislature can have the kinds of hearings involving a full dress discussion of the procedure of utility rate-making which we most certainly have not had at this convention, and I think we will be doing the people of our state a great and signal service. I ask you to vote against adoption of the proposal.

Questions

MR. LeBLEU

Mr. Burson, before we went home for the holidays, there was quite a bit of debate about the hearing set up by the Public Service Commission to hear testimony from the applicant. I can find nothing in this section that specifies that a hearing has to be held, except they have to make a decision at the end of a year.

MR. BURSON

Mr. LeBleu, I agree with you entirely and it is entirely possible that under this language you could make a decision without ever having a hearing giving the opponents a chance to express their views on a rate increase.

MR. LeBLEU

One other question and to get back to the first sentence in Paragraph (3)--as I read this, the Public Service Commission could hold a regular meeting and accept an application, then, permit the applicant to institute his rate increase or a portion thereof at that time which might be two weeks after he applied or a month or three months, or . . . is that right?

MR. BURSON

Yes, sir, that's certainly possible.

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I think that many of us have been lulled, so to speak, into sleep over the fact that we think that we may have adopted a provision which would not give to the telephone company the automatic right to put a rate increase into effect. Let me read to you, if you will, that provision which is the heart of the whole proposal and let's see if we can figure out what it means. It says "if no decision is rendered on the application within twelve months after such filing date, the proposed increase may be put into effect, but only as provided by law and subject to protective bond, etc." Now, there are many of us . . . or many people here that I have discussed this subject matter with and they believe that the meaning of this provision is that the rate increase will go into effect, but only the form and the manner can be provided by the legislature. So, that there is a great deal of doubt in my mind and in the minds of many of the delegates as to whether or not we have accomplished what maybe we think we have accomplished or maybe what some of the proponents of this amendment would have us believe it would accomplish. Therefore, I very strongly urge you that because of the fact that this provision primarily gives the right. . . certain rights to the telephone company then leaves the rights of the subscribers or of the people up to the legislature, that this whole subject matter with respect to rates should be left to the legislature and that, therefore, we should not adopt this provision. I, therefore, strongly urge you --and they need sixty-seven votes, remember, to pass this article-- that we reject the article and hopefully, on reconsideration, we might be able to straighten the subject matter out. I'll yield to questions.

Questions

MR. ABRAHAM

Chalm, see if you interpret this the way I do. As I understand it, that if I am a utility I can go to the Public Service Commission with a request for a rate increase, and at the same time, also request that the rate increase be put into effect in full on a tentative basis. Then, by the provisions of the last sentence of Paragraph (E) if the Public Service Commission says, "No, you cannot have a rate increase on a tentative basis," I can then go to court and apply for the rate increase on a tentative basis; do you read this the same way as I do?

MR. PEREZ

Well, there are many questions unanswered as far as I'm concerned in this language, but that which gives the most problem is whether or not it really means that the legislature can or cannot give the automatic increase, but that under this wording it would appear to me to mean that the automatic increase would go into effect and only the method or the manner would be provided by the legislature. I have serious doubts as to the meaning of these words. I think an awful lot of other delegates do also.

MR. CHATELAIN

Mr. Perez, I was rather busy at the close of your remarks, but I thought I heard you say that this should be left up to the legislature?

MR. PEREZ

I'm talking about with regard to the rate-making procedure, yes.

MR. CHATELAIN

Because I know you and I sit on the Local and Parochial Government and your philosophy has been not to trust the legislature.

MR. PEREZ

No, sir, I've never taken that position. I think that there are certain provisions which should be in the constitution to protect the rights of the people and there are some provisions which should not. In my judgment, this does not protect the rights of the people, it protects the rights of one company, the telephone company.

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Perez, in line with that last question you were asked, wouldn't it be consistent to say that if we're going to leave some folk's rights to the legislature we ought to leave all folk's rights to the legislature. But, if the utility is going to be constitutionally protected, the consumer ought be also?

MR. PEREZ

Well, that's the whole point that I've been trying to make, and that is, that this proposal takes care of the telephone company, but it doesn't take care of the people. That's the reason I've been so much opposed to it.

107th Days Proceedings—January 3, 1974

Further Discussion

MR. DESHOTELS

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, we've heard quite a bit about our work over the holidays. We've been told by various state officials that they are confused and that they are uncertain as to what they're going to be doing about this constitution. They're saying that we're getting into areas that are not constitutional. . . that are not constitutional material. I submit to you that we are doing this in this instance, but worse than that, worse than that, we are favoring, we are favoring a particular. . . a particular veated interest, and we are favoring utilities obviously. We're telling utilities that we will give them constitutional protection and we're telling our people that we're supposed to be representing, that we will leave your fate up to the legislature and that we're getting tired. Many of us felt that this should not be so, but you hear talk about some people sitting at the other end of the hall that are saying, "Well, we need a compromise." Fellow delegates, we should not be compromising here. We should stick to our convictions and not allow friendships that have started since in January and courtships that have started since in January influence our decision and have us put something in the constitution that will be there for years to come. Now, you think back -- and your kids someday will probably be reading your vote on this thing, assuming that it's passed, and they'll be saying, "Daddy, how did you justify the particular vote you made here?" "Well", you say, "We argued this before Christmas and we came back and we were tired and we figured we had to compromise." This is not a compromise, it's a capitulation and it's an affront, it's an affront to people of the State of Louisiana, it's an affront to people that pay utilities and pay these companies' way. Now, they tell you, "Don't worry about it. It only means a few cents of rate increase to people. It only means a few cents to them, but it means millions of dollars to us"--and it does, and it does, and they want it all their way. Well, gentlemen, we are having an energy crisis that I don't need to tell anybody about. Our utilities will be affected by it, they are affected by it. Our rates will be affected by it. We will have a tremendous. . . I think a tremendous revolution in our source of energy and our costs of our utilities and we need the latitudes, we need the legislature to be able to act in this area in the future. We need some looseness in this particular field, especially here. We reversed the committee's proposal upon the committee chairman's request as to the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission, because of a special session of the legislature that was passed the last part of last year. Well, look how quickly we're changing. A special session of the legislature had us change a proposal that a committee had thought a few months ago was good. I submit to you that this is only a beginning. I submit to you that this is not a compromise and you should not be compromising issues of this nature and of this magnitude. Stick to your guns and do what you believe is right. This is not a compromise. Thank you very much for your attention.

Further Discussion

MR. JUNEAU

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I would like to make these remarks very brief, but it seems to me that the one thing the people wanted us to do was to write a constitution that was easily read and easily understood. As I read the amendment that was attached onto the Roy amendment, it means only one thing. It means that you would, under this proposal, have an automatic rate increase by the commission at the expiration of a period of twelve months. Now, there's been a lot of discussion, does that mean this or does it mean that; that's what it means to me and it means that to a lot of people in this convention. It simply says-- I read that as purely the mechanics; the mechanics and the mechanics alone ought to be worked out by the legislature. So, let's get the issue before us; if you are in favor of that philosophy, which I thought a lot of people were opposed to--if you're opposed to that philosophy well then vote against this proposal and we'll try to straighten that out. But, if you are in favor of an automatic rate increase, then vote for the proposal. I just personally don't subscribe to that philosophy.

Questions

MR. DUVAL

Pat, is what you're saying that the language. . . the language says that the. . . "if no decision is rendered on the application within twelve months after filing date, the proposed increase may be put into effect," so doesn't that give the constitutional right to have a rate increase without a hearing; is that right?

MR. JUNEAU

I don't see any other way to read it.

MR. DUVAL

And the "only as provided by law" means the way you're going to do it is going to be provided by law, but you still have a right to do it constitutionally.

MR. JUNEAU

Mechanically, what procedure you go through.

MR. DUVAL

Wasn't it represented to this convention, I'm sure in all good faith, that their intent of this was to leave the right up to the legislature too; isn't that right?

MR. JUNEAU

Well, if you want to do that, you ought to say that and this doesn't say that.

MR. DUVAL

Thank you.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Juneau, as I read this language it says that this proposed increase may be put into effect. Am I correct in that the word "may" is permissive as contradistinguished to the word "shall" which is mandatory?

MR. JUNEAU

That's right.

MR. LANIER

Now, this provision only comes into effect if no decision is rendered within twelve months; is that correct?

MR. JUNEAU

That's right.

MR. LANIER

Now, in the (2) part here it says "within twelve months from the effective date of filing, the commission shall render a full decision." Would that be mandatory language to require them to render a decision?

MR. JUNEAU

Nobody disagrees with that. That's right.

MR. LANIER

Would you also agree, that if the commission failed to render a decision within that twelve month period that mandamus would lie to compel them to render a decision?

MR. JUNEAU

That's right.

MR. LANIER

Because this is a mandatory duty established in the constitution.

MR. JUNEAU

Under Paragraph (2). That's right.

MR. LANIER

So, really what we have here is if they don't act, the increase possibly could be put into effect, but in any event you still can go ahead and compel them to decide, can't you?

MR. JUNEAU

That's right. By the same token, it just seems ridiculous to me on the one hand to say legally we're going to compel you and subject you to a mandamus suit to act within twelve months and then we turn back around and say, "Well, if you don't act within twelve months the rate may be. . . the rate increase may be put into effect, but the mechanics will be left up to the legislature." It just doesn't make much sense to me.

MR. ALEXANDER

Mr. Juneau, did not the convention pass a resolution or an amendment on December 20, 1973, authored by Delegate Warren which stipulates that the commission shall render its final decision after a public hearing on application petitions, proposed rate increases, etc.. Is that not true?

MR. JUNEAU

I think that's right, Reverend. I had an awfully difficult time with putting that language together with what is in this amendment.

107th Days Proceedings—January 3, 1974

MR. ALEXANDER

So then the statement that the commission may render a decision without a public hearing is definitely and positively erroneous, is it not?

MR. JUNEAU

Reverend Alexander, what it says is "if no decision is rendered by the Public Service Commission---this is what I'm reading---" within that twelve month period the proposed rate increase may be put into effect." Now, where is the public hearing?

MR. ALEXANDER

But, Mr. Juneau, what is being implied--am I asking you...

MR. JUNEAU

The Roy amendment superseded that too, Reverend Alexander.

Further Discussion

MR. LANDRUM

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I wish to make my position known at this time that the idea--we have heard many people say that you're voting for an automatic rate increase. I do not believe that is the case. As far as I am concerned, that is not the case. But, what is the case? A group of men elected by the people to make decisions, you're simply saying to these people, "then, decide, make a decision. Don't pass it on to someone else. . ."

I think it is wrong for one to even to just say that you're voting for an automatic increase. I know I wouldn't vote for an increase in my phone bill or my light bill. But, certainly people who are in responsible positions, if they are to make decisions, well then let me make decisions. I've noticed two men who are contemplating running for this office, those two men, they seem to be for the idea that they should make decisions, and since we have voted to increase the size of the commission from three to five, it simply says to me then that we are going to have somebody on that board who is willing to make decisions. Don't just give people the false idea that we're just voting for an increase, because that isn't so. That isn't the case in my vote, but I am saying this, that if they are to make decisions then let them make decisions. Those of you in the legislature who are hollering about leave it to the legislature, then I wish the legislature would make decisions too, when it would come to that three dollar license plate; that's where you need to make the decision.

Further Discussion

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I think if we look back at the original proposal and we read it, we'd have no doubt in our mind what the intent --and let's call it like it is-- what the intent of the telephone company was. They didn't mince their words when they put this provision in there, and they did not try to hide the fact that they were trying to get an automatic rate increase if the Public Service Commission did not make a decision in six months. I think you know the drastic effect of what it would have been had we just adopted blindly that provision. I say to you, thank God for the people of this state, we did not adopt that provision. Because of some people's insistence and because of various amendments and because of three days of arguments, we're now at a proposal or a provision that seems to be a compromise. You have such learned lawyers that as I've heard get up here--as we've heard--and say, "I think, and I believe and it may be," but they're not sure. They're not sure because if you read line. . . in Section (3) "the proposed increase may be put into effect." By whom? I would assume by the utility companies, by the utility companies. I think we have a proposal here that in this particular day after the holidays we've adopted, probably hastily so, without just clear deliberation and clear thinking on. I believe, if we look back at the original intent--and I still think that intent is there--the people who want this rate increase automatically haven't changed their mind; they haven't conceded anything. They haven't hid the fact that they're trying to get that Public Service Commission to act within six months or twelve months and if they don't act, they want those rates to go up. So, then they have modified the language; they've put some "ifs, ands, onlys, and buts" in there but what does it mean? Do you want to take the chance at this late date after putting one hard year of work on this constitution--I'm very sincere about this because I consider myself a hardworking delegate-- I've given you as much time as I possibly could and that's been a heck of a lot and I look out there and I see a lot of you people have too, and I'm seriously and completely concerned with this provision and I have been from the very beginning. I told my friends that I have been with the telephone company. I look at the coalition of people behind this and at the expense of making more enemies. I noticed the AFL-CIO is seriously interested in passing this provision. I wonder about that combination of people trying to pass this automatic rate provision. I'm just concerned that we're doing the wrong thing. I'm concerned that we should look at it a little harder. So, with those concerns, ladies and gentlemen, I would ask that you reject this amendment and let's look another time at this proposal. We've been having some mighty close votes to delete this whole provision or to allow the legislature to do it. But, if you read it carefully, and you read the "onlys" and the "ifs" and the "ands" and the "buts" in here, I don't think that the most learned men in here know exactly what we're doing. You heard the good Judge get up here and say he thinks and he believes. I think one of the closing remarks one of the delegates said was, "Give our friends in the balcony a piece of bacon." Now you think that's the attitude to operate this convention under; I certainly don't. I certainly don't and I'm dead serious and I'm in dead earnest about that. I don't think that the majority of you feel that let's just give them a little bacon and let them go home, let's put a whole page in the constitution with a few onlys and ifs and make it look like we've given them something. I'm afraid we are giving them what they want. I'm afraid we're giving them too much. I'm afraid we're not giving the people enough. I think if we vote this in, we're going to be awful sorry for it. We've got a chance in this next vote to reject the amendment, to reject the amendment and look at it again. I don't care if it takes us until January 19th, I think this proposal is important enough that we give it the most serious consideration. I just read a staff proposal on my desk and I saw some things in there that I heard said up here that aren't true. I'm for relying on the staff to give us that information. I'm sure what the staff is telling us is accurate, but this thing has gotten to the point where we just don't know exactly what we're doing and I think we're jeopardizing a good year's work. I don't want to sound like an alarmist. I just feel like we ought to look at it a little further and I just feel like if you read Proposal No. 34 and read Section (2) "if decision is not rendered within six months from the filing date of any proposed rate schedule, it shall be deemed to be tentatively approved," which means it goes into effect. That was their intention, that was what they wanted to do and that, I believe, is what they still are doing. I hope you agree with me, and I hope you'll look at it, and I hope you reject it. Let's look at it a little closer. I don't think we ought to do this. I don't think the most. . . the people who have committed themselves to do it don't want to really give the telephone company that much say-over the rate-making structure of this state, over duly elected officials, even if it takes six months or twelve months. You saw the brief that I brought in here, or the case every bit of that information is factual. Every bit of that information was filed with the Public Service Commission and every bit of that information, if it's turned down and they go to court, will probably go to court. Can you imagine a citizen trying to sue if they think it's an unjustified rate increase?

Further Discussion

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman and delegates, you've heard a lot of speeches up here in opposition to the proposal. I, too, rise in opposition to the proposal, but for a slightly different reason. I agree with the speakers before me that it makes no sense to make the rights of the utility constitutional and the rights of the consumer statutory, and we've done that throughout. But, in addition to that, let me point out one more thing we've done because I'd like to you sort of add it into your consideration. Section (1) of the Roy amendment discusses common carriers and public utilities. When you read Section (3) about a time limit on decisions and the proposed schedule going into effect, it says that for a public utility the commission may allow the schedule to go tentatively into effect it doesn't mention common carriers. It seems to me that this is a sloppy draftsmanship in that Mr. Roy meant not to affect bus lines because so many citizens ride them. He had. . . he, by the side door also affected truck lines and it seems too that this is saying that they may not permit a tentative schedule for common carriers, which are truck lines, in these days of energy shortages and fifty-five mile an hour speed limit and that sort of thing is a terrible mistake, and is one more argument for leaving it all to the legislature

107th Days Proceedings—January 3, 1974

so that it may be flexible. Mr. Deshotels made one of the best arguments that was made up here--if we're going to scratch the last section of the proposal that's been discussed for months and months in committee because of a special session of the legislature, under actions of that special session of the legislature, that in itself, our vote in itself, is an argument for flexibility and leaving things to the legislature. So, I urge you to vote against the proposal and let us come back with something either minimal or nothing at all.

Questions

MR. WEISS

Delegate Zervigon, in the past several weeks I've noticed that there's been a lot of votes for political expediency in this constitution. I'd like to know whether you think that the passage of this committee proposal as amended would either enhance or detract from the passage of the constitution?

MS. ZERVIGON

Dr. Weiss, I really can't comment on that. I tell you my folks at home just mostly say, "You all still up there?" I don't think we ought to cast our votes that way. I think we ought to write the best constitution we can and then go home and explain it to the folks; they're going to be listening to us. I really don't think we ought to make up our minds that way.

MR. BURSON

Ms. Zervigon, in line with your argument about leaving this matter to the legislature, isn't it true that according to the staff memorandum that was passed out to us that only thirteen states of the fifty states mention Public Service Commissions or Railroad Commissions in their constitution, but all fifty states have such commissions in effect to regulate public utilities?

MS. ZERVIGON

That's as I understand it. I think that's a very good idea especially since there amendments are not considered at length. You remember we put a debate. . . limit on debate or hastily drawn and may have side effects, for example, on the large truck lines that we just really don't fully appreciate at this point and which wouldn't be able to be changed by the legislature should we find that we have made a mistake.

MR. ABRAHAM

Ms. Zervigon, isn't it true that on page 1 of this proposal we have specified that the commission shall regulate all common carriers and public utilities as provided by law. Then, we also say "it shall adopt rules, etc., and shall have other powers and perform...as provided by law." So, all . . . at the very beginning of this proposal we're saying that the legislature is going to make these provisions. Wouldn't we be consistent then in saying that they'll render these decisions as provided by the legislature?

MS. ZERVIGON

Well, that would make sense to me. On the other hand, I think, that the thing I was arguing about doesn't really go on and say "as provided by law" because if you constitutionally say that they may allow a proposed schedule to go into effect for utilities, but you don't mention common carriers in that paragraph and you've mentioned them all the way throughout, it seems to me there's a clear implication is that they may not allow that for common carriers.

[Previous Question ordered on the entire subject matter.]

Closing

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I'm going to be very brief. First of all, with respect to some of the sub rosa comments that are going around that there is no hearing required, I direct your attention to page 1 which says that the commission shall regulate all common carriers and public utilities as provided by law...there is presently and there always will be a public law that allows all meetings to be held in public, in any event. If any secret meeting were ever held on anything like this I can assure you it would violate all the provisions of our constitution with respect to due process and equal protection of the laws as well as all federal constitutional provisions. So, that dog just won't hunt, as one of my good friends who is from north Louisiana says, that's not accurate and it's no use to listen to a bunch of comments and questions that just don't address themselves to the real issue here which is whether you're going to force the utility companies to sit...and any common carrier... to sit for years and years and years when they've had a proposed rate increase for the benefit of the little consumer that they could put into effect and maybe get a bunch of people off party lines and find out that the commission because of its political anxiety...decides two or three years later, no or yea, then the 100 million dollars to be spent for getting people off party lines can only be...get 50 percent off because the value of the dollar has gone down. Now, I don't understand one of the delegates questions about, "but only as provided by law." That was satisfactory with Justice Tate and I think that if I had my judgment to make as to whom I would...whose opinion I think would be better on that issue, I just would have to go with Justice Tate. I don't think it's ambiguous in the slightest. The other thing is that the particular rate increase or the bonding of it is all subject to review by the district court at any stage of the proceeding and that was to accommodate Mr. Kean's comments with respect to that issue. There's just no question, but that we need a Public Service Commission that's going to act. This particular proposal mandates that commission to act, and if it doesn't act it's got to look to the people. I ask for the favorable adoption...let me point out one more thing with respect to Mrs. Zervigon's argument...I don't follow it. She says that if you read Section 3, that since it doesn't say anything with respect to common carriers, the legislature under (B) on page 1, could not provide for some rate increase for common carriers. Well, that is just not the law. The fact of the matter is that when you leave to the legislature any power as we do under Part (B), then unless there's a specific constitutional prohibition as a matter of law the legislature may do it. All of that is just window dressing. There are a lot of smoke screens. There's everything to try to defeat what we have finally said we want...a Public Service Commission that's going to rule on rate applications and in the absence of is going to have to account to the people on that particular respect. I'm not answering any questions. We've said enough about it. I think it's very clear and I move for the previous question.

[Section passed: 67-47. Motion to table reconsideration. Record vote ordered. Motion adopted: 68-45.]

Further Discussion

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, off at the end, it's simply amazing to me that in a constitution which we have almost completed drafting we have not guaranteed any citizen of this state a decision in any tribunal whether at the trial level, the appellate level, or the Supreme Court level. Whether it is a case involving rights of widows and orphans, whether it's a case involving workmen's compensation benefits and a man who may be starving without them, whether it's a case involving imprisonment for 99 years for armed robbery or life imprisonment for conviction of murder, we have not guaranteed anyone in any of these circumstances a guaranteed decision within 12 months, but yet we have the audacity, the temerity and the ill-considered judgment in my view to give to Southern Bell Telephone Company the right to an automatic decision within 12 months or they can put into effect an automatic rate increase. It seems to me without a doubt that this is a sad day for the people of the state of Louisiana, and I'm very sorry that we have come to such a point in this convention. If any of you would examine in your hearts one more time, I hope we can find the two or three votes that we need to defeat this proposal which is not in the best interests of the people of this state.

Questions

MR. CHATELAIN

Mr. Burson, did I hear you right when you said that we didn't have the nerve, the gall and the audacity...what do you mean by that, sir?

MR. BURSON

I did not say gall, I think I said the nerve and the temerity and the audacity.

MR. CHATELAIN

Well, we have operated, Mr. Burson, haven't we not, sir, on the premise that a majority of 67 votes count?

MR. BURSON

That's correct, Mr. Chatelain, and I certainly agree that the majority can prevail. I am simply questioning in this particular instance the wisdom of the majority decision. I mean no personal reflection on anyone. It's simply a matter of policy as far as I'm concerned. I think it's bad policy.

MR. STINSON

Mr. Burson, do you know that you have shamed us all so that we're going to all have to vote just like you tell us to in the future?

107th Days Proceedings—January 3, 1974

MR. BURSON

Mr. Stinson, I would hope that you would. I'm afraid from your votes up until now though that that hope will be in vain.

MR. STINSON

Mr. Burson, you know the worse thing that could ever happen to me is to vote exactly the way you do, I think. You're entitled to your opinion and I'm entitled to mine. Isn't that so?

MR. BURSON

Mr. Stinson, I would never deny your right to your opinion. In this instance I question only your judgment.

Further Discussion

MR. WILLIS

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, rhetorical capacity to magnify a seeming vice in a proposal to diminish its many virtues may certainly tend not to make it plausible, palatable, propitious or popular. It requires just a little reference to the days that are gone for a full realization of the wholesome thrust of this proposal. The proposal miraculously transforms aspirations to reality. It does not retreat from reality. Destroying tolerance does not destroy tyranny which begins where the law ends. The biggest guns in the arsenal of tyranny may be silenced by good government well planned. From bad government to tyranny can only be destroyed by curtailing the power that nourishes it or provides it with servile tools. Constant experience amply demonstrates that every man invested with power is apt to abuse it and to carry his authority as far as it will go. Abuse of power can be by act of omission or commission, by men or commissions. To prevent this abuse it is necessary from the nature of things that power should be a check to power. We must have as many of these constitutional "guardian angels" as possible, or we will sooner or later have to drink from the bitter cup of disservice held by the hand of the overpowering and overpowerful. When virtue goes into orbit it leaves the propensities to usurp power. Remember, virtue itself turns vice being misapplied. Perhaps my analogy is too strained and leaves you with mere superficial plausibility. I nevertheless propose that if attention be directed to the substance rather than the surface or symbols of the proposal you will realize the speciousness of the arguments against it. It is not too fanciful to say that the repetition of inaccuracies do not beget the truth, that the repetition of an error does not make it right or that beautiful adjectives do not make a portrait pretty nor do ugly ones detract from its beauty. The proposal is positive, precise and protective of all prospective consumers. Experience requires the proposal. The two committees with jurisdiction on the matter propose it. I do not oppose it. I approve it and I will support it. Thank you.

[Previous Question on the Proposal.]

Closing

MR. ROY

I just want to respond to Mr. Burson's comment again with respect to the way that the appeal is going to be made. It says that "the appeals are made as provided by law." Now that's very, very clear. The legislature can provide that you appeal to the district court. It will be on a new record if it chooses...that you can add further testimony...that you can't...that it provides the number of days within which you have time to appeal...that it provides for appellate procedures to the Supreme Court...ladies and gentlemen, I just...if you're going to meet an issue, you meet it head-on, and you say what really is there, and you quit trying to play the harem-scarem game. As an attorney...anybody...as a layman...anybody can read that that Section (E) that provides for appeals, "as provided by law" means very clearly that the legislature shall provide the methods of a hearing in the district court and a hearing in the Supreme Court of Louisiana and the only thing it may not do is to deny the right of a direct appeal to the Supreme Court so that the Supreme Court can review the questions of fact involved in the case. That's it! Anybody who tells you anything less than that is just not telling it to you like it is. I move for the adoption of the proposal. Thank you.

[Quorum Call: 107 delegates present and a quorum. Proposal passed: 67-47. Motion to revert to Proposals on Third Reading and Final Passage adopted without objection. Motion to call Committee Proposal No. 34 from the calendar adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Proposal

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Chairman, Committee Proposal No. 34, read this morning, a proposal making provisions relating to natural resources and the environment. Again, the status of the proposal...the convention has adopted the first 13 sections of the proposal as amended, save for 3, 6, 7 and 11, all of which were deleted from the proposal...has under consideration at the present time, Section 14, and in that light Senator Lambert, I know, has an amendment here which was distributed the other day to said Section 14.

Explanation

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, at this particular point as we had discussed at great length the Friday we were here prior to our recess...at this time I would like to offer an amendment on our Committee Proposal No. 34 which would delete Section 14 referring to the Public Service Commission. This has been covered previously here today under Committee Proposal No. 37. Hopefully, you will go along with this after which we feel that we would be in a position with your concurrence to finally adopt the Natural Resources and Environment Committee Proposal. So, I ask you to please go along with this amendment.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendment No. 1. On page 5 delete lines 11 through 32, both inclusive in their entirety. On page 6,.... lines 1 through 32, both inclusive in their entirety. Page 7...lines 1 through 12, both inclusive in their entirety, and all the floor amendments thereto.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendment sent up by Mr. Avant, Lowe, LeBleu and many, many coauthor.

Amendment No. 1. On page 7, at the beginning of line 13, add the following section:

Section 15. Department of Wildlife and Fisheries, Commission Enforcement Officers

Section 15. Nothing in Article VII of this constitution relating to civil service shall be construed to prevent the legislature from supplementing any civil service pay plan for regularly commissioned officers of the enforcement division of the Department of Wildlife and Fisheries.

Explanation

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, if you will recall one of the last days that we met here before we recessed for the holiday season, we adopted an amendment to the civil service provisions which would allow the legislature to supplement, if in their wisdom they saw fit to do so, a civil service pay plan for the uniformed enforcement officers of the division of state police. That was a very good amendment in my opinion and a very sound thing to do. It has come to my attention that the enforcement officers of the Department of Wildlife and Fisheries, your game wardens, if you choose to use that term, are a group of law enforcement officers who have in many, many particulars the same hazards as do the officers of the state police. For example, in the enforcement of the wildlife and fishery laws and regulations, they daily encounter in remote areas people who almost universally are armed. I know that it was the officers of the enforcement division of the Wildlife and Fisheries Department who apprehended an escaped murderer, a man who had murdered and was convicted of murdering several people and who escaped from the East Baton Rouge Parish Jail and for many weeks was able to elude the regular police officers and secrete himself in the swamps of the Archafalaya Basin. He was apprehended and brought back to custody by officers of the enforcement division of the Louisiana Department of Wildlife and Fisheries. I have talked this amendment, explained it to everybody that I could possibly reach in the time that I have had today. I have, I think, by the latest count 75 people who have coauthored this amendment with me. I think it is very obvious what it does. It does not require a whole lot of explanation, and I ask your favorable vote on the amendment. I remind you that it adds a new section. It does require 67 votes, and I would ask your support for the amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. LE BLEU

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this is just an effort to do for the enforcement officers of the Wildlife and Fisheries

107th Days Proceedings—January 3, 1974

Commission what the legislature has done for the municipal police, deputy sheriffs, state police and so forth, and I ask you to please go along with us on this amendment.

[Previous Question ordered. Quorum Call: 104 delegates present and a quorum. Amendment adopted: 94-13. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 95-12. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous Question ordered on the Proposal. Proposal passed: 103-7. Motion to reconsider pending.]

Personal Privilege

MR. LAMBERT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, what I want to say is very short and very simple. On behalf of myself and the Committee on Natural Resources and the Environment, we certainly appreciate your considering what we had to offer you. We appreciate what you offered to add to the proposal, and on behalf of the committee, I want to thank you very much.

[Motion to call Committee Proposal No. 35 from the calendar adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Proposal

MR. POYNTER

Committee Proposal No. 35 introduced by Delegate Jackson, Chairman, on behalf of the Committee Bill of Rights and Elections which is a substitute for Committee Proposal No. 1 by the same gentleman on behalf of the committee.

A proposal making general governmental provisions.

Explanation

MR. A. JACKSON

Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Ladies and gentlemen, we call your attention to Committee Proposal No. 35 which makes provisions for certain general provisions that we believe to be important to this constitution. It is composed of nine sections. We do not intend to take a lot of time explaining it because the sections are rather simple and we would ask that you would give your attention so we could move through this in the next thirty minutes. I would now ask the delegate responsible for Section 1 to explain it.

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

This is of a more of a technical nature, I guess; it does not affect any particular section.

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, delete lines 12 and 13 and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Article II. Distribution of Powers".

Amendment No. 2. On page 1, between lines 21 and 22 insert the following: "Article XII. General Provisions".

Explanation

MR. TATE

Representative Jackson was just going to say, I believe, that the Bill of Rights Committee has no objection. This is in the nature of a technical amendment to add in Style and Drafting. The constitution as we see it will start with a Preamble, the Bill of Rights, and then we would separate Sections 1 and 2 of the present proposal into an Article II called Distribution of Powers, talking about the Executive, Legislative and Judicial. The remainder, we've put in a General Provisions because then the organization would be: Article I. Bill of Rights, Article II. Distribution of Powers, Executive, Judicial and Legislation, Article III. Legislative, Article IV. Executive, Article V. Judiciary, etc. It would make it a little easier, I believe, in our final version, and for that reason I would appreciate your favorable approval subject to any questions or discussion.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

Section No. 1. Three Branches

"Section 1. The powers of government of the State of Louisiana are divided into three distinct branches—legislative, executive and judicial."

Explanation

MR. GUARISCO

Yes, Section 1 is simply a reaffirmation of the three branches of government as contained in our 1921 Constitution. I ask for your favorable adoption of the Section.

[Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 100-0. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

Section 2. Limitations of Each Branch

"Section 2. No one of these branches, nor any person holding office in one of them, shall exercise power belonging to either of the others, except as otherwise provided in this constitution."

Explanation

MR. GUARISCO

This is simply what we all know and understand to be the doctrine of separation of powers. The only difference between this statement and the statement of the 1921 Constitution is simply that it says "except in instances hereinafter expressly directed or permitted." At the end in our proposal we have "except as otherwise provided in this constitution." You may say, "Well, where in this constitution do we have other branches of government participating or encroaching upon others?" One example might be impeachment, another example may be where administrative bodies act as a court before those issues are submitted to a court, etc. I'll submit to any questions.

Question

MR. LANIER

Mr. Guarisco, as a matter of fact and just for the sake of the record, aren't these two sections necessary in order to keep us in compliance with the federal constitution?

MR. GUARISCO

Absolutely, Mr. Lanier. Yes.

[Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 107-1. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

Section 3. Civilian-Military Relations

"Section 3. The Military shall be subordinate to the civil power."

Explanation

MR. VICK

Mr. Chairman, that's a restatement of the Constitution of 1921. I think it belongs in any constitution in an enlightened democratic republic. I'll answer any questions.

Question

MR. STAGG

Since this is now Section 12 or 13, shouldn't these be renumbered as 1, 2, 3 and 4?

MR. HENRY

They can do that in Style and Drafting, Mr. . .

[Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 107-0. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

Next Section--Section 4. Right to Direct Participation. "Section 4. No person shall be denied the right to observe the deliberations of public bodies and examine public documents, except in cases established by law."

107th Days Proceedings—January 3, 1974

Explanation

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, delegates, this is to create the presumption that public meetings and public records are open to the public unless a specific law denies access to them. This won't change any of our statutes. Our statutes presently spell out which cases are denied, and really the relevance of this is to say that in cases where there is no law on the subject that if there has not been a specific denial of the right to public access, then access would be allowed either to the meeting or the public document involved. So, I urge the adoption of this section.

[Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 104-6. Motion to reconsider tabled. Motion to pass over Section 5 adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

Section 6. State Capital
"Section 6. The capital of Louisiana is the city of Baton Rouge."

Explanation

MRS. SONIAT

Section 6 reads "the State Capital of Louisiana is the city of Baton Rouge." As we know, Act II of 1972 relating to the Constitutional Convention prohibits the convention from doing anything about removing the capital of Louisiana, so for this reason we just stated that the capital of Louisiana is the city of Baton Rouge. I urge the adoption.

[Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 105-1. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

Section 7. Forced Heirship and Trusts
"Section 7. No law shall abolish forced heirship. The determination of forced heirs, and the amount of the forced portion, and the grounds for disinheritance shall be provided by law. Trusts may be authorized by law for any purpose and a legitime may be placed in trust."

Explanation

MR. STINSON

Fellow delegates, you have the brochure that was handed out. This makes very little change from the present provisions of the constitution, except it provides more that the legislature can set up what the forced portion shall be, what percentages as it is at the present time in the Civil Code. It guarantees though that the forced heirship shall not be abolished, that's in our present constitution. It has always been in the law of Louisiana. For someone that may not know what forced heirship is, that is, that your children cannot be, as in Texas, for example, be left a dollar or five dollars; they have a forced portion depending on the number of children. You have the right in Louisiana under the present law and under this to disown a child for certain reasons. It says that "the legislature shall set up such reasons." The reasons are: an attempt on the life of a parent or marriage of while a juvenile without authority, against their wishes, etc., but that is not in the constitution, it's in our laws that the legislature can change at any time. This is the basic law saying there will be forced heirship and to determine who the forced heirs are and the amount and the grounds for disinheritance shall be provided by law. In other words, by the legislature. It says, "Trusts may be authorized by law for any purpose." That's authorized in the legislature as it does at the present time. We have a trust code as you know, but there's no reason for putting it in the constitution. I think that covers this. If there are any questions, I'll be happy to try to answer them.

Questions

MR. BURSON

Mr. Stinson, did you all have expressed to your committee a great deal of opinion from lawyers across the state on this provision?

MR. STINSON

Mr. Burson, we had resolutions from a great number of Bar Associations from the different parishes asking that it please be retained in the constitution as it is at the present time.

MR. BURSON

While I was president of the St. Landry Parish Bar Association, I know we passed such a resolution. Did you have any resolutions recommending that it be taken out from anyone that you can recall?

MR. STINSON

I don't recall that we did. I think all were in favor of it and urging us to retain it.

MR. FONTENOT

Mr. Stinson, I see there's no reference to the provisions which had in the old constitution which had to do with adopted children having the same rights as legitimate children. Why did you all leave that provision out of there?

MR. STINSON

Because it doesn't say even "children" it says "forced heirs" and the legislature will say who forced heirs are. In this section we don't even refer to children. It just says "forced heirs as shall be determined by the legislature."

MR. FONTENOT

But, in the old constitution adopted children, regardless of what the legislature says, have the same rights as legitimate children, yet, we're not saying that in this new constitution, the way I read it.

MR. STINSON

The committee felt that it shouldn't be in the constitution. Neither do they say that children will be forced heirs of fathers and mothers and their ascending line. It will be left up to the legislature.

MR. ABRHAM

Mr. Stinson, going further with Mr. Burson's question. Did you have anyone appear before the committee recommending removal of this thing from the constitution from any particular people, not necessarily a resolution, but did any people appear to request that it be . . .

MR. STINSON

We had one person-- some misguided lawyer from New Orleans was there.

MR. ABRAHAM

You didn't have any people appear?

MR. STINSON

I'm not reflecting just the vote. . .

MR. ABRAHAM

You didn't have any people appear; you only had lawyers appear?

MR. STINSON

No, sir. One attorney.

MR. ABRAHAM

No people though, just lawyers.

MR. STINSON

Well, he was. . . he walked in; he was a person.

MR. AVANT

Ford, what I want to ask you is this: This sentence, "The determination of forced heirs and the amount of the forced portion and the grounds for disinheritance shall be provided by law." Now, what I want to know is this: In those situations where you have children of two marriages--and it happens quite frequently-- and you may have a second community between a man and his second wife or vice versa a woman and her second husband, where you have children by a previous marriage who are grown, you know the law is now that they are forced heirs, and you can't disinherit them and you can't even encumber their legitime with a usufruct as I understand the law. Now, under this section as it's written, would the legislature be permitted to provide that in those situations that a man could take care of his surviving spouse by leaving her the usufruct of his half of the community to the detriment of say his major children by another marriage that he may have had? Could the legislature do that?

107th Days Proceedings—January 3, 1974

MR. STINSON

I feel the legislature could, as they can under the present constitution.

MR. AVANT

You think they can do it under the present constitution?

MR. STINSON

If they change the Code Articles, yes.

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Ford, with regard to who was for this and who was against it. Isn't it true that our committee didn't receive maybe more than two or three resolutions from local Bar Associations wanting to retain forced heirship and that we didn't have but one person come and speak in favor of taking it out and probably, I don't remember any coming and speaking in favor of leaving forced heirship in; do you recall any?

MR. STINSON

Mr. Jenkins, I don't know how many resolutions the committee received, but I received a number—they were sent personally to the different members, I think.

MR. JENKINS

Isn't it true that we adopted this provision just a couple of weeks ago by way of amendment and there was no real advanced public notice so that there would have been no way that people could have come and testified one way or the other in advance because they had no idea it would be coming up; isn't that true?

MR. STINSON

Mr. Jenkins, I was not present at the last meeting that you referred to, but we had discussed it before at prior meetings when it was discussed in detail.

MR. JENKINS

One other question: Under the Right to Property Section in the Bill of Rights we had originally included in there the provision that laws regarding forced heirship could not be abolished, but do you recall that the convention deleted that requirement under the Right to Property in the Bill of Rights?

MR. STINSON

As I recall, it was the understanding it would be placed in another place in the constitution, as I recall.

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Stinson, isn't it correct that I introduced the amendment to remove the provisions concerning forced heirship with the understanding that I would introduce a delegate proposal concerning it?

MR. STINSON

As I recall, I think so, yes, Mr. Dennery.

MR. DENNERY

Wasn't that delegate proposal brought before your committee and as a result of that this was the section that was adopted?

MR. STINSON

That's correct, yes, sir.

MR. DENNERY

There were lawyers who appeared before your committee in favor of it.

MR. STINSON

Yes, sir.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendment sent up by Delegate O'Neill reads as follows:

"Amendment No. 1. On page 2, delete lines 9 through 14, both inclusive in their entirety."

Explanation

MR. O'NEILL

Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, as you heard in the question and answer session there was some debate even within the committee on whether or not this provision should be included in our new constitution or not. Contrary to what several delegates have said, I have been contacted by various counsels for the aged who have asked that these provisions on forced heirship be removed from the constitution so the legislature can provide for these things as it deems necessary. Now, I have some very strong personal feelings on the subject of property and what have you. I feel that a man ought to be able to do with his property as he wants. But, there is a strong opinion and I can see it and I could accommodate it that minor children should be provided for from the parents, and state, and what have you. I can accommodate that position. I think the convention needs to speak on this because of the great number of old people in our state who would like to see such provisions removed. I'm not an attorney, and I can't discuss and describe all the nuances of a state law and of forced heirship to know how property goes from one person to another. But, I do know that many injustices have been perpetrated upon people who do leave their property. The provisions in the Civil Code cover this matter quite clearly and I think that they would be sufficient in light of what has been done over the past. You know, this law evolves from the French people who were sort of the feudal lords. They had huge estates which they felt rightly should pass to their children. Well, I think we have come of age now to where those kinds of things don't happen; and those few people who have big estates—well, I would dare say that ninety percent of them—would care to leave them to their children anyway. I think the convention, as I said, does need to speak on this. I know that there are strong opinions and many divided opinions. I'll try to answer the questions as well as I can but, as I say, I don't know all the nuances of forced heirship so, please, bear with me if I don't know all the details.

Further Discussion

MR. SINGLETARY

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I rise in strong support of Mr. O'Neill's amendment. It may surprise you to know that when I was campaigning for this office, this is one of the most often raised questions from people, they just weren't happy with the situation. Presently, I think, the law is...contains many inequities. For instance, if the man remarries and has children by a prior marriage, if he writes a will to provide for his second wife, to provide for her security that will is no good and children by a prior marriage can come in and force that surviving spouse to sell that property and distribute the proceeds among the heirs. Likewise, if a man dies and has no descendants, if his parents are living they can come in and dispossess that man's wife. Whether you are for forced heirship or against it, I think it has no place in the constitution. We have previously provided that the legislature can pass laws providing for forced heirship in the Bill of Rights where we said that the legislature...that people have the right of ownership subject to reasonable regulations established by the legislature. I'm not sure, but I believe our constitutional provision requiring forced heirship at one time caused a constitutional amendment during the Huey Long era when it was feared that our state was losing a lot of money to other states because our citizens were going to other states to establish trusts which were unconstitutional. I believe there was a constitutional amendment including trust in the Forced Heirship Article. So, I urge you to please support Mr. O'Neill's amendment; just delete this section.

Questions

MR. NEWTON

Mr. Singletary, isn't it true that under the present Civil Code provisions that there is a disposal portion which is not part of legitime of the forced heirs?

MR. SINGLETARY

Yes, that's correct.

MR. NEWTON

...and, so the problem that you are addressing yourself to about these poor widows, with careful planning they can be taken care of through the forced portion so that they can't be run out of their homes; can't they?

MR. SINGLETARY

Well, Mr. Newton, unless you establish a trust—and I'm not even sure you can do it under a trust—if there is a forced portion, a forced heir is entitled to come in and demand his forced portion; isn't that right?

107th Days Proceedings—January 3, 1974

MR. NEWTON

That is correct. But, isn't it correct that there is a disposal portion and through careful management and planning, you can take care of these problems of having the widows thrown out of their homes?

MR. SINGLETARY

Not in every case because if a person has a home on a lot and he wants a will to protect his surviving spouse and he has forced heirs, you cannot put the forced portion...you cannot subject it to a usufruct, if I read the code correctly. I don't believe that you can prevent a forced heir from coming in, at least in the situation if there is a forced heirship ascendant or a child of a previous marriage that can come in and force the surviving spouse to sell the property and distribute the proceeds. But, without getting into the merits or the problems of forced heirship, those situations can be corrected by the legislature. But, let's not go any further than we already have with regard to forced heirships. So, I urge you to vote for Mr. O'Neill's amendment and let's delete this section.

MR. DENNERY

Alvin, included in that section in addition to the provisions about forced heirship there is another sentence which permits the establishment of trusts in Louisiana; is that correct?

MR. SINGLETARY

Yes, that's correct.

MR. DENNERY

Now, under the present law if we had no such provision in the constitution, under the Civil Code Articles we could not establish trusts in Louisiana; could we?

MR. SINGLETARY

Under the present constitution?

MR. DENNERY

No, if except for the present constitution?

MR. SINGLETARY

No. Mr. Dennery, under this constitution that we are writing it would be my understanding that the legislature could amend the code.

MR. DENNERY

I understand that, sir. I'm asking, though, if it were not amended, we would not be permitted to have trusts in Louisiana; would we?

MR. SINGLETARY

I guess you're right, Mr. Dennery, but....

MR. DENNERY

What's worrying me--and I'll put this in the form of a question--do you agree that there is a problem in the event we do not put the authorization for trust in the constitution that the present trust conceivably could be all knocked out and no future trust could be established? Isn't it true that...

MR. SINGLETARY

No. I don't agree with that, Mr. Dennery, because I believe that under the provisions that we have written so far, the legislature could amend the code.

MR. DENNERY

Well, then, wouldn't it have to be....

MR. SINGLETARY

...and, we had provided that the legislature can subject ownership to reasonable regulations which would mean that they could establish...laws dealing with trust.

Further Discussion

MR. TOBIAS

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I hesitate to rise on this amendment and oppose it. I am in favor of striking the first two sentences of this proposal. I think that abolishing forced heirship out of the constitution does not in and of itself abolish forced heirship; it's statutory. As I presently read Louisiana constitution and statutes, the legislature could very simply say that each child is a forced heir to the extent of one dollar. My main objection to this amendment is the striking of the lines 13 and 14 and these are the reasons why. Historically in this state, the Louisiana Supreme Court has been very, very restrictive on the use of trust; it has historically detested trust. Section 16 of Article IV of the 1921 Constitution has been amended...was amended in 1944, amended in 1952, amended in 1958, amended again in 1962. Each time it was amended solely for the purpose of overruling decisions of the Louisiana Supreme Court, striking down the laws that were enacted by the legislature respecting trust; that was the reason. The Louisiana Supreme Court consistently struck down trust and by our deleting, by adopting the O'Neill amendment, by our deleting "of" of that sentence, I have the fear that we may be reinstating jurisprudence which the people of this state--and when I say jurisprudence, I mean, cases of the Louisiana Supreme Court--we would be reinstating that jurisprudence which would have the effect of abolishing trust. I think it's very, very dangerous. I think it's unfortunate that our law has developed this way. But, I think by deleting that section, we are getting ourselves into a mess.

We passed upon this particular question of forced heirship very lightly in Section 4 of the Bill of Rights proposal and we deleted it on August 30, by a fifty-nine to fifty-five vote. I repeat, I'm in favor of deleting lines 10 through 12, but I just cannot support this because of that last of lines 13 and 14. I urge your rejection of the amendment.

Questions

MR. SINGLETARY

Max, could your suggestion be adopted, maybe, in some transitional measure?

MR. TOBIAS

I hate to take it out of the constitution, that provision on trust. I think it's a dangerous, dangerous thing we are doing. I think that nobody wants to take away the right of an individual to create a trust; it would force people to put their property in trust and just go to other states to do it.

MR. CHATELAIN

Max, I don't know this is the reason I'm trying to ask a question and trying to formulate thinking on this...how I should vote on this. Right at the present time, I think, it's a legislative act that has to do with spendthrift trust. Would this do any violence to that or is this anyway connected in the present constitution?

MR. TOBIAS

In my opinion, if we delete lines 13 and 14, there is a--and that's my legal opinion...but just thinking about it very shortly, I've only thought about it for about the last ten or fifteen minutes--but I think we may have the effect of striking out our trust code in this state.

MR. CHATELAIN

Well, you know, many people in this state take advantage of this trust and it's being used more and more as time goes on; is that correct?

MR. TOBIAS

I realize that, yes, but I just....

MR. CASEY

You've exceeded your time, Mr. Tobias.

Further Discussion

MR. STINSON

Members of the convention, I would like to clarify several things. First, I would like to...some of those that might not know what the forced heirship is under the present law, of course, it is not in the constitution. Now, as to children, it's in the Civil Code, Article 1494. Now, if a person has one child, that child is forced to receive or they are forced to leave that child one-third of the property, two-thirds can be given to anyone, stranger, any charitable organization, any relative, or anyone. If there are two children, they have to be left half of the property. If there are three or more, the children have to be left two-thirds of the property. If there are no children, under the present law--not in the constitution, but in the Civil Code--if their father and mother are living, they get two-thirds of the property. If there is one, either father or mother living, they get a one-third. There is some question in the jurisprudence during the Greenlaw Case as to whether it's one-fourth or one-third. Now, the reason is why should we have forced portions? I'm old-fashion enough to believe that children should still help in the family and they help while they are children in accumulating some of the property that their parents have. If you don't have forced heirship as in certain states you can leave them a dollar or five dollars and say, "That's all you're worth to me." The basis of our government and I believe all good government is our family group. I feel that a government, or a state, or a country is only as strong as the family ties. When we don't have families as in Russia and other communist countries, we don't have the love; we don't have the feeling. I think that forced heirship is based on that and we should retain it in our constitution because if we don't we are going to find that a lot of us will reach an older age, we momentarily do not think as we ordinarily would. A father or mother might not be mentally insane enough to be interdicted or prohibited from making a will. But, in a moment when they are not right up to par they might will the property away to someone else and hurt the family tie, ruin the family connection. Now, someone said that if an older person marries a second wife and has children by the prior marriage that it would be to the injury of the second wife. Well, now, the husband...there are a number of ways he can will that wife the disposal portion, in fact, if he has only one child he can will her two-thirds of his property; he can leave her an insurance policy; you can get government bonds made in her name; he can will other use of broad coverage. But, these changes are not in the constitution, they are in the legislature as they should be under this and under our past constitution. Now, as to the trust, if you don't have forced heirship, you wouldn't have a trust anyway, you're going to give them to someone else and usually the trust is to guard the property for some child that might not be exactly financially responsible and the parent is concerned about his future security. That's the concern of the parent, he should be the one to say what he wants to do with it; by putting it in you don't say he has to have a trust; it's if he wants to. After all, you argued one time was his property should be given away and another says, "Well, it's his property, but he shouldn't say how his child is going to have it; that's contradictory. But, under this it simplified leaving it to the legislature subject to change as times change. I would like to ask you to please let's reject this amendment and leave it like it is and leave it up primarily to the legislature as to who the forced heirs are, what the percentages are, and things of that type. So, I would like to urge you, please, let's vote this amendment down.

Questions

MR. BURNS

Ford, in line with what you just said. Do you not agree that if we do away with forced heirship that it's equivalent of authorizing disinheritance of children?

MR. STINSON

Yes, sir, I certainly do. Mr. Burns, what I'm fearful of is when a person gets up much older than we are, you know they pick up little things and they hold against a child because maybe the child doesn't come to visit them every day, so he doesn't love me any more, I'm going to cut him out and you have subject to that, it's not sound basically that we should disown a child. Why should you be adopted as some stranger to someone when the child is yours, it's your life and blood, he helped you accumulate it?

MR. BURNS

That's one of the greatest dangers I see of doing away with it, it would permit that to...enable it to be possible.

MR. STINSON

Yes, sir, I certainly agree. I still say, Mr. Burns, that usually those children help them accumulate it, of course, some of them.....

Further Discussion

MR. SMITH

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise opposed to this bad amendment. I think it's very ill-advised. I'm not saying anything about my good friend, Gary O'Neill, but if you noticed, no lawyer introduced it. I think very few of them are going to support it. I've been a practicing attorney for over forty-four years; I've done a lot of succession practice, practically more of that than anything else. I've written quite a few wills. But, I think I'm more adverse in heirship and succession proceedings. I think our forced heirship is good; it's fair, it's equitable. Mr. Stinson said it might in some cases--done some wrong and some others that have happened. But, I think all together like he said when a person leaves one child he can give away two-thirds, that's the disposal portion, two children, a half, three or more, a third, his wife is taken care of, too. When you have community property, the wife gets a half of the property anyway. If there are children of the marriage, she gets the use of the other half. So, I think everyone is well taken care of. If they have no children, then, the parents come in for a fourth or maybe a third, it's kind of confused right there. So, I think we have a very good law on forced heirship and it's been in our law from time immemorial. As a lawyer of many years and has done a lot of practice in the successions, I think we should go ahead and reject this amendment without any question. I, now, I don't think it's entitled to any more debate. I now move the previous question.

[Motion for the Previous Question rejected: 24-65.]

Further Discussion

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, not having had the many years of experience in the practice of law that Mr. Smith has had, I've nonetheless had enough experience to view any abolition of the guarantee of the right to forced heirship as a serious mistake. I oppose the amendment for that reason. It seems to me that in our civil law system in Louisiana that we can be proudest of our laws on property and on succession and inheritance. The stability of our society, in my view, depends to a great extent on maintaining forced heirships. My reasons are thus: if you do not have forced heirship, you leave always open the possibility for squabbles among children, for instance, as to who is to obtain the favored position. You even leave it possible for some children to be shut out altogether from their inheritance. I think you put temptations in the way, of human nature being what it is, where you will have situations where people will be completely disinherited and alienated thereby from their family and in all probability for the remainder of their lives. You also have other motives of the stability of society involved here; the motivation of support for the children that one leaves behind; the motivation for the support of aged parents who are also forced heirs under this system because if the individual responsible does not support them, then assuredly society itself must do so. I feel that you increase very greatly the danger of imposing upon people who because of advancing years no longer possess perhaps the mental capacity to deal with wily schemes to induce them to leave their property to one individual or another and completely eliminate the inheritance of their other children or perhaps of their needy parents. So, for all of these reasons, I urge you to reject the amendment and to maintain the essence of the committee proposal which, I think, maintains the essence of our present law which is contained in Article IV, Section 16 of the present constitution and says succinctly that no law shall be passed abolishing forced heirship; let's retain that.

Question

MR. BURNS

Mr. Burson, in your practice of law, have you not had on many occasions a couple come to your office for the purpose of having you draw a will and when you explain to them the Louisiana law, they say, "Well, we don't need a will, that's the way we want it"?

MR. BURSON

Very many times, and I've also had the experience of people coming to the office to draw up a will, unfortunately, to find out whether or not they could disinherit two or three children and that situation, I'm afraid, would happen all too often.

Further Discussion

MR. RIECKE

Mr. Vice-Chairman and ladies and gentlemen, I have a particular interest in this amendment because you see I happen to be personally going through the process now of making a will and settling a succession. Under the present Louisiana law, two-thirds of my estate goes to my children who helped me to build up my business, and I think they are entitled to that. But, what I particularly object to in this amendment is the elimination of the establishment of the trust because you see when I remarried I lost the use of the property which my first wife and I possessed. Therefore, in an effort to try to take care of my new wife, whom you all know, who is only entitled to one-sixth of my estate, my lawyer is drawing up a trust so that upon my death she will be taken care of for the rest of her life only by one-third of what I own. If we would eliminate in this constitution the establishment of a trust, I don't know what my lady would do to support herself after I pass away. As you know I'm kind of an old man and she is a young woman, and I want to see that she is taken care of after I pass away. So, please, vote against this amendment which was submitted by a very young man who hasn't had the experience that I'm going through now. I know he will change his mind when he gets to be seventy, as I am. So, please, vote against this amendment. Thank you.

107th Days Proceedings—January 3, 1974

Further Discussion

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Riecke makes a hard act to follow, but I would point out to the convention the basis for forced heirship in Louisiana. It really goes back almost before the Populist Movement. If you all will take a minute and listen to me, as Mr. Jack would say, I will tell you some very interesting historical facts.

Under the English law, it is customary to leave all of one's estate to one's eldest child. This is known as the law of primogeniture--the eldest son, excuse me--and the French people, way back around the time of Napoleon, felt this was unfair because it was a method of building up large estates. The French people in our state also agreed that it was not a good idea to keep building up estates, generation after generation, because you would accumulate all the wealth in a very small group. That is the purpose, basically, of the laws of forced heirship. You can still disinherit an ungrateful child under certain specific bases--I think there are ten--of which I think only one has ever been upheld. The other nine are rather out-of-date now--such as refusal to bail somebody out if he's held by pirates for ransom--but the law of forced heirship is a basic law in this state. I don't believe it should be completely abolished. I do agree that there are some situations, under the present laws of forced heirship, which are unfair. I believe that the legislature can correct these, but I do not believe that the legislature should abolish the laws of forced heirship. The third sentence in this section is possibly more important. This is the one which authorizes the legislature to permit trusts to exist in Louisiana and to place the forced portion of a child, or an ascendant, subject to that trust. This is a method of protecting other heirs and, at the same time, permitting income to go to a widow or a widower, or a mother or a father, or a child who is an incompetent. It seems to me that it is essential for us to have something in the constitution which specifically permits trusts because trusts, like the law of primogeniture, are frowned on in the French law. Under our present-day tax setup in this country, however, trusts prove to be a very useful tool to lawyers, to accountants, and to anybody who's interested in protecting an estate from estate taxes. For this reason, I strongly urge you to defeat this amendment. The section is very simple; there is very little in it; it is not in great detail. It leaves a lot of leeway to the legislature; and, yet, it freezes into the law--and, I believe, quite properly--some of the basic concepts of our Louisiana law.

Questions

MR. J. JACKSON

Mr. Dennery, on the forced heirship, there's been some question, now, and tremendous debate about legitimacy and illegitimacy. There still would be a portion--if some suit is filed regarding the legitimacy or illegitimacy of a child--there still would be a portion under forced heirship whereby--let's say it resolved--whereby a person could very well, of the disposable portion, determine where that would go. Right?

MR. DENNERY

Yes. It depends upon the type of illegitimacy under the present code, but the code could be amended to protect that situation, Mr. Jackson.

MR. J. JACKSON

If the code is amended--let's say the code is amended--would this constitutional provision about forced heirship prevent or negate any changing of the code?

MR. DENNERY

I don't believe so. As a matter of fact, I think the code could probably provide that illegitimate children have as many rights as legitimate children.

MR. RIECKE

Yes. Mr. Dennery, I have a great deal of respect for your judgment, but you didn't say--in order to make it perfectly clear--you didn't say whether you were for or against the amendment.

MR. DENNERY

I said I was against the amendment. I urged everyone to vote against it.

MR. RIECKE

O. K. Fine. I just want that made clear.

Further Discussion

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this amendment. Mr. Dennery very accurately discussed the historical background of forced heirship: the fact that primogeniture was the rule in England, requiring that sums be left to the oldest son; and how the French people in Louisiana chose to go with another system as an alternative to that--the idea of forced heirship--that children and other relations should receive a portion of an estate, to the exclusion of all others and possibly against the will of the deceased. The difficulty is that, in relation to primogeniture, forced heirship is a good concept, but there is another alternative. Both of those concepts are contrary to the idea of freedom of disposition. Both primogeniture and forced heirship say that a person's property is not truly his own, in regards to disposal. The state will determine, to some extent, how that property will be disposed of. I suggest the proper concept in a free society is that a person's property is his own and, when it comes time to dispose of it, he has the right to dispose of it as he sees fit--whether it be to his children or other people. The history of forced heirship was that we needed to break up vast estates. Land--a constant redivision. That is no longer socially desirable. Just the contrary is true. Tracts of land, in particular, are increasingly needed to be consolidated, not broken up. That is out-of-date. One of the bad things about forced heirship is that it gives children a financial interest in the death of their parents. At present, it is all but impossible to disinherit a child. Now, here's what a child can do to a parent: He can testify against him in court, falsely; he can have him committed to an institution, falsely; he could fail to support his parent when in distress. But, for none of those reasons, could a parent disinherit his children. That parent would be required, on death, to have certain of his assets and possessions go to that child who had wronged him in the past. There's no justice in that. Now, it's been said that this provision protects the idea of trusts. The best way to protect the concept of trusts and to promote their use is to delete this section so that the legislature can adequately deal with the question of trusts and not have constitutional limitations with regard to forced heirship. In any case, the present provision in the constitution says that forced heirship shall not be abolished. This says it shall not be abolished, but the heirs and their amounts can be determined by law. That means that the legislature could establish a system whereby one dollar would have to be given to each heir, and that would satisfy the forced portion; so it's not an effective prohibition. The only thing it can do is to muddle the law with regard to trusts and muddle the law with regard to the freedom of disposition. The social policy, if you're interested in social policies that ought to be pursued, is against forced heirship because children should be encouraged to take care of their parents. If you have a system of forced heirship, there's no financial incentive for children to take care of their parents because, whether they take care of them or not, they're going to get the forced portion. Virtually nothing the child does, except attempt the life of the parent, can change that. If children in this state knew that they could be disinherited for reasonable grounds, they would have more incentive to care for their elderly parents--to keep them out of rest homes, to keep them out of institutions, to give them the proper attention that they deserve. Forced heirship is contrary to that doctrine. By deleting this section, we will not abolish forced heirship, however; we would leave it to the legislature. That's where I think it ought to be left. The legislature can deal with this and, if in the future the legislature desires to change the laws of forced heirship, or abolish forced heirship, in its wisdom, it could do so. But, we don't need what is basically a Civil Code provision placed in the constitution. This belongs in the Civil Code, not here in the constitution. So, I urge you to adopt this amendment, delete this provision, leave it to the legislature; and, possibly, someday in the future we might have a system that would encourage children to take care of their parents, rather than giving children a vested interest, automatically, in the death of their parents. So, I urge the adoption of the amendment.

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected: 11-93. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

Next group of amendments sent up by Delegates Denny and Alphonse Jackson.

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, line 10, after the word "abolish" and before the word "forced" insert the word "descending".

Amendment No. 2. On page 2, line 11, after the word and punctuation "heirs," delete the word "an" and insert in lieu thereof "the".

Amendment No. 3. On page 2, line 12, after the word "for" delete the word "disinheritance" and insert in lieu thereof "disinheritance". (How do you say that? Has that got it, Mr. Denny?)

Amendment No. 4. On page 2, line 13, after the word "law" delete the words "for any purpose".

Amendment No. 5. On page 2, line 13, after the word "a" delete the portion of the word "legitimate," and the remainder of the word at the beginning of line 14, and insert in lieu thereof "forced portion".

The gentleman does not wish to offer the first amendment. He does not want to offer the first amendment, so Amendment No. 2 will become Amendment No. 1; Amendment No. 3 will become Amendment No. 2, etc.

Explanation

MR. DENNERY

I would like to explain that I deleted my first amendment because there was some question about whether we should limit forced heirship to descending heirs only, or should it remain, as it is now, in the ascending line? Now, it is true that under Social Security and pensions, etc., there is not as great a need for the forced heirship in the ascending line; and the legislature, therefore, within the framework of this section giving the determination of forced heirs and the amount of the forced portion, can take care of that situation if it is desirable to do. The purpose of the other amendments, really, are more or less technical. The insertion of the word "the" rather than "an" is purely technical, in the second line. "Disinheritance" is the word that is used in the Civil Code, and I thought it better to use the same language which the Code has, instead of "disinheritance." The fourth amendment--I deleted the words "for any purpose" because there was some question as to whether that did not limit the legislature, rather than make it more flexible; and, therefore, I have removed trusts so that trusts may be authorized by law. Instead of using the word "legitimate," I have gone back to the words "forced portion," which were used previously. These two words are interchangeable but, since we used "forced portion" on line 11, I thought it more desirable to use "forced portion" on lines 13 and 14. I would ask the adoption of the Amendments Nos. 2,3,4, and 5. I'm advised that the Committee on Bill of Rights and Elections has no objection to these.

Question

MR. AVANT

Mr. Denny, this is just one of those questions for the record. If your amendment is adopted, then, under this section as amended, the legislature would have the right by statute to change the classification of persons who are forced heirs, change the amount of the forced portion, or do virtually anything that, in their wisdom, they thought was correct with the system--insofar as correcting what they may feel to be inequities but they could not abolish the system. There would be a system of forced heirship, but what it consisted of, and all of the refinements thereof, would be up to the legislature?

MR. DENNERY

Yea, air. That's the whole purpose of this section, and I believe, Mr. Avant, that that's basically the law as it presently stands.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: 101-3. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 102-6. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

"Section 8. Protection of Vested Rights

Section 8. Vested rights shall not be divested, except for the purposes and in accordance with the substantive and procedural safeguards established in this constitution for the taking or damaging of property."

Explanation

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, delegates, this is similar to the provision found in Article IV, Section 15, of the present constitution. That provision deals with ex post facto laws, laws impairing the obligation of contracts and vested rights. The provision on ex post facto law and laws impairing the obligation of contracts were placed in the Bill of Rights, and this provision would be placed here. I urge the adoption.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

Questions

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Jenkins, what are vested rights?

MR. JENKINS

A vested right--and I'm going to give you a technical definition, but I think it'll be correct--is a right to enjoyment, present or prospective, which belongs to a particular person. It must be absolute, complete, and unconditional, independent of any contingency, not a mere expectancy or contingent interest. There are three sources of vested rights: One is by contract; second is by statute; and third is by operation of law. An example of a vested right created by a contract would be the right to receive a thing for a price. The source of a vested right created by statute, for example, would be the right to receive Social Security benefits or to hold a judgeship, once you've been elected to that office. An example of a vested right which is formed by operation of law would be the right to redress for a tort claim, for example.

MR. PEREZ

And, this article would say that these vested rights "shall not be divested, except for the purposes and in accordance with the substantive and procedural safeguards established in this constitution." Where are those procedures that you talk about?

MR. JENKINS

They would be spread throughout the constitution. I think most would be found in the Bill of Rights, particularly the right to property, also due process of law, also the equal protection clause, and others that bear on such activities--the right to access of courts, all of the normal provisions that apply in such cases.

MR. PEREZ

Is there anything that you know of in the constitution which protects the right of prescription? to acquire property or lose property by prescription?

MR. JENKINS

I'm sorry; what?

MR. PEREZ

Is there anything that you know of in the constitution which gives the right to persons to acquire or lose property by prescription?

MR. JENKINS

No, it's not a question of giving that right; it's that you have no right granted anywhere not to lose by prescription. A vested right comes about by one of the three means that I talked about: either by contract, by statute, or by operation of law.

MR. PEREZ

Property is one of those rights, isn't it?

MR. JENKINS

Only to the extent established by law.

MR. PEREZ

So that the only way a person could lose property would be by expropriation provided in the Bill of Rights, and under no other conditions--including the fact that a person could never lose his property by prescription to another person?

MR. JENKINS

No, I don't believe that prescription of property has ever been interpreted as within the concept of vested rights. I don't think, under the present law, it has ever been interpreted that way. Do you understand that what we're doing here is similar to the present law? Just and adequate compensation has to be paid at present, when vested rights are divested, and just and adequate compensation has never been paid--nor has it been argued that it must be paid--in cases of prescription. This could, naturally, in no way change that.

107th Days Proceedings—January 3, 1974

MR. PEREZ

Isn't it true that there is a very significant change from the present constitution? because the present constitutional provision simply says "nor shall vested rights be divested, unless for purposes of public utility and for just and adequate compensation previously paid." But, there is no provision in there which would say "in accordance with the substantive and procedural safeguards established in this constitution." Isn't there a significant difference?

MR. JENKINS

I think the only difference would be with regard to the other concepts that we've already granted, like right to trials by jury, compensation to full extent of loss, and things of that nature.

MR. AVANT

What you have said, Mr. Jenkins, has interested me. You would agree--would you not?--that under the law, if a person is injured in the course and scope of his employment, he would be entitled to Workman's Compensation benefits if he met the definition of the law, etc. Right?

MR. JENKINS

That's right. That would be one created by statute--a vested right created by statute.

MR. AVANT

That would be a vested right, though? Now then, under that statute, under certain circumstances, he may lose that right if he refuses to cooperate with the physicians--just deliberately so--and various and sundry other possibilities where he might lose that right. Isn't that correct?

MR. JENKINS

Well, those are part of the rights. Those conditions are conditions precedent, I think, to it.

MR. AVANT

So, then he would have a jury trial to determine whether or not he had lost his right to receive workman's compensation, under this provision; would he not?

MR. JENKINS

I don't think that that's a case of divesting a right. That's a question of whether the right exists. Now, if you were going to take away his right to sue, for example, surely, he would have a right to trial by jury. That would be a strange case. In other words, there's a difference between divesting a right and saying that no right has ever existed. A person who is not entitled to judgment, in a particular case, is not entitled because he doesn't have a right to. It's not a question of his having a right which is then divested.

MR. AVANT

All right. Well, let's get on to something else, then. If I go out to an automobile dealer and buy an automobile, and pay for it and go get a license, then it's my automobile and I have a vested right to it; do I not?

MR. JENKINS

You have a vested right to receive it; correct.

MR. AVANT

All right. Then, if I loan that automobile to somebody and they start to transport heroin in it, that automobile can be taken away from me by....

That automobile can be confiscated by processes that are established by statute now. Correct?

MR. JENKINS

That's correct, and this does not change that.

MR. AVANT

Well, would not, then, that become a jury trial--if this is adopted--as to whether that automobile would be forfeited because I loaned it to somebody and they transported heroin in it?

MR. JENKINS

No, because we've already provided that...we've had a complete exception, under Section 4--the Bill of Rights, for contraband. We except contraband from the prohibition against taking effects and things. That automobile, in that case, is contraband--just as certain drugs would be, or certain weapons would be.

MR. AVANT

As I remember that provision, it says that movable property will in no event ever be expropriated, except in cases of contraband.

MR. JENKINS

Personal effects, it says, should not be taken--not movables, necessarily.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Jenkins, when we're speaking of vested rights, do we mean tangible, as well as intangible, rights?

MR. JENKINS

Well, a right is not a tangible thing in any case. When you say a tangible right, I suppose you mean a right to a thing.

MR. LANIER

A tangible or intangible thing; right.

MR. JENKINS

In the cases of the tangibles, generally, our law with regard to property takes care of those. Also, let me say this with regard to the types of vested rights--the vested rights being created in three ways: by contract, by statute, and by operation of the law--there is an absolute prohibition in our present law against impairing the obligation of contracts; so, with regard to vested rights created by contract, there is now--and we have already agreed again to maintain in the Bill of Rights--the absolute prohibition against impairing the obligation of contracts.

MR. LANIER

But, what I'm getting at is, since vested rights can be tangible and intangible and we've provided for a method of taking the tangible, if we do not provide for a method of taking the intangible, then they cannot be taken. Would that be correct?

MR. JENKINS

No, that is not correct because the courts have made a distinction, consistently, between property and certain vested rights. They have made that distinction; they have said that the two are different. The typical thing would be like Social Security benefits, to which you may have a vested right, but it is not property.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Perez has two sets of amendments: One's to delete, and the other....

The amendment simply reads:

[Amendment No. 1.] On page 2, delete lines 15 through 19, both inclusive, in their entirety.

Explanation

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentleman of the convention, I think that, from the discussion which we have already heard with respect to this section, that there is a great deal of confusion as to what the word "vested rights" means. But, one of the most important of all vested rights, of course, are property rights. In the Bill of Rights Section, we have gone into great detail, and we debated--as I recall it--at least one, maybe two, days on the question of right to property. I will quote to you the first sentence, which says: "Every person has the right to acquire, control, own, use, enjoy, protect, and dispose of private property. This right is subject to the reasonable statutory restrictions and the reasonable exercise of the police power." Then it goes on to talk about how property may be expropriated. One of the things that very much concerns me, with respect to this provision, is that, if you read the second clause which says "vested rights shall not be divested, except for the purposes and in accordance with the substantive and procedural safeguards established in this constitution for the taking or damaging of property," then it would mean to me that under no conditions could anybody lose their property, except through expropriation. Now, we have many, many, many exceptions under the laws of this state as to how persons can lose their vested rights, their property. We have the laws with respect to prescription, where a person can lose his property if he allows someone else to take possession of that property for ten years or for thirty years, depending upon whether he's a good-faith possessor or not a good-faith possessor. We have the provisions, under the law, where a person can lose his automobile if they have narcotics which are seized into it. We have executory process under our mortgage laws. This provision is so foreign to so many of these various so-called vested rights, which we now have, that it would seem to me that we would put ourselves in a position where we would be virtually doing away with the right of a person to lose property under any circumstances, except by expropriation. Let me call your attention that the words "vested rights shall not be divested"--it does not say "to the public." It is not limited in any way; it is general. You just absolutely cannot lose your rights, "except in accordance with the substantive and procedural safeguards established in the constitution for the taking or damaging of property," which is Section 4 of the Bill of Rights, which requires that the only way you lose property is through expropriation. I say this is a very ill-advised section. I don't think we need it. I think that we have more than adequately protected the right to property and the right to vested rights under Section 4 of the Bill of Rights, and this particular provision is so general in its terms that I just can't get to the end of my imagination as to what could be interpreted...what this section could be interpreted to mean. I therefore strongly urge you that we do not need this provision and that, therefore, the amendment which I have offered should be adopted--which would, in effect, delete the section. I'll yield to questions.

107th Days Proceedings—January 3, 1974

Questions

MR. WILLIS

Mr. Perez, irrespective of how you define "vested rights" it has to be referable to property; doesn't it?

MR. PEREZ

That is no question about that particularly because of the fact that the last few words say how you lose the property you have to...some of the safeguards established in this constitution for the taking or damaging of property.

MR. WILLIS

Now, to project my question, there are two kinds of property: movable and immovable. In each there are two kinds also, corporeal which you can touch, and incorporeal, which is a right evidenced by such as a mortgage note.

MR. PEREZ

That's correct.

MR. WILLIS

Now, with those two precepts in mind, if that section stays in, it is a total destruction of the prescription provisions of our laws.

MR. PEREZ

Yes, I've already commented on that where, in my judgment, this would do violence to all of the various laws of prescription and I might say that many, many of you who own your homes, you might go back and find somewhere along the line that the prescriptive rights is what protects the title of your property.

MR. WILLIS

Well, I was coming to that, but then my next question will be if we destroy the thesis or the theory of prescription not only would that happen, but there would be never an end to litigation and there would be no quiet title in Louisiana.

MR. PEREZ

That's certainly true.

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Perez, you have an amendment which you apparently will offer if this one fails that says "vested rights shall not be divested unless for purposes of public utility and for just and adequate compensation previously paid"--the present constitution. Do you think that that negates all prescription laws in the state?

MR. PEREZ

No, sir, it doesn't.

MR. JENKINS

Then, why would this?

MR. PEREZ

Because of the fact that you are limiting the method by which you can lose vested rights, you say "except for the purposes and in accordance with the substantive and procedural safeguards established in this constitution for the taking or damaging of property," and the only way you can lose property under those provisions which is Section 4 of the Bill of Rights, is through expropriation of funds.

MR. JENKINS

So, you are of the opinion that if divested...if vested rights are divested...no, that if someone loses his property by prescription, that is a divestiture of vested rights. So, then, why haven't we been paying compensation all these two hundred years when someone loses property by prescription?

MR. PEREZ

Because if you will read the present provision in the constitution, it says "unless for the purpose of public utility," and that has been interpreted by the courts as to mean expropriation and for a just and adequate compensation previously paid.

MR. JENKINS

In other words, just and adequate compensation previously paid is a prerequisite to taking for a public utility. Is that correct?

MR. PEREZ

The two terms "unless for purposes of public utility" and "for just and adequate compensation paid" limit the words "nor shall vested rights be divested" in the present constitution, and that has been interpreted by the courts to mean that you can't...the public cannot take property unless through its appropriation or other methods which will comply with other constitutional provisions, and I say to you, sir, that under the article and right to property that we have every protection that is needed to a property owner. I can't conceive of why we would need this proposed section in the constitution.

MR. JENKINS

Do you realize that this is proposed not to protect the right to property because the courts have made a distinction between the right to property and vested rights. Do you realize that?

MR. PEREZ

I'd like for you to elucidate a little bit if you will. A vested right is certainly a right to property, and you can lose that right through prescription, that is, by adverse possession by another person. That's one example. There are many, many other cases where vested rights can be lost by the action of others or by the failure on your part to do something. You are so limiting this provision which says that you can't lose vested rights under any condition unless it's in accordance with the substantive and procedural safeguards established in this constitution for the taking or damaging of property. That strictly refers to expropriation. That's the only way, as I read Section 8, that a vested right can be divested.

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Perez, really, you seem to ignore the things I said in answer to your question earlier. Don't you agree that vested rights can be divested only by the state?

MR. PEREZ

No.

MR. JENKINS

How can one private individual divest another of his rights?

MR. PEREZ

By virtue of the articles of the Civil Code and other articles of law, for instance, again, with respect to prescription.

MR. JENKINS

Can you cite even one case that has ever held that prescription is a divestiture of rights?

MR. PEREZ

Well, I'm sure I could if I dug into the law books, but I know we've been covering a varied subject and a lot of different matters, but there was no question under any reasonable interpretation that a right...that the word "right" means your right to property. You have your provisions in here with regard to right to property. That's what your Section 4 is entitled--"Right to Property." That right may be divested by virtue of prescription.

Further Discussion

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, I really hate to say it, but you've been getting bad factual information from Mr. Perez. The information he's giving you is simply not the law. I have researched it. He admits he hasn't opened the books; I have. There is no instance I've found in any citation found in our constitution that has ever held prescription to be a divestiture of rights. For one thing, prescription is a private action that occurs as between private parties, or as between the state and a private party, the state being as a private individual in the case of prescription. Divestiture can only be taking place by the state or by a political subdivision. That's always been the way it's been interpreted. There are two prerequisites in our present law for divesting vested rights. First, it has to be for a purpose of public utility. Second, it has to be with just and adequate compensation. Prescription has never been held to be such a thing. You don't have to pay just and adequate compensation for prescription. The arguments you're getting here are not even germane to the subject because divesting vested rights has nothing to do with prescription. Also, Mr. Perez's argument seems to be with the Right to Property Section. This gives no additional rights to a citizen to enforce his property rights. The property right protection is found in the Right to Property Section in the Bill of Rights, as well as scattered throughout the miscellaneous provisions throughout the constitution. What this section does is to maintain the present protection that people have for vested rights which are other than property rights. Naturally, it protects the property rights, by referring to the Property Rights Section. But, it protects those other vested rights such as the right to social security benefits from the government which comes about by statute; the right to a pension benefit from a private company, which would come about by operation of the law; the right to sue in a tort claim, which would come about by virtue of the operation of law; the right to hold a public office, which comes about by statute; now, that's what this deals with. It says that if you're going to take such a right, divest a person of such a right, you have to do so for the purposes outlined under the Bill of Rights and other provisions, and with the same compensation and so forth, required there. We've already discussed the Property Article. This doesn't affect that, but an important thing to remember is that the Property Rights Section does not protect all vested rights. It only protects those vested rights which are property rights, and there are other vested rights. One example I know the educators would be concerned about would be their right to their retirement benefits. That is a vested right, and we have always provided in our law that those vested rights cannot be divested except with payment of just and adequate compensation for purposes of public utility. Now, we must have a provision in this constitution protecting vested rights. We've always had that, and certainly we could disagree as to whether we ought to make the same procedures with regard to taking of property or whether or not we should just continue the same provision. But, certainly, we can't just delete this section altogether and not have protection in our constitution of people's vested rights. So, I urge the defeat of this amendment.

Questions

MR. TOBIAS
Woody, is this provision in the present 1921 Constitution?

MR. JENKINS
Yes, the present constitution says in Section 14 of Article IV "nor shall vested rights be divested unless for purposes of public utility and for just and adequate compensation previously paid."

MR. TOBIAS
Then, that's the other Perez amendment?

MR. JENKINS
That's the other one, but you notice that the language that I just read you conforms with the provision for taking property under the present constitution. We have changed that provision to Section 4 of the Bill of Rights. It's reasonable and logical to change this provision as well to conform so that the procedures, the purposes, the safeguards, and so forth remain the same.

MR. TOBIAS
I don't see how this provision doesn't go further. Could you explain how it does not? In other words, this...

MR. JENKINS
Well, you know, I'll try to explain again. There are different types of vested rights. The right to property is one of them, but every vested right is not a right to property. There are other types of property rights. Vested rights come about by three means: contract, operation of law, and by statute. Most of those aren't property rights, and if a person is going to have his vested rights taken, they ought to conform to the same procedures as if his property were taken. But, the taking in every case is taking by the state or a political subdivision. That's the only sort of taking that a Bill of Rights or a constitution can deal with. It's for the statutory law to deal with the relations of persons--theft, and things like that, defining those things.

MR. AVANT
Mr. Jenkins, I believe you made the statement that we would-- to this effect--that we've just got to have this provision about vested rights in the constitution, that we've always had it.

MR. JENKINS
That's correct.

MR. AVANT
Now, there's no similar provision in the United States Constitution, is there? There's a simple provision that says that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property except by due process of law. Isn't that all it says?

MR. JENKINS
I'd have to check. I believe you're right. But, you see the courts have reached the same result under the U.S. Constitution in many cases involving impairment of the obligation of contracts. They've, I think, found other bases such as equal protection and due process to imply most of these things. But, our constitution has had this since 1812 and it's been in every constitution we've ever had, and I think we sure need it.

MR. AVANT
Now, under the United States Constitution, isn't it federal constitutional law that you cannot divest a person of a vested right except by due process of law and in accordance with equal protection of the laws and all of the other constitutional guarantees that you have?

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted: 71-30. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER
I don't have distribution copies of Mr. Jenkins's set of amendments which has the effect of adding back a Section 8 with different language.
Amendment No. 1. On page 2, delete lines 15 through 19, both inclusive, in their entirety--which has already been done--and insert in lieu thereof the following:
"Section 8. Protection of Vested Rights
Section 8. Vested rights shall not be divested, unless for purposes of public utility, and for just and adequate compensation previously paid."

Explanation

MR. JENKINS
Mr. Chairman, this is the same as Mr. Perez's second amendment that he apparently was going to offer if his first one had not passed. This is the present law verbatim out of the Article IV, Section 15 of the Louisiana Constitution of 1921. It is the same language that has been in every state constitution since we've had a state. Truly, we would make a terrible mistake if we wouldn't give this constitutional protection to vested rights because you're talking about more than property rights. Property rights are protected in the Bill of Rights, but other vested rights are not except in certain limited ways. So, I certainly urge you not to make a mistake and leave this out, and go ahead and adopt this amendment to preserve the present language of the 1921 Constitution.

Further Discussion

MR. GRAVEL
Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I speak briefly in opposition to this amendment because I think it definitely causes some serious problems. Irrespective of whatever language may be in the present constitution, based upon what we have done already in the proposed new document I think we've got to proceed with real caution. This particular provision as I interpret it, would prohibit the Department of

107th Days Proceedings—January 3, 1974

Highways, for example, from taking property necessary for a highway development unless and until there had been a final adjudication by the court including those cases in which a jury trial was held, on up to the courts of last resort, that the compensation paid was just and adequate. If you read it very carefully, you'll see that there can be no taking of any kind of private property until the determination has ultimately and finally been made that the compensation is just and adequate. Now, we've already provided for the adequacy and fairness of compensation payment. But, that should not stand in the way of a public right being exercised to take property in those instances where property must be taken for public purposes. Therefore, I move, if there are no other speakers, I move the previous question on the amendment, and ask that you vote against it.

[Motion for the Previous Question withdrawn.]

Questions

MR. WEISS

Delegate Gravel, you said that this is in the old constitution. Since 1921, for fifty-two years, then, this has been in the present constitution. Has it interfered with the acquiescence of highway rights-of-way, or has it interfered in any way with just compensation? Why can't it be in the present constitution?

MR. GRAVEL

You've got a special quick-taking provision that's in another section of the constitution that refers, I think, to the Department of Highways.

MR. WEISS

We don't have that in the present, in the '73.

MR. GRAVEL

Not specially for the Department of Highways. I really am very much concerned about the language because this amendment indicates to me that there can be no vesting of title in the expropriating body, whether it be local government or the highway department, or some other body that's entitled to expropriate unless and until just and adequate compensation, which is now a jury fact question has been determined and paid. I think it's a very serious problem, and I ask you to vote against the proposed amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, we have just a few minutes ago overwhelmingly voted to remove this Section 8, and even though the provision which is suggested by Mr. Jenkins now is not as damaging or would not be as bad as the present provision. I'm satisfied that everything has adequately been taken care of, and what we've already adopted in the Bill of Rights, and in fact if we adopt this provision as has been said before by Mr. Gravel, it will in certain respects conflict with the present provision. So, I, therefore, urge you to defeat the amendment.

Questions

MR. TOBIAS

Chalin, what does the phrase "public utility" mean to you? Could it not be interpreted to mean to whatever the legislature says is public, is public utility? Doesn't "public utility" mean public usefulness?

MR. PEREZ

That's a possibility...public utility generally means public use, as I...or for the use of the public, generally, is the definition I'd give for public utility.

MR. TOBIAS

But, it could be interpreted a lot more broadly than that, could it not?

MR. PEREZ

Well, it has been determined in many cases that there are many things which are questionable, but that the legislature has declared to be something of public utility.

MR. O'NEILL

Mr. Perez, I saw the same amendment on my desk, but it had your name on it. Did you plan to oppose your own amendment, or was .....

MR. PEREZ

If you will notice, I offered the amendment to delete the section first because I didn't think it was needed. In the event the first amendment offered by me failed, I was going to offer the second one because of the fact that I felt it wasn't as bad as the first one. But, I again reiterate the fact that I don't feel that we need it, and that's why I went with the first amendment first to delete the entire section because I don't think it's needed.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, all I can say is that we really ought to think about this issue. Leaving this out would be like leaving out freedom of speech, or some other comparable provision. We've had this in our constitution for so long; is it needed? Yes, it is the only constitutional protection we have for the divestiture of rights other than property rights. Now, all these great problems that Mr. Gravel alluded to...you know, we've had it since 1812; we've been living with them so long I guess we can continue to. I certainly hope you will go ahead and adopt this amendment. It is exactly the 1921 constitutional language and that of the constitutions that preceded it. It says that if vested rights are divested it has to be for a public purpose and with payment compensation. So, I urge the adoption of it.

[Amendment rejected: 39-66. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Personal Privilege

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, at your desk in front of you should be a package of paper like this with a big "1" on it. It's the Style and Drafting Report on Judiciary. If you don't have it, Butch over there--raise his hand--there's a pile over there. You can go get one or he'll send one to you. I understand that the Chairman is going... with your permission, is going to call this up in the next day or so. Is that right, sir?

MR. HENRY

That's right, yes, sir. I'm listening, Judge; we're going to call this up in the next day or so.

[Motion to consider Section 5 previously passed over adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

Section 5. Oath of Office
"Section 5. All officers before entering upon the duties of their respective offices shall take the following oath or affirmation: "I, (A B), do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support the constitution and laws of the United States and the constitution and laws of this state and that I will faithfully and impartially discharge and perform all the duties incumbent upon me as _____ according to the best of my ability and understanding, so help me God."

Explanation

MR. A. JACKSON

Mr. Chairmen, ladies and gentlemen, Section 5 sets forth the provision that will be used as an oath for all elected officials, all public officials. It is substantially the same as in the 1921 Constitution with the exception that it deletes the exception clause and I, therefore, move the adoption of Section 5.

Questions

MR. LANIER

Mr. Jackson, as you and I previously discussed about this, the way this thing is written, it pretty well follows the present constitutional provision that nobody can legally be in office unless they take this particular oath; is that correct?

MR. JACKSON

That is correct.

107th Days Proceedings—January 3, 1974

MR. LANIER

As we discussed, Louisiana Revised Statute 42:1 defines a public office as any elective or appointive position of any type whether it be a board, or commission or otherwise which is established by the constitution or by a statute; is that correct?

MR. JACKSON

That is correct.

MR. LANIER

If, we leave this language as it is, we could be creating a situation for all of these various boards and commissions similar to the one that C.C.'73 found itself in where we took the statutory oath on the first day, but then we had to come back and take the constitutional oath and ratify our previous actions; wouldn't that be correct?

MR. JACKSON

That is correct.

MR. LANIER

Would you have any objection to deleting the language that makes this a mandatory oath before entering upon the duties of the office and leave that up to the legislature to determine the point and time when the oath would have to be taken?

MR. JACKSON

I don't have any serious objection; we discussed it in committee. I would suggest that you offer your amendment and let the convention decide.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

A set of amendments sent up by Delegate Lanier.

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 30, after the word "officers" delete the remainder of the line and on line 31, delete the words "their respective offices".

Explanation

MR. LANIER

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, the purpose of my amendment is to leave in the requirement that all public officers must take the prescribed oath, but to remove the constitutional requirement that this absolutely must be done prior to the time that he assumes his duties. I do this for several reasons. As you will recall, the first day that we came here, we took an oath that was prescribed in the statute that created us, Act 2 of 1972. We did not take the oath that was prescribed in Article XIX, Section 1 of the present constitution. As a result of this, if you will look at the second day's proceedings in our journal, we got an opinion from the attorney general of the State of Louisiana recommending to us that we take the constitutional oath and also to ratify our previous actions, part of which, I might add was the election of our Chairman and the establishment of our temporary rules committee. I believe that if we leave this language in here, we're really constitutionally creating a trap for the unwary such as we were here in C.C.'73, in that under the present statutory law and I would specifically refer you to R.S. 42:1, the term "public office" is defined as follows: "as used in this title, the term public office means any state, district, parish or municipal office elective or appointive or any position as member on a board of commission, elective or appointive when the office or position is established by the constitution or laws of this state. Public officer is any person holding a public office in this state." Now, if you look further in Title 42, under 42:161, it is a statute which does prescribe as follows: "all public officers shall take and subscribe the oath or affirmation required by Article XIX of the constitution before acting in their respective offices." What I'm suggesting is, that if we leave this language that I'm seeking to delete, and the specific language is: "before entering upon the duties of their respective offices," if we leave that in there then we have constitutionally provided that nobody can act unless they take this oath. I think we would be leaving open situations with all of these boards and commissions where they might find themselves in the same position that we were in, where through inadvertence is no question of any bad faith; everybody wanted to take the right oath and ultimately we did, but we could have a situation created where all of these people who didn't take oaths would be acting ultra vires. Now, it may be that ultimately the legislature in its wisdom may wish to prescribe that such offices as judge or district attorney or House of Representatives or Senate, that they must take their oaths before going in office. But, with reference to some of these minor positions we could--well, maybe in the future--wish to provide that the oath must be taken within ten days after assuming office. So, I think, that rather than use this language and I might add, that the language in the committee proposal is even more restrictive than the present language. In the present Article XIX, Section 1, there is an exception to this rule where it says "except as otherwise provided in this constitution." There is no exception in the language that is proposed here. I would suggest that what the committee proposal has is presently provided for by statute. If we lock it into the constitution, we could be creating and probably will be creating a trap for the unwary and some of these minor boards and minor positions, and that we should leave some flexibility in this area for the legislature to act. I have no opposition. I think it's a good thing that we require the oath of office. The issue is, at what point in time do we require the oath of office, and I think that legislature can make that determination depending on the type of office it is or, at least, they could have the flexibility under my amendment. If my amendment is not adopted, then, of course, I think we would be in the position that you may absolutely not take any public office as defined in the statutes unless you take the prescribed oath, which could leave some people in the position like we were in here, in the convention on our first day. I would urge the adoption of the amendment. Mr. Chairman, I'll be happy to try and answer any questions.

Questions

MR. AVANT

Mr. Lanier, wouldn't it be better just to amend the statutes and make the statutory oath conform to the constitutional oath?

MR. LANIER

I think, well, the present statute does conform with the present constitution.. .

MR. AVANT

All right, don't. .

MR. LANIER

. . . if we adopt this, then as I read it, the only difference between the statutory provision and the new provision will be the numbers. In other words, the R.S. 42:161 says that "all public officers shall take and subscribe the oath of affirmation required by Article XIX --now this may not be Article XIX-- of the constitution before acting in their respective offices." So, I think the only way that the present law would be out of line with this provision would be within the particular article that it designates. What I'm saying is, if we lock this requirement in here, then in the future the legislature would not have the authority to provide different means for taking the oath for different types of public offices.

MR. AVANT

Well, now what my question is and what bothers me. Suppose you just leave it in there to the legislature as to when an elected or appointed officer is going to be required to take the oath of office; that would permit him to assume the duties of the office before he ever took the oath; right?

MR. LANIER

That is correct.

MR. AVANT

Now, what's going to be the situation, the criminal law being as highly technical as it is--and this is what really bugs me-- if someone has assumed the duties of the office, but has not taken the oath and then would be guilty or commits an act which, had he taken the oath, would be nonfeasance or misfeasance or dual officeholding or any of the various and sundry criminal offenses that he might commit. I'm afraid that you'd just be creating a technical loophole for that fellow to walk right out the door without being guilty of a crime although he's. . .

MR. LANIER

I don't think that's accurate, Mr. Avant, for this reason. If the manner of taking office is provided by statute, and if he assumes the office in compliance with the statute even though the statute allowed him to take the oath at another time, he would still be legally in office and required to do certain things statutorily. Actually, you have brought up a good point from the other way around. If you stop and think about all the different agencies, if those people haven't taken the oath, it may well be that you would fall into your situation where you couldn't do this because of this constitutional provision because they hadn't taken the constitutional oath just as we didn't on the first day that we were here. So, I think perhaps the point you're raising is a stronger argument for my approach than it is for going against this approach.

107th Days Proceedings—January 3, 1974

MR. AVANT

Well, I wasn't taking any approach and I'm satisfied with your answer and I think you may be right. I just don't want to create a situation where someone, because of the technicality of not having taken the oath yet, or actually performing the duties of the office, could maybe escape through some loophole.

MR. LANIER

I think you've raised a real good point, Jack, and the point is really that this is a two-edged sword. It can cut both ways, you see. If they are required to take it and they haven't, they're not legally in office. On the other hand, if you have a statute that says that they shall do it a certain way and they do comply in that way even though it doesn't require an oath initially, they could still be in violation and chargeable. But, it is a two-way sword; it depends on which way you look at it.

Further Discussion

MR. TOBIAS

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, of course, about one year ago today I was the one who caused all the trouble over the oaths and I almost hesitate to rise in opposition to this amendment. But, I would point up this and I think that each person should consider, do you want your elected officials to exercise the duties of their office without swearing that they will uphold the constitution and laws of this state and of the United States? I think it's a small thing to ask to say that they have to take an oath before they can exercise the duties of their office. I would reemphasize the points that Delegate Avant made regarding the question of whether he could get out of the charges of malfeasance if he did not take this oath. It's nine words, I don't think it hurts anyone to leave those nine words in, and I think it provides a protection to guarantee that your public officials will uphold the laws of this state.

ROLL CALL

[87 delegates present and a quorum.]

PRAYER

MR. STOVALL

Let us pray. O God, our health and ages passed, I will hope for years to come our shelter from the stormy blast and Thou eternal home. We give thanks to you for the gift of this new year. We accept it as a sacred trust from you. We accept it as an empty form to be filled with things worthwhile, service to You and to one another. May we begin this day in the decisions that we made to do those things that will contribute to the welfare and the well being of our state. Bless each one here assembled and guide us in our deliberations for we offer our prayer in Your name and to Your glory. Amen.

[Motion to withdraw Delegate Proposal No. 53. Substitute motion that Delegate Proposal No. 53 be engrossed and passed to third reading.]

MR. POYNTER

Delegate Proposal No. 53, introduced by Delegate Leithman. A proposal making provisions for education and necessary provisions with respect thereto. Comes from the Committee on Education and Welfare. Reported without action.

Explanation

MR. LEITHMAN

Mr. Chairman, members of the convention, it's not my intention to go into this matter and prolong this issue. This is Delegate Proposal No. 53, this is the single board of education concept. I'm asking you now to merely have this proposal engrossed and passed to its third reading. At this time we have, also on the calendar, Delegate Proposal No. 54 which is just a statement on education. I'm not going to go into the context, it's not really proper to go into the context of the proposal but I merely wish to point out at this time that I don't feel any other subject matter in the constitutional convention has attracted more attention and more disfavor to the constitution than has the Education Article which we have adopted thus far. In closing, I want to reemphasize and I think most of you have been contacted in your local areas that your student government people, your student bodies of each of your independent universities have contacted you, or should have, the alumni association of the universities are behind the single board concept. You have the letter from the governor, Governor Edwards. You have a letter, also, from Superintendent Michot supporting the single board concept. The State Board of Education has already publically announced their support of the single board concept. Several members of the State Board of Education have indicated that they will oppose the constitution in toto, should it remain with the five boards as we now have it. The LTA Association, this is your teaching people around the state, your teachers have supported in their convention a single board concept. The Association of College Presidents or deans, I don't know the exact terminology of the organization, but they as a body have gone out to support the single board concept. In final, your legislature has already gone with the Superboard; your Committee on Higher Education which several of your members here serve at this present time are very much concerned about it and as a legislative body, you may see the constitutional convention opposed by the Committee on Higher Education which is compromised of state legislators. So, this is the case, I think, it's overwhelming that we do something about the education proposal. I think we have been criticized enough with the situation that we are in now. I will ask you to merely pass this. This is just keeping it alive. The governor is not happy and he's not content with the five boards that we now have. I don't know what the future lies, it's going to happen quickly. My mere request of you is to keep No. 53 alive and on the calendar, it may never come to the floor, but let's not just discard a single board concept. I'll ask when the time comes to merely ask that it be engrossed and passed to its third reading. Thank you.

Questions

MR. BURNS

If we have any alternatives, have you given any thought to try to get this on as an alternative?

MR. LEITHMAN

Yes, Mr. Burns. We are considering an alternative proposal and it's pretty much a parallel to the single board to this particular proposal. So, it's not in line by line, but it is a similar....

MR. BURNS

Same concept?

MR. LEITHMAN

Yes, sir.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Leithman, this is that proposal that we beat to death for about a year in committee; isn't it? Isn't it the same one?

MR. LEITHMAN

I think the spread was two votes or three votes. I don't think two or three votes is indicative of a hundred and thirty-two delegates of the constitution.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Well, it was reported without action more as a courtesy to you than anything else; wasn't it?

MR. LEITHMAN

No, sir.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Well, we reported it without action to keep from just saying reporting it unfavorably.

MR. LEITHMAN

If you would read under your morning...order of the day, you'll see about eight or nine education reports lying over. All of those were reported under the same circumstances and there was no favor granted on any of them.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Reported without action?

MR. LEITHMAN

Without action.

MR. HERNANDEZ

And, rather than report them unfavorably.

MR. LEITHMAN

Right, all eight or nine of them.

MR. HERNANDEZ

You didn't consider that a courtesy to you?

MR. LEITHMAN

No, sir, in fact, if you remember the committee, we wanted to handle them all as a group without action.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Yea, sir.

MR. LEITHMAN

You remember that?

MR. HERNANDEZ

Yes, sir.

Further Discussion

MR. THISTLETHWAITE

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this plan is the so-called Montana plan for higher education which is a two board plan calling for a Board of Public Education for elementary and secondary and a Board of Regents for higher education. The State of Montana has a population of about the size of the city of New Orleans; it's got five degree granting institutions; it's the only state with this same setup. These two boards, then, are theoretically--according to the plan--form a single board to discuss mutual problems. In Montana this board functions.... this plan functions as a two board plan. There are no advantages that this plan offers the State of Louisiana compared to the advantages that the plan which this convention has already adopted or offers, and I see no reason for keeping this plan alive at all. I urge that the convention turn down any further action with regard to this Montana plan and drop it, let it fall by the wayside. I urge opposition to Mr. Leithman's proposal.

108th Days Proceedings—January 4, 1974

Further Discussion

MR. COWEN

Gentlemen of the convention, this is a single board true and it sounds real good when you say that a single board is going to handle all of education. But, we who supported Committee Proposal No. 7 feel that this is a true single board plan in every respect and it has the management boards who will take the load off the day-to-day cares of the board and the management of the higher education. We feel that, really, we have a single board in every respect so far as planning and coordination and budgeting is concerned. We feel that really this No. 53, the board that Mr. Leithman says is really a single board and can do so well can not do all the jobs it's supposed to do and also handle the day-to-day affairs. We do not feel that this is a good plan. We urge you to reject it because as Mr. Thistlethwaite already outlined to you it is a Montana plan and it does not work in the same respect at all that has been described in Committee Proposal No. 53. We urge its rejection.

Questions

MR. STINSON

Mr. Cowen, we've already voted a number of times on this same idea. If this is advanced and put on the floor, don't you predict that it may be three or four days more battling back and forth?

MR. COWEN

I think so, true.

MR. STINSON

We really don't have that much time; do we?

MR. COWEN

No, we do not.

MR. JUNEAU

Mr. Cowen, I agree with you that we ought to save the time of this convention. Would you, in view of the publicity we've got on this....would you be agreeable to passing a rule, maybe where we could in open debate discuss whether or not this should be....this kind of concept should be an alternate on the ballot?

MR. COWEN

I don't even think it ought to be an alternate on the ballot, Mr. Juneau.

MR. ROEMER

Don't you think that what Mr. Leithman is trying to do is just in view of the feedback that many of us have gotten when we've gone home, particularly these of the education, is leave open the possibility that we want to discuss this again, I mean, I think that's a fair request; don't you?

MR. COWEN

Mr. Roemer, if we're going to have selection, let's go to an alternative and decide what we are going to do about that and let's bring it up there. We don't see any reason to continue to discuss this matter now.

MR. ROEMER

I see. But, you've made it clear that you're not even in favor of putting this as an alternative on the ballot; are you?

MR. COWEN

I am not.

Further Discussion

MR. ASSEFF

Mr. Chairman, delegates, normally all I would want to reopen is the date for qualifying for a delegate to this convention. However, in view of the great controversy over the question of a single board for higher education and the fact that many do feel very strongly about it, I urge that you vote to engross and pass it to third reading and keep it alive in the event that this convention decides to reconsider it later. We always can reject it when it is called from the calendar. The vote was close and it may well determine the fate of the constitution. It was said that we don't have the time. Well, if we fail to reconsider some of these decisions, we may well have wasted fourteen months, so it's a question of two days versus fourteen months. I urge you to vote to engross and pass it to its third reading. Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this is the same old proposal that we've beat to death for a year now. It's been brought up in committee time after time, this same concept has been voted on before and it is not practical. It has been definitely proven to the membership of the Education Committee that there is a dire need for more boards. Frankly, this is aimed at the L.S.U. Board of Supervisors, that's one of the main things it's aimed at. Now, L.S.U. is a wide and varied system of education, it includes the university and everybody knows that Louisiana can only support one big university. Then, it has its various schools; its medical schools--one in New Orleans, one in Shreveport; it has the dental school. We have experiment stations scattered all over the State of Louisiana. We have county agents and home demonstration agents in every parish of the state. It is not the same as any other school in this state; it's an entirely different concept; it's an agricultural college; they also have this land grant program. One board cannot possibly look after all of the education in the State of Louisiana and give the L.S.U. system the attention that it must have in order to be a success. I urge you to defeat this proposal to engross and pass to the third reading this Delegate Proposal No. 53; it is just not a practical situation. Thank you very much.

Further Discussion

MR. SEGURA

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, fellow delegates, I had sat on the Education Committee and attended all the meetings where this particular proposal was brought up from the very beginning of our meetings. We've heard debate; we've heard discussions; we've heard reports from everyone concerning this and your committee voted this proposal down. I ask you not to waste the convention's time with passing this on to third reading. The Committee Proposal No. 7 has been misreported to the people time after time. I think if you stop and look at it you will see that Proposal No. 7 does exactly what the proponents of this proposal are asking for. They are asking for a single board for higher education--everything of importance--the proposal that you adopted, Proposal No. 7, everything of importance, that is, the budget, the money that's going to be spent or allocated to each one of the universities, the curriculum that's going to be taught at each one of the universities, and the planning or the creating of new schools, the adding of branches, the consolidating of branches. That is all under the control of the Board of Regents; that's all under the control of one board; that's the important board. If any of you have sat at the State Board of Education meetings, you can see that under our present system this State Board of Education cannot physically handle all of the work they have to do to handle eleven colleges and universities. If you threw everything under one board, that would mean they would have to handle curriculum, budget, planning of campuses, and consolidating of campuses, plus managing all eleven and throwing L.S.U. in there--that's physically too much. The only reason other boards have been created in Proposal No. 7 is to divide the work and these management boards are merely management boards; they do not have the status of the Board of Regents, they don't have the powers of the Board of Regents. So, I ask you not to pass this on to third reading.

Further Discussion

MRS. CORNE

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise to ask you people to vote this proposal to its third reading. I believe that due to all of the publicity that we have received in the State of Louisiana, due to the opinion of our public officials and of our college deans--by the way, Mr. Leithman, it was the college deans that you were talking about--and all of the...almost all of the leaders in the State of Louisiana have expressed the fact that we have put too many boards in the constitution, we're constitutionalizing too many boards of education. I believe, I sincerely believe, as an educator, that multiple boards for the state colleges and universities in our state will lead to fragmentation of education. I do not see how all of these multiple boards vying for the tax dollar at every chance that they possible can get will not lead to confusion, to dissension and to the fragmentation of education. As a long time educator, I certainly feel that L.S.U. is a wonderful college and that we should keep it that way. We should keep our state university the major university of the state. But, I do not want to minimize the importance of our other colleges and universities in our state, they are also doing a service to the people. I can assure you that in my community, in my locality that there is very, very much opposition to this fragmentation of education that we are trying to put in the constitution today. I certainly think that Mr. Leithman's proposal deserves to be passed onto its third reading. I certainly would ask you to vote favorably on this. I thank you.

108th Days Proceedings—January 4, 1974

Further Discussion

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I rise very briefly to suggest to you that we have discussed this issue; we have debated it at full length; we have had amendments put to the Proposal No. 7 at length and in the end, we decided on the committee's proposal with various changes. I urge you to oppose Mr. Leithman's proposal for third reading, simply that in the limited time we have to complete this convention I think we should devote our efforts to consideration of such matters as alternates and such. If you consider thirty-two form letters that I received--form letters--which were simply statements that are fed through to these organizations as organized opposition, I suggest that it is. This is all that I received from any people throughout this state in opposition to what we did, thirty-two form letters from one city in this state. When I discussed over the phone with no less than ten of these people, they said they had been misinformed and that's the reason why they misunderstood it. I suggest to you that there has been nothing that has been so misrepresented to these people than anything in this convention than this suggestion on... they simply say you have a lot of boards and that is not the truth and this is not what's being done. I urge you to vote against Mr. Leithman's proposal.

Further Discussion

MR. FLORY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, this morning we have about six or seven different proposals that's been reported by the Committee on Education, Health, and Welfare without action. The action taken by that committee was more or less an action to clean up its files. I ask you this morning to reject the motion that's been made by Mr. Leithman to engross and pass this proposal to third reading and final passage. Regardless of whether you are for or against a proposal on education as an alternative, Mr. Leithman now has on the calendar for final passage Delegate Proposal No. 54 which deals with the whole realm of education. If it is the will of this convention that there should be an alternate then, of course, that Delegate Proposal No. 54 could be made as such. We do not need Delegate Proposal No. 53 on the calendar, it deals with issues that's already been resolved by this convention. For example, it calls for an appointed superintendent of education that this convention has decisively voted time and time again for elected officials, so that I see no reason whatsoever for this convention to clutter up the document with these types of proposals with the short time that we have left to complete the work of this convention. I ask you to vote no on this motion.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. LEITHMAN

Members of the convention, I apologize for taking so much time on a nonfinal issue. This is merely to keep a proposal alive and on the calendar. I don't want you to be misled; this is not a vote on or with this proposal or against the proposal. This is merely not to throw it out, not to reject it, but keep it there because we know what we have in No. 7 is no good. I think all of us will agree with that. There's no proposal that has gotten more scrutiny, more adverse publicity than has No. 7, the proposal that this convention passed out with ridiculous five boards. I have one more organization which I omitted, and I apologize, and that's the Louisiana Vo-Tech School Directors' Association who is appealing to you also, along with the many, many other educators, or all of the educators, around this state to turn down No. 7 or redo it, revamp it, so it will be a progressive working article for this constitution. So, all I'm asking you is to keep it alive and keep it on the calendar until such time as we have an opportunity to straighten up No. 7 or put it in a progressive light. I just don't know what... which direction No. 7 should go, but we know it's bad and you were told this by virtually every educator in the state. It's not just Leithman standing there or Juneau or Mrs. Corne or any of us, it's every educator in the state. Every organization of educators in the state is opposing No. 7; it's not my personal opinion. A single board concept is the way that universities are going around this nation today and I don't think we should revert back to a five board system that we now have. I don't care what arguments are advanced to you, in your heart you know five boards is no good to run education in a single state such as Louisiana. Mr. Goldman, I'll yield to questions.

Questions

MR. GOLDMAN

Mr. Leithman, did you know that I am not an educator? Did you know that I am an educatee? Did you know that I have a large number of educatees including those in my family and many, many others who have talked to me about this and as an educatee, I agree with you that the five boards are very bad as far as the education of the people of this state.

MR. LEITHMAN

Mr. Goldman, in response, I think a vast majority of these fellow members, these delegates sitting next to you and I, have the same opinion that you do. I know people have spoken to them, I know they've read the editorials around this state and I know they've heard from their alumni associations and their universities in their areas; I know that this is true. I'll yield to Mr. Stinson.

MR. STINSON

In other words, you think that all of us are voting against what we know is best?

MR. LEITHMAN

What was the question?

MR. STINSON

You said that you know the majority of us agree with you, so in other words, we are going ahead and voting against what we think is right then; is that your opinion of us?

MR. LEITHMAN

I didn't say agree with me, I said that I feel a majority of these people here know that five boards in an article is wrong. A majority agree with that....to that point. If you disagree, I'll leave myself clear because you must be in the minority.

MR. STINSON

Well, the vote so far cast in this convention shows that you're in the minority; doesn't it?

MR. LEITHMAN

Mr. Stinson, when we voted for Proposal No. 7 with the five boards there was no way for the public to react until that article was passed. Now that five boards have been passed in Article 7, now you see the reaction, so when we voted on it we might have done it in good conscience. But now that the reaction has come to us from our educators we must sit back and reappraise our situation. We're about to blow the entire constitution over education which there's no reason to.

MR. McDANIEL

Mr. Leithman, if we vote your proposal down and then we set the machinery to open up every article that we've passed so far for amendments or dressing up, wouldn't that really be the opportunity, with amendment, to come back and present your ideas at that time to what this convention has already passed?

MR. LEITHMAN

All that I want to do is keep this alternative proposal alive. I have no indication to ever call this thing from the calendar unless there's good cause to do so. I just want this proposal to stay alive and be available should the time come that we have to, or have the opportunity to go with an alternative proposal. That's all I'm asking. I'm not asking you all to vote for final passage. I'm asking you to keep the thing alive, that's all.

MR. McDANIEL

We don't have any rules at the present time on alternatives, but I would certainly support taking another look at Education. You could do what you really want to do with an amendment and even if we pass it today, isn't that actually what we're going to have to do at that time?

MR. LEITHMAN

I don't really follow your question, because my intent with this proposal today is merely to keep it alive. I don't know what the convention is going to decide in the next fifteen or sixteen days. I have no way of anticipating that, but I just want this....

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Leithman, don't you believe that if we've made mistakes that this would be the time to correct it, and the questioning of Mr. Stinson and of others would lead you to believe that if you were in the minority or if we've made the mistakes, we shouldn't go back and correct those mistakes? Also, the reason why we haven't laid those committee proposals on the table is simply because of that, that very possibly there're some things that we can...that the public is not accepting. I think we proved yesterday that the minority is not always...might be in the minority, but you're not always wrong.

MR. LEITHMAN

I agree with you, Sammy. So, in closing, ... I'm merely asking you for a favorable vote to keep this proposal alive and this is not a final passage; it's merely to keep a rare hope alive for the State of Louisiana.

[Record vote ordered. Substitute motion rejected: 46-49. Motion to reconsider tabled. Motion to withdraw the proposal adopted without objection.]

UNFINISHED BUSINESS

PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

MR. POYNTER

On Unfinished Business is Committee Proposal No. 35 introduced by Delegate Alphonse Jackson, Chairman on behalf of the Committee on Education and Bill of Rights and Elections which is a substitute for Committee Proposal No. 1 by the same gentleman on behalf of the committee.

The status. . . the proposal is a proposal providing for general governmental provisions.

The status. . . the proposal the convention has adopted as amended, Sections 1 through 8 of the proposal. Presently still would have under its consideration Section 9 and in addition, there are pending at the desk a number of amendments which would propose the addition of further sections to this proposal.

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

"Section 9. Limitations on Banking
Section 9. No law shall permit multi-bank holding companies, metropolitan banking, or statewide branch banking, except by a favorable vote of two-thirds of each house of the legislature."

Explanation

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this is another one of those noncontroversial matters that I've been designated to handle, in a sense. Let me explain what this is all about and then I'll answer questions after I give my explanation. First of all, maybe you should know generally in terms what the terms multi-bank holding companies, metropolitan banking or statewide branch banking amount to. Presently under the law of Louisiana no bank may extend beyond its parish boundaries with branch banking. No multi-bank holding companies may exist in this state and no metropolitan banking is allowed. Now, there is a trend in this state apparently to move in the direction of allowing these three different types of banking interests to exist. For years and years Louisiana has not allowed this particular type of conduct by banking interest. I think it's good. I believe in the system of independent banks, generally community-operated with community directors running them. Multi-bank holding companies, statewide branch banking and metropolitan banking in my opinion means the demise of the small bank which is the center generally and the backbone of the local community in civic and other types of endeavors of that particular area. An independent bank as defined in most definitions means that its management is by directors and officers who are local citizens and its policies are to serve its community first and best with profits accruing to the benefit of the local area in which its stockholders live; that just makes common sense that local banks that operate in a local community are generally composed of local people and its interests are usually centered around their particular locale. A branch bank is a type of commercial and savings bank with geographically restricted statewide operations. Its concentration of deposits and policies are usually heavily directed toward financing of business and industry. Then, a multi-bank holding company is even a little different from that; it's a type of bank that's something like a big flagship and around it all over the state are other little banks that it has bought up and what have you. Its operations are almost entirely concentrated toward financing of business and industry. The profits for its stockholders and accumulation of funds are generally such that it ends up that the subsidiary bank that it owns in a small area its. . . most of its deposits or most of its earnings are brought to the big bank and they go out to big industry and big business; I'm opposed to that. I think that for the years and years that Louisiana has operated so successfully we've had only one bank failure in about fifty years due to ineptness or due to something else other than the depression. We've had a great banking system in the state. I think that anything that changes that, any allowance for a change should be made by a much more considered opinion than a simple majority of the legislature, because I believe that banking affects every individual in this state more so than civil service by which we require a two-thirds vote to deal with it. The state civil service system admittedly has about sixty thousand employees under it. Yet, we provide that for the legislature to deal with it, it will take a two-thirds vote. All I'm saying is that banking touches every person in this state and it's so sacrosanct, it's so important that if you're going to have a radical change, if there's going to be a departure from what has been the law of this state for years, and years and years, then it ought to require more than a simple majority vote. Now, I'm going to tell you why. I'm not that strong on economic theory, but I do believe I know something about politics. Banking has remained outside of the scope of politicking in this state to a great extent and the reason it has is because of the independent banks in this state. There's just no way that they could be concentrated into a political mold of some type that would back or put vested interests behind some particular individual. But, if we allow multi-bank holding companies, if we allow statewide branch banking you're going to end up with four or five giant banks in this state running the economy of the State of Louisiana in the banking industry and when you have that then it's easy for four or five big banks to get together and then you get the tremendous wealth and power banks behind politics, so I'm against it for that reason. Let me give you some statistics of what has happened in the past. In the past several years there have been more than sixteen hundred communities and neighborhood banks lost to statewide branch banking concerns and multi-bank holding companies in those states where they are allowed. Now, let me allay the fears of you with respect to one thing; now argument is going to be made that of course, when you. . . when the state prohibits this by a two-thirds vote, what will happen if the national government all of a sudden allows the national banks in the State of Louisiana to engage in that type of practice? Presently, the law of the United States is that the national banks in this. . . in their respective states may not engage in statewide branch banking nor multi-bank holding companies unless the state law allows it. Louisiana is one of the fifteen states that doesn't allow it. Now, the answer to that is very simple; if the national government allows the states' national banks to engage in that type of conduct, then there's no question but that our state banks will have to compete with them and I'm sure there would be no problem in the legislature going ahead and allowing that circumstance to occur when it does, in fact, occur. Let me give you some statistics of what is happening in different areas where you've had this, this super concentration of wealth in a few areas. California is the best example of what happens. In 1971, California had one hundred forty-four separate banks and one hundred sixteen were operating three thousand one hundred and seventy-one branches, more than twice the number that they had in 1959. In 1959, California had fifty-four unit banks which is the independent bank. In 1971, they had dropped to twenty-eight. In the 1920's the bank of California incidentally deposits more than twenty-nine billion dollars or more than fifty-one percent of the total commercial bank deposits in the State of California. This is one bank, because of California allowing multi-bank holding companies and what have you. The five big city-centered institutions in California control or have on deposit eighty percent of all deposits in the State of California; that is, the Security Pacific National Bank, the Crocker National Bank, Wells Fargo, United California, and Bank of California. Everywhere that the states have allowed this type of conduct to be practiced, little banks which are community oriented and which have been helping and been the backbone of the communities have gone under. It just is common sense that if you have a man who's not from the area who's running your bank, you're going to end up with either a stranger in there who's not going to know the local needs and won't even generally be amenable to them. There's no argument that can be made that this will stifle the economy of the state. You all are familiar with the correspondent banking; you know what that is, a bank somebody comes in to borrow money from me and I say, "Well, we can't handle that big a loan; however, I've got a correspondent banker in Alexandria -- like maybe the Guaranty Bank-- that's got a hundred times the assets that we have," and you get some participation; that has been done in the past. All I'm saying is that I think that in the final analysis when we talk about what is good for the people of this state, when we talk about the human needs that are requisite in banking, when we talk about some fellow -- and I've talked to people in the local banks who know this-- if you're from a small community you'd know that around Christmastime you get a lot of little people coming into a bank. They want to see the president because they'd like to maybe borrow fifty dollars to get some little loan. The president, at his discretion, may lend that money. He's not going to make any money on it, but it's worthwhile. You get statewide branch banking, get multi-bank holding companies, get strangers operating in a community and you can kiss goodbye any consideration of the local man and the local needs, because when you finally get to that point, when you go in to borrow money from a guy that you don't know and it's being run by some flagship bank in New Orleans or Shreveport or what have you, he pulls out a little bulletin -- a book like this-- and it's just like going to borrow from the F.H.A. Mr. Roy, if you meet all these requirements, if you send us a few pictures of your house and what have you and everything else, we'll make the loan. If you can't meet these requirements, I have no say-- so on it." I am opposed to the concept of huge corporate interests engaging in and finally controlling and taking over community owned banks that have operated successfully for years and years. I ask the adoption of this particular amendment.

108th Days Proceedings—January 4, 1974

Questions

MR. BURNS

Chris, what do you mean by metropolitan banking?

MR. ROY

I'm glad you asked that, Mr. Burns. A metropolitan banking concept is that, like in the city of New Orleans they say the metropolitan area of the city of New Orleans is not just a city the parish boundaries which are now restricted to, but maybe all of Jefferson Parish, all of St. Bernard Parish, and all that, that the metropolitan area would be one hundred radius miles and it ends up that they then say although we're not allowed to go across our parish boundaries, if we're a metropolitan bank, we may go in there and compete with the local bank and buy it up.

MR. BURNS

That includes St. Tammany Parish?

MR. ROY

That includes St. Tammany Parish; you're right.

MR. ABRAHAM

Chris, I understand now that the law is in the statutes just statutory law that there will be no multi-parish banks; is that right?

MR. ROY

Right, correct.

MR. ABRAHAM

Well, I don't understand; if it's already in the statutes, why are we attempting to constitutionalize this?

MR. ROY

Well, Mack, there's a big trend right now toward going in that direction, to changing the law, that I think has been good for years and years. Let me say one other thing, I think if we don't have a two-thirds vote in here, there will be a blood-letting every session of the legislature -- you know we've changed the sessions to be every year-- every year you're going to have the big, big banks using all their influence, all their money to try to get rid of that law so that they can engage in multi-bank holding company activities and statewide branch banking. That's the reason that I'm for preventing it.

MR. SMITH

Chris, do you think this will help the small country bank, this provision?

MR. ROY

Yes, sir.

MR. SMITH

In what way?

MR. ROY

Well, Mr. Smith, the small country banks are geared to their local area and they're geared to what's good for the customer, what's good for the bank in the community will help out. If you don't have this law, what you'll have is some big bank sending out an arm of its branch down into that small country area and maybe for a few months or a few years giving some additional services until they run the little people out of business and then the first thing you know they either gobble up the little bank or they just run it out of business. Then, you've got no small bank anymore and you've got more competition and all.

MR. SMITH

Well, I think it's a good amendment.

MR. ROY

Thank you, Mr. Smith.

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Roy, isn't it true the Louisiana Banking Association is opposed to this provision, thinks that it ought not to be included in the constitution?

MR. ROY

No, Mr. Jenkins, if you recall-- I don't know if you were there that day-- but if you recall, when the L.B.A. came back the second time and I told them that we had amended it to allow a change by a two-thirds vote, in fact, the lobbyist said, "well, personally I'm for it, I don't know how the L.B.A. really feels," but the Independent Bankers' Association of Louisiana definitely said they're for it. I'm not sure whether either one of us is exactly accurate on the position of the L.B.A. I would think that the fellows in the L.B.A. who have the big, big banks would tell you that they're against it. But, the other people in the L.B.A. who are interested in local stuff are for it.

MR. JENKINS

But, the Louisiana Bankers' Association did say in essence that while they did not oppose the concept at this time, they did not think that something like this ought to be in the constitution now and forever; isn't that true?

MR. ROY

At one time they had a publication when-- you remember when the committee first came out there was an absolute prohibition-- they had a publication that said they were opposed to it. When we changed it to the two-thirds vote their position on the paper was, "we're neutral." So, the L.B.A. in my judgment is neutral on this particular thing. I've got a publication saying that, Woody, is what I'm talking about.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Mr. Roy, did you know for a fact that the L.B.A. on the amendments since you have changed it and required the two-thirds has taken a "no position" stand? The reason for that is there are some big ones who don't want it in there and then some little ones who like it in there, so they have taken a "no position" stand.

MR. ROY

That's what I thought I'd said. I said neutral, but your language is more appropriate, no position on it.

MR. PLANCHARD

Mr. Roy, Mr. Champagne got his question answered and I wanted to let you know that I read the same correspondence that he read, probably to the same effect.

MR. ROY

Thank you, Mr. Planchard, I didn't want my word to be doubted on it.

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Roy, when we're presented with committee reports most of the time the Chairman or committee member gets up there and says we've been studying this thing for six months, we've been studying this thing for nine months. How many months' study has your committee put into this?

MR. ROY

Well, I guess about three weeks.

MS. ZERVIGON

Do you have figures for us on how many states have this prohibition or how it works in other states where they don't have this prohibition, whether there are small banks and that sort of thing? Can you give us -- hand out to all the delegates that sort of thing? Have you talked to bankers in other states, small bankers, about how it works for them and that sort of thing?

108th Days Proceedings—January 4, 1974

MR. ROY

Ms. Zervigon, I can give you a lot of statistics. I'll be happy for you to read this book and you may be edified a little more, but the point is this: I approach this on a philosophical basis. I don't approach it on the basis of statistics, although the statistics are in my favor, I believe. I approach it on the basis of what's good for the little community and what's good for the banking industry of this state, and that's how I approach it. I don't need to study anything a long, long time to know whether it's good or bad. I just have to look at it and see. If it's a philosophical thing with me, then it's not hard to decide. I didn't study civil service a long time and I didn't study your local government issues a long time, and I didn't agree with them. I think I made some pretty good decisions; I may have made some bad ones.

MS. ZERVIGON

But, those committees had studied them for quite a long time in subcommittee and in full committee; isn't that correct?

MR. ROY

The committee studied a lot of things and it looks like that the taxpayers have studied the Public Service thing.

I don't want to be argumentative; at least I told you we had it about three weeks. If that's relevant, then you've made your point; in my judgment it's not.

MS. ZERVIGON

But, isn't it true that on issues like Civil Service and Local Government that there has always been something in the Louisiana state constitution, but there has never in the past been anything on banking in the Louisiana state constitution?

MR. ROY

You're right, but there's been something in the statutory law.

MR. LOWE

Chris, my question has to do with the concept of banking in the State of Louisiana. Now, isn't it a fact that the whole concept of banking in the State of Louisiana is built around the needs of the local community and that before a bank can go in that there has to be a need exhibited beyond any reasonable doubt before a charter will be granted for that bank?

MR. ROY

Right.

MR. LOWE

Now, don't you believe that if multi-banking was allowed, that we would completely destroy that concept and then we would be only be talking about which bank wanted to get the largest, to be the biggest superbank in the state. We'd get away from the local needs and then we would only be concerned about who was the biggest superbank and where could you go to get within the concept of, "I will be the biggest bank in the State of Louisiana." Isn't that one of the real issues in this thing, getting away from the local needs and moving toward the needs of the large bank and doing banking that multi-banking can do, rather than at the local level?

MR. ROY

You move toward the needs of the . . . and the impersonality of it and what happens is that, the branch . . . the statewide branch banking --it's a lot easier to get a branch bank than it is to get a new chartered bank that should be competing with local people on the local level. Instead, you've got a statewide big old bank that sends a branch bank into a little community with strangers maybe on it, and the board of directors don't necessarily belong or come from that area. That's the whole point.

MR. LOWE

To take that further, maybe the only purpose for having gone there in the first place was to compete against the other superbank rather than to meet the needs of the individual in that area?

MR. ROY

That's correct.

MR. J. JACKSON

Chris, it may seem odd to you, but I did talk to some bankers that I know, and I'm very serious. One of the concerns-- and I want some information on it-- one of the concerns is that, as you know, we do have Liberty Bank in New Orleans which is the multi-ratio bank and we're getting ready to have Republican National . . . a Republican bank which will be another multi-ratio bank which is part of a multi-holding bank company. Their concern--and did you know--that on the national level, they're fearful that congress is presently getting ready to enact some legislation that will allow for national banks to expand in the state, and at the same time, give additional authority to savings and loan banks. . . savings and loan corporations to allow them to perform certain banking services. They feel that if we lock in this constitution the kind of language, even though it does have some flexibility, that it may take a constitutional amendment pending what Congress does to adjust our banking situation to the national legislation?

MR. ROY

I disagree with that. I think that they've told you accurately that there is some legislation pending in congress to allow national banks in the state, where they're not allowed to do so.

MR. J. JACKSON

Okay.

MR. ROY

Where they allow national banks in the states where they are presently not allowed to do so, to go ahead and engage in multi-bank holding companies and statewide branch banking. My answer to that, is we don't need a constitutional amendment. If they do that here, our legislature simply says once congress usurps again the field of banking that it should not have because the history of national banking way back there in the seventeen hundreds was horrible, but once congress does it, our state banks will automatically be allowed to do it to protect themselves. I just think if we take a united stand right here, it may be that the trend would be stopped. I really feel philosophically that multi-branch bank holding companies are bad for the local communities.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. O'Neill, then, sends up amendments joined by Mr. Tobias, Newton and others.

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, delete line 20 through 24, both inclusive, in their entirety.

Explanation

MR. JONES

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, this article that you have under consideration is Article XXXV; it's a general governmental article; it tells you where the state capital is; it tells you your three branches of government and on top of all of that, you have this other provision tacked onto this general governmental article which is to restrict one industry in our state, one of the best private industries we've had which has been regulated through legislative process for many years and has been very successful. This is not the kind of article that should be in the constitution. We should eliminate this from Committee Proposal No. 35. Now, let me give you an idea where we stand in the state right now. The idea of bank holding companies started on a national basis about five or six years ago. They tried it in Louisiana; immediately the legislature passed a law preventing branch banking across parish lines; that's the law today; you can only have your bank in your one parish. Then, they went to holding companies and the law was passed in the legislature that you can have a one bank holding company and that no bank, no holding company can own more than . . . or twenty-four percent must own less than twenty-five percent of any other bank. Now, all this provision is doing is locking into your constitution a statutory provision that you should not have there because times can change and you're going to have the opportunity by our federal legislation to have to be forced to amend this constitution if business changes. I think what's happened over the years business has always gone forward, it's gone up. But, when business . . . since World War II should ever begin to restrict, you're going to need large banks to be of assistance in communities where the small banks are not able to handle the loans. Now, there's one thing I want to call to your attention, that this is not in the 1921 Constitution; it has nothing to do with the regulation, or the general articles, or the people of the State of Louisiana and for that reason, I ask that you delete it. Now, one other thing that I think should come across here and, that is, that when these little banks are always talking about that they take care of the local people. A bank makes its loans of its depositor's money. Mr. Roy can have his money in one bank. I can have mine in another one. Mr. Caaney can have his in another one and what will happen will be that your . . . in a state bank you are regulated by a State Banking Commission. They tell you what percentage of loans you can have. They investigate your bank. You can no more have a different system of banking for a local bank than you can for a large state bank; it's your money; you are the depositors. I know that you don't feel that some local banks should use your money in a different way than authorized by the State Banking Commission. Also, State Banking Commissions have interlocking arrangements with the federal investigating authorities everybody's got the same rules because it's your money. One thing that I'm sure that all of these little state banks have federal deposit insurance. Now, I don't think they would want this tape played back to the FDIC to say that we're going to use different rules for local people than we do for any other department. The bank's money is the money that you leave in there because of compensatory deposits or your own savings. This is not the kind of article that should be in the constitution. I think you should delete it. I favor and ask that...urge that you vote for this floor amendment sponsored by Mr. O'Neill and several of us. Thank you.

108th Days Proceedings—January 4, 1974

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

Questions

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Jones, this is really new to me, and I haven't had any contacts from anybody in the banking business. I heard Mr. Roy stand up there and make some statements as the advantage of having this in the constitution. Now, I would like for you to tell me some of the disadvantages of having it in the constitution.

MR. JONES

The disadvantages of having it in the constitution is that this is nothing more than establishing a two-thirds rule where this private industry--and banking, remember, is a private industry, it's not cooperative; they are stockholders; it is business--and it is regulated by the legislature. This is merely an attempt at over-kill....in my opinion, because you do not have these rights under the laws now in the State of Louisiana. All you are doing is locking into the constitution a statutory provision which will make it more difficult for you to remove at a later time if the situation changes.

MRS. WARREN

I still haven't got it. I understand you saying locking it in or not locking it in, but I'm trying to find out what would be the advantages of the people who are going to use these services of having it not locked in.

MR. JONES

Not locked in the constitution?

MRS. WARREN

Right. What advantage would it be to these citizens?

MR. JONES

The bankers...the most competitive business as, probably, as any in the United States or any in Louisiana is banking. It is to your advantage insofar as development of industry to have available funds. This is what the banks say and this is what their real interest is because if you don't have the deposits and you don't have the size, I don't care who you are, you can't lend your depositors money if you don't have the loan capability. Banking is such a business that they do cooperate in order to attract industry to the state. Now, you take Lincoln Parish or Webster Parish, and I'm not throwing any discredit on any parish, but you take some parish that needs development, if you cannot have available credit through, maybe it would have to be, a multi bank holding company, then your parish is not going to develop; the credit is not there, your ability to borrow money is not there. You can only lend the money you have or your depositors and you are limited as to what you can lend by state law and they do get together and...to the federal agency and also the state agency insofar as the examination of banks are concerned. A little bank can't lend you as much as a large bank can. Now, that's not a popular argument but that's the basic principle.

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Jones, you just said that this should not be locked into the constitution because of various reasons. I noticed yesterday you voted to lock in the provision that the telephone people wanted into the constitution when using the same arguments, I think that consistency would probably be a better method of handling the situation.

MR. JONES

One has to do with judicial administrative procedure and the other one has to do with regulation of a private industry. Insofar as utilities are concerned, there are many of them that are cooperative. There are no cooperative banks. There may be cooperative credit unions.

MR. HEINE

Mr. Jones, I'm not as familiar with this subject as I would like to be, but I did want to ask you a question. I know on my tax rolls that the Baker Bank, which is domiciled in the city of Baker, is one of my largest taxpayers. Now, a branch bank that moves into my city, they don't pay this same tax because they are domiciled in another section. Now, this to me has a big bearing. Also, banks, as far as I'm concerned, not only lend money, they pay an important part especially in a small city. Now, I know you wouldn't realize this in New Orleans, but the local bank gets involved in civic affairs; they make donations to the local community which the larger banks, the experience that I've had, they can say, "Well, we got to bring it before the board," which may be down in New Orleans or in Baton Rouge and this type of thing.

MR. JONES

May I ask, turn that question back on you: what taxes don't they pay?

MR. HEINE

Sir?

MR. JONES

You say the branch bank that moves in to, say, East Baton Rouge Parish....

MR. HEINE

I'm not sure what the tax, but....

MR. JONES

I'm pretty sure that the parish collects all the taxes and the branch they...all your taxes are ad valorem taxes and state income taxes and I'm sure the bank pays them.

MR. HEINE

No, sir. Senator Rayburn or maybe one of these fellows can explain this, but there is a tax that is paid by a bank; I know, I've had this problem right here in East Baton Rouge Parish where there is a bank which is domiciled in Baton Rouge and they pay taxes on the, I guess, on the money that they've got that we do not receive because it is not domiciled in my city. I fought over this and....

MR. JONES

Mr. Heine, I can't answer you until you tell me what kind of tax it is; I really don't know; I can't understand.

MR. HEINE

It's an ad valorem tax.

MR. CASEY

Mayor Heine and Mr. Jones, just a minute, gentlemen. The purpose of this is to ask questions, the....

MR. JONES

Well, he is asking me back and I can't answer them.

MR. CASEY

Well, O.K., if you all want to get into a discussion, you all hold a private discussion or, Mayor Heine, I'll recognize you for the floor later on.

Mr. Roemer has a question.

MR. ROEMER

Delegate, you made the statement about resources and being able to apply them at a local level. Can't these small local banks have corresponding relationships with other banks and make the kind of loans through their corresponding bank that is necessary to finance local growth?

MR. JONES

They do that.

MR. ROEMER

Well, then, I think your argument is wrong then.

Further Discussion

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Acting Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in opposition to this amendment that deletes a provision in the constitution that we definitely need; when I said "we", I'm talking about the country bank in the State of Louisiana. There is no doubt about the locally owned and operated banks having a distinct advantage to the people of that area. Now, I'm referring to the...especially the rural areas in the State of Louisiana. These independent banks are geared to the individual needs and requirements of the people in that particular area. I think there is no doubt about it, all of you that live in the country know that an independent bank does often relax its rules and regulations and stretches them to a certain extent; I think there is very little doubt about that. There is always room for interpretation of the rules and regulations. So, the independent bank has that distinct advantage of knowing the needs of the people there, both their individual needs and their business needs and they are in a better position to understand those needs and to do everything they can possibly do to help this individual or this business meet their requirements. Now, Mr. Jones is correct in his statement that oftentimes these small country banks do not have the ability to loan as much money as may be needed; those occasions are rare, however; they are very rare. But, as was pointed out by Mr. Roemer in his question, all of their country independent banks have corresponding banks in the city that they can call on when additional funds are needed; that is a common practice. Now, it's been mentioned today, "Why do we need this in the constitution?" As many of you know, if not all here, know that there is a plan right now for these syndicates that are being formed to buy up these local banks. When they do, they have lost their independence and it's a just not the same when you go in those banks. Now, I'm connected with a small country bank in Leesville; it's wholly owned--locally owned and operated. We do try above everything else to meet the needs of that community; that is our first objective. For those reasons, I just wanted to point out these practical sides. For those reasons, I do urge you to defeat this amendment which would delete this provision from the constitution. Thank you.

[Motion to limit debate to fifteen minutes rejected: 24-58.]

Further Discussion

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, many people in this state... as I was saying, I feel that many people in this state, in fact, I believe a majority of the people of this state feel that banking institutions provide services that can best be performed at a local level by local people. In view of that, we have reason for Mr. Roy's amendment and opposition to deleting it from the constitution. To those among you who say there was no such provision in the Constitution of 1921, I would remind you that in 1921 there was absolutely no need for it at that time. There has been and I am aware of very wealthy people in this state going about the state attempting to buy out local interest in banks with the intention of forming great corporations throughout the State of Louisiana engaging in very large banking facilities. This is simply another system of the big fish eating the small fish and getting bigger all the time. Now, these people simply go about it, and I've seen it in action, the more money they get the more they want and they keep working in that direction. Actually, I feel that banking can best be formed at a local level and for those of you who say there may be additional funds needed, this provides no problem because with corresponding banking performed by local banks with larger metropolitan banks, these people can get funds when needed and it gives local observation of the control of these funds. Because of a possible conflict of interest, I'm not going to vote on the issue, but it's clear to me that while it may represent special interest it also represents the small people who are accustomed to going to their local banks for services. I urge you while I myself will not participate in the vote, to vote against this amendment to delete it. I feel that it does have a place, like other provisions, it's just a little more legislation in the constitution but it does have a place in Louisiana's constitution. I also urge you that this is a little different from a definite provision by any means. I urge you to keep the two-thirds provision because in future times if there comes a need for metropolitan banking, or multi banking, or statewide banking, then we will be in a position to urge our legislators to permit such. For that reason, I urge your disapproval of this amendment to delete. Any questions, I'll be glad to answer them.

Questions

MR. ROY

Mr. Champagne, with respect to competition, you've mentioned about corresponding banking; right? Now, if the little bank needs extra money or money for something, it may ask its correspondent bank to participate.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Right.

MR. ROY

If that correspondent bank doesn't agree, it can go to another bank; can't it you?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Right.

MR. ROY

But, if you have statewide branch banking and that branch bank in that little town disagrees or the parent disagrees with the little branch bank asking for participation, that ends the application of the particular citizen; does it not?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

That's correct.

MR. ROY

So, with respect to the issue of competition, competition is diluted when you have statewide branch banking because the branch bank can only go to its parent bank, whereas in the independent banking situation, the independent bank can go to its correspondent bank or any other bank; isn't that true?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Yes, sir. I might add that these correspondent banks are looking for customers all the time.

Further Discussion

MR. ABRAHAM

Fellow delegates, I rise in support of this amendment and let me tell you why. I'm just real disturbed about the way that we are writing legislative material into this constitution. Yesterday we wrote material into the constitution for one special interest group. Today we are attempting to do the same thing. When are we going to stop all of this, on January 19? This is a proposal from the Bill of Rights and Elections Committee. Now, what does this have to do with the rights of the people? Why is this in this committee to begin with? Why wasn't this thing brought before the Revenue and Finance Committee, or the Local Government Committee, or the Commerce and Industry, and Health, Education, and Welfare Committee? What's it doing here? I don't see the need for this type of language in this particular proposal at all. If we are going to start writing this type of thing in, I've missed the boat then; I should be up here pumping for prohibition against chain store supermarkets in order to protect the independent grocer. I just don't see the need for this type of language in this constitution at all. I think we have been criticized enough by writing special interest legislation in this constitution; I think we need to put a stop to all of this. Let's take this out of this proposal, clear up the proposal, and then let the proposal be what it should be.

Further Discussion

MR. ROEMER

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise just to make a short statement and say that I oppose any attempt to change the committee proposal in regard to Section 9. I'm not exactly an expert on banking; I've borrowed a lot of money from them in the past so that makes me somewhat knowledgeable. I have an interest in a small bank in Bossier City that I readily admit and am proud of. Some people have said that if we strike out Section 9, we will have hurt the small rural banks; I don't think that; that's not why I'm opposed to striking out Section 9. I don't think we will hurt the small rural banks if we permit these multi-bank holding companies; quite the contrary, I think we might help these small banks. I think the price of the stock will go up because a certain, few, large powerful banks will be going around the state buying up all the other banks. But, it's not our job here to protect the small rural banks. Our job here is to protect the people who do business with the small rural banks. Just because the price of the bank stock goes up that's not going to help the people who do business with that bank. Here's the concept I would like to get across to you. In areas like the ones that I come from, a relatively rural area, a small area, not many people, not many large businesses, the people that borrow money from our local banks depend not so much on collateral, not so much on banking expertise as on their relationship with their banker. Now, I've been in states where they have these multi-bank holding companies and I've seen these large banks gobble up all the big banks, and I know what their personnel practices are. They ship people in and out just like carrots or vegetables. A man works his way up through the system; he spends six months in one small bank; then he spends six months in a little bit larger bank; then he spends two years in a larger bank; then, finally, he goes to the main office. Well, how can you develop the personal relationship with your banker in these local rural areas when the bankers themselves keep getting shifted around all the time? The point I'm trying to make is that at the very backbone of our economic and social society in these areas like the ones that I come from, the very backbone of that is the trust, and honor, and economic stability of these local banks. I think that the issue is important enough to the local people; they want to know who their bankers are; they want to develop those lines of relationship. That all we are doing here in Section 9, we're not prohibiting multi-bank holding companies, but we are saying to the legislature, "Gentlemen and ladies, this is important enough to require more than a simple majority vote to allow the multi-bank holding companies." Now, the issue goes even broader than that. In some states where they allow the multi-bank holding company law a few banks, in the case of Mississippi, two banks control all the majority, the assets of all the bank deposits in that state and with that tremendous financial strength becomes great political strength. They in turn control who the next governor may or may not be. They in turn control what the legislature does to some extent. This thing can get to be so powerful, and so strong, and so concentrated in the hands of a few people that it just boggles your mind when you think about it. I think the Louisiana law in regard to banks is good now; I think it's working. I think all we need to do in this constitution is what it says in Section 9, that is, "Legislature beware, be wary of any attempt to change, be wary of any attempt to go to the multi-bank concept because if you do you run the danger, you run the danger of destroying, or at least impairing, not destroying, but at least impairing the effectiveness and the relationship on the local level of local people to their local banks. That's my statement, that's the way I feel.

108th Days Proceedings—January 4, 1974

Point of Information

MR. DENNERY

As I understand it, the Bill of Rights Committee... a statement that was made by Mr. Abraham caused me to raise this question. The Committee on Bill of Rights and Elections is to consider the Preamble, the Bill of Rights, human rights, obligations of citizenship, distribution of powers, suffrage and elections, the amendment process, and future constitutional conventions. The Committee of Legislative Powers and Functions considers the legislative department. Other provisions that may not be covered by the areas of responsibility shown above may be assigned by the Coordinating Committee to the appropriate substantive committee. I would ask, Mr. Chairman, if there has been any formal assignment by the Coordinating Committee of this question to this particular committee, or shouldn't it have been taken up by the Committee on the Legislative Department?

MR. CASEY

Mr. Dennery, I would have to ask the Chairman of the Bill of Rights to answer that question to find out if the assignment was made to their particular committee.

MR. DENNERY

I would appreciate the Chair doing that because if it's not properly before us I think we ...

MR. CASEY

What rule are you quoting now, Mr. Dennery?

MR. DENNERY

Well, it's Rule 49 (B) about other provisions. But, of course, Education and Welfare considers things of this matter, too, and Revenue, Finance and Taxation conceivably might consider this. It just occurs to me that the wrong committee may have handled it, and if so, possibly we should not be even discussing it at this time.

MR. CASEY

As the presiding temporary Chairman at this time, I'd like to use my prerogative and ask the Chairman of the Bill of Rights Committee to answer that inquiry.

Mr. Jackson.

MR. A. JACKSON

Mr. Vice-Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, while the Committee on Bill of Rights and Elections was not assigned this particular subject, we were assigned by the Coordinating Committee, general government provisions. It was our understanding that this then allowed members of the committee to consider such proposals, and this proposal came before our committee. The committee considered it within the purview of the scope of the work assigned to the committee. Therefore, it was considered. I do not believe that there is any violation of the assignment because this is, in our opinion, a general provision that could not have been assigned to any of the other committees. Now, we have other provisions such as forced heirship. That was not assigned to the committee...

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Chairman, forced heirship was assigned to the committee. It was assigned as a delegate proposal.

MR. A. JACKSON

Well, my point is that it's a kind of a general provision that didn't fit very well in any of the other basic articles.

MR. DENNERY

I'd like a ruling from the Chair because Commerce and Industry, or whatever it is, Labor and Industry certainly seems to cover this field better than the Bill of Rights.

MR. A. JACKSON

Mr. Chairman, I also would like to point out to the committee that when this proposal was presented to the convention, no one raised any objections to it. It was passed on to its third reading. Secondly, I'd like to point out to the convention that if the provision is in the wrong place, Style and Drafting can easily move it to some other article. So, I think it is before the convention--and I'm not here to decide what the convention wants to do with it--but, I think that it is properly before the convention, and it's up to the delegates to decide what disposition they would like to make of it.

MR. CASEY

In answer to Mr. Dennery's point that he has raised and has requested a ruling from the Chair, the Chair would have to rule at this time that it is appropriate that Section 9 is at this time properly included within Committee Proposal No. 35, that it's appropriate for the convention to be considering Section 9 at this time, and the appropriate action to be taken if the convention sees fit to...if they wish to, they can remove it from Committee Proposal No. 35. I think it's the eleventh hour now; this is one of the last proposals that the convention is going to take up. The Chair, at this time, sees no other alternative but to continue the consideration of Section 9, and the Chair so rules.

Mr. Nunez...Mr. Abraham, you had completed your remarks?

MR. ABRAHAM

No. I wanted to make a comment that Committee Proposal No. 1 we have had for a long time, but there was nothing in Committee Proposal No. 1 relative to this. This has only been on our desks for a couple of days.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Abraham, the Chair has ruled. If you wish to move to overrule the ruling of the Chair, that would be fine.

Further Discussion

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Acting Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I think not only is this proposal necessary...well, let me say at first, I rise in support of the committee proposal and against the amendment to delete that proposal which we are considering. I think not only is this proposal timely, I think that this convention absolutely should consider it because there's been a move on in this state for the past four years, and it's a movement that's very strong to give these multi-bank holding corporations or the large banks, so to speak, the right to move into the various parishes and therefore, take over these smaller banks. I think this would be a terrible mistake, and I think all you have to do is look at what between the national and state government did in 19...I think it was '66, or '68 when we allowed the various homesteads to do the same thing. I've got homesteads in my parish; you ride down a little rural road; you see a big half a million dollar or a million dollar building just sitting there. They have no business, no business at all, but what they're doing is they're stopping other people from locating in that parish. This is exactly what these big banks want to do. I think that two-thirds vote is appropriate because I think the move has been on and very possibly the banks would have been successful in getting a majority of the legislators to allowing the multi-bank holding corporations to expand into various parishes. I think if we want to preserve the concept of banking as we've known it in this state for the past hundred years, we should put this provision in. I personally preferred a stronger provision that would have prohibited the multi-bank holding corporations from expanding into the parishes...into the various parishes, but I think that would be unwise in the event that we have national legislations or national decrees, or what have you, to allow other state banks to come into our state. I think that this is the only thing we can do at this time to protect our small banks. I think if we don't do this, we're going to find what Mr. Roemer said in several states that the large banks have just gobbled up the small banks and what you have is one or two banks controlling the entire state. I think to preserve the banking heritage in this state--and that is the banks doing business on a local level, and those local people knowing the situation and not get involved in the big collateral type of situations where if you don't have "X" number of dollars of collateral, you can't make a loan--I believe that we would be preserving the banking heritage as we've known it in the state for the past hundred years. I would ask you therefore to defeat the amendment to delete the section of the committee proposal and to go on and adopt the committee proposal. I think it's a good one; and I think it's timely; and I think it's needed. So, I would ask you to defeat it and vote for the proposal.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

Further Discussion

MR. LOWE

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I'll say from the beginning that I am for Section 9 of Committee Proposal No. 35, and opposed to this amendment that would delete it from this proposal. In the beginning I would also tell you that I serve on the Board of Directors of a small local bank. I'll explain to you why I could very easily be for this amendment that would delete this proposition in Committee Proposal No. 9. Now, when large banks or large financiers get to go out and buying up local banks, I'll tell you what happens. The stockholders benefit. If you hold a large block of stock in a bank, and it's selling for forty dollars a share, and someone wants control of that bank, they're not interested in the fair market value of it. They're interested in the control of that bank. I'm here to tell you that if I'm holding stock that I could have to go--have to go out and sell at forty dollars a share, I could possibly get sixty or eighty dollars a share for it. Now, that's not a fairy tale; that is true. You can bring some people up here that will tell you that they've seen it happen because what the individuals are interested in is the control of that bank. So, if I weren't interested in the overall community, and interested in myself or some shareholder that wanted to make a big profit, you could go for multi-bank holding companies because you're sitting back and able to make a big profit if this happens. Now, the banks that are set up in the State of Louisiana are set up to fulfill a local need, and the personal touch is there in these small communities. Don't think it isn't. I practice in the city of Baton Rouge, and I have my clients come to me occasionally and tell me, "Do you know some small bank that I can go do business with?" I'm tired of talking to the tenth vice-president of this bank. He doesn't understand my needs when I talk to him. Often I find myself in a financial need that is there today. He tells me he'll take it before the loan committee, and he'll let me know something next week. Well, that's not the personal touch. That's not taking care of the needs of that small businessman in that small community. We're inviting this sort of thing, of getting out of touch with these people that have to operate in a sophisticated society that moves rapidly, that the only people that they have to talk to are the people that understand their needs--the needs of little people. Now, as a bank director, I would rather lose three hundred or five hundred small loans than one big loan. I'll tell my bank president any day, "If a man comes to you and he needs money, I hope that we can lean over backwards and loan it to him if there's any chance at all that we can justify it." I'd rather do that and make five or six hundred small loans in a small community than make one big loan. That's being in touch and responsive to the people in that community. You get a multi-bank that comes in and the point was made by Mr. Roemer that they're moving people all the time, in and out. They have to. You get a good man and you're going to move him up the ladder. The people never know who they're dealing with. They can never get their questions answered right away. The loans don't come through for a week or two weeks if they come through at all. Now, Mr. Heine made a good point. You know how we tax banks in Louisiana; we tax them on capital stock and the capital stocks of banks are at the home office. If you tax ad valorem taxes on the stock of a bank in New Orleans that has a branch in Fort Allen, there's no way at all of Port Allen getting their fair share of that particular ad valorem tax because it's going to be paid where the stock of the home office is. Now, we have a local need of banking in the State of Louisiana, and it's deeply ingrained in our whole economic and social setup. They serve a need in our community, and we're only asking you to do one thing. We're not saying do away with multi-banking. What we're saying is, take a serious look at multi-banking, multi-bank holding companies. If it's good, well let it stand the test of the two-thirds vote, and if it's good, it'll pass. There's no doubt about it. But, that puts the small independent banker at least on a par with the large, financial institutions because they can move a lot faster and get things accomplished a lot faster if they decide they want one thing or another. Now, I can give you a personal example: some years ago, I wanted to make a loan at a savings and loan; and I went to a local savings and loan, and I knew no one there. But, I had a need to move rather fast. I talked to them, and it was going to take a week to get an appraiser out to look at; and then it was going to go before the loan committee; and then this and that; and it was going to be about a month before I got an answer. I called someone in Baton Rouge that I knew personally. The next day the appraiser was there and the day after that I got my answer. That is a true story, and that's where the personal touch is important. I ask you to defeat this amendment and let's not send our people that are looking for loans to the loan sharks.

Further Discussion

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in support of the committee proposal and opposed to the amendment. I want to comment just a moment, and I would like to welcome Mr. Roy back with the poor folks. Mr. Roy, we're glad to have you back; I don't know how long you'll be with us, but we're certainly glad you're with us now. I regret that you can't bring some of your associates. I've heard some people come to this mike this morning and say, "This does not belong in the constitution." I want to admit that in my opinion it does not belong. But, it seems to me that we fell by the wayside many weeks ago as to what does and does not belong in the constitution. But, I'm a little concerned what could happen on down the road if you allow the big banks in this state to take over all the little banks. I was somewhat concerned as to what side I was going to be on, trying to be a person that's always been for the poor folks, I finally made my mind up that I would be on the side of those poor little rich banks, and let those big rich banks do the best they could. But, today there's a trend for the larger areas to take over the smaller areas. It's happening in the legislature. It's happening with proposals that are now before us. I think it's time we done what we could to stop it. Your local bankers know the community and know the people better than anyone else. I believe I'm an authority, not on operating a bank, but on doing business with a bank. I'm kind of like the old boy that worked in a paper mill with me many years ago. We was all talking one morning and he said, "Well, I told my wife yesterday that if something happened to me that I wanted the Board of the Directors to be my pallbearers, that they had carried me this far in life and I wanted them to go all the way." Well, I'm in about the same predicament. But, I know what a local bank means to a local community. I would hate to see us do something that would disrupt the operations that we now have with our local banks who certainly has a more interest in a local community than some holding company or some investors that was a hundred or two hundred or three hundred miles away from your local area. All the bankers in my area know the people. They know you; they know me; they know your family. Those are the kind of people that when you need help will usually help you quicker than someone that don't know that much about you. For that reason, I ask you to vote against this amendment, and vote for the committee proposal.

Questions

MR. ALARIO

Senator, do you think this issue now has broken down into a battle between the little millionaires and the big millionaires?

MR. RAYBURN

Well, I think that that was pretty well said, Mr. Alario, because I don't know of any banker that's ever asked me to get on the welfare; I don't know of any stockholders that's ever asked me to help them. I know a lot of people that does business with the bank has asked me to help them.

MR. HENRY

Senator Rayburn, wouldn't you say that those proponents of home rule, wouldn't you say that this would be financial home rule?

108th Days Proceedings—January 4, 1974

MR. RAYBURN

Well, I think it's the closest thing there is to a man's heart.

Further Discussion

MR. WEISS

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I regret that this issue has come before this convention, but as a member of the Bill of Rights Committee, I did not sign this committee proposal, and I would...two of us of the Bill of Rights Committee did not sign this committee proposal. It does not reflect the entire thinking of two of us. The discussion thus far has clearly brought out the issues. I regret that it has come before you because I thought this should be handled in committee, should be debated fully, but as many members have pointed out, this is an eleventh hour. I think the people of the state would appreciate it because they are not interested in whether they are poor rich banks or rich rich bankers that we're fighting over here. They are... those who made that statement, Delegate Rayburn is absolutely correct. That's what the issue is here. I still am interested in the people and in this constitution. If we are writing a constitution, I think it's necessary that we recognize what is legislative and what is statutory and also what is constitutional material. There are four hundred and fifty-two pages of banks and banking material in statutory law, and not one comment on banks in the present 1921, or current, as amended, Constitution. This section was brought up as a railroaded issue. There is no question that this section was brought up at the eleventh hour. There is question whether it even belongs in this section. For that reason I was forced to walk out with another member because we were not allowed to present our views and ask questions. Subsequently, we returned the following day at which time we found the committee proposal was considerably amended, and certainly it is much better, much better for the poor little rich banks now than the rich, rich banks. But, on the other hand, it is not, I believe, constitutional material, and am in favor of this floor amendment. I hope you will vote favorably. The reasons that those who spoke against it the following day, when this had already passed the committee and was entered and engrossed, are some of the following reasons: if you're interested in the poor people of the state, as many of you profess to be, consider this, as testimony before our committee after this was passed indicated. There are certain parishes in the state which do not even have credit cards. Bank Americard and other cards are not even issued to these people in certain parishes. Why? Because as one delegate, Delegate Nunez, stated, we are preserving the past hundred years of banking. If this is what you want, preserve the past hundred years of banking. Let's have some more Baker Banks in our political operation; let's have some more opportunities not to know what the interest rates are in the rest of the country in contrast to what you must pay because of a monopoly in a particular parish. Let us understand that a mobile population cannot cash a check in another parish, next door without extensive identification because they have no way of knowing from one parish to the next, which bank they are doing business with and whether they are qualified. If you are interested in small people, let's keep this statutory law, and this is all I ask you. I think the issue should not have come before this convention, and it's for that reason I thought we should have debated it fully in committee. It was not debated fully in committee. I regret that this has come to your attention. Now, we have testifying for us many of the bank holders, many of the stockholders of banks, and they are the first to tell you that this is necessary in the constitution. Let us face it as it is. Of course, their stocks would go up and they could sell it. But, if you own stock in a particular corporation, would you rather receive an annual dividend, or would you rather sell out at once? This is no problem, and I've been here one year now with you delegates, a neophyte at this political process, and I believe that we are ruining the democratic process in haste. It is for that reason that I oppose this being brought to the floor without further consideration. Vote in favor of the present floor amendment by Delegate O'Neill.

Further Discussion

MR. WINCHESTER

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, the disadvantage of being one of the latest speakers is that everybody else has kind of stolen your thunder. I wanted to explain that as an assessor I thought this would do violence to the various parishes in the bank assessment, but Mr. Lowe explained that. I'm definitely opposed to this amendment to delete this section from the article. This country was founded on free enterprise, and a local bank is certainly the heart and foundation of free enterprise. When I was first married, I lived on overdrafts, and if I hadn't had those overdrafts--I know a computer wouldn't have given them to me from a big bank--now, as I announced some months ago, I had an application in for the Commerce and Industry for a eighty million dollar plant. So, you see what a small bank can do to carry on a young man and let him get to manhood. Your local bank knows the needs of the citizens. It is organized by the local citizens. The dividends are paid to the local citizens. In answer to Mr. Abraham's observation that this is not constitutional material, I say, "Where there's smoke, there's fire." This issue has almost broken up the Louisiana Bankers' Association--the big bank on one side; the small country bank on the other. I say that we should defeat this amendment. I have enough troubles already, if we do away with the little banks. I'm having trouble as a middle-aged man with this newspaper ad that says, "Live with gusto; you only go around once." Well, that's kind of getting me, see. Then, they come along with this ad on small cigars, that the ladies cannot refuse Winchester. That's giving me a lot of trouble. So, please, please, don't take the little banks away from me. I don't know what I'd do without the little banks. I urge the defeat of this amendment, and go with the committee proposal, please.

Questions

MR. BURNS

Mr. Winchester, you've gotten past that overdraft stage, haven't you?

MR. WINCHESTER

Yes, I have.

MR. BURNS

What I meant was, you'd have a rough time living on overdrafts today when they charge anywhere from two to three dollars for every check that they turn down.

MR. WINCHESTER

Mr. Burns, I was paying that. I had a secretary the banker used to call and said to tell Mr. Winchester to send some money. She said, "I always thought that people went to the bank to borrow money, but when the bank needs money, they call you."

MR. JONES

Dan, I'm glad you brought up that in regard to what Monday Love said because we checked out that law, and when you have a parish bank which crosses parish lines, you divide your taxes proportionate to the amount of interest you have there.

MR. WINCHESTER

The amount of what, sir?

MR. JONES

The amount of capital interest you have in the parish. His particular example was the Port Allen Bank and a bank in New Orleans. Across parish lines, you divide it according to the amount of capital in use in the particular parish.

MR. WINCHESTER

That's right. The total assessment in 1972 on the assessment roll for banks was over $201,000,000 assessments of banks in the State of Louisiana.

MR. JONES

Dan, all this amendment does...it doesn't change the law of Louisiana; isn't that correct? In other words, there's now a law on the books that you can't have branch banking across parish lines.

MR. WINCHESTER

That's my understanding, yes.

MR. JONES

There's one exception, I think, which was blanketed in in Calcasieu, I think in Lake Charles. You also cannot have except a one bank-holding company right now.

MR. WINCHESTER

That's my understanding, yes.

MR. JONES

So, all this law is doing is overkill...taking it out of the hands of the legislature and pushing it up, making it more difficult.

Further Discussion

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen, as we've been writing this constitution over a year's time, we've made a few people mad, off and on. But, we kind of had to because there were things that we had been addressed in the '21 Constitution that we had to address in this constitution, one way or another. I urge you not to make additional people mad by sticking something in this constitution that's never been in any of our other constitutions. There is adequate protection for the small banks, has been over time. But, I urge you not to stick this in the constitution at this point, in this way because, ladies and gentlemen, we don't know what the heck we are doing. I don't own stock in any bank. I don't sit on the board of directors in any bank. I don't have relatives in the banking business. I don't have any interest in this thing as a personal matter. But, I can tell you that I hate to stick something in the constitution when I don't really know very much about it. If you'll be honest with yourselves, you'll know that most of you who don't sit on boards of directors, who don't own stock, who don't have relatives in the banking business don't know what the heck we're doing, either. Savings and loans can go across parish lines. What have been the abuses of that? There's a bank in Calcasieu that was blanketed in by the grandfather clause. What abuses has that bank perpetrated on the parishes outside of Calcasieu? We don't know. Mr. Roemer says that two banks in Mississippi have more than fifty percent of the capital in the state, or something like that. We don't know whether that's true; we don't know whether that's peculiar to Mississippi; we don't know what the other factors are. I urge you not to change something that is working very well for large and small banks; make people mad that we don't need to make mad; worry folks that we don't need to worry on three weeks notice. When I asked Mr. Roy how long the committee had been saying it, he said three weeks. Let me point out to you that one of those weeks was Christmas; that study was kind of a wrong word for that. They had testimony one day, but we have not one piece of paper on this subject. It isn't like civil service or property tax where we had reams of paper, lots of letters from our constituents where we could read and study what went on in this state over time, what went on in other states. This was something that, more or less, caught us by surprise. This is what the people who are on the other side, the people who belong to the dissident faction on this issue are angry about, that they had very little notice; on the first vote, they had no notice at all, that they haven't been able to present their case, that really they expected if they ever got to change the law at all, that it would be done in the legislature, that we wouldn't consider it because nothing had ever been in the constitution before. You all were very, very knowledgeable about banks--groovy. You know, all five of you all, cast an informed vote. All the rest of us, I think, better vote to take this out because we don't know what we're doing. Thank you very much.

MR. HENRY

Would you yield to a question to Dr. Weiss?
The lady yields.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman, I hesitate to yield to questions. I don't know anything about banking, and that's why I'm going to vote to take it out.

Further Discussion

MR. TOBIAS

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, if we don't adopt this amendment, it will be poetic justice for the small banks of this state because they will get exactly what they deserve. Nothing that we put in this constitution can affect national banks--not one thing. The United States government can authorize national banks in every parish of this state. It can authorize that national banks may form national bank multi-parish, multi-state holding companies. What are we doing now? We're freezing out, if we don't adopt this amendment, we're freezing out the possibility of allowing small banks to expand and to protect themselves from the large banks. I think it's very, very dangerous, and I urge you, adopt this amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. ROY

Yes, sir. I just want to point out one thing. It's very important. People talk about the exchange when a multi-bank holding company comes into existence. Let me tell you how they deal with the local bank, then. They don't exchange money for stock in that local bank under the threat of maybe kind of almost running them out of business, saying we're going to compete against you. They go to the little bank stockholder in that local community, and they say, "We will give you stock in my multi-bank holding company which has its interest in finance companies, banks here and there, and everything else, in place of your stock in your local bank." That's how it's done. They don't even bother to pay that little guy his cash for his stock. What does he do? If he doesn't take it, and they end up competing to the extent that they run him out of business, the stock is worth very little anyway. But, that's how the exchange takes place, and why? Because for some reason the federal government allows some type of tax credit when there's an exchange of stock, and you don't have to report a gain on it. You're just exchanging stock. But, what happens to the little fellow who gives his stock to the big multi-bank holding company? He never gets much dividend on it because the multi-bank holding company's officers are the ones who make the money. You give me a corporation that's rich enough, and the executive officers make the money. The stockholders, you know, just don't get too much. That's the only thing I wanted to point out. I urge the rejection of this amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. J. JACKSON

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, earlier today..at least earlier in the discussion, I pointed out to Mr. Roy that, believe it or not, although I represent one of the poorest districts within the state, that we are concerned very seriously about banks. Particularly, we have been operating over the last year with a multi-racial bank designed to provide some services and some meaningful programs from the private sector to our area. Now, I can appreciate the concerns of the small rural banks. I would like to suggest to you that there is no bank smaller in this state than the one existing multi-racial bank in the city of New Orleans. In conferring with bankers who, I would assume, would have the same kind of perspective as many of the rural banks, their fears are that; that when the national banks come in and that they begin to buy up various savings and loan companies, and that when they begin to accumulate the stock of other small rural banks, that when the question comes up in the legislature as to allow all banks to expand, particularly all state banks to expand, that they have the control into some of these small rural banks. It would be very hard if we provide a constitutional provision which does allow for a two-thirds vote of the legislature; it would be hard to get that two-thirds vote. Because, particularly if you recognize, as a matter of fact, that the reason that many of us who run for office have to secure various loans from various lending institutions, and somebody will throw that up in your face and say, "Well, you've got a loan with my bank now." I believe, as Mrs. Zervigon, that if we under the present statute, if there needs to be some adjustments to accommodate small banks and large banks, that it would be more readily easier to do it in the legislature, than necessarily having to overcome, which in my opinion is a strict constitutional prohibition. So, for that reason I ask you, and taking on the advice of persons who are more expertise in this area, ask you to vote favorable for the adoption of the amendment.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. JONES

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, the issue is clear here. You've got a provision in your constitution which does nothing more than provide for the provisions of an overkill in the regulation of your banking industry. It does nothing but raise it to two-thirds, where you've got the laws on the books right now. You're taking it out and just making it more difficult. It's a provision which should not even be in this particular section of the constitution. I think it's clear that it's statutory, and it's something we ought to leave to the regulation of the legislature, and I urge that you vote in favor of this amendment and delete Section 9 from Proposal No. 35. Thank you.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected:
39-65. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Dennery sends up the following amendments:
Amendment No. 1. On page 2, line 21, after the word "permit" and before the word "multi-bank" insert the words "foreign or domestic".

108th Days Proceedings—January 4, 1974

Amendment No. 2. On page 2, line 23, after the words "two-thirds of" and before the word "each" insert the words "the elected members of".

Amendment No. 3. On page 2, line 24, after the word and punctuation "legislature." add the following: "No law shall permit multi-parish operations of building and loan associations, savings and loan associations, or homesteads, except by a favorable vote of two-thirds of the elected members of each house of the legislature."

Explanation

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, my amendments, I think, establish the validity of Mrs. Zervigon's remarks when she spoke in favor of the previous amendment which was defeated, namely that the Section 9 as it's presently written, I don't believe has had enough study; and I'm not sure that the amendments I suggest are sufficient to really protect us in this state. For example, my first amendment inserts the words "foreign or domestic" because, as a matter of fact, there are some out-of-state banks which operate in the State of Louisiana. Now, it seems to me if we're going to prohibit local domestic multi-bank holding companies, metropolitan banks, or statewide branch banking, we certainly should prohibit it as far as foreign banks are concerned. A lot of international banking is done by foreign banks which have offices, or could have offices in any one or more of the parts of the State of Louisiana. The second amendment that I propose, is, I suppose, more technical than anything else. A favorable vote of two-thirds of each house probably should be a favorable vote of the elected members of each house." Now, the third amendment is offered because at the present time you can have multi-parish operations of buildings and loans, savings and loans, and homesteads. It would seem to me that if you're going to restrict banks to operating within their own parish except by a two-thirds vote, then you should do the same thing as far as homesteads, building and loans, and savings and loans are concerned. As Senator Nunez mentioned, at least one of the New Orleans homesteads has a branch in St. Bernard which, presumably, will cause difficulties for local St. Bernard homesteads. It appears to me that in order to be fair on this, if we're going to restrict multi-parish banking to...or rather restrict the legislature to require it a two-thirds vote in order to permit multi-parish banking, we should do the same thing with regard to multi-parish operations of building and loan associations, and the like. It is for these purposes that I have submitted these amendments, and I'll be pleased to answer any questions, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

MR. TOBIAS

Moise, is Amendment No. 3 exercise of the principle, "what's good for the goose is good for the gander"?

MR. DENNERY

Yes, I suppose you could say that.

MR. HAYES

Mr. Dennery, does the state have any control over the federal savings and loan association, or building and loan association, as you refer to here?

MR. DENNERY

I'm not sure that they do, Mr. Hayes.

MR. HAYES

They don't have any, as you know it? O.K., so this would not control them; they would be free to ramp as they willed. Is that correct?

MR. DENNERY

I believe that's correct. That's one of the reasons I think this entire amendment...

MR. HAYES

Now, if you would put all these controls on state banks and leave them free, what good would this do?

MR. DENNERY

Well, we're doing the same thing with national banks now, you see?

MR. HAYES

Now, the next think is, can't these savings and loan associations, federal, go at least fifty miles in radius?

MR. DENNERY

I think they can go a hundred miles...

MR. HAYES

A hundred miles and do what they want to. Therefore, this would be almost useless, wouldn't it?

MR. DENNERY

I beg your pardon.

MR. HAYES

This would be almost useless, then, if they can do all of that: wouldn't it?

MR. DENNERY

No, but it would restrict them to that. It would restrict them to their parishes.

MR. HAYES

The state, and not the federal.

MR. DENNERY

Well, I'm not sure what the federal is, Mr. Hayes, frankly.

MR. WINCHESTER

Mr. Dennery, in Amendment No. 3 the word "operations," what does that mean exactly please in the first line of Amendment No. 3?

MR. DENNERY

Well, it means what it says, Mr. Winchester. It means they can't operate outside their own parish unless the legislature authorizes it.

MR. WINCHESTER

If you have a building and loan office in Iberia Parish, they cannot make loans in St. Mary's?

MR. DENNERY

Unless the legislature authorizes it. This doesn't say they can't do it; this says that the legislature may authorize this, but it requires a two-thirds vote, just as it does for multi-parish banking.

MR. WINCHESTER

Well, now, what does it do now?

MR. DENNERY

As far as I know at the present time, a homestead can lend money anywhere in the state. That's my understanding of it.

MR. WINCHESTER

Thank you.

MR. ALEXANDER

Mr. Dennery, as you know there are some homestead, I know one that operates...it's domiciled in Orleans, operates in Jefferson and St. Bernard. I'm concerned about what would this amendment do, anyway? What purpose would it serve?

MR. DENNERY

Well, the purpose that it would serve, Rev. Alexander, is to require the legislature to authorize such operations by a two-thirds vote. In other words, as Mr. Tobias said, presumably what's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander, and homesteads, building and loans, and so forth obviously compete to a certain extent with banks. So, if we're going to limit banks, then we ought to limit homesteads the same way. That was the purpose of it.

MR. RIECKE

Where you have a homestead operating in two different parishes, would your amendment make them close the homestead that's in another parish, if it were passed?

MR. DENNERY

Not since they're operating under the present law. I don't know what the effect of that would be because if my amendment were adopted and the original statute had been adopted by a two-thirds vote, I don't think it would have any effect, Mr. Riecke.

MR. RIECKE

You mean those already in existence could continue?

MR. DENNERY

I would assume so, if the legislature had passed that law by at least a two-thirds vote.

108th Days Proceedings—January 4, 1974

MR. RIECKE

I just don't understand that. You mean...I'm asking specifically, if you have a homestead which operates in Orleans Parish and one in Jefferson...as a branch in Jefferson Parish, if we pass this amendment, would they have to close their branch in Jefferson Parish?

MR. DENNERY

My answer to you, sir, is that under the law as it presently stands any statute which is valid when it was enacted, and becomes invalid under this constitution, would be invalid. But, under this constitution, the only requirement is that the statute has been passed by a two-thirds vote of the house and the senate. Now, if it had been passed that way, I don't know how they were passed. Each one may be a different act, but if the act by which homesteads were authorized to go outside of their own parish, had been passed by a two-thirds vote of both houses of the legislature, this would have absolutely no effect on the validity of their present operation.

MR. WEISS

Did you know that the bankers whom I spoke with say that the federal legislation or any act of federal law is not undertaken without state recommendation and approval as a rule? That includes federal banking actions. I don't know about the savings and loan.

MR. DENNERY

I think that's true with banks. I don't know that it's true with the other.

MR. BURSON

Noise, don't you think that your amendment goes further with regard to savings and loan than the committee proposal does with banks in that your Amendment No. 3 prohibits multi-parish operation of building and loan associations, whereas the Section 9 simply prohibits multi-bank holding companies, metropolitan banking or statewide branch banking, but says nothing about operations from one parish to the other, for instance?

MR. DENNERY

That's quite possible. Frankly, when I worded this, I couldn't figure out how else to word it, Mr. Burson. The purpose of it was to prevent the multi-parish branches, I suppose.

Point of Order

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Chairman, I just wanted a ruling as to whether this is divisible or not.

MR. HENRY

Divisible, yes, sir, it is.

MR. DUVAL

I request that it be voted on...

MR. HENRY

In three different votes?

MR. DUVAL

Yes, sir.

MR. HENRY

All right, sir.

Further Discussion

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in opposition to Amendment No. 1 and No. 3. Amendment No. 2 is all right. Now, let me tell you with respect to No. 3 what's really dangerous about it. I told you that a present federal law with respect to statewide branch banking and multi-bank holding companies allows the national banks to do only what the state permits. Now, presently in Louisiana you can't have that so they don't do it. But, present federal law with respect to savings and loan associations, federal savings and loan, is not the same as to national banks. Federal savings and loans may go within a hundred miles of their parent savings and loan organization, so that if you pass No. 3, you're going to penalize your state savings and loans which can compete with the federal system right now because in the state law we are allowed, our state law does permit savings and loans to open up branches within a hundred miles. All I'm saying is that you can't possibly pass this and treat our local savings and loans equally with federal savings and loans. So, I urge the rejection of it. Number one, I don't think it's needed. I think it's very plain that the provision says that no law shall permit multi-bank holding companies, and I never understood why we had to put "foreign" or "domestic." We could not bind, of course, the federal national banks if the federal government did something about it. I don't see the need for it. The second amendment is good, and I would vote for it.

Questions

MR. BURNS

Mr. Roy, with reference to your now saying that the second amendment is good, didn't you have that in your original proposal, and then you changed it to satisfy a lot of people that were opposed to the simple majority?

MR. ROY

Well, Mr. Burns, I think...

MR. BURNS

...and then came around and told us that ought to meet all the objections.

MR. ROY

Our initial committee proposal was an absolute prohibition which would have taken a constitutional amendment to allow. Then the Independent Bankers' Association and the LBA said, "Look, that's not good; we need some flexibility." So, we then changed it to two-thirds vote. I understand that Mr. Dennery's amendment is more of a technical nature because we do provide by a vote of two-thirds of each house of the legislature; and he just says by a two-thirds vote of the elected members of each house. I don't see any problem there. Style and Drafting can take care of his. I think his second one is a technical amendment, and I have no objection to it.

MR. DREW

Chris, I'm concerned about Amendment No. 3. Under the banking provision, which we just refused to delete, there would be nothing in there that would prohibit me from going to Shreveport, living in Minden and borrowing money any time I saw fit, but when you say multi-parish operations of a building and loan association where my home is located in Webster Parish, would I not be confined to having to do business with a building and loan association in that parish?

MR. ROY

It could be argued, Mr. Drew. I don't know...It's confusing.

MR. DREW

In other words, my question is, is a mortgage on property in Webster Parish in operation? That's the question that bothers me?

MR. ROY

I think that's another reason to vote against it, but the main reason I'm against it is because it discriminates against our own state savings and loans.

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Roy, I didn't understand your objection to the first amendment. Would you be good enough to repeat it for me?

MR. ROY

Mr. Dennery, I didn't fully understand your explanation of it or the need for it, but my opinion is that when you talk about a foreign, if you are talking about something outside of the United States that may be one thing. But, I think the language is broad enough that when our law says, "No law shall permit multi-bank holding companies"; the only exception to that rule would be that national banks, if Congress chooses to authorize them to, will be permitted to operate as Congress sees fit. But, foreign banks, if that's what you're talking about, I don't think...

MR. DENNERY

No, I'm talking about banks outside of the State of Louisiana. As you probably know, we do have some banks from outside of the State of Louisiana with offices in the State of Louisiana. My question is: The same basis that you said you didn't want to favor the federal building and loans over the state building and loans, why would you do this?

MR. ROY

Well, I misunderstood your explanation. I thought you were referring to "foreign," I was not paying attention; I'm sorry. As a foreign....

MR. HENRY

You've exceeded your time, Mr. Roy.

108th Days Proceedings—January 4, 1974

MR. ROY
I withdraw my objection of "i".

Further Discussion

MR. HAYES
Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, it appears that this third amendment in particular here would put your state savings and loan association at a disadvantage to your federal institutions. If your federal institutions can go a hundred miles, why would you want to limit your state institutions from going at least where they can go? I don't see any need for this at all, Amendment No. 3. You are only saying...well, all you're saying here is that what you are going to do is limit, and limit, and delimit the state while the federal institutions can run wild as I can see it. If they can go one hundred miles, I can see no need for [Amendment] No. 3 at all.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. DENNERY
Mr. Chairman, I would ask for a division of the question. I will waive my right to close.

MR. HENRY
All right. The gentleman had already requested that the question be divided, so....

MR. DENNERY
Mr. Roy advises me that the committee now has no objection to Amendment No. 1.

[Amendment No. 1 adopted: 95-8. Motion to reconsider tabled. Amendment No. 2 reread and adopted: 101-3. Motion to reconsider tabled. Amendment No. 3 reread. Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected: 18-84. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

MR. POYNTER
Yes. Mr. Conroy sends up amendments at this time.
Amendment No. 1. On page 2, line 22, after the word and punctuation "banking," and before the word "or" insert the words "multi-parish".

Explanation

MR. CONROY
I disagreed with the philosophy of Section 9 and voted for the amendment to remove it but the convention felt otherwise, and I think that the arguments in favor of Section 9 that have been presented indicated that the intention was to prohibit all multi-parish branch banking not just a prohibition against statewide branch banking. So, I regard this somewhat as a technical amendment to conform with what the intent apparently of this convention is and that's to prohibit multi-parish branch banking. I discussed it with Mr. Roy and I gather that he agrees with this change to clarify the language of the section and prohibit multi-parish branch banking. I'll answer any questions about it, if there are any.

[Amendment adopted without objection. Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 75-30. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Recess

[Quorum Call: 70 delegates present and a quorum.]

Personal Privilege

MR. ROY
Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, in the past when I've been speaking to groups about the convention, I've always said that I thought we got good press coverage, particularly, of the Times-Picayune, the States Items in New Orleans, the Advocate and the States Times. I just read again for the second time today a statement in the Baton Rouge Times that we passed a provision yesterday that allowed for the automatic increase of rates irrespective of what the legislature does which is just absolutely untrue. The same headline was this morning in the Morning Advocate and I called it to the attention of the writer and he said he was not responsible for the headline although the headline was, in fact, erroneous. If there is any media around here, except for the Picayune and the other New Orleans paper, the Items, which is doing what I say is a fair job. I wish they would please print the truth on the matter that what we passed yesterday will allow an increase if the legislature implements such an animal and it's just not so. People are being misled and it's not going to change my view on the thing as a result of that. If they can't understand it, then my good friends over there in the Baton Rouge media, I would be happy to show it to them how plain it is.

Amendment

MR. HARDIN
First amendment is sent up by Delegate Singletary and many other delegates.

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, line 25, add the following section, Section 10, that's a change from [Section] 9 on the copies that were passed out.

"Section 10. Administrative and Quasi-Judicial Agency Code Section 10. Rules, regulations and procedures adopted by all state administrative and quasi-judicial agencies, boards and commissions shall be published in one or more codes made available to the public."

Explanation

MR. SINGLETARY
Ladies and gentlemen, this would just require the quasi-judicial agencies, boards and commissions of the state to publish their rules and make them available for the information of the public just like we require local governments to publish their laws. So, I move its adoption.

[Quorum Call: 82 delegates present and a quorum. Amendment adopted: 86-0. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 87-0. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. HARDIN
Next amendment which is being passed out now is sent up by Delegates Corne, Juneau, Willis, and Segura.
Amendment No. 1. On page 2, after the language added with new Section 10 add the following language:
"Section 11. Preservation of Linguistic and Cultural Origin Section 11. The right of the people to preserve, foster, and promote their respective historic linguistic and cultural origin is recognized."

Explanation

MRS. CORNE
The proposal is very short; you have it before you. We feel that the cultural importance of bilingualism and the advantages that we have in Louisiana for the preservation of the historical and linguistic origin of our people should be fostered, preserved. I would ask your favorable consideration of this proposal.

Questions

MR. JENKINS
Mrs. Corne, your intention with this section is not to grant any additional authority to the state government, is it, but rather to give certain rights to the citizens of the state; is that correct?

MRS. CORNE
Yes, to the people of the state to preserve and foster their origin.

MR. JENKINS
But, not to the government; it's not a grant of authority to government; is it?

MRS. CORNE
No.

108th Days Proceedings—January 4, 1974

MR. HAYES

Mrs. Corne, will this give you the right to do anything that you can't do now?

MRS. CORNE

Mr. Hayes, I really don't believe that it would give us a right to do anything that we don't want to do now. However, it would be an encouragement to preserve that which we tried once before to almost eliminate in the State of Louisiana and it would then be an encouragement for the people not to attempt this again.

MR. J. JACKSON

Mrs. Corne, it's just a technical question. I wanted to know was that myself or Alphonse Jackson on the amendment because it doesn't clarify?

MRS. CORNE

You wanted to know...I didn't understand your question.

MR. J. JACKSON

One of the coauthors name is Jackson. O.K., I just wanted to make sure. I think it ought to be corrected....

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: 95-1. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 99-1. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. HARDIN

The next amendment is sent up by Delegate Denny. On page 2, line 25, after the language added by the Corne, et al. amendment and adopted by the convention, add the following "Section 12. Validity of Existing Legislation Section 12. Existing legislation not in conflict with this constitution is valid and in force."

Explanation

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, the purpose of this amendment is to clarify once and for all what the courts will have to look to in order to determine the constitutional validity of legislative acts. At the present time, the jurisprudence in Louisiana has held that a statute which is invalid under a previous constitution cannot be validated by a new or amended constitution even when the constitutional amendment proposed that the same session of the legislature at which the statute was adopted was later ratified by the people and put into effect. Now, this amendment provides that if the legislation, which is presently on the books, is not in conflict with the constitution which we are presently drafting regardless of its validity under prior constitutions, the courts can hold and should hold that that legislation is valid and in force. The reason for this is to avoid questions which may come up and to avoid really, primarily, endless litigation because we will not have to refer back to prior constitutions in order to determine whether a statute presently on the books is a valid statute. Now, I have discussed this matter with Mr. Jenkins at length. Mr. Jenkins has an amendment to it which will presumably come up in which he argues that if a legislation was not valid when it was adopted, that it should not be validated by virtue of this constitution. I present this to the convention because I think this is a matter of some importance. I think we should reach a decision. Should we require our courts to go back to the Constitution of 1921 and prior constitutions, or should we merely require the courts to look at the current constitution when adopted in 1974? Certain members of the staff have suggested that this would simplify the problems which presently exist in the field of constitutional law and it was for this reason that I introduced it. I believe in all probabilities it will simplify matters; it may confuse them, though; I want in all honesty to tell you this and I think you should consider it very carefully before adopting it or rejecting it. I think after we have discussed it, the record will reflect what this constitutional convention deems proper and the courts can then be guided accordingly. I'll be pleased to answer any questions.

Questions

MR. JENKINS

Noise, I know that your intention here is to simplify things, but wouldn't you be making things much, much more complicated by raising the possibility that laws that have been declared unconstitutional now and which...others which are unconstitutional but which have never been declared so-- but we all know are unconstitutional, such as some of our segregation laws and things like this---could possibly be at some time in the future argued that they are revived by virtue of this constitution? Wouldn't there, then, be a doubt raised and the possibility that people could be constantly arguing that laws are being revised by this con....revived by this constitution?

MR. DENNERY

Revived? Well, I don't know if that's necessarily true, but I will say that the majority of the states in the Union now take the position that under...which would apply under this amendment. In other words, the majority of the jurisprudence is that if a statute...if legislation is valid under the current constitution it makes no difference whether it was valid under prior constitutions.

MR. JENKINS

Well, let me ask you, what is existing legislation? What does that term mean?

MR. DENNERY

Well, it's...as far as my understanding of the term and the way in which it was used here was to indicate a statute which had been adopted by both Houses of the legislature and signed by the governor---that's the existing legislation.

MR. JENKINS

Would it have to be something that was adopted pursuant to all the formalities and all the procedures of the constitution under which it was adopted?

MR. DENNERY

No, it would have to be valid under this constitution.

MR. JENKINS

So, in other words you could have....

MR. DENNERY

...previously been declared unconstitutional, then I would think it is no longer existing legislation and could not revive something that the courts had declared unconstitutional. But, as you and I discussed, there is a presumption in the law that all statutes are constitutional until the court...the highest court holds them to be unconstitutional.

MR. JENKINS

Well, here's an example: Suppose under the 1921 Constitution a certain act or a thing that purports to be an act was not signed in open session by the Speaker of the House, for example. Now, our new constitution does not provide an act has to be signed in open session. Now, are you telling me that even though under the 1921 Constitution an act did not meet all the formalities and requirements necessary to become truly an act that we would somehow be giving it legitimacy under this constitution?

MR. DENNERY

Yes. I think under this amendment you would be; this is basically a statute of repose. In other words, it says that everything that has been enacted by the legislature up till now is tested under the constitution which is now in effect.

MR. JENKINS

But, don't you...isn't the question is: What has been enacted? If something was not signed in open session; if it doesn't have three readings; if it didn't get the majority of the elected members; if it wasn't published, then it's not enacted?

MR. DENNERY

Well, it wouldn't be valid under this constitution anyway, so I just....

MR. JENKINS

But, you just told me that something not signed in open session would be.

MR. DENNERY

No, no, no, you gave me another example. If it were not signed in open session, and we did not require that in this constitution, then it would be good. But, if it did not have three readings--and we do require three readings in this constitution--it would not be valid. The point of the thing is to present it to the courts so that the courts will not have to go beyond the current constitution.

108th Days Proceedings—January 4, 1974

MR. JENKINS

But, the last question I want to ask is, what this does is, it says that a piece of legislation which was unconstitutional when passed by the legislature will now become constitutional if it conforms with this constitution; is that correct?

MR. DENNERY

That's correct.

MR. PEREZ

I think you started something.

MR. DENNERY

Maybe I ought to review it.

MR. PEREZ

Do you realize that this is the present provision of the 1921 Constitution that "all laws enforced in this state at the time of the adoption of this constitution not inconsistent therewith and constitutional, when enacted, shall remain in full force and effect until altered or repealed by the legislature or until they expire by their own limitation"? Wouldn't you think that this type of provision would be a lot more appropriate because of the fact that any law which is previously adopted should be able to stand the test of the constitution then in force; wouldn't you think?

MR. DENNERY

Well, Mr. Perez, there isn't any question about that being the law. I think that either way is appropriate as long as we know which way this convention determines that the court should go. Under the present constitution, of course, you would have to examine the validity under the constitution when it was adopted as well as the constitution in effect when it's tested. Under this amendment, you would only have to test it against the current constitution.

MR. PEREZ

Don't you realize that in addition we have a number of provisions in the present constitution which will be carried over as statutory material and that area should also be dealt with in an amendment of your kind; wouldn't you think?

MR. DENNERY

No, I think that will be carried out in the transitional measure section; I hope it will anyway.

MR. PEREZ

Well, the reason I'm asking that question is because of the fact that the provision in the '21 Constitution is in the schedule; did you know that?

MR. DENNERY

No.

MR. PEREZ

...and, don't you think that it's appropriate that your particular amendment should also be in the schedule?

MR. DENNERY

I have no objection to Style and Drafting...

MR. DERBES

Mr. Dennery, I seek information. Would you further elaborate then on the issue that Mr. Perez raised? In other words, what happens to material currently in our existing constitution, which as a result of our deliberations becomes statutory in nature? How would actions or other.....that came in conflict with another act of the legislature, for example. Would your amendment be of any help in resolving that conflict?

MR. DENNERY

I don't believe so. I would think that that's a matter that the transitional measures section of this constitution is going to have to take care of. Presumably, anything which was in the present constitution and is carried forward as statute law would have priority and precedence over any other statutory material.

MR. DERBES

Why?

MR. DENNERY

....I say presumably, because I think that's probably what they will put in that section; I don't know what will be in the section.

MR. DERBES

D.K. I understand that. Now, one other question. I can't remember what I wanted to ask you, my mind is kind of....

MR. DENNERY

I don't remember my answer either.

MR. DERBES

Never mind, I pass.

MR. O'NEILL

Mr. Dennery, this is a complicated thing. Just for some other delegates, do you have any examples you could give just for exposition purposes that you might have in mind on this?

MR. DENNERY

Well, I don't have anything special in mind---there are cases and as based on the previous constitutional provision, as Mr. Perez read. Our courts hold that in order for a law to be valid, it has to be valid when enacted under that constitution and, again, it must be valid when tested under the present constitution. My purpose was merely to prevent...as I called it a statute of repose and to make it simpler, so that we would only have to look at one constitution. We wouldn't have to go back and find out, was it valid in 1898, or 1896, or 1925; it was purely an effort to change our law, there isn't any question about that; it would change our present law.

MR. AVANT

Moise, I appreciate what you're trying to do, but one particular area where it appears to me that this would wreak havoc is in the area of local and special laws. Now, there are certain provisions in the present constitution as to the manner in which local and special laws must be advertised. Yet, there are different provisions in the proposed constitution which we have adopted. So, if we adopt your amendment, and then this constitution is adopted, it would appear to me that every single local and special law that has been enacted pursuant to the '21 Constitution and was valid when enacted falls.

MR. DENNERY

Well, my recollection of the way Mr. Perez read that section was that it had to be valid under both constitutions then. So, I presume if you don't have this, it will have to be valid under both constitutions now.

MR. AVANT

It just seems to me that it's something I think we'd better look at because I'm not...

MR. DENNERY

Jack, I quite agree with you. I have no extremely strong feelings on this. I think it's something we should consider and we should determine whether we want to look at one constitution or whether we want to look at all of our constitution. If we decide to change the law, we'll change it. If we decide not to change the law, the courts will have the benefit of this debate and learn what we meant.

MR. TATE

Mr. Dennery, I don't want to talk about bacon or anything like that right now. But, I do want to ask you a question. It's a long statement. Are you aware, as I believe Mrs. Zervigon's Transitional Committee is working on the problem, and they have staff memos that have gone into the issue, and that perhaps it might be better to withdraw it, and let the transitional...

MR. DENNERY

I have no objection, Judge, as long as you can assure me it will come up then. I don't know what's in that section right now. I don't know what provisions...Mrs. Zervigon may be able to answer that question, though.

Judge Tate asked if you had a provision similar to this in the Transitional Measures Section.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Dennery, are you aware that my committee hasn't met on that subject yet, so that what's in my mind and in Mrs. Duncan's mind and in Judge Tate's mind is really not official in any way, shape or form.

MR. DENNERY

Well, I think I would prefer not withdrawing it, Judge.

MR. FLORY

Mr. Dennery, don't you think it would be better to put this back on the calendar at the present time in view of the questions raised, and particularly with reference to local and special laws because I know that in the past, local and special laws had to be advertised three days prior...thirty days prior to the convening of the session? We changed that to two days, thirty days before introduction. Now, what that would mean is that every pension law, every local and special law technically would be unconstitutional under the new constitution if it...the dates didn't fall properly within the thirty days prior to introduction?

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Flory, I have no objection to doing anything on it. I stated when I started that my purpose in introducing this amendment was to get the matter before the convention. I think it's something that we should decide one way or the other. If Mrs. Zervigon's committee is going to take it up, I would be pleased to withdraw the amendment with the understanding that I can introduce it when her committee proposal comes up. I'd be perfectly willing to do that.

Mr. Chairman.

Under the circumstances I ask leave to withdraw this amendment at the present time with the right to resubmit it at a later date.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Next amendment sent up by Delegate Dennery.

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, line 25, and after the language added by the Convention Floor Amendment proposed by Delegates Corne and Juneau, and just adopted, add the following section. It becomes:

"Section 12. Laws Authorizing Supplemental Pay

Section 12. Any law authorizing supplemental pay shall be enacted only by the vote of two-thirds of the elected members of each house of the legislature."

Explanation

MR. DENNERY

This is an amendment, as you may recall, when we discussed civil service, and again yesterday, at the session on yesterday, we have adopted two provisions in the constitution which permit the legislature to authorize supplemental pay for certain state employees. One is the state patrolmen and one of the uniformed enforcement officers of the Wildlife and Fisheries Department. The purpose of this amendment is merely to assure that a two-thirds vote of the elected members of each house of the legislature adopt such a law before it becomes effective. It's a relatively simple amendment. The purpose of it is that, in my opinion, as I argued before--although I was unfortunately unable to be here yesterday--as I argued before under civil service, I think that the idea of permitting the legislature to supplement any one group's pay is a very dangerous one from the point of view of civil service. Therefore, since the convention has indicated very clearly that it disagrees with me on that, I'm asking the convention to make certain that the legislature gives its due consideration and adopts any such statutes by two-thirds vote of the elected members of each house. I strongly urge the adoption of the amendment.

Question

MR. AVANT

Mr. Dennery, your amendment is not limited, is it, to supplemental pay for members of the classified state civil service? It would also require, would it not, a bill providing supplemental pay for municipal firemen or policemen or deputy sheriffs, to be adopted by a two-thirds vote; would it not?

MR. DENNERY

It probably would, Mr. Avant. That thought had not occurred to me, but I would have no objection to amending it to limit it to classified people in the classified service in the state.

Further Discussion

MR. FLORY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I rise in opposition to the proposed new section in that it, first we have not defined what is supplemental pay. Are we talking about pay that we make jointly to judges, district attorneys, clerks of court, etc., on down the line? Are we talking about all the salaries paid in this state on a joint basis with local government from now on going to require a two-thirds vote of the elected members of the legislature even for new positions? I don't think this is a realistic framework at all as far as constitutional law because what you're talking about is for appropriation of funds, two-thirds vote of the legislature. I would ask that you reject this new section proposed by Mr. Dennery.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Delegate Landrum sends up amendments at this time.

Amendment No. 1.--There are going to have to be some changes again--On page 2, line 25 after the language added by Convention Floor Amendment No. 1, proposed by Delegate Corne and adopted by the Convention today, add the following:

"Section"--you need to make it "12" now instead of "10."

"Section 12. Burial of Indigents; Appropriation Section 12. The legislature shall appropriate adequate funds for the burial of indigents."

Explanation

MR. LANDRUM

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, in keeping with the American principles, we believe that we should take care of our dead, even when they are not able to do so themselves. I have here from Mr. Goldman one of his three-dollar cigars, or five-dollar cigars, I believe; he carries them. He told me he wanted his remains cremated. He wanted to be placed in this tube here. Well, it costs money to do that, and there are those who cannot pay for a funeral. Today we are to the place now where most of the city or parish burying grounds are just about running over. We even have the new thing going now where the rest havens and other garden parks or cemeteries where you have to pay to bury the dead. Many times you find families who had to make loans to pay for funerals. We would ask that you would support this amendment so that we would take care of our dead, as we have with the living. Thank you.

Questions

MR. STINSON

What would be included in that? Would it include a gratuity to the minister that performed the ceremonies?

MR. LANDRUM

I would have to say to you that you're a little late. Mr. Landry wanted to know whether or not I would accept an amendment saying that the minister would not be paid. I told him that I would agree to that.

MR. STINSON

I'm sorry. I wanted to be sure that was taken care of, Rev. Landrum.

MR. GOLDMAN

Rev. Landrum, did you know that that cigar you mentioned is sixty cents at retail and forty cents at wholesale, and I buy them wholesale.

MR. DERBES

Rev. Landrum, can you assure us that if this amendment doesn't pass all of the dead poor people will vote against the constitution?

MR. LANDRUM

Mr. Derbes, you have made it possible for me to express my opinion about the constitution. When you need...no, I don't think I'll go into that, but at least their families will be here. They will express an opinion one way or another. Some of them are here now in this state. So, they'll be able to express an opinion. If it was left to me, I would tell them to support the constitution. That's what I would tell them, to vote for the constitution. In spite of all of its problems, the difficult times that we've had, in spite of many bad features about it, I still believe that when we are through, it will be worth our consideration. So, I would tell them to definitely consider it.

108th Days Proceedings—January 4, 1974

MR. LEBLEU

Rev. Landrum, I just wondered if you are aware that local governing authorities or parish governments now have the privilege of, or are allowed to pay, I know in our parish, up to one hundred dollars, for the burial of indigents. Perhaps, they don't have that in Orleans, but I'm sure that they are allowed by state law to do that.

MR. LANDRUM

In some local parishes, yes, I would say that you have some type of program, but now, as you know, a hundred dollars really will not take care of our burying a person, not even in country parishes now. When you consider a casket, burying grounds, most of this is going to private business. It's no more of a city or a parish thing. Most of these are owned by private individuals. So, you have to pay for it. You have to pay for the opening and closing of a grave. I think there is a need for the state to do something along this line.

I ask your favorable vote.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mrs. Zervigon sends up amendments.

Amendments read as follows:

On page 2, line 25--need to add that what's being distributed at this time--and after the Convention Floor Amendment No. 1 proposed by Mrs. Corne and adopted by the Convention on today, add the following section, and this would become, of course, still 12:

"Section 12. Laws Enacted by Electors; Limitations

Section 12. Notwithstanding any provisions of this constitution to the contrary, the legislature may submit proposals to the electors of the state for their approval at a regularly scheduled election held throughout the state. A proposal approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon shall be deemed to have the force and effect of law, but only for a period of one year or until adjournment sine die of the next following regular session of the legislature, whichever is sooner."

Before this amendment is introduced, there is one change that needs to be made. The very last word of the text of the amendment should not be "sooner"; it should be "later."

There's a more substantial change than that on the amendment, and you'd need to follow this.

It all affects the last clause of the second sentence which reads, "but only for a period of one year or until"--and here's the first change: strike out the words "adjournment sine die"; insert in lieu thereof, "the effective date of laws of the next following regular session of the legislature, whichever is sooner...whichever is later." Excuse me. That other change I previously mentioned, "whichever is later."

I'll read that second sentence again. "A proposal approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon shall be deemed to have the force and effect of law,"--and the qualifying phrase as to the effective date of that is--"but only for a period of one year or until the effective date of laws of the next following regular session of the legislature, whichever is later."

Explanation

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I'm sorry for the confusion. I had asked for changes in the copy, and the staff apparently didn't get the word. I asked for the changes yesterday. But, the intention remains the same. As the constitution is presently drafted, there are two ways to pass things with the effect of law. One is to have the legislature pass the law in the regular manner with the three readings and that sort of stuff. It says in the Legislative Article that the legislature is the legislative body in the state. The other way would be to have concurrent resolutions passed by two-thirds vote of the legislature, approved by a referendum of the people, and that would be a constitutional amendment. I think there are times when the legislature wants to take the pulse of the people when it really isn't appropriate to amend the constitution. This would allow the legislature that freedom. There are times when either an issue is terribly emotional or when legislators really don't know what the feelings of the people are that they might want to hold a referendum. The problem is that if the only way to hold a referendum is to put something in the form of a constitutional amendment, then in the future when legislators know how the people feel, or when the issue isn't as hot anymore, if any changes need to be made, they must be made by constitutional amendment. This would allow the legislators to have a referendum on something that would then have the effect of the statute which the legislature, once they got the feeling of the public, could amend as they amend all statutes in the future. It's just a convenience. I add it in this article because this article as it originally came from the committee had several sections on initiative and referendum. Those were deleted in committee, but that's why I cast this amendment to this particular article rather than sticking it in the Legislative Article. I'll yield to any questions, Mr. Chairman.

Delegate J. Jackson in the Chair

Questions

MR. DERBES

Thank you. There's no gubernatorial veto in this, right?

MRS. ZERVIGON

No, the people would pass or veto.

MR. DERBES

In the event...it also seems to me not to provide...you said that the legislature can then amend what has been referred to the people for approval without subsequent referral to the people for approval?

MRS. ZERVIGON

That's right, and as a matter of fact, if you'll read it, if the legislature takes no action at all, it'll have to. This just gives a way of the legislature to take the pulse of the people. I'm certain that the legislature could now, if they want to, appropriate money for a Harris poll and take the pulse of the people, but then they would have to wait till the next following regular session to pass something into law. It may well also be so that the legislature could put a referendum on the ballot to take the pulse of the people, but not one that has the effect of law because it says in the Legislative Article that the legislative power rests with the legislature, not with the people. So, this would allow the legislature as itself a statute needed to be established now, if the people really wanted it now, to have something of the force of statutes between today and the next regular session of the legislature.

MR. DERBES

Why did you exclude the gubernatorial veto from the system?

MRS. ZERVIGON

It just seemed to me that when the people were going to express their views one way or another, that was unnecessary. In addition to that, Jim, it lapses, you see, after the year is passed or the next following session unless the legislature passes it into law as a regular statute, and at that point the governor could veto it, if he had the nerve.

MR. DERBES

What about a proposal that...never mind...Thank you.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mrs. Zervigon, did you know that this is one difficulty that a legislator doesn't have; that is, finding out how his constituents feel about the proposed legislation? If he doesn't find that out, then you know he doesn't last very long, only to the next election?

MRS. ZERVIGON

Senator De Blieux, I'm not sure I'll agree with you. The other sort of mechanism that's been established in the legislature in cases like this is to set up an interim committee. For example, on the Sex Education Committee, they set up an interim committee. But, it seems to me that they put a phrase in the form of a referendum and put it on the ballot. They knew everybody in the state felt very strongly about sex education; they just weren't sure how many were on one side as opposed to how many on the other. If they could have put it on the ballot in the form of a referendum, we might have had a law either prohibiting or allowing sex education now, rather than having it assigned to an interim committee, the members of which drew per diem, but nothing much ever resulted of it that I remember.

MRS. WARREN

Ms. Zervigon, you were mentioning that this would be a feeler. I'm wondering, don't you think that the representatives could be a good feeler if they put themselves to work to feel their constituencies at less cost to the state, instead of having a referendum for a feeler; let the representatives feel their constituencies?

108th Days Proceedings—January 4, 1974

MS. ZERVIGON

Mrs. Warren, this is no additional cost to the state, if you notice; I'll say it's got to be a regularly scheduled election. So, there's no additional cost to the state with this provision. What I'm saying is, if they are of a mind not to go out and talk to their constituents on this, or if they are in a position where they know their constituents feel very, very, strongly on both sides of an issue, but they're not quite sure how many are on one side as opposed to how many are on the other. The only way they have now to put a referendum on the ballot is to amend the constitution. That's one of the ways we've gotten useless material in the constitution in the past is as a form of referendum. I'm giving a form of referendum to put statutes in statute books. I don't believe that it will be used very often, but I think it will keep some useless material out of the constitution because it is a way to put referendum on the ballot.

MR. SLAY

Ms. Zervigon, let me see if I get the real meaning here. I don't know what all is behind this, but as I look, I gather that you're saying that the legislature can call an election at a time they set the machinery in work . . . in motion for an election that's going to be a period of some three or four or five months, then that election is only going to be good until the next regular session which is about another year or so. Isn't that a terrible expense to go to to pass something that is not going to have the effect of law after the next regular session? It automatically expires; is that what you're saying?

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Slay, it's no expense at all because it goes on the ballot at the next regularly scheduled election. It's the same sort of provision for constitutional amendments; the difference is it doesn't stick something in the constitution. So, that if in the future you want to change it in some detail or delete it in whole, you don't have to amend the constitution again. In other words, if the legislators want to bother the people on some subject that is not in the present constitution, they only have to bother them once. They don't have to go back year after year to amend it slightly or to amend it out in the future.

MR. SLAY

All right. We're saying at the next regular scheduled election throughout the state?

MS. ZERVIGON

Yes, sir.

MR. SLAY

Now, how often do we have an election throughout the state, a regular scheduled election throughout the state?

MS. ZERVIGON

Congressional elections and gubernatorial elections.

MR. SLAY

All right. Now, that's every two years for the congressional election?

MS. ZERVIGON

Well, two years for congressional elections, the gubernatorial elections is in the intervening time.

MR. SLAY

All right. Now, we're not speaking about the democratic primary, we're speaking about the regular election in the fall. So, when the legislature meets in May --so it's going to be in November before this can go on the ballot--that's still going to be an expense....

MR. DUVAL

Mary, I just wanted to get one thing clear. You have the phrase "notwithstanding any provisions of this constitution to the contrary, the legislature may submit proposals to the electors of the state," now, these proposals would be ratified by the people, but . . . these proposals could not abrogate constitutional provisions; is that right?

MS. ZERVIGON

No way.

MR. DUVAL

So, your intent here is clearly that this could not. . .

these proposals could in no way abrogate the provisions of the constitution; is that right?

MS. ZERVIGON

The provision to the contrary to which I refer, is the first section of the Legislative Article that says "the legislature is the legislative body of the state."

MR. DUVAL

I just wanted to make it abundantly clear that this could . . . in no way could this referendum abrogate constitutional provisions.

MS. ZERVIGON

In no way.

MR. DESHOTELS

Ms. Zervigon, Mr. Duval asked part of my question, but my second question is: I am referring to your statement that this was a mechanism for the legislature to feel the pulse of the people on a particular issue. Why couldn't you simply provide for your referendum, but not provide. . . or not have a provision that it will have the force and effect of law for one year? Just simply say that they can submit a referendum to it and then act on it in the next legislative session. This would, I believe, would clarify and would alleviate some of the fears that some of us have that this would provide for a constitutional amendment that could last for possibly one year without requiring a two-thirds vote of the legislature to submit it to the people.

MS. ZERVIGON

It would have the force and effect of law. Law means "statutes"; statutes can't be contrary to the constitution. I'm not an attorney, but it's been told to us in this body over and over again so I can't see what your fears are in that regard. As far as the other question is concerned, it seems to me that the legislature could appropriate money and take a referendum door to door on the voting machine or anything like that if they wanted. This is to only cover the case in which they wanted something to go into law right away. They can't pass now laws contingent on approval by the people, except to stick them in the constitution. I want to give them two ways to do that. One is to stick them in the constitution but, if they do that, then, forevermore, to change them, we have to amend the constitution. The second way, is to put them in the statutes temporarily on approval by the people. That's all there is to it. It's really very simple; there's nothing behind it, as Mr. Slay said. I wish I were that clever, but I'm not.

MR. ABRAHAM

Mary, isn't there a danger here that we would be placing ourselves right back in exactly the same position where we are now; where we could have fifty-one propositions on the ballot and the people are having to decide whether this is . . . they should vote yea or nay on these things and then in disgust would be just as disgusted with this thing as they are with voting on constitutional amendments?

MS. ZERVIGON

Mack, let me answer that question this way. What you're asking me is, doesn't this tempt the legislature to pass the buck? I'm saying if the legislature is tempted to pass the buck there's really no way for us to stop that except to elect better and better legislators which I believe we have done over time. But, what this says is, if the legislators want to pass the buck, they pass it once. They don't lock themselves into the point where any time they want to make another decision on that same subject even though it isn't so hot they still want to pass the buck. We then have to vote on it again. So, it seems to me that this is a way of limiting the number of things on the ballot because what you're saying is that the hot issue of 1974 goes on the ballot only in '74. The hot issues of '75 go on the ballot only in '75 and there are no '74 old dead issues on the ballot in '75, if you understand what I mean. So, my intention is to cut down the number of things on the ballot in this way. I don't expect it to be used very much, I don't see the legislators wanting to pass the buck very much. As Chris said, we were all elected to come up here and make decisions and I see the legislators doing that more easily than any of the rest of us because they're accustomed to it. But, in that one case where they want to they don't have to stick something in the constitution, they could just take a referendum and stick it into the statutes instead.

Further Discussion

MR. NEWTON

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in support of this amendment. At first I was against it because I felt that

108th Days Proceedings—January 4, 1974

I didn't want the legislature passing the buck. I hope the legislature under the new constitution will not pass the buck. They certainly won't have to as they have in the past. I certainly hope that they won't pass the buck by proposing constitutional amendments. But, if they don't, and if they do decide they want to pass the buck, I'd rather have them doing it in this type of a form rather than in passing and trying to get constitutional amendments passed. I, therefore, support this amendment. I'll be glad to yield to any questions.

Further Discussion

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I'm just going to say a few words, but this is a very bad provision not for the . . . any of the reasons that have been mentioned so far, but I want to point this out to you when it says "notwithstanding any provision of this constitution to the contrary that the legislature may do these things and that that will be the law for a stated period of time." In my humble opinion, the provisions of the constitution could be changed for that limited period of time. Then, the big bugaboo is, if a provision of the constitution is changed by this process and the change only takes effect for one year; then that time runs out, then what is going to be the constitutional provision after that because there's no provision in here at the end of that time, then the old constitutional provision goes back in effect. So, it's just about the doggonest thing I've ever seen. I hate to say ill-conceived, but it's full of all kind of bugaboos. Not only the fact that you're going to have two hundred and fifty propositions on the ballot every time you have an election, but I think that the thing that I have pointed out to you has a very serious defect in it and for that reason alone, it should be rejected.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment rejected: 16-89. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Dennery has further amendments at this time. The pages will be passing out the amendments.

The amendments will read as follows: On page 2, line 25, and again you have to insert the language--after Convention Floor Amendment No. 1 proposed by Mrs. Corne, adopted by the convention on today, add the following: Section (blank) becomes Section 12.

"Section 12. Laws Authorizing Supplemental Pay Section 12. Any law authorizing supplemental pay for state classified employees shall be enacted only by the vote of two-thirds of the elected members of each house of the legislature."

Explanation

MR. DENNERY

You will recall that Mr. Avant pointed out to me that the earlier amendment which I submitted and was defeated would require a two-thirds vote of the elected members of each house even if it referred to parochial employees. Recognizing that that may have been-- it certainly was not my intention-- I felt that I should come forward with this amendment which provides that supplemental pay laws for any state classified employees shall be enacted only by the vote of two-thirds of the elected members of each house of the legislature. You will recall the debates on Civil Service in which many people felt that Civil Service should be subject to a two-thirds vote of the legislature. The purpose of this amendment is to require that two-thirds vote because this constitutes an amendment to the Civil Service law and the rules. In other words, it changes the regular pay plan which would have been adopted by the commission and approved by the governor and the legislature and permits authorizing supplemental pay for two specific categories of employees. It seems to me that there could be no objection to requiring a two-thirds vote in order to do this. I urge you to adopt this amendment. I'll be pleased to answer any questions, Mr. Acting Chairman.

Further Discussion

MR. FLORY

Mr. Chairman, once again I rise to oppose a proposed newer section relating to this particular subject. I'd hope you'd pay particular attention to the language proposed in this amendment. For example, in the last special session of the legislature, the legislature appropriated some, I think, eighteen million dollars or better for state classified employees and nonclassified employees to supplement the present pay they get in a 5.5 percent cross the board cost of living increase. Had this been a constitutional provision at that time, it would have required a two-thirds vote of the legislature to appropriate the funds to make that possible for the state employees. I don't believe that I ever heard Mr. Dennery say while we were discussing Civil Service that he thought that it ought to take a two-thirds vote of the Civil Service Commission to change the classified pay plan for state employees. What he has done here is only take care of the classified state employees who are the least paid in the state. Yet, the nonclassified employees can be granted tremendous supplemental pay increases with only a simple majority vote of the legislature. Now, that's how ridiculous we've come in proposing something of this type. I ask you to vote against this proposed new section.

Further Discussion

MR. WOMACK

Mr. Acting Chairman, fellow delegates, this is another one of the bad proposals, as I see it, that's been offered. If you really want to get some opposition to this document when it's submitted, you tell fifty thousand classified employees that we're not going to permit the Executive Department to grant you a raise when it develops on an interim between sessions that you have the money and can afford it when they were denied that raise because it wasn't anticipated you were going to have that much money when the session was there in the regular session. I think you can generate a considerable amount of opposition by this. Number one is, when the money is available, I can't think of any better place to put it than to put it in your top-flight employees in the State of Louisiana. Personnel, personal services is probably the largest item that we have within state government. In many of the budgetary units it reaches up around an eighty percent factor. I just think you'd be doing irreparable damage to the document that we're going to submit to the people if you would add a section in there like this. I think you would generate an all-out war by these classified employees, and I think they'd be totally justified in taking that position. I think you could seriously consider this and reject this proposal.

Question

MR. WEISS

Delegate Womack, I simply wanted to ask, back in the Executive Article the governor was instructed by the constitutional action to present an operating budget. Now, wouldn't this be within a planned operating budget for the fiscal year to anticipate. . . based upon anticipated state revenues, to state this? I don't see that the argument you present is logical against this floor amendment, if such is the case.

MR. WOMACK

Dr. Weiss, I don't know whether I quite understand your question or not. The Executive Department, the way it operates now, Civil Service makes the recommendation for a pay increase and you call it, supplement-- I don't know what you call it, but a new schedule-- it has to be submitted to the Executive Department and the Executive Department has to accept or reject it based on the availability of money. But, if they submit it in November, and the money is available, then this says that you'll have to have two-thirds vote of the legislature, and I'm assuming it would have to call a special session of the legislature to get that two-thirds before you could pay the employees this increase. So, I just think you're kidding yourself. If the money is available and the legislature has made the money available and during the period of a year never will all the budgetary units have enough money to make it during a period of a year. But, the way we've handled it in the past maybe seventy-five or eighty percent of it could be handled within the budget that they had. In the case then, you'd go back and get the authority by mail ballot for the . . . from the legislature to authorize a deficit financing for that period of time to take care of those minor budgets. Then, the Budget Committee and the Division of Administration would go in and honor a change of allocations to transfer money around in the departments in order to catch those remaining budgetary units that didn't have it. You have a good system for working it now. I think to say that to come back and say that you were going to require a two-thirds vote of both houses that would mean while they were in session, I think you would really be doing irreparable damage to it.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. DENNERY

In closing, I think I should point out to you what I believe to have been some errors of fact presented by Mr. Flory and by Mr. Womack. In the first place the supplemental pay that was adopted at the last session of the legislature was adopted in accordance with a pay plan which was submitted by the Civil Service Commission. So this law, this provision would have absolutely no effect as far as that's concerned. Mr. Womack is apparently talking about all increases in pay. This particular provision is only aimed at the two groups, the two special interest groups who have proven already to this convention the power that they have by having themselves placed in the constitution as exceptions, major exceptions to the general Civil Service rule of having a Civil Service Commission which is non or a political, fix a pay plan which will be uniform throughout the state for all of the state's employees. Now, it seems to me grossly unfair to permit one or two special groups to be able to go to the legislature-- and they have the power-- they've shown the power here, obviously, because they've gotten these two amendments through here; they have the power to go to the legislature. All I am requesting this convention to do is to protect the Civil Service System by saying to the legislature in those two instances where the legislature is by this constitution authorized to grant supplemental pay without going through the Civil Service Commission; the legislature must adopt such a law by a two-thirds vote. Now, a two-thirds vote is difficult to get. It should be difficult to get. This is a very, very serious thing because it affects all state employees. If one group of state employees is raised and another group is not raised, you're going to have a lot more enemies than you have friends; you members of the legislature. It seems to me that you should be very careful; it is quite possible that the two groups involved are entitled to supplemental pay, but, if they are entitled to it, then a two-thirds vote of the legislature is not too much to ask to authorize it. I urge you very strongly to adopt this amendment.

[Amendment rejected: 34-75. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Tobias. . . .the only amendment left was one by Mr. Tobias that I don't think he's going to push real hard which is entitled:

"Section 6.1 Geese

Section 6.1. What is good for the goose is good for the gander."

You want that one, Mr. Tobias?

MR. J. JACKSON

No further amendments.

Further Discussion

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, delegates, I really rise primarily for the record. With regard to the question of divesting vested rights, I contemplated offering a similar proposal again, but I'm not, not because I don't think it's important, but because the staff advise me that they feel like a section of the Bill of Rights that has not been discussed will cover the question of compensation and due process for divesting of vested rights; that section is now numbered Section 15 of the Bill of Rights, "Access to Courts." It provides "all courts shall be open and every person shall have an adequate remedy by due process of law and justice administered without denial, partiality or unreasonable delay for injury to him in his person, property, reputation or other rights." The term "other rights" will certainly be construed to include all vested rights that they cannot be taken without due process, and the concept of justice would certainly require compensation in such cases. So, on that basis and because of the advice of the staff, I'm not going to offer a further amendment in that regard.

[Previous Question ordered on the Proposal.]

MR. LeBLEU

Mr. Chairman, I was going to request Mr. Jackson to close because I had some questions that I wanted to ask him about some of the amendments that were offered on the banking section and I'd just like to get those straight before I vote because I might have to vote against the whole works.

Personal Privilege

Closing

MR. A. JACKSON

Mr. Chairman, I'd like to seek permission to yield at this time to Mr. Roy who handled that section, and I'm sure he would be in a better position to answer the questions.

Questions

MR. LEBLEU

Mr. Roy, Delegate Conroy had the convention adopt an amendment which applied to multi-parish banking institutions. In our area we have one or two banks who have branches in various parishes, and of course, in the parish in which I live if it weren't for that, we just might not even have a bank. I just wondered what the effect of Mr. Conroy's amendment would have on the existing situation.

MR. ROY

I don't think it has any effect on the existing banking situation there, and I'm aware of the fact that the Calcasieu Marine Bank does have multi-parish banking. But the present law exempted it, in any event, Mr. LeBleu. So there's no problem there at all; it was not the intention to have that.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

MRS. ZERVIGON

Chris, what you say confuses me. I didn't think an existing law could supercede the constitution. Is there some other thing that saves Calcasieu Marine?

MR. ROY

The Calcasieu. . . .When the Calcasieu Marine Bank had its multi-parish banking many years ago, subsequently the legislature passed the laws prohibiting statewide branch banking, and where we're prohibiting here. Of course, they had to exclude the Calcasieu Marine Bank because you can't divest people of vested interests. Now, it cannot continue on in the future with other multi-parish banking as it did in the past, and neither can we do that. We can't here today pass an ex post facto provision in this constitution that would deprive vested rights from people. We can say in the future there shall be no more, but we can't certainly take it away by this constitution. That's all I said was that we could not take it away, and it was not the intention to take away. The status quo remains the same, but with respect to future multi-parish branch banking, statewide branch banking, metropolitan banking, or multi-bank holding companies, it would take a two-thirds vote of the legislature.

MRS. ZERVIGON

But you're not saying that a previous statute supercedes the new constitution.

MR. ROY

Oh, no. No, I just said, as a matter of fact, when the legislature passed the act prohibiting multi-bank holding companies and statewide parish branch banking, they had to except the Calcasieu Marine Bank because it was already in existence, and that would have been ex post facto legislation which is contrary to the Bill of Rights provision and contrary to the United States Constitution.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Well, I thought ex post facto legislation was something in which you prosecuted somebody for something he'd done in the past.

MR. ROY

No, it's not restricted to criminal activity only. It's also restricted to civil stuff, that what was legal in the past and what was done, presently becomes illegal. That's ex post facto legislation also.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Well, when the Congress divided up Standard Oil, Standard Oil had been a national company, right? and they made it go into Standard Oil of New Jersey and the various other small portions. It had been legal in the past for Standard Oil to be so large, but under the new monopoly laws, it wasn't legal in the future so they were forced to divest themselves of some of these parts of the company; isn't that so? Could Calcasieu Marine be forced to divest themselves of the banks in other parishes.

MR. ROY

No.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Under what provision of the constitution is that so?

MR. ROY

Well, I just say that we cannot pass ex post facto constitutional provisions that would do away with the Calcasieu Marine Bank. The Standard Oil provision was that they were violating the anti-trust laws of the United States.

108th Days Proceedings—January 4, 1974

MR. DERBES

Mr. Roy, I don't know where your definition of ex post facto laws comes from, but as I understand it--and isn't this not a fact--that a law can be passed with regard to an existing activity, and if the existing activity continues to exist after the passage of the law, the activity becomes unlawful under that law and is not subject to ex post facto challenge; isn't that correct? Isn't that what all of the anti-trust laws are about, Mr. Roy?

MR. ROY

Ex post facto, as my understanding, is that you make illegal what once was legal.

MR. DERBES

What once was--there's a difference between what once was, and what was and continues to be. Don't you understand that?

MR. ROY

I understand that you could...the state could say that there'll be no more selling of alcoholic beverages, and therefore, you couldn't sell it any longer. But, the state, in my judgment, cannot pass a law that takes a legitimate business and makes it--discriminates against that particular business, and no other. There's a difference between a general law and a specific law.

MR. DENNERY

Chris, under the way this section now reads, it says, "No law shall permit metropolitan banking, multi-parish, or statewide branch banking." Now, does that mean that a bank in East Baton Rouge Parish may no longer make loans in West Baton Rouge Parish?

MR. ROY

No, no.

MR. DENNERY

Because it says it prohibits multi-parish banking. And would it also prohibit Shreveport Bank from lending in Caddo, or a New Orleans bank from lending in the metropolitan area of New Orleans because it doesn't say metropolitan branch banking; it says "metropolitan banking"? Now, won't that, therefore, prohibit a local bank from lending money in any parish except the one in which it is authorized originally to do business unless there is a two-thirds vote?

MR. ROY

No, that's not my interpretation of it at all. Metropolitan banking in the industry means a bank that goes out of its parish boundaries, and you contend that this is a now a metropolitan area and you're in several parishes. It will not permit the bank to extend its fingers out into other parishes.

MR. DENNERY

You mean it may not extend by means of a branch, but you don't say a metropolitan branch bank. You say "metropolitan banking," and it seems to me particularly, since right after that you talk about statewide branch banking, that it's quite possible that you have made a distinction, which you did not intend to make. I think it would be perfectly horrible for the State of Louisiana if no bank were permitted to do business at all outside of its own parish. That certainly is not the law now.

MR. ROY

And that's not the intention of it. If you believe that that's what it says, Mr. Dennery, and if it's a serious consideration--I don't see it that way--but if it's serious enough to where that the convention thinks that and that we think we ought to put metropolitan branch banking, I think we ought to do it.

MR. DENNERY

Well, it seems to me that for the record--and particularly for Style and Drafting--you should state specifically what your intention is so that if then we vote in favor of this entire proposal, Style and Drafting will know what the intention of the convention was. Right now, I don't think they can really tell.

Point of Information

MR. WEISS

This is such an unusual committee proposal. Is it possible to divide the question? We have earlier had Article II and Article XII. There are two articles in this proposal, and I would like to know if the question is not divisible on this proposal. I think it should be.

MR. HENRY

No, because I believe under the rules we provide Section by Section, but we have to adopt the entire proposal at one time.

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, in view of Mr. Dennery's concern about this, I guess the thing to do would be to ask for about a five minute recess, and let's put the words in so that there's no question about it, and then bring it back up as more or less a technical amendment; I would think.

Further Discussion

MR. SHANNON

Mr. Chairman, the previous question had been ordered, and Mr. Jackson waived his closing and left it to Mr. Roy.

MR. HENRY

So?

MR. SHANNON

The previous question had been ordered without objection.

MR. HENRY

Yes, sir, but the gentleman has the right to close, Mr. Shannon, and--if you'll just let me finish--if we take a recess, if we do have a problem, I think it might be wiser to take a five minute recess if the problems can be resolved and suspend the rules, and go ahead and make whatever change might need to be made. So, we'll stand at ease for five minutes.

Point of Order

[Quorum Call: 97 delegates present and a quorum. Motion to reconsider the vote by which the Previous Question was ordered on the Proposal adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The amendment would read as follows: (proposed the addition at the present time of a new section.)

On page 2, between lines 19 and 20, add the following:

"Section" (and might as well make it 9 in light of, I think, what Mr. Roy is going to propose if this one is adopted.)

"Section 9. Limitations on Banking

Section 9. No law shall permit" (and watch your copy, here. The word should be inserted "foreign or domestic".) "No law shall permit foreign or domestic"-- (Now some copies have those words slashed in, and some don't.) Should read:

"No law shall permit foreign or domestic multi-bank holding companies or multi-parish branch banking, except by a favorable vote of two-thirds of the elected members of each house of the legislature. This section does not prohibit the continued operation of existing multi-parish banks."

Mr. O'Neill, did you want me to read old section...Now, this is not amending at the present time old Section 9, but you want me to read it anyway?

All right. Section 9, which is presently adopted as amended, reads...Again, this amendment does not amend this; it adds a new section. Section 9, as presently amended reads:

"Section 9. Limitations on Banking

Section 9. No law shall permit foreign or domestic multi-bank holding companies, metropolitan banking, multi-parish or statewide branch banking, except by a favorable vote of two-thirds of the elected members of each house of the legislature."

Now, that's Section 9, as amended, I read the last time.

MR. HENRY

All right. Now, what Mr. Roy has done, though, is to offer an amendment which would, in effect, add a new section.

So this time, Mr. Roy, will you explain your amendment?

Explanation

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, in answer to Mr. Dennery's question, we removed entirely metropolitan banking because we feel...and we also removed entirely statewide branch banking. We feel the prohibition against multi-parish banking would of course include the concept of a metropolitan bank extending its fingers out into another parish and taking up other banks. So, I know Mr. Dennery doesn't like the provision, but in any event, we've accommodated his views on that. The second sentence which says, "This section does not prohibit the continued operation of existing multi-parish banks" is of course to satisfy Mr. LeBleu's position with respect to the Calcasieu Marine Bank, which has been operating several branch banks in parishes for many years. We would move the adoption of it.

108th Days Proceedings—January 4, 1974

Questions

MR. ARNETTE

Chris, when you say multi-parish banks, how do you mean this? In other words, the Calcasieu Marine Bank could put in more branches in more parishes?

MR. ROY

No, when it says that multi-parish branch banking--you omitted the word "branch." There can be no longer any branch banking, multi-parish branch banking, without a two-thirds vote of the legislature.

MR. ARNETTE

But it says this doesn't affect the operation of existing multi-parish banks. In other words, you're exempting Calcasieu Marine Bank from this completely.

MR. ROY

No, the continued operation--the continued--as it's now presently operated.

MR. ARNETTE

So, in other words, they couldn't go into other parishes?

MR. ROY

No. Right.

MR. ARNETTE

Okay, I just want to make this clear for the record.

MR. ROY

Right.

MR. FLORY

Mr. Roy, you inserted the words "foreign or domestic" before multi-bank holding companies. Is it your intent that the term "foreign or domestic" also applies to multi-parish branch banking?

MR. ROY

Yes, sir.

MR. TATE

Mr. Roy, just for legislative intent, when you say "except by favorable vote", you mean by law enacted by favorable vote of two-thirds?

MR. ROY

Right. Yes, sir, Justice.

Mr. Chairman, if there are no further questions...

MR. BURNS

Mr. Roy, as I told you before, I was very much interested in that metropolitan banking wording in your previous amendment. Are you sure that this amendment takes care of that situation?

MR. ROY

Right, Mr. Burns, because, presently, you see a metropolitan bank can, of course, extend its branches within the confines of the parish in any event. So when we put that the prohibition is against multi-parish branch banking, then it doesn't matter what you call it, it can't go into the other parish. It accomplishes the same thing; I've checked it out with the staff and what have you.

MR. HAYES

Mr. Roy, I just wanted to clarify some of this information. I probably tried this this morning, and this question--if I understand--federal banks can operate in the same territory, if I'm correct, we're regulating state banks here; is that correct?

MR. ROY

National banks operate in the state pursuant to state law with respect to branch banking and what have you. Yes, sir.

MR. HAYES

They operate exactly like the state banks. They must abide by this....

MR. ROY

No, no.

MR. HAYES

Okay. The only thing what I want to bring to your attention.... You wouldn't want to tie one dog, and let the another one run a loose. What I'm trying to do is say if we put down some limitations on the state banks, where the national banks can run wild, I don't think you'll be doing justice to the state banks. This is what I'm trying to bring out now. I'm not arguing...Have you taken this into consideration?

MR. ROY

I explained that this morning. My judgment is, of course, that--and I've said that the national banks if they're authorized to engage in multi-bank practices, I'm certain that our legislature to allow state banks to compete is going to allow it to do so. The reason I was opposed to Mr. Dennery's amendment this morning with respect to savings and loans is because federal savings and loans do engage in operations in other parishes within a hundred miles of the principle office. Our state law permits our state savings and loans to do that to compete equally with the federal savings and loans.

MR. HAYES

One more question: Do you have the latitude in here for the state banks to do what the federal banks do?

MR. ROY

By a two-thirds vote of the legislature, yes. But we can't govern federal, national banks in any event. The Congress determines the method by which national banks will operate in the states if it chooses. So far, the Congress has said, "We will abide by the rules of the states in which our national banks are operating."

MR. HAYES

That's not my answer, but thank you.

MR. LEBLEU

Mr. Roy, the sentence that I was interested in this section--and of course that applies only to this new proposed section under this amendment--my question was going to be: Don't you think you should have had Amendment No. 2 which, maybe, should have deleted Section 9?

MR. ROY

Mr. LeBleu, we'll have to come back...if we pass this by the sixty-seven votes, then I have another amendment coming to delete old Section 9 which we had already adopted. This will then be the proposal...This will then go in the proposal to be voted on in the entire matter. This right here.

Are you satisfied that this language is...

MR. LEBLEU

I'm satisfied that this does what I want it to do providing Section 9 is deleted. But we might adopt this and...

MR. ROY

And then we have to go back and delete the old Section 9 which is the thing that we're trying to correct right here.

MR. LEBLEU

What I'm thinking about is what happens if we don't delete Section 9 by another amendment?

MR. ROY

Well, then we've got two sections that are passed that contradict each other. I think if in our wisdom we pass this, then in our wisdom we're going to do away with the other one.

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Roy, if you just wanted to take care of a situation of the question that Mr. LeBleu raised, why did you just not add: "this section does not prohibit the continuing operation of existing multi-parish banks" to your present provisions rather than making a new section and going back and delete the old one. I preferred the language in the old section, myself.

MR. ROY

Well, we had a problem with the question that Mr. Dennery raised that I felt was legitimate on...to the extent that it may bother some people that when you said simply "metropolitan banking", you may have been prohibiting banks in metropolitan areas rather than the concept which we were trying to prohibit except by two-thirds vote, which was a metropolitan bank operating outside of the parish in which it is domiciled. When we then refigured it, we just figured that multi-parish branch banking, the prohibition there, would cover what we tried to do the first time.

108th Days Proceedings—January 4, 1974

That's the only reason. There was a matter of which way to go, Sammy, and we just went this way.

MR. ARNETTE

Chris, I think the problem would be solved a lot better if you have your last sentence read: "This section does not prohibit the continued operation of existing branches of multi-parish banks." Add branches there; that way that the existing multi-parish banks could not add additional branches in other parishes. I think you need to put that word "branches of" in there.

MR. ROY

I disagree. Then, somebody would say, "Well, the only thing you're talking about is the branches and not the main bank." I think this is very clear that it permits the Calcasieu Marine Bank, which is the problem that we have here, to continue to operate as it is presently operating. It's a multi-parish bank; that's what it is. It's not a....

MR. ARNETTE

Right. And you wouldn't prohibit any of their operations by this section. In other words they could go into additional branches in other parishes.

MR. ROY

No, it says "the continued operation of".

MR. ARNETTE

Of existing banks, not of existing branches.

MR. ROY

It can't go into any other parishes under present law. It...

MR. ARNETTE

As long as that law is changed by a majority of the legislature, though, they could.

MR. ROY

No, it can't.

MR. WINCHESTER

Mr. Roy, the part that says...the last sentence that we're talking about. Would that permit the legislature before the constitution is passed to give power to do these things that we're trying now to prohibit?

MR. ROY

I would think so, Mr. Winchester. I'd think that if the legislature meets in '74 and allows multi-parish branch banking that that's it, and I always felt that way. I never felt that if we...I always felt that this constitutional mandate, even without this last sentence, could not have made illegal what the legislature would have been allowing before. But in deference to Mr. Derbes and them, I think that this clearly sets forth what we tried to do.

MR. WINCHESTER

And then this section would not apply until the constitution is adopted; is that right? I mean, this last sentence.

MR. ROY

Your hypothetical case: if the legislature in '74, even with this passed, turns around and makes multi-parish branch banks, and fifty banks go and do that; and then the constitution is adopted, then in the future it would take a two-thirds vote to allow any other bank to do it, but those that would have been operating under the present law, that would have allowed it, would still continue to operate as such.

MR. WINCHESTER

Thank you, sir.

Further Discussion

MR. WEISS

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, we have a chance to correct a very serious problem. I think it's quite obvious now that what we on the committee, that is, two of us, chose to debate within the committee should not have come before this convention, has unfortunately come before the convention with the statement that was made to me that we need not debate it in committee; we can debate it on the floor. Now, for two and a half hours, we've spent time debating the matter which occupies some four hundred and fifty-three pages of statutory law in banks and banking. Now, we have crystallized in this wonderful four or five lines those whole four hundred and fifty-three pages that some special interests are interested in having constitutionalized. It is entirely unnecessary; it is statutory law. It has been told this to Mr. Roy; it has been told to me; and I agree with the Governor of the State of Louisiana who feels that this is not constitutional material on the occasion I had to speak with him some two weeks ago. If you want to assure what this section says and that is: limitations on banking, believe me, vote for it because it will limit banking in the State of Louisiana. Banking like all other major products and services in the country are changing. It's a dynamic situation. It's a situation which is extremely changeable, and it is influenced by politics, and politicians are influenced by banks-- a la Baker, a la Lafayette. There are a few other areas in this state that have been pointed out lately. I'm glad the mayor here has acknowledged he hasn't had much to do with the Baker Bank directly, but nonetheless, it is influencing politics. It is influencing the people of the State of Louisiana, and we are hand-tying in the constitution some preferred special interest operations: namely, multi-bank holding companies which is not even mentioned--much less in our constitution--not even mentioned in the statutory law as far as our researchers have been able to provide me. Furthermore, the multi-parish banking operation is a very complex situation. There is no reason for this to be constitutional law. I hope you will vote down this amendment, and since Mr. Roy has agreed to delete the other section, I hope you will do so after this one is defeated. Then, we can go on with progressive banking and a futuristic constitution which will not lock in certain aspects of banking that most people here are confused about, are not aware of, and it will certainly not eliminate small banks. As a matter of fact, if this passes, I don't see any reason why we couldn't institute a section limiting grocery stores, drug stores, insurance agencies, insurance companies, department stores, law firms, and other such multi-parish operations which are currently in existence and haven't hurt the people of Louisiana one bit. We, in Lake Charles, had one hospital when I went there then; now, three. Believe me, the services in these hospitals have improved tremendously by virtue of competition. The small bank will never lose its place in any of the parishes; I can assure you. There will not be a big Bank of America that will gobble up all of Louisiana. Believe me, our legislators will not allow it. If you have faith in the legislature, fine, but don't make this constitutional law when it's strictly statutory, and then label two-thirds for the legislature to make that decision. I ask that you vote against this section.

Further Discussion

MR. CONROY

I really had wanted to do this just as a question to Dr. Weiss. I had voted against the section as it came up originally, and I still disagree with the concepts. However, I think the section as rewritten now is a far better thing to have in the constitution. The convention has spoken that it wants this in the constitution. I don't think that we would have a chance to go back and correct this section any other way. So, I think the thing to do is to adopt this particular section, and then go back and delete the other one, but I don't think we'll get the votes, Dr. Weiss, to go back and delete the section that was passed unless we first do adopt this. That's my concern about...

Questions

MRS. ZERVIGON

David, when I spoke this morning, I said that I was voting against it because I didn't understand it. I didn't think it had been properly researched; I didn't think we'd put enough thought into it, and it frightened me a little to be doing something like that. Are you sure that we've corrected everything now? If we don't allow ourselves time for phone calls from home, as we have between this morning and this afternoon, how are we going to know we haven't goofed up again?

MR. CONROY

Well, Mary, we may, but I am satisfied that the language that is in this proposed amendment now is far better than what we've had before because it at least does eliminate some questions that puzzled some of us; for example, as to what is metropolitan banking? At least it eliminates that phrase, for example, and puts it strictly on a basis of multi-parish branch banking which I think is understandable. I still feel it may be a mistake, but I'm saying this is far better than what we've done earlier; so I think this is a better thing to have in than what we've got in there right now.

108th Days Proceedings—January 4, 1974

MRS. ZERVIGON

But, isn't it also so that we don't know what the Congress is going to do in the future so we don't know what our competitive position is going to be in the future?

MR. CONROY

Well, yes, that's the reason I didn't think anything should be in the constitution in the first place. As you know I voted against this, but I think that...because it didn't apply to federal banks, didn't apply to homesteads, and it seemed to me to be limiting just to state banks and creating a lack of competition situation I didn't think was appropriate. But, I do think, again, that regardless of all that, the proposal now being made is far better than what we've done, and we should adopt it.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Isn't it also so that it doesn't prohibit, nor does the present law prohibit, a person or a partnership from owning banks in more than one parish?

MR. CONROY

That's correct. Some are presently owned by private individuals in more than one parish.

MRS. ZERVIGON

So, we're protecting the small millionaire from the medium-sized millionaire, but the great big millionaire could go in and gobble them all up; isn't that correct?

MR. CONROY

Well, there is at least one who has several banks.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Mr. Conroy, I was going to....I think you mentioned this; I'll put it in a form of a question. Is that, in other words, what you have here is the opportunity to make it clear that this does not apply to those banks who now have multi-parish banks? As we are not rehashing the issue; we are just simply deciding; in other words, the alternative is to accept what we have now or to get this; is that right?

MR. CONROY

That's my understanding. I think this is better than what we've got right now, clearer as far as what the intent of the convention has been, even though I disagree with that intention.

MR. GRAHAM

Mr. Conroy, are you satisfied that the last sentence of this amendment does prohibit the continued expansion of the multi-parish bank that we presently have into other parishes?

MR. CONROY

Other than the parishes that's in at the present time?

MR. GRAHAM

Right.

MR. CONROY

That's my understanding, yes. I was not as concerned by that part as I was by the first sentence.

MR. WEISS

Delegate Conroy, help me answer this question. I agree with you fully that of the two evils this is the lesser. But, can you help me answer the question: Do two wrongs make a right?

MR. CONROY

No, but we will wind up, hopefully, only with one, not two.

MR. JONES

Dave, you know this provision provides for an exception for the parishes of Allen, Calcasieu, Cameron, or Jefferson Davis insofar as the existence of multi-parish and should be branch banking? I'm not trying to defeat this amendment; I think I've got the sense of the convention. But, wouldn't it be better legally, really, to leave out that last sentence which begins "This section does not prohibit the continued operation of existing multi-parish banks"? I think that you....these people if they are multi-parish banks and they are in existence, they can go into some other parish--this just makes good sense. You can't explain away something that's already on the books. If you try to put it in there, I think you are opening the door for an interpretation that they can....these individual banks that operate in these five parishes in preference to all the other parish branch banks can go throughout the sixty-four parishes of our state and carry on multi-parish branch....banking as it says now.

MR. HENRY

You've exhausted your time.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: 88-24. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Graham, Jones, and Roy amend up amendments at this time. Now the amendments as the amendments were passed out....

Point of Order

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Chairman, I know that on the vote for Mr. Roy's amendment undoubtedly it got enough votes, but I do not believe that it was correctly tabulated. I know that Mr. Singletary told me he did not vote and it came up green; it seems to me we should have a roll call vote on that.

MR. HENRY

Mr. Dennery, we kind of find ourselves in a predicament that the rules don't provide for. I don't think that other vote is going to affect the overall outcome because this section has to be adopted: it has to finally be adopted. If a majority of the delegates desire, we will take a roll call vote, but I think the net effect is going to be the same, Mr. Dennery.

MR. POYNTER

First of all strike out the first amendment and the Graham, Jones, Roy amendment. The only change is in the instructions to make it clear that the amendments are in order at any rate.

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, strike out Convention Floor Amendment No. 1 proposed by Mr. Roy adding a new section, between lines 19 and 20 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Section 9. Limitations of Banking
Section 9. No law shall permit multi-bank holding companies or multi-parish branch banking, unless enacted by two-thirds of the elected members of each house of the legislature. This section shall not prohibit multi-parish banks which were lawfully operating as such prior to January 1, 1974; however, no such bank may extend its operations to any parish in which it was not operating prior to said date unless authorized to do so by a general law enacted by two-thirds of the elected members of each house."

Explanation

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this was in response to Mr. Jones's questions and Mr. Graham's about assuring that maybe the Calcasieu Marine Bank, which operates in some five or six parishes now would not, prior to the law going into effect, be able to start operating in more parishes than it presently is; it's just a much more detailed provision with respect to that; everything else stays the same. I urge the adoption of it.

Questions

MR. DENNERY

Chris, did you deliberately leave out "domestic and foreign" in the first sentence?

MR. ROY

No, Mr. Dennery. I don't know how it got left out unless they grabbed one of the others. It should read after permit "foreign or domestic." I don't know how it got left out; I didn't prepare it, but you're right, Mr. Dennery, that has been adopted all the way through.

MR. HENRY

Did you want to temporarily withdraw it and resubmit it?

MR. ROY

Temporarily withdraw it and resubmit it with the words

108th Days Proceedings—January 4, 1974

"foreign or domestic" after the word "permit," and before the words "multi".

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

All right. The section as amended would read, the only change at all in what's been distributed, first of all the instructions which say: strike out Convention Floor Amendment No. 1 proposed by Mr. Roy adding a new section between lines 19 and 20, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Section 9. Limitations of Banking
Section 9. No law shall permit foreign or domestic multi-bank holding companies", etc. The rest of the text is exactly the same.

Explanation

MR. ROY

With that, Mr. Chairman, I move the previous question on it. I think we have deliberated it all along and since it's going to take a roll call vote....

Questions

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Mr. Roy, in order to make it perfectly clear I was asked by one of the delegates, and I want you to emphasize for the record that the first sentence, "No law shall permit foreign or domestic multi-bank holding companies or multi-parish branch banking, unless enacted by two-thirds" does not mean that one bank cannot conduct business in another bank from another parish from a location in this parish; it simply means that this parish, unless authorized, cannot go into another parish.

MR. ROY

Just bank, unless authorized.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Bank.

MR. ROY

Right; you are absolutely right.

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Roy, you may remember when this came up in committee there was no opportunity for the delegates who served on the committee to discuss this proposal.

MR. ROY

No, I don't remember that, Mr. Jenkins.

MR. JENKINS

Did you know that I was not allowed to even speak on the proposal and that no one else other than you was even allowed to speak on it; did you know that?

MR. ROY

No. I know that we voted to call the question, which is a democratic process and you lost out; the question was called and you stomped out. The next day it was brought up...rather the following Monday it was brought up and the people that you are talking about changed.

MR. HENRY

All right. Now, this is not germane to what we are talking about here. If you gentlemen have got a problem, we ask that you go outside and resolve it.

MR. ROY

You're incorrect.

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, I don't have any problems. The question that I'm asking: Don't you think if this were given adequate committee hearings in advance that we would not be given the problem now of the constant resubmission, withdrawal, and resubmission, and withdrawal of this proposal?

MR. ROY

Mr. Jenkins, we had committee hearings on a Bill of Rights for six months, and when we got over here, we had a heck of a time with it, so in answer to your question, no.

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Roy, why did you set the "as prior to January 1, 1974"? Why it wasn't effective of the date of the passing of the constitution?

MR. ROY

Because, Mrs. Warren, if the banks...if the one bank that presently is allowed to have multi-parish branch banking, if it would, as a result of this, start trying to extend it further--which I didn't contemplate at all--we thought it would be unfair so, we make it as of January 1, 1974, except that the legislature can allow all of it to be done by a two-thirds vote.

MR. KEAN

Mr. Roy, as I understood Mr. Champagne's question, it related to the first sentence in your section. The last sentence says that "however, no such bank may extend its operations to any parish in which it was not operating", you're not talking about there that a bank which was not then operating in a...was not then making loans, for example, in another parish could not make loans in that parish?

MR. ROY

No. We're talking about it may not extend its branch banking operations.

Further Discussion

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I would just like to reiterate my very strong feelings of this morning which have become even stronger during this afternoon. We don't know what we are doing. We don't know the effects of what we are doing. We are pulling and resubmitting, and pulling and resubmitting, and changing a little word here and a little word there which may have vast implications that we don't understand. If we were assured this morning that what we were doing was a good thing, and that it was the present law. Now, we find that we would have abolished a bank that served five parishes very well or at least forced that bank to divest itself of its branches. I urge you to leave this to the legislature where it has been handled very well for years and years; it's not the sort of area we need to get into. I don't know enough about banking. I haven't had the months to study it that have all the other areas of our action, and I'm certain the same is true of many of you. I would like to bring up one more thing. It's been discussed back in my part of the room but never brought to this microphone and I really kind of hesitate to do it because I don't know enough about this either. But, in my part of the convention hall back there, the question has been raised as to whether some of these people that own bank stocks or sit on bank boards should really be voting on this. I don't know what the Code of Ethics says. I know that I'm alright because I don't own bank stocks and I don't sit on a bank board. But, I think maybe we should look into some of this stuff. It frightens me when we act so precipitously than withdraw and act again as precipitously. I'm not certain we have it right yet and that's my reason for voting no. I intend to write a note and stick it in the Journal. Thank you very much.

Further Discussion

MR. WEISS

Fellow delegates, I would only like to point out that the present section as presented to you is in the present statutory law of the State of Louisiana with one exception and that is that it requires a majority of the legislature to make the decision; this says two-thirds of the elected members. Therefore, I see no reason for this to be incorporated in our constitution; it somewhat hamstring, if anything, the intent of those individuals to prevent this by a very peculiar twist that now two-thirds of the legislature rather than the majority are required to vote on this. This is statutory law and not constitutional. I ask you vote against it.

Questions

MR. DENNERY

Dr. Weiss, in reading this second clause here in the last sentence it says "however, no such bank may extend its operations" now, I believe Mr. Roy said that was intended to mean branch banking operations; it doesn't say that; does it?

MR. WEISS

No, it doesn't.

108th Days Proceedings—January 4, 1974

MR. DENNERY

Furthermore, that says that no specific bank may do something unless authorized to do so by a general law. How can a specific bank be authorized by a general law?

MR. WEISS

Well, I asked Mr. Graham that question, I, of course, am not familiar with the technicalities, but his explanation was that it would apply through general laws to all banks. So, it further restricts, as I see, the operation of the state. As Delegate Jackson pointed out, it's going to make it more difficult for the banks in this state who are small multi-parish banks to perform their functions within the realm of the legislature by requiring a two-third vote. I really don't see the intent of this particular section; it simply compounds confusion.

Further Discussion

MR. HAYES

Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this is just merely confusion. This amendment simply presupposed that every parish in this state has equal resources. Some of these parishes don't have anything but deer and rabbit. You have to extend your lines sometime across the lines sometime to get people in order to serve. You can't just stay and hold you at a line that was established for the wagon and the horseback there a long time ago. So, this is all this amendment is doing is trying to restrict everybody within some confines here when they should be permitted to move from one parish to another, if necessary. So, we can't hold a person with a bank in a parish where you have no people. Every parish in this State of Louisiana doesn't have the same identical resources, so I think this is a bad amendment.

[Previous Question ordered. Quorum Call: 95 delegates present and a quorum. Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted: 77-23. Motion for the Previous Question on the Section.]

Point of Information

MR. WEISS

In voting on this section, has the previous Section 9 already been deleted so that in the future on this vote is it a vote for this section alone, or is it a vote to approve or disapprove of this section which allows the other section to remain in?

MR. HENRY

Well, the vote which will transpire now is on this section. If we adopt this section, then we will have two, in effect, Sections 9. I would assume from the tenor of the discussion this afternoon that someone would propose then to delete old Section 9 after the proper procedural motions and palaver has been dispensed with.

MR. WEISS

What happened to this Amendment No. 1? I thought it was included in Amendment No. 2?

MR. HENRY

The amendment before it was offered, was redrawn.

MR. WEISS

Completely?

MR. HENRY

Yes, sir.

[Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 84-24. Motion to reconsider tabled. Motion to suspend the rules to reconsider the vote by which old Section 9 was passed adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Yes, Mr. Chairman I have an amendment.

It simply reads as follows:

(They've not run the distribution copies)

It's simply:

On page 2, delete lines 20 through 24, both inclusive, in their entirety and delete all amendments adopted thereto.

It strikes out old Section 9.

Explanation

MR. ROY

That simply is a procedural amendment to delete old Section 9 so that we can move on to an adoption of the entire proposal.

The old Section 9 that first started all these comments, way back there. If there are no questions, Mr. Chairman, I move the previous....well, if there are no more objections...

MR. DENNERY

I'm just confused, Mr. Chairman, which is not unusual.

Did the amendment we just adopted amend the old Section 9 at all?

MR. HENRY

No, sir.

MR. DENNERY

O.K.

Question

[Amendment adopted without objection. Previous Question ordered on the Proposal. Proposal passed: 81-26. Motion to take up other orders adopted without objection.]

Personal Privilege

MR. JUNEAU

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I have not been aggrieved, but I thought you would be interested in this information. Saving except a few minor provisions which have been adopted by this convention, and a very few, I thought you would be interested to know that as of this time that in the 1921 Constitution, or the constitution we're living under day, there were approximately 240,968 words--that's up to what we're dealing with at this time--and what we have adopted thus far in the proposed constitution is the substantial and enlightening figure of 28,107 words which is a reduction of over eighty-eight percent in words.

[Adjournment to 9:00 o'clock a.m., Saturday, January 5, 1974.]

109th Days Proceedings—January 5, 1974

Saturday, January 5, 1974

ROLL CALL

[69 delegates present and a quorum.]

PRAYER

MR. BURNS

Our Heavenly Father, we thank Thee for seeing us through this week safely. We would ask this morning for Thy continued guidance and direction in all that we do here in this convention. We do this with the full confidence that whatever we do in Thy name, and according to Thy will that our labors will not be in vain. We ask all these things, and offer this prayer in the name of our Savior, Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

READING AND ADOPTION OF THE JOURNAL

PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

[Motion to call Committee Proposal No. 36 from its regular order adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Proposal

MR. POYNTER

Committee Proposal No. 36 as introduced by Delegate Alphonse Jackson, Chairman on behalf of the Committee on the Bill of Rights and Elections, a substitute from Committee Proposal No. 24 by the same gentleman on behalf of the Committee, a proposal relative to constitutional revision.

Mr. Jenkins, did you want some general remarks before I read the first section?

Explanation

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, because this convention has spent more than a year in preparation and work on this new constitution, I think that if there is any article that we ought to be particularly capable of dealing with and informed on, it should be the article on constitutional revision. I think the philosophy of the committee in submitting this proposal to you is not that we are submitting something that we are married to, or that we are defensive about; but something that we have worked on and think would be an improvement over the present law, and which we'd like your help and suggestions on.

As you recall, there are several means of altering or revising a constitution. It can be by amendments initiated in the legislature. Usually this requires a two-thirds vote of the legislature, and submission to the people.

Sometimes, constitutional reform comes about because of a constitutional revision commission. Generally, such a commission initiates a proposal which is sent to the legislature, and then acted upon just as though it were a constitutional amendment. This, of course, occurred several years ago in Louisiana, and is occurring today in the state of Texas.

The third major means of altering a constitution is by a constitutional convention. Constitutional conventions are of different types, of course. Some are limited in their authority; some are unlimited. The limited conventions can propose only certain amendments, or changes in certain fields of endeavor. An unlimited convention, like our own, can propose an entire new constitution. Constitutional conventions can be sovereign or not sovereign. You will recall that the 1921 Constitution was a sovereign convention which meant that it did not have to submit its work to the people for their ratification whereas our convention is not a sovereign convention. We must submit our work to the people for their approval. Also, conventions can be initiated either by the legislature, or directly by the people.

Now, let me, if I may, talk a little bit about this proposal. You'll see that Section 1 of this proposal is essentially the same as our present law. You look in our present constitution, Article XXI, you'll see that one means for revising or altering the 1921 Constitution is provided, and that is by amendments. No method or means, or procedure is established for calling a constitutional convention. That, undoubtedly, is a weakness in our present constitution because there was no guide, there was no formula, there were no procedures established for the calling of this convention. We stand, in fact, perhaps, in something of legal limbo because we are dependent on court decisions in the past to legitimate our existence, rather than constitutional authority contained in the 1921 Constitution, which would give us a logical train of legal connections creating us. If you look at Section 1, you'll see that what we have done, if you compare it to the old constitution, is to shorten that section substantially, and to make, probably, only two real changes in it of any magnitude.

The first change in Section 1 is the change providing that notice of intention of a legislator to introduce a constitutional amendment, has to be published in the official journal of the state before the beginning of the session, the fact that he intends to introduce an amendment, and what the nature of that amendment would be. The reason that this is included is because we feel that there must be some effort to screen, or limit, the number of amendments that are offered. But, none of the proposals for doing that seem to be appropriate other than this one; a strict limitation on the number of amendments seems unworkable because no one, yet, has devised a system for logically deciding which amendments would appear on the ballot, and which would not. Also, the plans that have been tried in other places for certain screening committees in the legislature, saying what can be on the ballot, and what can't, seem to create small tyrannies there, limiting and frustrating the will of the legislature. So, what we've provided in Section 1 is a means whereby we screen proposed amendments by requiring prior thought before they are introduced, so that a legislator has to think at least ten days in advance of the session, before he introduces something. We do this now for local bills; we do it for retirement bills. It has worked well in those areas. If publication is important enough in those areas, certainly it's important enough for constitutional amendments.

The only other major change in Section 1 would be the fact that the present constitution provides that you can only amend one article at a time in a given amendment. We provide that you can change more than one article so long as an amendment is confined to one object.

Section 4 of this proposal is also the same as the present law. Sections 2 and 3 are new. We'll talk about those more as we go along. But, those provide, in Section 2, a means whereby a convention could be called by the legislature, just as this one was called. In Section 3, a means whereby the people have an opportunity to call a convention from time to time. This is a trend which is being adopted in most of the new constitutions being considered around the country. It is a means for providing a frustration factor so that long periods of time will not be allowed to pass, caused by legislative inaction which might prevent people from calling a constitutional convention.

So, with those introductory remarks, I'd like to move that we go on and consider Section 1.

Questions

MR. DENNIS

Woody, did your committee consider any other methods for slowing down, or making more difficult, the amendment process such as the manner in which some states require passage twice by the legislature; by a three-fourths vote; or even require a majority of those voting in an election, instead of voting on the particular amendment? If you did consider these, I'd like to get the thinking of you and the committee as why you did not incorporate some of these ideas into the proposal.

MR. JENKINS

They were....we did consider both of these things quite thoroughly, Judge. The first proposal, and we considered this both in the form of amendments to the text of this proposal, and in the form of delegate proposals. The first idea that you mentioned being the requirement that, say, two sessions of the legislature will have to consider a constitutional amendment. We believe, really, that that first would lead to not more detailed consideration of constitutional proposals, but less, for this reason. We felt that the first time a constitutional amendment came before the legislature, the legislature in all likelihood would take the attitude, "Well, we've got to consider this again next year, anyway, so let's go ahead and pass it this year, and we'll let discussion begin on it. Then we'll consider it next year." So, we felt that the first passage would probably be a formality which would occur automatically without much consideration or discussion. Then, by the time the second year came around, one of two things might happen; either the legislature would say, "Well, we passed it last year. So, it only follows logically that since we all voted for it last year, we need to vote again for it this year." That's one possibility so that it would receive little consideration. The second possibility is that if it does consider....get consideration during that one year, changes and alterations would have to be made in it. But, the only thing is, if a constitutional amendment is passed in one form the first year, and in an amended form the second year, then it is no longer the same proposal exactly. The only real safeguard against having...in favor of the idea of having two successive legislatures consider a proposal is, that the exact same proposal be passed twice. Otherwise, if amendments are allowed, the whole nature of the proposal can be changed or reversed substantially. So, it just seems reasonable that the best thing to do is first to do what we've already done; establish a constitution which is brief, which is flexible, so that a large number of amendments are not needed; so that every time the legislature wants to accomplish a certain end, it doesn't have to go to the people. It can do it itself.

The second thing is to require that before a legislator introduces a proposal, that he gives notice of his intention to do so in advance so that he has thought it out, so that it is not a last minute proposition that he introduces the day, the final date for introducing proposals. You know this happens so often.

Then, the third thing will be for the legislature, because of the constitutional revision process we've gone over for the past year, to realize more and more that they have a responsibility to put on the ballot only those things that are absolutely necessary. Now, that's the reason that we did not consider, and we did not include the....we did consider, but did not include the concept of two successive years passage for constitutional amendments. We recognize, however, that there are some good arguments in favor of that. If it could be made workable, certainly it's worthy of some further consideration, perhaps.

The second proposal is that the people of the state be required, when they vote on an amendment, to vote for it in a majority of the total electors in the state rather than the requirement that a majority of those voting on the amendment pass it. Frankly, that seems completely illogical. For the first place, a small number of voters participate in the amendment process. We don't think...I don't think, that that's necessarily bad, because I think that those who are not participating are generally not informed; that the more we require they participate without some knowledge of it, the less informed judgment they'll make.

The next thing is, if we require that a majority of the total voters approved a proposition, we'd probably never have anything adopted at all; some things that might be fundamental, and they are drastically needed in the state.

The next thing is that elections, historically, by the people, are always decided by a majority of those voting on the proposition—majority rule. It certainly seems reasonable that even if only twenty percent of the voters vote on a proposition, if eleven percent vote for it, and nine percent vote against it, that is pretty indicative of the general sentiment of the public. The public, probably, could be divided that same way. You'd find that fifty-five percent are for it, and forty-five percent are against it. It's caused a great deal of frustration in some states where you'd see maybe one-third of the people, or one-fourth, or one-tenth of the people able to stop a constitutional amendment that would really be needed. So, that's the reason that that wasn't included.

Another consideration is that the reason we've had so many amendments has been the fact, generally, that they've been needed because of the length of our constitution, and the complexity of it. The problem has been in the last few years, passing those amendments. The last thing we need to do is make it more difficult to pass amendments. The thing that we need to make it easier--that we need to somehow do, is to screen amendments to make it less necessary to have amendments. But, when amendments are proposed, not to make it more difficult to pass them at the polls. So, those are the reasons that we did not include in the proposal those two concepts.

MR. AVANT

Woody, I've got a question about Section 2 and Section 3. I'll get the three first because I think I understand it.

That is, every tenth year, at the Congressional election, there will be a proposition on the ballot to whether or not there will be a convention. If the people vote that there will be a convention, then the convention will consist of delegates elected from the representative districts, just like this convention, and then the legislature may provide for not more than twenty-seven appointed delegates.

Now, am I correct?

MR. JENKINS

That's correct, sir.

MR. AVANT

All right. Now. But, on this other deal, if two-thirds of the elected members of each house of the legislature place the proposition on the ballot at some other time, not this ten-year proposition, then, the only proposition, as I understand it, would be whether there will be—whether there will be a convention, and the manner in which that convention will be constituted does not have to appear on the ballot. Is that correct?

MR. JENKINS

I think the way that the section is worded now, that is correct, Jack.

MR. AVANT

If the legislature puts the proposition on the ballot, and they didn't specify, which they would not be required to do, how the convention would be constituted, and the people voted to have the convention, then the legislature could set that convention up any way they saw fit by simple majority vote. Is that correct?

MR. JENKINS

I believe that's correct, Jack. That's right.

For that reason, let me say this, Jack, that in the committee originally, I had inserted in the committee, language in Section 2 just as that in Section 3; that it would have to be a hundred and five elected from the representative districts, and no more than, I think we had fifteen appointed by the governor. However, at the last committee meeting, the committee saw fit to take that out. I objected to that. But, that was the committee decision. I will have an amendment, when it comes to Section 2, on my own behalf, to require that when the legislature submits the question of whether to call a convention to the people, that it specify the composition, term, and duration of the convention. But, that's not the committee position.

MR. BURNS

Mr. Jenkins, I haven't had too many questions asked me by my constituents about this convention. But, do you realize I've had more people express their concern about what steps we are going to take to make it harder in the event that this constitution is adopted, to have a repetition of the same thing to be set in motion again to where we'll still have a flood....a barrage...of amendments? That is really their concern. So, with that in mind, I would suggest that we do everything possible in this article to prevent such a situation occurring. Do you not think that this action that we are going to take now is going to have a great voter appeal?...that you could convince the voters that this same situation is not going to happen again?

MR. JENKINS

I think you're right, Mr. Burns. I think that...I think that when we do this, we have to do only things that make sense. I think that this proposal as we've written it does make sense, and that at first we have a constitution that is pretty basic in nature, and you won't be required to have a lot of amendments.

Second, we've....said here that because of the publication of notice, that you won't have these last minute filings in the legislature, on the last day to introduce legislation, which we've had so many of in the past. I think those things will be the major safeguards.

MR. STINSON

Woody, with reference to the introduction and passage on two consecutive sessions, isn't there a possibility, as you mentioned briefly, that the second session of the legislature they could almost entirely amend it into a new constitutional amendment. Now, if that was done, which could be done with a majority vote, couldn't it?--amendments.

MR. JENKINS

Yes, sir.

MR. STINSON

If it was completely changed in the second session, and the constitutional requirement is that these subject matters be passed in two consecutive....Isn't the question whether it would...be constitutional or not, if it was actually the new substance would only have been passed in one session? Isn't that right? There's a possibility?

MR. JENKINS

I think...that's right, Ford. That creates a problem. I don't know whether it's insurmountable or not. But, that is one of the problems created.

109th Days Proceedings—January 5, 1974

Well, anyway, we're going to have delegates on the committee discuss the individual sections in more detail. So, if I may, I'll let them go on with the beginning of Section 1.

MR. ABRAHAM

Woody, Mr. Avant asked the question that I had, dealing with the makeup of the convention as far as Section 2 and Section 3 is concerned. If I understand your answer correctly, it was deliberately intended by the committee not to have the makeup of the convention the same in both Section 2 and 3. Is that correct?

MR. JENKINS

That's correct.

MR. ABRAHAM

If so, what was the thinking as to why they should not be the same?

MR. JENKINS

It's difficult for me to explain because that was not my position--perhaps some other members of the committee may be able to explain that--but I think that they felt it ought to be left to the legislature and that maybe, particularly, a large convention such as this is not the best way to write a constitution. I think what may have been their main concern was the fact that maybe we have been too large and cumbersome, and the legislature ought to have discretion to make whatever sort of convention they might like to have.

MR. ABRAHAM

Would not the same reasoning apply to Section 3 then? I don't understand why....

MR. JENKINS

No. There is a distinction. The reason the committee--and we did all of these things by narrow votes--but the reason the committee included the number in Section 3, and not in Section 2, is this: Section 3, we think, provides a method to alleviate frustration on the part of the people, to give them a way to control their own destiny. The only way we could do that is to mandate that you have to have the vast majority of the delegates, at any convention called by the people, chosen by the people. We were thinking, in particular: Think of the years when we did not have the one man-one vote principle in this state. The legislature was required to reapportion itself periodically, but did not--certainly not on a population basis--and there was no way, under the law, that really a majority of the people could always control their destiny, because the one man-one vote principle was not being adhered to. This Section 3 provides a means whereby the people, periodically--if they want to--can say: We want a convention that alters some basic things, and we want our elected people to be there.

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

"Section 1. Amendments

Section 1. (A) An amendment to this constitution may be proposed by joint resolution at any session of the legislature, provided that notice of intention to introduce any such joint resolution and a summary thereof shall have been published in the official journal of the state at least ten days before the beginning of the session. If two-thirds of the members elected to each house concur in the resolution...."

Vice Chairman Roy in the Chair

[Motion to waive reading of the Section adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. A. JACKSON

Mr. Chairman, Section 1 of this article is composed of three parts. We'd ask that you would give full consideration to each part because we believe that this is a very important consideration that will enable us to round out a very good document for the people of this state. Now, the new section is not different in a lot of respects from the present constitution. There are some things that we'd like to point out that we believe to be improvements. First of all, in part (A) of this section, there is a requirement that ten days before the legislative session that the proposed constitutional amendment, or the joint resolution that will be introduced, will be published in the official journal ten days prior to the session. Some individuals have said, "Well, why do you want to do this?" Well, we think that this will require members of the legislature to think about the subject and to research the subject, and not to introduce constitutional amendments without giving full consideration to their import. We also believe that this will require that the constitutional amendments that are proposed by way of joint resolutions will be based on need. We believe that this will, in itself, reduce the number of constitutional amendments that will be introduced. We believe that this is a vast improvement over what is presently the practice in this state, by way of amending the constitution. We also would like to point out that we believe, since we have dealt with local government in the manner in which we have, that we will not have as many constitutional amendments as we have had in the past. We think that the considerations that we have before you make sense; that they present to you an orderly procedure in which to amend the constitution. We believe that the parts composing this section will enable us to update our constitution when it's necessary, but will prevent the proliferation of a large number of constitutional amendments.

Mr. Chairman, with those remarks, I would yield to questions, and I know that there are several amendments.

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

The first set of amendments, then, is sent up by Delegates Bergeron and Asseff--a set of three amendments.

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 15, after the word "any" add the word "regular" and on line 19, after the word "if" insert the following: ",during the session and the next succeeding regular session,"

Amendment No. 2. On page 1, line 26, after the word and punctuation "electorate." insert the following: "In emergency situations, an amendment may be proposed by joint resolution at a single session of the legislature pursuant to the above procedures if three-fourths of the members elected to each house concur in the resolution."

Amendment No. 3. On page 1, at the beginning of line 23, insert the words "an explanation of".

Explanation

MR. BERGERON

Mr. Acting Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I'd like to just take a moment right now and extend my congratulations to each and every one of us who are delegates to the Constitutional Convention. Today marks the one-year anniversary that we've been delegates. We've been sworn in, one year. January 5, 1973, we were sworn in as delegates, and this marks a one-year anniversary. I'd also like to say that I think we've worked very hard, and I hope our efforts will be rewarded.

Now, what I'm essentially proposing by my amendment is to provide for two successive terms before an amendment is presented to the people. Now, let me explain the procedure that would occur. First of all, the amendment would be introduced at any regular session of the legislature. It would be voted on and, if passed by two-thirds of both houses, it would lay over for one year. It would then come back the following session, be voted on again, and, if passed again by two-thirds of both houses, will be presented to the people. You know, the biggest qualm I've heard--from going to public information meetings--is that the people do not want to go to the polls, time and time again, and vote on constitutional amendments. Well, that's why they elected us. That's why they elected representatives and senators--that's their job; that's their job. They don't want to be bothered, so to speak; they don't want to have to go to the polls and vote on thirty, forty, and fifty constitutional amendments at a time. You know, we've been here one year today, and it's been the most enjoyable experience of my life; but I think each and every one of you will agree with me that we don't want to be here ten years from now doing the same thing we're doing now. Our present constitution was adopted in 1921. Well, since 1921, we've had five hundred and thirty-six amendments adopted by the people. Let me just give you a few statistics. Since 1962, the people of Louisiana have gone to the voting polls and voted on two hundred and eighty proposed constitutional amendments--two hundred and eighty, in an eleven-year period. Since 1968, which is five years, they have gone to the polls and voted on one hundred and forty-one constitutional amendments. Now, you might say, "Why do you want this amendment to lay over for a year?" What's the main reason? Well, I'll tell you the main reason. I do not feel that the voters of the state have adequate time to really know what they're voting on, under our present system. Sure, it's put in the official journal of the state. The people get to read the proposed constitutional amendment. It's not expressed in laymen's terms. We have the most wonderful system of government in this country, the democratic process, the democratic process. That's the way we run our government. Everyone has a voice in our government--from the working man to the richest man. But, I feel, in order for our government to work well, to work smoothly, the voters of the state have to be informed as to what they're voting on. How can someone vote intelligently if they don't know what's before them? So, consequently, you go into the voting poll, you see forty constitutional amendments; the people try to read them right there; they get flustered and then vote no on every amendment. This one-year period would provide for the amendment to be discussed at civic organizations. Representatives can get together with their constituents, speak at meetings. PAR can send out literature. The League of Women Voters can send out literature and explain to the people what the constitutional amendment will be--what will they be voting on. After this year period is over, the representatives and senators go back to the houses; if they have a consensus from their constituents that they do not particularly care for this constitutional change, well, they'll simply vote no the second go-round. You won't gain your two-thirds vote. Therefore, the people won't have to go to the voting polls and vote on it. My amendment also provides....I might just mention that this is not a new concept. There are sixteen other states in the United States which employ one form or another of this concept, which requires for a year interim period before the amendment is presented to the people. I've also provided that, in emergency situations--some people say, well, what happens if we need an amendment presented to the people right now; it's a state emergency; we have to have it--I provide for a three-fourths vote. If indeed it is an emergency situation, I don't believe that the house or senate would stop the amendment from going to the people. If you'll notice, my third amendment also provides for an explanation--not just printing the proposed amendment--an explanation of what the changes will do, in layman's terms, in layman's terms, so everyone will know how that amendment will affect you. You know, the legislature has, at some times, been called emotional on certain issues. I feel that this interim period of one year will help to solve that problem. I feel that the legislators can go home and talk to their people because, if they don't, what are they here for? They represent the views of their constituents. They act as a mirror to the people they represent. So, I feel, to accurately know what the people want, how they feel on constitutional amendments, this is the best method to obtain the goal. You know, it was said up here earlier that, if an amendment is passed in the first session, laid over for a year, the representatives and senators can come back and completely change the nature of the constitutional amendment. That is not so; that is not so. They may come back and make technical changes, but they cannot substantially change the amendment. Otherwise, it would be a completely different amendment. Well, O. K., what if it's adopted the first time by two-thirds vote, it lays over for a year, they come back, and they realize that the people want a change, and they don't want to let this thing lay over another year? Well, if they realize that, and that's the views of the people, I feel that they will be able to obtain a three-fourths vote; then, it can be presented to the people that year. I daresay that we have tried our hardest and we have tried our best here at the convention. We all realize that there has to be some form of amending the constitution. It has to be a good form for needed change, but I do say--I do say--that we have to guarantee the citizens of this state, no matter how perfect a document we have, that we will not be in the same boat we're in now; that they will not have to come back to the polls, time and time again, and vote on constitutional changes. I feel that's our--my objective and the other gentlemen who offer amendments to this section--I feel that it's an objective of each and every one of us. We have to write in some guarantee that in twenty or thirty years we will not be back here at the Constitutional Convention writing another constitution, because our document which we've....

Explanation continued

MR. BERGERON

Thank you for giving me a little more time. I won't use up the whole five minutes for my explanation; I'll yield to questions. But, you know, you have to look at why we're here now and understand it. We're here because so many constitutional amendments have been added to our constitution--so many changes. They were necessary; yes, they were necessary, but so many proposed constitutional amendments were not necessary. That is the problem. How do we stop the problem? I daresay that this would be the best method of solving the problem. I'll yield to any questions at this time.

Questions

MR. DUVAL

Phillip, I'm starting off with Amendment No. 3, when you insert "an explanation of" the proposed amendment. Now, it's your intent--isn't it?--to have the amendment and the explanation published. Isn't that right?

MR. BERGERON

My intent is to have the amendment and an explanation published so that everyone in the state will be able to read, in layman's terms, what that amendment and change will be.

MR. DUVAL

The way it reads, however--and maybe I'm incorrect; I'm just trying to piece it together--it apparently only requires an explanation of the amendment to be put in, rather than the full amendment, and I don't think you wanted that. I may be mistaken, but that's the way it apparently reads. I think, certainly, the full amendment should be published.

MR. BERGERON

I agree with you, Stan; I think it should be published. I don't know if you agree with me or not; I feel that an explanation is definitely needed.

MR. DUVAL

Right, but the way your amendment reads, you won't have the full amendment published; you'd just have an explanation, and I'm wondering who's going to prepare the explanation. I'd like to see the whole amendment. The way your amendment reads, you just have an explanation without the amendment.

MR. BERGERON

O. K., Stan, if this amendment's passed, if you'd like to offer an amendment, I'd be happy to endorse it with you.

MR. DUVAL

All right. One other thing I wanted to ask you, Phillip, is the emergency provision--that could apply to special session or a regular session; is that correct?

MR. BERGERON

Right. You're correct. No. Excuse me, Stan; I'm sorry. An emergency--the three-fourths vote can be required at any regular session.

MR. DUVAL

Well, that's not what it says, I think; that's not what the amendment says.

MR. BERGERON

"If, during the session and the next succeeding regular session...."

MR. DUVAL

No, no, I'm asking about your emergency provision, your three-fourths emergency provision.

MR. BERGERON

The emergency provision simply requires that, if legislation is needed, it will be obtained--the constitutional amendment will be passed to the people--by a three-fourths vote.

MR. DUVAL

And that could apply, I'm asking you--at a special session, the emergency provision could be passed; is that correct? "At any single session of the legislature," as I recall it.

MR. BERGERON

Yes, you're correct--"any single session"

MR. DUVAL

O. K. What is your intent...What is an emergency? Do you intend for the legislature to define it?

MR. BERGERON

Well, Stan, that's not up to me to decide. If the representatives and senators can get three-fourths vote to pass an amendment, I'm sure it's an emergency.

MR. DUVAL

That's sufficient for you? O. K.

Further Discussion

MR. A. JACKSON

Mr. Vice-Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in opposition to these amendments. While I certainly recognize that this is a very complex question, and I'm sure that there are serious questions in the minds of all of us, I do not believe that this amendment will correct nor improve upon the work of the committee. I say so for the following reasons: First of all, who will stand up in the halls of the legislature and declare that their resolution is not an emergency? If somebody wants a joint resolution passed, they're going to say that it's an emergency. So, we get ourselves into a very difficult situation--if we're trying to limit the number of constitutional amendments--when we say that "in an emergency situation." Oh, I can think of many reasons to set forth to declare that a resolution would constitute an emergency and, therefore, the constitution ought to be revised. Now, we provide for this by simply saying that you can propose a joint resolution at any session--which means that, if the executive branch of this government decides that we have an emergency, and we believe that the executive branch would be in a better position to know whether we had a real emergency, that he could then call the legislature into extraordinary session, and such a joint resolution could be proposed. We believe, then, that we would be dealing with emergencies and we would not have a proliferation of joint resolutions being introduced. Now, the author of this amendment suggested that we ought to have resolutions passed on two occasions---at two sessions of the legislature. He suggested that this was being done in many states. I would suggest that this is correct; but, when you look at the states in which this is required, you will find that they have short, very basic documents--much shorter than even our proposed new constitution. Therefore, they do not have to deal with the changes, and they have the flexibility. As someone has suggested, if you've really got a basic constitution with flexibility and that allows for creativity, you will not have a large number of constitutional amendments. I would suggest to us that, even with the vast improvement that we have, that there will possibly be some need for constitutional amendments. Now, he says that another reason for requiring that we pass it at two succeeding regular sessions is the fact that people will have a chance to study it. Well, if you'll look at the committee's proposal, you will see that we have required that the constitutional amendment would be published in the Official Journal ten days prior to the regular session. If we adopt this new constitution, that would mean that you will have a minimum of five to six months to consider a proposed constitutional amendment. We believe that that's sufficient time because, if you have two years, people are going to forget about the fact that such a constitutional amendment is being offered, and they're not going to study it because they know it has to pass the legislature again. They're not going to give attention to it until the election is almost approaching us, so we do not believe that that is going to allow for any more study than what we have proposed. Therefore, we would ask that you would reject this amendment because we believe that we have presented an orderly fashion for amending the constitution.

109th Days Proceedings—January 5, 1974

Further Discussion

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, I think Mr. Bergeron has an idea worthy of consideration because of the fact that it would allow more consideration than we've had in the past of these proposed amendments. The question I raise is whether or not, by the nature of our work here in reducing the size of the constitution and making it more flexible, we would have already accomplished the first step in meeting that objection and, by secondly providing that a legislator has to know in advance of the session what proposed amendment he's going to introduce, whether that will lead--because of our longer sessions--to more consideration of these proposals. Definitely, you have a problem when you require that exactly the same thing be passed in two sessions, because the benefit of allowing the delay would be to allow public discussion of the issue; but, if in the second session you're not allowed to amend the proposal introduced in the first session, then the public discussion of the issue may not be of value to you. For instance, suppose you had a proposal to set up two boards for higher education--one with board of elementary and secondary education and one for board of regents--and you proposed in your first amendment that both boards would be elective. Then, public discussion during the year indicated that the first board ought to be elective and the second one appointive. Well, you couldn't make that change during the second session and, thus, you would not have benefited from the public discussion. Now, maybe a system could be worked out to allow changes like that. I don't know that it's in the proper form right now to do that, though. So, for that reason, I think there's merit, but perhaps what the committee has come up with, with the notice, etc., would be more workable.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

Questions

MR. BERGERON

Woody, you do realize that technical changes can be made in the second session, and, if there is a consensus by the people of the state that they want the amendment changed in some way, you do realize that it can be changed by a three-fourths vote of the legislature--that amendment--on the second reading.

MR. JENKINS

I'm not aware of how your amendment would allow the technical changes. Maybe you could explain that in your close. To me, it appears that it says that the joint resolution and that would have to be passed in two consecutive sessions and if it has been changed, it's not the same joint resolution. Maybe you could explain that in your close a little bit.

MR. BERGERON

O. K. Well, let me just ask you this last question. If there are needed changes in the amendment, which is passed the first time, it can be obtained by a three-fourth vote of both houses.

MR. JENKINS

Well, you see, that's true, if it's an emergency. The only thing is that two-thirds and three-fourths vote doesn't seem to me to be the distinction because, if you look at proposals that are constitutional amendments, either they are controversial and there is a close vote, or they pass ninety to two, or something like that. I don't see that changing from two-thirds to three-fourths is really a significant change. If you'd have, maybe, a higher percentage, I could see maybe it would be.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Woody, we've cut out of this proposed constitution a lot of the things that used to generate amendments....necessary amendments--judicial, districts, and a lot of the very special local things. Isn't that correct?

MR. JENKINS

That's correct, Mary. In fact, if you would take a list of the last time we had the sixty amendments on the ballot, you'll see that almost all of those were necessary to accomplish the legal end in view. The legislature could not have done them by mere statutes. Those things won't be necessary under the new constitution. I certainly hope and trust the legislature will be responsible enough not to propose things that aren't legally necessary to the end wanted to be accomplished.

MRS. ZERVIGON

But supposing the legislature should goof up ever so often, then the main responsibility lies with the people to vote on anything that isn't really necessary for an amendment to the constitution. Isn't that correct?

MR. JENKINS

Well, that's true.

MRS. ZERVIGON

And, the literature analyzing the amendments by the Public Affairs Research, by the various newspapers, and that sort of thing always specifies whether it's an addition to the constitution which doesn't really need to be there as an amendment or whether it's a change in the present constitution which does need to be there by amendment; isn't that so?

MR. JENKINS

That's correct.

MRS. ZERVIGON

So, perhaps, the people just need to be good citizens and that's the point of this whole new constitution is that the people are going to really need to pay attention to their citizenship obligations; isn't that correct?

MR. JENKINS

That's correct. Oh, another thing about Phil's proposal, despite some of the good things about it is, in the legislature, you know, legislators being political animals, don't like to vote against one another's proposals. I think you'll have a situation where the first time this joint resolution comes up, everyone will hate to vote against it because any time something doesn't have legal effect, you don't want to vote against someone's proposition. I think that would cause a lot of things to be passed that first time that maybe shouldn't be.

MR. PUGH

Mr. Jenkins, under the terms of this amendment, is it not highly possible that you could have an amendment proposed in the fourth year of one legislature; then, it would have to be proposed in the first year of a brand new entirely separate body and, therefore you wouldn't even necessarily have the same people considering the proposed amendment?

109th Days Proceedings—January 5, 1974

MR. JENKINS

Well, that's true. You know in fairness to Phil's proposal, though, this is done in some other states and perhaps there's a way to work this out, Bob. It's not clear to me, though, and it seems like there're some difficulties to it.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Since you have, if this proposal were to pass, a constitutional requirement that it be submitted in two successive terms of the legislature. If the second session was to materially alter it and then it was proposed as a constitutional amendment, you might be doing something that's unconstitutional because you wouldn't be putting it up twice. So, in other words, you might have to go the third time around before the legislature.

MR. JENKINS

I think that's the way I read it; now I might be wrong, Walter. The courts possibly would not interpret it that way if there were just technical changes, but it seems to me that's what it says—that it has to be the same resolution and if one word is different.....

Further Discussion

MR. ASSEFF

Mr. Chairman, delegates, I disagree with Delegate Jenkins and I shall attempt to answer his question. I am interested in a short document which has basic provisions. The proposed constitution will be short, but so was the 1921 Constitution, as adopted. Though I may not agree with what is in the proposal, I do think we should try to keep it short. By a three-fourths vote of the elected members it may be submitted at one session or changed in any manner that the legislature deems necessary. In my opinion, one of the principal problems in Louisiana is the large number of proposed amendments that are submitted to the voters. Eight hundred and two amendments have been submitted since 1922. Look at the 1921 Constitution as it was adopted, '21, you will see that it's about the same size as the one that we will submit. Only about twenty-six percent of the registered voters vote on the amendment. The people simply cannot and will not consider fifty-five amendments at one election; they become confused and defeat them all, including the good ones. I am not sure that anything will reduce the number of proposed amendments except a limit on the number, which may be unrealistic or result in logrolling. Most amendments, whether you like it or not, are proposed routinely. I've watched the legislature for many years. The argument is this: let the people decide. But, the people don't want to decide. They expect the legislature to consider proposals thoroughly and submit only the necessary and important ones. Now, do remember this argument, this point: Many amendments are proposed, not because they are needed to get around a constitutional prohibition—now, remember that—but rather to give constitutional status to a popular fad or concept of the hour in order to protect it against a change by a future legislature. So, regardless of what we do, we are not going to change that. The legislature has tied its own hands—go back and look at the amendments—and apparently the legislature doesn't trust itself; rarely are amendments considered on their merits; I've rarely seen them. It always is, "Let the people decide." The purpose of this proposal is simply to cause the legislature to reconsider the proposed amendments before submitting them and thus result in probably better thought-out amendments. Do bear in mind that by a three-fourths vote you may submit it at one session, so if they've made an error in the original proposal it may be corrected in one session by a three-fourths vote. If you know the legislature at all, you know that if it's an emergency or important....the legislature, you will get the three-fourths vote and that is the only purpose of the amendment. Something must be done, otherwise good amendments are going to be defeated. Please don't tell me that because we have included certain provisions in the constitution, they won't be necessary. I'll let you in on a secret, the amendments weren't necessary under the '21 Constitution but eight hundred and two were submitted and over five hundred adopted. So, please do remember that.

Are there any questions? I do urge you to adopt the amendment and at least give a fighting chance to reducing the burden placed upon the voters who don't want to consider them. Twenty-six percent of the registered voters consider them, that speaks for itself.

Questions

MR. STOVALL

Dr. Asseff, you just stated that you disagree with many provisions in this proposed constitution?

MR. ASSEFF

That is not germane, Reverend Stovall. I simply said whether I agree or disagree is immaterial.

MR. STOVALL

Dr. Asseff, if the constitution is passed and there are many things that you and others disagree with, should not there be some reasonable way whereby the constitution can be amended in the future to correct the things which you and others might disagree with?

MR. ASSEFF

Well, we will by the three-fourths vote and that's one reason, Reverend Stovall, that I want to be in the '76 legislature.

Further Discussion

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I planned to move the previous question, but Mr. Burns said he was going to speak, so I just want to say a couple things. When I came down here I had the same impression about making it tough to amend the constitution because of the number of constitutional amendments we've had. I sat on the committee and proposed several methods of making it tough, one of which was that you would have to have a majority of the people voting in the election to vote on a constitutional amendment or, if less than a majority of the people voted in the general election voted on amendments, it would take a three-fifths vote to pass an amendment—something like Illinois had. We held public meetings on it. The committee was against me almost to a man, and woman, and when we got to the public meetings, CABLE appeared, PAR appeared, the League of Women's Voters appeared and they all said, "Mr. Roy, you got bats in the belfry. If you take out all of the statutory material in the present constitution that you all intend to take out, you are going to obviate the necessity of a lot of amending processes." If you think about it, they said, the constitution is a basic document of this state. It's planned by the people of this state and it ought not to be in the place that it is difficult to amend if an amendment is needed; that's the whole issue. When you're talking about amendatory processes of the basic law of this state, you ought to have a simple method of amending it. With that in mind, I withdrew. I felt that they were right, that I was wrong on it. I made the same argument to Phil; we are good friends about it. But, I think he's wrong; I think Dr. Asseff's wrong. I think that we ought to go ahead and reject these amendments and adopt the section about like it is.

[Motion to limit debate on the Amendment to ten minutes adopted without objection.]

Further Discussion

MR. BURNS

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, as I indicated in my questioning of Mr. Jenkins when he was explaining this entire proposal, that I think this...as far as the voters of the state are concerned, I think this is one of the most important questions we're going to have to decide. I have read or looked over the ten amendments that are on my desk. I can't convince myself that we're going to accomplish the purpose of limiting the future number of amendments that are going to be submitted to the people at every congressional election any other way than by putting a definite maximum on the number of amendments that can be submitted or appear on the ballot at any one election. I'm further convinced and more definitely convinced that the voters of the state are not going to understand it any other way but that they will have the assurance that at no time will they ever be called on to vote on any more than ten amendments, or fifteen amendments, or whatever number that you put on it. I know that we, perhaps most of us, understand all the legislative mechanics that are being submitted from this podium on these different amendments, but, I don't think any of them are going to accomplish that purpose; it might make it harder to get an amendment through the legislative process, but all of you that have been in the legislature and all legislators now—I served in there for four years—and I know there's ways to get these amendments adopted in the legislature; it's about a "you scratch my back and I'll scratch yours" procedure. So, while we might make it harder by the passage of some of these amendments, I don't think it's going to accomplish its final purpose any other way than by putting a definite limitation--and I repeat it again because I think this is all-important--we in the next two weeks are in more or less in the polishing process of making these different articles more acceptable. I think this is one of the most important ones that we can make acceptable or make clear to the people by adopting one of these amendments. I'm not sold on any definite number to be submitted at any one time. But, I am sold on the idea that that's the only way we're ever going to accomplish its purpose, and particularly, the only way the voters of the state are ever going to be...understand it, rather, and be satisfied.

109th Days Proceedings—January 5, 1974

Further Discussion

MR. JACK

Mr. Chairman and members, I am...rise against this amendment. I think I have the proper answer in the floor amendment by myself, Smith, Fulco, Shannon, Asseff, and Mr. Velazquez. The people are tired of having so many amendments to have to consider. Now, I've prepared amendments that read, and will come up a little later, "No more than six proposed amendments shall be submitted to the electors of the state at any one election"--not more than six--"the legislature shall provide the method for selecting which amendments shall be submitted at a particular election. The effective date of this paragraph shall be January 1, 1978." Now, if it turns out when you reach my amendment, you don't like six, the next one's ten, and the last one's fifteen. Personally, I think six is proper. The order of those amendments will be decided by the legislature. The reason the effective date of my amendment will be January 1, 1978 is to give a chance to do any corrective work you may have to have on the constitution; you see, if the constitution is adopted before the general election of November of this year, 1974, you'd have that election, then, you'd have the one in January or February of 1976 and the November, '76; that would give you three times before this was in effect. We've got to limit them, that is the mandate from the people, and this is the people's constitution. Now, the amendment before us just doesn't answer the questions. To begin with, I can't see having to pass a constitutional amendment at two successive sessions and the authors recognize that by talking about in case of an emergency, then they've got a different method, but it takes three-fourths. Now, that's just not proper. I was in the legislature and everybody claims things are emergencies. The governor calls extraordinary sessions as emergencies, whether they are or not. The members...the governor wants a bill, they declare--the governor does--a bill to be an emergency and those things. Now, I think we should do what the people want and to defeat this complicated amendment. Then, when we get over there under Section (C), we'll add my amendment which is (D), so, thank you.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Motion

MR. STAGG

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, at the Clerk's desk there are a dozen amendments pending to this proposal. If we have to call the roll on every vote, we'll be here far beyond the allotted time, until the voting machine is repaired. I would like to suggest to the convention the possibility that we suspend the rules and that we sparingly use record votes and that votes on amendments be permitted by a rising vote; the tally count made by the Clerk could be the accepted count on the failure or passage of each amendment. Mr. Chairman, I move, therefore, that we suspend the rules to permit voting on amendments by a rising vote and that we dispense with record votes except upon the passage of sections or proposals where they are required by the rules.

MR. HENRY

Is what you're moving to do just suspend the rules so that you can't call for a record vote?

MR. STAGG

I had hoped that we could discourage unnecessary record votes and only use those record votes required by the rules and the suspension of the rules is to permit voting by rising vote in order to conserve time which is the biggest problem we have at this moment.

MR. HENRY

Mr. Stagg, just a minute, because I'm trying to get straight. Now, you're not suggesting that the rising or standing vote would be the record vote, are you, Mr. Stagg?

MR. STAGG

No, sir. When someone requires a record vote or when the rules require a record vote, it will unfortunately be necessary to call the roll.

MR. HENRY

All right, Mr. Stagg, Mr. Poynter and I have a different opinion as to what you're trying to do. I'm saying that you are moving to suspend the rules; he believes that you are making a suggestion. Would you clarify that please?

MR. STAGG

Mr. Chairman, I move that we suspend the rules to permit rising votes on amendments and that the roll call be only when a delegate or a proposal is requiring a record vote and that the delegates accept the suggestion that they sparingly call for record votes on matters in which they have a deep, abiding interest or controversy.

Point of Information

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Stagg, I just want to make sure that if we are going to vote by standing, I count as much as you do.

MR. STAGG

You will, Miss Mary, every time.

Point of Information

MR. JENKINS

I was wondering if Mr. Stagg and maybe Mr. Poynter could help us with this. I noticed yesterday when we voted and it didn't seem to tally up there, the lights did come on. Perhaps, we could simply vote and if the lights come on the Clerk and others could check it from the lights while we go on with our business; couldn't we? Could we do something like that?

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Jenkins, even if that would be possible, they are working on the machines so...and trying to fix it, so it wouldn't be possible at the present time.

Point of Information

MR. DE BLIEUX

Point of information, Mr. Chairman. Is there anything in our rules says we can't do what Mr. Stagg wants to do without suspending the rules?

MR. HENRY

No, there's not. We could do it without that, we'd just have to sort of agree not to have record votes with the exception of how our rules already provide.

Questions

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Stagg, you said by a standing vote. What you mean that so many people stand without calling the roll?

MR. STAGG

Yes, Ma'am, that on an amendment those in favor will rise and they will be counted. Then, those opposed will rise and be counted and that will be the deciding vote on those amendments, the dozen of which are now facing us.

MRS. WARREN

All right. Now, in this case, that would mean that every delegate would have to be in his seat?

MR. STAGG

That is correct, Ma'am; it wouldn't work otherwise.

MRS. WARREN

Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Mr. Stagg, I hesitate to suspend the rules at this time, but I would agree to what you want if the majority agrees to that. In other words, I don't like the idea of suspending the rules for various reasons, but I would agree to a standing vote. I think it's a good proposal. I would suggest that you merely ask for a majority to do that and if the majority agrees, I think we could do without suspending the rules.

MR. STAGG

Thank you, Mr. Champagne.

MR. HENRY

Mr. Stagg, I'm still confused with your motion.

Further Discussion

MR. TOBIAS

Mr. Chairman, as I interpret Mr. Stagg's motion, it is a motion for the suspension of the rules for the purpose of making the motion for a record vote out of order.

MR. HENRY

Well, your interpretation is wrong, Mr. Tobias, because he has already said that.

Now, Mr. Stagg....

MR. TOBIAS

...except on sections and proposals...

MR. HENRY

Mr. Stagg, rephrase your motion if you will, I mean, restate your motion?

MR. STAGG

Mr. Chairman, what my motion is, by clarification, is simply that record votes will occur only where the rules require a record vote.

[Motion that record votes be taken only where rules require adopted: 77-34.]

Point of Information

MR. AVANT

Under Mr. Stagg's rule now, I would assume--and tell me if I'm correct--I could move to suspend the rules for anything that might occur to me, and we would have a standing vote; and if two-thirds of the people that stood, without a record vote agreed, then we could suspend the rules further by nonrecord vote standing, and do anything that might pop into one's head.

MR. HENRY

That's just about correct, yes, sir.

Closing

MR. BERGERON

Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'd just like to clarify one point. If the amendment does pass, I will come back with another amendment to make sure that any proposed constitutional amendments will be presented to the people in the form that the amendment will be published, and also an explanation will be published. Ladies and gentlemen, if you feel now that the people of Louisiana have enough time to vote on constitutional amendments, to understand what they mean, and to intelligently vote...cast their vote, yes or no--fine. This is not needed. If you feel that what we've done in the Bill of Rights Committee is enough guarantee to the voters of Louisiana that they will not be to the voting polls voting on thirty, forty and fifty amendments every time--fine. This is not needed. I'm sure you're heard hue and cry as I have. The people do not want to go to the polls and vote on constitutional amendments at every election. If you have not, you have not been listening. Every meeting I attended, people wanted a change. What are you all doing about going and voting on all these constitutional amendments at every election? What are you all doing about that? What kind of changes are you making? Will it guarantee me that I won't have to go and cast a vote on something I really don't know about? Well, if you think that what we have here is enough guarantee, fine; you don't need my amendment. If not, consider voting for it. I think we all have the same goal. We want to leave the decision in the hands of the legislators. That's why they're elected. That's their job. If there is need... change needed in the constitution, let the people vote on it. But, let them have enough time to know what they're voting on. Don't send them blindly into the voting polls not knowing what the subject matter is. That's what the amendment pertains to. I would simply urge that you consider voting and adopting this amendment. Thank you very much.

[Amendment rejected: 34-77. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The first amendment is the Pugh-Casey amendment. Mr. Pugh's name appears first.

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 26, immediately after the word and punctuation "electorate." add the following: "The election shall be statewide and the resolution shall provide for the date on which such election shall be held."

Explanation

MR. PUGH

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, the present constitution provides that a constitutional amendment may be submitted to the electorate at the time at which members of the legislature of the State of Louisiana are elected, or at the time at which members of the House of Representatives in Washington are elected, the only exception to that, and the only time at which a special election can be held is if it's held in relation to education. This amendment provides that the resolution itself shall specify the date on which it is to be submitted to the electorate. It may be submitted a year from the time, two years from the time, or a little more than sixty days from the time that the resolution is passed by the houses here in our legislature. Nowhere in this proposal is there a reference to when these elections will be held relating to constitutional amendments. I'm not unmindful of the fact that there's a proposed election code to be submitted to the legislature and passed by the legislature. Be that as it may, I think it's appropriate that there be a provision within this proposal whereby the legislature in its wisdom can set forth the date on which the election is to be held. In addition to that, there's no provision in this proposal to provide that it's to be a statewide election. I appreciate the fact that the word "electorate" is used, and for that reason, may be construed as being the statewide electorate. However, I think we should specify that the amendment must be passed statewide, and also specify that the resolution which provides for the amendment also specifies the date on which the election is to be held. I'll yield to questions.

Questions

MR. JENKINS

Did you know, Bob, that, of course, since we were silent on this was that the question of the date would be left to the legislature, specifically, as provided by law, and law may be an election code; it may be the revised statutes? But, under the way we have it because we're silent on it, we believe it's provided by law. Do you really think it's workable to provide that the resolution itself would specify the date rather than the other laws of the state?

MR. PUGH

Yes, I do. You know, I've been practicing law about twenty-five years, and I know what has happened to good intentions before, and I'm not satisfied that just because we believe that's the case, that that is, in fact, the case or will so be construed. I'm saying the importance of the submission of a particular issue to the electorate, the legislature knows when they want that amendment, how important it is, and at what time it ought to be submitted to the people. I think it's a tragedy that today you can't amend our constitution except at a general election, and not at a special election unless you go through the subterfuge of dedicating part of the funds for education.

MR. JENKINS

Well, of course, I would have no objection to our providing that special elections can be called by the legislature, but the problem with saying that the joint resolution will set the date is this, isn't it: that a joint resolution is not law until the voters have approved it? We can't very well allow the joint resolution which is not law to have the effect of law by calling...by setting the date for the election on which it's to be considered; don't you think?

MR. PUGH

No, I don't. I don't think whether or not...I don't think law's got anything to do with the date on which you submit this to the people to vote on it. Besides that, my good friend, David, who's smarter than I am, says that's the present law, and I heard him say it earlier, but I knew good and well somebody would ask me where it is, so I didn't say anything about it.

109th Days Proceedings—January 5, 1974

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Pugh, in your amendment is that "said resolution shall provide for the date on which said election shall be held." Suppose there be ten amendments and ten different dates suggested, and how would you handle that situation?

MR. PUGH

You know, I've got to believe that legislators are, you know, grown men, and that they are not going to provide that it's going to be on ten separate days. I just can't believe that, Mr. Hernandez.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Well, even if it was on three separate days...

MR. PUGH

Sir, I can't believe they would do it on three separate days.

MR. HERNANDEZ

All right. Then, which amendment would take precedence, and establish the date on which the election would be held?

MR. PUGH

I'm saying that the resolution that calls for it is the one that specifies the date on which whatever the resolution is it's to be voted on by the people. I say that if the legislature wanted to, they could have one every day. I believe we've got a better chance of having a new legislature after they do that.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Thank you, sir.

MR. STINSON

Bob, don't you think you should put "the joint resolution" instead of just the resolution? You're very technical, and one place we refer to "joint resolution"; one place to "amendment"; and now you say "resolution." It may be someone said, well, it will just have to pass the house or the senate, and not both if you don't put "joint."

MR. PUGH

I certainly have no objection to the use of the word "joint." I think that in its context, it can only refer back to that specific resolution; it's perfectly all right.

MR. STINSON

But, in the place you have been very technical and changed everyone else's. I would suggest that you change yours, too.

MR. PUGH

It has been brought to my attention that this same provision is in fact the present constitution reads, "The legislature shall designate the election at which the said amendment or amendments shall be submitted to the electors for their approval or rejection." The only forward position I'm taking from that is that they actually specify the date because as I said earlier, under the present...under our present constitution, you can't have, regardless of what the crisis may be, you can't have an amendment to our constitution unless you wait till what may be almost two years until these people are elected. I think that's a tragedy.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: 67-25. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

This set of amendments is sent up by Delegates Casey and Pugh. It's the same authors, different order.

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 15, after the word "legislature" change the comma ",", to a period ".".

Amendment No. 2. On page 1, delete lines 16, 17, and 18 in their entirety and on line 19, delete the words and punctuation "beginning of the session."

Explanation

MR. CASEY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, the purpose of this amendment merely is to delete the requirement pertaining to publication in the Official Journal of the State, ten days before the beginning of a legislative session. Publication sounds great for the purpose of giving notice to people generally. But, first of all, the publication required in this particular section indicates that the publication will occur in the Official Journal of the State. First of all, I question the advantage of that to start with. How many people is that really going to notify that a particular constitutional amendment is going to be introduced at the coming session of the legislature? Who's going to pay for the cost of this publication? Legislators, in many cases, receive requests from many of their constituents to introduce legislation. Legislation may be...that type of legislation, it may be necessary to amend the constitution. Now, who's going to pay that? It's not going to be the state. It's either going to be the legislator himself, or the particular constituent who makes the request. It's merely an unnecessary requirement. This requirement, ladies and gentlemen, does not exist today in today's constitution. I understand the motives of the Bill of Rights Committee. I think I understand, anyway, that their motive was that it is a method merely of limiting the number of constitutional amendments. But, the whole purpose of this Constitutional Convention, itself, is to eliminate in the future the number of constitutional amendments that we have had in the past. As you may or may not remember, in the year 1970, when fifty-three constitutional amendments appeared on the ballot, approximately--and I may be wrong on the exact number--but, approximately, twenty-eight of those applied to local government only. Now, I feel through our Local Government Article that we are adopting in this convention, it will eliminate altogether, except for future technical amendments, it will eliminate altogether the need for constitutional amendments affecting local government. Of course, the other purpose of this convention is to eliminate, as far as possible, future constitutional amendments on general law and statutory material that exists in today's constitution. So, we're solving that problem with this particular convention. We're requiring under this constitution a step that is completely unnecessary, and I feel will be burdensome to the constituents of many of our legislators who will handle legislation in the form of constitutional amendments in the future. Absolutely unnecessary. Why not require that every piece of legislation that you introduce in a regular session has to be published? There's not a great amount of difference. Why require it only for constitutional amendments? As you may know--and I may be incorrect on this--the only other publication requirements that are called for on legislation, to my knowledge, are matters affecting retirement systems, and are matters requiring publication in local newspapers where a local government constitutional amendment is being introduced. That's under today's constitution; as I recall or as I understand, it would probably be required under this constitution. This is an unnecessary step; it is burdensome to somebody who has to pay for it. It may be one of you all in this particular group today that's going to have to bear the burden of the cost of the publication. So, please delete this particular requirement. It's absolutely unnecessary.

Questions

MR. DERBES

Mr. Casey, if the material is published in the Official Journal before it's even introduced in the legislature, who pays for the publication?

MR. CASEY

That was exactly one of my points. It either has to be the individual legislator, who is going to handle the legislation, or the constituent, or group that makes the request of you, a legislator, to introduce it.

MR. DERBES

Also, it's not necessarily an official state document at that time, is it?

MR. CASEY

That's absolutely correct.

MR. DERBES

Furthermore, Mr. Casey...

MR. CASEY

It could drastically change by the time the process is taken and gets through the legislature.

MR. DERBES

That was my second question. As a member of the state legislature for several years, what has been your experience with respect to the characteristics of the bills first filed, as is related to their ultimate characteristics when they're finally passed? In what percentage of the times, are they substantially changed?

109th Days Proceedings—January 5, 1974

MR. CASEY

Well, I have to be honest with you that the percentages, that most of them remain pretty much the same, but the point is, they're all subject to change and can accomplish something completely different from the time they were originally introduced in either house of the legislature.

MR. DERBES

Thank you.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Casey, didn't you intend to delete lines 16, 17, and 18, rather than just 17 and 18?

MR. CASEY

Mr. Hernandez, there was a corrected amendment. You may have the wrong amendment. But, the corrected amendment deletes lines 16, 17, 18 and the first part of line 19. So, that has been corrected; and I assume the Clerk has the correction...

MR. HERNANDEZ

Thank you, sir. I just wanted to call it to your attention.

MR. CONROY

Mr. Casey, aren't the restrictions here though, very similar to the restrictions which we did enact already with regard to local and special laws?

MR. CASEY

That's what I had indicated already, Mr. Conroy, that I mentioned only two other instances where publication is required, and that is retirement bills and bills affecting local bills, you might call them.

MR. CONROY

But, this is not greater requirement, or no greater problems than we have with regard to local bills, is it?

MR. CASEY

No, but the point is that the requirement does not exist today. Those other requirements do exist today, and we're adding an additional burden, which I feel is completely unnecessary. We're already eliminating by this convention, the multitudinous constitutional amendments we've had in the past.

MR. CONROY

But, Tom, would there be any restriction on when a resolution to amend the constitution could be adopted or introduced, any effective limitation, if you remove this provision?

MR. CASEY

There is no limitation at all. It would have to go through the session and then be voted on by the people, which is today's process.

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Conroy asked one of the questions that I wanted to ask. But, I'm going back to where the burden would be on that individual legislator. Does each representative of the legislature have an office and a secretary in its respective districts?

MR. CASEY

Mrs. Warren, they are authorized a legislative assistant, and they are authorized to have a legislative office, and they receive reimbursement to the extent of one hundred dollars a month for that office. So, they're authorized to have it. I won't say that all legislators have it.

MRS. WARREN

Well, now, they have that much for that office. Now, do they have a secretary in that office?

MR. CASEY

They are authorized to have a legislative assistant. There's no requirement that the secretary sit in the office. She could maybe work at home, and take care of the business of the legislator if she has a typewriter and whatnot at home, and she uses the telephone there. The mechanics of it are left up to the legislator.

MRS. WARREN

What I'm trying to get at, wouldn't it be possible through the mechanics that they have to get some information and some to their constituencies, through the legislative assistants that they have, whether it's a secretary, or whether they do it in the office?

MR. CASEY

Well, it's certainly possible, but again, I have to be honest and say that the spread of information would certainly...cannot be that extensive. The point is here, I just feel the publication is burdensome and unnecessary that's being required under this section. The legislator can certainly do anything within his prerogative to disclose information to his constituency. How he does it is certainly up to him.

MRS. WARREN

Well, in the event that one doesn't get it to his constituency, would you blame that constituency for voting against the amendments when they came up if they were not knowledgeable of it?

MR. CASEY

Mrs. Warren, I did not honestly understand that question.

MRS. WARREN

I'm saying if the people within the area can't get the information of what's going on, and it's thrown at them real quick, could you blame them for voting against these proposed amendments when they don't have a chance to know what's going on or look into before it happens?

MR. CASEY

Mrs. Warren, I blame, and I have no hesitation in blaming everybody, for not properly informing themselves. If people are going to be responsible voters, I blame them very much for not assuming the responsibility to educate themselves through publications like Public Affairs Research Council on anything they have a responsibility to vote on.

MR. WINCHESTER

Mr. Casey, if the need for a constitutional amendment arose during a session, with the way the section is now written, it could not be considered, could it?

MR. CASEY

Mr. Winchester, you bring out a point, very good point, which I failed to bring up that in many cases, when the legislative session opens, and through discussion between legislators and their constituents, much, much legislation is drafted and originates after the first day of a legislative session; and where a need becomes apparent, and this would eliminate absolutely the possibility of introducing a constitutional amendment after the opening of a legislative session.

MR. WINCHESTER

Thank you.

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Casey, on local laws, who writes the summary? I was wondering under this, who would prepare the summary and the notice of intention?

MR. CASEY

Well, of course, this leaves it wide open. Whoever is going to introduce the legislation, the legislator, I would assume, would have the responsibility for preparing the summary.

MR. DUVAL

But, you don't see the actual bill. It's just a summary prepared by that legislator.

MR. CASEY

That's right. Of course, a summary, as you know, can be somewhat misleading.

MR. FLORY

Mr. Casey, isn't it true we're really talking about two entirely different matters, when you're talking about an advertisement of this type, and then try to relate it to the advertisement of a local and special bill because a local and special bill is to give notice to the local government that something is about to occur that might affect them, and once it's passed by the legislature, they can't do anything about it? But, just to the contrary, after the legislature has acted on a constitutional amendment, the secretary of state is required by the constitution to publish in every official journal in the state, in each parish, before the people vote on it. So, there's no need really for this type of an advertisement.

109th Days Proceedings—January 5, 1974

MR. CASEY

You're absolutely correct, Mr. Flory, and I think you make a very good point.

MR. STINSON

Mr. Casey, we were trying to discourage numerous amendments to the constitution. Your argument is you want to make it easier. Don't you think that the purpose has been explained by the committee spokesman that the ten day is those that will be carefully thought out--not at the last minute be thrown in there and said, well, we are going to pacify some group or somebody---that comes down in the middle of a session and wants one introduced, or within the required time to start with. The purpose of this amendment by the committee is to discourage, except those that are badly needed and thought out in advance, don't you think?

MR. CASEY

Mr. Stinson, there's no doubt about it. I understand the motives of the committee. You are absolutely correct. But, the whole point is, we are eliminating, by this convention we would hope, the necessity of a multitude of constitutional amendments. We hope, through a good, stream-lined constitution that we are going to offer, that there will be, it will be a rarity that we will have constitutional amendments. I think this document in itself is going to, in the future, limit constitutional amendments.

MR. STINSON

But as a experienced member of the legislature, and a public official, you know that it's a hope, but only a hope, because people are still going to run in at every session, like they always have, aren't they?

MR. CASEY

Ford, I agree. We...legislators are certainly human beings, and have a tendency to naturally introduce as much legislation as would please their constituents. You know that, and I know that. But, the point is, it will not be as necessary. The point is, also, it is, you know and I know, much good legislation arises during a legislative session after the first day. By this process, we are eliminating the possibility of good legislation in the form of constitutional amendments which may be very necessary in the future, and which may require, possibly, the calling of a special session after the regular session, just to adopt the constitutional amendments....

MR. STINSON

I agree with you that much good arises during the session. But, doesn't...isn't it a fact that much, much more bad legislation arises during the session?

MR. CASEY

Well, that's open to argument, Ford.

MR. WILLIS

This is a friendly question, Tom. In the legislative article, we have provided similar machinery with respect to laws. In this instance, we are providing...put a question mark to this. Don't you think that this proviso here, that you are seeking to strike out, it limps because it has that word, "a summary thereof"? Now, you may sum up something one way, and I another. We presume we are both reasonable. But that there is a court of last guess that will say that that summary is no good. Therefore, the notice hasn't been given. The...and under due process, and equal protection, and the like, the amendment itself, even if the people approved it is no good.

MR. CASEY

Well, Mr. Willis, that's certainly the point that Mr. Duval touched upon, and which I think Mr. Derbes implied.

MR. WILLIS

Oh, I see.

MR. CASEY

It's certainly open to interpretation as to what your concept and my concept of one particular piece of legislation is. As Mr. Derbes pointed out, it can drastically change...dramatically change from beginning to the final adoption.

MR. WILLIS

I'm taking up and analogizing a summary to head notes of an opinion. Sometimes those head notes don't actually portray what that opinion says.

MR. CASEY

We know that very well in reading the actual cases.

MR. MUNSON

Mr. Casey, Mr. Stinson really asked my question. I would like an opinion from you in regards to the question that he asked you.

Doesn't your amendment, as compared to the proposal as submitted to us, make it easier for the legislature to submit amendments to the people, rather than more difficult?

MR. CASEY

Bob, at the risk of being repetitive, you're absolutely correct. There's no question about it. I honestly admit that it opens the door to the legislature submitting to the people additional constitutional amendments. But, my answer consistently has been the very purpose of this convention is to eliminate the necessity of future constitutional amendments. Our document has so much statutory material, and local government material in it, that it just leads itself to the necessity for multitudinous constitutional amendments. This is being eliminated by this convention, we hope. But, the point is, we at least have to make the normal processes of law easily available to the people. The majority of legislation, as we both know, is developed after the legislature opens, Bob.

MR. GOLDMAN

Delegate Casey, can you tell me whether or not the purpose of this is to inform the public of a proposed constitutional amendment, or to make it harder to propose one?

MR. CASEY

The committee's purpose, Mr. Goldman, I think, was to make it harder and to limit the number of constitutional amendments. But, on the other hand, I question just how many people will be honestly informed by the requirement of the publication in the official journal of the state of a proposed summary of a constitutional amendment.

MR. GOLDMAN

Did you know that I question that, too? If the purpose is also to make it harder, wouldn't it be...make it harder if you required the legislator to put up a thousand dollars with each one of the amendments for the constitution he puts up, and not get it back until the...amendment is either voted down or up?

MR. CASEY

Well, that would be one way of penalizing an individual legislator.

MR. BERGERON

Tom, with the deletion of 16, 17, and 18, and part of 19, looking over Section 1. Comparing it with our present constitution, is it substantially the same process of amending the constitution?

MR. CASEY

Well, first of all, it's substantially the same, as I understand, except that what I'm trying to eliminate is not a requirement contained in today's constitution.

MR. BERGERON

Right. In other words, if we eliminate this, we will have more or less what we have now with the present constitution.

MR. CASEY

As I understand, yes. But I could be subject to correction there.

Further Discussion

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, delegates, I really don't understand why Mr. Casey is so concerned about this. It's the one thing the committee felt was important enough in the present amending process to include to try to rationally restrict the number of amendments offered. If I had any idea that the convention might delete this, frankly, I would have considered Mr. Bergeron's proposal a lot more seriously because I think his provided more consideration than is presently given to the amendment process.

Now, let's be practical and talk about how the amendment process really works. I want to refer you to what Senator Sixty said a couple of months ago. What is the best way to pass a bill, or to pass a joint resolution proposing a constitutional amendment? What is the best way?

The best way is to propose it on the last day for filing bills--to get it to a committee hearing as fast as you can--preferably with little or no notice, and get it to the floor as fast as you can. That's the best way because that's the way it passes. The less people know about it, the more chance it has of passing. Now, the reason we put in this requirement that you advertise in advance is not to give public notice. That wasn't the purpose. It will, it will give all of the people who read the official journal, and keep up with official notices, it will give them notice. But, that's not the purpose. The purpose is to get away from this last minute stuff so that before the session, a legislator has in mind what he's going to propose, and puts in the official journal that he intends to propose it so that he can't get away with his last minute proposal. What does it cost? It costs about six, or eight, or ten dollars. That's what it costs. It will be paid for by the legislator, just like retirement bills and local bills which have to be advertised or proposed right now. That has created no problem--no problem at all. It just requires that people think in advance. This will create no problem, either, except for the folks who want to propose things at the last minute and slide them through.

Now, it's been suggested that this is going to create all sorts of problems when we have emergency situations. I have in front of me the thirty amendments that were on the ballot in 1973. I have, also, in front of me, the fifty-three that were on the ballot in 1970. I want to read you just a few of them. I haven't been able to find once that would have occurred in the first twenty or thirty days of the session; Repeal State Property Tax; Eliminate State Property Tax Relief Fund; Special District Debt Assumption; Property Evaluation for State and Local Taxation; Hurricane Protection; Revision of Article on Elections; Sixty Day Annual Sessions; Civil Service Commission Membership; Women Eligible for Jury Service; Special Elections for Amendments; Civil Service Preference for Viet Nam Veterans; Residency Requirements for Voting; Election of Unopposed Candidate; Paving Assessments in New Orleans; Orleans Parish Levee Boards; City Parish Consolidation in East Baton Rouge; Special Districts in Kenner; oh, you looked up the old one. Civil Service, City Park in New Orleans; Viet Nam Veterans Bonus; Changes in LSU Board; there haven't been any like that in the past. What happens if you have an emergency between sessions which is ninety percent of your days in the year? You wait for the session. Constitutional amendments don't need to be made for emergencies. That's what legislation takes care of. We've already provided all sorts of exceptions, and all sorts of compromises in this constitution, to take care of emergencies. Emergency sessions of the legislature can be called by the governor without any notice at all. We have the special debt requirements that allow you to appropriate money, in effect, without--with only interim approval by the legislature, etc. This is not...this is not even an argument or a factor. Listen, what we are trying to do here is to make sure that before someone comes up with a constitutional amendment in the legislature, he's thought about it in advance enough to put a little ten dollar ad in the State Times in Baton Rouge saying that he intends to, and what the general purpose of that amendment would be, just like he has to do now for retirement bills and local bills. If it's so important for retirement and local bills, it certainly must be important for constitutional amendments. That's the most important thing the legislature does is consider constitutional amendments. But, it hasn't been given proper consideration in the past. It has been a last minute affair too often. So, I urge you to reject this amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. CONROY

I rise in support of the committee proposal, and in strenuous opposition to the amendment to delete the requirement of notice. I think that we have to keep in perspective the mandate that I believe nearly every one of us here received when we were elected, and that was to restrict the way in which this constitution is amended by the legislature, and the number of amendments which are submitted to the people. This notice requirement seems to me to be clearly a provision which is intended to restrict the legislature in permitting it to take up last minute amendments of the constitution. That's the whole point. The point is to prevent exactly what Mr. Casey has suggested should be allowed. It's to prevent it so that the...you cannot get into the situation where the legislature finds itself considering new legislation which somebody notes is in conflict with the existing constitution and then saying, "Well, we can solve that. We'll run through an amendment to the constitution as well."

The whole point is that if this document that we're working on is to mean anything, it should have some stability to it, and not be subject to such last minute changes. If it's going to be changed, there should be notice published before the session so that you cannot get into this possibility.

I disagree, also, with Mr. Casey, as to why the previous constitution was amended so much. It didn't start off as a monumental document in 1921. It was a fairly short document. I haven't seen any tally of the number of words in the original 1921 document, but it was nothing like what we are dealing with right now. Most of what is in the constitution right now was subsequently added by amendments by the legislature, and adopted by the people, it's true. But it...we will be right back where we started if we suggest to the people that no severe restraints are necessary on the legislature. The history of this state has taught us quite to the contrary. We do need these restraints on the legislature. They are necessary. I think this is a very sound proposal that has been made by the committee to require advance notice, again, not so much for the purpose of publication, but to be sure that before the legislature goes into session, that there is some restraint on the number of amendments that can be introduced, considered at that session of the legislature.

I urge you to reject the amendment submitted by Messrs. Casey and Pugh.

I will yield to any questions.

Questions

MR. BURNS

Mr. Conroy, don't you think the objection to this publication...advanced publication...on the grounds it might cost the legislator, or somebody, some money, is one of the best safeguards of protection that there won't be so many amendments introduced in the legislature?

MR. CONROY

Well, I guess it could be considered that way. Actually, Mr. Burns, I consider that such a nominal matter because we're not talking about a huge amount of money there. If we're talking about amending the constitution...there ought to be a few dollars in fee.

MR. BURNS

I'm assuming....if it was a....problem, let me ask you one thing....

MR. CONROY

I don't think it's a problem because it's the same thing you have with local and special elections....

MR. BURNS

One more question. Don't you think that that advance publication will more or less satisfy the voters even though they don't read it, you would at least be able to say that they had the opportunity to inform themselves of what was to be voted on.

MR. CONROY

Well, again, Mr. Burns, I think the most important restraint would be on the legislator itself. Notifying the public would be helpful in that return.

MR. FLORY

Mr. Conroy, maybe I'm a little thick. But, could you explain to me what good it does to publish something in the journal in Baton Rouge if you are going to introduce a constitutional amendment affecting the Ouachita Parish School Board, or the city of New Orleans in the Vieux Carre Commission?

MR. CONROY

The reason, Mr. Flory, is that if you have not published it in advance, you cannot introduce it. The purpose here is to preclude the possibility of it later being thought of and introduced later in the session of the legislature. That's the purpose.

MR. FLORY

Well, if that's the purpose of it, then, why don't you just put an amendment in here saying you can't have constitutional amendments?

MR. CONROY

No, I disagree with that, Mr. Flory, and I'm sure you do, too. There should be constitutional amendments. But, they should be thought out in advance of the session of the legislature, not thought of as last minute things in the legislative session.

MR. HENRY

Will you yield to a question from Dr. Weiss?

MR. WEISS

Delegate Conroy, in this convention over the year, we have experienced sleeping overnight on some of these floor amendments. They have come back considerably improved. Don't you think that ten days is a minimum that should be required for submitting such a proposition, or even considering such amendments to the constitution to the people of the State of Louisiana?

MR. CONROY

I think it's a very modest requirement. I think what we have to keep in mind is that it is somewhat in line with the type of proposition Mr. Bergeron suggested earlier where the thing had to wait over a year. This just requires ten days advance notice, but does preclude last-minute charges to run up a lot of constitutional amendments to submit to the people.

Further Discussion

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in support of this amendment. I'd like to bring to your attention a few statements as to why I think it's important.

First is, one of the things the present provision provides for is notice of the amendment. It doesn't say what type of a notice that has to be published. So, how are you going to determine whether or not that the notice that was published was sufficient for the amendment? After all, there's not too many people that pay very much attention to legal advertisements unless they are particularly interested in that particular phase. So, therefore, if you are going to notify the people about this amendment, you are not going to get it done by requiring a publication at the expense of some legislator or some particular constituent of his that is only interested in that particular amendment. I certainly feel like that maybe there might be a notice published, and then the amendment, as finally enacted, would not be in accordance with the notice, and, therefore, would become unconstitutional because of the fact it wasn't properly published. So, I think you are running into a lot of ramifications. If you want to be sure that there is not the last minute getting through an amendment like Mr. Jenkins said, why not require that the amendment be prefiled ten days before the session? That would take care of the situation. You don't have to say it has to be published in the newspaper, because if you prefile it, and it's open to public, the newspapers will let everybody know there's an amendment filed for that purpose. I certainly think it would get a lot more notoriety than requiring a legal publication of facts that you are going to introduce a proposed amendment. For that particular reason, I certainly feel like this amendment ought to be adopted because it certainly is not going to serve the purpose for which Mr. Jenkins said it would serve. I can tell you that.

I ask you to approve the amendment.

Questions

MR. JENKINS

Senator De Blieux, I'm having difficulty understanding some of your reasoning; your reasoning is right now that if a local bill is advertised in advance of the session, and if a local bill ends up in a different form from the advertisement that it's unconstitutional?

MR. DE BLIEUX

I didn't say that.

MR. JENKINS

Well, you said that's what would happen under this.

MR. DE BLIEUX

I said under the proposed constitutional amendment. It certainly can take an entirely different end than what was intended in the original publication.

MR. JENKINS

Well, isn't it obvious the courts are only going to require...

MR. DE BLIEUX

I certainly think that if you, as your knowledge of law, that you know that it could be if it didn't fulfill the requirements of a notice and be in accordance with the notice that it might... it could end up by being entirely different, and, therefore, would have sufficient publication.

MR. JENKINS

Isn't it obvious that the courts are going to only require that the proposal as introduced substantially conform to the notice and not the proposal as finally passed?

MR. DE BLIEUX

That's what I'm talking about, Mr. Jenkins.

MR. JENKINS

Well, all right, then. If what you said is not correct, is it?

MR. DE BLIEUX

I certainly think it might reflect upon the constitutionality of some issues....

MR. JENKINS

Now, don't you agree that just as I said, the purpose of this is not to give widespread public notice; that the purpose is to be a screening device so that legislators, before they introduce a proposal, will have thought about it before the session, rather than coming up at the last minute with something that nobody knows anything about, and getting a sympathy vote, a personal vote, and passing it out with a two-thirds vote?

MR. DE BLIEUX

If that was your intentions, why didn't you state that it be prefiled, then it would have to be thought out rather than just preadvertised; require the bills of the proposed amendment to be prefiled before the legislature meets, then you can say it was well thought out. But, you can try to publish it in the newspapers, and you know the....

MR. JENKINS

Well, we certainly, if this amendment passes, we'll sure do that, Senator.

MR. DE BLIEUX

....amount that's going to be published in the newspaper has to be small, and, therefore, would not provide the sufficient information as to the whole purport of the amendment.

MR. LEBLEU

Senator De Blieux, I believe the Baton Rouge Morning Advocate is the official journal of the state, isn't it?

MR. DE BLIEUX

That's correct.

MR. LEBLEU

Do you know the statewide circulation of the Baton Rouge Morning Advocate, outside of East Baton Rouge Parish?

MR. DE BLIEUX

No, I don't. It's....it is a fairly wide. But, it certainly does not cover the state as the dew--you might say that.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. CASEY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I would just like to point out some....a very few points why I feel it's important to at least consider the possibility of adopting this amendment, eliminating the necessity of publication in the official journal prior to the introduction in the legislature, of intention to file a constitutional amendment. I think one thing that we have had certainly a problem in in the constitutional convention here is the idea that we have on occasions, maybe over-reacted--over-reacted--to the sentiment of people for constitutional reform. I think this is one of the indications of over-reaction. The purpose of this convention is to eliminate future constitutional amendments. I really don't think that many of them will be necessary in the future. It's an unnecessary burden that we are imposing upon legislators and their constituency. Also, it takes away from legislators, and their constituency that flexibility--that flexibility that is going to be necessary in the future after legislatures convene. Many people then become interested in the legislative process. It is not until then that legislators are contacted by many of their constituency to at least obtain....obtain from their constituency what their needs are. We are eliminating this possibility in the future by imposing an unreasonable burden upon legislators and their constituency. This requirement of ten day notice....people don't get interested in legislative sessions until we convene. Let's face it. That is human nature that that actually happens; that people are not aware of the legislature until we go into session and at least leave the road of the door open to the possibility of a legislator serving his constituency. That is what he is there for. It is his responsibility to introduce legislation. We are, through this method, possibly, just maybe, perhaps taking away the necessary flexibility that is necessary to introduce good legislation...or rather, good constitutional amendments which maybe are necessary to correct an error that we have made here in this convention. That is my mandate.... my mandate is not necessarily to worry only about the number of constitutional amendments that we are going to have in the future. My mandate was to do an intelligent job on this constitution in the hope that in the future we would not have many constitutional amendments, in the hope that we would offer to the people a general governmental document by which our people can operate under. I don't think we should hinder the operation in the future, of the good legislative process that exist today.

I urge adoption of this amendment.

Question

MR. WEISS

Delegate Casey, the representative in my district gets the Morning Advocate, and he reads about it. If there is anything medical that gets by him, I sure would think twice before voting for him for reelection, and tell my friends likewise.

But, there's an inconsistency that I seem to appreciate in your reasoning. I wonder if you'd explain the fact that this is an unrealistic request that legislators keep up with events. Yet, you say, that you don't anticipate many more constitutional revision amendments.

MR. CASEY

As I've stated many times here, I do not anticipate the necessity of many constitutional amendments because we're curing, we hope, the requirement, for instance, for local...for amendments affecting local government. As I said, in the 1972 session there were twenty-eight constitutional amendments that affected local government. We hope that that is being eliminated, and through a good streamlined constitution, we hope we are curing many of the other problems that existed. As you know, many of the state agencies that exist today have been put in the constitution. Take the domed stadium, that's in the constitution, and it really, probably, shouldn't be there, to tell you the truth....

ROLL CALL

[70 delegates present and a quorum.]

PRAYER

MR. HAYNES

Join me as we pray. The God of our Fathers, the God of our eternal goodness we pray that Thou will bless us, and guide us, and protect us. We pray that among other things that we are to achieve out our efforts to write a constitution to make this state better for all people, that we would learn to live as brothers here amongst one another. We pray that Thou would bless the Chairman of this Convention, the governor of this state, the leaders of this state, and the leaders of this land. Help us as we go to perform this important task that we might make Louisiana a state for all of the people that they might have life and have it more abundantly. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

UNFINISHED BUSINESS

PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

MR. POYNTER

Committee Proposal No. 36 is on unfinished business being a proposal introduced by Delegate Alphonse Jackson on behalf of the Committee on Bill of Rights and Elections (Substitute proposal for Committee Proposal No. 24 by the same gentleman on behalf of the Committee on Bill of Rights and Elections.)

A proposal relative to constitutional convention.

The status of the proposal, the convention still holds it under its consideration the first section of that proposal which deals with proposed amendments to the constitution; it also adopted one amendment to that section to date by a suggestion on yesterday that we have been considering the amendments out of an order by paragraph. We still, Mr. Chairman, have a number of amendments pending to this section, in fact, there are a number of amendments still pending to Paragraph (A) of this section.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

To [Paragraph] (A) there is still--though the distribution copies haven't arrived--about ten amendments and at least one more, I'm sure of, that's being typed, I believe, at this present time.

Amendments sent up by Pugh, Flory, A. Landry, and others:

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 16, after the word "that" strike out the remainder of the line and strike out lines 17 and 18 in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "such resolution has been prefiled at least ten days before the"

Explanation

MR. FLORY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, yesterday, as you recall, there was quite a bit of debate and discussion on the question as to the validity of whether or not a constitutional amendment prior to its adoption should have been advertised in the Official Journal of the State of Louisiana prior to its introduction into the legislature. As you recall, that vote for some fifty-three, fifty-two and the language remained in the proposal as it is now. In the discussion it came out that the intent, really, of the committee, as I appreciate it, was to in some way prevent a multiplicity of amendments being submitted on the ballot at a particular election. Mr. Pugh came to me yesterday afternoon and asked me--due to the fact he had to go to Shreveport and might not get back in time to handle an amendment that he had; they were going to advertise it to also require the prefiling. When I got here today, in discussing it with a number of the delegates here, there was some strong sentiment instead of the advertisement that you require instead the prefiling of the resolution itself at least ten days prior to the beginning of the session and that's what the amendment does. I believe it accomplishes what the committee set forth to do in their work in trying to limit the number of constitutional amendments on the ballot. One of the major advantages of this is, of course, that you prefile a resolution as it is. That way, it becomes accessible; the press picks it up and advertises the contents of what it might be and that way the public is made aware of it, the legislators are made aware of it prior to the convening of the session. I think it's a much better approach in limiting the number of amendments on the ballot when they are voted on. I will be happy to answer any questions, Mr. Chairman.

MR. A. JACKSON

I simply want to state, Mr. Chairman, that the committee has no objections to the amendment.

Questions

MR. CONROY

I wondered whether it would be possible during the session to amend the resolution under your provision; it would not, would it?

MR. FLORY

Yes, sir, it would because there is no stipulation saying that it would then...that you could not amend it, all it says that it has to be prefiled, does not in anyway inhibit the legislative process; it's not intended that way, Mr. Conroy.

I move for the adoption, Mr. Chairman.

MR. WILLIS

Mr. Flory, is that in parallel with and provide similar to what the Legislative Article does with respect to laws? Do you understand my question?

MR. FLORY

Yes, sir. I'm not quite sure I can answer it without looking at the Legislative Article because it may be a conflict, I'm not sure, Mr. Willis, in all honesty. I think we have...in the Legislative Article and I'm quoting from memory now "provided for the introduction of bills up to midnight of the fifteen days after the convening of the session." So, we would have to correct that in some fashion.

MR. WILLIS

Do I understand the correct thrust of the amendment to be the sport of fair play by giving timely notice?

MR. FLORY

Yes, sir.

MR. WILLIS

Thank you.

MR. CHATELAIN

Gordon, if during the session of the legislature it was deemed it was necessary perhaps to have an amendment to the constitution, then in this year you couldn't do it, would you have to wait until the next year; is that correct?

MR. FLORY

That's correct...although, at a specially called extraordinary session with sufficient notice to file ten days prior. There is a subsequent amendment to this for consideration to eliminate the extraordinary session from this provision and it would depend upon, of course, the will of the convention.

MR. CHATELAIN

What does it mean, the main thrust of this amendment, and what are we trying to do here? Please clarify.

MR. FLORY

Well, if you recall a debate yesterday centered around the fact that the committee, in their attempt in dividing a proposal was trying to limit in some way the number of amendments submitted to the people and to make it a little more difficult to introduce constitutional amendments and have them then voted on all at one time by the people. There was some sharp division of opinion in the convention as to the wisdom of the process chosen by the committee and saying that it ought to be published in the Official Journal. A lot of people believing there was no necessity of publishing it because it required that a summary be published. The problem being is that if I were going to have something introduced as a constitutional amendment, I could draft the summary, take it to the newspaper, have it inserted in the official journal. Then, not even have an author who is a member of the legislature at that point, so that then when the resolution was actually introduced, and it was amended later on, it was possible that the amendment as amended may not meet the summary that had been filed in the advertisement; so, that you would then have a constitutional question.

MR. O'NEILL

Gordon, of course, you make the distinction between a bill and a joint resolution; I know that. But, just for the record, these... this process, of course, will be subject to all safeguards and the procedures that have been established in the Legislative Article as drafted? ...and, that is your intent?

MR. FLORY

Oh, yea. As for format, etc....it would have to be in possession of each House three days, three readings, that sort of thing a two-thirds of the elected membership, etc.

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Flory, it just occurred to me that possibly there should be some amendment to the proposed amendment that I coauthored with you indicating by whom and with whom the resolution should be pre-filed.

MR. FLORY

Now, I considered that, Mr. Gravel, but as you well know the only way you prefile it...prefile a bill, you prefile it with either House. I think if it affected taxation, I wanted to leave it open to where it would have to go by the Senate and House rules. As you well know, the rules of the House and the rules of the Senate are different, and it was my intent that if it was filed in the Senate it would be filed in accordance with the Senate rule; filed in the House, it would be filed in accordance with the House rules.

MR. GRAVEL

I just was wondering whether, in view of the fact that we are talking about a proposed constitutional amendment, whether there might not be some advantage in requiring that this pre-filing be by a member of the legislature with the secretary of state. We are talking about the constitutional amendment process and this is really mainly for the purpose of giving notice, I believe. If you are satisfied, though, I have no big problem but it does appear to me that the amendment together with the language that is being amended doesn't specifically say "by whom or with whom" this pre-filing should take place.

MR. FLORY

Well, it was my intent that it be done as is now the procedure in pre-filing it with the Clerk of the House and the Secretary of the Senate. I would rather keep it that way because I know of no part that the secretary of state played other than keeping copies of bills that are filed as far as his official function until after such bill has been signed in open session or in session and then by the governor; then is certified by him, it's already been passed; then, his official function takes over.

MR. GRAVEL

Do you have any objection to putting after the word "prefiled", "as provided by law" so there wouldn't be any trouble with this language?

MR. FLORY

No, sir.

MR. GRAVEL

A technical change.

MR. FLORY

None whatsoever, Mr. Gravel. With the permission of the Chair, I would be happy to withdraw it and insert that because I think that was the intent. Certainly, the legislature ought to be able to provide the procedure whereby.....

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Henry, had indicated that maybe either that or "as provided by rule of the legislature" would take care of that. I'm just a little worried about it not being pinned down.

MR. FLORY

Your point is well taken, Mr. Gravel. I would prefer, myself, to put in there "as provided by law" as that would, then, provide uniformity of both Houses. I would like to ask for permission to withdraw it and insert that after re-submission, Mr. Chairman.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Further Discussion

MR. FLORY

In light of the subsequent discussions, I believe it would be better to insert instead "as provided by law", "as provided by the rules of the legislature" so that the Senate could maintain its integrity and how they handle their business. The House could maintain its integrity insofar as the actual mechanics of handling legislation.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The amendment would read, as amended, as follows: "such resolution"—the text of it—"such resolution has been prefiled, in accordance with the rules of the Houses of the legislature, at least ten days before the". Insert between the words "prefiled" and the word "at", this ", in accordance with the rules of the Houses of the legislature,"

Questions

MR. RAYBURN

Is anything in your language that makes it a matter of public record once it's prefiled? Right now, if I prefile a bill and tell them to hold it, I can prefile it and it's not public record unless I release it.

MR. FLORY

There's nothing in here, Senator. It was my understanding that the rules of the legislature were at the stage of discussion of changing the rules to make that public any time it's prefiled. I didn't want to interfere with the legislature because I thought it was something they ought to determine. The House has made that determination, the Senate has not; I didn't want to disrupt the work of the Senate.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The Jenkins amendment was passed out yesterday, reads: On page 1, line 16, immediately after the words "provided that" and before the word--and here this has to be changed, it used to read "notice" but now we've got to say--and before the word "such" added by Convention Floor Amendment No. 1 proposed by Mr. Pugh and others and just adopted, insert the following: ", except with respect to extraordinary sessions,"

Explanation

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, this is introduced in response to a problem that Mr. Casey raised yesterday in some of his discussion. The fact is that under the provisions we provided earlier the governor could call a special session with only five days' notice and in such case it would be impossible for legislators to prepare in advance and prefile or give advanced notice of intention to introduce a constitutional amendment. So, this would make an exception to this general rule for the cases of special sessions so that a constitutional amendment could be introduced, in the case of a special session which generally is called for some emergency reason without this pre-filing. So, I would like to urge the adoption of this amendment.

Questions

MR. ROEMER

Mr. Jenkins, what would be the rule in regard to prefiling with extraordinary sessions now? Would there be a certain time frame? Would it be the same as the governor's call of five days? Would you explain that to me?

MR. JENKINS

Well, my understanding is that there is no law on the subject right now with regard to last days for introducing constitutional amendments; that's the present law for special sessions. There is a, I think, it's the twenty-first day or something like that now for regular sessions. In fact, in a special session any joint resolution would have to be introduced at least five days before the end of the special session because it takes five days to go through both Houses. Generally, most special sessions are about ten days in duration so this would mean that the fifth day, in fact, would be the last day and there would be requirement of prefiling. Generally, those are not prefiled in the case of special sessions.

MR. SMITH

Mr. Jenkins, an extraordinary session, if it's not in the governor's call, would you have a right to introduce a constitutional amendment?

MR. JENKINS

Well, the rules for special sessions would not be affected one way or the other, if it's within the call, you could; if it's not within the call, you could not.

MR. ABRAHAM

As I appreciate it, Woody, by putting this amendment in then it would throw a door open then to anyone to prefile bills on a special session...not a prefile bill, but to have a constitutional amendment during a special session; wouldn't it?

MR. JENKINS

Yes. Anyone could introduce a constitutional amendment that was within the call of the special session without prefiling; that is the intent of it. The reason is that special sessions can be called on five days' notice under normal conditions under the Legislative Article that we have passed and, thus, there would be no ten-day limit that could be met. Second, because in emergency situations under the Legislative Article we have passed, the governor can call a special session with no notice whatsoever. So, it isn't reasonable or logical to require prefiling ten days before a session when we have sessions that can be called normally on five days' notice or with no notice at all in emergency situations.

MR. ABRAHAM

I appreciate that, but we run a risk then of opening the door into a multitude of constitutional amendments...proposals during a special session; would we not?

MR. JENKINS

In practical terms, no, because the call of a special session is always limited and whatever the call deals with would limit the subject matters to such amendments. If it's one to deal with property taxes, then you couldn't have amendments on other matters. So, I don't think in practical terms that it would open the door. I don't know what else we can do, really, because we can't very well require a ten day prefiling in the case of special sessions when you can have them called on lesser notice.

MR. FLORY

Mr. Jenkins, I appreciate what you are trying to do, and I know that you only get sometimes a five day notice in case of an emergency, only a forty-eight hour notice in an extraordinary session. But, let me call your attention to line 15 of the proposed article where it says that "an amendment to this constitution may be proposed by joint resolution at any session of the legislature." Now, in light of that what I believe, what that language means is irrespective of whether it's in the call for an extraordinary session or not that it could be considered and that was one of the safeguards of the ten day prefiling. Now, I think that perhaps we may need to give some more consideration to your approach in extraordinary sessions and say that "only those in the call on that subject matter in the call." I don't think you intend to expand the call to that extent; do you?

MR. JENKINS

No. The intention of the committee was not to allow an amendment on any subject matter to be introduced at any session. It was to say that you can consider constitutional amendments at any session. But, naturally, if it's a special session, this would conform to the same requirements as all other bills because you notice it has to meet the procedures and formalities required for passage of a bill. A bill cannot be passed in a special session unless it's within the call of that session and maybe we need to work on the language to be sure that there's no ambiguity involved. But, the intention is not to open the door on special sessions to...

MR. FLORY

That's the reason I called your attention "at any session" so that we might clean that up.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Mr. Jenkins, do you know that I share the same fear that this thing here may enable the thing that we want to prevent, a flood of amendments and this just might be the place that where they are going to put them all in this special session in the wording that you have. Actually, we have in the Legislative Article a provision that "the legislature shall meet at least once a year"; right, sir?

MR. JENKINS

I'm sorry, sir. What was that last question?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

The legislature in our present article would meet at least once each year; is that right?

MR. JENKINS

That's correct.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Now, I personally believe that's enough for times in which... to have these constitutional amendments proposed and I'm afraid, or do you that I see a possibility of opening the door to all these constitutional amendments in this special session unless on the wording you have, sir.

MR. JENKINS

Well, that's not the intention, Mr. Champagne, and truly I'm trying to help matters here not mess things up. So, if someone would like to come up with some better language or work on that, I would be glad to go along with something that would be clearer. In fact, maybe the best thing to do would be to have a second sentence in the paragraph that would make a specific exception in the case of special sessions. In fact, why don't I withdraw this amendment and I'll get with Mr. Champagne and others and work on that.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Jack sends up amendments which read as follows:
Amendment No. 1. On page 1, between lines 26 and 27, insert the following paragraph:

"No more than ten proposed amendments shall be submitted to the electors of the state at any one election. The legislature shall provide the method for selecting which amendments shall be submitted at a particular election. The effective date of this Paragraph shall be January 1, 1978."

Explanation

MR. JACK

Mr. Chairman and members, yesterday when I was up here on one of those rare occasions and was talking before this microphone I mentioned about the amendment I'm not going to discuss. The people, as you know, are tired of having thirty, forty, and fifty constitutional amendments submitted to them. During my campaign that was one of the promises I made to try to reduce and limit the number. I've given this a lot of study. I've talked to numerous members. While I have three amendments, one would limit it to six; one to ten; and one to fifteen. The overwhelming number of people I've talked to favor ten. Now, if you will listen closely this is a short amendment; it says "on page 1, between lines 26 and 27 insert the following paragraph:

"No more than ten proposed amendments shall be submitted to the electors of the state at any one election."--that limits it to ten amendments or less, not more than ten, at any one election-- The legislature shall provide the method for selecting which amendments shall be submitted at a particular election."--the last sentence—"The effective date of this Paragraph shall be January 1, 1978." Now, the reason for making the date effective January 1, 1978 is, in case, with this new constitution you need some repair work, additions, or deletions by constitutional amendments as we figure you might need in a new document. You would have the general elections in which to do it of November, 1974, the one that's either January or February of 1976, and the November, 1976. As I interpret the amendment passed yesterday--I believe it's Mr. Pugh's--you could have the legislature--in that amendment yesterday--could set dates for constitutional amendments. So, my interpretations are you've got those dates also. Now, the whole purpose of this constitution, the reason we're in session is because the people had clearly shown we cannot operate under the 1921 Constitution as amended. I'm not bad mouthing that constitution; it was good in its day but the day's passed and the people are not going to vote on myriads of constitution. They were mad about it and they defeated all of them the last times out. Now, I say this is a fine amendment. We are writing a constitution for the people. We should limit it to ten. The times out you need a special election, which has nothing to do with this, you do have the machinery by naming a date in the amendment like that amendment that was passed yesterday. If there are any questions, I'll be glad to try to answer them for you.

Questions

MR. CHATELAIN

Mr. Jack, I'm listening very attentively to your argument. It seems to me like that we've been here about a year trying to write a new constitution and this is not very good testimony to our handiwork. It looks like that we're trying to encourage--to me anyway--rather than to discourage and I see unnecessary restriction in the way. Can you explain to me here a further reason for action?

MR. JACK

I don't follow you. Everybody makes errors, but that would just encourage you in it if you knew that you could just submit all you wanted. But, you can't submit all you want because the people are going to defeat them. They are sick and tired of being flooded with amendments. The last time I think there was fifty or sixty and they killed every darn one and before that, they killed nearly all of them. One time they killed even the one that would keep us from getting federal highway funds; it's a serious thing.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Jack, suppose there was a need for more than ten amendments in some type of an emergency situation, what would we do in that type of a circumstance?

MR. JACK

Well, number one, this "provides the legislature shall provide the method for selecting which amendments shall be submitted at a particular election." I don't think we would ever have a legislature, sir, that would put ten other amendments before an emergency amendment; I just can't imagine that. But, as I stated yesterday, there was an amendment passed that provides that the date for the submission of an amendment is put in it and that means you could have even a different election if the legislature so wanted. The present law is that you can't call an emergency election for a constitutional amendment. But, you've got to realize, Mr. Lanier, the 1921 Constitution is just the same situation as the 1921 Ford or Buick; it's just done for, they were both good in their day; now the '21 Buick, of course, has an antique value. But, as far as getting out and going about, it's shot.

MR. LANIER

My second question, Mr. Jack, is that if someone wished to get around the limitation of this proposal, couldn't they lump several different amendments into one or, say, amend an entire article as one amendment in order to get around the limitation that you propose?

MR. JACK

I don't think so. But, you're kind of going on; I can tell you're against this amendment. You're kind of going to have to assume that the legislature is a bunch of crooks....

MR. HENRY

You've got about four more people to find out something....

MR. JACK

Let me get onto the rest because I'll put you down as doubtful.

MR. HENRY

I'm going to put you down as out of time here in a minute, Mr. Jack.

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Jack, I suppose that the . . . your amendment, here, which is to limit to ten amendments, is probably the one that I've heard most about from my constituents. They are all in favor of limiting the number of amendments. I'm worried, however, sir, that your amendment doesn't go far enough, because I can conceive that a legislature might provide for, say, thirty amendments. In each resolution, they would say that the first ten will be voted on on this election, and the next ten, two weeks later and the next ten, two weeks later, so that under your amendment, you could still have this flood of amendments. Now, don't you think it would be wiser to say something to the effect that "No more than ten amendments shall be submitted as a result of any one session of the legislature"?

MR. JACK

Well, let's do it this way: let's pass this, and then I'll be glad to join you on an amendment. That's the only way I know to do it. I'll be glad to talk to you if you'll come up and let's go over that.

MR. O'NEILL

Mr. Jack, do you think this might encourage the legislature to pass ten amendments a year and try and fill the limit, so to speak?

MR. JACK

No, I don't think it will cut any ice one way or the other. If they can read the handwriting on the wall, this ought to kind of make them leery of passing them because the people are sick and tired of it. This little thing is a vital thing to passing this constitution, up my way.

MR. STINSON

Mr. Jack. . .

MR. JACK

I know that's unfriendly, but go ahead.

MR. STINSON

Well, yes, sir, I'm against it. But, your argument is the fact that they voted them down before. Well, you've never said that they did wrong by voting them down because we've existed and prospered by them being voted down. Maybe you think it is right....

MR. JACK

I thought some of them were good, Mr. Stinson, they voted down.

MR. STINSON

You had a lot--in the legislature, you've had a lot of good bills that were voted down, too, haven't you?

MR. JACK

I have, but I don't know about you.

MR. STINSON

I said you. . . all of us.

Mr. Jack, my main objection to your. . . is that who is going to determine the ten? I know the answer--the governor or the administration is going to control the ten and not necessarily the merits of the ten that are. . .

MR. JACK

Mr. Stinson, time is nearly out and somebody wants to... Mr. Lanier--I put him down.... you and I have discussed it so that I concluded, after a lot of deliberation long ago, you are against it, and there's no way I can...

MR. STINSON

But you know why.

Further Discussion

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, let me say that I concur in what Mr. Jack is trying to do here. I attempted that some twenty years ago, some eighteen years ago, and some sixteen years ago in the legislature. I sought, as chairman of a committee of the legislature, to try to come up with a reasonable number of constitutional amendments that could be placed on the ballot at any one election. The committee made some recommendations. But, we got in the most furor in the legislature as to how you were going to determine priority, whose amendment was going to get on the ballot, and whose was going to be left off. Well, the governor liked it and said "put it on" and didn't like mine and says "take it off." I'm just giving you this food for thought because I've been up and down this road, time and time again. I think Mr. Jack was in the legislature when I attempted this one time. I'm pretty sure Mr. Stinson was there. But, we've caused a state of confusion in the legislature as to how will you determine what proposition will go on the ballot if you're going to have eight or ten or twelve or six, and we were unable to ever get anything passed by the legislature, so finally I just gave up and said let the people decide. Well, they finally went to deciding. They voted against most every one in the last year or two that they've had a chance to vote on. I don't know the solution, but I'm afraid that this solution has no business in our constitution. I'll tell you why. We might make enough mistakes in this constitution trying to re-write it, then we'll have to put more than ten the next time around on the ballot to try to correct something that we've done that needs correcting. I'm not saying that will happen, but it could easily happen. It happens here every day. We change it every day we meet. We go back and rewrite it and add to it and take from it, and certainly, some of that's going to happen to the final product that this body adopts. Believe me, if you're around, you'll know that I'm telling something that's fixing to happen, and if it does happen, I'd hate to see our hands tied where we couldn't correct it. I for one am willing to just let the people speak on them. I've tried to limit. I've tried it time and time again in the legislature but so far we have never been able to come up with a number that would work. Suppose you have twenty-five proposals--or thirty-five which we have had--who's going to determine what ten will be placed on the ballot? If you've ever seen any political politicking going on from the governor right on down, that's the best way I know to see it go on. The one that's kind of in gethis on the ballot, and those that are out will just have to do the best they can. I just wanted to give you the benefit of some of the knowledge that I've had trying to do this very thing in the legislature, and there's some of these old heads here that know about what I'm talking about, because they were in the legislature when we attempted it.

Questions

MR. JACK

Mr. Rayburn, I'm an old head. I'm so old from being back here I didn't even know where this newfangled mike was then. Now, you used that expression "hands tied." I'm going to use one of yours. You like them wild hogs; you mean "hog-tied;" is that right?

MR. RAYBURN

Well, it's bound to be tied regardless of how you get it tied, Mr. Jack.

MR. JACK

Now, another one here about the time element--if you read my amendment, you would see the effective date of this paragraph shall be January 1, 1978. That has three years--three general elections--to do with our work on the constitution, for the legislature who, I think, can work out things. I was there twenty-four years, beginning in 1940; I didn't find them all that confused. They are a political body. But, if I ever saw confusion in this country...I'm sixty-six...it's been operating under confusion, city, state, and federal ever since I was big enough to read and write. If we're going to not pass laws because confusion is going on, I don't know when we're going to pass them; do you?

MR. RAYBURN

What's your question, Mr. Jack? I'll attempt to answer it.

MR. JACK

What I'm talking about: Do you think we should quit passing new laws until the confusion is over?

MR. RAYBURN

No, sir, I don't think that, but I did want to just briefly tell you how I feel about this amendment, that we have attempted that for many years in the past in the legislature and we could never get off the ground with it. I certainly would like to see some limit--some workable limit--placed on the amount of the amendments. I don't have the answer for it; I'll be honest with you.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Senator, as you pointed out, though, if we set the number in the constitution, then the only problem in the legislature would be to decide who's first and who's last; right?

MR. RAYBURN

That's true; unless they submitted one, too, and changed that.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Yes, sir. But, you do agree that if we set the number, it would only be who gets in there; that would be the only problem; right?

MR. RAYBURN

That's true, Mr. Champagne. It would be who would be the best maneuverer ...

Further Discussion

MR. TOBIAS

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I agree with what Mr. Jack is trying to do, but I don't believe that his solution is a workable solution. First of all: Suppose the legislature proposes forty amendments and we have this provision that no more than ten proposed amendments shall be submitted to the electors of the state at any one election, it would still be possible for the legislature to submit forty amendments by simply either lumping them together and having you vote on, say, three in one vote, or have an election each day--ten a day--because that's a separate election. All you're doing is adding to the cost. It's just not workable. I for one do not believe that what we're drafting is going to be a perfect document; we have made mistakes. But, I don't know what all the mistakes are, and I think that to set a limit of January 1, 1978 may not be a long enough period of time. I think that the flexibility is needed; it's unfortunate. I will also point out that even if more than ten amendments were submitted to the voters at one election and the people ratified more than ten amendments, that they would still be valid on the same basis that the constitution that we are presenting to the people would still be valid because the people will have spoken after the legislature had proposed.

I urge the rejection of the amendment. I do not know of any workable solution. Mr. Chairman, how many speakers are there on the list?

MR. HENRY

There're six more.

MR. TOBIAS

Then, I'll move to limit debate to thirty minutes.

[Motion to limit debate on the Amendment to thirty minutes rejected: 40-63.]

Question

MR. BERGERON

Max, can you foresee that if this were adopted, the first proposed constitutional amendment would be to raise the number of constitutional amendments?

MR. TOBIAS

Very likely.

Further Discussion

MR. DE BLIEUX

The best way that I know of to eliminate the necessity for amending the constitution is not clutter up the constitution with a lot of needless legislation. I know it's late in the day--and I'm speaking about the total time that we have been debating this constitution--to start trying to correct that situation now, but as you may believe, I think that we have a lot of legislation, unnecessary legislation, contained in this constitution. As a result of that, I foresee the time that whenever we started working with this constitution we are going to need more than ten amendments to clean it up. I might say some of the things that Mr. Jack has proposed here may require some amendments to do that. I just feel like that the argument, the confusion, the time it would take trying to decide who's going to get his amendment on, and which amendments are going to be submitted and which ones are going to be left off, will get us in a lot more confusion, take a lot more time and effort than it would be in trying to get through the legislature the constitutional amendment itself. I might suggest this to you, that if we continue having our constitutional amendments proposed at elections for each congressional election, you really will only have one congressional election between now and the time when this particular provision would go into effect wherein that you could see whether or not you needed amendments to the constitution, and that would be the election that would be held in 1976. If this proposed constitution is not adopted and put into effect until the congressional election of this year, then certainly the '74 election will be gone and out of the way. Then say you'd have the election in '76, and on January 1, 1978 then you would have the limitation, so you'd only have one election between now and that time. I certainly don't believe that the constitution would be law and in effect long enough for us to determine whether or not that we have done a real good job in putting together a new constitution or whether or not we will need more than ten amendments in order to clear it up. I just have an idea from my standpoint, my experience in practice as an attorney, that we are going to have a lot of cleaning up to do as the years go by in this, and therefore, we may have need of more than ten amendments. For that particular reason, I think that it would be a bad amendment to place in the constitution, particularly at this particular time. Now, I would think that we could find some other method of reducing the number of amendments proposed rather than sticking something else like this in the constitution, which might require a constitutional amendment in order to eliminate this limitation to do the very thing which Mr. Jack spoke about. Therefore, Mr. Jack, you can put me down as doubtful on this amendment, I can assure you.

Questions

MR. CASEY

Senator De Blieux, you were practicing law when the... supposedly the new Code of Civil Procedure was enacted, were you not?

MR. DE BLIEUX

That's correct.

MR. CASEY

In the late 1950's.

MR. DE BLIEUX

That's right.

MR. CASEY

Isn't it a fact that today in every legislative session we're correcting errors in that particular code even though it's been in effect already some fifteen years?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Twenty years.

MR. CASEY

Twenty years.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Yes. We are doing that, Mr. Casey, and I would say that the bills we have making the corrections are more than ten each session of the legislature.

MR. ULLO

Senator De Blieux, don't you think we have a mandate from the people that they don't want all these amendments, and don't you feel that it's much more important for us to pass the new constitution than to think about cleaning it up at the present time?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Dr. Ullo, you might be right. We had a mandate--- I thought we had a mandate to start our work too, on that, but it seemed to me a lot of people thought they had a mandate to attack a lot of stuff in the constitution which is going to cause constitutional amendments. If we had left out a lot of this legislative garbage, I just... it wouldn't be necessary.

Further Discussion

MR. GUARISCO

Before I begin my remarks, I'd just like to say that I do resent persons who come to this microphone--and in particular, one person--who comes to the microphone and speaks for or against an amendment, and after he makes his verbal garbage speech, moves to limit debate on everybody else.

I speak in favor of the Jack amendment. Mr. Rayburn spoke against it. It's here not to put limitations in the constitution insofar as constitutional amendments, but unfortunately, we're supposedly here to atone for the alleged sins of the 1920 Convention, and that's just one law right now. Now, everybody realizes that if we do our job here and I think we have--in especially the local government area--then the necessity for constitutional amendments or carte blanche authority by the legislature will not be necessary. Some sixty-five percent of all constitutional amendments since '21 have been to the local government action--those things that were purely local government in nature but had to be voted on by the state in general. Now, I think we need some selling features for this constitution, and one of the selling features--and I think it's a positive one--to go back to the people and say "Look, remember all those amendments that you turned down, the ten out of ninety-four that you passed, the eighty-four that failed in the last few years, it proves that you did not want all those amendments on the ballot." If you can show the people that they will not have to vote on all those amendments, then it might be somewhat of a selling feature or a positive action on our part. Now, I know and I think the best argument that's been given has been given by Senator Rayburn that those amendments are going to get on the ballot and who's got the strength over here to put their particular items on the ballot is important, and I think that's probably one of the best arguments. But, I think it's offset by the fact that if Senator Rayburn or members of the legislature feel like they're going to have carte blanche authority and they overload this thing again with forty, fifty, sixty amendments, then it's a shame because the people are probably going to vote all of them down so the good ones, again, won't pass. So, I don't think they'd be accomplishing anything. Before this convention was called, there was a constitutional revision committee that put what was supposedly good amendments on the ballot. The Louisiana Constitutional Revision Committee had good amendments, but those also failed. So, the people were completely fed up with all those amendments.

Now, by limiting the amendments, another argument that I think we can make, if the legislature is going to have only ten maximum, then I think they're going to be a little more judicious in what sort of amendments they place on the ballot. I also think that, and I know, that many, many, many amendments were poorly drafted in nature, that is, they didn't even have the efficacy of some of the bills that passed through the legislature. It was very easy to pass an amendment. In fact, I think Mr. Jack told me that it's easier to pass a constitutional amendment through the legislature than an ordinary bill. So, if we're going to overload this thing, we don't have very much faith in what we're doing here today. I have a lot of faith in what we've done. If the legislature just overloads this thing anyway, or puts things on the ballot to try to trick the people, I think they're going to pay for it at the ballot box.

I'll yield to any questions.

Questions

MR. ROEMER

Tony, the speaker prior to you talked about cleaning up the document, and I think that there probably are some things that we're going to find that we need to have the legislature clean up on our behalf in the years ahead. Don't you agree that Mr. Jack allows the flexibility to do that by not putting this into effect until 1978?

MR. GUARISCO

Absolutely.

MR. ROEMER

Don't you furthermore agree that when you talk about the loose phrase "cleaning up," what's cleaning up to one person is undoing to another? I think if we left this thing open to amendments willy-nilly, that we might find out that a lot of this clean up attempt is just an intent to circumvent some of the things that we tried to do here.

MR. GUARISCO

I think you are absolutely right, Delegate Roemer. What some people already have in mind, there's no doubt in my mind, that they're going to rewrite this constitution by amendment just as soon as we finish.

110th Days Proceedings—January 6, 1974

Yield to another question.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Guarisco, do you recognize the fact that the present constitution having been in effect for fifty years that it has had seven hundred and thirty amendments proposed in that period of time?

MR. GUARISCO

I think six hundred and something; yes, sir.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Do you know that the average has been better than fifteen amendments per year? Now, of course, we only vote every two years on that, which means that we have had an average of approximately thirty amendments per year on that--on the constitution.

MR. GUARISCO

That's probably correct.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Now, so you mean to say that when we get through here with all the stuff that we have put in this constitution we will not have to amend it any?

MR. GUARISCO

Oh, I don't say that at all, Senator De Blieux. I'm sure they'll have amendments, but only those amendments that are judicially considered and not just willy-nilly carte blanche just adding amendments to have amendments. Let the people decide, so to speak. The people don't want to decide all those issues.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, do you recognize the fact that. . .

MR. HENRY

The gentleman has exceeded his time, Senator.

Further Discussion

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman and delegates, we have three things that prevent numerous constitutional amendments in action in the State of Louisiana. One in the constitution, and two as just the social dynamics of what's going on right now. In the first place, many of the things that have generated amendments in the past needed constitutional amendments, we've taken out. The minute description of judicial districts was the main generator of a lot of amendments--unnecessary amendments. The other thing we've taken out that generated a whole lot of amendments is the minute description of local governmental agencies. All that stuff is out. Now, there are things in the new constitution that I think ought to be statutory, but my statutory is your constitutional, and I don't know that we ought to get into a fight about that today. But, you can look at the list of constitutional amendments that have been submitted to the voters in the past three years, including the fifty-three that failed, and see that most of the things that needed to be amended in those amendments, we no longer have in the constitution. That's the first place. But, in addition to that, the legislature, now, even under the '21 Constitution, are looking very carefully at every proposed constitutional amendment and asking one another, "Now, does this really need to go on the ballot because my people are really mad; they don't want to consider so many of these things?" The legislators are taking care of that problem, number one. If they should begin to slip up and not take care of it anymore, the people are going to take care of it themselves. It seems to me that what you do when you put a number like "ten" in the constitution is it acts as a . . . not necessarily as a limit. For example, it seems to me that the people--if you put seven unnecessary constitutional amendments on the ballot--would vote them all down. So, the number "ten" won't mean anything. It seems to me that by sticking this finite number in, the number. . . the year we need eleven constitutional amendments, the ninth constitutional amendment will be a repeal of this section or a change of the number. It really makes very little difference. The ninth constitutional amendment will say, "plus anything ratified at this election may go into the constitution." So, let's trust the legislators to keep the constitutional amendments down as they have been doing over the past several years and trust the people to get mad as heck if they don't, and not stick this unnecessary number into our constitution.

Further Discussion

MR. CONROY

I strongly urge you to support this amendment. I think this is why we are here. I think it's why those of us who were elected were elected to be here, is to be able to go back to the people of this state and not say, "We hope that we have cut down the number of amendments," but to tell them, "You can be sure that you will not ever again have to vote on more than ten amendments at any one election." That's what the people of this state want. That's what they have told us again and again and again. When we leave here if we believe in this constitution...if you believe in what we have done here, what we are about to complete here, when you go back to your districts to talk to the people, to ask them to vote for approval of what you have done here, one of the very first questions you're going to be asked is, "Have you limited the number of amendments? Will we still have to vote on so many amendments?" If you can't point specifically, word for word, in something that we have done to say, "Yes, we have done it. We have limited the number of amendments. You cannot vote on more than ten," no other answer is going to satisfy the people of this state. It is not going to satisfy them to tell them that we hope that this will not happen again. We hope the legislature won't make the same mistakes it has in the past, but remember, the legislature we were talking about is one that in recent years, despite the reactions of the people, were still submitting thirty, forty and fifty amendments to the people at every election. The legislature has been unable to restrain itself in the number of amendments which it submitted to the people. I think the only way we can restrain them is in this constitution to tell them, "You cannot submit more than ten to the people of this state." It requires a two-thirds vote to submit a proposed amendment to the people of this state, two-thirds vote of the legislature. Surely two-thirds of those legislators if they know that they can only pass ten, can decide which of the ten they will submit at any given election. Moreover, on the provision in this section, we have permitted them to be submitted at more than one election. So, if there is some emergency indeed, then we can have special elections to consider additional amendments at that time. But, I again say that the history of this state has shown that we need such a restraint and restriction on our legislature in this state, and the people of this state expect us to put such a restraint and limitation on the legislature. In answer to the suggestion or question about whether there wouldn't be a future constitutional amendment to increase this number, I can virtually assure you that if there was such an amendment submitted to the people of this state, there's no doubt in my mind that they would overwhelmingly reject any amendment to increase the number of amendments above ten. I think this is an adequate number. I cannot understand the arguments against it or suggestions against it. If we've done a decent job, if we've done the kind of job we think we have done, we intended to do, then I can't see why we would be telling the people, "You may need more than ten or twenty or thirty amendments at some future time." If you believe in what we have done, you ought to be able to back it up with a promise that there will not have to be more than ten amendments at any one time at any session...at any one election.

Questions

MR. SUTHERLAND

Delegate Conroy, I have been sitting here listening to all the arguments on this and I can say that I am confused. I've heard Mr. Casey who is a legislator say that with the new constitution we would not have a need for additional amendments. I've heard Senator De Blieux and Senator Rayburn say that there's no way in the world that you can get by without more than ten amendments. Now, when I start hearing the legislature speak this way, it's confusing to me because I think we have to limit the number of amendments. If there is confusion in the legislature, there's going to be even more confusion in the minds of the public who are going to have to pass on this thing, and I guess I'll have to put this as a question: Don't you agree that a responsible legislature would make sure that what they submitted to the people was important enough to call for a vote of the people and that what they were asking them to pass on would be necessary to the constitution?

MR. CONROY

Yes, I think that with the prefilling requirement that we have, the legislature would be able to look at the total package of what it's got before it
...amendments...to pick out the ten that the most important to be submitted at that election. If another election is needed they can...

110th Days Proceedings—January 6, 1974

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Conroy, I hear you speak about the legislature introducing all these constitutional amendments. Do you recognize the fact the legislators as representatives for the people of their district have to be, you might say, requested to introduce an amendment before it's proposed before this legislature? Do you know the legislature doesn't just dream up these amendments, that somebody else usually asks for them, before they are passed?

MR. CONROY

Well, in that case, Senator De Blieux, I assume that they would have no problem in exercising appropriate judgment on which of the ten most important to submit to the people at the next ensuing election. I think that the legislature has shown itself incapable of restraining itself in this area, and that's why I think we have to impose this restriction on the legislature.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Don't you recognize the fact that the restraint has to be from the people, not from the legislature?

MR. CONROY

That's exactly what we're going to do. We're going to let the people vote on this constitution and decide that whether they want such a restriction, and I think they will, Senator De Blieux.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Do you recognize the fact that these past amendments we had was because they were requested by the people that we represent and that's why there were so many proposed?

MR. CONROY

Obviously not by a majority of the people voting on it because most of them were turned down, Senator, and there are other people to ask questions, so I think it would be appropriate to move on to someone else if that's all right.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, I just want you to recognize the fact that the legislature's not irresponsible to the people it represents.

MR. BERGERON

David, in looking at this amendment more closely, I've kind of had a change of heart in it, and I've seen some very good points in it. Don't you feel that if we're to go back and tell the people that we have provided for prefiling of the amendments and a limit of ten, the voters would say, "Yes, then you've accomplished something; you've shaved down the amendments that you will be presenting to us to vote on"?

MR. CONROY

I think that this is going to be the most important question that most of the voters in this state will ask, and they will insist on a satisfactory answer to that question, and the only satisfactory answer is that we have limited the number of amendments.

MR. LANDRUM

I wonder if you would answer me this: you said something about what the mandate we had with the people to cut down on the amendments; now, really, are we supposed to cut down on the amendments or the cause or causes for amendments?

MR. CONROY

Well, Reverend Landrum, hopefully, we have done both, but I don't think that we can assure the people that we have cut down on the causes. I don't think that we can guarantee that we have cut down on the causes unless we ourselves are willing to say that we're satisfied we've done it, so satisfied that we're going to assure you you don't have to vote on more than ten amendments at any other time. That's what we're willing to put behind our assurance that we have cleaned up the document, that good calibre.

MR. LANDRUM

Then, what in effect you're doing to the legislature, the same thing, what we have a problem right here. How could they select the ten best amendments? I mean, you have a difficult time trying to do that right here.

MR. CONROY

Rev. Landrum, they don't have to eliminate those beyond ten. If they feel there are more than ten that are important, they just simply don't submit them at the same election. But under what we have adopted yesterday they don't all have to go in a congressional election. They can have another election if it's absolutely necessary to do so, and it is that important to do so. But, it's not having to vote on them often that I think would bother the people. The thing that bothers the people is going into that voting booth and having fifty or a hundred switches to choose fifty among to decide which way you're going to vote on fifty some odd amendments and waiting in line for a long period of time before you can get in there. Now, this business of waiting in line is one of the things that they complain about a great deal in my particular area, and they want to be sure that they can get in and get out of that voting booth, and the only way they can do that is to hold down the number of amendments.

MR. LANDRUM

Don't you think Mr. Casey's argument yesterday is a valid argument that under local government many of the amendments that we have dealt with in the past would not be necessary, and if the legislature's going to be responsible for this, to be able to select ten, I would think that legislature should also be able to refrain from submitting as many amendments as...

MR. CONROY

Well, Rev. Landrum, in that regard, I think we have to look at history, and history has shown that the legislature has not been able to discipline itself in this area, and I think that we have to put this restraint.

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Conroy, I don't know if you heard the one that Representative Casey mentioned the other day when I asked him a question about, you know, an amendment that we had. What he said was that he thought that the people should become more educated—all of us, he said. Now, don't you think that our electorate would be better able to become educated if they didn't have to take so many doses at one time?

MR. CONROY

Positively, Mrs. Warren. There's a big difference between being able to educate yourself on ten propositions at a given time, and trying to educate yourself on fifty propositions at any given time.

MRS. WARREN

Senator Rayburn mentioned the fact that the legislature had been confused, and I'm saying, do you think that they will probably still be confused since they can't come up with who is going to put it on the ballot, the less confusion it will cause because if they knew they didn't have but ten, they would probably make the right decision?

MR. CONROY

That's exactly right, Mrs. Warren. In the past they have ...by submitting them all.

Further Discussion

MR. BURNS

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I've sat there in my seat putting myself in the status of a voter rather than a delegate to see if I could satisfy myself when I went to the polls to vote on the adoption of this constitution, if I were satisfied with the convention, had made it impossible or provided a means whereby the voters would never be called on to vote on thirty or forty amendments at any future election. So far, I'm sad to say that I haven't heard one amendment or one speaker suggest any definite clear method other than the amendment offered by Mr. Jack, to accomplish this purpose. When I sit down, you're not going to get any more help from me. But, the thing that concerns me is I've heard some of the argument and discussion all having to do with the trouble and confusion of the legislature after this document is adopted by the people, and it goes into effect. What I'm concerned about is not the worries and the confusion that's going to exist in the legislature after the convention is passed. What I'm worried about is getting the constitution passed, and adopted by the people. I think that so far, I think the only clear, understandable, definite proposal or amendment rather than's been submitted to us that the voters can understand, is the one that Mr. Jack has in his amendment. They'll know that you can't be called on to vote for any more than ten amendments in any one election when they go to the polls. One of the gentlemen just now said that couldn't you tell the voters that you have prefiling proposal or section in the constitution. I'd hate to go up on Beeson Creek up in the rural section of St. Tammany Parish and voters ask me, "What have you done to where we won't have to vote on forty or fifty amendments at any time in the future?" I'd have to tell them, "Well, we provided for prefiling of the constitutional amendments before each session of the legislature." You can imagine what effect it would have on them, so I say in all sincerity for those of us, and I'm sure all of you involved, everyone, after we've been here all these months and just with two weeks to go that our prime objective from here on out should be what can we do to polish up this constitution. What can we do to assure its passage? At this time, I know of no other thing that we're acting on at present that's more important than to present something to the people that's going to add to, I'd say, a overwhelming question as far as I'm concerned: what are you doing so we won't have to vote on all these amendments in the future? As I say, up till now, Mr. Jack's amendment is the only one I think has presented any solution insofar as the voter is concerned.

Questions

MR. SMITH

Mr. Burns, don't you think that we have a clear mandate from the people to limit this constitutional amendments at least down to ten or maybe down to six? Do you think they've shown by in 1968, I believe when they had fifty-two...I mean, that may be further back, that they don't want any more amendments, that many, they're not going to vote on them?

MR. BURNS

I stated yesterday, Mr. Smith, not that I mean that I've been deluged by questions by the people in my district, but I definitely state that I've had more questions asked me about what we were going to do about the future amendments to be submitted to the people than all the rest of our work up here put together.

MR. SMITH

Well, don't you think the legislature that I having served in and you have, is going to keep on putting amendments to the people regardless of whether they're constitutional material or not, and if we don't have some limit, they're going to keep that up; don't you think so?

MR. BURNS

Well, I don't have any fault to find with the legislature, but the only thing I say is, "Let's get this constitution passed." Then, they can take care of the problems or the mistakes that we've made. But, let's don't take a chance of not getting it passed or it won't be any need even discussing what's going to happen afterward.

MR. TOCA

Mr. Burns, you're talking about limiting it to ten amendments on the machine. I see here it's sixty...1967, we only had two amendments on the machine, and the people rejected one. Now, you know they understood these two amendments. We're trying to say now that if we put over ten the people won't understand it. Is that what we're trying to do now?

MR. BURNS

No, no. I didn't say that. I said the people are concerned about having forty and fifty amendments on the ballot and then have to go there and try to wait in line to vote on it and not understand any of it. You know, Mr. Toca, that's been publicized ever since the convention began as to what is going to be done...

Further Discussion

MR. HAYES

Mr. Chairman, members of the convention, I shall just be one minute. I think that I've heard so many people discuss the amendments, seemingly, that seemed to be the reason we're having this convention. I didn't think that was the case. I thought the people turned down the fifty amendments because they had a right to turn them down if they didn't like them. The only thing I can see to limiting the number of amendments on the constitution, or the number of amendments you can propose to the constitution will do, will cut down on the amount of time you stay in the voting booth. You are really denying the people the right that they have to turn down amendments. They can turn an amendment down. There's no reason why you can't turn it down. You talk like you've got to pass it. If people don't understand fifty, they may not understand ten, like someone brought out a minute ago. I didn't vote against a single amendment because it had fifty on the machine. I voted against them because I didn't understand them. When it came back with the highway fund, you got it passed because the people understood it. If you have somebody to get out and explain amendments when they're trying to get them passed, people understand them; they'll pass them. There's no need to try to fool the people. There's no need to try to fool the legislature, either. If we put ten on here in some sort of way, the legislature will probably feel that we are guaranteeing them that ten amendments will pass. You can't guarantee them they'll pass, don't care how many you put on. You can't guarantee the people a good constitution if you tell them you're not going to have but ten. I don't know where the magical figure came from. I understand they have twelve jurors, I believe, because at the Lord's Supper they had twelve. I don't know where this figure ten came from; maybe because our counting symbol is based on base ten. Thank you.

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

Questions

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Hayes, I think I understood you to say that you didn't know about the magic figure and whether they would understand them and on and on. Now, we heard one delegate say they had two amendments only at one time, and one passed and one didn't. So, the people had a chance to read that and decide that they wanted one and they didn't want the other one. Did I understand you to say that it would cut down on the time that people spend going into the polls?

MR. HAYES

He didn't say that the others....I don't know whether they understood them or not.

MRS. WARREN

I say, he said it. I didn't say he said they understood. I'm asking you. Couldn't you conceivably believe that they could have time to understand two amendments, and reject the one that they didn't want and take the one that they did?

MR. HAYES

You will have more time; I would say this, they would have less time in the booths to vote on them. Two amendments wouldn't take you as long in the booths...it wouldn't take as long to vote on two as it would to vote on fifty.

MRS. WARREN

Then, I think you mentioned about the legislature; do you feel that our purpose is here to make the legislator think that the people are going to vote on these amendments because there's not but ten, or are we supposed to make it for the people?

MR. HAYES

It appears to me you're trying to limit it to ten to guarantee that ten will pass. I got that from listening. That's what I got gathered that we're trying to guarantee somebody that if we get ten they'll pass--a magical figure, ten. I don't know where you got ten from. I don't know where they got ten from. I don't know why they didn't come up with nine or eight or seven, or some other figure, maybe...

MRS. WARREN

Well, that's the reason I asked you because we got entirely different interpretations; thank you.

MR. HAYES

I don't know where ten came from.

MR. RIECKE

Mr. Hayes, when there were fifty-two amendments on the ballot, I assume you voted at that election?

MR. HAYES

I voted.

MR. RIECKE

I would like to ask you, did you understand every one of those fifty-two amendments completely?

MR. HAYES

I probably didn't understand all of them, no. That's why I didn't vote for them all. I didn't understand all of them. I voted for the ones I probably understood. I don't remember all the fifty of them at this time.

110th Days Proceedings—January 6, 1974

MR. RIECKE

Well, don't you think that's what the people thought, that they didn't want fifty-two because they didn't want to vote on anything they didn't understand?

MR. HAYES

But, the ones that I understood most are the ones that were advertised, whoever was pushing certain amendments. I'm saying if you push or advertise, when they defeated the highway, the one that's dealing with the highway funds, they came back and made you understand just exactly what you done. At that time the people understood what had happened. I'm saying if you will put more time on making the people understand what amendments that is, and the importance of them, they will pass them on round one.

MR. RIECKE

Don't you think it takes more time to teach the people about fifty-two amendments than it does two?

MR. HAYES

Well, if it takes more time, I'm saying, yes, but I don't think you should limit the number. I think they still have a right to vote for however many you want to give them to vote for.

Further Discussion

MR. SHANNON

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of this convention, I have not come to this microphone often during this whole convention. But, this is one thing that I feel very serious about. I feel that if I had a mandate from the people of this state, it's in this one area. I have not talked to one person, not one person, not only in my district, but in the Parish of Caddo, and all the parishes between here and Caddo where I stopped and talked and discussed anything about the constitution, and this was prior to the Constitutional Convention. The people did not want to be burdened with having to digest this many amendments. I don't believe there is one person in this convention that can tell me that you digested on the last election when we had fifty-odd amendments, that you digested every one of them and could vote intelligently on it. I challenge you to it. I read them. I read them all, and I spent some study on it, but I did not understand all of them myself. I don't believe one-tenth of the people in this state understood them. I don't believe that you believe that, either. Now, we have some talk up here about all the amendments we might need to correct what's in this constitution. Well, let's not worry about that because if we have such a constitution that needs all those amendments, this constitution is down the drain to start with. We have ample time to make moderate corrections in this constitution. We have two sessions, or two times that we can vote on it before this amendment would be accepted, and that is ample time. Let me tell you something: I don't know because I haven't researched it, but I'd say if you research it that a great majority of your constitutional amendments that have been offered to the people of this state to vote on is things that did not need to be carried to the people. They could have been settled in this legislature. What happened? The legislators shirked their responsibility because of political views on the thing, that they could say, "Oh, let the people decide it." Don't you forget it, there's been numerous, numerous constitutional amendments offered from this legislature down here that were statutory material. I strongly support and urge that you vote for this amendment. Thank you.

Question

MR. LEBLEU

Mr. Shannon, if you think that the people in the state don't want to vote on the constitutional amendments, then that's a big reason for wanting us to draw up a new constitution. Don't you think there could be some method that a legislature could amend the constitution itself, rather than submitting all these amendments to the people, if you think that's a big, big reason?

Further Discussion

MR. CHAMPAGNE

As you look back at the time when you campaigned for this position, I'm sure you will remember that when you talked to the people about this position, the top of the list they placed, less amendments to this constitution. We don't want to have to vote on all these constitutional amendments. We want our legislature to take their responsibility and enact legislation for people of this state. We don't want to have the buck passed to us to make decisions when we elect them to make the decisions in the legislature. We've provided for longer sessions of the legislature, not shorter sessions. They shall have more time to provide whose amendment gets on the ballot, and because I feel these legislators, some of whom we have here, are outstanding people, because I feel they are fully capable of doing this, I urge your support of this amendment. If there's anything wrong with this amendment, it's not ten we need, it's six, and I propose to vote for six. I am quite happy with this constitution to date. One of the good features, and one we keep talking about is the way we have cut it down in size. Let's help our legislature make sound decisions in their future possible amendments, and provide less legislation in our new constitution. It is amazing to me that one of the most outspoken critics of our deliberations in this assembly has been that he says, we are putting legislation in this constitution, and he was one of the most outspoken critics when I advocated the three-dollar license, because he says, "That is legislature." Then, he gets up here and says, "Let's not cut down the number of possible amendments; let your legislature make that decision." I suggest to you in all fairness that if those of us in that position that were in the legislature on many occasions, as this gentleman suggested, these constitutional amendments are made, because the people back home requested that of them. I tell you that this is to help these legislators in the future say, "We are limited in the number of amendments we can propose; I favor your suggestion; I shall bring it up as legislation, not as legislation in the constitution."

Questions

MR. ROEMER

Delegate Champagne, as I understand your remarks, what you're saying is that we've already done many things in this body to limit future constitutional amendments, that is, strong local and parochial, etc., etc., But, you're saying, let's do one thing more, and let's have a specific prohibition against a number of willy-nilly thirty, forty, fifty amendments. Isn't that what you're trying to say?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

That's right, and I also want these legislatures to have the possibility of debating at length and putting on sound constitutional amendments, not legislation in the constitution.

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Champagne, we kind of had lost in this discussion the method by which the number would be limited. Can you shed some light on how the legislature might effectively limit the number?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

The effective number, it would be limited in the constitution.

MR. JENKINS

No, I mean the method by which they might select the ten or the six or...

MR. CHAMPAGNE

It's very simple to me, Mr. Jenkins. In other words, we vote, and the number of votes, I would suggest that. We don't have to decide that now, but simply vote in the legislature; the one that gets the highest number of votes is first priority.

MR. JENKINS

But, you haven't provided that. This article provides that if a joint resolution gets two-thirds of the vote, and if it's prefiled, then it's going to be on the ballot. Are you going to provide the first ten, the ten with the highest number... I mean, there's no constitutional authority here for saying the one that gets the ten highest votes.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Well, Mr. Jenkins, I have full confidence in the legislators' ability to do that, just like amendments to this proposed constitution. I would suggest that if we have twenty and we want six, the one that gets the highest number is number one; the second, number two. That's a simple matter.

MR. JENKINS

Well, now, wait, Mr. Champagne. The ones that would get the highest number of votes would probably be the least controversial, and most technical. In other words, a very technical amendment... My question is, suppose you have ten amendments that pass between maybe, a hundred and five to zero, or ninety to five, or something like that. They may be very technical amendments. In fact, those are the sorts of amendments that get big votes, but very important amendments may pass by a very narrow vote. Yet, you would say that the ones who get the highest number of votes get preference to those that get a lower number of votes?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

I would think that if you have that problem then it's time to get to legislating in the legislature and pass them in the form of legislation, rather than constitutional amendments.

MR. JENKINS

Well, now, that would be fine if it's legally possible, but so many changes can't be made by legislation. They have to be made by constitutional amendments. You know, haven't we had a problem at this convention we're still wrestling with, getting a system for putting alternatives on the ballot; and we still haven't resolved that question at this convention. Yet, here we will be imposing on the legislature a problem which we haven't been able to resolve yet at this convention.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

I feel that since they make the decision and since they put them on the ballot that that's their responsibility, sir. I feel they're fully capable of doing that.

Further Discussion

MR. WEISS

Thank you, Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates. We've come to another extremely controversial problem. I would like to reflect for you the thinking of the Bill of Rights and Elections Committee in its majority. We presented to you this proposal after much consideration, much debate and thought on this matter, and Mr. Jack came before the group with first four, six, eight, ten, or whatever number of amendments that we would like to limit this constitutional revision as we see it to be presented to the public. Certainly we are all in agreement that we are attempting to limit the amendment process. There's no question about that. We do have a mandate to do this. All of the comments that are made at this microphone before, I think we all agree upon. I think it's simply a matter of how to go about doing this, and I will try to convey to you the picture of the majority of the Bill of Rights and Elections Committee and why we elected not to put a limit on the Constitution Amendment Revision Article. First of all, this is not the cure for the disease. We hope, as one delegate so eloquently said, that this is not good testimony to our handiwork. We have done a fine job thus far, particularly in reference to the Judiciary and Local Government Article. Now, perhaps from the Shreveport area they have had problems up north because the 1921 Constitution had such things in it as the Caddo Parish jail site fund, and also the municipal ice factories as to how they should be voted upon and an election held for that purpose. Now, back there, fifty-two years ago, there may have been reason in the course of years to revise this. Certainly, there has been much revision, but this is not the cure. The amendment Mr. Jack, and the future ones that he proposes to present, is nothing more than a hot poultice amendment. It does not cure the problem. There's no sense in taking an aspirin for a headache that can be due to either brain tumor or constipation. That's all you're telling the public now, that you're giving them a limit of ten. Let me show you what happened in the past twenty-five years. Nine of these twenty-five years there were less than ten amendments presented to the general public, less than ten. Frequently, as some of the more politically astute have pointed out to me, it's been nothing more than a popularity contest for the governor in office. This is the big concern that we weighed in considering whether to put a limit upon the number of proposals that would come before the people. As far as whether the people will think it over, that's a farce. Back in 1940 there were four amendments and all four of them were rejected. If it's no good, it's no good. If you have fifty amendments and two come out, somebody's thinking somewhere that there must be two good amendments in that group. As far as the legislature having a problem, yea, they've had a problem, but they've had a bad document. When you have poor protoplasm to work with, you can't do very much, and I can assure you, as a physician, this is a problem sometimes, but you can't put wings on a devil. This is a problem, and we have created a good document. We've created a good document, and we've particularly been careful to create a careful Judiciary and Local Governmental Article which should not require a great deal of revision. It will be taken care of locally. Please do not handicap the people that are in the process of government, the legislators who Delegate Rayburn spoke of repeatedly, and I think, honestly, of the problems they have. I do not believe, and I think you will feel the same way, sitting here after a year, that we do not try earnestly and strive earnestly to come to answers to these problems. The only problem is how to go about doing this. Limiting it to ten is a dangerous procedure. It will turn over to the governor, the one in power, to make the selection and then, to select those articles which he thinks would be to his advantage, perhaps, for reelection or other political influences. I urge you to defeat this and future amendments that Mr. Jack intends to propose, and I still give Mr. Jack credit as an outstanding legislator because as he came before this committee, he said there were two things he stood on his platform in wanting for this constitution. I was more interested in generalities and the welfare of the State of Louisiana. He was concerned with income tax reduction and limitation on the number of constitutional amendments. He's batting fifty percent at this time. I don't think he deserves a hundred percent for this, and I urge you to vote against this floor amendment.

Question

MR. RAYBURN

Dr. Weiss, in your opinion, if there are fifteen constitutional amendments that have been approved by the legislature and they were trying to make up their mind as to what priority they would establish, and we just had a new governor elected, and one of them provided that the governor couldn't run for a second term, what priority do you think it'd get?

MR. WEISS

Well, I think you can answer that best, Delegate Rayburn, as a politician and you know where they stand.

Further Discussion

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Acting Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, if we were going to keep the 1921 Constitution as we have it now and just revise it, I would say to you that this is an excellent amendment. In fact, the Revision Commission submitted this exact amendment to the people. You know what they did with it. They did exactly what they did with the other fifty-three. They voted it down. I would say that we have, and I think there's not much more I can add to what has not already been said as to the amount of revision we have done in this constitution that would require us not to submit amendments to the people. I think the safeguards are there. The people who say we have to do this because this is what the people want you to do, I would submit to you, you have already done it. But, let me say something in defense of the legislature because it looks like we always take a little bombing when it comes to submitting constitutional amendments. If you look back from 1921, or '22, immediately after the 1921 Constitution was written, there was only four amendments; then thirteen; then fourteen; four, eighteen; five, fifteen; fourteen; twenty-two; twenty-eight; and I'll skip a few years there. Then we'll go on to 1956 and 60's when every bit of the government grew just like industry grew, just like the whole state grew and the whole nation grew. Then we started getting up in the forties and the fifties and the fifty-two's and the fifty-three's. I submit to you that the legislature passed these constitutional amendments because they are absolutely necessary when dealing with some of the prime functions that they were dealing with, that is, government. Just look over most of amendments and you'd see what I'm telling you is true. I think Mr. Avant has a list, and he went over them recently, just now in fact that out of the past thirty amendments that there were now...if this new constitution was in effect, you only need twenty-nine...twenty-nine would not be needed. If you'd go back to the time we submitted fifty-two to the people, fifty-one out of fifty-two would not be needed. So, what were we doing? We were meeting the needs of a problem of the people in an archaic constitution. That's why we are here. The fifty-two and fifty-three amendments were the end result of why we are here. All of it is a direct result because the people had to go and change the constitution. Let me give you another fact of life. Before 1940...1960...1970 and '72 and '68, the people were passing these amendments. Something evidently happened; they became more informed, or maybe government had become more distasteful, or more distrustful, and they started defeating them. So, does that mean that we should now limit the number of constitutional amendments on the ballot. Why don't we get down to the basic argument or basic reasons why we should limit them? We should limit them because the people don't want to vote on them? Absolutely not. We should limit them because they aren't needed. I would submit to you they will not be needed if we adopt this new constitution. If you had a chance to submit this one amendment to the people if this constitution is not adopted, it would be to limit a number of amendments. Then, what would you do? I'll tell you what you would do. I think Senator Rayburn brought out a good point. I'll tell you what you would do; 1972 in the special session, and there's twelve amendments, all administrative amendments. If we don't adopt a new constitution, and you get these situations where the administration has eight or nine, you can bet they'll make it ten, and the people's voices in the legislature will never be heard as far as the amendments are concerned. You will have only administrative amendments on the ballot. But, my whole point, if I can leave with you today here on this particular amendment, is that if you want window dress, and evidently, a lot of us want to, if you want to just window-dress and tell the people, "Look what we've done." I've heard that said not more than ten times up here today. The people want us to do this. If you want to window-dress and tell the people, "Look what we've done." We've limited the only thing that you can receive to ten. Well, go ahead and do it. I'm not really hung on this; I don't think it makes that much difference, whether you make it ten or fifteen or five; it's a window dressing thing, the way I look at it. But, if you're window-dressing, you make it look like the legislature has been derelict in their responsibility, and that they won't hold it in the future, and I submit to you you're wrong. You're dead wrong. The reason for these amendments was because they were absolutely necessary. Just look at them. The city of New Orleans and all of their problems they had with the limitation of millage, hurricane evacuation or protection levees, or various other projects that were needed, needed by local government, needed by the judiciary, needed by various other agencies of state government. That's why they're on the ballot. The reason why the people defeated them, I think they were just fed up, not with constitutional amendments--the same reason they defeated sixty-five or seventy-five percent of the legislatures and it's...the legislators, and the same reason why they threw a good number of our elected officials out of office. They are just fed up with government as we knew it in the past. You want a change? Then, cause it. But, I think we ought to give it a chance to try.

Further Discussion

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise to support this amendment. It seems to me this is a very necessary amendment. It gives us what the people have continually told us they want. They want an end to long lists of constitutional amendments. I know people who don't vote at all when you have a large number of amendments. They stay home. I think that we want to have as many people to vote as possible. Now, Mr. Jack gave necessary leeway in this amendment by not allowing it to go into effect until January 1, 1978. I'm not a prophet. I don't think many of you other speakers are a prophet. I know Mrs. Zervignon isn't a prophet or Mr. Casey. Mr. Tobias might have better credentials for being a prophet than the other one. But, I think he's just as wrong. We can tell you that the Local Government Article is going to solve all of our problems. We don't need any will. Emergency problems tend to be handled by emergency legislation. Often, legislators begin pouring in amendments. Old Jim threw in an amendment; I've got to throw in one, too. Everybody will know I'm on the job. I think that we are no longer in the day of fifty-year constitutions. The national trend tends now to be toward constitutions only lasting twenty to twenty-five years. Those who say, this is not the answer have themselves presented no answer to the problem. Yesterday Mr. Casey moved to deflect, the people don't seem to have enough education to handle the problems. But, these are the same people who had enough education to elect him here, so that now they have enough education to understand the amendments. Having only ten amendments on the ballot will not guarantee it to the sponsors of these amendments that the amendments will pass. But, they will guarantee that the people will have a chance to look over the amendments and make a proper decision based on what the amendments themselves say, and not on the governor's personality or somebody else's personality. The people have always seemed willing to do their duty. Often it seemed sometimes the elected officials are not willing to do their duty. They tended to seem to want to pass the buck on down the line. I think that Mr. Jack and his associates have written a garbage disposal amendment. From now on the garbage will be disposed of here in Baton Rouge instead of being spread all over the state for the entire population to dispose of. If you're going to have garbage, dispose of it where you create the garbage. You don't spread the garbage all around. They might wrap a pretty little package and throw it in his garbage can. This amendment offers the legislature...this amendment does not tell the legislature how to pick the ten. If they can't handle which ten should be...if they don't know how to pick which ten, then perhaps we've made errors in the people we've sent up here. I think our legislature is capable of setting up a system for determining which ten will go on the ballot. So, I support this amendment, and I urge you to also vote for it. Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise to oppose this amendment because I think this is a very dangerous amendment. I, in the first place, we talk about the mandate that we supposedly are under. I would refer you to the constitutional amendments that were submitted in November of 1970, which were fifty-three in number and the ones that were submitted in November of 1932 which were thirty in number. I don't profess to be one hundred percent accurate in the fast time I have gone through these, but I think if you will go through them you will find that I'm not very far from wrong. Of those fifty-three amendments that were submitted in November of 1970, I believe you will agree that fifty-two of those amendments wouldn't be necessary under this constitution. Of those that were submitted in November of 1972, I believe you will agree that twenty-nine of them would not be necessary under this constitution that we are proposing. Now, let me tell you why I feel this is a dangerous and a bad amendment. Of those twenty-nine amendments that were submitted in November of 1972, six of those amendments, as I read it, were absolutely necessary because of the situation in which we found ourselves as a result of the ruling of the federal court with regard to property taxation. Now, not being able to foresee the future, I just don't believe in painting yourself into a corner. Who are we to stand here today and say that a situation will not arise in the future as a result of the ruling of the United States Supreme Court or for some other reason, where we just absolutely have to have more than ten constitutional amendments to get ourselves out of the particular predicament in which we find ourselves? I just respectfully submit to you that when you've closed all your options and you paint yourself into a corner to where you can't move when you have to move, that you're doing a very dangerous thing. I think we have complied with the mandate that we had to do something to limit the necessity for just a whole multitude of constitutional amendments. If you will look at this list, you will find the thirty-one in November of 1970, thirty-one of those fifty-three amendments have the asterisks by them which indicates that they are purely local amendments. They'll have to receive a majority vote not only statewide, but in the particular area covered. In November of 1972, of the thirty, twelve were amendments of that nature. All of the rest that I referred to were strictly matters of a statutory nature that had found themselves or found their way into the constitution, and the only way you could change them was by constitutional amendment. But, the most important thing, and the thought I want to leave with you, is that we did find ourselves in a position in 1972 because of the rulings of the federal court with respect to our system of property taxation that something had to be done, and the only way it could be done was by amending the constitution. It took six amendments to get it straightened out, if it's straightened out. Who are we to sit here and say that fifteen or twenty years from now we won't find ourselves in another such position where it may take eleven amendments to extricate ourselves from a very bad predicament in which we are floundering? I say that when you paint yourself into a corner and you fore-close your option to where you cannot operate and do what is necessary, that you're making a terrible, terrible mistake. I urge you to please vote against this amendment for that reason.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

Question

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Avant, I have read Mr. Jack's amendment several times and I don't see anything in here which limits the right of the legislature to submit amendments to the people. I only see in here a provision that no more than ten shall be submitted at any one election. According to the amendment which was adopted yesterday, each resolution can provide for the date of the election. We are not painting ourselves in a corner, as I read this. I would ask you to explain what you mean when you say that.

MR. AVANT

Well, Mr. Dennery, unless you want to go to the alternative of having multitudinous elections, statewide elections, where you're going to submit ten this month and ten the next month and ten the following month, I think you have painted yourself in a corner. Now, if that is the alternative that you would suggest, I'm told that a statewide election, if you're going to operate in that fashion, costs, somebody said, a million dollars. I don't know how much one of them costs, but I don't think we ought to be in a position of where we've got to have an unnecessary expenditure of money just to get around something that we've put in the constitution.

Further Discussion

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in support of this amendment. I heard Mr. Jack and others mention a platform that they ran on. I did not run on a platform that they would not have all these amendments. But, I heard time and time again that having a new constitution, we won't have to be voting on so many amendments at one time. I have heard this all over the State of Louisiana. The reason that I did not make any promise of putting this in the constitution was because I realized that I had one vote, and one vote just wouldn't do it. I was reminded of a famous quote from King Solomon, and I'm going to read it to you. It says, "One who does give a gift he promises is like a blowing over a desert without a dropping of rain." So, I did not want to be caught in that position. But, I would like to give you two other quotes from King Solomon, which says, "Do you like honey? Don't eat too much of it, or it will make you sick." A second quote is, "Don't visit your neighbor too often or you will wear out your welcome." I say to the legislators, and many times people have shown you that you were out your welcome by putting so many amendments on the ballot. I say to you, they will do it again. I say to you in this day, it is changing; we are now living in the day of revelations, and many things are being revealed; many people are waking up and they are wanting to be knowledgeable on what they are going to vote on. They are not going to the lever and pull something just to be pulling it. Many times, I say to you, people have called me and said, "Mrs. Warren, we are having an election tomorrow and we have a number of amendments on the list. Would you explain this or that to me?" I tried in some instances, and when I looked at it and I knew time was running out. I said, "Well, I'll tell you, if you don't understand it, it might be a good thing that you just pull that lever against it." I'm telling you this is what I have done. If it comes again that I have to do the same thing, this is what I am going to do, and I am going to use my time to try to educate people, like Mr. Casey said that they should be, as to how they should vote on these things and this convention has given me a great opportunity to know just how things were. I'm going to ask you to support Mr. Jack's amendment, and I'm going to ask you to do it in the interest of the education of our electorate across the State of Louisiana. I thank you very much.

Questions

MR. WILLIS

Mrs. Warren, I refer you to Tennyson's poem of "The Vision of Sir Launfal," where he was in search of the Holy Grail, and in that he says, "Tis not what you give, but what you share. For the gift without the giver is bare." Don't you think that this amendment is a bare gift to the people, that it is naked because I know that I could lump in one amendment fifty-two amendments, and that this is a bare gift?

MRS. WARREN

I'll grant you that, Mr. Willis, and I'm not as familiar with Tennyson as I am with King Solomon, but I'll tell you one thing with the mass that's waking up everyday, you're not going to be able to lump very much much longer.

MR. WILLIS

Well, Mrs. Warren, may I ask you one more question, then, in projection of your argument. If this amendment states that we should put the barricade against more than ten amendments, some speakers have said that a barricade against six would be better. If you project the argument, ten is good, six is better; wouldn't be zero best?

MRS. WARREN

I don't know, but did you know what King Solomon said about a city without any laws?

MR. WILLIS

I know what King Solomon said to the husband and wife who couldn't decide on a child, who wanted to cut it into.

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered.]

MR. SMITH

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I know you all are tired, and I am, too. I'm not going to talk but a few minutes. But, I don't get up here too often, but I do like to get up when good government is at stake. I think it is now unless we pass this amendment. I'm a coauthor of this amendment. They're asking what legislators or former legislators think about this good amendment. I take the floor as a former legislator of sixteen years—I was proud of it, but I'm proud I'm not there anymore—to say that this is a fine amendment. As I said a while ago, and I asked a question, I feel that we have a mandate from the people of our state to cause some legislation limiting amendments, and this is one that I think is real good. In the future, if we have too many amendments, people are not going to vote for them regardless of their merit. As we know we had last time, I believe we had twelve, and all but one was defeated. I think they had some good ones in there, but they were defeated because people are tired of voting on lot of amendments they don't understand. Usually, when these amendments come up on the ballot, people don't go to the polls because of their apathy. They don't understand them; they are couched in terms they can't understand; so they just stay away, or else they don't vote for them. You look and see how many people don't vote on amendments that vote for candidates. It's thousands of them. You know and I know, if you've been in the legislature, every time the legislature meets, we come up with numerous amendments, constitutional amendments, that don't belong in the constitution. Lot's of them are statutory, but if we keep on not limiting the number, we'll still have a lot of grubby garbage as Mr. Tobias says, to put in the constitution. We're trying to get rid of it, and we are getting rid of all this statutory material. Let's don't have any more by voting them in through this constitution amendments. But, I say lots of times, the legislator put in these amendments for something they'd all want to pass on to the people; they're shirking their responsibility. I know when I was in the legislature I believe one time we had fifty-two we passed on to the people. They passed, most of them. But, most of the people didn't know even what they were voting for. They don't want that anymore; they've become more knowledgeable, and I feel like ten...like you say, who's going to decide that? Well, the amendment here provides that the legislature shall provide the method for selecting which amendments shall be submitted at the election. I thought they put a lot of confidence in the legislature. Let them decide. Some people say we're going to have emergencies all the time. Well, I think we're not going to have more than ten emergencies that we can take care of every two years. So, let's go ahead, gentlemen, and do what the people want us to do. You all know and I know, I ran on this platform limiting amendments. I made talks around the state, and I feel like that it would help sell this constitution if we tell them that we can't pass more than ten constitutional amendments next time to put to them to vote on. So, let's don't clutter up the constitution with any more statutory material. So, I ask you, let's go ahead and vote for this amendment limiting...the fact...might be a good idea to limit it to a little less, but if we have ten, I think that's a good number. I say this in all sincerity and conscientiously, I think this is good government, and I ask you to vote for it, and I believe the people of this state would be well satisfied if the vote we make today is for this amendment. I thank you.

Questions

MR. ALEXANDER

Mr. Smith, I have mixed feelings about this amendment, but I would prefer the one limiting the number of amendments to fifteen. Will that one be also introduced?

MR. SMITH

No, sir. If this one passes, I think that will be it.

MR. ALEXANDER

No, I mean if this one is defeated.

MR. SMITH

Well, I don't know. Mr. Jack, he's...I feel like ten is plenty. I don't think we should have any more. The next one would be twenty. I think ten is a real good number, and I think we ought to stop with that.

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Jasper, can you give us some idea of what sort of procedure the legislature could adopt that would be workable and practical and fair that could facilitate such a limitation?

MR. SMITH

Well, I think we have a good legislature, Mr. Jenkins. You're a member of it, and I feel like that we ought to come up with ten good amendments. They could say, well, these are the ten best, and put the others off, maybe. But, as you know and I know, a lot of these amendments are put in purely to get some to shirk their responsibility to the people. They're really not good amendments. But, I don't think during any legislature you're going to have more than ten amendments that need to be passed on the people.

[Vote on the Amendment tied: 53-53.
Chairman votes nay breaking the tie.
Amendment rejected: 53-54. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Personal Privilege

MR. JACK

We are writing a constitution. We're over here because the voting machine don't work. I don't know whether this cockeyed thing is working right. It's a very poor method of voting -- part of them on the machine up there, part of them orally, part of them going up there afterwards, then the final tie breaking-- I think as important as this is we ought to vote for it tomorrow over on the whole. . .

MR. HENRY

You're not on your point of order now.

[Motion to table reconsideration.]

Point of Order

MR. JACK

For a point of order again, Mr. Speaker . . . haven't been answered. Are you going to say we've got to vote by this method here with a part on the machine that hadn't been raised before, part of them not on the machine meeting over here. . .

MR. HENRY

Mr. Jack, if you asked for it you can get a roll call vote, if you desire.

MR. JACK

I want a roll call vote.

[Record vote ordered. Motion to reconsider tabled: 60-51.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Next amendment sent up by Messrs. Jack, Smith, Fulco, and others.
Amendment No. 1. On page 1, between lines 26 and 27, insert the following paragraph:

"No more than fifteen proposed amendments shall be submitted to the electors of the state at any one election. The legislature shall provide the method for selecting which amendments shall be submitted at a particular election. The effective date of this Paragraph shall be January 1, 1978."

Explanation

MR. JACK

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen, I'd appreciate it if you would be quiet for just three minutes because that's all I'm going to take. Now, I'm going to lay this on the line with you. Bluntly, you're choosing between the legislature and the people. I listened to everybody talk who got before this microphone-- a lot of you didn't, but that's what you're doing--I'm not going to answer any questions until I finish. This provides for fifteen. This is the people's constitution as a whole, not yours, not mine, not the legislature's; for it to operate properly you've got to set a maximum number. Now, you do what you want; I've done my duty. I'm convinced more than ever after listening to talks against my first amendment that you're thinking that voting against my amendment the vast majority of those are thinking about reflecting on the legislature; that is not the thing to do. The only reason, absolutely the only reason we are here to write this new constitution is the people said, we are not going to continue to vote on a million constitutional amendments period. Amen. That's the end of it. That's why you are here. Now, I say if you want good government and you want to submit a constitution for the people to ratify, you pass this amendment around to many more than fifteen amendments. All that other talk is hogwash. Now, let me tell you to quote somebody. . .

Mr. Velazquez was pointing out about the excess garbage; he's right. I'll go one further, it's not pleasant to think of, but thus food goeth--and I heard this statement it's not original-- it's fine for you, but if you eat too much of that best food and make a hog of yourself like too many amendments for the people, you eat too much food, you're going to vomit it and who wants to wallow in that mess. That's the mess you're giving to the people when you hand them fifty or sixty constitutional amendments. The legislature has done that and we have no guarantee they won't do it again and being for proper, good government. I want to make it impossible, so let's pass this limiting this to fifteen amendments. Give the people a constitution they want. I hope the word gets back to them how everybody votes on this because I know they want a limitation. I thank you and I hope you will support this and put it in the constitution. Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. JACKSON, J.

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in support of Mr. Jack's amendment, not that I necessarily see that there is that much difference between ten and fifteen because that's the basic issue of this amendment, but it does in effect give some additional latitude. I think that at any one point I would not want to be part of a body that would have to submit more than fifteen amendments; I think it just gives us an additional latitude. Let me say that unlike Mr. Jack, I don't believe that the opponents of this amendment were talking hogwash. I think there were some tremendous merits on both sides of the argument. The question that I pose to raise at this point if that is, in fact, the case is that prior to the establishment of this convention whether we like it or not, the forces, whether it was the legislature, the governor's office, or constituents themselves really spread out the call that we need to have a constitutional convention because of the excessive amount of amendments that we have to vote on. Now, I'm just saying whether we like that or not that is a fact of life. I think that the Jack amendment as being proposed now gives that latitude. In addition, what it attempts to do and I think when you go to vote on this --really I'm not saying you ought to do it for window dressing-- but I don't think none of you can deny whether we like it or not that their call is there. I agree that the Local Government Article and some of the other articles have removed the causes that bear tremendous amendments, but I agree like someone said up here that it becomes valued judgment, do we feel in our conscience that people really feel that the reason why we're here was a very explicit-- and I guess no more than anything Mr. Jack's amendments and the discussion here today has crystallized to a tremendous extent the need for us to put some sort of limitations on the amount of amendments. I think that fifteen is more reasonable than ten, and I ask your favorable support. I'll yield to questions.

Questions

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Jackson, do you think. . . wouldn't you agree that if we adopted this fifteen limitation and there were fifteen on the ballot every year, that we have failed in our workings in rewriting the constitution?

MR. JACKSON, J.

Well, you know that becomes a valued judgment too. Basically, I think, the document, personally, is going to limit by its nature and its content the amount of amendments. I think that it's the matter of how the amendments are proposed, the quality of the amendments and the contents of the amendment. That's really the test. I do not believe contrary to what one legislator said that in every case that all of the amendments that were proposed was a method of shirking our responsibility because that has not been the case. I just think that it becomes a valued judgment at this point, what you want to do. I just think that some people oversaw the need for the call of this convention on the basis that we need to decrease the amount of amendments, and tragically as that has been, that is, in my opinion, the case.

MR. NUNEZ

Would you also agree that over the next fifty years, if my mathematics serve me right, fifty times fifteen would be about seven hundred and fifteen. . .

MR. JACKSON, J.

I'm not implying. . .

MR. NUNEZ

which is about. . . let me finish -- which is about the same number we've had over the past fifty years?

MR. JACKSON

Well, I'm not implying that if we put ten, fifteen that we're going to have the maximum amount of amendments. I think that the legislature in its deliberative body will only propose those amendments that are necessary. I do believe that the document that we have drafted is very futuristic in its contents, and if need be, --like someone said in opposition-- if need be, you might have to exceed fifteen. I don't think that you're going to get to the point that often that we're going to be proposing amendments more than fifteen amendments. I could have maybe seen a possibility with ten, but I think the danger of exceeding fifteen is much less than that of exceeding ten, so . . . and I think that we've got to agree that there are merits on both sides, and that I'm just basically saying wherein all of that, is that I firmly believe that some people have oversold the call for this convention. If no more of them -- Mr. Jack's amendment-- attempts to crystallize and has crystallize within this body here the need for us to put some sort of limitation. If need be, Senator, I think that their mechanism within this article that would allow, if there was--let's say we had to get sixteen-- that would allow for the calling of maybe. . . it might have to happen that you might have to call a special election to consider an amendment. But, I think fifteen is a great deal of latitude.

Further Discussion

MR. DERBES

Mr. Chairman, I think the theory of this amendment is essentially the same as the theory of the previous one. We have a very limited amount of time remaining for our deliberations. I would, therefore, request the name of the . . . those people on the list to speak and if there are no other people on the list, I would move the previous question.

[Motion to limit debate on the Amendment to thirty minutes adopted without objection.]

Further Discussion

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I don't agree with Mr. Jack that we're making a choice between the legislature and the people. I believe that what we're doing is choosing out wisdom and our ability to see into the future over the wisdom and ability of the people year by year to decide what constitutional amendments are necessary and which are not. The people over the past few years have become very, very cautious about voting on constitutional amendments. They're going to vote no more often than they're going to vote yes regardless of how many are on the ballot. So, I think, perhaps what we ought to do is to leave this to the people not only this year, but every year in the future to decide which constitutional amendments are needed and which are not. I voted against this before, not because the number ten was in there, but on concept. I hope that the authors of this amendment, if the fifteen fails, don't come back with twelve and half. The idea that we've considered one member after another and that there's an amendment that says six amendments sitting on our desk as well proves that we don't really know what number would be right in the year 1980. So, please, let's trust the legislators and the people to decide in the future. Believe me, the people will decide; if it isn't necessary; they're going to vote it down like they have in the past, like they did after the fifty-three. . . the year after the fifty-three I believe there were twelve on the ballots; the people passed two. It proves that they can pick and choose and I beg of you, just don't have this condescending attitude toward the voters of the State of Louisiana. They know what they want. They know how many is too many and we can't choose today how many is too many for this year, next year, or however succeeding years.

Questions

MR. LEITHMAN

Mary, I have just a series of questions and I think some of you delegates should pay attention to these questions because this could affect you particularly in some of the outlining areas. Mary, my first question: do you think that there's a possibility that a parish like Jefferson and Orleans can get together in future legislatures?

MS. ZERVIGON

Absolutely. It's happening now and it's going to happen more and more often in the future.

MR. LEITHMAN

If Jefferson and Orleans were to get together and pick up just a couple of other votes around the parish. . . around the state rather, do you think this coalition could virtually control every constitutional amendment if it is so limited that goes to the people?

MS. ZERVIGON

I think that's perfectly clear. I think that other thing is that hasn't been pointed out is that almost any method that the legislature would choose to select amendments that would go on the ballot would either favor the governor's amendments or the least controversial amendments. The least controversial amendments are likely to be either very, very localized issues or those issues that are least needed. So, I beg of you . . .

Further Discussion

MR. CASEY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I'll make my remarks very brief, but I know you've heard me say many times already the purpose we're meeting here is to limit constitutional amendments, that will be the end result of our efforts, we hope, and grant that I've had many requests at cocktail parties and meetings I've gone to that that is the hope of many individuals. But, you don't gage your votes and you don't make intelligent decisions by what emotionalism is being announced to feel the reaction of people to multitude in this constitutional amendments in the past. You make decisions based on intelligent information that you have. I think here we're going from this sublime to the ridiculous and back. We tried ten amendments we're now taking up fifteen and many of the proponents of the ten amendments which we considered before was that this is what the people like and we may get a few votes for the new constitution when we finish our efforts. Well, when these people, gentlemen and ladies,-- when these people see fifteen amendments and you know and I know that that's not going to happen in the future, but when these people see that we can submit as many as fifteen amendments and it's in writing in black and white in their constitution, you lose the whole psychological effect of the limitation of constitutional amendments that we're try. . . just trying to arrive at through a new constitution. When people see in black and white that their legislature is going to be limited to fifteen amendments, they know that they probably won't understand those fifteen amendments any better than they understood fifty-three amendments which we submitted back in 1970 that a lot of people voted no on just because they didn't understand it, which I personally think is a ridiculous reason to vote against constitutional amendments just because you don't understand something. That's a presumption that you make in saying that it's bad just because it's on the ballot and you don't understand it, and I know a lot of people that have told me that is the reason that they have voted against constitutional amendments. That's neither here nor there, but you've lost your psychological effect when you put a high number like this in our constitution. It's nothing but over reaction to demand the voters, it's emotionalism and I don't care whether you've gotten a thousand letters or had a thousand people tell you to do this. Vote intelligently, don't put something like this in the constitution and let's face it, all the legislators here-- and I'm one of them-- I know what happens in the legislative session, I'm not an administration floor leader, I vote with them when they're right, I vote against them when they're wrong and, by golly, you know what's going to happen when my constitutional amendments come up for consideration, are they going to be considered as one of the ten or the fifteen that appears on the ballot? No. The administration is going to have the greatest impact on deciding what will appear on the ballot, and those favorable to the administration will have their amendments on the ballot, and people like me are going to be left out. Vote this amendment down. It's absolutely unnecessary and ridiculous.

Questions

MR. JUNEAU

Isn't it true as opposed to dealing with these little hypothetical numbers we're talking about, the real place to respond to the demand for people on constitutional amendments was when you dealt with the Local Government Article, isn't that true?

MR. CASEY

Mr. Juneau, I said yesterday, as you know in my arguments, that 1970 the fifty-three constitutional amendments we had, twenty-eight of those were local government, that's eliminated now.

MR. JUNEAU

That's my point, Mr. Casey. So, since we took care of the problem in Local Government Article and knocked out the necessity probably for over eighty-five or ninety percent of these multitudinous amendments people have had to vote on; isn't that right?

MR. CASEY

Absolutely correct, Mr. Juneau.

MR. JUNEAU

So, then if that's true, it's kind of ridiculous to start putting numbers of ten, fifteen, twenty, whatever you want to put in.

MR. CASEY

I think it's going to have a very bad psychological effect.

110th Days Proceedings—January 6, 1974

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Casey, I think I heard you mention the fact voting against something because you didn't understand it and, of course, I kind of picked on it because I'm one of these that's kind of stupid, if I don't understand something I strictly vote against it, and I think the others do the same. I ask you....

MR. CASEY

Mrs. Warren, I don't underrate you at all. I think you undersell yourself.

MRS. WARREN

I asked you as an attorney, seriously, if you prepared a document for one of your clients, would you ask them to read it before they signed it if they were signing a paper or something, or would you guide them to tell them what was in it, or would you just let them sign it blank?

MR. CASEY

Mrs. Warren, it depends on the clients, it depends on the documents, and it depends on the situation; I don't answer questions like that as an attorney, it depends who my clients are. I'm not insulted whether they read it or don't read it. I feel that they have confidence in me as an attorney and that's their business if they wish to read it; I like them to read it, though.

MRS. WARREN

Well, I tell you, I have some....do you know that I have faith in my attorneys, but I tell you experience has taught me one thing, you don't sign it unless you read it.

MR. CASEY

Well, Mrs. Warren, that's no justification for people voting down fifty-three amendment just because they don't understand it, if that's what you referring to. I think that's ill-responsibility on the part of the citizens of this state.

Further Discussion

MR. FULCO

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I'm not down here to convince you or to persuade you in any way to vote for the fifteen. I've lost my enthusiasm for the fifteen because I was in favor of ten and much more than that, I was in favor of six. Now, I know what I'm talking about because I have seen from firsthand how the people were disgusted, amazed, they were frustrated, and confused. They stayed away from the precincts on election time many times because there were too many amendments to vote for. We were making it necessary for them to deprive themselves of performing a civic duty and that was to go to the polls and vote which we always urged the people to do. All throughout my many speeches before civic organizations and on the streets and being confronted by people, all I could hear throughout this one year that we have been working on the constitution what we are trying to give the people was "Don't let us have to vote on too many amendments at general elections." That was the one thing they understood about the purpose and the call for this constitutional convention if they didn't understand anything else. They did know what they wanted and that was that they didn't want too many amendments on the ballots at a general election, make no mistake about it that is one thing they did know. Now, we have disappointed them....I'm only saying this, that we have terribly disappointed the people when we defeated the ten amendments, ten amendments was a reasonable figure. I doubt that we will have too many elections where we will have as many as ten amendments in the future because in writing this constitution, we have seen to it that there will not be necessarily as many as ten amendments in the future, because we have expressed confidence in the legislature in the future by allowing the legislature by a two-thirds vote to take care of what the people would have to take care of in the future in the form of a constitutional amendment. No, I'm not enthusiastic about fifteen; I could care less if it passes. I wasn't enthusiastic about ten, my enthusiasm would have been based on the six limitation. I'm going to tell you that if this matter is given proper publicity back home you will hear from your people, they will let you know how disappointed they are that you did not limit it to ten and much more that you did not limit it to six. I don't criticize you for your vote, you have a perfect right to vote as you saw fit. But, I'm only telling you what the possibilities will be when we do get home.

Questions

MR. ANZALONE

Mr. Frank, is there anything in your amendment that would prohibit a constitutional amendment from affecting all eight articles of the constitution when it is proposed to the people?

MR. FULCO

Anything in the amendment that could....

MR. ANZALONE

Yes, sir. Could I propose a constitutional amendment under this....what you have here that would affect all eight articles of the new constitution?

MR. FULCO

You can submit a constitutional amendment affecting each or you can submit them affecting the eight, it doesn't....

MR. ANZALONE

So, what you're talking about is the complexity of the fifty-three amendments that were defeated. But, in actuality, what you can do under your proposal is to make them further complex by combining them into fifteen amendments rather than the fifty-three that appeared on the ballot in 1970?

MR. FULCO

I don't know that would be the case, I can't see where you could write an amendment that's going to....would cover fifty-three otherwise, but....

Further Discussion

MR. ALEXANDER

Mr. Chairman and delegates, there are three sides to each question as a rule--your side , my side , and the right side . I'm going to discuss the right side . I'm not even going to discuss my side . Now, I have analyzed this question and I've made several startling discoveries. One, we cannot as human beings write a perfect document that will not require amendment forever. To do that would mean that we ascribed to ourselves divine powers, which means that we are infallible, that we know everything and we are beyond error. Now, everyone here who is without error or is beyond error stand and you may vote against this amendment. Now, originally I voted for the amendment stipulating allowing ten... the submission of ten amendments at one time. But, I still feel that if the kind of emergency arises that would require amending this constitution that the people of this state should have the opportunity to do so and some leeway in doing it. Now, let me mention one or two unanticipated occurrences that could take place in this state. For example, there is presently under development the vertical-type take-off airplane, of that concept they perfected a means that each backyard will become a little airport. It means that airports, then, must be controlled and I know legislature is there. There is a question of solar energy which means that an entire parish may be taken for that purpose. Somebody may discover U-235 uranium in Plaquemines Parish or some other parish, it means that the whole parish may have to be evacuated. I am just mentioning those things that could develop that we have no idea they would. So, I'm saying to you that I think fifteen is a good number; I think twenty is too many; and, I think to hog-tie us and put the State of Louisiana in a position where it will be almost impossible to revise or to change this document would be bad for all of us. Thank you.

Questions

MR. BOLLINGER

Reverend Alexander, in your opening remark you said there were three ways of looking at this issue--your way, my way, and the right way. Did you imply by that that you and I are wrong?

MR. ALEXANDER

Not necessarily, I think we may be on the right way now, this was the third way.

MR. WEISS

Reverend Alexander, I was doing a little figuring and if we had passed the ten amendment limitation, in fifty years I thought we would have about five hundred amendments. Now, I feel if we pass the fifteen, we would have seven hundred and fifty amendments because the question I ask you is this: Don't you feel that a limit soon becomes a standard and, therefore, each year we would expect to find fifteen amendments to the constitution whether they are needed or not but just to fill up the spaces?

MR. ALEXANDER

Well, Doctor, I agree with you to some extent. But, I believe that we have built-in provisions in this new constitution that would discourage amendments anyway, that's No. 1. Number two, I believe that once the constitution shall have been amended two hundred times it becomes almost a new document anyway because the '21 Constitution was just about eighty percent amendments and it should have been discarded. So, once it's amended two hundred times it should be discarded or a constitutional convention should be called and a new document written.

110th Days Proceedings—January 6, 1974

Further Discussion

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, delegates, on the Bill of Rights Committee we went through this same process of argument that the convention has done. We've started off, I think most of us thought there was a lot of appeal to setting a maximum number of amendments because there is no doubt that the public is fed up with having to vote on a large number of amendments. There is no doubt that they frequently do not make a good decision because of the large number of amendments. But the thing I think we've found on our committee was the same thing that we are learning as we discuss this proposition that sometimes the most obvious way to do a certain thing is not necessarily the best. The most obvious way to do something about the large number of amendments is to put an absolute ceiling on it, but that is not the best way. I think we have already done in this convention and we will do when we adopt this article the things that will drastically reduce the number of amendments and here's why. First of all, you must, I think, agree that the reason in the past we've had such a large number of amendments is that there has been a legal necessity for having such a large number of amendments. In other words, if the legislature wanted to accomplish a certain end, legally, it could not do it by statute, it had to amend the constitution and as proof of that, I have the last two ballots that we voted on, 1972 and 1970—fifty-three amendments and thirty amendments. If you go down that list, you will find that almost without exception everyone was legally necessary to accomplish the end in view; it was not something the legislature put on there because they wanted to pass the buck; it was something the legislature could not accomplish by statute; they had to have a constitutional amendment to do it, that is not necessary in the future—will not be. For one thing, if you looked through the list of amendments you will see that about sixty percent of them have been local amendments, virtually none of those will be necessary. So, right off the bat you can see that we will be cutting by sixty percent the number of amendments. Now, secondly, we were requiring that bills that would amend the constitution be prefiled. That is bound to reduce by half the number of amendments proposed because legislators traditionally have operated on a last minutes basis and come up with brainstorms during the session and introduced them. If they have to think in advance and introduce things in advance that amend the constitution, you are going to see a drastic reduction in the number introduced; I think at least fifty percent. You can figure that of the forty percent remaining that would be reduced to half of that, twenty percent. I don't see how in the world we will have at most more than twenty percent of the number of amendments we've had in the past, probably not that many. So, the first things are, there won't be the need to have a large number of amendments. Second thing, prefilling is going to drastically reduce the number of amendments that are introduced. Another thing is, the legislature is going to be meeting in general session every year, not every other year, that means in your off years you're going to have some of the slack in amendments taken up that you have in your even numbered years. The fourth item is that if you look in Section 1(C) you'll see that we made a change in the law. We provided there that an amendment can amend more than one article of the constitution if it's confined to one object, the old law was that it could only amend one article. Now, that would further reduce the number of amendments because so often we've had to have four or five amendments on one subject to accomplish a certain end because four or five different articles were being amended at the same time, that's going to further reduce the number of amendments. But, most important of all, I think that holding this constitutional convention will have increased the understanding of our legislature of the nature of our constitution. We are going to have more people in the legislature who understand how our constitution operates. We are going to have more people in the legislature who want to reduce the number of amendments. I think they are going to ask themselves two questions: First, is an amendment necessary? Second, is it desirable? We haven't had that sort of philosophy before but because of the legislators who are in this convention; it's going to be increasingly true in the future and because of the people in this convention are going to be elected to the legislature in the future.

Further Discussion

MR. DREW

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I'm usually very brief, but I'm going to ask you to allow me a little... than I usually take at this microphone because I think this is a very important issue; it would not have been debated for this period of time if it was not important. Now, Mr. Leithman asked Mrs. Zervigon if she did not feel that in the future the New Orleans and Jefferson delegations could form a block and put any amendments they wanted to on the ballot and cut anyone else off. Well, I'm not completely naive; I know that that is a possibility, but I'm realistic enough to know and I have enough confidence in the delegation from those two parishes coupled with the fact that sometimes they do need a few redneck votes to get things done that I don't worry too much about that. This is one of the few occasions that I have risen at this mike to oppose some of the elder statesmen of the legislature. I have great respect for their wisdom, their experience that they have, I'm a freshman legislator. But, let me go into this, there were questions raised and stated from this podium that if we put a figure in the constitution that it would almost be a mandate to the legislature to put fifteen on the ballot; that is the most ridiculous argument I have heard against this proposal. Now, I've done some very quick counting, but let me give you these figures because I think they are very pertinent. In this voting on amendments from between the years of 1922 and 1972 during the first fifteen times that amendments were offered out of the whole thirty-three, during the first fifteen times, nine of the fifteen were fifteen or under submitted. During the last eighteen times that amendments have been submitted, it has been sixteen or more. Now, if I remember my Louisiana history correct, and it's been a long time since I've been through the political part of it, that it was during those earlier years, those first fifteen years after 1921 that so many local matters were incorporated into our constitution to put it into the state it is in now. I don't think that if without those local matters, which has been mentioned here time and time again, that we have deleted those from the Local and Parochial Provisions Article. Therefore, we have accomplished this purpose without putting it in the constitution. Now, let me go a little further and to show you what happens about these constitutional conventions. If you have your same chart, which is available to you, you will find this; I think it has been mentioned here before, that where you have numerous constitutional amendments or even few constitutional amendments and if you will look at the first election after Sam Jones was elected there was a hundred percent approval. If you will look at the first election after Jimmy Davis was elected, there was a hundred percent approval. If you will look at the first election after the first constitutional amendment election after Earl Long went in, in '56 had a hundred percent approval—ten of a hundred percent approval the first time; Long a hundred percent approval the first time; McKeithen was the first governor that had constitutional amendments offered within the first two years after he came into office and didn't get a hundred percent approval of the amendments. So, it has been a popularity contest for the governor because people did not understand in many cases—I have to agree with that—of what they were voting on. But, now we have said this from this podium, time and time again during this debate. We have said, "We have accomplished this purpose. We have already accomplished this purpose by eliminating these local matters." I think we have to a big extent. We have further accomplished this purpose by providing that you can revise an article by one constitutional amendment, talking about the cleanup procedure that may follow in the immediate years after this constitution is adopted. If there are five or six, or ten minor technical errors or errors that have to be corrected in one article, that one article can be re-adopted and straighten out six errors at one time. Now, you have heard from the proponents of this... I mean the opponents of this amendment, time and time again that we have already done this and this work so this is not necessary. Well, ladies and gentlemen, if you believe we have already done it, let's show our confidence in our work and put this fifteen amendment limit into the constitution. I would hate to go to one of my constituents and he says, "How many amendments are we going to have to vote on?" I said, "I think we've got it setup to where you... we won't submit more than fifteen." But, I can't say it, if it's not in the constitution, please support this amendment.

Closing

MR. JACK

Mr. Chairman and fellow members, first, I want to ask for a record vote. I furthermore want to ask for a vote by voice, the machine is broken down over there at the convention hall; it's broken down; it's telling a story about the vote, I was told this by a deputy clerk; it's true if it would be against me, but it's not a correct vote. I don't want to be computerized. I say I move for the record vote plus a voice vote, Mr. Chairman.

MR. HENRY

Mr. Roemer wants to know what you said about computers, he didn't hear you, that's Mr. "Sixty" Roemer up here.

MR. JACK

I don't know about his computer, but this computer up here is not doing right, and I want a ruling because I think....

[Record voice vote ordered.]

MR. JACK

I'm not going to talk but a minute, but I want to get my mouth open.... so, a voice vote is ordered; is that correct, also?
Mr. Chairman?

MR. POYNTER

That's correct, Mr. Jack.

MR. HENRY

Yes, sir.

MR. JACK

O.K. I'll just close with this note. It's again shown to be a battle between the people and the legislature anyway you cut it. Fifteen is a good number. I think you ought to follow it. Just use your own conscience. But, I don't see how you can go against the people. Nobody opposing this has said anybody has told them, "We don't want to limit the number of amendments." So, your mandate is to vote for this. Thank you.

Question

MR. LEBLEU

Mr. Jack, when those folks in Caddo told you that they didn't want to vote on so many amendments, did they tell you that they didn't want to vote on so many amendments that were statewide or they didn't want to vote on so many amendments say that pertain to New Orleans, or Jefferson, or Cameron, or other parts of the state where they felt that they had not responsibility?

MR. JACK

Number one, you have it entirely wrong when you say "those people in Caddo." During the entire twenty-four years that I was in the legislature, I had people from all over the state talking about there were too many amendments, they didn't have time to study them. The history was, and you check it for a long time...no time could we consider them. For a good, long time the protest was passing them all. But, in these years seeing that didn't work they voted against them all. It's not just the people from Caddo I talked to. You know, any legislator talks to people all over the state and they have been against all these amendments for the twenty-four years I was there. I don't limit it just to Caddo, as a delegate....

MR. HENRY

You've exceeded your time, sir.

[Amendment rejected: 34-78. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Personal Privilege

MR. LOWE

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, yesterday when we met there was only one roll call and that was the opening roll call to open the day's proceedings, after that there were no record votes at all. The point that I wanted to make to you is we use the Official Journal to see whether you were present or not, you often miss the opening roll call but vote on a subsequent record vote. So, we are able to pick you up by means of that. Now, if you missed the roll call yesterday and came in late and attended the convention, you might see me and give me a little affidavit or something so that we will know that you were present. Thank you.

Personal Privilege

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman, I'm aggrieved, I don't know if I missed the opening roll call. Mr. Lowe said we often miss the opening roll call, only some of us do.

MR. JACK

Mr. Chairman, this old dog....I want to go with it.

MR. HENRY

All right. Mr. Clerk, read the amendment.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, between lines 26 and 27, insert the following Paragraph:

"No more than six proposed amendments shall be submitted to the electors of the state at any one election. The legislature shall provide the method for selecting which amendments shall be submitted at a particular election. The effective date of this Paragraph shall be January 1, 1978."

Point of Order

MR. TOCA

Mr. Chairman, Mr. Jack's got one for six, maybe he'll drop one down for four, two, and then we'll go down to one and this thing could go on forever.

MR. HENRY

Sir? Will you repeat that, Mr. Toca?

MR. TOCA

I said, Mr. Jack started with one for ten; then, he went up to fifteen; now, he's got one for six. Well, if he gets defeated maybe he'll come back with one for four, three, two, one and we could be here forever.

MR. HENRY

Yes, sir, we could, Mr. Toca. Would you like to do something? Do you have an amendment for maybe thirteen?

MR. TOCA

No. I would like to put it for one.

[Motion to table the Amendment. Motion for a record vote.]

MR. HENRY

Therefore, when....The gentleman requests a record vote. Will twenty-six delegates join him? A record vote is not obvious. There are not twenty-six hands up, Mr. Jack.

Mr. Champagne, why do you rise, sir?

Point of Order

MR. CHAMPAGNE

I just want to ask you, is this a move to just abolish debate in this convention? If it is, then, I feel we need a record vote for those people who want to muffle people who want to get up and say....

MR. HENRY

Now, you're debating this....Mr. Champagne, if twenty-six people rise, we can have a record vote.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Can I make a motion that it is a record vote, sir, or is that out of order?

MR. HENRY

Someone has already requested a record vote and we are trying to find whether there are twenty-six people who want one, Mr. Champagne.

[Record vote ordered. Motion withdrawn.]

Explanation

MR. JACK

Mr. Chairman and members, I think some of this that just went on was pretty shoddy. These amendments were on your desk before we started this particular proposal, then new ones to make it come on page one. Now, everybody gets to vote like they want to, that was a silly statement, if you know me, to say I would have another amendment here for one amendment, two amendments, three amendments, four, and five. I don't play that way. This is not for me, so you understand that. This is for the people. We had three of them, six, ten and fifteen. As far as I'm concerned, this is the last one. I did not understand the people, a lot of them wanted six after defeating ten and fifteen. But, I've had a number of people ask me to go with this. I keep my word. I don't know how everybody does. You just do what you want. I told the people, and I know the people want a limitation, over fifteen is not a limitation. This is not an invitation to hand them fifteen even each time. Now, you vote what you want to. I do thank you for giving me this opportunity. As far as I'm concerned, Mr. Speaker, you can use that rotten machine up there, roll call or however you want to do it. This is all I can do. But, I am going to ask because I don't believe that machine is working, I'm going to ask for a roll call by voice.

Questions

MR. STAGG

I want to ask Mr. Jack if he wants to remove his name as the coauthor on one that has just been put on our desk that there be no more than twenty amendments, his name is the lead author on it, twenty limitations?

MR. JACK

That is one that was drawn...who all's on that, Mr. Stagg, I haven't seen it?

MR. STAGG

Mr. Jack, Mr. Smith, Mr. Fulco, Shannon, Asseff, and Velazquez.

MR. JACK

All right. That was drawn, and I understood I was to give the word after the other, and I forgot to give it. But, I do not see that this twenty will do any good. But, let me ask this: Do you think it will, Mr. Stagg? Does anybody think it will? Well, I'd be a damn idiot and I ain't an idiot. Now, you do what you want on this. I think after all consideration I would be using up the time. I think the majority is wrong in this instance because the majority is not representing the people. Be that as it may, that's what we're governed by. I promised I would submit this amendment. I keep my promises. But, I do ask for a mouth vote on it because I don't believe that machine.

Further Discussion

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise not so much to speak in opposition to this particular amendment but, hopefully, to admonish the delegates of this convention possibly a little bit, and also to call to your attention the fact that we are fast running out of time. We have approximately thirteen more days to go if we work straight through. As a member of Style and Drafting, I know the tremendous job which lays ahead of us in straightening out so many provisions which will have to come back to you. So, I really would like to urge all of you, please, let's get about our business as quickly as we possibly can. I don't mean my remarks to be intended to limit anybody to offer any amendment he wishes to offer. But, I do seriously urge all of you, "Please, let's get about our business. Let's see if we can't move along because if we don't we're going to be working virtually twenty-four hours a day and we are going to make many mistakes." So, I, therefore, move the previous question.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. JACK

...I want a record vote by voice.

[Record voice vote ordered.]

Point of Order

MR. NUNEZ

Point of order, Mr. Chairman. Have we ever determined that the machine is not working? Mr. Jack has made a...well, I'm not going to argue, I would just like to know if the machine is working.

MR. HENRY

The gentleman can request a voice vote if he desires, Senator Nunez.

[Amendment rejected: 36-77. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The next amendment is sent up by Mr. Jenkins and Mr. Abraham. Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 15, after the words "at any" and before the word "session" insert the word "regular". Amendment No. 2. On page 1, line 19, after the word and punctuation "session." and before the word "if" insert the following: "An amendment to this constitution may be proposed at any extraordinary session of the legislature if it is within the call of the session and is introduced in the first five calendar days thereof."

Explanation

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, this is our attempt to resolve that problem we discussed earlier, to make clear that an amendment to the constitution, general in nature, would have to be introduced only in regular sessions and that also there would be no pre-filing requirement for special sessions, but that you would have to file during the first five calendar days and that such a joint resolution would have to be within the call of the session. That's the essence of it, and I would be glad to try to answer any questions.

Questions

MR. CASEY

Mr. Jenkins, I agree with what you are trying to do. I'm just concerned about the use of that wording "if it's contained within the call of the convention". Does the subject matter only have to be contained in the call or does the fact that a joint resolution, an announcement of the fact that a joint resolution will be introduced to do such and such? Does not that, therefore, eliminate the possibility of you as an individual delegate not being able to introduce your own joint resolution on the same subject matter? Doesn't that give then the governor the exclusive right to do something within that particular call and only the right...the only one who would have a right to introduce a joint resolution on that subject matter; is that not correct?

MR. JENKINS

No, Tom, because when the governor issues a call he issues it by subject matter. He says, for instance, (1)---to legislate with regard to property taxes or (2)---to legislate with regard to the Bill of Rights, for example. So long as a joint resolution would be within that subject matter, it would be covered. The call does not say to consider the adoption of a certain bill by number.

MR. CASEY

But, that's the way it reads, that's what I'm worried about. If you read your amendment, does not your amendment read that way that an announcement of the fact that a joint resolution will be introduced to do such and such? Can it not be interpreted to that effect?

MR. JENKINS

You know, perhaps it could be interpreted that way; that's not the intent because it...the intent is to show that the subject matter of the joint resolution is within the call. I think it's clear, but...Mr. Poynter suggests that we might say after the words "within the" and before the word "call" we might insert the words "objects of the" so that it says "if it is within the objects of the call of the session." Do you think that would solve your problem?

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

O.K. On the third line he would add these words "within the" and add the words--this is the language in the Legislative Article--"objects of the call of the session and is introduced" add the wording after "within the" and before the word "call", "objects of the". "An amendment to this constitution may be proposed at any extraordinary session of the legislature if it is within the objects of the call of the session and is introduced in the first five calendar days thereof."

MR. JENKINS

I would like to move the adoption.

Questions

MR. RAYBURN

Woody, in your opinion, how broad would the object of the call be? I mean, I'm just curious as to know how broad that language would be.

MR. JENKINS

Well, as I understand it that language "objects of the call" is the same language contained in the Legislative Article for bills, so I think it would be the same standard, whatever that standard might be.

MR. HAYES

Mr. Jenkins, are they prohibited now without this amendment? Would they be prohibited?

MR. JENKINS

Well, without this amendment you would have to prefile all joint resolutions ten days before the session, even in the case of a special session, and because the governor can call a special session on five day's notice that would give the governor sort of an unfair advantage because he could have his legislation prefiled and no one else would even know that you were going to have a special session, so that's what this is an attempt to correct.

MR. GOLDMAN
Delegate Jenkins, would you say or would the call in a special session by just stating "that" amendments to the constitution may be proposed at this session"? Would that satisfy the object of the call without any subject matter being in it?

MR. JENKINS
No, I don't think a call that vague and broad would meet the requirements of the Legislative Article because it says that the governor has to state the specific purposes for the call; I don't think that would be specific enough.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: viva voce.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER
Mr. Shannon sends up the following amendment:
Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 23, immediately after the word "in" and before the word "the" insert the words "at least eight point type in".

Explanation

MR. SHANNON
Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, since we are going to publish notice of this, I believe that we should have a notice that we can read. At the present time it takes a microscope to read the advertisement. . . the legal advertisement section of a paper. I apparently . . . I was going to offer this up above on you, but this was the proper place in this because this would be advertised in different journals in every parish of the state. I realize that this is going to cost some . . . a little additional money to do this because it's going to take more space. . . more lines and you are charged by the line on it, but I believe that this would give every person then an opportunity to read and more readily digest what they are supposed to know about this constitutional amendment at that time. I'm not going to take up any more of your time, but this is simply what it is in order that the people can read it. It would be more readable because I've seen these advertisements when I have to use glasses to read, and I have to get something more powerful than my glasses to read it at times. So, I would ask your favorable consideration of this. If there's no questions, I move the previous question, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

MR. NEWTON
Mr. Shannon, couldn't this be handled by the legislature just as easily?

MR. SHANNON
Yes, but a lot of things we have in here could have been handled by the legislature just as easily too, Mr. Newton.

MR. HENRY
Would you yield to a question from Mr. Fulco?

MR. FULCO
Mr. Shannon, what size type is used now?

MR. SHANNON
I don't know; it must be about four and a half or four and a half by five is what I've been advised; I really don't know. I was just going by the type that I've tried to read in the past.

MR. FULCO
Mr. Shannon, the eight point type is the type that's used in the body of articles now in the newspapers. Do you think that's very much larger than perhaps a six point type that's used? Wouldn't you still have difficulty in reading eight point type?

MR. SHANNON
Well, I don't have any difficulty in reading the newspaper, so this is the same type I understand that the newspaper uses.

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

MR. BLAIR
Mr. Shannon, what about the cost; have you run any analysis on the cost?

MR. SHANNON
No, I have not, Senator. I would say that perhaps it would cost about a third more.

MR. GUARISCO
Mr. Shannon, would you be amenable to placing the brand of the teletype that might do this or maybe suggest as an alternative to use disappearing ink?

MR. SHANNON
If we're going to use the same type they are using now, they may have well used disappearing ink.

MR. LANIER
Mr. Shannon, don't you believe that the legislature, unless it's prohibited, could prescribe by statute the type of type that this can be run in?

MR. SHANNON
Oh, yes. Yes, they could, but would they? Since we are dealing with this and we specify that it should be advertised, I think we should specify how it's advertised and the type to be used. They could specify the whole thing and we can do away with this whole thing.

MR. LANIER
Would I be correct then in saying that your position is that you think this is the type of detail that should be in our new constitution?

MR. SHANNON
I'm not going to say that, but I don't think it's any more superfluous than a lot of things we have in the constitution.

MR. CASEY
Mr. Derbes is recognized for a question.

MR. DERBES
Mr. Shannon, I'd just like to know if you're really serious about this amendment?

MR. SHANNON
Yes, I am serious about it, and I do not own any interest in any printing company either.

Personal Privilege

MRS. WARREN
Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I didn't feel really strong one way or the other about the amendment; however, I did say "aye". But, we're going to have some other amendments coming up and I don't know whether I'm going to be for them or against them, but if you have the "aye's" before you have the "no's" those persons are going to hear the "aye's" first and you can bet your bottom dollar they're going to sing louder in order to get it over with. So, if this is the way we're going to do it, I think we'd better get rid of the "aye's" and "no's" and let's vote it down. This is all I'm saying, not for me personally, but in fairness to everything that's coming up in the convention. Thank you.

Point of Information

MR. BURNS
Is there actually anything wrong with that machine that we can't use it from now on that we've finished with Mr. Jack's amendment?

MR. POYNTER
It really did, Mr. Burns, when we took the Jack amendment. The machine for some reason totalled about five fewer nays than it should have totalled. It voted everyone correctly, but as far as . . . and this machine perforates rather than printing, but it perforated each person's machine correctly, but the counter on the "nay's" was incorrectly not voting, and the "yea's" tabulated correctly. It's got a reset button on it, but I've exhausted of my knowledge of why it didn't count correctly, so I personally feel a little safer in not using it.

110th Days Proceedings—January 6, 1974

Personal Privilege

MR. MUNSON

I was going to suggest, Mr. Chairman that we try it one more time to see if it will work, just to try to save some time . . . see if it's working correctly.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Munson, the only problem is we would have to try the machine and then try also a roll call vote to see how the vote compares against the machine.

MR. POYNTER

No. . . that really we could just open the machine if you want to, Mr. Vice-Chairman; it will work because I know it's perforating right and I can just count the nays and see if it's counting correctly, but I feel pretty confident it's not working really. Well, if it did once and there's not something been fixed, if it does it right the next time I'm still not going to trust it the third time; fifty-fifty is not too good of odds when you're counting someone's vote.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Jenkins and Mr. Gravel at this time together send up amendments.

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, at the end of line 26, after the word and punctuation "electorate." delete Floor Amendment No. 1 proposed by Delegates Pugh and Casey and adopted by the convention on January 5, 1974, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Each joint resolution shall specify the statewide election at which the proposed amendment shall be submitted. Special elections for submitting proposed amendments may be authorized by law."

Would anyone like for me to read the Pugh amendment or do you still have that in front of you that you adopted on yesterday? The Pugh amendment that you adopted on yesterday then reads as follows:

"The election shall be statewide and the resolution shall provide for the date on which such election shall be held," and that was the Pugh-Casey amendment adopted yesterday. Mr. Jenkins proposes to delete that language and insert what's before you in lieu thereof.

Explanation

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this amendment really is to clarify Mr. Pugh's amendment and to make some . . . a technical change in it I think. Mr. Casey who is a coauthor with Mr. Pugh yesterday has agreed to it and he thinks it's all right. The problem with Mr. Pugh's amendment was it says that "the resolution shall provide for the date on which such election shall be held." Now, the intent was to allow that special elections be held for amendments. However, what this does is it allows a joint resolution to call a special election, and that really doesn't make too much sense for several reasons. For one thing, a joint resolution is not law and a special election can be called only as provided by law. The difference is this, you might have in your election code a means for calling special elections and anything adopted in the election code can be vetoed by the governor. A joint resolution cannot be vetoed by the governor and that's the main distinction. If you allow the joint resolution not only to say at which election the amendment would be voted on, but to set a date for an election you're doing something that is not vetoable, and that's contrary to the concept on which we've had elections before. So, what this amendment that I'm offering does it says that you can have special elections, but those special elections will be as provided by law, not as established in some joint resolution. You have many things that have to be done every time you have a special election; for one thing, money has to be appropriated. Any time you have an appropriation for money that certainly would be vetoable by the governor, so you wouldn't want a situation whereby a mere resolution coming out you could have a special election called. So, that's a hiatus that this amendment is trying to correct, and I'd like to urge adoption of it.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: 89-1. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Alphonse Jackson sends up amendments at this time. A single amendment which reads as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 27, after the word "voting" delete the words "for or against" and insert in lieu thereof the word "on".

Explanation

MR. JACKSON, A.

Mr. Vice Chairman, this is just a technical amendment to straighten out the language so that we can be sure that the sentence says what we want it to say, and less confusing the way it was cast in the committee's report, and we wanted to straighten out the language. It's a technical amendment; I move adoption.

[Amendment reread and adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Yea. Mr. Perez at this time sends up amendments. Mr. Perez sends up amendments which will read as follows: Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 31, after the words and punctuation "otherwise provided." delete the remainder of line 31 and delete all of line 32 and on page 2, delete all of lines 1 through 4 both inclusive, in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"However, no proposed amendment affecting five or fewer parishes or areas within five or fewer parishes shall become part of this constitution unless approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon in the state and also a majority of the electors voting thereon in each such parish."

Explanation

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, first of all I understand that the committee has no objection to the adoption of the amendment that I have proposed. One of the problems with the provision as it appears on line 31, 32, and on the next page is it would require a majority of the electors of the entire parish not of just those voting on the proposition. In addition to that, we have the confusion--if you'll look at line 3, on page 2-- it says of the "affected areas," and we don't know whether an area is a parish, a municipality or part of a district, etc. I've discussed this matter with the secretary of state's office; there is a similar provision in the present constitution which is also very confusing and they have never been able to really determine what it means because of the fact that we don't sufficiently pin down the areas in which you would have to have a majority vote. Therefore, in the amendment which I have proposed it would require that if there are five or fewer parishes or areas within five or fewer parishes which the proposed constitution amendment would affect, then it would have to have a favorable vote of the majority of those voting in the election in each of those parishes or parts. . . in each of the parishes in which there may . . . it would affect. In other words, it would have to have the vote . . . a favorable vote of the entire parish not just a part of a parish so that we would know when the votes were tabulated definitely as to whether or not the constitutional provision had passed because it gets very confusing. If you say in a political subdivision or the area because we . . . there's no way, really, to understand and know whether or not the amendment has really passed because you don't know exactly who it's affected, because it affects a municipality, it affects a parish, it affects the particular district involved, etc. So, I would, therefore, move the adoption of the amendment if there are no objections.

Questions

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Perez, I notice the way the amendment is drawn you say "a majority of the electors voting therein in each such parish." Now, suppose you had an amendment that affected five parishes and it passes in four of those parishes and did not pass in the fifth parish; you mean the amendment would be defeated?

MR. PEREZ

Yea sir, and that's because of the fact that the very purpose of this provision is to give protection to the areas involved and we could, of course, have no provision, and if it passed within the state, then it would pass. But, the whole theory of this particular proposal and that which was in the committee proposal was to assure that it also had to pass in those local areas as well as statewide.

MR. DE BLIEUX

In other words, if you had . . . such of a district that would be composed of five parishes and four of those parishes approved the vote for setting up the district and the fifth parish didn't; it would not be a valid constitutional amendment?

110th Days Proceedings—January 6, 1974

MR. PEREZ

That's correct. Again the theory being that if you're going to have something that affects a limited local area it should have the approval of those . . . each of those particular areas.

MR. KELLY

Mr. De Blieux asked the thing I was concerned about. It looks like to me that you could have the entire state saying yes, we want this, you could have four out of five parishes saying you want this and then one parish says no, and it's dead. Is that correct?

MR. PEREZ

That's correct. Again, I can tell you why. For instance, we have this problem of metropolitan government and you could have the larger parishes decide they want to gobble up the little fellow, and they could have a constitutional amendment passed where the people in that local area were totally against it and yet, we would have the larger parish taking over the smaller parish.

MR. KELLY

Well, let me ask one further question: do you foresee this as being an encouragement to go back to having constitutional amendments on local matters?

MR. PEREZ

I would think it would be possibly more of a discouragement than encouragement, but I don't think that it will really affect it one way or the other because of the fact that we don't have all of those detailed provisions in the constitution now under local governmental matters.

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Perez, if you left in the aggregate of the electors in the affected parishes, wouldn't that cover the situation? That's the way the law is now in effect as I understand it. If you had say three, four or five parishes and the majority vote of those five parishes were in favor of the amendment, it would be adopted, is that correct?

MR. PEREZ

No. Well, that's the very purpose of this amendment and the very theory of having the local people approve it, is to see to it that the local people in each particular area approve it and not overall because we could say if we're talking about five parishes, why not all sixty-four parishes of the state, the main theory of having the local areas affected approve it is to see that each one of them approve it, not that the total vote of all would approve it.

MR. DENNERY

Thank you.

MR. STAGG

Chalin, I think Senator De Blieux came close also to asking my question, but let's be specific because one of your answers, I think, came close to satisfying what my curiosity was. If there was an amendment affecting river parishes, let's take Orleans, St. Charles, Jefferson, Plaquemines and St. Bernard, and these five parishes were the only parishes affected by that particular amendment. If it did not pass in Plaquemines Parish though it might have gotten half a million votes elsewhere, it would not become a part of the constitution for that reason would it?

MR. PEREZ

Well, I think that the problem involved is more just the other way around, and I do know that there are many of us who are concerned about the larger area having the large number of votes taking over the smaller area and we have a real problem with metropolitan government. We have determined earlier in this convention that we would have cooperation between parishes voluntarily, but it would require the two-thirds vote of each parish affected in order to be able to consolidate parishes. Well, if we leave this provision as it is, it could circumvent and get around that through a constitutional amendment and just a majority of those voting within the entire area, which is a very dangerous concept.

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Perez, you've made another change besides leaving the words "in the aggregate." The committee proposal says political subdivisions which would be any special district or school boards or things like that, and you could also have used the phrase --if you didn't want to say "parishes"-- you could have used the phrase "local governmental subdivisions" which would have meant municipalities and parishes. You haven't given this protection to municipalities and I wanted to know if the legislative intent is Orleans a parish or a municipality under your amendment?

MR. PEREZ

Well, of course, Orleans is both a parish and a municipality, so you would come in with respect to the parish. But, the problem is this, the reason that I put "parish" alone and not the affected political subdivision is that we have a single provision in the present constitution and it is virtually impossible to determine the question is who has approved something. For instance, if you have a municipality within a parish and that municipality votes in favor and the parish so does not vote in favor, do you count the votes of the municipality in the parish and also count the votes for the municipality within the municipality to determine whether or not the amendment has passed. It poses such a tremendous number of questions that I tried to get this down to an area which was totally understandable, possibly not totally acceptable, but at least when the votes were canvassed they would know that it had to have the majority of the votes in the parish so that you're reducing a statewide approval situation to a statewide and a local. Now, it may not be as totally local as we'd like to see it, but it was the only solution that I could find to the problem of being able to definitely determine whether or not it had actually been adopted.

MS. ZERVIGON

So, what you're saying is if the amendment were cast in the language "cities over four hundred thousand" we would have no protection, but if it were cast on the language "parishes over four hundred thousand," we would?

MR. PEREZ

No, I think, that because of the fact you say "cities over four hundred thousand" and only one will be affected within that parish, if it carried in the Parish of Orleans you're taken care of. I see no problem . . . because of the fact that the city of New Orleans is coextensive with the Parish of Orleans.

MS. ZERVIGON

Well, let me ask you one more question: if it said cities over a hundred thousand or something like that and it affected only five or fewer cities, would it not be understandable that you counted the votes within those cities to see whether or not the affected areas had approved? Couldn't you have cast your amendment to say local governmental subdivision and approved by each local governmental subdivision; would not that have been clear?

MR. PEREZ

No, if it has not, because that's the same problem that's come up before because of the fact that when you say local governmental subdivision you include cities and parishes. . . . what you're doing is you've got to count both the cities and the parishes, and it gets very, very complicated.

MR. ARNETTE

Anyway, Chalin, as I see it, what the problem you're pointing out to us is, say, over in my area, if Calcasieu Parish would want to take over Cameron Parish, for example, under this present provision they could. . . under the present provision they could do so if they only had a majority vote out of both parishes combined, even if Cameron Parish didn't want it and you wanted to prevent this?

MR. PEREZ

That's correct. The purpose of this, each particular parish affected vote in favor.

MR. CANNON

Mr. Perez, somewhat in the . . . to follow Mr. De Blieux's comments a little further and I think you know I favor this, if these four. . . if four out of these five parishes wanted to collectively do some particular thing in the local and parochial section, could they not do this by local referendum?

MR. PEREZ

They can get together with any governmental cooperation and there are many other ways that they can accomplish it under the present constitution. But, keep in mind what we're talking about here is the process by which we amend the constitution and through this method we could virtually destroy many of the local government provisions by having. . . which protects one smaller area against a larger area we could virtually destroy it if we adopt the provision as the committee has it proposed.

MR. CANNON

Don't you see that this. . . the local referendum method is a way to prevent amendments to the constitution?

110th Days Proceedings—January 6, 1974

MR. PEREZ

There's no question, we have adequate provisions in Local Government Article IX for any governmental cooperation in so many other ways where they can accomplish the same objective without having to have a constitutional amendment.

MR. D'GEROLAMO

Mr. Perez, in Local and Parochial Government Articles that we've passed did not we put in there a safeguard by which smaller parishes who are bidding larger parishes are protected from being engulfed and taken over by the larger parishes?

MR. PEREZ

That's correct. But, the problem we have involved here is that that could be taken out of the constitution if the committee proposal as it stands or rather remain because you could then take out of the constitution, particularly with regard to special situations, that provision. So that, in effect, by majority vote you could change parish boundaries by having a majority of those in the area...in a total area affected instead of having...by amending the constitution sort of having two-thirds as is required in our Local Government Article.

MR. D'GEROLAMO

That was my second question and because of this we should vote for this amendment here to keep the protections that are voted...that are protected in Municipal...Parochial Government.

MR. PEREZ

This is consistent with what we have adopted in our Local Government Article.

MR. D'GEROLAMO

Thank you, sir.

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Perez, that was one of my questions Mr. D'Gerolamo just asked. But, isn't there a provision now that when an amendment affects one or more parishes and less than five that there is a question whether that amendment, if it affects that parish, that it should also pass in that particular parish? That is not clear in this article nor is it clear in the present constitution; is that not correct?

MR. PEREZ

That's a problem. The present constitutional provision is not totally clear; it does use the words "in the aggregate" but it also says "in the affected political subdivision or subdivisions." So, that you don't really know even in the present constitution whether it requires that in each or in all in the aggregate because of the confusion in the language and there was confusion in this language as well. So, therefore, I thought this was the best solution to the problem and one which would protect local determination.

MR. KEAN

Mr. Perez, my problem is with your reference to areas within five or fewer parishes. What do you mean by areas?

MR. PEREZ

Well, I picked up that language out of what was in the particular... in the article, but as long as it's within the particular parish, I don't think it gives us too much trouble. One of the problems you have is it may be a municipality; it may be, for instance, a part of a levee district; it may be some sort of a park commission, so it was difficult to...in one word or in a very few words to try to be all inclusive so that's why I used the word "areas." But, as long as that area is within the parish it has to have the vote of the parish. I don't think you have a problem.

MR. KEAN

That was my other question. In other words, if the area is affected and the entire parish would not be affected even if the people in that area, for example, voted a hundred percent against it; if the majority of the electors in the parish you vote voted in favor of it, it would none the less apply to that area?

MR. PEREZ

Yes, sir, that's one of the problems involved with the amendment but what is the alternative? That was the problem that I faced when I prepared this amendment because the present constitutional provision is so confused and there is no way in general terms to try to define every situation that you are talking about. I felt we would be a lot better off in reducing that approved vote to the parishes so that we would have something new from the constitution as opposed to having something which really means nothing now and we really don't understand what it means.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Perez, I would like to, you might say, ask to reverse the question I originally asked a few minutes ago. I can envision a situation where you might have, say like, a parish of Orleans, and Jefferson, and St. John, and St. Charles in a particular area, it may be for a regional airport authority or something of that sort. Now, here you might have an overwhelming vote in Orleans Parish, and in Jefferson Parish, and in St. Charles Parish but St. John Parish, being a very small parish, might vote against it and ruin the whole business because, as I take it, there has to be a vote of each parish, not the total effect of. Do I interpret your amendment correct in that regard?

MR. PEREZ

It would be my suggestion that they would have left that smaller parish out to begin with, but don't force that smaller parish into something that they don't want.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, now, I'm just asking that question. If it's not going to be the aggregate vote of the whole situation, that's what I'm... the whole area, that's what I'm speaking about.

MR. PEREZ

Well, again, we have in our Local Government Article all kinds of provisions for intergovernmental cooperations voluntarily. I just don't see where this is any real problem from the standpoint of trying to actively accomplish something because of the provisions which we do have in our Local Government Article which allows parishes to get together and perform all of these governmental functions so cooperatively. So, I see no problem in that.

MR. DE BLIEUX

But, I do interpret your amendment correctly by...to the effect that a small parish could defeat the whole purpose of an amendment.

MR. PEREZ

Yes, and I think rightfully so because I don't believe that you ought to force anybody into anything unless they feel that the people of that area feel that they should have it. Again, if the people are proposing something and are intelligent in their approach, they'll just leave those small fellows out to begin with.

MR. FLORY

Mr. Perez, I can appreciate the problem that you're trying to solve here. But, let's for sake of argument take the example where you have a levee district, for example, covers four parishes and one small ward in another parish and for the preservation of human life it dictates that you either build the levees higher, or bigger, or longer and you have to have additional constitutional authority for taxes, etc. in order to do that before the major parishes vote heavily in favor of doing it and maybe the small ward or the very small parish would reject it. Don't you think, then, that you are really defeating the purpose which you are trying to accomplish?

MR. PEREZ

Well, the specific example you used, I don't believe it will ever arise because of the fact that that levee district has the right to increase taxes by a vote of the people within the district. So, I can't conceive of how that situation would ever arise because we have given authority, for instance, to the levee districts to increase their millage rates for any of their authorized purposes and to bond and to fund the proceeds into the bonds so that such subject matters now coming up. I just think that we are putting up some scarecrows that don't exist.

Mr. Perez, I only used that as a hypothetical case, and I don't know what the future holds. I just say that in the event that you needed some additional constitutional authority to solve a problem of that type whether it be taxes or whatever it may be, wouldn't the situation which I gave you the very minute minority of a group to kill something that might save human lives in that situation?

Well, again, I can't conceive of this human lives problem. But, again, I say to you that if we are going to have a provision in the constitution which returns terms aside of a home rule situation where the local area has to approve it; then, I think it's proper that we say each parish affected should approve it or else not say it at all and just say you can pass a statewide provision and the local lawyers rather have no say-so over it. I don't know how you are going to solve the problem otherwise and I just....

110th Days Proceedings—January 6, 1974

MR. ROEMER

Chalin, I either failed to hear or you didn't say about where this figure five comes from; is that in the law now?

MR. PEREZ

It's in the present constitution and was picked up in the present provision submitted by the....

MR. LANIER

Mr. Perez, all of these special districts and things, we took all of that out in Local Government didn't we?

MR. PEREZ

That's right. That's why I can't conceive of how this has any real....opposes any real problem such as was asked just a moment ago because we have taken away the necessity for constitutional amendments and provisions with respect to all of these various things. The only purpose of this amendment that I can conceive of, really, would be in areas where you would want to amend the constitution to take away from local government authorities. I just think we ought to protect those local governments involved.

MR. LANIER

Well, it would also apply wouldn't it, Mr. Perez, if somebody started trying to put all this junk back in?

MR. PEREZ

That's correct, it certainly would.

Further Discussion

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Acting Chairman and delegates, I want to make it clear to you that we are voting on two things right now. One is the question of whether parishes in the aggregate should agree to something or whether one may be able to veto it. The other is the question of whether this should apply only to parishes. It's not clear at all to me and I've talked to Mr. Kean, he feels the same way, that municipalities are covered at all. So, I beg of you to defeat this until we can come up with an amendment that separates these two issues. I really don't see the problem Mr. Perez raises about metropolitan government and big fish gobbling up little fish and all of that kind of stuff because all the anti-goblin measures we put in this new constitution we put in general terms and it would more or less have to be amended in general terms. Believe me, we've got enough troubles in New Orleans, we don't want to expand and take over anybody else's troubles; that's not the problem. But, this was put in the old constitution to protect areas from unfriendly governors. I want to make sure that the areas that were protected under the old constitution are protected under the new constitution. We've had a couple of good governors recently, but I'll tell you I don't feel that we should relax and remove this protection from anybody. If what Mr. Perez is really trying to do is to expand protection, I would like to make his amendment as clearly worded as he would like it to be so that everybody is certain that they are protected in the same way that he would be protected. There are no municipalities in his area, I'm sure it wasn't with malice of forethought, I would just like to be certain that municipalities are covered in this protection whether it's extended to those parishes voting in the aggregate or not.

Questions

MR. ABRAHAM

Mary, in the Perez amendment when you say any area within a parish, won't that cover any municipality within the parish?

MRS. ZERVIGON

Well, I know it doesn't cover mine because mine's not in a area within the parishes or parish sort of, but Mr. Kean is also not clear that it covers Baton Rouge and I don't like the word municipality mentioned.

MR. ABRAHAM

But, the city of New Orleans is in a parish, is it not?

MRS. ZERVIGON

No, it's not; it is a parish, sort of. The purpose of the cigarette tax is the parish, but the purpose of the alimony tax.... I mean, it's the city...for the purpose of the alimony tax it's a parish. What it would mean is that if there were an unfriendly governor that wanted to affect one area and most of the amendments that affect fewer than five areas affect only one. If there were an unfriendly governor, if he could stop us from amending the amendment on the floor to cause it to be a parish instead of city, it isn't at all clear to me that we would be protected. Thank you very much.

MR. JENKINS

Mary, you said that Orleans is not interested in gobbling up surrounding parishes and I think you're right. But, one thing that many city officials in Orleans are interested in is a metropolitan's earnings tax, an income tax. But, we have prohibited in the Revenue and Finance Article the cities from levying income taxes. So, if the city of Orleans wanted to levy a metropolitan's earnings tax, it would have to do so by constitutional amendment and it would in all likelihood affect five or fewer parishes. But, unless we adopt Mr. Perez's amendment, isn't it true that the voters in the city of Orleans could vote for such an amendment and the people in the surrounding parishes could vote against it? But, because of the large population of Orleans it could be passed so that Orleans could impose an income tax on people in the surrounding parishes; isn't that correct?

MRS. ZERVIGON

Woody, that's not all clear to me because the surrounding parishes are going like crazy to drainage techniques being what they are. But, you're not really addressing my concern. My concern is not that I don't want Mr. Perez to have his protection, that's fine, that deal where you take out "in the aggregate" is fine with me; it gives Orleans even more protection and in the past this sort of technique has not been used against any parish other than Orleans that I know of. All I want to make sure is that New Orleans is as protected as Plaquemines, that's what I want to make sure of and on reading his amendment it is not at all clear to me. Just to find out how paranoid I am, I went and checked it with Mr. Kean, who agreed, it is not at all clear to me that I'm protected. You want to take out that phrase "in the aggregate" that's beautiful, that does good for us; it doesn't bother me at all. That's a philosophical problem, you have to decide whether we are all in this thing together or are we not. But, what I want to say is that this is not at all clear that it extends the same protection to us. If we are going to protect, let's protect across the board.

Further Discussion

MR. D'GEROLAMO

Mr. Acting Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in support of Mr. Perez's amendment because in this amendment I believe this is the only way that the smaller parishes that are abutting or close to larger parishes are protected. In the Revenue and Finance proposals, in Local Government proposal we have made provisions to protect the local parishes, the smaller parishes from being engulfed, from being overtaxed and giving them their own home rule. The aggregate that is in the present proposal will allow larger parishes and state government to come into a parish and take over what the local governing authority and the people of that parish may not want. I'll give you some for instances: (1) in the parish of Jefferson we have an airport, however good, however bad an airport may be. I have a former mayor of the city of Kenner where the airport is located, had many problems with the airport being there. It's expansion right now may bring some problems to the local community of the city of Kenner. Now, certainly, the airport has done some good for the city of Kenner. But, certainly, the people of Jefferson Parish, the people of Kenner should have some say—so should a constitutional amendment be brought up by the legislature and voted on by the people whether they want to expand this airport to make a metropolitan airport out of it, to engulf the whole parish of Jefferson. Don't you think we in Jefferson Parish, where this would affect mostly, should have some say—in it? Certainly, the people from the other parishes, Orleans and the other parishes may not feel, they do not have the problems that we have. I give you another for instance, as Mr. Jenkins just brought up, the metropolitan earnings tax. What is going to happen if the State of Louisiana and the city of New Orleans vote for the metropolitan earnings tax? What happens to the parishes of Jefferson, St. Bernard, Plaquemines, St. Tammany surrounding them? We're engulfed, we have nothing to say about it. One of the other speakers, I forgot his name, came up and said, "What happens if you're going to get one parish to hold back a proposition where the four parishes may think it's good?" This may be fine but suppose you wind up with one larger parish saying it's good and the four smaller parishes, saying we don't want it, those four smaller parishes must take it whether they like it or not. Now, certainly, provisions have been made and protections have been brought out on proposals that we have already passed by this constitutional convention. Certainly, I do not believe that we would want to go back and take away safeguards that we've already given to people—the Revenue and Finance proposal as it was said, about the metropolitan earnings tax. These things are serious. It's not only serious to we in Jefferson and to surrounding parishes of Orleans, but you of the smaller parishes throughout the state, the smaller communities throughout the state who are around large communities, large parishes, be careful of what you are doing. You are already protected in the constitution now. Don't let it be taken away by this proposal....the Proposal No. 36. I urge you to adopt the amendment by Mr. Perez.

110th Days Proceedings—January 6, 1974

Questions

MR. LANIER

Mr. D'Gerolamo, since we've taken all of the special districts out of the constitution, really, this provision would apply if they tried to put things back in, such as the metropolitan district for taxation or something like that; isn't that correct?

MR. D'GEROLAMO

That is correct, Mr. Lanier.

MR. LANIER

And, this would affect and protect the parishes where they would have a right to vote for or against it. Unless, if they did not choose to go that route, then the only way it could be done would be through intergovernmental cooperation as we provide for which is on a voluntary basis; isn't that correct?

MR. D'GEROLAMO

That is correct, Mr. Lanier.

MR. LANIER

Now, would you agree with me and I'm trying to think of what our provisions are, the only special parish that I can think of would be Jackson Parish where we have to provide for a five mill alimony tax where everybody else has four mills; isn't that correct?

MR. D'GEROLAMO

That is correct.

MR. LANIER

But, if somebody tried to take away Jackson's fifth mill, they would be protected by it with a provision such as this; wouldn't that be correct?

MR. D'GEROLAMO

That is correct. Suppose there was a provision to take away that extra mill from Jackson Parish; Jackson Parish would have no say-so. Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. HAYES

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I don't live in a city and I don't represent a parish. I don't know where the word parish came from. I imagine you know, it probably came from the church or somewhere. You people are talking about parishes, you represent people, just think about that and you are representing a district with about thirty-five thousand people in it. Now, you cannot protect your parish line when you come to the legislature, no way if you try because they are going to forget about a parish line. If you don't have enough people, you go out and get enough people in order to get here. If you want to run for Congress, you're going to take a district---and I'm telling you---I looked at the Eighth District the other day and it went from New Orleans all the way it looked like to Shreveport. That's what it took because they looked at people, they didn't look at parish line. Now, you're going to tell me that we're going to take five parishes and they are going to have more power than all of the rest of the people in the State of Louisiana, that's what you're saying. Now, it's even less than that. Let's take...some of your parishes don't have but about eight thousand people. Now, take one of those parishes with eight thousand people and move it in with the five, four thousand, five hundred of those people can stop an amendment in the State of Louisiana and that's what you're asking me to vote for here---four thousand, five hundred people can stop the entire state. Now, I tell you again, you keep hollering at. I don't live in a city, you understand. I only represent a portion of the parish, not a whole parish. Some of the people represent two or three parishes here and don't have enough people hardly to get down here. You're saying let's have five parishes come down and have the people in one of these small parishes stop an amendment from the entire state. We don't know what we are going to run into in this state or in these United States with all the problems we have, say, with energy, etc. etc.

Questions

MR. J. JACKSON

Mr. Hayes, isn't it possible that there could be a statewide amendment that affects everybody?

MR. HAYES

Correct.

MR. J. JACKSON

But, maybe to a larger degree it may affect a little bit more some other parishes but everybody benefits from it and that it could be so construed that this is specifically aimed at five parishes? Could not what you say...could not what you have pointed out to us have in effect that statewide amendment, could very well be stopped? Now, only by, let's say five parishes but let's say one.

MR. HAYES

As I can appreciate it, Mr. Jackson, a little over half of the people in the smallest parishes could stop it. Take one of those parishes like Greensburg over there somewhere, over there in St. Helena, half of the people over there could stop it.

MR. ARNETTE

Mr. Hayes, do you realize that this problem doesn't come up unless it's a local amendment and only affects a small number of parishes? It doesn't affect the whole state, it only affects these five, or four, or three parishes?

MR. HAYES

As I can appreciate this, we are talking about amending the constitution of the State of Louisiana. As I can appreciate it, it affects the entire state; it's going to amend the constitution of the State of Louisiana and all the people will have to vote on it; am I correct?

MR. ARNETTE

It is an amendment to our constitution but it only affects a certain locality, that's why this provision is in there, only if it is an amendment that affects a certain locality is it going to be voted on in this manner.

MR. HAYES

Again, we are amending the constitution of the State of Louisiana and if all the people are going to have to vote on it, I would like to have their vote count.

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Hayes, If I recall in the article on the judiciary, there was a provision whereby if you wanted to divide a judicial district so to speak--for instance, say there were two parishes involved and those two parishes want to divide that district and make two districts out of it--you would negate what we've already done because it would only take...the larger parish could vote to divide and the smaller parish could vote not to divide, and by the combined aggregate of vote in those two parishes, you'd be dividing the parish or dividing the district even though the smaller parish or parishes, by the way, would not want to divide the district if we do not adopt this amendment; don't you agree to that?

MR. HAYES

No, you see, again, you have have your judicial districts....small parishes...some parishes are really too small to have...

MR. NUNEZ

That's beside the point.

MR. HAYES

Some of the parishes are too small, Mr. Nunez, to have a judicial district, if I understand your question. When you leave this up to them to decide, the issue that--if I understand what you're saying--I don't think this would be in the first place.

MR. ROEMER

Fellow delegate, do you believe that it would be right or fair, or something we ought to do to in the future when we have a constitutional amendment, let's say proposed, that affects just the parish of Orleans, and the citizens of every other parish in the state and the overwhelming majority of the citizens of the state support that amendment, under this proposal if every parish accepted it and the majority of the citizens of the state accepted it but the parish of Orleans didn't accept it, then we couldn't put that in the constitution; could we?

MR. HAYES

I guess that would be true.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Chairman Henry in the Chair

[Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted:
71-31. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mrs. Zervigon sends up amendments. The copies of these are being distributed at the present time.

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 31, in Floor Amendment No. 1 proposed by Delegate Perez and just adopted by the convention, on line 6 of the language added by the amendment after the word and punctuation "parish." add the following: "No proposed amendment affecting five or fewer municipalities shall become part of this constitution unless approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon in the state and also a majority of the electors voting thereon in each such municipality."

Explanation

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I don't think this takes much explanation because the word in Mr. Perez's amendment, "areas" is unclear to me, especially as it applies to my parish, whether my parish is a municipality or a parish. I'm just asking you to extend this to municipalities to make certain that municipalities are covered as well as parishes. In fact, it's really more often that municipalities are affected by amendments of this sort, municipalities over so much population and that sort of thing. It very seldom applies only to one parish. It's more often municipalities. It more or less tracks the language of the Perez amendment, and I ask you to extend the coverage to everyone. I think Mr. Perez intended to do that. This just makes it perfectly clear.

Questions

MR. BOLLINGER

Mary, maybe I misunderstand this, but would this mean that if you had an amendment which affected five parishes, Lafourche being one, and that in the small town of Lockport the electors in that town did not vote a majority in favor of the proposal, that it would not be adopted, or would not be added to the constitution?

MRS. ZERVIGON

No, how many municipalities have you got in your parish?

MR. BOLLINGER

Three.

MRS. ZERVIGON

So, it would affect municipalities in other parishes as well, but no, I didn't mean it that way. I meant one that cast directly to municipalities affecting five or fewer municipalities, and municipalities would have the say-so. One cast directly to parishes on the parish government police jury level would have to be okayed by the parishes. I don't intend to give... it was not my intention in the wording of this to give the people of Lockport the veto power over the state. I must say I only read it through quickly once. I felt I had to come up with it pretty quickly so as not to slow the wheels. But, I think the intention has been clearly expressed, and I'll look over Style and Drafting's shoulder, let them make it clear to put an "or" in there if they like, but that wasn't my intention.

MR. ALEXANDER

Mrs. Zervigon, suppose there was a proposal and the parishes of metropolitan New Orleans involved, you know, New Orleans, Jefferson, St. Tammany, Plaquemine, etc. A municipality in Jefferson, for example, votes against the proposition that all the parishes and all the other municipalities want; does it mean a majority of the electors, say, in Grand Isle, could defeat all the rest of the parishes combined and municipalities?

MRS. ZERVIGON

No, Reverend, because of my clearly expressed intention to Mr. Bollinger in the first place. In the second place, there are five municipalities in Jefferson. I know there are a bunch in St. Tammany as well. New Orleans would count as a municipality. So, either way you reason it, that wouldn't be true. This is just a red herring that's being flown. My clear intention is to say, the same protection that is being extended to parishes is being extended to municipalities when five or fewer municipalities are affected, directly affected. That's my intention. I had to write it up quickly. They can change it in Style and Drafting to reflect the intention as they have done on other things to reflect the legislative intent on the floor. But, the intention is to extend to municipalities the same protection that parishes have because I believe that the word "areas" in Mr. Perez's amendment is unclear. On the other hand, your same problem that you raised, and Mr. Bollinger raised, applies at the same time to Mr. Perez's amendment. For example, could a ward of a parish or a group of wards of a parish defeat an amendment that had been passed statewide, because wards are areas after all, you see? So, if it's affecting the river areas of one parish and there are four wards along that river and it failed in one ward, would that defeat the whole amendment? No, I don't think so, and that wasn't Mr. Perez's intention. We all know what he intended to do. I'm intending to extend the same protection to municipalities. It's as simple as that.

MR. ARNETTE

The way I read Mr. Perez's amendment was that it said "parishes"; it didn't say "areas," and that's the thing that he wanted to clear up. Is that the way you understood his amendment?

MRS. ZERVIGON

Greg, I'm up here because I didn't think the amendment was clearly worded.

MR. ARNETTE

O.K. Well, my question is, suppose an amendment affects, say Jefferson Parish, and it only affects Jefferson Parish, and they have five municipalities in there. So, it affects five or fewer municipalities. Could, say, Grand Isle defeat the entire amendment because it only affects five municipalities?

MRS. ZERVIGON

That's not my intention. It depends on why the amendment is cast. If it said, "All municipalities in Jefferson Parish shall," then Grand Isle could defeat it. If it said "Jefferson Parish shall," then it has to be voted on by the voters-at-large.

MR. ARNETTE

But, that isn't what your amendment says, though. You ought to say something to the effect of, "affecting only municipalities."

MRS. ZERVIGON

Greg, the Style and Drafting Committee has cleared up legislative intent at other times. My legislative intent is clearly expressed. So far, no one has objected to offering to municipalities the same protection that we are offering to parishes in these questions. They are just bringing up questions about what the intent is. I'm telling you what the intent is.

MR. ARNETTE

Well, I'll agree with you, and I don't oppose giving the same protection to municipalities either.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Well, I ask your support of my amendment in that case.

MR. ARNETTE

Well, my only question is that your language doesn't say what you intend it to say, and that was my objection to your amendment.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Well, next time I'll ask for a fifteen minute recess so I can draw it a little bit more carefully. What I was trying to do was expedite the proceedings.

Further Discussion

MR. DENNIS

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I wanted to ask Mrs. Zervigon a question, but she would not yield to further questions. I must rise in opposition to this amendment because it will have, I'm afraid, a debilitating effect upon a parish like Ouachita, my parish, which contains three municipalities. This would mean that if we proposed a constitutional amendment affecting-- attempting to implement a program for the entirety of Ouachita Parish, that this could be vetoed by the smallest municipality in the parish. This would mean that less than twenty thousand people could deny to a parish which approximates a hundred and fifty thousand, close to two hundred thousand now, could deny these people the right to enact a program, or to take something out of the constitution, or to...I'm particularly concerned about if we ever wanted to consolidate the two school boards there that you've heard so much about. Would this mean that any municipality affected within one of these school districts could veto such a plan? I think Mrs. Zervigon is just thinking about New Orleans and New Orleans alone, and she is not realizing the damage she may do to some other parishes in our state. So, I ask you to vote this amendment down.

Questions

MR. DENNERY

Judge Dennis, as I read Mrs. Zervigon's amendment, there may be a little confusion, but if you go back now and read the committee report and the Perez amendment, it says, "If an amendment affects five parishes, then it must be passed by every one of the parishes affected." Now, if you have an amendment which affects the state at large, it certainly would affect five parishes. Therefore, by your reasoning, any parish in the state can defeat any constitutional amendment. Now, I certainly don't think that was the legislative intent, nor do I think it was Mrs. Zervigon's intent to do what you suggest. I ask you, sir, to please give the answer to both questions at the same time. If it affects one, in other words, in Mrs. Warren's words, "What's sauce for the goose, I assume, is sauce for the gander."

MR. DENNIS

I'm perhaps as confused as you were when Mrs. Warren asked you her question, but what I'm talking about, Moise, if we propose a constitutional amendment affecting Ouachita Parish alone, and because it contains three municipalities, they are in turn affected by the amendment; as I read Mrs. Zervigon's amendment, one of those municipalities, the smallest one, if it did not pass in that particular municipality, it would veto the entire plan.

MR. DENNERY

Well, now, Judge Dennis, doesn't the same thing hold true in the Perez amendment and the original committee proposal? If any one parish in the State of Louisiana, because it is one of at least one parish affected, one parish could defeat any constitutional amendment. I think that we are both under...

MR. DENNIS

Well, that's true.

MR. DENNERY

Well, certainly, that's not the intention of that, is it?

MR. DENNIS

I think that it is the intention of Mr. Perez's amendment...

MR. DENNERY

That a statewide proposal could be defeated by any parish?

MR. DENNIS

No, no.

MR. DENNERY

But, it says that, though, if you read it. It says "five parishes."

MR. DENNIS

We may be arguing, but it's my appreciation that what the Perez amendment does, it says if you've got a constitutional amendment that affects five or fewer parishes...

MR. DENNERY

Well, doesn't any constitutional amendment affect five parishes?

MR. DENNIS

Well, if it's effect is restricted to five...

MR. DENNERY

It doesn't say that, Judge. That's my whole point.

MR. DENNIS

Well, maybe that needs to be cleared up. But, Mrs. Zervigon's amendment doesn't just do that. Her amendment makes it impossible for us to have a one parish amendment affecting Ouachita Parish, without standing in jeopardy of being vetoed by the smallest municipality in the parish.

MR. DENNERY

Well, Judge Dennis, I suggest to you, sir, and I ask you if I'm not correct in this suggestion, that if Style and Drafting can clear up the error in the first amendment, could it not clear up the error, since Mrs. Zervigon clearly said that was not her intention?

MR. DENNIS

Mr. Dennery, I don't think that it can clear...

MR. HENRY

Mr. Dennery's exhausted your time, Judge.

Further Discussion

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in opposition to this amendment, and I want to apologize to Mrs. Zervigon. It's not just because it's her amendment. I didn't really get to thinking about this thing until after Mr. Perez's amendment passed. But, it seems to me--now, I'm not arguing against the concept; I'm not arguing against the concept that they are espousing--but, it seems to me that if we're going to have a provision such as this in this proposed constitution that we're going to have to do a little bit more than what is done here. The reason that I say that is, it appears to me that virtually no constitutional amendment can be passed that's not going to result in a lawsuit if this provision, or Mr. Perez's provision, or even the committee proposal as it's written is retained. Now, I would refer you to the language of the present constitution which says in the first place that any such amendment which directly affects any five or fewer parishes, municipalities or special district. Now, there's a difference between "affect" and "directly affect." Then, it also says that the legislature--that this affecting must be as a result of enumeration, designation or population classification, so it's in a limited area that it must directly affect. It further provides, and this is the biggest hangup I have about it is that the legislature is the one that shall make the classification, and when they make it and say that it does directly affect five or fewer parishes or municipalities or special districts, that they're not as final. Now, there are some provisions in the present constitution which I don't think we need, and that is that if the legislature doesn't so designate and you look at the Journal and you conclude that they didn't even think about it, but then the secretary of state has to make the designation, and then his determination is not final. Anybody can go to court and so on. But, it seems to me, and I respectfully submit that if you don't put back this language about this affecting five or fewer parishes being based upon either designation, enumeration or population classification. If you don't put the provisions in here that the legislature is the one that is going to make the determination when they propose the constitutional amendment as to whether it must be approved in these areas, that then you're going to be in serious trouble. Then, another reason that I think that you're going to be in serious trouble has already been brought out. The present constitution requires that if it affects five or fewer areas that it must pass, not in each and every one of those single areas, but it must carry by a majority vote in the aggregate of those areas that are affected. So, for that reason, I would ask that you reject this amendment, and there will be another amendment which will put back in part, except for the business about the secretary of state, the present provisions of the constitution which say that it must directly affect five or fewer parishes, municipalities or political subdivisions by reason of enumeration, population, classification, or by designation on the part of the legislature, and that the legislature is the one that makes that decision and that their determination is final. Otherwise, I respectfully submit that at least fifty percent of the constitutional amendments that are passed in this state are going to result in a lawsuit because of these particular provisions that you are being asked to put in the constitution.

Question

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Avant, if you have a given area where you have, say, five municipalities and you want to create a family court--I'll just use that for an example--one of those municipalities have a hundred and ten votes, like I have one in my area, and one has four thousand votes. If the one with the lesser amount of votes voted no, then would that proposal be good?

MR. AVANT

No, it would not, even though it passed in all of the other four municipalities. I say it would be dead, deader than a doornail, because under these amendments it'd have to carry in each one of those affected areas, not in the aggregate of all of them as under the present constitution.

Further Discussion

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I would like very much to have been able to support this proposition, but the problem we've run into, and I don't believe that this amendment adequately takes care of, is that anything that generally affects a parish also affects the municipalities within that parish. The problem we run into that if we adopt this amendment, I think we would be creating the same confusion which now exists in the present constitutional provision. I would be glad to support an amendment which would make it perfectly clear that if the particular constitutional provision affects a municipality or five or fewer municipalities, and only municipalities, and not parishes and so forth, then it would have to carry only within that municipality. I'd be glad to support such an amendment, but I don't believe that we should support this one. I think we would be further confusing the situation which now exists. I think that the amendment that we've already adopted is relatively clear if there are some amendments to it which can clarify it, it's fine, but I just don't believe that this amendment does what the author had hoped for it to do. Therefore, unfortunately, I must oppose the amendment.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Delegate Gravel sends up amendment. There is a word change in it, so you may want to try to follow it. The amendment reads: "Amendment No. 1. On page 2, line 12, immediately after the word and punctuation "reference." and before the word "The" insert the following: "However, the legislature may"--and this word changes--not "prepare" but "propose"; "the legislature may propose, as one amendment, a revision of an entire article of this constitution, which revision may contain multiple objects or changes."

Explanation

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, the committee proposal sets forth that a proposed amendment to the constitution shall be confined to only one object. Now, if that and that alone stays in the proposal, then there would be no possibility of revising the constitution by full revision of an article of a constitution that embraces perhaps more than one object. I think that the committee proposal is too limiting in the authority for the amending process. The amendment which I propose would say that "the legislature may propose as one amendment, a revision of an entire article of the constitution, and even though that revision may contain multiple objects or changes." I just don't think that we want to do away with the opportunity to revise the constitution by full article revision, and if we do retain that right which is of course in existence in the present constitution, we need to make sure that the one object provision doesn't limit the right that we're trying to express. I'll try to answer any questions with respect to the proposed amendment.

Questions

MR. ABRAHAM

Camille, when I read the original language in the proposal where it said "the proposed amendment shall be confined to one object" and they set forth the entire article, or articles to be revised, I interpreted that to mean that the one object could be the entire article. I'm not disagreeing with what you're trying to do; I agree with you there. But, that was my automatic interpretation of that.

MR. GRAVEL

Well, I'm in favor of it, but I don't think that the object of the proposed amendment is to revise the article. I think the object would be the purpose of the provision. If I was sure that that was correct, I'd have no trouble, but I'm not. Generally speaking, when we talk of legislation having one object, it's a pretty specific piece of legislation, and you can't treat two different purposes in that piece of legislation. I think that we need this protection here for that reason.

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Gravel, did you know that the purpose of the language "one object" was to conform to the same requirement that we have for bills--that a bill must be confined to one object--and that whatever that standard is we would apply here.

MR. GRAVEL

I think that's all right except that I don't think that you could possibly treat only one object if you are revising an entire article of the constitution. For example, suppose that there was submitted at the polls to revise the article on the Bill of Rights, Mr. Jenkins, that would embrace and encompass many different objects under the jurisprudence that, as interpreted, what constitutes one object with respect to legislation. This gives me serious concern; I don't think you can do it.

MR. JENKINS

Did you know our intent, of course, was to, in effect, say that when you revise an entire article, you are confined to one object. You are fulfilling that scope of authority. The fear that I have with regard to yours is that you might be able to revise an entire article but, because you've mentioned multiple objects, you might be able to put into that article things that would otherwise not be germane to it. For example, wouldn't this allow you to have a legislative article revised, but to put in there things about the executive and things about the judiciary, rather than just legislative matters under your amendment?

MR. GRAVEL

It's entirely possible that something like that could be done, but if it does, I think it's going to be so ridiculous on its face it's not going to pass. The bigger problem--the much bigger problem--is, for example, if you were going to revise the Bill of Rights, as I mentioned a moment ago, you're treating just a number of objects when you're talking about due process of law, when you're speaking of expropriation proceedings, and many of the other objects that were dealt with in the Bill of Rights.

MR. JENKINS

But haven't we obviated that argument by specifically setting forth that an entire article may be revised on line 8 of page 2?

MR. GRAVEL

That's the problem...I'm not taking that out; I'm making a clear differentiation between a proposed amendment that does "rifle shot", so to speak, with respect to a single object and the revision of an article where, in my judgment, you're treating of different objects when you revise fully that particular article. I think it presents a very serious problem if we don't have this provision.

MR. TATE

Mr. Gravel, could you refresh us briefly the problem that the Sam Jones administration had in '40 when it had a constitutional amendment invalidated?

MR. GRAVEL

That was the Graham vs. Jones case.

MR. TATE

Because it was supposed to refer to more than something in the constitution. As a result of which, in 1963 and 1964, they adopted a provision similar to that you have here to permit article by article revision which may not be necessary thereunder.

MR. GRAVEL

That's correct. I think that the court held that the so-called Griffin-Hagen plan-----I believe the case was Graham vs. Jones--embraced more than one object and that there was no provision that would permit such an amendment to the constitution; therefore, the courts struck down that particular plan as being unconstitutional. As a consequence of that, we do have a provision in the present constitution that authorizes revision of the existing constitution by articles, but it doesn't have any such limitation as is contained here in the proposal by the committee. All I want to be sure of is that when the legislature does submit a proposal to the people with respect to the revision of an entire article, that a full revision, of course, can be prepared and submitted. Gentlemen and ladies, there's just no question in my mind that the revision of any article of this constitution, with rare exception, constitutes addressing ourselves to more than one object.

110th Days Proceedings—January 6, 1974

MR. LANIER

In other words, Mr. Gravel, if we wish to have a Constitutional Revision Commission to report to the legislature about revising an article should it become necessary, we would have this tool available to us--and clearly and definitely so--as a result of your amendment?

MR. GRAVEL

That's correct.

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Gravel, this morning we defeated the idea of having a limited amount of amendments on the ballot. Now, where you say "one amendment may contain multiple objects or changes", in this you would have to list on the ballot a, b, c, d, e, f, g, whatever changes were coming, you would have to separate them; am I right?

MR. GRAVEL

Well, it would depend upon what the amendment or the revision said; it would depend upon the article. Now, you don't list on the ballot, Mrs. Warren, as far as I know in proposed constitutional amendments, the full detail of the proposed amendment or the proposed article. The proposition would be whether you would be for or against the proposed revision--let us say--to Article IV of the constitution which already, of course, would have been published in every journal according to the other proposals to this particular....

MRS. WARREN

Well, all the publishing in the journal would have to be a, b, c, d, e, f, or whatever it would take to make people understand what these multiple changes were going to be.

MR. GRAVEL

You would publish the entire proposed new article in the official journal of each parish.

Further Discussion

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, delegates, we've already provided in the legislative article that a bill must be confined to one object. A joint resolution is a bill. There are two types of bills: acts and joint resolutions. We've already provided that it must be confined to one object. Now, in the language we've included here we've provided that you can revise more than one article with a single constitutional amendment, if it is confined to one object. Now, that allows the Constitutional Revision Commission or anyone else to come along and take different sections out of existing articles and change them, if they're confined to one object.

In addition, I think it's clear from the language in the proposal that a revision of an entire article can constitute one object. Now, that's assuming, of course, that it's not the extraneous matter not related to the article in general isn't included. The problem with Mr. Gravel's language is when he says that an entire article can be changed and it can have more than one object--it can have multiple objects--that seems to imply that you could have a revision of an article which was really not confined to that article, that you might be allowed to revise the legislative article, then make in effect changes that resulted in executive article changes or judiciary article changes or otherwise. The basic requirement that a bill should be confined to one object includes that acts and joint resolutions should be confined to one object. That is traditional; it is sensible; it has been interpreted by the courts, and we ought to continue that same philosophy. Otherwise, I think we're going to have constitutional amendments coming along that attempt to change many different things in the constitution that are not related to one another.

ROLL CALL

[88 delegates present and a quorum.]

PRAYER

MRS. WARREN

Let us all bow our heads and let us pray each in his own way. Heavenly Father, as we come this day, we thank Thee for the many blessings that Thou hast bestowed upon us. We ask You to forgive us for our sins, omissions and the sins of commission. We ask that You will guide us and keep us and in these last days help us to make the decisions that will be beneficial to everyone in the State of Louisiana. These and many other blessings, we ask in the name of Jesus and for His sake. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

READING AND ADOPTION OF THE JOURNAL

UNFINISHED BUSINESS

MR. POYNTER

Committee Proposal No. 36 introduced by Delegate Alphonse Jackson, Chairman on behalf of the Committee of Bill of Rights and Elections. Proposal is a substitute for Committee Proposal No. 24 by the same gentleman on behalf of the committee.

A proposal relative to constitutional revision.

Status of the proposal--there are four sections to it-- the Convention still has under its consideration, Section 1 of the proposal dealing with amendments to the proposal, amendments to the constitution.

I think, Mr. Chairman, there are about still three pending amendments at the desk to the proposed Section 1.

PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Delegates Perez, Zervigon and Gravel send up amendments.

Amendment reads as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 31, after the words and punctuation "otherwise provided," delete the remainder of line 31 and delete all of line 32 and on page 2, delete all of lines 1 through 4, both inclusive, in their entirety and delete Floor Amendment No. 1 proposed by Delegate Perez and adopted by the convention on January 6th, insert in lieu thereof the following:

"A proposed amendment directly affecting not more than five parishes or areas within not more than five parishes shall become part of this constitution only when approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon in the state and also a majority of the electors voting thereon in each affected parish. However, a proposed amendment directly affecting not more than five municipalities, and only such municipalities, shall become part of this constitution only when approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon in the state and also a majority of the electors voting thereon in each such municipality."

Explanation

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, as a result of some of the objections which were raised yesterday, I have attempted to work out the problems and have also worked with others interested, to work the problems out, and I believe that we now have an amendment which should be acceptable virtually to all the delegates. First we, . . . in order to meet one objection that the . . . it's a question of whether affected or directly affected, we inserted the word in each case both when dealing with parish, municipality, it would have to directly affect the parish. In addition to that, in order to satisfy the problem with municipalities yesterday, we have added the second sentence "However, a proposed amendment directly affecting not more than five municipalities, and only such municipalities, shall become part of this constitution only when approved by a majority of the electors," etc. So, I believe that we have straightened out all the major problems involved in the proposal. I would, therefore, suggest to you we should adopt this amendment.

Questions

MR. ALEXANDER

Mr. Perez, would you explain to the convention, please, what you mean by "areas," parishes or "areas"?

MR. PEREZ

The word "areas" was used in the proposal which was the committee proposal when used in a context where it is not limited to an area. . . it is not limited to a certain geographical area within the parish; I would think it would be indefinite. But, the problem we have is that we may have amendments dealing with levee districts or parts of levee districts. We may have amendments which might deal with park commissions, we may have them dealing with many other subdivisions of government, sewerage districts, water districts, and so, therefore, in order to try to encompass all of those various type of possibilities, we have used the word "areas," which is the same wording that was used by the committee in that proposal.

MR. ALEXANDER

Could it be construed to mean "wards" . . . I mean "municipal districts"? For example, consummative districts?

MR. PEREZ

If it affects only the municipality, the second sentence would take effect. That is, the second sentence of the amendment deals with where there are only municipalities involved. The first sentence would take care of all other situations.

MR. ALEXANDER

Then I'm correct also in assuming in the last line that any one of the parishes or a majority of electors in any one of the parishes could defeat any proposition, is that correct?

MR. PEREZ

That's correct, but as we've explained before there should be very little need for amendments with respect to municipalities or parishes to give them any additional authority because of the fact that we have a real strong home rule charter provision, and we also have the provisions for intergovernmental cooperation where elections are not even necessary. So that the primary purpose for this amendment is mostly to protect parishes against the people -- taking something away from them rather than giving them something. Generally speaking, I would say would be the purpose of this. That's why the strong feeling that each area should have to approve it.

MR. TOOMY

Mr. Perez, for a point of clarification. Suppose a constitutional amendment affected for instance, just Jefferson Parish. It would require a majority vote of Jefferson Parish according to the first sentence. But, Jefferson Parish has five municipalities within it, by the second sentence it would require a majority vote also of each of the five municipalities.

MR. PEREZ

No, because if you'd look you'd see, "However, a proposed amendment directly affecting not more than five municipalities, and only such municipalities," so that if it affected the parish and the municipalities, then it would have to carry in the parish. . . the first sentence would apply.

MR. TOOMY

Could you not also read this to read that if it affects Jefferson Parish, it only affects the five municipalities in Jefferson Parish; you see what I mean?

MR. PEREZ

No, because you have other areas in Jefferson which are not in municipalities, so it would affect not only the municipalities, but it would also affect other unincorporated areas of Jefferson, so that the first sentence would apply if it were something which had parishwide affect. If it were something which applied only to the municipalities and municipalities . . . and only municipalities then the second sentence would apply.

MR. TOOMY

Only if it applies to the incorporated areas. . . the second sentence.

MR. PEREZ

That's correct. If it applies only to municipalities and only municipalities. Does that sufficiently answer the question?

MR. TOOMY

I just. . . I don't see it that clearly worded in the amendment.

MR. PEREZ

Well, if you read it says, "However, a proposed amendment directly affecting not more than five municipalities, and only such municipalities, shall become part of this constitution only when approved," etc. So, I'm satisfied that it's sufficiently clear.

111th Days Proceedings—January 7, 1974

MR. BURNS

Mr. Perez, in St. Tammany Parish, I think they have about eight municipalities, they have five pretty good size ones and then they have two or three with about four or five hundred inhabitants in each one of those. Does that mean say Folsom with about four hundred inhabitants could block something for Covington and Slidell and Mandeville and Madisonville?

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Burns, it would depend upon the amendment; remember we're talking here about an amendment to the constitution, and it would depend upon the proposal involved. Ordinarily, I don't think that you would have a provision saying "all municipalities in the Parish of St. Tammany" may do this or may do that, but we've already given those municipalities such home rule provisions--again, I don't believe that that situation is ever going to arise where you're going to be concerned with being afraid of not being able to do something. It's the main purpose of this provision is to see to it that they don't take it away.

MR. BURNS

One more question: there's nothing in here that would make it possible for one town in a parish to interfere with parishwide propositions, would it?

MR. PEREZ

No, sir because if you read the amendment, the first sentence says if it affects the parish or any areas of the parish it must pass parishwide. But, if it affects municipalities only, then it has to pass in those affected municipalities and they have to be five or fewer of them. Ordinarily, there would be a provision saying municipalities over a hundred thousand or municipalities between fifty and a hundred thousand, and probably might have one in maybe in St. Tammany and another one in Shreveport, another one in Caddo or other parishes throughout the state.

MR. AERTKER

Chalio, will the amendment itself actually list the municipality or the parish that's going to be directly affected-- I mean is it going to state that that amendment will directly affect it?

MR. PEREZ

In the provision the way it's set up here does not require in the amendment . . . the proposed constitutional amendment, but ordinarily the way we'd do it, we'd say municipalities over one hundred thousand or parishes with a population of between so many parishes and so many parishes. In those cases, of course, then it would be matter of fact as to which they were.

MR. AERTKER

Well, then, of course, if it's that general then it would be . . . or that broad then it would in most instances include many more than just five.

MR. PEREZ

Well, of course, if it did, then this provision would not apply. The only purpose of this provision is to give back to the local people some protection against having a state telling a local area what it must do, and to take away the authority that we're given in this constitution from a local area without their permission or consent. It's a protection primarily for the local area.

MR. TOOMY

Mr. Perez, as I recall when this problem came up Ms. Zervigon had a lot of difficulty as to whether New Orleans was covered in your amendment which applied just to approving the parish. I don't particularly see how this amendment clarifies her problem.

MR. PEREZ

I don't think Ms. Zervigon ever had a problem to begin with because the city of New Orleans is coextensive of the parish of Orleans, and if the parish voted in favor of it, the city was voting in favor of it. It really doesn't affect and take care of Ms. Zervigon's problem; it would take care of the problem like the city of Baton Rouge which is a part of the Parish of East Baton Rouge or the city of Kenner which is a part of the Parish of Jefferson. In those cases if the situation applied only to the city of Kenner and two or three other cities of that size then it would only have to carry in the city of Kenner rather than have to carry in the whole Parish of Jefferson.

MR. LANDRY, E. J.

Mr. Perez, I sit here wondering why someone doesn't object to the fact that this amendment gives a small unit tremendous power over other larger units. I can appreciate . . .

. . . I can appreciate the protection, that's clear to me-- the protection is clear, but I can't for the life of me understand why one small unit would be given so much power over a larger area.

MR. PEREZ

I don't think it's a question of one area being given the power over another area because as I've explained before, it is difficult to conceive how there will be an amendment to the constitution necessary to give additional authority to local governments because of the strong local government article we have. We have intergovernmental cooperation. We have full authority for home rule charters. We've given the parishes all authority not prohibited by state law, so that we have given to those local areas virtually very extended authority. Again, this provision primarily would come into play, as I would envision it, when they're out to take something away from somebody. I'd say before we take anything away from anybody whether it's a little parish or a big parish we ought to have the vote of the people of that particular parish.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Flory sends up amendments which read as follows:
Amendment No. 1. On page 2, line 8, after the words "object and" delete the remainder of the line and insert in lieu thereof the following: "shall set forth the entire section or article".
Amendment No. 2. On page 2, line 9, at the beginning of the line, delete the words "or articles".

Explanation

MR. FLORY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, what the amendment does is to try to put back into the framework of this proposal the present provisions of the constitution whereby you can amend only one article in one amendment. If you notice the committee's language starting on line 7, it says "a proposed amendment shall be confined to one object," and may set forth the entire article or article to be revised or only the sections," etc. My amendment would make it read that they shall set forth the changes and that it shall be in the entire section or the entire article and it deletes the word on line 9 "or articles" to where you can only amend one article of the constitution in one amendment. This has been . . . if you'll recall, this subject came up a number of years ago when the Law Institute was doing a study on constitutional revision and they approached the legislature at that time and if you'll recall, the way that the constitution was constructed. . . or is constructed presently you have varied subject matters spread throughout the various articles of the constitution. This convention has seen fit and I think wisely so, to confine the subject matter to one particular article, generally speaking with the exception of the general government provisions, so that there would really be no necessity in the future for amending more than one article in the same constitutional amendment. But, when the '21 Constitution was being discussed in the terms of revision by the Law Institute and the Constitutional Revision Commission, they approached the legislature and the legislature agreed to change it from the provision at that time where you could only amend one section at a time to a single constitutional amendment to allow them to rewrite an entire article in a single constitutional amendment. If you'll recall Mr. Gravel's amendment yesterday we accomplished that purpose in allowing the total revision of a single article by one constitutional amendment, irrespective of the number of objects it may have. This would mean then that you could only by a single object amend one particular article in the same amendment. I think it's a good amendment and I've discussed this with a number of the members of the committee also members of the convention, and I ask for the adoption of the amendment.

Questions

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Flory, I'm just trying to understand exactly what you're doing, you're saying that the concurrent resolution has to set forth the article that's being amended; you're not saying the article has to appear on the ballot?

MR. FLORY

No, just in the . . . if you notice "a proposed amendment shall be confined to one object: and it says "may set forth". I think we ought to make it mandatory that they set forth either the entire section or article being amended. If you look down there where it says "or only the sections or other subdivisions," so that it fits a subdivision of a section or a subsection that's only being amended then they shall set that forth with the incorporated change. But, I don't think we ought to leave it permissive as to whether they can or cannot set it forth. That's the only reason for putting the word "shall" instead of "may". I don't think we ought to leave it permissive as to whether or not they set it forth.

MS. ZERVIGON

Well, now you're saying they may do it with incorporated changes. That would be the article as amended, not the article to be amended or to be revised as in line 9. Isn't that so? I'm just trying to visualize what it is each legislator will receive--the way I read your language unless I'm mistaken, and that sometimes happens--each legislator will get two rather lengthy documents, one the old article and one the article as revised because he has to receive the article to be revised. . . the entire article to be revised should constitutional revisions by article take place. Is that your intention?

MR. FLORY

No. I didn't change the committee's language where they used the words "to be revised," and I didn't change that. When you introduce a constitutional amendment before the legislature you incorporate the changes to be made and that is the revision that is submitted. It's never to my knowledge where it appears on the ballot or in any constitutional amendment where you submit the old language and the new being amended, so that what I believe is intended here, and I didn't change it, is that the revised language is submitted.

MS. ZERVIGON

Well, Mr. Flory, I don't believe that's what it says. When you say "shall set forth the entire article to be revised" that just sounds like a hell of a lot of words to me. It doesn't say with incorporated changes or anything like that, so it seems to me you'd have to submit both.

MR. FLORY

You have to carry it on forward in the complete sentence, Ms. Zervigon. Where it says "or only the sections or other subdivisions which are to be added on which the change is to be made." So that you have either or, but you make it mandatory that they set one or the other forth; that's the only thing. One or the other, it's not both.

MS. ZERVIGON

Thank you.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Flory, in reading the proposal and your amendment, I know what you intend, but I just don't get that out of the proposal as presently written. The particular portion which you're amending, if I read it correctly, is a proposed amendment--that is, a joint resolution or bill as it's drawn--shall either have the entire article incorporated within that joint resolution, or it can have the particular section, whichever is desirable.

MR. FLORY

Yes.

MR. DE BLIEUX

As your amendments....I don't see how your amendment changes that.

MR. FLORY

All it changes, Senator, is that it makes it mandatory that they set forth the revision, mandatory that they set it forth one way or the other--either the total article or the section or the subsection, whichever the case may be. What I am deleting is, on line 9, the two words "or articles" where they cannot amend more than one article in the same constitutional amendment. That's the real basic change by the amendment.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, now, if you follow your conclusion along that, wouldn't we get back into what we've been trying to avoid? Isn't that something that has required numerous amendments in the event that we have attempted to amend the constitution in one particular subject matter? You may say that where that subject matter is somewhat covered by two or three different articles?

MR. FLORY

Well, Senator, I said that earlier that, if you recall when the law institute came to the legislature a number of years ago--and you were there--and wanted to change or revise the constitution, and they suggested to the legislature that, at that time, it would be wise to change the constitution by way of constitutional amendment and amending more than one article in the same amendment, the legislature emphatically said, "No, you can only amend one article in the same amendment." They then went and changed the constitution to allow them to rewrite the constitution by articles. Now, when this convention began, it undertook--and, I think, has accomplished--the fact that they have confined the subject matter--like in the Bill of Rights, all in the Bill of Rights; the executive functions in the Executive Article, etc., on through--so that you won't have the flow of subject matter from one article to the other, as you have had in the 1921 Constitution, so that you really....that argument is not necessary anymore. What this amendment proposes to do--and I think is necessary--that you ought not be able to submit a totally new constitution in one constitutional amendment in the future. It could be done if you construe the language on line 9 "or articles" where you could submit, by one amendment, amendments to more than one article, without limitation, in the same constitutional amendment.

MR. DE BLIEUX

But, by the same token, under your proposal, if we wanted to transfer some particular section of the constitution--an article or repeal--it would require two constitutional amendments rather than just one.

MR. FLORY

There's no question about that, Senator; but, at least, the people would know what they're voting on. No question about that. That's the intent of the amendment.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Isn't it hard for them to know what they're voting upon if they're separated into different articles like that? Isn't that part of the confusion that we've got ourselves into?

MR. FLORY

No, sir, I don't believe so at all. I keep saying to you that, when the constitution....this convention has rewritten the constitution by subject matter in the various articles, I think we've eliminated the problem, really, of changing more than one article in the same constitutional amendment. I don't think you're going to face that problem in the future.

MR. SINGLETARY

Mr. Flory, I believe you're just more or less putting the constitution back like it was; isn't that correct?

MR. FLORY

Yea, sir. Yea, sir.

MR. SINGLETARY

With regard to Mr. Gravel's amendment, if the legislature was to propose a revision of an article, they would have to set forth the entire article on the ballot? Is that correct?

MR. FLORY

No, sir. I don't have his amendment before me, but his amendment allowed a maximum, in one amendment, of the total article to be revised. It could, if it so desired; but, if you'll look on line 9, it says "to be revised or only the sections or other subdivisions which are to be added," so that you could amend much less than a whole article--you could amend just a subsection of a section of an article--and that would be all that would have to be set forth in the amendment.

MR. SINGLETARY

I see; but, whatever the proposed provision was, the entire proposed provision would have to be on the ballot. Is that correct?

MR. FLORY

Not on the ballot, but in the resolution itself.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Flory, in looking how your Amendment No. 1 fits into this proposal, as I read it--if your language is put in--is that all that would have to be put on the ballot is the article or section which is going to be revised? Would you agree with that--i.e., the revision would not be put on the ballot, but only the article or section which would be revised? Now, quite frankly, I think the problem is with the committee language and not with yours.

MR. FLORY

That's correct. I didn't change the committee's language in that sense, Mr. Lanier. I tried to, really--with the language that they had proposed--tried to put it back like the constitution is today in that regard. I'm of the opinion, as to what they intended--just from discussions with some of them--that what they were talking about was the same thing you and I are talking about: the language that they intend to be the revision of that section, subsection, or article would be in the new resolution, and then you put on the ballot the for and against in the language as it's presently done, and that also is incorporated in the constitutional amendments as they are proposed. You never....If you're going to amend a particular article, you don't put the whole article on the ballot; it's worded in the amendment itself as to what shall appear on the ballot.

11th Days Proceedings—January 7, 1974

MR. LANIER

Well, the point I'm getting at: I think a literal reading of this would be that all that would be on the ballot is that which is to be changed, but not the change--with the language as written. Would you agree with that?

MR. FLORY

I would agree with that--that the change would appear on the ballot. Yes. I think that the change does appear. I think that's the situation today. I don't ever recall seeing the old language submitted in the amendment and the new language submitted in the amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I somewhat question this amendment, and let me give you the reasons. At the present time, as you well know, we have in the proposal under the executive department, the department of the attorney general. There's a feeling among some that the attorney general should be under the judiciary department. Now, suppose an amendment was submitted putting the attorney general's office with the judiciary department. You'd need two constitutional amendments under Mr. Flory's proposal: one repealing that particular portion of the constitution of the executive department and another placing the attorney general under the judiciary department. You can see what a paradox we'd be in, having to submit two amendments, if one of those failed. We could end up with the attorney general's office being in both the executive department and the judiciary department, or, the other way around, we might not have an attorney general's department because they might pass the one repealing the provision of the executive department and not pass the other. This is one of those very close issues. Now, certainly, it would be a whole lot more feasible to have the repeal of the article in the same constitutional amendment as you're submitting, and that's the reason this language was stated that way--is to take care of situations like that. I certainly think that you might be getting ourselves into a very serious proposition if we go and tamper with the language as we presently have it written. I just throw it out to you for what it's worth and ask you... I think that we'd be doing a better job if we rejected Mr. Flory's amendment rather than passing it. I understand what he's talking about--that we certainly should try to confine a matter to one particular amendment; but I can certainly see the time when it would be needed the other way, and I think the legislature in its wisdom would certainly correct those situations. I don't think they'd be trying to write a whole new constitution by one constitutional amendment. That's a really farfetched in that regard, but there may be occasions--which I recited to you--because I can name a number of other instances in this constitution when that same situation might arise. So, let's let the language stay like it is and let it be left to the legislature as to how the amendments will be submitted if they become necessary. I ask you to reject the amendment.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. FLORY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I submit to you that this is almost mandatory that we make this change to where you can amend the constitution only by one article at a time. I think that's only being fair with the public. This convention has spent a year in rewriting the constitution, and you know the work that's been put into the development of a new constitution here. We've had the benefit of a year's press coverage. The people are cognizant of what's going on, and they will be intelligent enough to vote on the entire document, I think, when it's submitted to them in the election this year. What we're talking about here is the possibility--and I say, only, the possibility--of the legislature, by one constitutional amendment--in a sixty-day session or, perhaps, in an extraordinary session--rewriting the entire constitution and submitting it to the people in one constitutional amendment. I think that's the need for the change. That's what makes it necessary, and all this does is puts it back like the present constitution is, where you can amend only one article in one amendment. I ask for the adoption of the amendment.

Questions

MR. JENKINS

Don't you feel as though your amendment might lead to a multitude of constitutional amendments that we would not have if we didn't adopt your amendment? For example, suppose we wanted to affect the elected status of the superintendent of education. We would have to amend at least two articles, maybe three. Yet, this would require--under your amendment--it would require two or three separate constitutional amendments, rather than one, to fulfill that one object. Isn't that correct?

MR. FLORY

I can't visualize changing the position of superintendent of education because--by constitutional right--because we've given that authority to the legislature, for example, after 1980, by a two-thirds vote, to make that change. I answered Senator De Blieux: It would be possible, in the future, that maybe those situations where more than one article would have to be amended, pertaining to the same subject--maybe have to amend them. But, I think it's only fair to the public that you submit it in that form in order that they know exactly what the legislature might be proposing as a way of change in the new constitution. I think that's only being fair with the public. It may require them to vote twice instead of once, but I think the people have adopted that philosophy by constitutional amendment just recently, in the last six or eight years-- I can't recall the exact year. As you recall, prior to that time, you could only amend one section in one amendment, so I don't think that this is any unnecessary burden upon the people.

MR. JENKINS

But, don't you have a hiatus there? If you have two amendments to two different articles, which have the end in view of accomplishing one change, you have a problem because, if one passes and one fails, you have an unclear situation in the law; don't you?

MR. FLORY

Well, I've never seen that happen where one passed and one failed....

MR. JENKINS

Well, let me give you an example. Remember the property tax amendments on the ballot last time? There were five amendments. Now, they were able to stand by themselves, but the situation might well have arisen that they were not. Three passed; two failed. If they had not been able to stand alone like that, we would have had a difficult situation legally, wouldn't we?

MR. FLORY

Perhaps, but I don't think that risk is near as great, Mr. Jenkins, as it would be if the legislature would propose to the people, by one constitutional amendment, a total rewrite of the entire document, which is allowed under this committee's language. That's the only purpose, really, of my amendment.

[Amendment adopted: 74-23. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

MR. HENRY

Please take your seats, ladies and gentlemen. If you will, let the Clerk go ahead and read this; and we'll ask Ms. Zervigon, if she will, to begin explaining it. Give the Clerk your attention.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendment reads as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, line 8, after the word "and" delete the remainder of the line, lines 9 and 10, and at the beginning of line 11, delete the word and punctuation "made;" and delete Amendment No. 1 proposed by Delegate Flory and just adopted and insert in lieu thereof the following: "shall set forth the entire article, sections, or other subdivisions thereof as revised or only the article, sections, or other subdivisions which are to be added;"

Explanation

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman and delegates, first I want to apologize for holding up the wheels of progress and say that I wouldn't be up here before you except that Walter Lanier finked out and didn't submit this amendment the way he was supposed to. But, if you'll look at your yellow copy, even with the Flory amendment added, what it says is that the proposed amendment "shall set forth the entire section or article to be revised." In my mind, that's the old language--the old constitution--not the revision. It seems to me we ought to tell the people what we've done to them, not what they used to have. The old constitution has this language that I used in the amendment: "the article or section as revised." It just makes it clearer that it's the new language that people are being informed of, not the old language. I ask your adoption of the amendment.

Questions

MR. CHATELAIN

Just what does your amendment do, Mary? I'm trying to understand it, but would you go a little bit more in detail on it, please, while you're waiting?

MS. ZERVIGON

Well, the main thing it does, Mr. Chatelain, is to change the tense of the verbs in there so that it says....instead of saying the proposed amendment shall "set forth the article to be revised" or the section or a subdivision thereof--which is like a paragraph, you know--"to be revised," it sets them forth "as revised." It wouldn't do the voter any good to know what the old language of--- say you were revising the Legislative Article, which I doubt, but suppose that was the deal---it wouldn't do the voter any good to know what the old language was in the present constitution, unless he also knew what the proposed language was. When you set forth the language "to be revised," in my mind, that's the old language. Now, the old constitution uses the phrase "sets forth the section or article as revised." That's the new language, and that's what we really want to inform people of. Now, Mr. Flory has no objection to this. His amendment didn't act on the verbs at all, although he agrees with me that it could be construed that way and that, perhaps, this is a change that needs to be made. It just carries forward the intention of the committee. I'm certain it was never the committee's intention that the voters would be informed only of the old constitution and not of the proposed changes to it, when a constitutional amendment is proposed.

MR. SINGLETARY

Mary, Paragraph (C) talks about submitting amendments. What that's referring to is when amendments are submitted in the House or in the Senate; is that correct?

MS. ZERVIGON

Well, to tell you the truth, I've got reservations about what that means as well--about whether you have to print the entire article on the ballot--but, since I took this language from the old constitution and the entire article has never been required to be printed on the ballot under the old constitution, I feel sure that our later reference to a summary appearing on the ballot, in lines 12 and 13, is sufficient and that that second sentence will be interpreted to apply to the concurrent resolution--what passes the House and the Senate. Does that answer your question? I have the same reservations myself, but I believe that lines 12 and 13 make it clear.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Is that the only change--what you told? In other words, instead of saying "as revised"? In other words: as it was--what we propose? Is that the only change in your amendment? I haven't gotten it yet either, so I was wondering if that's it.

MS. ZERVIGON

Well, I hope you won't be asked to vote until you get it, Mr. Champagne. Any other change is unintentional. What we did was to rearrange the language a little, in a way that Mr. Flory has no objection to, so it carries forward his intention. We took out, for example, the phrase "or in which a change is to be made," referring back to a section, because you have a reference to a section already, earlier in my amendment. So, it seems to me that what this does is to require that any old section be submitted as revised--or any additional section be submitted as well--to the voters, or to the members of the legislature, depending on how you read that. Not the old language--that was the main change I wanted to make was that they not tie it into receiving only the old language. Everything else is up to the discretion of the author of the resolution.

MR. FLORY

Ms. Zervigon, actually, what you've done is take--instead of the words "to be" as the committee has used it--you replaced that with the present language in the constitution: "as revised."

MS. ZERVIGON

That's correct, Mr. Flory. That change, apparently, was made by the committee, unintentionally. I asked them if they had changed that on purpose, and they hadn't.

MR. FLORY

Secondly, what we're talking about here really has nothing specific to do with how it appears on the ballot; that is contained in the resolution itself--is it not?--as to how it appears on the ballot.

MS. ZERVIGON

That's right, and that particular thing is covered in lines 12 and 13 of that same paragraph--"a summary shall appear..."--that part.

MR. GOLDMAN

Ms. Zervigon, doesn't that sentence in 12 and 13--"The proposed amendment shall have a title containing a brief summary of the changes proposed"--doesn't that refer to that back there, and wouldn't that take care of it?

MS. ZERVIGON

Refer to what back where?

MR. GOLDMAN

Well, back there where you want to change "to be" to "as." Wouldn't that sentence on 12 and 13 take care of that up there? That's a still part of it. "The proposed amendment shall have a title containing a brief summary of the changes proposed."

MS. ZERVIGON

Well, Mr. Goldman, if I were a legislator, I would rather see the whole thing instead of somebody's summary. Sometimes, what someone else thinks is the highlights, I consider the details; and what they consider details not worthy of telling me, I'm very interested in. So, I think I'd rather see the full deal, as was required under the '21 Constitution.

MR. HENRY

I believe they're passing out the copies now; so, if you all will wait just a minute to look at your copies, we'll see what we're going to do from here.

I believe the amendments are passed out.

Point of Information

MR. DENNIS

Could the Clerk read this paragraph as it would stand with this amendment? I'm not sure whether the semicolon is the end of it or what.

[Paragraph reread with proposed Amendment.]

Questions

MR. DENNIS

Ms. Zervigon, would this require that each proposed constitutional amendment set forth the entire article? I notice you've changed the word "may" to "shall."

MS. ZERVIGON

No, Mr. Flory's amendment did that, Judge Dennis. Mr. Flory's amendment changed the "may" to "shall." It wasn't my intention to change Mr. Flory's amendment.

MR. DENNIS

I see. So, the effect of your amendment, or Mr. Flory's, would be to require that the setting forth the entire article each time an amendment was proposed.

MS. ZERVIGON

That's the effect of Mr. Flory's amendment is to change the "may" to the "shall." That was not my amendment. Since it had passed overwhelmingly, I incorporated it with the change I wanted to make, which was to change the "to be" to "as revised."

MR. DENNIS

But, you agree that you do repeat the effect of that in your amendment; is that right?

MS. ZERVIGON

Well, Judge Dennis, if I gather what you're talking about, what you're talking about is printing the entire revised article on the voting machine. All I can say to you is that I took this language from the present constitution. It reads, more or less, this way in the present constitution. There's no reference to how it's going to go on the machine in the present constitution, and the present constitution has never been interpreted to mean that; so what I'm trying to do is to put us back to the present constitution. You know, that's the intent--if this passes--that's the intent of this body, if you understand what I mean in that regard.

MR. ARNETTE

Well, Mary, of course, this isn't your amendment or anything--the first part that Mr. Flory put in--but, in his language, it says the "article, sections, or other subdivisions." So, if an entire article wasn't changed, you wouldn't need to print it on there, would you?

MS. ZERVIGON

That's correct.

MR. ABRAHAM

Mary, do you agree with me that the language as proposed by both you and Mr. Flory does not specify that the entire article does have to be printed? because it says "the entire article, sections, or other subdivisions as revised," so you would print only what is necessary there; and if there were enough entailed, you could print the entire article, could you not?

MS. ZERVIGON

Just enough to make it comprehensible, it seems to me. That's one of the reasons we stuck the word "subdivisions" later on in that paragraph, if you see what I mean.

MR. ABRAHAM

All right. Would not the last sentence, then, take care of a summary of the changes to be put on the ballot? There's nothing in here that requires the entire article be placed on the ballot?

MS. ZERVIGON

That's as I understand it, and that's the way the....the present constitutional language that reads this way has never been challenged to mean anything else.

[Amendment adopted without objection.
Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 87-12.
Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

"Section 2. Convention Called by Legislature
Section 2. Whenever two-thirds of the members elected to each house consider it desirable to revise, alter, or amend this constitution, they may recommend to the electors at the next election for representatives to the legislature or Congress to vote for or against a convention for that purpose. If a majority of the electors voting on the proposition approve it, the legislature shall provide at its next session for calling such a convention. At a special election called for that purpose, the proposed constitution and any alternative propositions agreed upon by the convention shall be submitted to the people for their ratification or rejection. If the proposal is approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon, the governor shall proclaim it to be the Constitution of the State of Louisiana."

Explanation

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, delegates, the purpose of Section 2 is to provide a rational, workable means for initiating constitutional conventions. In the past, there has been no law on the subject, and it has created an unclear legal situation. There has been, in the 1921 Constitution and in at least the two previous constitutions, one means for altering the constitution; and that was by the amendment process. Nevertheless, the legislature has, on several occasions, under the last two or three constitutions called constitutional conventions. The procedures and the limitations under which a legislature might call such a convention have never been spelled out, never been established. So, the purpose of this section is to establish those limitations. We provided, for example, that it would take a two-thirds vote of the legislature to call a constitutional convention. It's possible, under court decisions at present, that a mere majority vote of the legislature could call such a convention now; but, since it takes a two-thirds vote to initiate a constitutional amendment, certainly it should take at least a two-thirds vote to initiate a constitutional convention which constitutes a much more serious change. Also, we require here that the voters approve the proposition on the ballot for calling and initiating a convention. We also provide that, once a convention has come up with a proposed constitution, that that constitution and any alternatives that the convention comes up with have to be submitted to the people again for their approval. This would prohibit the so-called sovereign convention, in which a convention can meet and draft a constitution and then have it adopted as the constitution of the state without ever submitting it to the people. That's the essence of the proposal. I'm sure it would need some amendments, and I think we have some amendments that'll probably be offered that, in my personal view, would probably improve it. One of the criticisms directed at the proposal was that, the way we have it drafted--the committee proposal--the legislature is not required to place on the ballot what the nature of the conventions would be when it asked the people whether or not to adopt or reject a call. Certainly, under the language in the committee proposal, the legislature could put the limitations on the ballot, and I think we'd be bound by those limitations, but it is not required to do so. The convention may want to consider that point. So, with that brief explanation, I'd like to try to answer any questions.

Questions

MR. BOLLINGER

Woody, what vote did it take to adopt Act 2, 1972?

MR. JENKINS

Well, there's no requirement now. It's unclear what it took. In fact, it had more than ninety votes, so there was no legal question that could be raised. But, there's no constitutional requirement one way or the other.

MR. BOLLINGER

What, in your opinion, is the advantage to lock in the composition of the convention, or of a future convention?

MR. JENKINS

Now, we have not, in Section 2, locked in the composition of such a convention--the composition, rather, of such a convention. That would be left to the legislature.

MR. TOBIAS

Mr. Jenkins, is there any prohibition in the committee proposal prohibiting the legislature from calling a constitutional convention by a simple majority vote?

MR. JENKINS

There is no direct prohibition that you could point to, but it is the purpose and the intent of the committee proposal to provide that this is the exclusive means by which the legislature could initiate a constitutional convention. Certainly, we'd, I think, be glad to have some language, if you'd like, to specifically spell that out.

MR. TOBIAS

O. K. But, as it presently stands and under the theory that we've been operating under for this entire convention, it would be possible for the legislature under your committee proposal, since there is no prohibition, to by a simple majority act call a constitutional convention such as the constitutional convention which we now are sitting in?

MR. JENKINS

No, I don't think that under standard legal rules for interpreting statutes and constitutions that would be correct, because I think, by enumerating the ways that we have for calling conventions, that that enumeration would be considered exclusive. If we didn't have an enumeration, certainly the courts could say the legislature had complete discretion in the matter. But, as I say, I don't think we'd object to putting language in here that would, say, limit it and make it absolutely clear.

MR. TOBIAS

My next question is: You are attempting, I believe, to guarantee that there is no constitutional convention that would be a sovereign convention--that is, that you are requiring absolutely that they submit the proposed constitution which they have drafted to the people for their vote--is that correct?

111th Days Proceedings—January 7, 1974

MR. JENKINS
That's correct.

MR. TOBIAS
Well, under Section 1, is it not true that the legislature could propose a constitutional amendment calling a constitutional convention which would, in effect, require a two-thirds vote and a simple majority and then say that that constitution would not have to be submitted to the voters?

MR. JENKINS
Under Section 1?

MR. TOBIAS
Under Section 1.

MR. JENKINS
No, because, under Mr. Flory's amendment, only one article at a time can be affected in the constitution.

MR. PUGH
Mr. Jenkins, did you intend that this election by the people would be held at a time when there was a statewide election for representatives?

MR. JENKINS
Now, which election are you talking about?

MR. PUGH
Well, you say that they will recommend to the electors at the next election for representatives. If a representative dies, wouldn't there be a special election for that representative? Could it be at that time?

MR. JENKINS
Well, that would be a special election. We're here not talking about the unusual or extraordinary case, but the--certainly--the statewide election.

MR. PUGH
Well, it doesn't say "statewide" is the reason I was asking.

MR. JENKINS
Well, that's the obvious intent, yes, sir; but we'd be glad to put in "statewide," I think, if you want to insert that.

MR. PUGH
Now, this--in the event there's an amendment--under the terms of Section 2, wouldn't that preclude a special election for that amendment?

MR. JENKINS
Say that again? We're not talking about amendment. What is your.....

MR. PUGH
"Whenever two-thirds of the members elected to each house consider it desirable to amend this constitution" is what it says.

MR. JENKINS
Right. To amend or to revise.

MR. PUGH
That's right; so, if you're going to have an amendment under the terms of this section, it may only be recommended to the electors at their next regular election--if you mean regular or statewide--and couldn't be at a special election, could it?

MR. JENKINS
The intent is to have it at the next regular election; that's correct.

MR. PUGH
So, you can't have a special election for an amendment to this constitution.

MR. JENKINS
No, that's not correct. This is to submit to the electors the question of whether or not they will vote for or against a convention for the purpose of revising, altering, or amending. In other words, when we say amending, we're talking there about a limited convention--a convention of limited authority, unlike this convention which is unlimited in nature. So, we're talking about whether....Your question, I think, pertains to whether or not you could have a special election for the purpose of putting to the people the proposition of whether or not to hold a constitutional convention, limited or unlimited. The answer--the intent--is no. The intent is to provide that it would be at the next election for state representatives or for congressmen.

MR. PUGH
No, the point I'm trying to make is nothing in the first sentence refers to your identification of it being a convention call. It talks about a two-thirds vote of the members to amend the constitution. There's no reference in that section. You see, there's no reference in the first sentence that what you're talking about to be for a convention call.

MR. JENKINS
Well, obviously, if we're talking about constitutional amendments, Section 1 is the section that governs. What we're talking about here is if the legislature wants to call a convention for the purpose of amending the constitution or for revising it or for altering it, then they submit that question to the people. If you look at the title of the section, I think that that clearly indicates that--that we're talking there about conventions, not the general amending process.

MR. ABRAHAM
Woody, could you tell us what the thinking of the committee was where we do not specify the composition of the convention in Section 2, but we did specify it in Section 3? Why is it specified in one section and not the other?

MR. JENKINS
I believe you asked that before, Mack. The reason was that we felt that the legislature ought to have the discretion, in the case of Section 2, whereas the purpose of Section 3 is entirely different. The purpose of Section 3 is to provide an outlet, or means, whereby the people can control their own destiny, even though the legislature has not acted on the question of constitutional reform. Let me say, too, in reference to Section 3, because the committee is going to offer a committee amendment--and you might want to gear your thinking to this--to change the dates in Section 3 so that the first election would be 1994, twenty years from this year, and that the elections would be held every twentieth year, rather than every tenth year. So, you might gear your thinking to that. That's going to be a committee amendment when we get to Section 3.

MR. O'NEILL
Woody, some people have questioned why this section is needed at all and have said that, of course, it is up to the legislature. Back in 1972, didn't many of the legislators feel there was a big void in this area and wished they had had some guidelines to go by?

MR. JENKINS
I think there was some discussion of it. It wasn't really a major topic of discussion, but, if you go back....anyone who has looked at the court decisions in this area realizes the tremendous problem we have, because the Constitution of '21 only specifies one means for altering that constitution; yet, here we are at a convention which, perhaps, could have been called by less than a two-thirds vote of the legislature, even though an amendment would have taken two-thirds. It's just a question that's up in the air. We want, in the future, there to be no question that the legislature does have authority to call conventions, what the vote is, when they have to submit it, etc.

MR. O'NEILL
There are many other states who are rewriting their constitutions or putting provisions such as this in their constitutions; and, of course, many of them have had it from a long time back. Correct?

MR. JENKINS
I think most states definitely have a method for calling a constitutional convention in their constitution. I think the Section 3 about the automatic call is the new thing that more and more states are including.

MR. O'NEILL
So, the question here should be how to make this section as good as possible and, of course, not whether it should be in here or not because it is definitely needed.

MR. JENKINS
Well, that's my view, certainly.

11th Days Proceedings—January 7, 1974

MR. BOLLINGER

Woody, why did the committee feel it was necessary that anytime the legislature, by a two-thirds vote, thought it was necessary for a convention that it would have to submit the question to the people. In other words, the title of Section 2 is "Convention Called by Legislature"; and, in effect, you're having a convention only approved by the legislature and called by the people. Why did the committee think that it was necessary only in the event the people, with a majority vote, allowed the legislature to call it? Would this be the only possible way it could be called?

MR. JENKINS

Well, when we say "called by the legislature," what we're really talking about is "initiated"; and, in this case, the convention would be initiated, first, by the legislature and then go to the people. The reason was that we felt that it strengthens the hand of a convention. I think today, if we were sitting in this convention, having had a vote of the people for us to be here--indicating a desire by the public to see us here--I think that the public, first of all, would be a lot more interested in what we're doing, that they would be more in support of what we're doing, etc. We thought that, by requiring a vote of the people first, that you make it a stronger convention--a convention that's in session because the people want it. I think, also, you can see in states where conventions are initiated by a vote of the people that the constitutions in question almost always pass, and you don't have these futile efforts where the legislature initiates something and then the people really, maybe, are somewhat less than enthusiastic and then vote it down. So, that's the reason--that we shouldn't spend all this money and go into all this time unless the people have said....

MR. HENRY

Mr. Jenkins, sort of answer a little faster.

MR. DUVAL

Woody, I was wondering, sort of in line with Mr. Bollinger's question: --I'm sure the committee studied other states--does any other state have a constitutional provision where you have to have a two-thirds vote of the legislature, a vote of the people, then your convention, then another vote of the people? Does any other state have that provision?

MR. JENKINS

Yes, I understand they do. I can't give you the statistics right off, because they have different requirements; but I don't think, as I recall it, that would be an unusual requirement.

MR. DUVAL

You don't know what the percentages would be?

MR. JENKINS

I just don't know....

MR. DUVAL

Don't you think that would be a bit superfluous for the people to vote after a two-thirds vote of the legislature, and then to have the people vote to call a convention when they're going to have to ultimately vote to ratify it? You don't think that's a little superfluous?

MR. JENKINS

No. In fact, you take your case of 1956. In 1956, you remember, Governor Long had on the ballot the proposition of whether to call a convention and, also, delegates were elected at the same time; and the people voted against the call. Well, suppose the convention....they hadn't had the opportunity to vote on the call and the convention had been held and then it went up to a public vote. Well, the people were against having it to start with, you see. The chances are--ten to one, I suppose--that the convention as a whole--the constitution--would have been rejected. It just doesn't put a convention in a good position, I don't think--a strong position--when it has not been initiated by a vote of the people. If you have a vote of the people, on the contrary, I think you have a public mandate to act and function.

MR. KEAN

Mr. Jenkins, your reference to how it worked once before, with Governor Long, gets to the question I had in mind. As I read this proposal, you'd have to have an election to decide whether or not you were going to have a convention; and then the legislature, at the next session, would provide for the call of that election. As I read that, you would then have an election to decide whether you were going to have a convention; the legislature at the next session would then provide for the call; and, if they decided to elect representatives or delegates to that convention, you'd then have to have an election for the delegates; and, then, if the delegates finally completed their work, they'd then have to have a third election to see whether or not the public would accept it. Now, is that the intention of the committee?

MR. JENKINS

That is the intention, yes; and I think that the intention was to make it a very deliberate process that the public would understand and follow through step by step. Now, Mr. Avant has an amendment coming--I believe his would be the second amendment--that would change that a little bit and, certainly, would allow the vote, as I read it, to vote delegates at the same time that the proposition is voted on. Now, perhaps, that's a better approach.

MR. KEAN

But, I am correct in my understanding of your proposal that it would take three elections in order to actually bring about a new constitution?

MR. JENKINS

That's correct.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendments sent up by Mr. Gauthier, Mr. Tobias, Dennery, and others:

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, delete lines 14 through 28, both inclusive in their entirety.

Explanation

MR. TOBIAS

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, if we adopt this amendment, I believe that we can save a lot of time; and I think that, after I explain it, you'll understand, by reading Sections 1 and 3, that Section 2 is not really needed. Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 36 allows the legislature to amend the constitution. The procedure under Section 1 to amend the constitution is a two-thirds vote of the legislature plus a vote of the people. Under Section 2, as proposed by the Bill of Rights Committee, a constitutional convention could be called by a two-thirds vote of the legislature plus a vote of the people. So, the system or method of amending the constitution and the system and method of calling a constitution are identical. Accordingly, you are, in effect, when you call a constitutional convention, authorizing an amendment to the constitution. Section 2 states that the proposed constitution would have to be submitted to the voters. Now, Section 1 permits the legislature--and does not prohibit the legislature--from calling a constitutional convention by amending the constitution--by an amendment saying that, by a two-thirds vote, you can have a consti....the system between Section 1 and 2 is identical in that respect, and they could get around the provisions in Section 2, which state that the document presented by the constitutional convention would require a vote of the people, by simply offering an amendment as proposed by Section 1. As regards the Flory amendment which reads "However, the legislature may propose as one amendment a revision of an entire article of this constitution, which revision may contain multiple objects of changes," does not prohibit, as Mr. Jenkins explained in his opening statement, the legislature from calling a constitutional convention pursuant to Section 1. I disagree with Mr. Jenkins's interpretation that Committee Proposal No. 36 prohibits the legislature, by a simple majority act, from calling a constitutional convention. There is not one prohibition in Committee Proposal No. 36 against the type of constitutional convention which we are now sitting in--not one. I would urge that you carefully consider this. Our constitution has a lot of surplus verbiage, and I think that this is one place where we can cut a whole paragraph and save extending the length of this constitution any longer than it has to be. I yield to any questions.

Questions

MR. AVANT

Max, if Section 2 was deleted in its entirety, then I think you are probably right. If that were the case, then the legislature could submit a constitutional amendment that there's going to be a constitutional convention without any detail or specification as to how that convention would be constituted or when it would meet or how long it would meet, or any limitation that might be on its authority in that amendment. In other words, they could submit to the people, so to speak, a kind of a pig in a poke, could they not?

111th Days Proceedings—January 7, 1974

MR. TOBIAS
I agree.

MR. AVANT
But, if you had a Section 2 which said that when the legislature issues any such call, or proposition, that the proposition has got to specify the composition of the convention, the duration time, and place it is to be held, and any limitations on constitutional change, then the legislature couldn't, under Section 1, call a constitutional convention that would be a pig in a poke, could they?

MR. TOBIAS
I disagree completely because, under Section 1, the legislature is not restricted. It can authorize a constitutional convention by a simple amendment which would have the effect of amending the whole article. There still--whether you have Section 2 or not--there's still no prohibition in Section 1 to prohibit the legislature from calling a convention with all of these proposals and giving to the people, so to speak--using your terms--a pig in a poke.

MR. AVANT
You don't think that a specific provision in another section as to how they shall proceed amounts to a prohibition--from proceeding in an orderly fashion?

MR. TOBIAS
No, I do not because the legislature could amend it any way they want, and there's still no prohibition for a simple majority from calling a constitutional convention similar to the one we presently have. Now, if the convention wanted to take that route and say "these methods and these methods only are the way in which the constitution can be amended," that is a step that they'll have to take. But, as presently constituted and as it comes from the Bill of Rights Committee, there's no reason for Section 2.

MR. AVANT
Well, Max, when you set out two specific ways to have a constitutional convention, in the constitution, don't you think that that means that that's the only two ways?

MR. TOBIAS
No, it does not because the legislature can still amend the constitution under Section 1 and call a constitutional convention.

MR. AVANT
They would have to amend one or the other of those two sections, wouldn't they?

MR. TOBIAS
No, they would not. All they'd have to do is call, by a two-thirds vote...the procedures under Section 1 and Section 2--the procedures are identical. They call for two-thirds vote of the legislature and a majority vote of the people. It's absolutely identical.

MR. JENKINS
Max, as I understand what you're trying to say, you're saying that the legislature, by a two-thirds vote under Section 1, could propose an amendment to the constitution which would say that the legislature has the authority to call a convention and then, if the people vote for that, the legislature could call a convention.

MR. TOBIAS
Correct.

MR. JENKINS
And, you're saying, then, that it would not have to be resubmitted to the people?

MR. TOBIAS
I'm saying they could get around it if they said that, in that call for the convention, for example, that that constitution as adopted by the convention would not have to be submitted to the people. There's no prohibition against it.

MR. JENKINS
Well, what you're saying is correct. But, aren't you raising two different things, because submitting to the people a constitutional amendment giving the legislature the right to call a sovereign convention is quite a different question than the vote by which the people will vote, in a particular instance, to call a constitutional convention under Section 2, which they in turn will be allowed to vote on after the convention comes up with its work. Isn't that quite a different question? Just because the people might vote for the second one doesn't mean they would vote for the first one, does it?

MR. TOBIAS
Not necessarily, but the point is that the legislature could have proposed that this constitutional convention be approved by the people before holding the convention. In other words, they could have proceeded by the route of a constitutional amendment, if they had so chosen. In other words, Act 2 of 1972 could have been a constitutional amendment. Instead, they chose to choose the legislative act method.

MR. JENKINS
I mean what you're saying is true, Max, but the people may or may not have voted for Act 2. Then, it's a different question from whether or not they would always give the legislature the authority to call sovereign conventions. They might well vote for a particular convention without giving that blanket authority, mightn't they?

MR. TOBIAS
The legislature could always, by a constitutional amendment in the actual amendment, call the constitutional convention into session. There is no prohibition against that. Now, whether you wanted to offer an amendment that would prohibit those types of things, I personally have no opinion; but I think that there is some clarification needed on that point.

MR. LANDRUM
Max, I believe what you're really saying is that the people would have a chance to decide whether or not they would like to have another convention without having to wonder whether or not another governor or another legislative body would permit it to be. Am I right?

MR. TOBIAS
Correct. In other words, the legislature...the people under all circumstances would, whether we have Section 2 or not, be required by vote...they would have to tell the people--the rest of the people of this state--this is the new constitution we want. No matter what system we choose, the people are going to have to vote on it; so the protection that Section 2 attempts to give is, in my opinion, a false protection. It doesn't say anything; it's just surplusage because it repeats, in effect, Section 1.

MR. LANDRUM
And, I agree with that, all but the years--the every ten years thereafter--because that comes up...I mean you're doing .....

MR. TOBIAS
Section 3 is, in my opinion, absolutely necessary; but I think the flexibility is needed under Section 1. Some flexibility is under Section 1 to get around the provisions of Section 2. There's no exclusive means under Section 2; it's not exclusive, in my opinion.

Further Discussion

MR. PEREZ
Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in opposition to this amendment because of the fact that I consider it absolutely necessary that we have in the constitution some means by which a new constitutional convention can be called. I might call to your attention the fact that the earlier constitution had a provision similar to the present constitution of 1921 which we have, concerning the method of amendment to the constitution. There are many lawyers who believe that the writing of a new constitution is no more and no less than an amendment or several series of amendments of the existing constitution. So, that when we provide in our constitution for the method by which we may amend the constitution it may, in fact, be the only and exclusive method by which a constitution may be amended. Now, that issue was tried with respect to the '21 Constitution. The question was raised because there was a vote to call the convention prior to the holding of the convention but no vote after the convention had completed its work. In a criminal case, someone who was being tried for murder made some technical pleading with respect to the legality of the '21 Constitution and the court upheld the method by which the '21 Constitution was adopted. But, I might say that this was in a criminal case, one in which the subject matter was not thoroughly considered and gone into. In my humble opinion, as a lawyer who has studied this matter rather closely because when this particular constitutional convention--as we call ourselves--was called, I made a rather thorough study of the subject matter. I am satisfied that there is good reason to argue that if we put in the constitution a method by which the constitution can be amended, we must put something in by which a new constitutional convention can be called or, otherwise, there is a possibility that the courts might hold--in spite of these other decisions we have had--that the courts might hold that this is the exclusive and only method whereby a new constitution might be adopted. I would, therefore, strongly urge you to reject this amendment. Then, let's proceed to polish up this section and get a section which would be acceptable to the majority of the delegates so that we can have some clearly established and set forth procedure whereby a new constitutional convention can be called when it's needed, hopefully, many, many years from now. I'll yield to questions.

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

Questions

MR. TOBIAS

Mr. Perez, do you agree that under the committee proposal that the legislature still could call a...by majority vote, a constitutional convention?

MR. PEREZ

Do I? No, I don't. I believe that this would be exclusive, also.

MR. TOBIAS

You agree with Mr. Jenkins on that?

MR. PEREZ

I would say that if a procedure is set out for calling a new convention, that is the only method whereby it could be called.

MR. TOBIAS

Do you mean to say, also, that in effect that the present constitutional convention which we sit in, is unconstitutional?

MR. PEREZ

As far as I'm concerned, I feel that we are sitting here now as a large committee of the legislature, and that we have no authority whatsoever from the people to be here. The only method set forth in the constitution at this time, with respect to amending the constitution, is the procedure set forth with two-thirds of both Houses and submission to the people. So, until and unless this is adopted by the people, then, I don't believe that we have any real standing at all, frankly. But, I would even have reservations with respect to the work that we are doing and I always have had; yes, I have had because I've made a rather thorough study of the matter--but I believe the courts would eventually hold that once the people had voted on it, that it becomes a new constitution. That doesn't give us the excuse not to do our job properly.

Further Discussion

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I just want to add a little bit to what Mr. Perez has said. I, too, oppose this amendment. I had occasion to conduct an inquiry into this general subject matter. It was my opinion after reading much on the subject that the legislature has the power--in the absence of any specific provision in the constitution--the legislature has the power to initiate a call for a constitutional convention and that only one of two things must happen before that document can become a new constitution; either the call must be approved by the people or the document must be approved by the people. In other words, the people have to get in and give their assent to the document at one stage or the other. The reason that I oppose this amendment is because I am afraid that if you do not establish a procedure, and the procedure by which the legislature can call a constitutional convention, that then they can do as was done in this particular case. They can call a convention by a simple legislative act and that then they will have the complete authority to spell out how that convention is going to operate. Of course, ultimately, I think the document would have to be approved by the people. But, I just don't think it is wise to call a constitutional convention without the people having given their approval to the manner in which that convention is going to operate and how it shall be constituted. That's why I feel that we need this provision with some amendments in the constitution to establish precisely and in what manner the legislature will be permitted to call a constitutional convention.

Questions

MR. O'NEILL

Jack, Mr. Tobias has suggested that this constitutional amendment--say that we deleted this section----this constitutional amendment would come up in the future when a new constitutional convention was needed; at that time, the procedure would be brought up. Now, that's a separate and distinct question. What you are saying is that's a separate and distinct question from whether or not the people want a procedure for it or they want a convention itself?

MR. AVANT

Well, I think that the legislature could submit a constitutional amendment to provide a method for calling a constitutional convention and amend the constitution, and provide the method. Then, come back and, in accordance with that method, call a convention. But, I don't think you could do it just by a constitutional amendment which relates to the amending process, when you have a procedure for calling a convention. What I'm afraid would be the situation that if you just deleted Section 2 in its entirety and left Section 3 and didn't do anything more, then I think the only way that you could have a constitutional convention, under the constitution, would be in the manner provided in Section 3, and that the only way you would get any other method would be first, to amend the constitution to provide the method and then come back and have the convention in accordance with what you had provided, which is going to take a long period of time.

MR. O'NEILL

So, by putting the process in here right now, we are going to save a lot of trouble in the future, for one thing.

MR. AVANT

And, you are going to make it clear as to what must be done and not leave it hanging up in the air and have everybody guessing and having people as astute as Mr. Perez entertaining doubts as to the legality of what we may be doing, and I say that in all due respect, Mr. Perez; I concur with you.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Under this procedure, Jack, how long do you think it would take for the revision of the constitution, under this procedure as you outlined here?

MR. AVANT

In Section 2?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Yes.

MR. AVANT

How long would it take?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Without a special election.

MR. AVANT

Well, I'll try to sit down and figure it out, Senator De Blieux. But, I don't think it would take any longer than it's taken under the procedure that we are operating on. We started out with an act that became effective in July, 1972, as I recall. If we wind up with a new constitution, we probably are not going to have it until about the first of the year of 1975, before it will actually be in effect. I don't think that this process is going to take any longer.

MR. JENKINS

Jack, some of us have been working on this question raised earlier by Mr. Tobias about whether or not this article would be the exclusive means for revising or altering the constitution. Let me ask you, do you think this language would do it if we said in a new section, "This constitution may not be revised, altered, or amended, nor may a new constitution be adopted except in accordance with the provisions of this article"?

MR. AVANT

Well, I think that would nail it down and take care of any doubts that Mr. Tobias may have. But, I personally believe that if you have a procedure for amending the constitution and then you have two procedures for having a constitutional convention, that then you can't have a constitutional convention via the amending process without first amending one of those other two procedures or adding a new procedure. In other words, I don't think that when you spell out how you are going to have a convention that you can get around that, so to speak, through the amending process.

MR. LANDRUM

Fellow delegates, I rise in support of Mr. Tobias' amendment. I believe we went fifty years without having a new document due to the fact that previous governors and legislators failed to bring it to the people. Now, following this convention, I would think it would be even more difficult to have a convention, even though it may be necessary. But, putting aside these present differences, I still believe that another generation should be able to decide their destiny. We should leave it to them as to what they want in their constitution since they have to live with it. I think it would be wrong for this body to tell another generation what to do and how to do. Some of our ideas may be antiquated, may not be suitable for the day. So, it would be necessary for another generation to make decisions for themselves. I ask that you support Mr. Tobias' amendment.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. TOBIAS

Four brief points. First of all, any constitutional convention, unless a sovereign constitutional convention called pursuant to Section 1 of this proposal, would have to be voted upon by the people. Second of all, I disagree with Mr. Avant. I disagree when he says that the legislature could amend the constitution, providing for a different method of calling a constitutional convention. That is, in my opinion, incorrect. As a fact, the legislature could have put Act 2 of 1972 as a constitutional amendment, setting forth all of the provisions thereof. As a matter of fact, the 1921 Constitutional Convention was called pursuant to the 1898 Constitutional Convention by this same method, by amending the 1898 Constitutional Convention because the people voted upon calling the 1921 Constitutional Convention. Third, Section 2 as drafted by the committee does not provide for the election of delegates; it does not say anything about delegates, one of its flaws. What would happen? I assume that the legislature would provide for this, which I am not saying is bad or good; I think it's probably very good. Fourth of all, I believe that we should let's try to save some time; this is surplus language. I think we ought to try to save some time by deleting this section which I regard as definitely surplus language.

Questions

MR. STAGG

Max, I think you are entirely correct that Section 2 does not stipulate how delegates are to be chosen. I disagree that you think the legislature can do it better. But, my problem resides over here in Section 3 because you're saying we are saving time. In Section 3 that sets up the constitutional convention call by the people, it says "according"—in line 5—"according to the same procedures outlined in the previous section." If we eliminate Section 2, that if we do not perfect Section 2, then the same amount of time is going to be spent in amending Section 3 because it has nothing to hang on.

MR. TOBIAS

I disagree; there is some merit to what you say, I agree. But, I think that that particular procedure as set forth there should be left to the legislature.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Avant sends up amendments reading as follows:
Amendment No. 1. On page 2, delete lines 15 through 22, both inclusive in their entirety and on line 23 delete "pose, the" and insert in lieu thereof the following:
"Section 2. The legislature, by a two-thirds favorable vote of the elected members of each house, may submit to the electors a proposition to call a constitutional convention. The proposition shall specify the composition of the convention, the duration, time, and place it is to be held, and any limitations on constitutional change to be placed upon the convention. If the proposition is approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon, the convention shall be held in accordance with the call. The"

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I don't think the amendment requires a whole lot of explanation. First, I would like to point out—and this is just what I believe, you may believe differently; if you do I'm not going to argue with you about it—but, I believe that the redrafting of a new constitution or an entire document is a greatly different matter than a simple, single-shot amendment to the constitution. I think that the holding of a constitutional convention in which the entire basic charter of the people of the state is going to be rewritten is a very substantial, and significant, and far-reaching operation. For that reason, I believe and feel that while it is necessary that we provide some mechanism whereby the legislature may initiate such a convention, that there must be certain specific guidelines and certain specific information that must be submitted to the people and that the people themselves should have the right, (1) to make the final decision whether or not there will be any such convention and secondly, after the convention has finished its work if the people want it, to be given the opportunity to approve or disapprove the product because, as I say, you are dealing with the entire basic, fundamental charter or contract under which all of the people of the state must live. For that reason, I thought that the committee proposal, as it was originally submitted in Section 2, was deficient in that it did not provide that the call for a convention must specify how that convention would be constituted, neither was there any requirement that it specify how long the convention would last, or where it would meet, or what, if any, limitations were placed upon it. Most significantly, as I read the committee proposal....well, I've already said that. So, I think that these are things which are vital, are important, are of a very fundamental nature that the people are entitled to know before they are asked to vote on the question of whether or not they are going to have a convention; I think they should vote on that proposition. So, without outdoing my welcome I think I've made a sufficient explanation of what I am trying to accomplish—or I'm asking you to help me to accomplish. I would be happy to answer any questions if anybody has any questions.

Questions

MR. STAGG

Mr. Avant, it is not your intention in this kind of proposal to be brought forth from the legislature that there be any limitation on the kinds or qualities of the delegates that would be in the call and the people if they didn't like the way the legislature suggested it....105 elected and 27 appointed, if they thought that was too many they could say, "Hell, no, we won't play."

MR. AVANT

That's right.

MR. LEBLEU

My question was basically the same. I just wondered whether your objections was to the way that the convention delegates are selected.

MR. AVANT

For this convention?

MR. LEBLEU

Yea.

MR. AVANT

Mr. LeBleu....

MR. LEBLEU

...and whether any objections you heard were, you know, to the way that they were selected or whether you thought that the people should say which way they would be selected.

MR. AVANT

Mr. LeBleu, as you know, I ran for this job; I didn't get elected; I was subsequently appointed. There have been a lot of remarks made about the appointment of delegates. I, personally, think that certain delegates should be appointed. But, I think that's something for the people to decide. If they don't want any appointed delegates and the call provides for them, then they can vote against it. I personally think that many of the appointed delegates in this convention have done an outstanding job, and I'm not speaking of myself either.

MR. LEBLEU

Well, I'm in complete agreement with you. But, I think if you submitted it to the people as a choice of whether you want to select your delegates in a specific manner or do you not want to select any...or you don't want a convention at all, that's the only choice that the public would have.

MR. AVANT

Well, no. The way that this article is written, Mr. LeBleu, the legislature would issue the call, they say, "Do you want to have a convention?" The people would say, "Yes, we want a convention." Then, it's completely up to the legislature after that. They can say, "Well, O.K., we are going to have a convention and it's going to be us," or, it could be all appointed delegates, or, they could say, "Well, the convention will consist of the governor, and the lieutenant governor, and all of the statewide elected officers." There is nothing that said how the convention will be constituted. I think that it is a matter of a very serious nature, as I've said before. I think that the people should have the right to make that decision. They should have the right in considering whether or not they want to have a convention, to look at how it is going to be constituted. "Is it going to be all elected? Is it going to be partially elected, partially appointed? What are we getting into?" I think the people have that right. I think we've got to guarantee that they have that right.

MR. BURNS

Mr. Avant, that question about the appointment of delegates-- that's provided for in Section 3.

MR. AVANT

Well now, no, sir. That is on that automatic thing that comes up every ten years, you see; this is when the legislature calls it. The other thing is, every ten years the people are going to vote, "Do you want to have a convention?" Then, if they want to have a convention, there will be a hundred and five elected delegates. Then, the legislature may provide for twenty-seven appointed delegates. But, I'm not talking about that right now. I'm talking about when the legislature calls one, just like they called this one.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Avant, am I correct in that the procedure that you are setting up means that you have to submit to the people whether or not they want to call a convention? Then, you would elect the delegates, if it's set up to have elected delegates. Then, after they do all of their work you give it back to the people to see whether or not they approve what the delegates came up with.

MR. AVANT

They get two shots at it--are we going to have it; then, after you have it, they get a chance to look at the finished product. As far as the election of the delegates, I think under the amendment that I have, if that's the way the call is going to be, you could elect those delegates at the same time you're voting on the proposition, are you going to have the call. I see no prohibition against that.

MR. LANIER

Well, the point I wanted to get to is why do you feel that the people need two shots at it instead of one shot?

MR. AVANT

Because it's their constitution and they are the ones who's going to have to live under it.

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Avant, I understand your concept, but I'm wondering would it discourage somebody to spend the money to run when they might not have an office to run for?

MR. AVANT

Well, I understand they did that once before but they don't have to do it that way, Mr. Duval. They can do it in three stages. They can say, "Are we going to have it?" If there are going to be elected delegates, then they can come back and elect the delegates and have the convention and then vote on it again, or they can do it the other way. But, I do understand that in 1956, I think it was, that they put the proposition on the ballot "Will we have a convention" which was going to have so many elected delegates and so many appointed delegates. Then, the elected delegates ran at the same time they voted on whether they were going to have the convention but the people voted it down; they said, "Well, no, we're not going to have it." Now, I've heard people say that the reason that was, was because they had provided for twenty appointed delegates. Now, I frankly don't remember; twenty years ago, you know, is a long time. I can't even remember what happened yesterday.

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Casey sends up amendments. Amendment No. 1. On page 2, delete lines 15 through 22, both inclusive in their entirety-- and we need to add, Mr. Casey, or we can go on a little bit further-- and on line 23 delete the partial word and punctuation "pose," and strike out convention Floor Amendment No. 1 proposed by Mr. Avant and just adopted in its entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: (there is a change in the text)

"Section 2. The legislature, (here's the change) by a two-thirds vote of the elected membership of each house, may provide by law for the calling of a constitutional convention. The convention may be called whenever the legislature considers it desirable to revise or to propose a new constitution. The convention or".

Explanation

MR. CASEY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I'm advancing this particular amendment which differs greatly, I believe, from the concept advanced in the Avant amendment, and which I believe is contained in the committee proposal, that concept to being in the committee proposal in the Avant amendment that you must have a vote of the people before you can even hold a constitutional convention. My concept that I'm advancing is that it would permit the legislature by law to establish the method for merely calling the convention. If the convention . . . if the legislature rather wishes to submit it to the people for determination as to whether you're going to have a vote of the people to hold a constitutional convention, the legislature could do it. If the legislature wishes by law to establish a convention just as it did in Act 2 of 1972, then they could use that method. But, they would have quite a bit of flexibility and latitude to call a convention to establish the method of calling to determine the time of calling and the place, etc. I readily admit it differs greatly from the concept of the Avant amendment and the committee proposal, and I merely wish to advance the thought that we ought to remain flexible, that ten years from now it may be appropriate to permit the legislature to call a convention rather than submitting same to a vote of the people. That's merely what my amendment does, I believe, and I hope have not oversimplified my explanation.

Further Discussion

MR. FLORY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I rise in opposition to the Casey amendment and I do it primarily because in his amendment he deletes the Avant amendment, and the reason for the Avant amendment over the committee's proposal was that you require that when you have-- proposed to have the convention, the public is notified as to the way in which the delegates are to be selected, the scope and powers of the convention, where it is to be held, etc. Under Mr. Casey's amendment this is not necessary. The two-thirds vote of the legislature could call a convention in any manner in which they saw fit and not submit it to the people in the form in which it's to be held, the powers of that convention as to whether or not they had any limitations, etc. So, I think, we had better look at this thing very carefully in comparison to what has already been adopted because what we adopted before is a format for the calling of conventions and mandating to the legislature the way in which they have to propose it to the public. I think it's a much better approach in the Avant amendment than it is by the Casey amendment. I don't want to mean that I don't trust the legislature, I don't mean that, but I do say to you that when we have it in the constitution then everybody knows exactly what the procedure is to be for the calling of a new constitutional convention. I think that the public's entitled to know that in advance. I ask you to reject the Casey amendment.

Questions

MR. LANIER

Mr. Flory, with all of the procedures that we've set forth in the Legislative Article, wouldn't the public know about what the limitations and the composition of the constitutional convention would be when a bill calling such would be run through the legislature?

MR. FLORY

Not necessarily because there's no advertisement here required or there's no prefilling required. It can be introduced on midnight of the fifteenth day of a session. It can be acted on within five days and passed and the convention can be called under this amendment with no prior notice.

111th Days Proceedings—January 7, 1974

Further Discussion

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, we started this discussion with the suggestion that it was necessary to put some provision in this new constitution which would avoid any uncertainty that the manner in which this convention was called was not illegal. Now, we've gone far from that in the proposal that's here before us. I think we need to understand what the options are in connection with the Avant amendment and the proposal now advanced by Mr. Casey. The question is whether or not we're going to make the calling of a constitutional convention more restrictive. In my opinion, as suggested by Mr. Casey, and I support his amendment; we should have flexibility with respect to the calling of a constitutional convention. We had it in 1972, and I see no reason to take it away from the legislature in future years. It seems to me that if the public, the people of this state have to vote on and approve the constitution that's offered by any convention that is called, then that should give the safeguard enough. What we're doing here ought to be to simply say this is the manner in which you can call this and elect a convention if it's desirable to do so and then leave it to the people to approve or disapprove the work of that convention. I think to go as far as Mr. Avant has gone in his amendment simply makes it that much more restrictive and makes it that much more difficult to call a constitutional convention even though there might be desirable reasons for doing so. I can see the issue becoming a political issue having to get out and have a fight in the state with various interests and elements that are taking part in that to determine whether or not you needed to have a constitutional convention when in fact, there is great need for that convention. I suggest to you that Mr. Casey's proposal, it does provide the flexibility, it continues to safeguard a revolt on the document that that convention might bring forth. I urge your support of Mr. Casey's amendment in order to retain the flexibility I think we need in dealing with future constitutional change.

Question

MR. AVANT

Gordon, it has been said by some people -- I don't necessarily agree with them-- but it has been said by some people that the people of the state maybe were offended by the fact that there was some appointed delegates to this convention, and that that kind of put the bad mouth on it, etc. Now, wouldn't it be nice really to know that in advance because if those people are right--and I don't think they are-- but if they are, and this convention . . . the work of this convention was to be defeated because of that fact then we would have had a monumental waste of time and money, would we not?

MR. KEAN

Mr. Avant, if the work of this convention is defeated, I don't think it will be because we had appointed delegates. It will be because the people feel that the product we give to them does not justify their support of it. I can't see any basis for saying that we ought to have an election to determine whether or not the people are in favor of appointed delegates in order to have a constitutional convention. I think that's a waste of time. I think in the final analysis the product at that convention whether it's this one constituted as it is or whether it's the legislature sitting as a constitutional convention or however you want to do it is going to determine whether or not you, the people, are going to adopt that particular document.

Further Discussion

MR. BOLLINGER

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, in the first amendment or the Tobias amendment everyone spoke about the need for establishing a legal process for calling a convention that would not have to go to courts for interpretation. I think the Casey amendment fulfills that need. I think we have to look at what the people are going to have to decide. Under the Avant amendment you're going to have to have the legislature by a two-thirds vote decide on if they would like to have a convention. If they decide this, then you give it to the people, have the people decide if they want the convention and if so, it comes back to the legislature, they establish a procedure, the convention is held, the document is written, then it goes back to the people to ask them again if they are satisfied with the work that the convention has done. Think about what the legislature can do now with a two-thirds vote without the approval of the people. They can tax individuals practically out of existence. However, you won't allow them to call a constitutional convention. With a majority vote they can enact criminal laws that can make life terrifically difficult, but yet you won't by a two-thirds vote allow them to call a constitutional convention. I think we have to analyze just how far we can go with presenting things to the people. I imagine if you would take a poll. . . if you would have taken a poll in 1972 and found out how many people knew what a constitutional convention was over fifty percent of this state's population wouldn't have known. Yet, you want to propose to them, "Do you want a convention?" Now, when it comes down to changing the law and you say, "Well, do you want the new constitution?" I think it's a different matter. I think they can examine the difference and see the difference between a proposed constitution and an existing constitution. I think to be more flexible to allow the legislature the flexibility it needs as far as the constitutional convention would go that we ought to adopt the Casey amendment in lieu of the Avant amendment and not force the people to vote on every time the legislature would desire or see the need to rewrite the constitution. I yield to any questions.

Questions

MR. FLORY

Mr. Bollinger, isn't it true that if the people have the option of deciding whether or not they want a constitutional convention, and if they vote no, then they've saved the state three million dollars or four million from having the convention rather than saying just you're going to have the convention then let the people decide whether they adopt it after the three or four million is spent, isn't that true?

MR. BOLLINGER

That is true, but it's also possible that the people might decide to have. . . might decide not to have a convention and had they had a convention, the law would have been revamped and updated as it would have been necessary. I think this is what we have to look at in examining what's before the convention now, not the possibility of saving the state three million dollars, but will the people allow a convention to be called or should the convention be called, and let the people decide on whether they will accept the work that the convention produces.

MR. FLORY

Secondly, don't you believe that a governor just elected for his first term at the height of his popularity could get two-thirds vote of the legislature to have any kind of convention he wanted to under this amendment?

MR. BOLLINGER

I don't think so.

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Bollinger, you were talking about holding the two elections and possibly a third if you decided not to elect delegates at the same time when you put the call on the ballot because of Mr. Duval's reservation about trying to get good people to run for a convention, they weren't sure whether or not it was going to be held. The time lapse could be considerable, couldn't it?

MR. BOLLINGER

Very possibly so. In fact, it would seem to me before the legislature could even call a convention it would probably take two years.

MS. ZERVIGON

So that the other problem would be that one of the things we've tried to avoid in this convention is asking the people to buy a pig in a poke. But, if you had to ratify the call you would be asked by several groups who may have something in the constitution that they don't particularly want to lose to reject that same pig in the poke still not being able to peek in at the pig, right?

MR. BOLLINGER

That is correct.

MS. ZERVIGON

Better though perhaps that they should vote in the end when they can see the full pig.

MR. NEWTON

Mr. Bollinger, don't you think that having a two-thirds vote in the legislature for calling of a convention might result in the kind of political horse trading you know that would severely limit a constitutional convention either by who was going to be delegates or what subjects could be taken up by that convention?

MR. BOLLINGER

Well, I think you could apply that to almost anything that requires a two-thirds vote at this time. I think that two-thirds vote is an adequate safeguard, and I think it would . . .

111th Days Proceedings—January 7, 1974

Further Discussion

MR. ABRAHAM

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I rise in support of this amendment because I don't think it's necessary to go through the two steps. In Section 2 we're going to provide for the legislature to call a convention, but it still has to go to the people. . . a vote of the people as whether we have a convention or not. Then we come right back around in Section 3 and provide an automatic process by which the people can decide whether they want a constitutional convention or not. If the intent of Section 2 is to allow the legislature some flexibility or some leeway in this then we've taken all the leeway away from them right again by having them submit this thing to the people. The people have their say so. In Section 3; it's automatic they get it every ten years if this proposal stands as it does. I think the legislature does need some leeway in this thing and I just can't see the advantage or the necessity of submitting this thing to the people twice. You submit the call to them first and then you submit the constitution to them. Now, I voted for the Avant amendment because I think that it was better written than the proposal as it now stands, but I think the Casey amendment is even better. If our intent is to provide two methods by which a convention can be called either through a legislature or through the people then let's treat them as two separate issues as we have had here in Sections 2 and 3. Section 2 should empower the legislature the call of a convention. Section 3 should empower the people to do so. I urge the adoption of the Casey amendment.

Questions

MR. DREW

Mack, if we don't adopt this amendment and delete the Avant amendment, aren't we in effect giving all groups that may have a particular provision that's sacred to them a double shot at defeating any possibility of improving the constitution?

MR. ABRAHAM

That's exactly correct. Not only that, Homer, but many people would vote against the convention if they didn't like the makeup or the composition or the duration of time of it. I mean they would vote against calling the convention.

MR. O'NEILL

Well, Mack, are you saying they shouldn't have a chance to vote on the composition or makeup and what have you if they don't like it and it should be held anyway?

MR. ABRAHAM

What I'm saying, Gary, is that they're going to have a chance to vote on calling a convention in Section 3. If our intent here is to give a legislature some flexibility here in Section 2 then I think we need to let them have a flexibility to call the convention. The same way as this convention here was called.

MR. O'NEILL

Well, Mack, I have no assurances voting in this section that Section 3 is going to stay exactly like it is. As a matter of fact, I doubt that it will. So, you're saying in effect you're going to be able to have the legislature determine the composition, the makeup, what scope the convention will have and just every other facet of it, and the only time the people will have a chance to vote on the convention is on its final passage.

MR. ABRAHAM

Of course, you're basing this on the assumption that Section 3 may not pass, Gary, and I think it's good that the people should have an opportunity to decide for themselves whether to call a convention or not. I think Section 3 provides this. I think the intent of Section 2 . . .

MR. O'NEILL

Well, Mack, I'm working on the assumption that Section 2 is what we're talking about right now and Section 3 doesn't have anything to do with it.

MR. ABRAHAM

Well, I think we ought to approach the problem as what we're trying to get out of this article here. It's my understanding that the intent of Section 2 is to give the legislature the flexibility or the leeway of calling a convention, and I think that's what we should try to do. Then you take care of Section 3 when we get to it.

MR. O'NEILL

Well, you're saying now you want to give the legislature flexibility, but then I saw an amendment here that had your name on it that you were going to put the complete makeup on it, so you know, you're confusing me; I don't know what you want to do.

MR. ABRAHAM

Well, my amendment. . . since this one is going to . . . since the Avant amendment passed which is going to provide . . . the convention, mine is no longer necessary.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Abraham, as I look at Section 2 here it says, "a convention called by the legislature," and as I look at Section 3 it's entitled, "a convention called by the people," is that right?

MR. ABRAHAM

That's right.

MR. LANIER

But, what Mr. Avant has done is put the people in Number 2 also as a condition precedent for the legislature calling a convention, is that correct?

MR. ABRAHAM

That's correct. I think we're defeating our purpose here.

Further Discussion

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, delegates, the Bill of Rights Committee supports the Avant amendment as it was adopted. I think that the committee's position is to oppose this amendment. Most of the objections that have been raised to Mr. Avant's amendment I don't think are well-taken, or well-founded. The problem that this convention seems to suffer from is a lack of public interest. If last year, the people of this state had had on the ballot a proposition, "shall a convention be called pursuant to Act 2 of 1972," I don't have any doubt that it would have passed. Unlike what Mr. Bollinger said when he said that last year the people knew nothing about the convention, unlike that situation, we would have had a situation then where the people would have fully discussed it, would have understood the impact of what a convention could do, and why we need it. They would have either at that election or at a subsequent election elected the delegates to that convention. I think at this stage in our deliberations we would have more public support and public interest and that our work would have a much higher chance of passing than it has now. The way Mr. Casey's amendment is worded you could have on the last day for filing bills in the session of the legislature you could have a bill introduced, it would be simply a law, require two-thirds vote. It could be passed right away without any public discussion of it and then you'd have again perhaps a year long series of deliberations by a constitutional convention spending millions of dollars for something that the people really may not particularly be enthused about or want. As far as the time delays are concerned, let me give you an example, even if you had three elections-- and Mr. Avant's amendment allows you to do it with two elections-- one amendment . . . or one election would be that when the proposition would be on the ballot and you could also elect delegates at that time, second one would be the vote on the final document, or his amendment also allows you to have three votes. First, on the proposition to call a convention, second, the election for delegates, and third, on the new constitution. Let's suppose that the legislature chose the three elections; take the general election in February, 1976, that's the general election for governor, that proposition could be on the ballot. In the general election of November, 1976, the presidential election, the election of delegates could be held. Two years later, the vote on the constitution could take place at the general election of November, '78. That's without any special elections being called and special elections could be called under this. So, under a system like that it could be just a little more than two years. I think we tend to think that a constitutional convention and the whole process needs to act very rapidly and probably in our own case it does because we've waited so long to improve the situation. But, constitutional reform should be a very deliberate, well thought-out process, should not be an overnight thing or even a thing accomplished in one year. I think one of the reasons that we're able to do what we're doing in one year is because we had a Constitutional Revision Commission working for a couple of years before we ever started. I think much of the information we've worked on has been based on that prior research and the information and knowledge gained by the people who participated there. But, I think, it's certainly preferable to have the people vote on whether a convention is going to be called before you begin a year or two year long undertaking of revising the constitution because that way the new document come up with by the constitution is going to have a much better chance of passage. So, I urge you to vote against these amendments.

Questions

MR. DUVAL

Woody, don't you think . . . although I understand your purpose and Mr. Avant's purpose is to give the people's voice. Don't you think though that it really won't help the people because you're going to have a great big fight by the vested interests not to have a constitutional convention and the people will never get to look at new proposed constitution in the first place. Don't you think that's possible?

111th Days Proceedings—January 7, 1974

MR. JENKINS

Well, you're always going to have established interest trying to fight a constitution whether it's a call for a convention or whether it's the finished document. But, I really think that if the people of the state want us to have a constitutional convention, that they'll vote to do it, particularly when they know the terms of it. That's the important thing. If the people don't want a constitutional convention to meet, why in the world should you have one?

MR. DUVAL

They have elected representatives to make that type of decision, and they would have the alternate decision whether the finished document they want or not.

MR. JENKINS

Well, it's like Mr. Bollinger said, he was saying the legislature can do many things by a two-thirds vote, tax people out of existence. False. The legislature can't by a two-thirds vote tax people out of existence because of the limitations in this constitution. He said, also by a two-thirds vote the legislature can take away our basic rights. False, because the constitution we have has prohibited that. That's what the constitution is for and it's the most important document.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. CASEY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I think we have a very important decision to make right now. A very important question to decide, and that is, the future calling of a constitutional question when it is deemed necessary because a change in law is actually necessary. Now, if we're going to as delegates, and if we're going to . . . those of us who are legislators-- as legislators leave everything for a decision of the people, we're not going to accomplish anything. You don't run government that way as far as I'm concerned. I'm a strong believer in representative government; that's why people get elected. That's why they're screened by the electorate; that's why they make speeches when they run for office. That's why they appear before groups. That's why their qualifications are carefully perused, carefully looked at before they're actually elected to office. That's the purpose of representative government. If we're going to submit everything to the people for a decision, you may as well close your legislature down. To me, that's the crux of the problem here, how far do we have to go-- how far do we have to go in letting people vote on everything. Now, this is ridiculous as far as I'm concerned to require a vote of the people to determine whether you're going to have a constitutional amendment. To enunciate in that call the scope of the call and obviously it's a constitutional convention, to enunciate where it's going to be held, to enunciate many of the other details--that to me and that's my opinion, my humble opinion -- it's absolutely unnecessary. I think it was well done in this particular case in Act 2 of 1972, everybody knew about it, there was no secret about it and let's face it, the real issue was also submitted to the people in the form of the election of one hundred and five delegates. Everybody knew about it, everybody went to the polls, they knew it was coming. There was no secret about it because one hundred and five people and many others in addition to those one hundred five campaigned; they went to the people. The people knew that a convention was coming and they voted for their delegates. They knew what was going on and let's face it, in ten years from now when the legislature, if you give them that opportunity, if the legislature decides that we need a convention, the people are going to know about it. It's going to be no secret, nobody is going to go behind closed doors. There'll be no devious means of calling a convention because the end result is, and you know that --as Mr. Willis always says, "we the people" -- we the people are going to decide on the end product anyway, and why waste a lot of valuable time and state money to hold a convention when all that's necessary is for the legislature to call a convention, and if they wish to do it in the manner that we were called into session, that's all that's necessary, but let the legislature decide it. Mr. Jenkins indicates that we suffer from a lack of public interest, that's our main problem, and implies that because we didn't have an election for the convention itself that that's our problem. We suffer, ladies and gentlemen, not from a lack of interest or public interest because the people knew about it. I don't condone that lack of interest; I think it's absolutely pathetic, and I've always said that, for lack of interest that people generally have in our government. But, I think the decision we have to make now, and I think the thing we suffer from now is a lack of confidence in the legislature. That's what you're voting on right now. So, please whatever you do, allow the flexibility in the future that's necessary to convene a constitutional convention. If a few years from now it becomes necessary, if we've made a lot of mistakes or if revision is necessary, if we have a lot of changes to make, allow the legislature to call another constitutional convention and don't saddle them with something like we have in the proposal as it exists right now. I can't urge you strong enough to adopt this amendment, and permit two-thirds of the elected membership of each house to determine whether you're going to hold a convention, and to determine the method of holding that convention. I urge adoption of this amendment.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted: 57-41. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Personal Privilege

MR. OURSO

Regardless of how this convention comes out or how it goes, is there any way that we can fix it where Delegate Willis and Bollinger can not run for election again if it's ten years from now or so because of them coming through my parish? I'm so tired of pulling them out of canals and fixing tickets for them. I was just wondering if we could do something about it.

MR. HENRY

Sheriff Ourso, from what I understand the voters in both their districts are suffering from illness and fatigue. They're sick and tired of both of them so I don't think you have any thing to worry about.

[Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 88-6. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Personal Privilege

MR. LEBLEU

Mr. Chairman and fellow members, I don't know how many of you received this letter in the mail that was just placed on my desk a short time ago. The envelope is marked LSU-NO, but it was postmarked Baton Rouge. Did any of you receive this thing in the mail today? Let me read it to you. Items of this sort have been circulated in the legislature in the past, but I don't know what the attempt of this letter is. But, let me read it to you and then you can just judge for yourself. They didn't spell my name right. It's a mimeographed form and my name is handwritten and it's signed by A.C. Charles.

"Mr. LeBleu, I want to take this opportunity to thank you for the help you have given us. As you know, if we succeed in getting the LSU Board of Supervisors abolished and then gain control of the Superboard, we will be able to change our name from LSU-NO to the University of Louisiana. In effect we will have moved the state university from Baton Rouge to New Orleans. This will allow Louisians to have a true state university which is urban oriented. After all we in New Orleans have one-third of the state's population, and we are entitled to be the University of Louisiana. We can turn LSU-Baton Rouge into just another little cow college. I don't know how things are going to turn out, but I did want to express appreciation for your support."

In every vote that was taken in the convention, I've supported Mr. Leithman's concept of a one board for education, but I hesitate to think of why they singled me and Mr. Bollinger out, rather than the other folks who supported Mr. Leithman's concept. But, when you consider the character of people who send missives like this in the mail, I just wonder whether the money that we appropriate for as to LSU-NO or LSU-Baton Rouge--I question whether it's well spent.

Personal Privilege

MR. J. JACKSON

Mr. Chairman, particularly Mr. LeBleu and Mr. Bollinger, I think that the letters that you received--I'm not in any position up here to say that I'm defending LSU-NO--but I would seriously... I think somebody was playing a joke, Mr. Bollinger and Mr. LeBleu. I would ask the delegates, no matter what your position on Education Article, that I cannot conceive of the people who I've met representing LSU-NO would very well send a letter out like that. I think that's somebody else other than representatives of the LSU-

NO people as indicated by the postmark that you said yourself. I just would like you to keep that in mind.

[Motion to waive reading of Section 3 adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman and delegates, the purpose of this section is to give the people of the state a way to alter their basic law and a way to control their destiny if the legislature is not responsive to their needs. I'll give you one example of why that is so important. As late as 1960, the parish of East Baton Rouge had only two representatives sitting in this hall. We had a situation where we had a population imbalance with regard to voting in the legislature. Until the one man-one vote decision of the Supreme Court which caused reapportionment, we had malapportionment of legislatures and heavily populated areas did not have their proportionate strength in the legislature. There needs to be some way whereby from time to time the people can control their destiny even though the legislature does not agree with that idea. So the purpose of this section is to provide that periodically the question would appear on the ballot as to whether or not a constitutional convention will be held. Earlier in the discussion of this article, some delegates raised objections to the particular dates and time limits in this section. They said first that they thought that 1986 was too soon to have on the ballot the question of whether or not to hold a convention. Second, they felt that every tenth year was too often to have the proposition on the ballot, and so in a few moments on behalf of the committee I want to offer an amendment to change those dates so that the first date would be 1994, that in the year 1994, twenty years from this year, the question would appear on the ballot as to whether or not the people wanted to hold a constitutional convention. Then every twenty years thereafter, the same proposition would appear. That would give to each generation an opportunity to decide whether or not they were satisfied with the constitution they had or whether they wanted to hold a convention to offer another one. Naturally, if the legislature were to hold a convention under Section 2 between now and 1994, then that new convention would probably change those dates and alter the time limits and things like that. So, this Section 3 would not come into play then. If I may, I'd like to offer that amendment, Mr. Chairman.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The amendment was passed out with Mrs. Zervigon's name on it. She does not wish to go with it, but Delegate Perez and Reverend Stovall do. So, it will be the Pe...Willis and Stovall...

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, delete lines 29 through 32 both inclusive in their entirety, and on page 3 delete lines 1 through 10 both inclusive in their entirety.

Point of Information

MR. GOLDMAN

The only amendment to delete that I have on my desk is one by Avant. I don't have any by any of these other folks.

MR. HENRY

A deletion is a deletion is a deletion, so it doesn't make a whole lot of difference.

Proceed, Mrs. Zervigon.

MR. DUVAL

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

MR. HENRY

Well, what a deep voice you have.

MR. DUVAL

This is quite an honor.

MR. HENRY

Wait just a moment.

Point of Information

MR. WILLIS

Mr. Chairman, I heard my name mentioned, I think, on one of these amendments. I'm not on any amendment. I heard the Clerk name Willis. I'm the only one Willis here.

MR. HENRY

Well, Mr. Willis, you know we're just trying to help the amendment along a little bit and give it a little color, I guess. I don't know; I haven't seen the amendment. Rest easy.

MR. POYNTER

It's going to be Mr. Duval instead of you.

Explanation

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this amendment deletes this provision, Section 3, for the following reasons: the legislature under Section 2 could, of course, do this if it so wished. But, I think Section 3 is totally arbitrary. It takes away the analytical process completely. It uses 1986. We in this convention are now determining it every ten years whether the people want it or not. They're going to have to vote on whether there's going to be a constitutional convention. You may have five percent of the electorate who vote and vote to have one when nobody really wants one, or vice versa. I think it's an arbitrary provision to have every ten years. I think your legislators who have the feel of the pulse of the public are responsive enough to do this when the time comes, but this doesn't give the people any initiative because they can't initiate it on its own when it's necessary. It's just every ten years. It may be a very untimely political atmosphere and very few people might vote for or against it. I think it's totally unnecessary, and certainly should be deleted as it's arbitrary and has absolutely no analytical merit at all.

Questions

MR. ANZALONE

Ma'am, a portion of what is contained in this amendment has already been taken care of by the Avant amendment; isn't that right Ma'am?

MR. DUVAL

The Avant amendment has not been introduced, but that's correct.

MR. JENKINS

Stan, you said that the legislature will do this if the people want it; is that correct?

MR. DUVAL

I said they can do this if the people want it, and I think that they probably would.

MR. JENKINS

What if for some reason the legislature is no longer representative of the people? For example: from the years 1921 until just a couple of years ago the legislature of Louisiana did not meet its constitutional obligation of reapportionment and there was a tremendous malapportionment whereby a very populous parish like East Baton Rouge had only one out of thirty-nine Senators and two out of a hundred and five Representatives. Now, isn't it proper that because things like that do occur and can occur and probably, for some reason or another, will occur in the future that we have some safeguard and check to make sure that the people do have basic control of their government?

MR. DUVAL

Woody, I understand your question, but I don't regard this proposed constitution as a cure-all for all of our problems. We can't solve every instance that's occurred in the history of Louisiana. Taking the proposal on its own merit, it seems arbitrary and it can have consequences and ramifications that I do not think make it a worthwhile constitutional provision.

MR. JENKINS

Well, isn't it true that any time you talk about constitutional revision virtually all of the things that we put in here are arbitrary--the two-thirds vote, for example? There's many, many arbitrary things we put in here simply because, while they are arbitrary, they are also safeguards for the people of the state; isn't that true?

MR. DUVAL

It's a matter of opinion. In my opinion it shouldn't be in here; in your opinion it should. My reasons are that it comes up every ten years without the pulse of the people being taken and some...it could be passed. We could have a constitutional convention when only a very small percentage of the people vote on it. I don't think it's a good idea.

111th Days Proceedings—January 7, 1974

MR. JENKINS

Also, isn't it true that under the present provision one-third of the legislature can stop a constitutional convention for years and years and years? For example, just fourteen members of the Senate, if a special interest group could control them or have influence with them under both Sections 1 and 2, that a constitutional convention and constitutional amendments could be stopped for many, many years.

MR. DUVAL

That's very true. I think you were for the two-thirds concept as I recall.

MR. JENKINS

Yes, I was for it, but I was also for it--do you know--because we also had Section 3, whereby periodically the people can have a constitutional convention?

MR. DUVAL

I'm aware that one-third of the legislature could; yes.

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Duval, as you notice, I sat here, and when the roll was called, I abstained from voting because I felt that this was going to happen. I noticed that in talking, Mr. Casey mentioned that the legislature, this was a convention to be called by the legislature in leaving flexibility and then they mentioned "convention called by the people" and it was said that at this time, people would have a chance to speak or have a part in it. Of course, I got a little bit confused. Now, where does the people stand?

MR. DUVAL

Well, the people stand this way: 1. They elect the representatives, two-thirds of which have to call the convention. 2. They vote on the document, whether they want it or not. This is when the people can see the facts, when the document is actually completed, and the people can look at it. Then their voice really means something when they can vote yes, or nay for the new proposed document. That's a plenty big voice.

Further Discussion

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I think the idea of automatically submitting to the people every ten years the question of whether or not a new constitution is needed is a good one, whether it's ten years or twenty years is not as important as the concept that the people are asked to consider what's in their constitution and whether or not it needs revision every so often is a concept within the constitutions of other states, and I think it's a good one. I had originally drawn an amendment to delete this section only because I had combined the two concepts, two and three, in one amendment as an amendment to Section 2, which I withdrew in favor of Mr. Avant's amendment. I think we ought to think long and hard before deleting this because we don't like some of the details. For example, I don't like the specificity of a hundred and five elected and twenty-seven appointed. I think that's rather silly. I believe that we could rephrase that so that the question on the ballot would say what the makeup of the convention would be, and the time and place, and what would be in the call and that sort of thing. We could phrase it as a mandate to the legislature. But, I think one of the problems we've had in Louisiana is that people don't think about the constitution as much as they should, what ought to be in it, what it ought to do, what it can't do, and that sort of thing. Just to put the question before the people every so often, I believe, is a good idea. It's no trouble; it's no expense; it's just a good mechanism for allowing the people to exercise their citizenship, and should one-third plus one of the senators, for example, form a block against constitutional revision and determine when constitutional revision is badly needed, the people would have a right to express their desires in this, and we could call a convention. So, I urge you, let's clean up this section, but let's not delete it.

Question

MR. BERGERON

Mary, during our deliberations in the Constitutional Convention, we've done a lot of remodeling, I guess you might say; for instance, we've deleted the comptroller as an elected official and who might be appointed. We're also affecting other officers which may be elected or appointed after a certain date. If we do not have a provision such as this in the constitution, and as you stated, it's no real trouble to put it on the ballot every ten years, do you feel that in the next twenty or thirty years even if the people want a constitutional convention, that, maybe the legislators would be hesitant to call a constitutional convention, and feel that it may hurt some of the people who are affected, or who have their offices spelled out in the constitution? Don't you feel that there'd be pressure from both sides, trying to stop the calling of the constitutional convention?

[3172]

MRS. ZERVIGON

Well, I think you make a point. In addition to that, I don't think the legislators within the next twenty years would feel really easy about saying, "Well, we're going to spend another four million dollars and revise it again." But, if they knew the people wanted it, they wouldn't feel badly about doing it. So, this just puts it automatically to the people, lets the people express their will. If the people say no, that's fine. You wait another twenty years before you ask them again.

Further Discussion

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, delegates, you will recall that it took fifty-two years from the time of the last constitutional convention and the time this Constitutional Convention was begun--fifty-two years. Throughout that fifty-two years, Louisiana needed a better constitution, but no convention was held. When it appeared on the ballot, the people voted it down because they thought the governor in 1956 was going to attempt to control the new convention, and write the new constitution to his liking. That certainly would be a defect and sometimes as we would have done under Section 2, having the people always vote on the call because when a governor initiated it, certainly, the argument could be made that he was trying to take control. But, when the proposition is automatically on the ballot, that argument cannot be there because it would have been set long before by the drafters of this constitution. The committee, if this amendment does not pass, will offer an amendment to change the date from 1986 to 1994, so that twenty years from now when a new generation of Louisianians populate this state, there will be a vote on whether to call a convention, regardless of whether the legislature has acted, regardless of whether the high hopes of an independent and responsible legislature have come true, the next generation will have a chance in 1994 and every twenty years thereafter, not ten. Now, I don't understand why that troubles people, that twenty years from now the proposition would be on the ballot. Who can that harm? What damage can that do? I want to know that regardless of whether we have fine people populating the legislature and in the governor's mansion, that the citizens of this state can ultimately control their own destiny. That's why twenty years from now the people ought to have a chance to do just that so that it won't be another fifty-two years that we live under this document, if this is not a good document, that if the people see that it's time to have a new one, that they can call one. You know, you may have a majority of the people wanting something, and yet, two-thirds of the legislature won't vote for it. Two-thirds and a majority are different. I think the two-thirds requirement in Section 2 is good. I was for it. But, ultimately, if a majority wants to change, it ought to be able to do it at some point in history. Let's give them a chance in 1994, twenty years from now to review our work and what's happened to this constitution, even if the legislature hasn't acted. That's not much to ask. It won't be onerous on anyone; it won't be a burden; it won't cost anyone anything because it will be on the ballot at the time that people vote for congressmen. What's wrong with that? I think it's reasonable, and I urge you to reject this amendment.

Questions

MR. BURNS

Mr. Jenkins, do you think I should refrain from voting on this amendment on the grounds that I have no personal interest in 1994?

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Burns, I think you'll be going as strong then as you are now.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Jenkins, what's the rationale of having the first election twenty years from now and then one every ten years?

MR. JENKINS

No, no. the amendment that I have--and it's on your desk if you look at it--there are two amendments; one to say, "starting in 1994" and the second one to say, "every twenty years thereafter." So, it'd be twenty years from now, and every twenty years thereafter, the idea being that that is about a generation, and I think the ten-year period is too often, and that's why the committee has agreed to take down the ten-year period and go with twenty.

Further Discussion

MR. STOVALL

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise in support of the amendment to delete this section. Mr. Jenkins seems to assume that if we had had the Constitutional Convention ten, fifteen, twenty-five years ago here in Louisiana, that all of our problems and ills would have been solved. I think this is too simple a conclusion. I think what we need is a responsible citizenry who will elect the right kind of officials to give to us competent leadership. If we build this kind of provision into the constitution, it might be that the citizenry of our state and the legislature would use this as a scapegoat to giving serious consideration to the problems and needs of our state. But, I think of greater significance is the fact that our elected representatives are responsive to the needs of the people. It's true that they sometimes are slow in expressing this responsibility, but I think that we can trust the future legislatures to be responsive to the needs of our people. A constitution should protect the people against the abuse of power, and certainly in this constitution we are protected against the arbitrary misuse of power. But, at the same time, there comes a point where we must trust the democratic procedure. To eliminate this section is an element of trust in our future. We need not feel that we can sit here today and control the future. We cannot. I think we need to protect against arbitrary misuse of power and then we need to trust our legislature to take care of this in the future. As a very practical matter, may I suggest to you that if you'll look right here for just a moment what I have here in my hand are some eight or ten amendments to this section. Now, if this section were of great import, I would say we should take the time to work through these amendments. But, because it is not of that kind of importance and significance, it seems to me that we should delete this section and proceed with other work. Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. STAGG

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I would like only in less than one minute to urge you to defeat the deletion amendment and to keep Section 3 except for that part of it that begins in line 6 on page 3. There is one of the pending amendments by Mrs. Zervigon that eliminates the specificity of the constituting of a convention, and I think that ought to be left as unsaid in this new constitution. I don't want to pick a quarrel with anybody here who was appointed or anybody here who's elected. But, I think that a convention that might occur that far distant in the future ought not to be specified that there'll be so many delegates of this kind or that kind. I would rise to urge your defeat of the pending amendment, and your support of Mrs. Zervigon's amendment to delete only the last five lines of Section 3.

Further Discussion

MR. ASSEFF

Mr. Chairman, delegates, I've become more discouraged by the hour. I'm not at all sure that anything will do any good. We seem to forget that this is the fundamental law. We should make provision for calling conventions and for consulting the people. This is one thing we should include in our basic law. It is their government and it is their constitution. It's extremely difficult for me to understand how anyone can vote to delete the entire thing and leave it to the legislature. If that's going to be so, then let's strike the whole thing. If we delete this section, I suggest we delete two-thirds of the proposed constitution because there's no need for it. I urge you to reject the amendment.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, just a few points. Some of the opponents to this amendment have said we should keep this section except for my amendment or except for this amendment or that amendment. I'm wondering if we take all those amendments, what are we going to have left? I think this is one of the problems with it. Everybody's for it as they want their amendments to occur. I think you ought to...I understand Dr. Asseff's point and Mr. Stagg. They want to look at it and see what it really does. Arbitrarily, ten years from now--this is what this section does--there's going to be an automatic call for a convention without any thought, without any deliberative process at all. I just think it's a poor way to run government. It's a taking it out of the analytical process completely. I think we ought to delete it. We've gone two hundred years without it, and we've now improved the constitution because we've provided for the legislature a means to call the constitution, which I think will be quite easy and a lot easier than some of these people wanted to have it done. It'll be a lot easier now to have a constitutional convention than some of the proponents of another amendment which would have acquired a two-thirds vote and then a vote of the people and the people would have had to vote after a great deal of fight before you even had a document. The people have the ultimate say-so when they vote on the document itself. I think that you will find that the legislature is going to be more responsive and if there is a need for a constitutional convention, I think you'll have it. I would think to arbitrarily require every ten years to vote on something whether it's needed or not can cause dire consequences.

Questions

MR. J. JACKSON

Mr. Duval, don't you believe if we delete, as you propose, then all the options twenty years from now and twenty years henceforth, that there really won't be number one option, and that option must be initiated within these legislative chambers? I have no problems with the legislature as regards to this, but what we're in effect saying and what I read the committee proposal saying is that we're providing two options, one option for the legislature to initiate it and one option for the people.

MR. DUVAL

The people don't initiate it, Mr. Jackson, that's the point. You do not have a provision in here for an initiative done by the people. It's an arbitrary thing that may come along at a time when very few people are interested in constitutional revision and two percent of the people could vote to have a constitutional convention, would be a total waste of time and money. If you want a viable provision then you could have an initiative provision by the people, but this is not an initiative at all. It's an arbitrary thing every ten years. It has nothing to do with the will of the people, in my opinion.

MR. J. JACKSON

But, that rationale about two percent, that rationale applies to one election of the representatives, election of the senators, every constitutional amendment or law that the people must vote on, so that the theory of a minority of people voting for something can apply to whatever we submit to the voters, right?

MR. DUVAL

I'm merely saying that it could be particularly applicable here in the event you had absolutely no interest by anyone in a constitutional convention, one way or the other, who, people were not informed on it one way or the other, yet it arbitrarily appeared on the ballot.

MR. BOLLINGER

Mr. "Wood", if your amendment would pass and Section 3 was deleted, would there be anything in the proposed constitution prohibiting the legislature from allowing the people to decide if they wanted a convention or not before it was called?

MR. DUVAL

No, sir. Under the Casey amendment we have enough flexibility to accomplish this without tying this into every ten years.

MR. STOVALL

Mr. Duval, is there a provision in the United State Constitution whereby the people of the nation are asked every ten years if they want to have a constitutional convention?

111th Days Proceedings—January 7, 1974

MR. DUVAL
No, sir.

MR. STOVALL
The constitution has served us pretty well in spite of that; hasn't it?

MR. DUVAL
I think so, yes, sir.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted:
54-43. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER
Mr. Jenkins offers it.
Amendment No. 1. On page 2, delete lines 30 through 32, both inclusive, and on page 3, delete lines 1 through 10, both inclusive, in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: --We need to add something back in here because a whole section has been taken out. We need to add--
Section 3. Convention Called by People (Then pick up.)
Section 3. At the election for representatives to Congress to be held in the year one thousand nine hundred ninety-four and every twentieth year thereafter, the question "Shall there be a convention to revise the Constitution of the State of Louisiana?" shall be submitted to the electors of the state. If a majority of the electors who vote on the question favor it, the legislature shall at its next session provide for calling a convention. The call of the convention shall specify the duration, time, and place it is to be held. The convention shall consist of delegates elected from the same districts and having the same qualifications as state representatives. The legislature may also provide for not more than twenty-seven delegates to be appointed by the governor. The proposed constitution and any alternative propositions agreed upon by the convention shall be submitted to the people for their ratification or rejection. If the proposal is approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon, the governor shall proclaim it to be the Constitution of the State of Louisiana.

Explanation

MR. JENKINS
This amendment, I think, takes Section 3 and makes it truly workable, much more workable than the original committee proposal. It provides that, beginning in the year 1994--twenty years from now--we will have this vote that we've been talking about and, twenty years thereafter and every other twenty years, we will also have the question of whether or not to call a convention on the ballot. We've tightened up some of the details that were a little vague in the committee proposal and, I think, spelled it out more clearly. The thing that I think we ought to think about, and the reason I bring it back to you, is because the way we have this constitutional revision article right now, in Section 1 and Section 2, we provided that one-third of the elected representatives in the legislature of this state can, from now on, prevent constitutional change and constitutional revision. Now, let's assume that the legislature of the state is perfectly representative of the people of the state--perfectly representative. Still, if one-third of the people don't want any amendment to pass and one-third of the people don't ever want to see constitutional revision, then it can never come about--never, ever. There needs to be some means, somewhere along the way, that a majority of the people can assert themselves and say that they want constitutional revision. Now, let's suppose that the problem with the legislature were malapportionment and that some areas of the state were being over represented. It would only take a few seats in the Senate to get that fourteen votes to stop constitutional revision. Now, I think a two-thirds vote is a good protection most of the time, and we can go on for years and years without constitutional revision; but, once in every generation, shouldn't we have a chance for the majority of the people to say, regardless of the legislature: We want constitutional reform? This principle is being included in virtually every new constitution submitted to the people in the various states across this nation. I think it's a good principle; it's a sound principle. You know, the worst argument we've had against it? "It's arbitrary." Everything in this article is arbitrary. I haven't heard one argument against it that made any sense. We should not allow one-third of the people to perpetually halt constitutional revision. Why? Because constitutions are the basis of their government. It's the basis of their rights--legal rights, anyway--the basis of the tax law, the basis of the structure of government; and a majority ultimately should rule, not one-third. So, I hope you'll give consideration to this proposal. I think it's in better condition than Section 3 was, as originally submitted. I urge the adoption of it.

Questions

MR. LANIER
Mr. Jenkins, I'm trying to analyze what we've been doing here this afternoon. As I understand it, with the Avant amendment we voted to put the people in the legislative call for a convention. Is that correct?

MR. JENKINS
That's correct.

MR. LANIER
Then, when we came back with the Casey amendment, we took the people out and let the legislature call the convention on the legislatively-called convention. Is that correct?

MR. JENKINS
That's correct.

MR. LANIER
Now, we've come back, and we've taken the people out of the people-called convention. Would you analyze it that way?

MR. JENKINS
Yes, sir, I would.

MR. LANIER
And, your amendment would allow the people to have a right to say-so in calling a convention.

MR. JENKINS
That's right. I think a lot of people, too, voted to delete Section 3, a while ago, because of the ten-year provision. In fact, several people told me that if I would offer this twenty-year thing they would go with it because they thought that was more reasonable. So, maybe there's some people who voted to delete it a while ago that could take this as a more reasonable approach.

MR. STAGG
I didn't vote to delete, but I sure do wish you'd ask leave of the convention to withdraw your amendment and to delete from your amendment part of line 13, 14, and 15, where you give the maximum of twenty-seven appointed delegates to any future governor, and then I would most happily vote for your amendment. Otherwise, I shall vote against it. Would you agree to do that?

MR. JENKINS
Well, let me offer you an alternative proposition, Mr. Stagg. If you will go ahead and help us with this, I'll certainly be for deleting it. The reason that I'm including it in this amendment is because that was the way the committee proposal was, and I'm trying to limit the substantive change in this amendment--between this and the committee proposal--to the twenty-year period. In the committee, I tried to delete all appointed delegates because I think when you talk about an automatically called convention, called by the people, it ought to be by elected representatives. I will certainly support you in that effort, but in order to keep this a little bit pure and straightforward question, I'd like to ask that I be allowed to keep it in for the purpose of this vote.

MR. WILLIS
Woody, don't you think that the passage you seek to insert in our document would be an indictment of our document and, predicting that we cannot predict or foresee beyond twenty years, that it is not flexible enough to endure more than that?

MR. JENKINS
Well, what you say, basically, is true. I wouldn't say it that way. It's not an indictment; it is an admission that we are not perfect. We all know that; we know we've made mistakes; we know there will be future constitutions in this state. We've had what--thirteen before? Certainly, we're not smart enough and we're not bright enough to write a constitution for all time. I wish we were, but all of us have made mistakes. I think we've done a good job and it'll last a long time. But, I think the next generation ought to have the right--a majority of the people--ought to have the right to have a new constitution if they want it. A majority--even if one-third of the people don't want them to.

111th Days Proceedings—January 7, 1974

MR. WILLIS

You'd measure a generation by twenty years?

MR. JENKINS

Well, I think fifteen or twenty years would be a generation.

MR. WILLIS

Well, let us go to more lofty realm. You know that, in Section 4 of Article IV of the main body of the federal constitution, that we are guaranteed a republican form of government and that part and parcel of that government is elected representatives who are the guardian angels of our government. Don't you think that we will detract from the flexibility of that body, in which you belong, to be circumspectful about whether or not we should have a new document and use the vehicle provided for them with very good precision, notably the Casey amendment, to achieve this--instead of proposing it on a ballot ever so often, which is another way of proposing an amendment, which the people don't like?

MR. JENKINS

No, sir, I don't think that we would detract from the legislature. The purpose of this document--its only purpose for being in existence is to set a limitation on the lawmaking authority of the state. That's why we have a constitution. The legislature is not all-powerful; it's not omnipotent. The reason we have a constitution is to limit it, and we know that it's not perfect if it's made up of human beings; and any group made up of human beings make mistakes. All the authority in this constitution virtually, though, is granted to the legislature. This is just saying that, once another generation--if the legislature has not been responsive--a majority of the people ought to have the opportunity to change their constitution. And, you'll have to admit that one-third of the people--even if the legislature were infinitely responsible--one-third of the people could prevent constitutional revision, under Sections 1 and 2.

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

MR. NUNEZ

Representative Jenkins, evidently the only difference between your amendment and your new Section 3 and the committee Section 3 is that you say it shall be submitted to the people in ninety-four, rather than eighty-six, and shall be submitted every twentieth year thereafter, rather than every tenth year.

MR. JENKINS

Well, in addition to that, there are some technical, I think, improvements: one specifying what the call of the convention has to say and, also, making it clear that the proposed constitution and alternates have to be submitted to the people for their ratification.

MR. NUNEZ

But, principally, the difference is you've made a time change, and the principle is still the same.

MR. JENKINS

That's right.

MR. NUNEZ

And, also, you keep inferring that one-third of the legislators can stop any constitutional revision or change. Well, in that line of thinking, one-third of the legislators, under the present proposition that we have adopted as to constitutional amendments, one-third can also stop any of those, couldn't they?

MR. JENKINS

Well, yes, and I don't object to that. I think that's good. But, I think there needs to be some exception somewhere along the way. Remember this: This constitutional convention could have been called by a majority vote of the legislature. Everything that passes here is by a majority vote, and then it's going to pass before the people if it gets a majority vote. But, now, we're setting a new principle because of Section 2. We've said there that constitutional conventions can only be called by a two-thirds vote, and I think that was good. But, it's good only because we had Section 3 in there--that a majority of the people ultimately can determine, at some point in history, whether or not they want a new constitution.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Mr. Jenkins, would you agree that, probably, many of us--including myself--may have voted for the previous section authorizing greater power to the legislature, simply because, as some people said, the next section allows a vote of the people?

MR. JENKINS

I certainly think that's true, Mr. Champagne.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

And, do you agree that the proponent of the last motion to delete it emphasized, repeatedly, ten years--ten years--so that maybe the ten years did stick in some people's mind?

MR. JENKINS

That's correct, and then he voted to delete it, Mr. Champagne.

MR. ABRAHAM

Woody, in answer to the question posed by Mr. Stagg, while ago, do you know that I have an amendment coming to your amendment which will delete the provisions for the appointed delegates?

MR. JENKINS

I would support that, Mr. Abraham. I don't know whether it would pass or not.

MR. ARNETTE

Woody, my only problem with this entire section is that I think it would prevent constitutional revision, rather than encourage it, for the simple reason: say, thirty-five years from now we really need a constitutional revision, and the legislature is going to say, "Well, look, the people are going to have to vote on it in five more years, so we'll wait and see what they have to say." Then, nobody's going to vote for a constitutional convention if the people turn it down for the next five or ten years for sure, so you've got fifteen years, probably, there that the legislature isn't going to act because they know the people didn't want it.

MR. JENKINS

Well, basically, I don't think there's going to be an urgent need in, say, a five-year period, for example, for a new constitution. The need comes when you go for decades without constitutional reform like we've done in this state. I think, if we'd had a vote after twenty years--say, in 1941 and then in 1961 and then in 1981--I think somewhere along the way the people would have voted for that, and we would have had a constitutional convention before now. Now, maybe, as Mr. Stovall said, that wouldn't have solved the problems, but I don't think it would have made anything any worse than the 1921 Constitution is now.

MR. ARNETTE

You don't think that, say, if the people vote against constitutional revision in 1994, that the legislature--say it's needed in another ten years--they'll say, "Well, you know, they voted against it last time; then, maybe another vote's coming up in five years; let's let them decide." And, then, they'd vote no again. Well, the legislature would be crazy to go against the wishes of the people, even though it's sorely needed.

MR. JENKINS

Well, no, I think there'll be a certain time lag, sure. I think maybe for five years, or something like that, the legislature wouldn't. But, remember this: In 1956 the people voted against it, yet we're meeting in constitutional convention now. I think, frankly, if, say, Governor McKeithen had wanted to call a constitutional convention and had pushed that, I think the legislature would have gone along with him. That's just the nature of things.

Further Discussion

MR. SMITH

Mr. Chairman, I think we're debating the same thing we defeated a while ago, and I think people know how they're going to vote. Unless there's any more on the list, I move the previous question--if they will waive. If they won't, I... but I'd like to see us go ahead and vote. We're just wasting a lot of time, I think.

Further Discussion

MR. SUTHERLAND

Mr. Acting Chairman, fellow delegates, I think that this is a very important issue to come before this convention. We have allowed the legislature, by the previous section, to determine whether constitutional revision was necessary or not. Mr. Arnette raised a question to Mr. Jenkins whether or not the legislature would have an opportunity here to pass the buck to the people. I am really confused in this convention because, on the one hand, we talk about responsible legislation; we talk about trusting the legislature; we talk about having a responsible legislature; and then we turn around, in the next breath, and say, "Well, now, this legislature is really not going to act the way they're supposed to act; and, if this constitutional revision is necessary, they're not going to pass it because, maybe, five years or ten years from now," the people will have an opportunity to say whether they want it. I think if we're going to talk about having a responsible legislature, we ought to act as though they're going to be responsible and that they're going to do their job. But, in the event, in the event they do not do their job, then it seems to me the people ought to have an opportunity to do the job for them. I just believe—I honestly believe—that this is a constitution for the people. I know that people have asked me, "Will we have an opportunity—initiative, referendum, or some other type of thing—to say when we will have an opportunity to do the job?" If the legislature does the job that they're supposed to do, then there's no need to worry about this provision because it won't be necessary to have a convention call. It's only in the event that they do not do the job. For that reason, I would urge your support of this amendment.

Questions

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Sutherland, you and several of the speakers have made the comment that Section 2 gives additional authority to the legislature. In my opinion, Section 2 takes away the authority that the legislature had. We're in this convention today because the legislature passed an act, by a simple majority, calling the convention. If, in fact, we have to do another one—or call another one—you can't do it by a simple majority, according to Section 2. It's going to take a two-thirds vote. So, I submit to you, you're taking away some of the authority of the legislature, not giving them additional authority.

MR. SUTHERLAND

Well, Mr. Nunez, if that was a question, I answer it this way: that if we've taken away the authority of the legislature by the two-thirds vote which this convention has passed, then it seems to me there's all the more reason to worry about whether the people are going to have an opportunity to call it.

MR. BERGERON

Matt...Matthew, this amendment that Mr. Jenkins is proposing does not say that there will be a constitutional convention every twenty years. Maybe, in twenty years from now, there won't be—maybe in forty years—but, if a constitutional convention is needed, this just provides that the people will have a say, a voice in the government. Am I correct?

MR. SUTHERLAND

That's exactly right. This does not provide for an automatic call of a convention; it merely says that the people will have an opportunity to say whether they want a convention or not.

MR. DUVAL

Matt, under this provision, isn't it so—I'm wondering exactly what we're giving the people here—isn't it so the legislature prepares the call and can make it for any duration and for the time and the place? Isn't that right?

MR. SUTHERLAND

That's correct. Again, this is that responsible legislature you're talking about.

MR. DUVAL

Well, I'm saying if it's responsible, you don't need this provision anyhow. If it's not responsible, they're not getting anything anyhow.

MR. SUTHERLAND

Well, I don't agree with you, Stan. I think they are getting something—very definitely.

MR. DUVAL

I understand that. That's all the questions I have.

Further Discussion

MR. GOLDMAN

My dear friends and fellow delegates, I've wasted very little time up here, since I've been here in August, and I'm going to waste very little right now. All this rhetoric I've been hearing is just that—rhetoric. Now, what this amendment does is give the citizens—the voters of the State of Louisiana—every twenty years a chance to express themselves. That's all, and simply all, it does. Is that too much to ask of them? You know I'm in favor of this amendment.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. JENKINS

Just one final point I want to make: The issue here is not whether we're going to have a responsible legislature or not. The issue is whether or not a majority of the people will be allowed to control their destiny or one-third. We have a system, under Sections 1 and 2, whereby one-third of the legislators, assuming they are completely representative of the people, can forever stop any constitutional reform. We ought to have a system whereby, at some point along the way, a majority of the people can assert themselves if one-third has been blocking constitutional reform for a long period of time. This would happen very seldom; we're talking about five times every one hundred years. It won't cost anybody anything. It's a good outlet to keep our government representative of the people. I urge its adoption.

Questions

MR. SHANNON

Woody, do you recall when the federal constitution was ratified?

MR. JENKINS

Well, yes, sir. They met, I think, in 1787 to 1788, and it was ratified over a period of about three or four years.

MR. SHANNON

How many amendments have we had to the United States Constitution?

MR. JENKINS

Oh, I think twenty-six, twenty-seven, something like that.

MR. SHANNON

How many have we had to the 1921 Constitution?

MR. JENKINS

Well, we've had about five hundred and some-odd.

MR. SHANNON

Well, as vague as the federal constitution is, don't you think that this clearly shows that we need something for the people to voice their opinion on?

MR. JENKINS

I think we do. I think we need an outlet. I don't think it ought to be such a regular thing. That's why I think the ten-year thing was kind of bad, but I think every twenty years is a pretty good, reasonable outlet for them.

MR. SHANNON

But, do you not think that we should have had more than twenty-five amendments to the federal constitution, perhaps?

MR. JENKINS

I think we should have. Of course, it's extremely difficult to amend it with three-fourths of the states necessary for ratification, etc.

MR. SHANNON

So, you don't think we need this—we need the people here to be able to say every twenty years—and that's all they would be doing. Like you said, it will not cost anyone anything for them to voice their opinion of whether or not we need a convention; right?

MR. JENKINS

That's correct, sir.

MR. SHANNON

Thank you.

Point of Information

MR. FLORY

Point of information, Mr. Chairman. Could you tell me how many votes this would take to adopt this amendment?

111th Days Proceedings—January 7, 1974

MR. CASEY

It's an automatic record vote. It's adding a new section. It takes sixty-seven votes, Mr. Flory.

[Amendment rejected: 51-46.]

Motion

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, I move to reconsider the vote on the next legislative day.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Jenkins now moves to reconsider the vote by which that amendment failed to pass on the next convention day.

Now, Mr. Jenkins, I would have to say your motion is not in order because we are not certain whether this proposal will be considered tomorrow. It is possible that the convention will vote on the same today; however, if the proposal is pending tomorrow, it is my understanding that you may resubmit that amendment. Is that correct, Mr....?

MR. POYNTER

Well, under our rules, a motion to reconsider can be initiated on the same or the next convention day--in which case, if the proposal is still open tomorrow, Mr. Jenkins would have an equal right tomorrow to ask that it be reconsidered. Or, if the gentleman wished for some reason, he could insist on a motion to reconsider at the present time.

Point of Order

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Vice-Chairman, if the motion is in order, I'd like to ask for a substitute motion. If it's not in order, I'd like to be recognized for the purpose of making a motion.

MR. CASEY

I've already ruled his motion out of order, and you are in order for a motion, Senator.

Motion

MR. RAYBURN

I'd like to move to reconsider the vote by which the proposal failed to pass, and lay that motion on the table.

[Motion to table reconsideration adopted: 53-42.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Jenkins offers the amendment, Mr. Vice-Chairman. Amendment No. 1. On page 3 between lines 10 and 11, add a new section as follows: "Section 3.1. Limitation on Constitutional Change Section 3.1. This constitution may not be revised, altered, or amended nor may a new constitution be adopted, except in accordance with the provisions of this Article."

Explanation

MR. JENKINS

No, I think in view of the last vote, I'm going to withdraw that amendment.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

The next section is Section 4. "Section 4. Laws Effectuating Amendments Section 4. Whenever the legislature shall submit amendments to this constitution, it may at the same session enact laws to carry them into effect, to become operative when the proposed amendments have been ratified."

Explanation

MR. STINSON

Fellow delegates, this is similar to the present provision of the constitution. If you want to keep the constitution short, you'll have to vote for this. This provides for an enabling act which will allow it in detail to go into the constitution, but the act of the legislature only to be effective if the constitutional amendment is adopted. I don't think there should certainly be any objection to this.

Any questions?

Question

MR. NEWTON

Mr. Stinson, I'm sure your committee considered it. Without this provision in here, couldn't the legislature do that anyway? Is it necessary to have this provision?

MR. STINSON

It's questionable; that's the reason we put it in and the reason it's in the other one because if you don't provide for this, I think there would be a possibility of whether it would be constitutional or not.

[Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 99-0. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous Question ordered on the Proposal. Proposal passed: 74-24. Motion to reconsider.]

Chairman Henry in the Chair

[Motion to advance to Proposals on Third Reading and Final Passage adopted without objection. Motion to call Delegate Proposal No. 18 from its regular order adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Proposal

MR. POYNTER

The proposal is Delegate Proposal No. 18 introduced by Delegates Casey, Alario, Dennery, and Gravel-- you'll find it in your book, it's in kind of a gold color, it's not the reengrossed form, it's sort of a gold looking color and now under delegate proposals.

Delegate Proposal No. 18

A proposal providing for a meeting of the legislature for the next three years following the adoption of this constitution.

Now, Mr. Casey, since it's one section, do you want me to just go ahead and read that one section?

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

Okay.

"Section 1. Legislative Sessions

Section 1. The legislature, during the first two regular annual sessions following the effective date of this constitution, shall provide, by rule or otherwise, for a recess of at least eight calendar days after the first fifteen calendar days of the session."

Explanation

MR. CASEY

As you may recall, right after July 5th, when we first started consideration of a legislative proposal, the big conflict that arose in discussing the length, the number of days of the session was, should the legislature go into session, introduce its bill and then stand in recess for a certain period of time and then go back into session and finally consider the bills and resolutions that were submitted at that particular session of the legislature. As you may recall, Mr. Riecke was the champion of that particular thinking which required that the legislature go into session, go into recess, rather, after the opening of a legislative session and certain legislators at the time that we adopted that particular section on length of legislative sessions, certain legislators-- myself included-- made a moral commitment to this convention that as legislators we would support in the legislature itself, after the adoption of this constitution, at least an attempt for a year or two to just try the concept of a recess. The concept to being that after the introduction of all the bills during the first fifteen days of a session there would be, for instance, a week recess to allow the public generally to examine all of the proposals introduced at that session. So, I'm living up to my moral commitment that at least for a two year period, and I assume it would be for the last regular legislative session of this administration and for the first regular legislative session of the next four year term that the legislature would be required after the first fifteen days, after all bills are introduced, to take an eight day recess. The committees could meet, they could hold hearings, but no decisions could be made. The public generally could look at everything that was introduced and then the legislature would then go back into session. That's the idea of this, we're living up to our moral commitment that I felt that I personally gave to this convention. Now, I have an amendment coming to correct line 5. There's an error on line 5, the word "three" is in there; it should be just two years because this is just a two year attempt. It also adds Mr. Riecke as coauthor and rewords the wording of Section 1 just for better clarity, and that's all that it does. I thought I might explain that it was coming though. I'll yield to any questions, Mr. Chairman.

11th Days Proceedings—January 7, 1974

Questions

MR. CHATELAIN

Mr. Casey, do you know that I was one of those also that asked you. . . it is of record that if you would do this and you agreed that you would, and I think you have a very good amendment.

MR. CASEY

Thank you, Mr. Chatelain.

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Casey, your amendment is not introduced yet, is it? The proposal . . .

MR. CASEY

As far as I know, it's been introduced, but we're not considering my amendment yet.

MS. ZERVIGON

Well, the question I want to ask has to do with the amendment. I was wondering if you would be willing to withdraw it and put in there a word that would make it clear that you mean directly after the first fifteen days this eight day recess would take place. If you say after the first fifteen days, it could do also after the first thirty days or after the first forty days in order to make it clear.

MR. O'NEILL

Tom, I'm in favor of what you're doing and I plan to vote for it. I just want to make sure that these transitional measures are going to have the effect of law; can you comment on that?

MR. CASEY

Well, I would assume that it would be a requirement and is mandatory by virtue of a fact that it's part of a document that the people are voting on, they're telling the legislature, "You have to do this." I don't think there's much choice about it, and I would imagine it's subject to court review if we don't do it.

MR. JENKINS

Tom, I'm concerned about the election date for this new constitution. If the governor were to call the election say in March or early April and the results were promulgated twenty days thereafter the constitution went into effect, unless we had some transitional measure dealing with this legislative session then the Legislative Article would apply to this legislative session.

MR. CASEY

I assume you mean the one coming this year?

MR. JENKINS

The May, 1974.

MR. CASEY

I don't know why, but I thought there was something some place that we would consider stating specifically the effective date of this constitution. I had always thought it was going to be January 1, 1975; now I may be completely off base there.

MR. JENKINS

The act says "twenty days after the governor promulgates the returns of the election," I believe.

MR. HENRY

We're going to look at the act.
Read it, Mr. Clerk.

MR. POYNTER

The Constitution, if ratified, etc., shall become effective at twelve o'clock midnight on the thirtieth day after the date on which the secretary of state promulgates the results of the election.

MR. HENRY

Somebody's tampered with that act; that wasn't the way it used to read.

Let's resolve this, Mr. Pugh, we'll get you, then, Mr. Champagne.

Ask your question again, Mr. Jenkins.

MR. JENKINS

Well, I'm wondering about, you know, whether it's going to apply. . . no, what I'm saying is that the date of the election is going to determine whether or not the Legislative Article is effective for the May session of the legislature unless we, in this schedule, provide when the Legislative Article will be effective. Isn't that correct?

MR. CASEY

Mr. Jenkins, I envision this difficulty first of all, and we can talk around this problem; I'm not sure what the solution is, but the new constitution is going to say that the legislature will go into session either the third or fourth Monday of April. It's no longer the second Monday of May as it is under the present constitution. It is my understanding that it is possible that the election, and I thought it was going to be some time in April, if the election is going to be then and then the returns will be promulgated thirty days after that, it will be too late for the legislature to meet in session on the third or fourth Monday of April of this year. So, that may be one answer to your problem.

MR. JENKINS

But, if the constitution would go into effect during the session of the legislature we'd have a lot of difficulties with regard, say, to the length of the session. Am I not correct in saying that we don't want the Legislative Article with regard to the length of the session to go into effect during the May session of the legislature? Am I correct in that? It wouldn't be reasonable for the Legislative Article to go into effect during the May session?

MR. CASEY

I would say that's correct. I think the true idea is that it's intended to cover the 1975 session and the 1976 session.

MR. JENKINS

Well, then shouldn't we have some language somewhere either in this section or in some other part of the schedule that will so provide, because otherwise we might have . . .

MR. CASEY

I think in view of this development, it probably would be well to clarify that.

MR. PUGH

No, I was just going to point out that once the constitution is adopted by the people it doesn't make any difference what's in Act 2 of 1974.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Yes sir.

Am I correct, Mr. Casey, since this says "scheduled", that five or six years after the adoption of the constitution, this would not be part of the constitution anymore?

MR. CASEY

That's absolutely correct. It's not intended to be and all this does is force the legislature to try the concept of a recess, that's all.

MR. NUNEZ

Representative Casey, I'm trying to understand the logic behind what you're trying to do. If I recall, we spent several days, I believe it was weeks, on this particular article and the resolve, what we adopted, was an eighty-five day session with various other stipulations. Now, what you want to do is force the legislature to try a split session. Let's go one step further and say it works, what is the next step? Do we have to adopt a constitutional amendment to continue it?

MR. CASEY

No, it's entirely up to the legislature after the first two years, Mr. Nunez. I would say there's no great difficulty in the legislature trying it because, as you well know, the first fifteen days under this constitution will be for the introduction of bills. Then, the next eight days will give people an opportunity to see what has been introduced, you can hold committee hearings and things of that type. You have to have your committee hearings anyway in order to consider the bills and resolutions that have been introduced.

11th Days Proceedings—January 7, 1974

MR. DREW

Tom, with fifteen days in which to file the bills, do you think we would even have time to read them, much less explain to our constituents during that eight days what was filed. Doesn't the whole thing work against itself?

MR. CASEY

Mr. Drew, I'm not one of the geniuses that would be in a position to explain every piece of legislation that has been introduced. But I think it's intended merely to allow to the public generally and those who are interested in legislation to at least review from the publication of the list of bills that has been introduced the opportunity to at least examine that legislation which may affect a particular area of activity. That's really the only purpose of it as I understand from the proponents of that concept during the argument on this concept.

MR. HENRY

All right. Read the Casey amendment, Mr. Clerk.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Gentleman has changed Amendment No. 3.

Amendment No. 1. On page 1 --add a number of coauthors,

Mr. Sutherland, Chatelain, and Mr. Riecke.

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 3, add Delegate-- we already have that one to the list of authors--

Amendment No. 2. On page 1, at the end of line 5, delete the word "three" and insert in lieu thereof the word "two".

Amendment No. 3. On page 1, delete lines 11 through 15, both inclusive, in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Section 1. The legislature shall provide, by rule or otherwise, for a recess during the -- here's the change-- 1975 and 1976 regular annual sessions--delete the remainder of that "after the effective date of this constitution"-- during the 1975 and 1976 regular annual sessions, which shall be for at least eight calendar days immediately after the first fifteen calendar days of the session."

Explanation

MR. CASEY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I believe that amendment may take care of, first of all, of the problem that Mr. Jenkins brought up that that would apply to the 1975 and '76 sessions and the remaining purpose of that amendment is merely to clarify the language in Section 1, and request adoption of the amendment.

Questions

MR. SHANNON

Mr. Casey, I think, if I read this right, if we would have the effective date of this constitution coming after the session had started then it wouldn't pertain to that section, would it?

MR. CASEY

Mr. Shannon, the whole purpose. . . part of the purpose of the amendment now is to clarify the fact that it has no application whatsoever to the 1974 problem as to whether we're going to operate under the . . . legislatively under the new constitution or the old constitution. It applies only to the 1975 session and 1976 session. I'm not sure if I'm answering your question, but I'm attempting to.

MR. SHANNON

Well, you did not put that it . . . those dates aren't mentioned in your amendment.

MR. CASEY

No. The Clerk has just added them in view of the question that Mr. Jenkins brought up.

MR. FLORY

Mr. Casey, you stated in your earlier explanation that during the eight day recess you could have committee hearings. But, as I recall a discussion during the consideration of the Legislative Article Mr. Riecke, Mr. Sutherland and many others presented a question of split sessions for the purpose of having the recess to let the public, the legislators and those people interested to find out what had been introduced before you started your committee hearings and the official action on legislation.

Mr. Flory, all I can say is that the main fear that people had during the discussion on split sessions was theoretically you could run a bill through in five days, which you can really do as you well know, and the purpose of standing in recess was to avoid that possibility of bills being jammed through in the early part of the session. We would hope that this would help to resolve the problem.

[Amendment adopted without objection. Motion to suspend the rules to vote on the entire subject matter adopted without objection. Section, Article, and Proposal passed: 85-6. Motion to reconsider tabled on Section and Article. Motion to reconsider pending on the Proposal. Motion to call Delegate Proposal No. 28 from its regular order adopted without objection. Motion to waive reading of Delegate Proposal No. 28 adopted without objection.]
