Mr. Chairman, the first section of this amendment. . . of this proposal was drawn to carry forward into the constitution the changes in the Civil Service Commission which were contained in the original amendment which was proposed by me. We have five members of the State Commission at the present time. The amendment as adopted, provides for seven members. Therefore, it was necessary to provide for the appointment of the two additional members. Now, the original proposal calls for the presidents of Dominican and Xavier, each to submit three names. However, you will recall that my amendment was amended in turn to provide for the election by the classified employees of the state from their number of one member of the commission in place of the nominations by Dominican. Therefore, the amendments which are being circulated at the present time take care of that problem and amendments No. 1 and 2. The present members of the commission serve until their terms expire and when a member nominated by the president of L.S.U. has his term expire then the president of Dillard submits three names to the governor for replacement. This is purely a transitional measure and is necessary in order to carry into effect the Civil Service Article as adopted. Mr. Chairman, that's my explanation, I'll be pleased to answer any questions.

MR. HENRY

Are there any questions?

All right. Mr. Dennery, you have amendments?

MR. DENNERY

Yes, sir. There are two there. . . four amendments, two of which apply to Section 1, Mr. Chairman. Would you prefer me to explain Section (B) of Section 1, as well, because those lines are included in the amendments. So, shall I . . .

MR. HENRY

Would you read the amendments?

MR. DENNERY

Shall I explain Section (B) as well as Section 1. . . Paragraph (B) of Section 1?

MR. HENRY

Yes, explain all of it.

Explanation

MR. DENNERY

All right sir. Paragraph (B) provides for the same transitional measures with regard to the City Commission in the city of New Orleans, and it takes care of the same thing, an increase from three to five in that commission. The amendment to the amendment provided for five instead of three. At the present time two members are named from nominees presented by Tulane and Loyola, the third is named by the city council. So, the original proposal calls for that third member when his term expires then the president of Dillard submits three names. An amendment has been introduced which calls for the presidents of Dominican and Xavier to submit three names to add the five members to the commission. That's my explanation, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

MR. FLORY

Mr. Dennery, just for the record, nothing contained in this Transitional Article is intended in any way to prohibit a person whose promotion may be in process at the time of adoption of this constitution from him receiving that promotion that's in progress at that time, is it?

MR. DENNERY

No, I think Section 2 takes care of that.

MR. FLORY

I just want that clarified though for the record. You don't intend to do that.

MR. DENNERY

There's no intention to change the situation of anyone.

MR. J. JACKSON

Just for the record, also, Mr. Dennery, as I understand it in the civil service proposal we did have five schools nominating... I mean, four schools plus the city council nominating one... to do the composition for the city civil service, that hasn't changed?

MR. DENNERY

No, no, no, wait just a minute, Mr. Jackson, it was changed. The present commission is two names from presidents of universities and one by the city council. The new one is all five named by presidents of universities; there is none named by the city council.

MR. J. JACKSON

Right, and you're not affecting that in any manner, are you?

MR. DENNERY

No, the one who is presently there, he will serve his term out. When his term of office expires, the president of Dillard will submit names.

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

The gentleman sends up a set of four amendments which read as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, delete line 5 in its entirety and insert in lieu thereof the words "the president of Xavier" and on line 16 after the word "Louisiana" and before the word "shall" delete the word "each".

Point of Information

MR. AVANT

I just want to ask a question. Mr. Poynter read "on page 1, delete line 5", I believe, and the amendment I'm looking at says "line 15."

MR. POYNTER

It's "15"; if I said "5" I was wrong, Mr. Avant.

[Motion to waive reading of the Amendments adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. DENNERY

Well, the explanation I think I gave in explaining the proposal itself. The amendments take care of the changes that were made by the convention in the original amendments to the civil service proposal which were submitted. It takes care of the one elected classified employee and the two other colleges which were added. The amendments also take care of the three new colleges added as far as New Orleans is concerned. I would be happy to answer any questions, Mr. Chairman.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted without objection. Motion to temporarily pass over Section 1 adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

"Section 2. Transition; Civil Service Officers; Employees; State; Cities

Section 2. Upon the effective date of this constitution, all officers and employees of the state and of the cities covered hereunder who have status in the classified service of the state shall retain said status in the position, class, and rank that they have on such date and shall thereafter be subject to and governed by the provisions of this constitution and the rules and regulations adopted under the authority hereof."

Explanation

MR. DENNERY

This is the transitional measure with regard to all civil service officers and employees of both the state and the city which states that "Upon the effective date of this constitution," everyone who's covered under the proposal in the constitution who has status in the classified service, either in the city or the state, retains that status as of that date and thereafter will be subject to the provisions of this constitution. It will not have any affect...in other words, no member of the classified service of the state service or of the service in the city of New Orleans will be affected at all by virtue of the adoption of the constitution. They would just continue in office and in the positions of employment they hold. As Mr. Flory asked, if someone is in the process of being promoted, it will have no affect on that.

Questions

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Dennery, I'm just wondering the way that this is worded that maybe you might have left out a word or two here if there's no amendment to this particular section. I notice you say "employees of the state and of the cities covered hereunder who have status", then you say "retain said status in the position, rank they have on such"....

MR. DENNERY

Yes, I think you are right, Senator De Blieux, it should say "of the state or cities."

MR. DE BLIEUX

Yes, that's the point I want to make.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, at the end of line 9, strike out the words "of the" and at the beginning of line 10, strike out the word "state".

Explanation

MR. DENNERY

On page 2, in order to take care of the problem raised by Mr. De Blieux, we've just deleted the words at the end of line 9 and the beginning of line 10 "of the state", so that it says "employees of the state and of the cities who have status in the classified service;" that takes care, I think, of the problem. I ask the adoption.

[Amendment adopted without objection. Motion to suspend the rules to vote on the entire subject matter. Sections 1 and 2, Proposal, and Article passed: 86-0. Motion to reconsider Sections 1 and 2 tabled. Motion to reconsider the entire Proposal pending.]

Personal Privilege

MR. RIECKE

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I want to thank you from the very bottom of my heart for that vote you just made on Mr. Casey's delegate proposal. I want to thank, too, those legislators who made the commitment to me and to those of us who proposed this split section at the beginning of this section. I want to thank them for honoring their commitment; I'm very grateful to you.

MR. POYNTER

Morning Hour No. 11.

Delegate Proposal No. 34, introduced by Delegate Dennis.

A proposal providing for the financing of the state judicial system. Comes from the Committee on Revenue, Finance and Taxation. Reported without action.

MR. HENRY

The gentleman now moves it be withdrawn from the files of the convention.

Without...Judge Dennis.

Substitute Motion

MR. DENNIS

Mr. Chairman, I'd like to offer a substitute motion to engross this and pass it to the third reading.

Reading of the Proposal

MR. POYNTER

Delegate Proposal No. 34. You'll find a copy of it in your books.

It's a proposal providing for the financing of the state judicial system. "Total cost of the state judicial system shall be paid by the state from the general fund. The legislature may require reimbursement from the state by political subdivisions of appropriate portions of the cost. The provision shall not cause the reduction in salary of any public official."

Explanation

MR. DENNIS

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this is a subject matter that has not been considered by the convention during our deliberations. This deals with the financing of the state judicial system. This delegate proposal is designed to do away with what I consider to be the greatest evil in our judicial system. The thing that does more to embroil judges in politics than anything else is the fact that we are paid--a substantial portion of our pay comes from local level. This money is made up of fines and forfeitures coming from the violations of state laws, mostly. It goes into a criminal court fund in each parish. The judges and the D.A.'s authorize expenditures out of these fines and forfeitures to finance the operation of the criminal courts. Then, the judges are supplemented in their salaries anywhere from zero to over fifteen thousand dollars, in some cases, out of this criminal court fund. But, in order to get the approval, in order to get that money to supplement their salaries, they must go lobby their police jurors in each parish before they get a supplement to their pay. Now, there are many, many evils in this. One of them is that this has created a disparity in the payment of judges throughout the state, ranging from twenty-two thousand five hundred up to thirty-five thousand dollars. District judges doing the same work with the same authority are paid this much difference in pay. It all really boils down to how much fines and forfeitures the police jury's got in the kitty. Now, that, really, is not what I'm trying to do away with, disparity in pay. But, there're so many things wrong with this, I know we don't have time to go into all of it, but the big thing that's wrong with it is that anytime a judge or group of judges in a judicial district, asks for a pay increase, they must go lobby the police jury. Of course, they must be sure they're on good terms with the D.A. In other words, they must politick everybody who's got anything to do with the criminal court fund. Now, this is not right. This makes for something less than a state judicial system. It makes for, really, a group of little local court systems. In the interest of justice and in the interest of having good justice, the same quality of justice throughout the state, I think it is much desirable that judges in the state judicial system be financed at the state level, and that is what this delegate proposal seeks to do. It also would allow the legislature to take these fines and forfeitures or a portion of them, and put them in the general fund and finance the state judicial system. So, it shouldn't cost the state any more money. It will simply transfer the payment and the financing of the judicial system from partially at the local level to totally at the state level. Now, there are several other variations on this same theme that we could enact, and I am willing to accept any reasonable amendment that will allow us to finance the judicial system at the state level. I can't offer any amendments at this time, or accept them, because we're simply deciding now whether this should be passed to its third reading. But, I ask you to please let this go to the third reading because this might very well be the most progressive step we could make in improving our judicial system. We have not considered this before. This is not a rerun of something that you have considered before like a lot of the other delegate proposals. This is a new proposal. It is designed to improve the judicial system, and I ask you to please allow me the opportunity to present it and accept reasonable amendments to it, if you have any, on the third reading.

Questions

MR. KEAN

It's not your intention, is it, Judge, that if this was adopted as the method of payment for the judiciary that the legislature couldn't...whoever would have the authority couldn't establish varying pay ranges for district or other judges, depending on case load and other factors of that kind?

MR. DENNIS

No, sir. It would allow the legislature to continue the same salaries that are in effect now. It would simply... the big thing it would alleviate is the judge having to go to the police jury and politick them in order to get the money for his salary. Also, it would take the judge out of direct administration of these fines. Frankly, ladies and gentlemen, I think the present system we have in Louisiana may be unconstitutional because the U.S. Supreme Court has already ruled that a mayor sitting as a judge in a mayor's court who fines people, and then turns around and administers the funds that he gets from those fines for the city, is acting unconstitutional. This is very close to what we're doing now in Louisiana in the district courts. We are fining people every day, and then we're turning around, and we're getting together with the D.A. and deciding how that money's to be spent in the criminal courts, and also paying ourselves salaries out of it. I think if this money were transferred to the state level, we would not be in as direct contact with it, and we would not be in as much danger of having our financial system declared unconstitutional. But, to come back to your question, Mr. Kean, it would not require any change whatsoever in the amount paid a judge. It would leave this up to the legislature at the state level.

MR. A. LANDRY

Judge Dennis, have you made a survey to find out how much this would cost the State of Louisiana?

MR. DENNIS

Mr. Landry, I just said it would not necessarily cost anything because the legislature would not have to change the pay of anybody.

MR. A. LANDRY

Would you get your revenues then from the court costs that are now being collected by the various courts throughout the state, and then turn it in to the state? Is that the idea?

MR. DENNIS

Mr. Landry, as I just explained, the state legislature could take the same salary supplement that is being paid each district judge out of these criminal court funds and transfer those funds to the state level. Now, it would not have to transfer all of them. It would not have to use all of them. It could use whatever is necessary, and it would not cost any local government any added cost. It would not cost the state any added cost.

112th Days Proceedings—January 8, 1974

MR. A. LANDRY

Would that lead to maybe a cash register justice, where the state would say, now, you're going to put on a fine for a speeder; he's going to pay so much fine, and the judge would have no discretion to take into consideration the facts of the case... the judge would have to...

MR. DENNIS

Mr. Landry, I'm surprised at your asking that question because you know good and well this doesn't require anything like that.

MR. A. LANDRY

Well, I don't know. It's happened in Iowa, and it could happen in Louisiana.

MR. DENNIS

Well, I don't believe it happened in Iowa, and I don't believe it would happen here. I don't believe the legislature's going to take any more money from these local governments than is absolutely necessary to finance the state judicial system, and it doesn't have to take any money that isn't being spent already on the courts. The big thing it would do is it would circulate the money through the state at the state level instead of the judges having to go engage in local politics to get their pay.

MR. KILBOURNE

Judge, I got here late. I might be repetitious here in asking this, but this is looking to what we had a lot of talk about on the Judiciary Committee about a unified court system; is it not?

MR. DENNIS

No, sir. A unified court system is where you don't really have judicial districts. We've got judicial districts in our article. This simply says that instead of the judges being paid one-third or one-fourth of their pay out of these criminal court funds, that they will be paid at the state level, and the legislature may take that money up to the state level and disburse it at the state level instead of letting the judges go lobby the police jurors to get it out of the criminal court funds. That's all it would do.

Further Discussion

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, Judge Dennis came before the... I don't see any of our leaders in here on Revenue, Finance, and Taxation, so I'll take it upon myself to tell you what I think of this proposal, and what happened in committee. Judge Dennis came at the last meeting of the committee which was about a week ago or two weeks ago and presented two proposals on restructuring or refinancing the entire judicial system in the State of Louisiana. We asked for facts and figures etc. to help us make a determination, and he had none. I specifically asked why didn't he bring the proposal before his own committee, the Judiciary Committee, of which he was the chairman, and he said he was told that Revenue, Finance, and Taxation would best handle it. Well, maybe we could have best handled it and maybe we could have done a good job, and maybe this is the best proposal to come before this committee, to come before this convention since January 1, 1973. But, I just don't believe on the last week of the convention with all the work we have to do that we should pass this on to third reading and have it come before the full convention. I don't think we have the figures. I don't think we have the facts. I think we're dealing in the area of financing the entire judicial system in the state of Louisiana. I don't think that this convention has the time to take up this particular proposal. The committee out of courtesy to Judge Dennis, and I say again, it might be the best proposal to come before us. He had two proposals and one of them I think he withdrew, and the other one, the committee failed to act the way they should have acted, and he could have done the same thing, that is move it on to its third reading and then on to final passage. We deferred action on it. Without action, I think it's reported, which means it looks like the committee didn't take any definitive action which they did not. But, I would ask you not to move this on. I just don't think we have the time, and I think we'd be running into a real serious problem if we deliberated this thing before the full convention. We don't know what the financial outcome of this proposal will do to the state. As you know, I believe that the legislature can handle this as such if we allowed them to, or maybe in the schedule or something. Judge Dennis could give some direction as to what he would like. But, to consider this as a proposal of this convention or a delegate proposal, I think we would be doing wrong. So, I would ask you, and I hate to do it, not to move this delegate proposal on to its third reading and then on to final passage. I'll try to answer any questions that you would have.

Questions

MR. BURNS

Senator, you asked Judge Dennis why he didn't take this up before the Judiciary Committee, of which he was Chairman. He did bring it up before the committee and the committee voted it down.

MR. NUNEZ

Well, I didn't know that, Mr. Burns, but it certainly adds some light to it. It still could be a good proposal even though the Judiciary voted it down, and I'm sure that's why he brought it to the Revenue, Taxation and Finance Committee. But, we didn't have the time to go into it fully. Maybe it should be explored, but I just don't think in the last ten days of this convention that we should explore the possibilities of refinancing the whole judicial system in this state.

MR. DENNIS

Sammy, did you know that I did bring this up before the Judiciary Committee in the last days when we were working on our proposal, and that one of the reasons I believe that it was not incorporated in the Judicial Article is because some of the members thought it might have an effect upon the state financially. Did you know that I sought to send this delegate proposal back to the Judiciary Committee, but the Chairman referred it to the Revenue and Taxation Committee? I first offered a substitute motion to go back to Judiciary. Senator Rayburn objected, and rather than create a lot of debate on the floor, I allowed it to go to Revenue, Finance, and Taxation because it does have something to do with the financing of the third branch of the government. I don't think it's going to cost the state any great amount of money, but it does touch upon finance. Did you know that?

MR. NUNEZ

I certainly do, Judge, and I disagree with you in that it will not cost the state any money.

Further Discussion

MR. SCHMITT

I'm also a member of the Revenue, Finance, and Taxation Committee, and I believe that Judge Dennis had attempted to bring up his particular proposal before, but it was a delegate proposal, and as you all know, we had been involved in a property tax question for a long time. Therefore, we had put off the evaluation of all delegate proposals till very late in the game. Judge Dennis attempted to bring up his particular proposal on one day, and after a certain period of time passed, we didn't have the opportunity to hear him, and therefore, it was passed over until the next day. The next day he came back and gave his little talk and we took action with reference to that particular proposal. I think it's a very good proposal, and it will help lead to justice for all the court systems throughout the State of Louisiana. One of the points which the Judge had brought out is that many of the parishes in the state are not along into state highways, and therefore do not get the benefits of these funds from tickets from the interstate highways throughout the State of Louisiana, and this leads to inadequate funding in those particular areas. It also sets up a very unfair situation where the money which is being levied in fines goes to the remuneration of the judges and also towards the capital expenditures with reference to repairs of different offices throughout the State of Louisiana. I don't think that's a fair system. I believe that presently the district attorneys and the judges decide how the money is spent from these different judicial funds, and this--although the probability's there I doubt if there's ever any improprieties--one of the canons of ethics in the State of Louisiana require that judges, district attorneys and all attorneys attempt in every way to prevent any question of impropriety to be involved in any type of situation. I would feel that this passage of this proposal would allow the individual before the court to feel that he's getting a fair shake, and to give him his chance for fair treatment before any particular judge. Thank you.

Questions

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Schmitt, you and both Judge Dennis said it won't cost the state any money, and it's a very good proposal.

MR. SCHMITT

I never said it wouldn't cost the state any money.

MR. NUNEZ

You said it's a very good proposal, and it says "the total cost of the state judicial system shall be paid by the state from the general fund." That's the gist of the whole thing as far as I'm concerned. Then it says "the legislature may require reimbursement to the state by a political subdivision for appropriate portions of such cost." On one hand it says "it shall pay" for the entire system and "the legislature may," may, may require a substantial portion from local government. Now, would you tell me what's so good about...

MR. SCHMITT

The state is already paying a portion of the cost at the present time.

MR. NUNEZ

What would it cost the state to do this? Do you have any idea?

MR. SCHMITT

I don't have any exact figures, but whatever amount of money it would cost the state, it would be well worthwhile to provide some justice and equity and prevent any type of question of impropriety upon the part of judges in our judicial system in this state.

MR. NUNEZ

You're saying that justice depends on financing.

MR. SCHMITT

I'm not saying that justice depends upon financing, but what I am saying is that the canon of ethics requires that judges and district attorneys and so forth prevent any types of questions of impropriety, and at best the system which we've had in the past is a questionable system as far as constitutional questions are involved.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Schmitt, when the statement was made that the... a portion of the salary of the judges and the district attorneys comes out of the criminal court fund, that's not accurate, is it?

MR. SCHMITT

I never said a portion of the salary of the district attorneys. However, a portion of the salary of the judges does come from this fund, and the district attorneys and the judges, in my appreciation, both have to co-sign the draft or the check in order for an appropriation to be made from this fund. Is that not correct?

MR. LANIER

Don't the salaries of the D.A.'s...

MR. SCHMITT

Is that correct, or is that not correct?

MR. LANIER

...And the judges come out of the general fund and only the expenses of their offices or a portion thereof come out of the criminal courts fund on the joint signature of the judges and the D.A?

MR. SCHMITT

No.

[Motion to limit debate on the Proposal to ten minutes adopted without objection.]

Further Discussion

MR. STOVALL

I felt that we were going to get into extensive discussion here on the question of referral. My point is that I think we should go ahead and give approval to Judge Dennis' substitute motion, and if the convention has time, to consider it later on the basis of its merits. It may be that Senator Nunez is correct when he says that we will not have time. But rather than our discussing this issue at this time, it would seem better to give approval to Judge Dennis' referral, and if we have time later, we will discuss it on the basis of its merits and spend our time on the issue itself rather than on the referral. Because of that, I would move the previous question if Mr. Fontenot would permit--if he would waive. He waives.

Further Discussion

MR. FONTENOT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I'll try to be brief. As you know, we only have eleven days left. If we pass this on the third reading, then it's going to come back to the floor of this convention. This is a very complicated matter. As far as I'm concerned, when it came to the committee--like it was stated previously--as a courtesy to Judge Dennis yesterday, we reported it out without action. I would have voted it unfavorable, but the result would have probably been the same. He could have still passed it on to third reading with his motion. But, as far as I'm concerned, this is a legislative matter. The total cost of the state judicial system, as far as I'm concerned, is handled by the legislature at the present time in the sense that they said that the state--whatever the state pays the judges and D. A.'s. Now, this is very all encompassing; it encompasses both judges and district attorneys. Without any information as to the cost, I feel that we're trying to handle something that we don't have facts and figures. I think passing it to third reading and within eleven days having to vote on this again, I think it's going to be a big mistake. I think it's a legislative matter; I think it ought to be handled by the legislature. Therefore, I would urge you to defeat Judge Dennis' substitute motion and let's end this matter right now. As far as I'm concerned, it can be handled by the legislature if they wanted to handle it. There's no reason that this convention should take it upon ourselves to handle it when it's a legislative matter. I'll yield to questions.

Questions

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Fontenot, is your only reason for not wanting to hear this proposal or have it brought to the floor is because of the time element?

MR. FONTENOT

No, the time element is not important. Well, it's one of the important elements; it's a factor that I have considered. But, then there's also the elements of the facts and figures concerning the total cost of the judicial system. We had it in committee for some time, and Judge Dennis never could come up with facts and figures we were looking for. That's one of them; the time figure is another one, and then the repercussions of this. We don't know exactly what... the total cost of the state judicial system shall be paid by the state from the general fund. Does that mean that all the judges and all the D.A.'s are going to get the same pay throughout the state? We just don't know what it means.

MRS. WARREN

Is the cost factor the thing that disturbs you or is it justice?

MR. FONTENOT

No, it's a combination of the three that bothers me. We just don't have the time, and we don't have the figures to make these type of decisions. That's why I'm saying... and the fact that it's a legislative matter. That's the three things that I think made up my mind, and it shouldn't be considered here.

MRS. WARREN

Well, since you've made up your mind, then you feel that the other people should not have a chance to hear whether it would be good for the state or whether it's not?

MR. FONTENOT

No, I'm just telling you my reasons for urging you to defeat his motion.

MR. HENRY

Will you yield to a question from Senator Nunez?

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Fontenot, evidently some people feel like they don't want the group who's against moving on only want to give a hearing. Evidently, this was heard in Judge Dennis' committee which he is the chairman of, I understand, the Judiciary. It was heard in

112th Days Proceedings—January 8, 1974

Revenue, Taxation, Finance, and it was voted without action. Now, it's here in another maneuver to get it passed on to the third reading; wouldn't you say that that's ample hearing? It's had three hearings already, and now it's up for another hearing.

MR. FONTENOT

Right. I agree with you. If it had been worthy of hearing, I think one committee would have reported it favorably. That's the way I feel about it.

Further Discussion

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, as adverse as I am to agreeing with a Judge and disagreeing with a Senator, I must say I have to give absolute a hundred percent approval to what Judge Dennis is trying to do. I just cannot agree with Senator Nunez that this would cost the state any amount of money because what you are taking from the state to finance the judiciary, you are also taking back in the way of the criminal court fund itself. This is something the legislature should have done long ago, but this strikes at the very heart of the integrity of the judiciary. When you have a judge and a district attorney who can play ball with a police jury and get what they want--as they do with this criminal court fund--you are going to have carpets in some judges' offices. You are going to have some judges that play ball the right way and use this criminal court fund as it perhaps should not be used, who get all expense trips to conventions, seminars, and conferences. I don't think this is right. I say that I have had twenty years as the wife of a district judge looking at the misuse of criminal court funds throughout this state. Ladies and gentlemen, I cannot urge you enough to go on and pass this through. The excuse now that we are running out of time just does not hold. That's just another excuse to bypass it, and to try not to take a realistic look at this. I do urge you to pass this bill on and support Judge Dennis. Thank you.

Questions

MRS. WARREN

Mrs. Miller, would you say that the borrower is a servant to the lender?

MRS. MILLER

I think so, Mrs. Warren.

MR. NUNEZ

Mrs. Miller, my interpretation of the financing of the judiciary: the state pays a basic salary for judges and for district attorneys and assistant district attorneys. Then, there is a supplemental pay by various parishes, as you refer to, throughout the state from various sources...

MRS. MILLER

Based on what they get in this criminal court fund.

MR. NUNEZ

That is correct, based on the case load, etc.--now, also secretarial help and other things that go with running the judiciary now, and you're telling us that that is not substantial, that that cost is not substantial, would not be substantial to the state. You're telling us that you and Mr. Dennis know all of the ramifications at this time as to what it would cause in the system of justice as we've known it in this state.

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Nunez, as we know, it's not obligatory on the part of the state to pay supplemental salaries to a few judges. A few judges get their salaries supplemented. This is something that one of the inequities at which we've been looking; this is something the legislature, possibly, should never have permitted to start happening. Some, one of these days when all these retirements begin to hit, these police juries and all, they're going to be sorry they ever supplemented these pays. They did that back in the days when the district judge got twelve thousand dollars a year or fourteen thousand, but now that you've raised the pay scale I think the time has come to put a stop to the supplemental pay. I don't think it's going to take more than ten more years for these police juries to rue the day that they began to enhance those salaries because they're going to have to pay their part of that out of some moneys to widows and to the retired judges.

I just think it's been a very bad thing for a few judges and district attorneys to get supplemental pay and play...

MR. HENRY

You have exceeded your time.

Closing

MR. DENNIS

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I will be brief and just remind you that this is not final passage. I'm simply asking that you pass this to third reading so that it can be considered. I'd like to remind you that this is something that you have not considered before. This is a new matter for the convention; it is not a rerun of something else. It is not fair to say that it received a full-scale hearing in the Revenue Committee because it was taken up in the last days, as Mr. Smith said, after they had finished their committee proposals. I'm afraid that if we don't do something to build a state judicial system in this state, that the legislature will be unable to overcome the inertia it's had in this area in the past. It boils down to whether or not you have a state judicial system financed at the state level or whether or not you want to continue to have a whole lot of little local court systems, which some are financed extremely well, some are inadequately financed. As Mr. Smith said, it really boils down to how much traffic you have going through the courts and how much fines and forfeitures you get in these criminal court funds from the violation of state laws. There's no reason why this money shouldn't be used by the state; it is state money. The legislature has simply seen fit to dedicate it to local governments in the past. It would not cost these local governments, necessarily, any additional money to transfer the same money you are now paying judges and D.A.'s and the expenses of the criminal court fund, to transfer the same, exact amount of money to the state level and to pay it from there. The only thing it would mean would be something good. That would mean that the judges and the D.A.'s and the police jurors would not have to huddle and politick each other in order to continue to run the criminal courts. So, I ask you to please pass this and consider it. Thank you.

Questions

MR. ALEXANDER

Judge Dennis, under your proposal, would not this system work in the same way that the educational system works in the state, and the state hospitals where fees, fines, etc., where the colleges... where tuitions are turned back to the state fund without any portion of it being used by the institution, and the state makes the proper appropriations for the institution; isn't that correct?

MR. DENNIS

Reverend, it would not...this proposal would not require that, but the legislature could do that under this proposal.

MR. ALEXANDER

But the fact is that it would not cost the state any additional money. The same money that's collected now would be turned back to the state general fund.

MR. DENNIS

That's correct; it could be done that way, yes.

MR. ALEXANDER

Under the present system now, does not it lend itself, possibly-- I didn't say this happened--but it may be possible that a judge just may impose a fine where otherwise he may not. That could be possible, is it not, to enhance his local fund?

MR. DENNIS

I would hope that has never happened and would never happen, but you are correct; it is possible.

MR. ALEXANDER

I would hope so, too, Judge.

MR. JACKSON

Judge, as I understand it, what you're doing is asking this convention to pass on the delegate proposal to third reading so that at some point in the very near future that we can discuss it, vote on it, debate it, argue it, and such; is that my understanding?

MR. DENNIS

That's correct, but this is different from your delegate proposal because it has not been considered by the convention before. Yours has been considered twice so far.

MR. J. JACKSON

No, Judge. I just wanted to find out did it have a fair hearing in committee? That's what I want to know.

[Substitute motion to engross the Proposal and pass to its third reading rejected: 34-50. Motion to withdraw the Proposal adopted without objection.]

MR. POYNTER

Delegate Proposal No. 91, introduced by Delegate Zervigon. A proposal making provisions for property taxation. Comes from the Committee on Revenue, Finance and Taxation. Reported without action.

MR. HENRY

Senator Nunez now moves that it be withdrawn from the files of the convention.
Mrs. Zervigon.

Substitute Motion

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman, as a substitute, I move that it be recommitted to the Committee on Revenue, Finance and Taxation.

Explanation

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman and delegates, there are people in this state--the governor being one, my mayor being another--who are not entirely satisfied with the property tax proposal that we have passed. Should a suitable, workable, acceptable compromise be worked out that would be agreeable to all parties, I think the best thing to do would be to start on a new proposal, amend that in the Committee on Revenue, Finance and Taxation, report it out, work on it on the floor, and then the delegates could compare Committee Proposal No. 26 with the new proposal, whatever it would be. I think it would be impossible to reopen Committee Proposal No. 26 because I think we would all die of shell shock if that were even suggested. I have spoken to members of the Committee on Revenue, Finance and Taxation several weeks ago and asked them just to let this lie in their committee. I pointed out to them that I wasn't going to press it, but if the time came when the governor came up with a property tax compromise, it would be there as a vehicle so that we would know exactly what we were dealing with before we acted on Committee Proposal No. 26 at all. They were agreeable to that and they left it in that committee at that time. I didn't know that it was coming up for consideration again in that committee. All I want to do is to leave it in committee. I'm not going to press to have it reported out favorably. You'll notice I'm not asking you to pass it on to its third reading. I just want to leave it in the Committee on Revenue, Finance and Taxation as a vehicle in case a compromise can be reached. If the convention ends with that proposal in committee, it's just as dead as if you'd withdrawn it from the files. It doesn't stay alive after the end of the convention anyway, but it would leave us a vehicle in case we find a suitable compromise. Now, remember we've invited the governor to come and speak to us. One of his subjects, as he himself has said on the news several times, is going to be property tax. I for one don't have any idea what he's going to say, but if it's something that could be an acceptable compromise, we would then have a way of working on it without reopening Committee Proposal No. 26.

So I urge you to recommit this to the Committee on Revenue, Finance and Taxation. It does no harm.

[Previous Question ordered. Motion to recommit the Proposal to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation adopted without objection. Motion to advance to Proposals on Third Reading and Final Passage adopted without objection.]

PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE
[II Journal 1125-1126]

* * *

[Motion to call Delegate Proposal No. 22 from the calendar adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Proposal

MR. POYNTER

Delegate Proposal No. 22 introduced by Delegate Conroy and Delegate Newton.

A proposal to provide for the prohibition of certain enumerated local and special laws. Then, provides with respect to proposed Section 12 of Article III in a single section.

"Section 12. Local and Special Laws; Prohibition Against Enactment

Section 12. Except as otherwise provided in this constitution the legislature shall not pass any local or special law:

(1) For the holding and conducting of elections, or fixing or changing the place of voting.

(2) Changing the names of persons; authorizing the adoption or legitimation of children or the emancipation of minors; affecting the estates of minors or persons under disabilities; granting divorces;..."

[Motion to waive reading of the Proposal adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. CONROY

You may recall that way back when the convention first started in July, we had before us the article on the legislative powers. We arrived at Section 12 of that proposal which dealt with the way in which we would handle the prohibitions against local or special laws. It was a subject of rather lengthy debate in the convention at that time and essentially, the proposal as it's before you now, was adopted at one point as an amendment to the committee proposal and was adopted by the convention. Later, at the suggestion of the committee, the section was deleted and referred back to the committee for further consideration of the problem. The delegate proposal, which is before you, is a vehicle that was used to get the matter back before the committee for its consideration. The Legislative Powers Committee eventually approved this delegate proposal, in effect, making it the Section 12 of the legislative powers original proposal. So, while this is a delegate proposal, I think in some fashion it is also a committee proposal or the present thinking of the committee as the best way in which to handle this difficult problem. I think at the time that we first considered it, the major objection to this approach was the long listing of prohibitions that it involved and the desire, at that time, to keep a very brief constitution. I think we've seen in the past few months that that has been impossible in a number of areas; I think it's equally impossible here to make it any shorter. In order to understand the provisions which we have here, I think you have to go back and look at your copy of the 1921 Constitution, Article IV, Section 4. You will see there a long list of prohibitions of what... the types of local and special laws cannot be passed by the legislature. There are only a few differences between the Article IV, Section 4 as in the present constitution and Delegate Proposal No. 22 as before you; I'll point those out briefly. If you have in front of you page 36 of your compilation of the present constitution, at the bottom you will see a prohibition against creating corporations or amending, renewing, extending, or explaining the charters thereof provided that this shall not apply to municipal corporations having a population of not less than twenty-five hundred inhabitants. That was changed simply to prohibit the creation of private corporations so that it would not interfere with the local government problems. On page 37 in the second paragraph there is a prohibition against extending the time for the assessment or collection of taxes which further prohibited any ordinance to be passed by any local, political corporation of the state. Since this was not in local government, it was thought inappropriate to include it here in the Legislative Powers Article. Also--and I think that this is a point that Mr. Drew may particularly wish to address himself to--when the matter was before the convention the prior time, the contents of Section 5 of Article IV were made the subject of a floor amendment. The contents of Section 5 of Article IV are not included in this delegate proposal. It may be that Mr. Drew would again wish to make that the subject of a floor amendment. That Section 5 says that "the legislature cannot indirectly enact a special law by the partial repeal of a general law." I wasn't entirely sure that that was necessary, but I would certainly have no objection if Mr. Drew still feels that that is necessary. I gather from his nodding that he does feel it's necessary and will probably propose a floor amendment to that effect, to which I would have no objection. I think that...as I said before, the desire of everybody was to try to make this a briefer constitution. But, I don't think anybody was able to come up with language that would accomplish what we wanted to do and at the same time carry forward the types of prohibitions that the state has had and which I think have operated successfully in the state. I'll yield to any question.

Questions

MR. DUVAL

David, I certainly think your proposal is needed. I wanted to ask you one question. The '21 Constitution doesn't have "except as otherwise provided in this constitution," and you have it in your proposal. I was just wondering, was there any specific reason for doing this or did you do it merely as a catch-all?

112th Days Proceedings—January 8, 1974

MR. CONROY

Well, I'm embarrassed to say, Mr. Duval, that I wasn't even aware that that was in there. I had asked the staff to prepare this and they probably had something specific in mind and I'll try to find out the answer to your question, but I really don't know.

MR. DUVAL

All right.

MR. ARNETTE

Mr. Conroy, I definitely think these prohibitions are needed, also. The only question that I have regards Paragraph 8 when you say "the building or repairing of schoolhouses and the raising of money for such purposes." Under my understanding, all the colleges and universities around the state are funded by special appropriation, by special laws, say like for building a law school at Southern or something like this. It seems like this particular provision would prevent that and the building of any other...anything on a university campus by special law.

MR. CONROY

Mr. Arnette, the only answer I can give you is that if we picked up the language from the '21 Constitution, if it hasn't given them any problem so far, I don't see how it could create any problem in the future. But, again, I think that each one of these things can be considered and if there are any specific objections, consider them. But, I....that's in the present constitution.

MR. ARNETTE

Perhaps we better clarify that and maybe put "except on education" or something to this effect.

MR. CONROY

I might add, and Mr. Duval asked the question along the.... Mr. Arnette, Mr. Duval, follow this carefully because I think it's important. Mr. Duval had asked about there wasn't any provision in the '21 Constitution about "except as otherwise provided in this constitution." I do notice that the particular paragraph in the '21 Constitution on the public schools situation does specifically have the exception that Mr. Duval referred to. So, I assume that the staff decided that that was a better order to take that exception out of that one particular clause and put it up at the front rather than just leave it to one particular clause. But, that one does have a specific exception which I assume indicates that under the Education Article that there may be some exceptions to the education....

MR. ARNETTE

Well, I think under the '21 Constitution they did have such a provision about the special appropriations for colleges and universities, but we do not have one; it's my understanding. So, maybe we need to put "this only applies to primary and secondary schools" or something of this nature.

MR. CONROY

Mr. Arnette, that may well be because this proposal was drafted, as I mentioned, back in July, long before we knew what we would be running into as we went along.

MR. WILLIS

Mr. Conroy, my question is now just about moot because you've exhausted yourself on the explanation of an exception clause; that's what worried me and I'm not going to quibble and question you about it any further. But, let me have your assurance--and this is for the record--that you contain in your proposal everything that is in the counterpart to our Section 12 of the Legislative Article except the two items which you mentioned?

MR. CONROY

Yes.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Conroy, this exception clause that you have at the beginning would put this provision in line with the provision of the Local Government Article that authorizes the legislature to classify legislation along the lines of population or any other reasonable classification, wouldn't it?

MR. CONROY

Yes.

MR. LANIER

...in other such type exceptions that may be found throughout the document that we have prepared.

MR. CONROY

Yes. Mr. Lanier, as I indicated, this was drafted a long time ago. I'm sure the staff, I think quite properly, realized that other areas that we might specifically deal with might create exceptions to this.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

I haven't had distribution copies of this...I had this prepared in Mr. Conroy's name...it's just a technical amendment to make the lines 8 and 9 conform to the appropriate way that we've been trying to make these articles consist and it would strike out lines 8 and 9 and insert in lieu thereof:

"ARTICLE III. LEGISLATIVE BRANCH

* * *

Section 12. Prohibited Local and Special Laws"

It's a technical amendment to try to keep the proposals in a uniform style.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

We don't have the distribution copies.

Mr. Drew has sent up an amendment. We don't have the distribution copies as yet.

He has two amendments; the first one is technical.

On page 1, line 10, after "Section 12" and before the word "Except" insert "(A)"

Amendment No. 2. On page 2, between lines 19 and 20, add the following:

"(B) The legislature shall not indirectly enact special or local laws by the partial repeal or suspension of a general law."

Explanation

MR. DREW

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, when this section was previously considered by this convention, this amendment was adopted at that time. However, as Mr. Conroy has pointed out, it is not included in this delegate proposal. What this does is close the back door on the legislature where they cannot do by a repeal or suspension what they cannot do directly. It has been adopted by the constitution. I think it's necessary that it be contained; it's in the present constitution. I move for the adoption of the amendment.

[Amendments adopted without objection.]

Further Discussion

MR. O'NEILL

Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I just want to make sure that you all understand that this is something that we've gone over before and that this is a very necessary thing to have and that we're going to need the required sixty-seven votes to pass this thing. The Committee on Legislative Powers and Functions wrestled with this problem and we ever found an adequate solution. But, I think this is the solution to simply put back in almost verbatim what was in the old constitution because we know how it's been interpreted. So, I would like to ask that you please help give the required sixty-seven votes.

MR. HENRY

I'll ask that the Clerk read the Arnette amendment. The

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

The amendment fits on page 2 and relates to Subparagraph or item, if you will, No. 8.

Item No. 8, on page 2, on line 14, immediately after the word "of" and before the word "public" insert the words "parish or city".

The same amendment on line 15, after the word "of" and before the word "schoolhouses" insert "parish or city".

So, it would read: "Regulating the management of parish or city public schools, the building or repair of parish or city schoolhouses and the raising of money for such purposes."

Explanation

MR. ARNETTE

Well, I'm sorry for taking so long but I thought the amendment was necessary, primarily because if this proposal were allowed to stand the way it is right now it would prevent any special appropriation for building, say, a school for the deaf, or addition to any university, or anything like this. I think we want to allow the legislature to have special appropriations for, say, putting a law school at Southern, or adding buildings to any universities, or vocational-technical school, or something like this. I don't think there is any problem; it's in the nature of a technical amendment. I've talked to Mr. Conroy about it and he agrees that it should be put in. Are there any questions?

[Amendments adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

All right. This would have the effect of adding a new item. I'm going to have to change the instructions there, Mr. Avant, a little bit; it says on line 20 and we've already gotten something between 19 and 20. So, we're going to have to say:

On page 2, between lines 19 and 20 and before Amendment No. 2 proposed by Mr. Drew and just adopted, add the following paragraph: It would insert a new ten--"(10) Defining any crime."

Explanation

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I'm going to be very brief. If you will recall when this matter came up before, this amendment was added. Now, the reason for that--the legislature had seen fit to pass laws defining the crime of criminal trespass in various ways in various parishes. So that if you go from parish to parish you don't know what the state law is in that particular parish because it's not uniform all over the state. What may constitute the crime of criminal trespass in Union Parish is different from what it is in Concordia Parish and different from what it is in East Baton Rouge Parish and so forth. Now, I have no objection to the law of what constitutes criminal trespass being different in all sixty-four parishes. Don't get me wrong. I just say that if it is a matter which is going to be a state crime and a crime under the criminal code of this state, that then it ought to be uniform throughout the state. If they can't make it uniform throughout the state, then the legislature should not attempt to legislate in that particular area but do a very simply thing, which they have the power to do, so that local governing authorities have the right to define a particular crime and provide a penalty therefore, and that the penalty shall not exceed so much. I wouldn't have any objection to that, but the point is this--that the Supreme Court has held that the legislature does have the right to enact a general state law, supposedly, which will define a crime in different manners, depending upon where you are in the state. The thing that disturbs me about that is, if they can define the crime of criminal trespass in different ways in different parishes, then they can define any other crime in different ways and in different parishes. They could say that the crime of burglary in the parish of East Baton Rouge will consist of certain things, but in the parish of Orleans it will consist of something else, and in Shreveport it'll be something else. Now, you say, "Well, they haven't done that." Well, twenty years ago they hadn't defined the crime of criminal trespass in different fashions throughout the State of Louisiana. Now, there is one other question that I know is going to be asked, and I'm going to answer it because I was asked before. They say, "Oh, that's going to invalidate all the game laws in the state because you can kill a doe here in certain parishes in certain times of the year and you can't kill one in another parish, etc. etc." That is simply not correct because the crime is not the killing of the female deer, per se, the crime is taking game in violation of the rules and regulations that have been promulgated by the Louisiana Department of Wildlife and Fisheries. You have many, many administrative regulations of various regulatory agencies which after they are adopted and promulgated, then, if you violate those regulations you have committed the crime, a misdemeanor in practically all cases--I don't know of any felonies that you can commit in that fashion. But, the crime is not...the crime is violating the rules and regulations which do not necessarily in these administrative areas have to be the same throughout the state, just like the speed limit on a certain type of road would not necessarily be the same throughout the state. But, what I'm talking about is more serious crimes which should have a statewide, uniform application. If there is any good and sufficient reason as to why that particular crime cannot be defined uniformly throughout the state, then the legislature should not attempt to regulate that particular conduct but should get out of the area and leave it up to local government, which they have a perfect right to do under this constitution. So, that's all I have to say on it. I know you're tired. I know we've got a lot of work to do. This amendment was adopted earlier and then it was sent back to the committee. The committee has seen fit to take that amendment off, and I simply ask you to put it back on.

Questions

MR. LANIER

Mr. Avant, do I understand your amendment correct that it's adding a Section (10) that says "defining a crime"?

MR. AVANT

That's right. If you go back to the beginning, "Except as otherwise provided in this constitution, the legislature shall not pass any local or special law, (1), (2), (3), (4), (5), right on down to (10)--defining any crime."

MR. LANIER

Any crime?

MR. AVANT

Any crime.

MR. LANIER

Right. Now, wouldn't this invalidate the gill net law that we have enforced in the Tenth Ward of Lafourche Parish?

MR. AVANT

No, sir, it would not, Mr. Lanier. I just got through answering that, telling you that that is a matter which relates to the taking of wild game and which can be done by the rules and regulations of the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission. If they feel that in that particular area it is good sound conservation practice to outlaw taking game in that particular fashion, then they can do it.

MR. LANIER

Well, Mr. Avant, please explain to me how that law would not be either a local or a special law in the contemplation of this proposal.

MR. AVANT

I'm just saying that you can do it in another fashion, Mr. Lanier. You can accomplish the same and identical thing without leaving the constitution wide open for the legislature to pass any kind of criminal statute they want and make it on a local or special basis.

MR. LANIER

Now, Mr. Avant, would this proposal of yours invalidate the slaptrap law in Assumption Parish?

MR. AVANT

The same thing, Mr. Lanier; I mean, you're accumulating your questions. You did this before and we went through this little deal before and it will not; it will simply have to be done by reason of administrative regulation under the Department of Wildlife and Fisheries which don't have to be uniform all over the state.

MR. BROWN

Mr. Avant, following up Mr. Lanier's question, I had a bunch of game fishermen come to me and I read a statute--if I had a couple of minutes I'd get it and show it to you--that says you can only catch a fish a certain length up in, say, the parish of Concordia, whereas down in Plaquemines the length is longer because of the content of the water, and the amount of water available; it's a very complicated biological determination. By statute, those amounts are set; I've read the statutes.

MR. AVANT

But, they can be set by rule of the Department of Wildlife and Fisheries, and I think you know that, Senator Brown.

MR. BROWN

Well, they could be if you wanted to give the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission a power to...in other words, I can see some instances where that would be a pretty wide rule-making power just to say they can pretty much set everything we do, you know. It might be a question as to whether we want to give the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission that kind of authority and power.

MR. AVANT

Well, you're getting into another subject, but I'll answer you this way. I happen to feel that the Department of Wildlife and Fisheries with trained biologists and people who are trained in that particular area should be the persons who provide the rules and regulations for the taking of game and it should not necessarily be a political football kicked around in the legislature.

112th Days Proceedings—January 8, 1974

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Avant, I think you've got a good idea. I believe I voted with you before, but I wanted to ask you this one question. We have elsewhere in this new constitution a section that says, "The legislature may classify cities and parishes on the basis of population or on any other reasonable basis related to the purposes of the act." How exactly does this fit with that?

MR. AVANT

I don't think that has anything to do with this question, Mrs. Zervigon. That relates to legislation which affects the powers and duties and responsibilities and so forth of local governmental units.

MRS. ZERVIGON

No, sir, I don't believe it does; it's a separate section; it just says that "the legislature may."

MR. AVANT

May classify and may legislate?

MRS. ZERVIGON

Well, could the legislature classify under these game laws in such a way that it was reasonably related to the purposes of the act and either obviate some of what you are trying to do or get around some of the objections that Senator Brown and Mr. Lanier have?

MR. AVANT

I don't follow you. My amendment is limited strictly to the definition of what is a crime under the criminal code of the state and for which you can be fined and sent to jail. I say that if the legislature is going to say that certain conduct is criminal, then it should be uniformly applicable all over the state. If for some reason they can't make it uniformly applicable all over the state, so that there would be no uniform state law, then it's obviously a matter which should be left up to local government.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Then, what you're saying is that these two sections have no relation to one another?

MR. AVANT

I don't feel that they do, Mrs. Zervigon.

MR. WILLIS

Mr. Avant, to please those people who have hilly country in North Louisiana and marshlands in South Louisiana and all kinds of other lands or topography with respect to trespassing, isn't it simply for the legislature to define what is marshlands; what is swamp land; what is highland; what is rock land? Then, after they have made that delineation by definition they can say what is a crime in those areas and still achieve, but it would still be uniform all over Louisiana. In other words, what you are trying to do is to have special laws for one parish where when you cross the boundary and you don't know where it is, you don't know whether you are committing a crime or not.

MR. AVANT

That's right. The approach that you've taken is another solution to the problem that was raised by Mr. Lanier.

MR. WILLIS

And, it would be a conviction of our legislature of inability to define topography and the compaction level and fertility in terms of soil and so forth, and if they can't do that, they can't define a crime; isn't that right?

MR. AVANT

That's correct.

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

MR. STINSON

Jack, don't you know for years in the legislature we couldn't come up with a uniform one? Firstly, in the way, I believe it was Jefferson Davis Parish, and then I had one from Bossier and other parishes. Because of the different problems in different parts of the state, every time we tried to have--don't you know--every time we tried to have a uniform South Louisiana one because of the marshlands and all, well they would vote down anything we wanted. So, then, about ten different parishes, at least, passed their own and provided that the police juries could change it, at their option. Don't you think that's a form of home rule? Why should you from Baton Rouge be concerned about what we have in Bossier unless you're going to go up there and try to criminally trespass on our lands?

MR. AVANT

Mr. Stinson, I don't think you were listening. I said that I didn't care. If the legislature wants to pass an act saying that all local governing authorities in this state are given the authority to define the crime of criminal trespass within their respective jurisdictions and to provide penalties therefor up to which would be misdemeanor, I wouldn't kick about that at all. What I'm saying is that I don't want the legislature saying that the crime for criminal trespass shall constitute this in one parish and that in something else because of this reason--not that I'm so upset about trespass: If they can define one crime by a local and special law, then they can define any crime by a local and special law. They can say that the crime of armed robbery will consist of thus and such in the parish of Caddo and thus and such in the parish of East Baton Rouge, and that is what I'm trying to head off.

MR. STINSON

Don't you know that argument wouldn't hold water at all, Jack; they couldn't do it on something like that?

MR. AVANT

Well, they most certainly can because they have defined a crime and made it a state crime, a violation of the State Criminal Code to wit: the crime of criminal trespass, and it is not the same crime in all of the parishes of the state; it varies from place to place as you travel around the state.

MR. STINSON

Well, don't you think a solution would be that they can for criminal trespass, but no other crime then?

MR. AVANT

Well, if you want to add that amendment after my amendment is put on, I wouldn't holler about that, if you want to limit it that way. I think it would be kind of foolish because I think the thing to do, if the legislature can't decide what criminal trespass ought to constitute throughout the State of Louisiana, they ought to quit fooling with it and let local government decide.

MR. BROWN

Mr. Avant, one more question. You said you don't want the legislature determining that, in other words, only so long a fish should be caught in one area; that all that should be administrative rules. Aren't, in effect, what you are doing is allowing the commissioner to, in effect, write criminal laws saying that, "Look, if you are involved in hunting or fishing with this type of game, you're in violation of our rules"? Aren't you, in effect, writing criminal law and charging that man through an administrative procedure which is--in effect, we are kind of doing that right now, now that you mentioned it, and I think the whole concept is unconstitutional; wouldn't you agree?

MR. AVANT

Well, I don't think it's unconstitutional at all. I think you do it in many, many areas; the civil service can adopt rules which have the effect of law. Now, I don't know any of them that have criminal penalties...

MR. BROWN

That's civil, that's not criminal though. You are talking about criminal areas....

MR. AVANT

There are other areas.

MR. BROWN

Aren't you talking about criminal penalties when you....

MR. AVANT

The Department of Public Safety and various and sundry other departments of the state after a hearing and notice and all that, can adopt rules and violation of those rules; once they are adopted in accordance with due process of law, can be a misdemeanor.

MR. BROWN

In accordance with due process of law, but what you're....

MR. AVANT

Which involves notice, and hearing, and giving people an opportunity to be heard and express their views.

112th Days Proceedings—January 8, 1974

MR. ARNETTE

Mr. Avant, you mentioned the Department of Public Safety; don't they set the speed limits on highways around the state?

MR. AVANT

Yes, they do.

MR. ARNETTE

And, a violation of that regulation as set by them is a crime?

MR. AVANT

In certain instances they may, yes.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Avant, let me admit to start off with, I didn't get interested in your amendment, it got here too late; I'm asking for information now; I'm not needing. Is it true that you are attempting to give the legislature the power to let the local government determine certain local issues, for instance, trespassing?

MR. AVANT

They already have that power. They can...if you'll go back over the Local Government Article and the Legislative Article you will conclude that the legislature can give to local government certain authority. They can give them the right to pass ordinances, the violation of which would constitute a misdemeanor. Defining crime, they have that authority now....

MR. HERNANDEZ

You do not propose to take any of that away from the local government?

MR. AVANT

No, I'm not trying to take that away from local government. The only thing I'm trying to do is to say that if the state legislature over here in the State Capitol passes a state law defining a crime which will be in the Criminal Code of this state, then that, that law has got to be of uniform application all over the state. The crime will not consist of one thing in one parish and something else in another parish. The reason that I want to do that is not because I'm concerned necessarily about them passing laws regulating the taking of game or them passing laws on criminal trespass, but if they can define one crime throughout the state in different manners, then they can define any crime. There is nothing in this constitution that says you can define these crimes in different fashions throughout the state but no others.

[Motion to limit debate to ten minutes adopted without objection.]

Further Discussion

MR. CONROY

I oppose Mr. Avant's amendment because it really subverts the intent of the proposal as is before you. The intention of the proposal was to carry forward the restraints that had existed in the past, ones that had been tried, tested, we knew what they meant. We felt these were appropriate restraints to continue. However, Mr. Avant's proposal gets us into an entirely new area that we don't really know the effect of Mr. Avant's amendment. I don't think any of us in this room fully could tell you exactly what crimes that the legislature has to date defaced might be made unconstitutional by virtue of Mr. Avant's amendment. If any of us could, I would be happy to hear it. But, I don't think we know what laws Mr. Avant's amendment might render unconstitutional that are presently on the books. I think that in our Bill of Rights section we have given ample protection to the individual who is charged with a crime under the equal protection clause and other provisions in there as far as the individual criminal defendant is concerned. I do not think it appropriate to get into an area where we don't know exactly what we are doing and erase possibly a lot of legislation presently on the books that may be fully justified and desirable. Therefore, I urge you to defeat this amendment.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. AVANT

I just want to clear up what I may have said that may have confused some people; I didn't intend to say or imply that any administrative agency could adopt a rule or regulation and say that if you violate this rule or regulation that there will be a criminal penalty and that they would be in a position to enforce the criminal penalty. Let's go back and . . . the legislature may give to an administrative agency the right to make rules and regulations. Then after those regulations have been promulgated in accordance with the procedures established by the legislature and which must meet the constitutional requirements of due process, the legislature could say all right, if you violate these rules and regulations which we have authorized this administrative agency to make that you will be guilty of a crime and provide a penalty for that. After which, if you are charged with violation of that statute of the legislature, you would have to be tried and convicted in a court of law. No administrative agency could put you in jail, you would be entitled to all of the protection of the criminal laws in that event. As I said before, the important thing is this, that if the legislature is not prohibited from enacting local and special laws defining crimes--which they are not prohibited from doing up to this point because the amendment that I had offered before was taken off--then there is nothing that will prevent the legislature from passing laws, as they have in the case of criminal trespass, and saying that the illegal use of marijuana shall consist of thus and such in the Parish of Orleans, but in the Parish of East Baton Rouge you can have more marijuana than you can in New Orleans; or saying that houses of prostitution will be illegal in the Parish of Caddo, but they will not be illegal in the Parish of St. Landry, etc., etc. Or if you really want to go further, they could define any crime--I don't care what it is-- in different manners throughout the state. That's bad, and that is what we need to prohibit.

Questions

MR. VICK

Jack, I want to take you over this for the last time so the record will reflect your intention without any qualification or equivocation. Under the administrative procedure act the legislature can empower an administrative agency to find various acts in violation of the regulations they promulgate, that's a number 1.

MR. AVANT

That's correct.

MR. VICK

Number 2, they can attach a criminal liability to those acts, but. . .

MR. AVANT

The legislature can attach criminal liability, not the administrative agency.

MR. VICK

The legislature, right, that's number 2. Number 3, in order to find a citizen guilty of a criminal act the attorney for the agency has to go . . . or an agent empowered to make an arrest, for example, has to go to the district attorney in the parish involved and file charges and go through the regular criminal routine as set forth in the Code of Criminal Procedure, etc.

MR. AVANT

That's right. Mr. Vick, the classic example of that, or a classic example is the law that we've had on the books for years relating to the pollution of streams that it is administered by the Stream Control Commission; they make certain rules and regulations as to what you can dump into a stream. Now, if you violate those rules and regulations they can-- one, they can sue for an injunction, or they can file a criminal charge against you, but they are the ones who have been empowered by the legislature to make a determination as to what constitutes pollution and what you can do and what you can't do. But, they don't have the right to put you in jail. The legislature simply has said, if you violate the rules and regulations that they promulgate then we say that you should be subject to a criminal penalty. But, still you have your day in court, you have the benefit of all of the criminal laws and if you say, "I'm not guilty," they have to prove you guilty beyond a reasonable doubt in accordance with all of the procedures that protect the rights of the person accused of crime.

MR. WILLIS

Mr. Avant, you have preempted my question when your words say, "defining any crime," you were restricting it in your opening argument to your . . . and focusing upon trespass, but you developed that it applies to all crimes. Isn't it a fact, that if we allow your amendment not to pass, that you could define that in the city of New Orleans you cannot disturb the peace unless you have a loaded gun in your pocket, all other--you can use loud and abusive language, etc. Isn't that correct?

MR. AVANT

That is exactly correct.

112th Days Proceedings—January 8, 1974

MR. WILLIS

You could angle out --and you brought this up, but I bring it again for emphasis-- that you could have houses inhabited by women of the oldest profession in only one parish in the State of Louisiana, and could not my parish.

MR. AVANT

That is exactly correct. As you know the law which defines the crime of burglary says that if you break into an automobile or you break into a water-craft, it constitutes a burglary. Well, the legislature could pass a law saying that in the coastal parishes if you break into somebody's boat, it constitutes burglary, but if you happen to have a boat on Toledo Bend and somebody breaks into it, it don't constitute burglary. That's the whole objection in why we need this prohibition.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted:
65-30. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Personal Privilege

MR. PUGH

Last Saturday, I suggested to you the feasibility and the advisability of our having struck a coin commemorative of the creation of this constitution by this delegative body. I ask that you give it consideration and let me know what your thoughts are. I tell you that those who have discussed it with me are all in favor of such a plan. In that connection, I make these observations and suggestions for your consideration, that there be such a medal struck, that the medal be restricted in its distribution in the following manner: that one--and one only-- may be acquired at their sole cost and expense by a delegate to the convention; that in addition to that number, that there be one presented on behalf of the convention to Mrs. Duncan and to David; that there also be one presented to the governor of this state, and with your permission in 1975 when the Republic of France honors the Louisiana Bar Association on the hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the Civil Code of 1825, I would like to present one to the President of France. Now, the last one, I suggest to you should be placed within and on a plaque to be put in the lobby of the Capitol that we provide for such a plaque in the Transitional Measures so that it will have constitutional endowment, and that the names of all of the delegates to this convention be inscribed upon that plaque. My first, and last, and final thought in this connection is to ask the governor if he will issue a proclamation that this medal may be worn by the recipients thereof at any state occasion, whether the thing be the inauguration of a future governor, the installation of a Justice to the Supreme Court, or the initial session of the legislature, or at the official bicentennial functions in the State of Louisiana. I shall ask you now by a show of hands those of you who are interested in the medal in the fashion in which I have outlined, are you in favor of such a proposition; if you are, raise your right hand. Thank you.

Questions

MR. SHANNON

Bob, what is the approximate cost of this?

MR. PUGH

I was trying to determine by hand number how many were interested in it and I'll go call Franklin Mint at my own expense and make that determination. I would assume that in silver it would be in the neighborhood of $25.00--outside figure-- that at sterling silver. If, however, you want it in gold or you want any of the presentation pieces in gold, I'll try to arrange for an act of congress, and they'll probably run in the neighborhood of $250.00 to $300.00.

MR. LANDRUM

I was wondering would you consider including the coordinators, and also members of the press who have been here everyday we've been here?

MR. PUGH

Of course, whatever the constitutional convention wants to do would be my pleasure. I am not trying to get anybody to do anything; these are merely thoughts. Incidentally, what I had in mind is something similar to this. If you'll take a look at this this is the type of medal that I had in mind that on one side might have a reference to this constitutional convention and the outside days on which it sat and on the reverse side would be the seal of the great State of Louisiana.

MR. BURNS

Mr. Pugh, I assume that all of this would only go into effect in the event the constitution was approved by the people, right?

MR. PUGH

That is correct.

MR. BURNS

I can imagine how embarrassing it would be if we go through all of this and then the constitution was defeated.

MR. PUGH

Well, the only thing I could say is insofar as the plaque is concerned, I have no objections to going ahead and arranging for the medal at this nominal cost regardless, but that's your pleasure.

MR. GOLDMAN

Delegate Pugh, in the several complementary medals in your suggestion with which I am in complete favor, when you find the cost, could you get the cost so that the cost to each of us who buy our medal will be incorporated, that portion of the cost of those complementary medals that you're going to give.

MR. PUGH

It has been my thought that we would bear the cost of those three or four complementary medals.

MR. GOLDMAN

Within our individual cost, so that we won't have to go around and make a collection for those or something.

MR. PUGH

That is correct.

MR. CHATELAIN

Mr. Pugh, I think you have an excellent idea, sir, and I certainly voted for it, but I would ask you to please, please, limit the numbers that would be made to the numbers you mentioned; let's not spread it out any further. I think you would lose the effectiveness of it if you went beyond the number that you mentioned and I think that you ought to stand fast on that, sir.

MR. PUGH

All right.

MR. BROWN

Mr. Pugh, is the medal going to be made fairly soon?

MR. PUGH

Well, that is in connection with this question over here. If it falls through are we going to do it? I think we ought to go and do it regardless and then, of course, . . . the constitution is going to pass-- I mean there's no problem about that. I'm satisfied it's going to pass and well then, we'll use the medals.

MR. BROWN

Well, in case it fails, you might want to consider maybe making it in the shape of a purple heart or something like that.

MR. PUGH

I'll ask my wife to bury me with mine.

MR. CASEY

Thank you, Mr. Pugh.

MR. PUGH

I move the adoption of this plan as outlined today.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Pugh, I think it . . . I'm not sure if it's appropriate right now that the convention adopt it. We're on another proposal and I think it may be well if necessary, to find out how many people are interested and also, it may be a subject matter that the Executive Committee ought to take up also.

MR. PUGH

All right. Whoever asked me to move. I'm sorry. Thank you.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The amendment would read as follows: It's sent up by Delegates Pugh and Vick.

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, between lines 19 and 2D, in

112th Days Proceedings—January 8, 1974

the amendment proposed by Delegate Avant, just adopted, at the end of the text of the amendment, after the word and period "crime." add the following:

"Nothing herein, however, shall be construed as authorizing the delegation by the legislature to any board, commission, department, or agency the power to define a crime."

MR. PUGH

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, they can look at this as somewhat of a caveat. The only concern that I had expressed walking around the floor about the last amendment related to the possibility of some construction relating to why these administrative boards or bodies defining a crime. I believe this amendment would take care of that problem, and for that reason, Mr. Vick and I ask your favorable consideration. Thank you.

Point of Information

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman, in the second line of their proposed amendment shouldn't the word "legislation" be "legislature," rather than "legislation"?

MR. CASEY

I believe it should be, Senator De Blieux.
Is that right, Mr. Clerk?

MR. POYNTER

It appears that way to me. Don't you think so, Mr. Pugh?

MR. CASEY

Then, Mr. Pugh withdraws his amendment for corrections, and resubmits same after changing the word "legislation" to "legislature."

Questions

MR. LANIER

Mr. Pugh, does this mean that the legislature cannot delegate to a board, commission, department, or agency the power to define a crime?

MR. PUGH

That's its intention, yes. I don't think constitutionally they can anyway, but go ahead.

MR. LANIER

Well, let me ask you this: if the legislature passes a law saying that the violation of a wildlife and fisheries regulation is a crime, and then leaves it up to the wildlife and fisheries to prescribe the regulations, would that not be the wildlife and fisheries defining what the crime is?

MR. PUGH

Not in my opinion. That's why I'm saying that the wildlife and fisheries determines when the hunting season is. The legislature can define a crime for killing wildlife outside of a hunting season. But, the hunting season itself is defined, you know, the limits of it, are set forth by the wildlife and fisheries. That has nothing to do with the definition of crime.

MR. LANIER

But, in effect, wouldn't the wildlife and fisheries be prescribing the circumstances under which the crime would be committed? Is that not correct, Mr. Pugh?

MR. PUGH

By rules and regulations, if the legislature said that they may define under rules and regulations what a crime is, then I agree with you; or if the legislation says that any violation of any of the rules and regulations of one of these departmental commissions is a crime, then I don't believe such legislation would be constitutional, and it particularly wouldn't be in the light of this.

MR. LANIER

Well, let me ask you this, Mr. Pugh: Would you not agree with me that under the present laws dealing with the wildlife and fisheries, that certain sections have particular penal provisions attached to the sections, but that there is a general penal clause pertaining to any violation of any wildlife and fisheries regulation?

MR. PUGH

Yes, I'm familiar with that. I know it doesn't satisfy this constitution, but I'm familiar with it.

MR. LANIER

Well, has it ever been declared unconstitutional?

MR. PUGH

No, not to my knowledge.

MR. LANIER

If this is correct, if this is the way our present wildlife and fisheries law is written, would your amendment invalidate the general penal provision of our present wildlife and fisheries law?

MR. PUGH

Well, I think there's no question but the legislature among its other functions is going to have to straighten out any legislation, including that to comply with this constitution.

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Pugh, in your opinion, under the Avant amendment and if your amendment is passed, will it require entire rewriting of all the wildlife laws of Louisiana? Would the Transitional Committee have to do that?

MR. PUGH

All the wildlife laws? No. We're talking about the regulations that they may have. If there's a wildlife law, then it's been passed by the legislature and you don't have to worry about it.

MR. DUVAL

Well, you don't think it'll be in conflict with this constitution?

MR. PUGH

No.

MR. DUVAL

Why not?

MR. PUGH

Not unless that law confers upon this administrative body the right to define a crime.

MR. DUVAL

You do agree, though, that part of the laws would have to be rewritten under this provision?

MR. PUGH

Well, ...

MR. DUVAL

What about the part of the wildlife law which says that the violation of a regulation is a crime. That would have to be rewritten, wouldn't it?

MR. PUGH

Yes, it sure would, and I think it should be.

MR. DUVAL

Now, what about the wildlife laws that only apply to a specific local area? Will those have to be rewritten?

MR. PUGH

That's Mr. Avant's amendment.

MR. DUVAL

Yes. Will those have to be rewritten?

MR. PUGH

Yes.

MR. DUVAL

They would have to be rewritten, won't they?

MR. PUGH

Yes, if you're going to try to say that if you violate the rules and regulations in this little book published by an administrative body, you have committed a crime, then, yes; they'd have to be rewritten.

MR. DUVAL

Do you think we've studied this sufficiently to know what affect it's going to have on the various revised statutes affecting the wildlife, for an example?

MR. PUGH

Well, if you are asking me that in the last twenty minutes have I read all these wildlife laws, I haven't.

MR. BURNS

Mr. Pugh, this worries me. I mean, I don't quite understand it. Say, the legislature passes a law, it's a present law, defining the killing of a doe as a crime.

MR. PUGH

Killing of what?

MR. BURNS

A doe, deer...female deer.

MR. PUGH

Oh, I thought you said a toad.

MR. BURNS

But, under our present law, as I understand it, the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission or Department in certain areas where they have an overproduction of doe, female deer, they can declare an open season on it although there's a state law declaring that the killing of a doe deer is a crime.

MR. PUGH

If you're asking me whether an administrative body ought to be able, by its rules and regulations, to change the laws of the State of Louisiana, as enunciated by the legislature, then I'll tell you that they ought not be able to.

MR. BURNS

The only reason I cited that because that's the situation now.

MR. PUGH

Well, see, going back to my earlier illustration, there's one thing to say that the killing of a deer out of season is a crime. There's another thing to say that the administrative body can determine the limits of the season. Those are two entirely different things.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Pugh, the way your amendment is phrased, it says, "nothing herein shall be construed as authorizing." As I read this delegate proposal, it's a limitation, not an authorization of anything.

MR. PUGH

That's correct.

MRS. ZERVIGON

So, how could anything be construed as authorizing? How could anything in Delegate Conroy's proposal be construed as an authorization when all the language of it is cast as a limitation?

MR. PUGH

I asked Mr. Vick the same question. He said we'll let Style and Drafting take care of that.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Isn't it also correct that the legislature may do anything not denied it, and that this is cast in...the delegate proposal is cast in the language of a long denial of things to the legislature?

MR. PUGH

Yes. It can do anything it's not denied. However, I think it ought to be denied the right to delegate the power to define crimes. There isn't any question about that. I think you ought to be able to look to the statutes of Louisiana to tell what a crime is.

MRS. ZERVIGON

One more question: Wouldn't that be unconstitutional delegation of authority in any case?

MR. PUGH

...Well, I think it is, frankly. That was my answer over here. I think it's always been unconstitutional when they did it.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment rejected: 47-48. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous Question ordered on the entire subject matter.]

Point of Information

MR. TOBIAS

Mr. Chairman, did that motion include the voting since there is..this would require a record vote, passage of the section and proposal. In other words, would a motion be in order at this time to move for a suspension of the rules so that we can act upon Section 1 and the proposal simultaneously?

MR. CASEY

I see. Mr. Tobias, I made an error. I should have just indicated your intention was to call the question on Section 12, but you're talking about something completely different, right? When we vote, we're going to vote on Section 12 and the entire delegate proposal, and that is your motion?

MR. TOBIAS

That would be my motion.

Reading of the Proposal

MR. POYNTER

Delegate Proposal No. 42, introduced by Delegate Dennery and Delegate Stovall: A proposal providing for the lieutenant governor as ombudsman.

"Article IV, Section _____.

Section _____. The lieutenant governor shall be the ombudsman for the people of the state. He shall receive and investigate complaints made against the state, its officials, employees, agencies, boards, or commissions. The legislature shall prescribe procedures and remedies necessary to effectuate this provision."

Explanation

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Chairman and delegates to the convention, this delegate proposal, which was introduced by Reverend Stovall and me, is for the purpose of giving duties to the one statewide elected official for which we have provided no specific duties: namely, the lieutenant governor. We are suggesting that the lieutenant governor shall receive and investigate complaints made by the citizens of this state, whether they be in the state employ or not in the state employ, "against the state, its officials, employees, agencies, boards, or commissions." Now, the idea of the ombudsman started some, oh, a number of years ago, officially, out in the Scandinaavian countries. But, even before then, way back in the primitive legal order--in the Germanic tribes and, later on, in England--there was a method by which a citizen could complain to the head of a state; and the head of the state, normally, appointed someone to receive these complaints. For instance, in England the chancellor was the keeper of the king's conscience. The position, normally, is of a neutral individual, and the word "ombudsman" derives from the man who collected a fine which was imposed in ancient law and carried the fine to its destination. Now, the purpose of this is to permit the individual concerned to give voice to the collective conscience and the spirit of the people. He attempts to resolve grievances at an early level so that you don't have to go to court. He attempts to improve the administration of the government, and he attempts to aid legislative oversight of administration. There are numerous states already which have adopted similar articles. Hawaii has it in the revised statutes; other states have it in the constitution or in the statutes. There are numerous articles which have been written on the subject, recommending--although some of them do not recommend--that the lieutenant governor hold this position. Now, we are submitting, along with this delegate proposal, two amendments, the first of which will remove the word "ombudsman"--which, in the first place, is difficult to pronounce and difficult to understand by those who have never heard the word before. So, the first amendment will merely remove, from line 9, reference to the ombudsman and will make the sentence read: "The lieutenant governor shall receive and investigate complaints," etc. In addition to this, we thought we should allow the convention the opportunity to give one or more other duties to the office of the lieutenant governor. The second amendment, which will be passed around to you, provides that he shall be in charge of the commerce and industry affairs of the state, of the public parks and recreation of the state, and of tourism in the state. It seemed to both Mr. Stovall and to me that it was difficult to have a statewide elective official without giving that official some duties. We have removed, as you will recall, the only serious duties that the lieutenant governor presently has. We have removed him from his office as presiding officer of the Senate; he will no longer preside at Senate meetings; he will no longer have the right to appoint committees in the Senate. Therefore, we have left him kind of out in left field with no duties, and it is our sincere belief that we should give some duties to the office of the lieutenant governor. I'll be pleased to answer any questions, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Dennery, there's one question I'd like to ask: Are all these duties acceptable to the lieutenant governor, or how does he feel about this?

MR. DENNERY

Well, the present lieutenant governor has indicated that he, for all practical purposes, is doing the work of an ombudsman right now without any official designation. He does receive complaints, and he tries to help citizens of the state in this regard. He is very interested in the other three duties which we are adding by way of...want to present to the convention by means of an amendment. He feels very strongly that the office of lieutenant governor should have a particular one or more duties so that the lieutenant governor will have something to do other than wait in the wings until something happens to the governor.

MR. HERNANDEZ

I'm sure, then, the last one--the commerce and industry, tourism, parks and recreation--I would feel that he might not have objection to that, but that first amendment you have, you do think that will be acceptable to him?

MR. DENNERY

Yes, I discussed it with him, Mr. Hernandez--and I think Reverend Stovall has also--and he indicated that that would be satisfactory to him. He thought he was doing it anyway, so he might as well have the official designation to do it.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Well, thank you, sir.

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Dennery, regardless of how you phrase it, one of the aspects of the concept of ombudsman is independent funding so that you could really be an advocate of the people; and, even if you made some folks mad, you'd still be able to keep on with the job. There's nothing in this proposal that protects any kind of independent funding for the office, is there?

MR. DENNERY

Well, I think no more than protects the independent funding by the legislature of any other office. I would assume, Ms. Zervigon, that if the convention adopts a proposal of this nature, that the lieutenant governor's office will seek and receive the necessary or requisite appropriation.

MS. ZERVIGON

One of the things that's always been in civil service is that the legislature shall provide adequate money to perform this function, and then it preserves the independence of civil service. You didn't consider putting such a phrase in with regard to the lieutenant governor, did you?

MR. DENNERY

No, but I would certainly have no objection, nor do I believe would Reverend Stovall have any objection to an amendment which required funding.

MS. ZERVIGON

Thank you.

MR. LANDRUM

Moise, I was wondering: Do you think this would be an encroachment on the attorney general--on the duties of the attorney general?

MR. DENNERY

No, I don't think it would encroach upon the duties of the attorney general because this is...the purpose of this office would be to try to get these things settled before you had to go to court. In other words, he would act--somewhat, if you will--as an arbitrator, but not officially as an arbitrator. He would receive complaints. He could screen out those complaints which obviously were unnecessary, and those which had some basis, he would be able to try to get the department of the individual concerned to see the light, as it were.

MR. LANDRUM

But, don't the attorney general also act in the capacity of an investigator?

MR. DENNERY

Yes, but I don't think this is the same thing, Reverend. The normal functions of the attorney general, from an investigative point of view, are more related to the criminal things than to... in other words, this would be a situation of a complainant. You weren't getting the type of service you thought you were entitled to from this state.

MR. GIARRUSSO

Moise, I'm for giving the lieutenant governor some responsibilities; however, do you think that there could possibly be some friction between his office and, perhaps, the governor's office and other investigatory bodies that are going to handle complaints? Just suppose, for example, is that the lieutenant governor has an ambition to be governor. Is that--you know, his handling of complaints, perhaps, could create an unfavorable situation?

MR. DENNERY

It conceivably could, Mr. Giarrusso. I don't believe it would, but it conceivable could. I think that the normal, average run of lieutenant governors probably has an ambition to become governor, whether he is in charge of one department or another. If you prefer to limit his duties, say, to tourism or commerce and industry or parks and recreation, I personally would have no objection. The reason this was put in originally, in the form in which it was put, was just so that we would have something----it was put in--as you notice, it's 42; so it's rather late--we had to get something in if we wanted to give him any duties.

MR. GIARRUSSO

Well, another question is that don't you think this would be a duplication effort by agencies that are charged or given the responsibility of investigating complaints---- that there'd have to be another staff under the lieutenant governor specifically to do this?

MR. DENNERY

I think it probably would require some staff, Mr. Giarrusso. I don't think he could personally do this, no.

MR. GIARRUSSO

Of course, I knew that, but I just don't see, you know, the need for this type of responsibility--something else, yes; but that particular one, I would say no.

MR. SUTHERLAND

Moise, I'm a little confused. I think you explained this, but I didn't hear the explanation. I've got two amendments here. One of them says you're going along with what you have in the proposal, and adding Section (B) for lieutenant governor. The other one deletes....

MR. DENNERY

Just deletes the word "ombudsman." That's all it does. It says, if you would read the proposal with that amendment....

MR. SUTHERLAND

Well, I've read it, and I don't follow it, Moise. Maybe it's clear, but I read those instructions, and I can't follow it on the proposal.

MR. DENNERY

I don't have it in front of me, Matt. What are the instructions?

MR. SUTHERLAND

It says: "On page 1, line 9, immediately after the word 'shall' delete the remainder of the line and on line 10, before the word 'receive' delete the following: 'man for the people of the state. Each shall'."

112th Days Proceedings—January 8, 1974

MR. DENNERY

Right. So that it would then read: "The lieutenant governor shall receive and investigate complaints made against the state, its officials," etc. Just removes the title of "ombudsman."

Excuse me, Mr. Chairman. I see the amendment uses the word "each." It should say "he." That was a typographical error.

MR. HENRY

Mr. E. J. Landry has a question.

MR. E. J. LANDRY

Mr. Dennery, do you really feel that we should assign duties to the second in command of the State of Louisiana--the man who represents the governor? Do you not see opportunity for conflicts in your amendment?

MR. DENNERY

No sir, I don't, Mr. Landry. I think that the amendment... Well, the proposal itself does not conflict with the... you see, we have provided in the executive department that he shall have such other duties and powers as may be given to him, either by, as I recall, the governor or the legislature. Now, what we're doing now is saying that one of these powers shall be this: namely, the ombudsman concept.

MR. RAYBURN

Moise, I'm going to be friendly, too, but I'm just trying to really find out: If I understand your proposal correctly, the lieutenant governor, if this is passed, would be able to investigate all officials, all departments, all state agencies, and then further investigate any complaint that anyone might call into his office; is that correct?

MR. DENNERY

No, it's limited just to the complaint, Senator.

MR. RAYBURN

Well, the original proposal says he shall investigate.

MR. DENNERY

No, it says he shall "receive" and investigate complaints.

MR. RAYBURN

Complaints against all officials, all agencies, boards, and commissions.

MR. DENNERY

Yes, that's correct, sir.

MR. RAYBURN

Now, then it further says that he shall "direct the offices of commerce and industry, tourism, and parks and recreation."

MR. DENNERY

Well, now, that, of course, is the ... that's the amendment.

MR. RAYBURN

That is the amendment. And, the amendment has not been adopted at this time?

MR. DENNERY

No, we haven't even gotten to the amendment yet.

MR. RAYBURN

Now, under our present setup, the attorney general of the state is supposed to investigate all complaints, and we have the Consumers' Protection Commission, which is now in effect--it has a statewide telephone number--that investigates all complaints that come before them. Would this be a duplication of duties? Would the lieutenant governor need a staff of lawyers and research people and detectives to go out and make all these investigations that had been requested of him? I'm just trying to find out, really, what are we trying to set up here?

MR. DENNERY

I would not think so. It would seem to me that, in the reorganization of the executive branch--which the legislature is supposed to do under this constitution--it could very well place this office of consumer protection under this phase of the lieutenant governor's duties, if it so chose, and it would be the logical place to put it; so he would have an organization ready-made for him at that point. Now, as far as complaints are concerned, it is possible that we might better restrict it so that he would not be investigating the criminal phases of anything. That was not the intention of it at all. The intention of it was to...if you act as an ombudsman, you would not be investigating criminal complaints at all; you would merely be investigating, for instance, Senator, if the highways in your particular parish were not properly fixed, instead of bothering you, they would then bother the ombudsman.

MR. RAYBURN

Do you believe they'll do that?

MR. DENNERY

Well, if you give them a free telephone number, they might--instead of having to wake up early in the morning to catch you.

MR. RAYBURN

Now, let me further ask you this: What would be your definition of investigating officials? I read that.

MR. DENNERY

It's only complaints made against them.

MR. RAYBURN

Well, the complaints that I was doing something wrong in my area--he's going to come investigate me? Then, if I'm lieutenant governor and want to run for governor, I'll investigate the present governor four years to make sure that...

MR. DENNERY

That's within the realms of possibility, yes, sir.

MR. RAYBURN

...make sure that I build me up enough publicity to get me into the ring.

MR. DENNERY

That's quite possible, yes, sir.

MR. LEBLEU

Mr. Dennery, my question was going to be similar to what you answered Senator Rayburn, and I ask you to put yourself in the role of legislator--or any other public official, as far as that is concerned. If you were a legislator, would you prefer one of your constituents to call the lieutenant governor about a bad road in your district, or would you rather have him call you and see if you could help him?

MR. DENNERY

Well, Mr. LeBleu, I've never been a legislator. I would imagine that the average legislator would just as soon be able to wear the white hat and say, "I got the road fixed." It might make it easier for the legislator.

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Chairman, the first set of amendments--had prepared for Mr. Dennery and Delegate Stovall--are the same technical amendments just to correct, or keep in the consistent form, the title on lines 7 and 8. Delete those lines and insert in lieu thereof:

"ARTICLE IV. EXECUTIVE BRANCH

* * *

Section"--number this 24; there are twenty-three present sections in the Executive Article--"Lieutenant Governor is Ombudsman"

Amendment No. 2. On page 1, line 9, at the beginning of the line, strike out "Section _____" and insert in lieu thereof "Section 24."

[Amendments adopted without objection.]

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

Amendments sent up by Delegates Dennery and Stovall. Read as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, delete line 4 in its entirety

and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Providing for the duties of the lieutenant governor."

Amendment No. 2. On page 1, line 9, immediately after the word "shall" delete the remainder of the line and on line 10, before the word "receive" delete the following: "man for the people of the state." That word "Each" should be "He"--"He shall".

Explanation

MR. DENNERY

This, also, Mr. Chairman, is a technical amendment in that it removes from the language the word "ombudsman" from the delegate proposal completely. Otherwise, it remains the same. In other words, it would read that "the lieutenant governor shall receive and investigate," etc., and it removes the language terming him the "ombudsman" for the people of the state.

[Amendments adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Delegates Dennery and Stovall send up the following amendment: Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 13, immediately after the word "procedures" insert a comma "," and delete the remainder of the line and insert in lieu thereof the following: "remedies and appropriate the funds necessary to".

Explanation

MR. DENNERY

The purpose of this amendment is to take care of the problem raised by Ms. Zervigon during the question period. It provides that the legislature shall not only prescribe procedures and remedies, but, also, shall appropriate the funds necessary to effectuate the provision.

Questions

MR. SHANNON

Mr. Dennery, doesn't the legislature have this authority, without all of this, already?

MR. DENNERY

You mean the authority to appropriate the funds?

MR. SHANNON

To do any of this.

MR. DENNERY

Oh, questionably they do. I think the legislature unquestionably has the power to act up this type of office. Whether they have the right to give that duty, specifically--or those duties, specifically--to the lieutenant governor, I'm not certain of, Mr. Shannon. They probably do have that right.

MR. SHANNON

By putting all this in the constitution now, why, you're going to set up another budget--compulsory budget.

MR. DENNERY

Of course, the lieutenant governor's office gets a budget anyway. The purpose of the whole proposal is to give certain duties--specific duties--to a statewide elected official who, at present, under the way the article on the executive department reads, he has no duties.

MR. SHANNON

But, could not all this be done, even without this article?

MR. DENNERY

But, the same thing could have been done in agriculture, Mr. Shannon, and we chose to put it in the constitution. The same thing could be done with attorney general; the same thing could be done with all the other statewide offices.

MR. JONES

Mr. Dennery, I think you have an excellent amendment, and I'd like to ask that you and Reverend Stovall permit me to coauthor that amendment and the delegate proposal with you, if you will.

MR. DENNERY

Be delighted to have you, sir.

MR. HAYES

Mr. Dennery, I wonder if the lieutenant governor would be available after he gets all these duties to perform, in the event the governor is absent.

MR. DENNERY

Oh, yes, he'll still be available. There won't be any problem there. This is his office anyway.

MR. HAYES

After you put all of this in the constitution for him to do, you think he would still be available to act as the governor?

MR. DENNERY

I don't think there'd be any question because the legislature and the governor can give him other duties anyway.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment rejected: 37-54. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Dennery sends up a further amendment. Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 24, immediately after ... Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 9, immediately after "Section 24." and before the word "The" insert "(A)". Amendment No. 2. On page 1, line 15, add the following: "(B) The lieutenant governor shall direct the offices of commerce and industry, tourism, and parks and recreation."

Explanation

MR. DENNERY

The purpose of this amendment is to add these other three duties to those of the lieutenant governor. In other words, the lieutenant governor would "direct the offices of commerce and industry, tourism, and parks and recreation." I suggest to the delegates that, if this amendment is adopted and you do not agree with the first section in connection with the ombudsman concept, that it would be far better to adopt the second--the (B) section--and then come back with an amendment, if you choose to, to remove the first section and make (B) really Section (A). This would avoid any possibility of conflict in the question raised by Senator Rayburn, for instance, and would give specific duties to the lieutenant governor on commerce and industry, tourism, and parks and recreation. I urge its adoption. I'll be pleased to answer any questions.

Questions

MR. DUVAL

I'm just trying to figure out how this fits into the scheme of the executive department proposal. I'm wondering: Would the lieutenant governor be the head of a department under this, or would he be one of the twenty departments, or how would it work?

MR. DENNERY

It could very well work that way. I think the legislature could very well create a department which would contain commerce, industry, tourism, parks, and recreation, and any others they choose and put that under the aegis of the lieutenant governor.

MR. DUVAL

But, if it were part of another department, you could have an appointed head being over a department which is headed up by one of you elected statewide officials. I was just wondering how we could cure that problem.

MR. DENNERY

Well, I think the problem would have to be cured by the reorganization by the legislature. It's the only way I know to cure it--unless you wanted to create a specific department, and I see no reason to do that.

MR. DUVAL

But, this would have to go under one of the twenty departments, would it not?

MR. DENNERY

Oh, yes. I don't think there's any question about that.

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Dennery, I believe I understood you to say that the lieutenant governor would direct these particular agencies that you've outlined in this amendment.

112th Days Proceedings—January 8, 1974

MR. DENNERY
Yes, sir.

MR. RAYBURN
Under the present law, unless we would change the structure, the governor would appoint all the members of the Parks and Recreation, all the members of Commerce and Industry, and then the lieutenant governor would have full responsibility of carrying out the duties of those various offices and would have nothing to do with who got appointed to those positions?

MR. DENNERY
I think that's correct, Senator Rayburn, unless the laws were changed. But, nevertheless, it would give these various departments--or rather these various offices--it would group them under one general department, and the head of that department would be the lieutenant governor.

MR. RAYBURN
Well, as today, Mr. Dennery, I believe he's an ex officio member of Commerce and Industry; is that not correct?

MR. DENNERY
I don't recall, Senator. He may well be.

MR. RAYBURN
I'm sure he is, Mr. Dennery; he already serves on the Commerce and Industry.

MR. DENNERY
He may well do that. I don't think that would make any difference, though, because he would just be in charge of the office.

MR. ABRAHAM
Moise, don't you feel that by having this language in the constitution that we probably could restrict the reorganization of the executive branch within twenty departments, in that we're saying maybe Commerce and Industry could best fit in--the office could best fit in with several other offices in a particular department, and then we're pulling this one office out of there? Or, for instance, suppose that the Parks and Recreation Division or office were in the Department of Natural Resources or Conservation, don't you think we'd be creating some problems here? I'm not disagreeing with what you're attempting to do, but I think if we put it in the constitution, I'm afraid of what it might do to the reorganization plan.

MR. DENNERY
Well, my answer to that, Mack, is that if you're going to give the lieutenant governor any duties, you're going to have to state what those duties are. Somewhere along the line you may run into some conflicts with some theoretical plan of reorganization, but I think those can all be worked out as a practical matter.

MR. ABRAHAM
But, would it not be better, though, to leave it flexible so that in the reorganizational plan it may be that one or two or three of these departments would report to the lieutenant governor?

MR. DENNERY
Well, I think you have to choose between the lesser of two evils there. You either want to give the lieutenant governor certain duties or you don't. Now, my conception is that we ought to give every statewide elected official specific duties.

MR. ALEXANDER
Mr. Dennery, I think there's been some discussion about the possibility of conflict between the governor and the lieutenant governor. You may not be old enough, but you recall the incident between Governor Huey P. Long and Lieutenant Governor Cyr?

MR. DENNERY
Unfortunately, I'm old enough; yes, sir.

MR. ALEXANDER
Where the lieutenant governor physically attempted to seize the position of governor. Now, I'm wondering, if we can have two governors, that we should not make it possible that the governor must accede him some way to the appointment or the designation of the lieutenant governor to these positions, and would you oppose an amendment to do just that?

MR. DENNERY
I don't quite follow you, Reverend. You're talking now specifically about this amendment--Commerce and Industry, tourism, and parks.

MR. ALEXANDER
Yes.

MR. DENNERY
I don't quite follow how you would do that.

MR. ALEXANDER
Well, by amendment simply state that the lieutenant governor shall...may hold these positions by the designation of the governor.

MR. DENNERY
Well, I don't think you need that, then, Reverend Alexander. I think that the present state of our document is that the governor can give those duties if he wants to, right now.

MR. ALEXANDER
He can give them now, but if we designate them in the constitution, then he may not take them away.

MR. DENNERY
That's correct, sir. That was the theory behind this was to give each statewide elected official certain duties. Now, it may be that some of these duties would better not be in here. I'm not in a position to state that.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendments rejected: 37-53. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous Question ordered on the Section.]

Closing

MR. STOVALL
Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, what we are struggling with here is constitutional duties for an office that has been established already in this constitution. Mr. Dennery and I have been on the Committee for the Executive Branch. We have talked with the lieutenant governor. We felt that these duties which we suggested here were appropriate to his office. I would remind you, and especially in response to Mr. Shannon over here, that we're not setting up an additional budget, but rather we are trying to give definite functions to a constitutional office which we have already established. Now, the idea of the lieutenant governor investigating complaints and receiving these complaints is an effort to make government more responsive to the people. I think also we need to remind ourselves that if there are constitutional duties for the office of lieutenant governor, that this gives greater dignity to the office, and it will tend to encourage qualified people to run for this office. So, on the basis of these and the considerations suggested by Mr. Dennery, we encourage your affirmative support.
Thank you.

Reading of the Proposal

MR. POYNTER
Delegate Proposal No. 49 by Delegate Brien.
A proposal providing with respect to consumer education and information councils.

"Be it adopted by the Constitutional Convention of 1973:
Article ____, Section 1. Consumer Education and Information Councils

Section 1. The legislature shall create consumer education and information councils, which may provide consumer representation for the interest of consumers throughout the state in hearings before any board, commission, department, or agency of the state or any political subdivision thereof and which shall exercise such other powers and duties as are fixed by law."

Explanation

MRS. BRIEN
You know all I want is to give consumer education a firm stand in this constitution, so it progresses throughout the state. Louisiana consumers want a constitution that protects the consumers, the average man or woman whose role in the market place as a buyer and also the seller or producer of goods and services. So often it is forgotten that people are consumers of government service, too. Consumers are voters. Everyone agrees that Louisiana's old constitution is a bad bargain, and this body right now has a great opportunity to give consumers their money's worth in the new constitution. On your desks you see a provision from Montana's recently adopted constitution. Now, if you read this, this is really much stronger than what my proposal is. I say in my proposal "hearings before any board, commission, department," etc. Yes, I think we need the voice of the consumer representatives on all these boards. Also, regulatory agencies such as insurance, pharmacy, radio and TV repair, etc., are generally controlled by those within the profession--being regulated. Of course, experts in each field still are needed, but so are consumers. As one example of what our present lack of consumer representation can mean to consumers, consider the recent action of the Louisiana Milk Commission. So, I say again: I want to give every individual the right that he deserves, and that's what I mean when I talk about consumer protection. So, I ask you for your favorable adoption of this proposal.

Questions

MR. JENKINS

Mrs. Brien, the legislature could provide this by statute, could it not?

MRS. BRIEN

Yes, it could provide it, but it never did provide it. What we have right now is a statute that isn't worth the paper it's written on.

MR. JENKINS

I wonder, when we already do have a Consumer Protection Agency, I believe, don't we?

MRS. BRIEN

Yes, we have, but what I want is that it goes throughout the state, that everybody is protected--especially represent the consumers, so any council can represent the consumers and every board, agency, and department.

MR. JENKINS

When it says that "consumer representation may be provided for", does that mean the state would be hiring lawyers that would go in and sue some of our businesses in the state, use tax funds? What would that mean?

MRS. BRIEN

No, what it really is, only to represent the consumers, to be there when, let's say like when it was going on with the Milk Commission. Consumer representation was not even there. There are so many things that are done and the consumer doesn't even know about it.

MR. JENKINS

In other words, you mean like a private business might be represented by its attorneys on the one hand, and then against it would be the state attorneys representing consumers. Is that how it would work?

MRS. BRIEN

Well, it's really up to the legislature. I said councils, but I did leave it up to the legislature.

MR. JENKINS

On this last part where it says it shall "exercise other powers and duties" provided by law, what sort of duties would those be, do you think? What sort of powers might these councils have?

MRS. BRIEN

Well, the duty is really only to represent the consumers, and yes, if it is wrongdoing against the consumer, they should have some power to do something about it, and that is again left up to the legislature as to how far they can go.

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

We have the same usual technical amendments, Mr. Chairman, to come in and correct the title on lines 8 and 9--"Article XII. General Provisions *** Section 12. Consumer Education and Information Councils." In addition we have in those lines 8, 9 and also on line 10 made this as Section 12 of the General Provisions Article.

[Amendments adopted without objection. Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section failed to pass: 48-45. Motion to table reconsideration adopted: 55-35. Motion to withdraw Delegate Proposal No. 49 adopted without objection. Motion to call Delegate Proposal No. 43 from the calendar adopted without objection.]

MR. POYNTER

On line 11...the proposal was amended in committee and on line 11 the words should be "which may provide consumer representation"--and it goes on to line 12--"representation for the interest of consumers." That word is "may". The first time it was printed it, inadvertently by the printer on line 11, the word was "shall". It correctly should be "may", and it's possible that...I know a number of delegates have old copies of the reprinted proposal in there, which is incorrect, so the sentence should read "the legislature shall create consumer education and information councils, which may provide consumer representation," etc.

Reading of the Proposal

MR. POYNTER

Delegate Proposal No. 43 introduced by Delegates Johnny Jackson, Gauthier, Gravel, Alphonse Jackson, et al.

A proposal providing for juvenile courts having exclusive original jurisdiction with the exception for offenses of murder, aggravated kidnapping, armed robbery, or aggravated rape.

The section reads as follows:

"Section ____ Juvenile courts including district courts and parish and city courts when sitting as ex officio juvenile courts, shall have exclusive original jurisdiction of all offenses committed by persons under the age of seventeen, except that the criminal district courts in the parish of Orleans and the several district courts in the other parishes of the state shall have exclusive original jurisdiction of persons who at the time of the commission of the offense are over the age of fifteen years and who have been indicted by a grand jury for the offenses of murder, aggravated kidnapping, armed robbery, or aggravated rape committed within their respective jurisdictions."

Explanation

MR. J. JACKSON

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, in order to conserve some time of this convention--and particularly in order to allow adequate discussion, debate, and hopefully a well thought out decision on the part of this convention--I want to suggest to you that the committee proposal that is before you is the proposal that went before the committee and did not have the opportunity to be amended. So, I would ask that you disregard the committee proposal as it appears in your book because the substance of the proposal is an amendment that I have sent up. If you recall on yesterday, I did announce that we would be debating and discussing that amendment because in effect that was my Delegate Proposal No. 43. So, Mr. Chairman, I would ask that you allow the amendment to this proposal to be introduced so we can discuss fully what I consider the most crucial issue--one of the most crucial issues in this convention.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, delete lines 12 through 23, both inclusive, in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Section ____ There shall be a juvenile court for each parish. It shall have jurisdiction of cases of the State of Louisiana in the interest of children under seventeen years of age who are brought before it as delinquent or neglected children, as may be defined by law, except for capital crimes or crimes defining attempted rape, which are committed by children fifteen years of age or older. It also shall have jurisdiction over cases involving persons charged with the violation of any law for the protection of the physical, moral, or mental well-being of children under seventeen years of age not punishable by death or hard labor. It also shall have jurisdiction of cases of desertion or non-support of children by either parent, or non-support of a wife by her husband and also of the adoption of children under seventeen years of age. Courts serving as ex officio juvenile courts on the effective date of this constitution shall continue to serve in that capacity until such time as their jurisdiction is changed as provided herein.

Notwithstanding the provisions of Section 15 of Article V of this constitution to the contrary, the legislature may provide by law upon a favorable vote of at least two-thirds of the members elected to each house: (1) for the merger of juvenile courts with other courts; (2) for the abolition of juvenile courts; (3) for additional jurisdiction of juvenile courts; and (4) that a juvenile court may waive its jurisdiction over children fifteen years of age or older at the time of the commission of any offense, who may then be tried as adults."

Explanation

MR. J. JACKSON

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, as most of you know that I have personally, along with Mr. Pugh and other delegates here, have been concerned about the present provision as it exists in the Judiciary Article. I've heard constantly over the last three months, particularly, about some concerns that individual delegates here had about the original proposal. The only thing that I ask you in listening to this amendment is to recognize (1) if I have made the necessary compromises, (2) if the amendment as I present to you indeed is worth every positive and affirmative vote on your part. In explaining the amendment let me say that (1) if you look at the first paragraph, it says, "there shall be a juvenile court for each parish", rather than "in each parish." This was done to allow parishes that may now or in the future cannot financially afford or geographically maintain a separate juvenile court to join with other parishes in the support of such a juvenile court. In addition, what that does is to allow that those parishes that presently have district courts serving as ex officio courts to be retained. That is significant because one of the arguments was that you're mandating that each parish have a juvenile court, and I'm suggesting there's a difference between the language, "there shall be a juvenile court in each parish" and "a juvenile court for each parish." So, it allows flexibility on the part of the governing authority of the parishes. (2) The first paragraph maintains the present provisions regarding juveniles or youngsters fifteen years or older who commit vicious or heinous crimes and allow that these persons be tried in the district court as the present 1921 Constitution provides for and which has not--and I repeat--it has not been changed. Now, this was done--and I attempted to address my concern to those delegates who cried very loudly and who I disagreed with to some extent about those youngsters who commit vicious crimes. I am saying that if they're fifteen years or older and they commit a vicious crime, that my provision provides, as in the 1921 Constitution, provides that they can be tried as an adult so that we ought not be smoke screen about...around that issue of whether vicious...youngsters who commit vicious crimes can be allowed to escape trial by jury or trial by the courts. Thirdly, what I have done, I have retained the provision--in the first paragraph now--particularly as it relates to the Orleans courts having jurisdiction over desertion and nonsupport and adoption. Delegate Vesich, in my discussion with him, was concerned that my original amendment did not provide for the adoptions and desertion; so I provided that to address myself to that problem.

If we look at Paragraph 2--and particularly I want those parishes that have district courts serving as ex officio juvenile courts to understand what the second paragraph does. The second paragraph provides that courts that are functioning ex officio juvenile courts shall be continued as provided in Paragraph 3, which requires a two-thirds vote of the legislature to change. So, that means that if you presently now have a district court--and in Paragraph 1 I have not mandated each parish--but if you presently have a district court serving as ex officio juvenile court, then you are allowed to maintain that without being required to go to a separate specific court within your particular parish.

Paragraph 3 is, in my estimation, full of compromises because (1) we give the legislature the flexibility to merge it, to abolish it, or to grant additional authority by two-thirds vote. Now, this was done because there are three factions in this convention here that have some strong feelings about merging. One faction wants to merge it; one faction says we ought to abolish them. The other faction says--and like we particularly in the city of New Orleans--we want to move from a juvenile court to a family court, so we have allowed a mechanism by two-thirds vote to allow that no one faction in my opinion would have to just get a majority vote to sway whatever direction that they want to go.

Secondly, in Paragraph 3--and I will answer questions--second in Paragraph 3 we provide that the juvenile court judge may waive...the juvenile court may waive its jurisdiction over those youngsters fifteen years or older for any offense. Now, this was done because a lot of the delegates say, "Well, look, Johnny, we've got some juveniles that don't commit major offenses, but they're constant repeaters. As long as you do not allow some flexibility where these constant repeaters can be tried in a court because they are incorrigible, then I'm afraid I can't go with your amendment." So, what this specifically addresses itself to is to allow repeaters, particularly on the determination of the judge of the juvenile court, to allow this youngster to be transferred. Now, basically those are the significant changes that I've made. Again, I repeat, if for somehow you believe that these are compromises and these are points of merit, then I ask your favorable vote.

I'd like to point out--Mr. Chairman, if I have time--I'd like to stress certain points to you. One point is that I want to point this out: Under the judiciary--under the provisions of the Judiciary Article...

Mr. Chairman, could I get a little attention, please?

I'd like to point out that under Judiciary Articles, district courts have exclusive jurisdiction over all felonies, and I question seriously if this could be interpreted if a youngster and his bike could be charged with assault and battery; that 2, that a youngster could be tried on a state charge for maybe stealing hubcaps, or 3, that youngsters now can be exposed to the full effect of the law. Now, I'm not talking about those youngsters that commit vicious crimes because they can go to the district court. But, I'm just talking about those youngsters who may go to a party after a prom, get some alcohol in them, take somebody's hubcaps, and they could very well be charged with a state charge, and if you know--he doesn't have to be convicted--but, if you know what that means in terms of an arrest record following him through the rest of his life, no matter what kind of influence he was under, then I suggest to you that that is very dangerous. Second point of stress--and I hope you're making notations of it--that the only...you hear the argument about the three tiered court, and I've talked to some people about that. The only justification for a three tiered court that I've heard is that they want to cut down on the amount of clerks, the amounts of sheriffs and the amount of people issuing subpoenas. My only suggestion to the gentlemen is that you can do that administratively and you can do that cooperatively, but do not, in my estimation, do not jeopardize the future of young people in this state just because somebody's concerned about a duplication of the serving of writs. I think that can be done by the Judicial Administration and cooperation between the various courts. Thirdly, while talk about this whole three tier level court, you're going to get some amendments up here about reducing the terms of the judge. I want to say very emphatically, please, gentlemen, do not put the future of juveniles in jeopardy because there's some problem between certain judges in this state. If you've got a problem, you work your problem out within your judicial administration or within courts. But, it seems to me very clearly that that ought not be the issue. The future and the treatment of juveniles who are not vicious, not the one who commit heinous crimes, ought to be the prime consideration. Thirdly, I'd like to point out that in recent reports--and I have them here if you want to read them--by PAR to a recent special legislative committee chaired by Kenny Leithman, it was pointed out that there are fifty-three thousand, four hundred and thirty-eight children in need of special services in this state and that twenty-seven thousand of them have been evaluated, but, do you know what? The state does not have the resources or the facilities to serve those youngsters. Now, it seems to me that we're running a very dangerous risk exposing those twenty-seven thousand when we don't even have service for to the full effect and force of the law. Another report by the American Businessmen Research Foundation points out--and I had that here--points out that the newest problem drinker causing concern among the nation's directors and mental health workers is not a pressured executive; it's not a bored housewife; it's not a skidrow bum, but really children. They're saying, in effect, now, that we've got the problem of alcoholism among youngsters. Now, you take that in relationship to the problems that we're having with juveniles across the state. A third report by the State Department of Education.

In a report by the State Department of Education on suspensions that was done by, in particular, Rep. Alphonse Jackson and the committee and by Dean Stone, that in this state--and Alphonse, you correct me if I'm wrong--that just on suspension alone, that in the year 1972 that there were around thirty-three thousand, if I'm correct, youngsters who were suspended out of school. Now, how many of those youngsters are going to be exposed to the full effect of the law because now they can't get in school; they have been suspended. You take that in relationship to the juvenile problem. The fourth one, I'd like to point out that on the Subcommittee on Drug Abuse, which I had said before we got into standing committees, it was pointed out by the state commander of the Narcotics Union that if you go...you can go to every parish within this state. If they've just got a gas station and a grocery store in it, that you'll find the presence of marijuana and some other soft drugs. Now, what relationship does the drug problem have to the increase in juvenile crime problem and how we treat juveniles? Are we prepared to say that if somebody gives our youngster--just on one occasion, maybe at a party--give him a stick of marijuana and he smokes it, and he goes out...and something to do with that, he ought to be exposed to the full effect and force of the law? I've talked to one delegate this morning from a rural parish, and I suggested to him, I seriously think that once the drug problem be crystallized and some people stop hiding it in these rural parishes, you're going to really find out to the extent that youngsters nowadays are involved in a drug culture. In the New Orleans area where the clamor has originated, I would like to quote a portion of a report of the New Orleans Chamber of Commerce in their report on runaway crime. It says, in effect, that they are glad that we are now in the legislature is now beginning to do something about the crime problem. But, it cautions the legislature and persons who are concerned that we ought to not act in haste and we ought to not act in a fit of emotionalism and particularly in a fit of political expediency. I'd like to say that I've read this book here by the National Commission on Juvenile Delinquency, and that nowhere in this report does it say that we ought to abolish specialized courts. Finally, gentlemen, just let me say in closing my presentation that those who sincerely want to address themselves about the rising juvenile problem, I suggest as one delegate that we ought to be not confusing juvenile court with: 1, coordination of police department, our schools, our mental health centers, our parents, our corrections, and our hospitals; and that we ought to be about the business of establishing shelter houses, centers, family counseling centers. We are aiming at so-called criminally inclined youngsters, or the bad guys. All I have to say, gentlemen, at this point is what about the thousands of youngsters that are going to be exposed to what I consider a very political and emotional body; but those who come up with the argument about leave it to the legislature, if this matter had not been in legislature then I would be all wet in saying to you that I did not trust the legislature. I do trust it, but I'm saying that we've got a track record, and if that track record is going to be indicative of the kind of future legislation that youngsters are going to be exposed to, then I'm saying it is not worth it. It is not worth it. I, in my amendment, allows some flexibility to the legislature, but I'm suggesting to you that we ought not, as I've stated, we ought not use a shotgun approach because while we're aiming at the youngster who threw the brick with a shotgun, we can sure shoot down a whole lot of youngsters who just happen to be in the crowd.

Questions

MR. HAYES

Mr. Jackson, I don't know. You probably answered this question, but I want to get clear on it. "There shall be a juvenile court for each parish" does not mean one in each parish. Is that correct?

MR. J. JACKSON

That's right.

MR. HAYES

But, it would be mandatory that they would have access to one. It would take, say, East and West Feliciana, maybe, and St. Helena would probably have to get together and come up with a juvenile court.

MR. J. JACKSON

Mr. Hayes, presently under the present constitution, it says that there shall be a juvenile court in each parish. To me that was more restrictive and that it did bind some parishes, possibly having this one specific court. What this allows really is more flexibility because it allows like the parish of West Feliciana and maybe East Feliciana, if they don't want to use the district court as ex officio, and I think that's what they're doing now, that they could combine whatever resources they could necessarily...

MR. HAYES

Would this in any way affect the family court system in this parish?

MR. J. JACKSON

No, it does not.

MR. ALEXANDER

Rep. Jackson, on line 6, I think you, do you not want to correct that? You mean "except for capital crime or crimes defined as attempted aggravated rape." Isn't that what you mean to write there? That's on line 6.

MR. J. JACKSON

I'm sorry, Reverend, "except for crime..."

MR. ALEXANDER

"Except for crime or crimes defined," rather than "defining as attempted rape," you mean "defined."

MR. J. JACKSON

If you considered that a technical amendment, I'd checked with the staff on it and...

MR. ALEXANDER

O.K.

MR. J. JACKSON

...and they told me that in their opinion that what it meant to say that, you know, the crime was to be defined by the legislature, by law.

MR. ALEXANDER

All right. Now, this is the other question: there are some thirty or forty district courts in Louisiana which means that you just could be creating an additional thirty or forty juvenile courts. Now, most district courts, that is...it may be a court in a small parish and there may be two or three parishes that make up that district. Now, the judges, the number of judges in that district, of course, depend on the case load. Now, here you would separate all the juvenile cases, take all the juvenile cases away from that district court.

MR. J. JACKSON

No, Rev. Alexander. If you would look at the second paragraph, it states very clearly for those parishes that have district courts...

MR. ALEXANDER

No, that isn't what I'm saying. The only thing I'm saying is that you would not remove the district court, but you would take all the juvenile cases away from the district court.

MR. J. JACKSON

No, not district courts that presently serve as ex officio. If a district court is serving as ex officio juvenile court, then it's still retained. I'm not taking anything away from them.

MR. ALEXANDER

Well, in almost all the parishes, of course, where they have no family court or juvenile court...

MR. J. JACKSON

They have district courts.

MR. ALEXANDER

That's right, and they're serving as everything, aren't they?

MR. J. JACKSON

Yes, but they...right, and I'm not taking nothing away from them.

MR. ALEXANDER

Well, then, where will your jurisdiction come from?

MR. J. JACKSON

Rev., if you understand the process, there are district courts that sit ex officio and juvenile court and then they operate under the jurisdiction as provided in the constitution. All I'm saying is that I maintain the present provision as it relates to this. So, I don't affect them one way or another.

MR. ALEXANDER

But, they would not sit as juvenile courts any longer; is that right?

MR. J. JACKSON

Yes, they would, Rev.

MR. HENRY

Would you yield to a question to Mr. Fontenot? You're next, Ms. Maybuce; then you, Mr. Tobias, Mr. Giarrusso, Mr. Arnette, Burns, De Blieux, and Nunez.

112th Days Proceedings—January 8, 1974

MR. FONTENOT

Mr. Jackson, at the present time, a case where, say, a husband without any children is not supporting his wife. What court has that jurisdiction? Where she files charges for nonsupport? Does the juvenile court have jurisdiction over that, or does the district court have jurisdiction?

MR. J. JACKSON

It presently, if the husband is not supporting his wife, the juvenile court, does.

MR. FONTENOT

At the present time?

MR. J. JACKSON

Yes.

MR. FONTENOT

There's no kids involved at all, the juvenile court still has jurisdiction? I mean doesn't that depend on what parish it's in, or something like that?

MR. J. JACKSON

Well, in the parish of Orleans it is that way.

MR. FONTENOT

So, under this amendment, say, in Evangeline Parish, where, possibly the city court has jurisdiction over juvenile matters, at the present time and district court has jurisdiction over nonsupport of a wife, then you're changing that law in the sense that you're going to make that husband and wife go to city court, you're changing the jurisdiction of some of these courts, aren't you?

MR. J. JACKSON

Not really, Mr. Fontenot. Now, if you consider that a major problem, I would...I've talked with Mr. Pugh, and it's not our impression that it does. In addition, in the fact that we have basically followed the present provisions of the constitution, that what this does, this does not, in effect, does what you say.

MR. FONTENOT

Well, I may agree that maybe a husband who doesn't support his wife is acting juvenile, but I don't think it ought to be in juvenile court.

MS. MAYBUCE

Johnny, I can certainly agree with you that we need to do something about our juveniles and how they're treated in the court. We certainly need to get rid of the concentration camp up on Scenic Highway. I agree with you, and this will help do this. Yet, on the other hand, I think Mr. Hayes and Mr. Fontenot had touched on what I'm going to ask you. We here in East Baton Rouge Parish have a well-oiled, I believe, family court. When Dewey asked you the question, how would it affect our family court, you said it would not. But, I feel that the cases of nonsupport which go through our family courts, those of adoption, those of taking care of our mentally ill children, we want them left in our family court. But, you didn't answer him that way. Would that...would you take that out and say "except East Baton Rouge Parish"?

MR. J. JACKSON

I wouldn't mind doing that, but let me suggest to you, Mrs. Maybuce, that does not do that to East Baton Rouge Parish. Secondly, if you look under the Judiciary Article right now, all it says is that the Family Court of East Baton Rouge Parish could be as determined by the legislature, the jurisdiction, which means that by a simple majority everything that you have now could be wiped out. So, I'm just saying to you that in my discussion in putting together this amendment, it does not affect the Family Court of Baton Rouge.

MS. MAYBUCE

O.K. because we don't want it tampered with.

MR. J. JACKSON

I'll say that for the record.

MR. TOBIAS

Mr. Jackson, what is the present term of a juvenile court judge?

MR. J. JACKSON

Mr. Tobias, I think it's eight years. I'm not really...

MR. TOBIAS

It is in Orleans Parish. In the rest of the state it's six years. My next question is this: When you state in your amendment that the jurisdiction of the juvenile court is such and such--in other words, you spell it out--I would like to know how that protects the juvenile. All that does is state that the court has jurisdiction of it. It does not say that it protects the juvenile. In other words, do you not agree that the legislature could still, in spite of your amendment, allow juveniles to be sent to the penitentiary?

MR. J. JACKSON

Mr. Tobias, my amendment provides that if they commit vicious crimes that they can be tried in the district courts. Now, I told you earlier, I'm going to make it very plain, I do not want to--and I'll say it very seriously--the issues of the judges' salaries is a different thing. We're talking about the merits of constitutional jurisdiction for a juvenile court. I suggest to you very seriously, do not confuse the issue. I'm not going to get into that fight between the judges. I'm not going to allow juveniles because it seems to me that when we first introduced this amendment, we're talking about juvenile court jurisdiction. Now, we're talking about another problem that's come up about the judges' term. Now, if you want to deal with that in appropriate, let's reopen the Judiciary Article where it ought to be; and I will support you. But, don't try to do it on this amendment.

MR. GIARRUSSO

Delegate Jackson, where it says, "there shall be a juvenile court for each parish," do you think that this is imposing an added expense and burden on each parish where a juvenile court is not necessary, where the juvenile problem is not really predominant that would require a full-time judge?

MR. J. JACKSON

Well, Chief, no, not really because if you look at the present constitution, each parish is...it's stated very clearly that there shall be a juvenile court in each parish, and that did not mandate them. What this does is the opposite of what you say. It allows for a flexibility. It allows if they want to use the district court which most of them presently have now, serving in ex officio, that they could still retain that. But, this does not in any way mandate them that they have to...each individual parish has to mandate, have a specialized, separate, distinct, juvenile court.

MR. GIARRUSSO

O.K., John, let me ask you about number four where it says that...

MR. J. JACKSON

I just want to know if that point is...if I answered that clearly for you.

MR. GIARRUSSO

You know, it says, "shall be" and of course, it's my appreciation if it says that there shall be...

MR. J. JACKSON

The '21 Constitution says "there shall be a juvenile court in each parish." I say "for each parish" to allow the kinds of flexibility. Now, I'm just saying to you, Chief, that the questions that are raised concerning mandating added costs not really in my estimation in talking to experts and even people who are concerned, does not violate what parishes already have. If a parish has a district court saying that they're going to sit ex officio and they've been doing it for the years, then that's the juvenile court for that parish.

MR. GIARRUSSO

Well, I just simply thought that there could be better qualifying language rather than "shall be" but so be it. Let me just ask you another question, John, please. It says that a juvenile court may waive its jurisdiction over children fifteen years of age; does this mean that it may not waive its jurisdiction over juveniles, say, for example, if a capital crime is committed, and that the court decides, one, that they will hear the case, and if they do hear the case, is that they're then sentenced to the juvenile court? It doesn't come under the criminal statutes of the state and that he will be out when he's twenty-one years of age rather than to be tried as a criminal?

MR. J. JACKSON

Chief, if you--and I'm being very honest--I say it very clearly and the amendment says very clearly that if any youngsters commit a capital crime, whether it goes to the district court, he goes to the full effect of the law; if convicted, he can be sent to the state penitentiary or some other intermediate facility because the amendment says very clearly, "a capital crime." I'm saying that, and this was to address itself to the concerns of some delegates who said, well, we've got some kids who don't commit capital crimes, but they are incorrigible, and I don't have the resources in the juvenile court to deal with, and I think that they ought to be the district court. Then, I'll leave that determination up to the juvenile judge; and I say not only for capital crimes; I say it for any offense. So, it doesn't have to be a capital crime.

MR. GIARRUSSO

Under the present law, aren't all other crimes, other than capital crimes, assigned to the juvenile court, then tried in juvenile court?

MR. J. JACKSON

Right.

MR. GIARRUSSO

They're not tried for a crime, but they're tried as a delinquent. But, here you give the option to the judges that in the event that they choose it's a discretionary thing with them that in the event that they want to send the case to the criminal district court, that they can?

MR. J. JACKSON

Yes, Chief, you're right. You're exactly right, and you're right because it has been spoken by a large segment of these delegates that if we're going to talk about some flexibility that you're going to put it in the constitution, then there ought to be some flexibility. I'm just saying that if it's in the opinion of the juvenile judge that a youngster has committed twenty crimes within his discretion and I think that juvenile court judges and resources supportive of their court can make that determination and they feel that the youngster is incorrigible and ought not really be treated as a juvenile, then I'm allowing the mechanism for that judge to transfer it. I think that was done to address itself to those delegates who are really concerned about repeaters, who did not commit necessarily, capital crimes.

MR. GUARRUSSO

John, the only thing I say is that "jurisdiction" should be defined and should not be discretionary.

MR. J. JACKSON

Well, Chief, the only problem that we have in doing that is that if it's defined, it may leave out that provision, and I think I've defined it in giving the flexibility. Now, if a judge feels as though they ought not be, I would think that he would. But, under the 1921 Constitution, as I recall debating the practice that I was one of the criers, too, that the 1921 Constitution didn't allow for any mechanism for these youngsters to be transferred to district court if they were constant repeaters.

MR. ARNETTE

Johnny, my questions are more of a technical nature. I was just wondering, when you said "capital crimes," how do you define a capital crime?

MR. J. JACKSON

They are crimes presently provided by statute which are capital crimes.

MR. ARNETTE

Which involve a death penalty; is that the crimes you're talking about?

MR. J. JACKSON

...or about six months of hard labor.

MR. ARNETTE

Now, wait. What's your answer?

MR. J. JACKSON

Capital crimes, in talking with particularly, well, I'd say Mr. Gauthier now, but I did talk with him and I talked with Mr. Pugh. Capital crimes are those crimes, those felonies, those felonies that were punishable by a certain sentence, by hard labor six months or more.

MR. ARNETTE

I think the usual meaning is "punishable by death." I'd like to get this very, very clear. Do you intend to include life in prison, or perhaps a crime that involves ninety-nine years at hard labor, or something like this?

MR. J. JACKSON

Well, my intentions were--and I apologize to the group because I'm kind of weary up here, arguing this thing again, but I apologize to the group, and I don't want my ignorance to spout that large. I do recognize that capital crimes are punishable by death. But, it was the intention that this could apply to crimes punishable by death, or crimes that would have a determining amount of sentence, too.

MR. ARNETTE

Well, perhaps, if that was your intent, we ought to put it in here, that it was punishable by a certain amount or something else because I was greatly concerned when I read that you have attempted aggravated rape but not second degree murder which is an intentional crime, that you intend to actually murder somebody. You plan it ahead of time, and that was not included, and also the crime of armed robbery which involves a ninety-nine year sentence. That also concerns me.

MR. J. JACKSON

Mr. Arnette, what I will do is withdraw the amendment temporarily to add that technical amendment because that was my intention.

MR. ARNETTE

Well, I think we ought to make it clear because, you know, somebody's life may depend on it.

MR. J. JACKSON

Yes, I agree.

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

[Amendment withdrawn and resubmitted with correction.]

Further Discussion

MR. J. JACKSON

Mr. Chairman, delegates to the convention, in talking with the coauthors of this amendment, we are come to a consensus that once you start enumerating one crime, you've got to enumerate all of them. That is, in effect, statutory material. We believe very strongly that we do provide the mechanism, Mr. Arnette, within this amendment as to allow for youngsters who commit second degree murder, armed robbery as such, particularly if you look at paragraph 3 with the waive of the jurisdiction for him to be tried in district court. In one final comment, let me just say that I personally believe living with this amendment and living with this proposal, not only on paper, but just in terms of actual life, that we ought to weigh very seriously the merits of leaving in it, "providing constitutional jurisdiction for the court" as opposed to leaving it entirely in the hands of the legislature. I suggest to you very seriously that I don't want to leave a cat out on the fence because just as I mentioned before when our state takes some strong positions on drug laws that we are now, because it's coming close to home, have reviewed our penalties as it relates to marijuana. I suggest to you gentlemen that there are too many things out in this world that can subject a youngster on a one time occasion whereby if he falls into a trap of being influenced, that he could very well under--and I'm not talking about something that I think the legislature will do, something that I know and participated in as to what they have done that would drastically have an effect on them that will carry with them the rest of their life. If folks are contented enough to allow that to happen, then I suggest to you, so be it. But, I caution you very seriously that be not deceived by the smoke screen. If you believe this amendment has the kinds of flexibility, if you believe that this amendment compromises significantly my views and the opponents' views as it relates to the protection of juvenile courts...I mean constitutional protection for the jurisdiction of juvenile courts, then I suggest that you ought to favorably vote for it, and I'll abide by the will of this convention.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Jackson, you had really exceeded your time before, and we granted you this additional time just to make your remarks as to why you didn't amend it.

Further Discussion

MR. DENNIS

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, on behalf of a substantial majority of the Judiciary Committee, I rise in opposition to this amendment and this delegate proposal for the reason that, everything that Mr. Jackson wants to do can now be done under the Judiciary Article as it presently stands, and for the additional reason, that you have already considered twice before today his argument that we should spell out all of this in the constitution and you have decisively rejected it both times. Today is the third time that it is being considered. The first time was when the Judiciary Article came before you, he and others made several attempts to place into that article amendments just like this, or almost like this. Again, when he asked that this delegate proposal be passed to its third reading, we debated it then. We are now going to debate it for several hours today and even if he prevails, it will not end the debate on this issue because then there will be a conflict between the delegate proposal and the Judiciary Article and we will have to come back and probably take another day to resolve that conflict. Now, I think that you have already acted wisely in adopting what we have in the Judiciary Article and rejecting this detailed spelling-out of juvenile court provisions. The Judiciary Article now provides that the juvenile and family courts shall have such jurisdiction as the legislature shall provide by law. The reason you adopted that, I think, is that you recognized that this is an area of the law in which we must have some flexibility. As you already heard today, there are several different viewpoints about how . . . what we should do to handle our juvenile crime problem. Some people think that everyone under eighteen ought to be treated as a juvenile, other people think that juveniles as young as sixteen years old should be transferred to adult courts, if they commit certain types of crime. This is an area in our society which is changing rapidly; we must not freeze in the law because we need to have the flexibility to deal with today's problems, and remember we're writing a constitution. We may have an entirely different set of problems with our juveniles five or ten years from now. In addition to that, I think that the way Mr. Jackson has drafted his amendment raises even more problems; even if you buy his concept of spelling all of this out, I ask you to look carefully at this amendment because in all due respect to him I strongly disagree. I do not think it is clear that he is doing what he says he is doing. He starts off by saying that "there shall be a juvenile court for each parish." Now, to me, that means that there shall be a separate juvenile court for each parish; that means that we are creating sixty-four separate juvenile courts. Now, he says that the other language in here qualifies that, but I don't think it's clear and I don't many of you think it's clear. Also, I'm afraid when he says, "there shall be a juvenile court in each parish," that might mean that there's only going to be one juvenile court in each parish. That would be devastating because in parishes like mine where we have a district court sitting ex officio as a juvenile court and two city courts sitting ex officio as juvenile courts, we have in effect, three juvenile courts. Now, if this is going to say that there can only be one juvenile court in each parish this is going to make a drastic change in the way we handle juvenile cases in my parish and in many of your parishes. Also, I think that it is clear that he is giving jurisdiction to juvenile courts which are city courts in a lot of your parishes to handle adoption cases and criminal nonsupport cases. Now, heretofore, we have always considered these cases to be so serious that they should be handled by district courts. Now, in New Orleans they don't do that; they handle them in the juvenile court, I understand, but in other parishes we have felt that city courts ought not be handling these kind of cases. Thirdly, you will notice in the last paragraph, he has made it much more difficult for the legislature to ever make any changes in the juvenile courts; he has required two-thirds vote. You will recall in the Judiciary Article we did not establish any courts as constitutional courts below the district court level. The whole theory, the whole theme of the Judiciary Article is flexibility in the legislature below the district court level because times change and courts need to change with them. If you adopt this, this will cut across and remove the effect of what, I think, is the basic reform we have made in the Judiciary Article which is, to establish in the constitution only the top three courts and the rest of it can be changed and modernized by the legislature. Again, I say that everything. . . all of the problems that you have brought out, the questions, the things that have been said that need to be done with regard to juveniles can be done under the Judiciary Article, and what's more important, it can be changed in the future if there needs to be a change. I think this is an area in which we have got to trust the legislature to do what is right. We've got to trust the legislature to be able to deal with the problems as they change. So, I ask you to please, vote down this amendment and also the delegate proposal because it is a basic departure from what you have already decided on two other occasions.

Questions

MR. JACKSON, J.

Judge Dennis, is it, in fact, true, that this convention decisively by a super majority or a significant percentage on the first time defeated this amendment? Do you know what the vote was? It was by six votes; you call that decisive?

MR. DENNIS

I think it was decisive because this concept that you're trying to get across was tried not only once or twice by you, but by several other people, I believe, Mr. Gravel . . . would you let me answer the question, please. Several times it was tried and on each occasion it was defeated. I think that is a decisive decision.

MR. JACKSON, J.

Do you call from three to six votes decisive? Your answer is yes. Secondly, did you hear it in your committee. . . did your committee hear it?

MR. DENNIS

Yes, sir, we considered this problem for several days.

MR. JACKSON, J.

No. Did you hear my delegate proposal in your committee?

MR. DENNIS

Your delegate proposal? No. At your request, Mr. Jackson, because we had trouble. . .

MR. JACKSON, J.

Didn't have time, right.

MR. DENNIS

. . . because we had trouble getting a quorum, I asked the committee to report it out without action to give you a chance to run with it, and we did not consider it, and in my opinion if we had considered it, we would have reported it unfavorably. But, at the courtesy of the committee, we reported it out without action.

MR. JACKSON, J.

Judge, the point I'm really trying to make and I can understand your position, but the point I'm really trying to make that it is not entirely true when we say that this convention has decisively voted when one, the first vote was about from three to six votes. Second is that the committee reported it without action. Thirdly, when we're talking about moving it on to the final passage, I was not the one debating the merits for it, it was the opposition; all I asked was that it be moved down. Is that not true?

MR. DENNIS

. . . you're making an argument, but let me just repeat what I said earlier. I think when you defeat four or five amendments all along the same line attempting to change a committee proposal, that it has been decided decisively that the committee proposal is what the convention wants.

MRS. WARREN

Judge Dennis, I noticed or I believe you said, that you had three courts in your city. . . juvenile courts that handle juvenile cases?

MR. DENNIS

Well, in my parish.

MRS. WARREN

In your parish.

MR. DENNIS

In one of my parishes, I have three juvenile courts and in the other parish in my judicial district we have two. We have one city court, and a district court in one parish and another parish we have two city courts and one district court.

MRS. WARREN

But, in each . . . each parish then has a juvenile or family court?

112th Days Proceedings—January 8, 1974

MR. DENNIS

Each parish has more than one court. . .

MRS. WARREN

See, you're covering more than one parish, and I wasn't really thinking on that then, I was thinking about one particular city or municipality having three separate courts for juveniles.

MR. DENNIS

Well, in Monroe, we have one city court. In West Monroe we have a city court and we have a district court that covers that parish, so we have three courts acting as juvenile courts in Ouachita parish.

MRS. WARREN

So, each one. . . in Monroe they go to the Monroe courts.

MR. DENNIS

We all. . . of course, the city courts don't have jurisdiction outside of the city. The district court has jurisdiction over the whole parish. But, by agreement we allow the city court judges to handle juveniles who live within the city. We could reach out and take jurisdiction of all of them, but we. . . they help us-- I mean the case load is enough; we've got enough to do just handling the juveniles outside the city.

I just wanted to point out that Mr. Landry had just handed me the Journal and if I'm reading it correctly here, Mr. Jackson's amendment was defeated by a vote of 74 to 34, so I think that is a decisive. . . well, one of the amendments dealing with the juvenile courts.

Further Discussion

MR. DERBES

Ladies and gentlemen, I'd like to take this opportunity to support the Jackson amendment and explain to you my reasons for doing so. It is true that we have considered this matter on several previous occasions. On every previous occasion I have been opposed to amendments and to provisions which would constitutionalize the jurisdiction of juvenile court. On this particular occasion I find that this amendment provides sufficient flexibility and sufficient recognition of a basic principle that I can indeed support it. That principle is essentially that the jurisdiction of juvenile court should be set forth in this Louisiana Constitution and if it were not set forth in this constitution, the legislature may on impulse change that jurisdiction by a majority vote. What enables me to support the Jackson amendment is the waiver provision. That is something which would be new to our law, but which has been tried successfully in many other jurisdictions throughout this United States. In this particular instance, the exact jurisdiction currently maintaining in the state would continue; that is, everyone under the age of seventeen would be tried in juvenile court except those people charged with capital crimes or crimes defining attempt aggravated rape. If they are over fifteen, they would be tried in a district court. Furthermore, the amendment as it is presently cast, would permit in instances where a child is fifteen years of age or older, the legislature may provide a waiver system whereby the juvenile court would decide whether or not it would try the child and if it decided in the negative, the appropriate district court would try the child in accordance with presently established or legislatively established adult procedures. I'd like to answer some of the charges advanced against this amendment. First, that it would create a conflict which would have to be resolved in Style and Drafting. I think that is indeed a weak argument to advance against something which is so important. I suggest to you that we have decided and provided elsewhere in other provisions of this document that notwithstanding certain things we have done in other sections, particular principles should apply. That is all that we have done here. I do not see a serious conflict, a conflict which would require a great deal of time to resolve. Secondly, I take issue with the opponents of the amendment who suggest to you that it would disrupt ordinary and existing juvenile court activity in respective parishes. It would seem to me that the second paragraph of this amendment very clearly provides that those juvenile courts in existence at the time of this constitution will continue. I do have some minor criticisms of the amendment, but I have prepared an amendment which is not before you to cure what I regard as two minor defects. I will submit that amendment and have it distributed in the event that this amendment passes. I have also prepared an amendment which will accomplish essentially the same purpose in different language in the event that this amendment passes; that amendment has been distributed to you. I do not imply by the distribution of that amendment that I oppose the one that is currently before you; in fact, I support it. The problem of dealing with children who are accused of crimes in this state is a very serious one. It deserves great consideration and, in my opinion, it deserves the constitutionalization of juvenile court jurisdiction provided that there is built in sufficient flexibility that the legislature can handle the problem by a change in procedures. But, I do think that it is absolutely necessary for us to set forth basic age limitations in the constitution and this amendment does so. I urge its adoption.

Questions

MR. BURNS

Mr. Derbes, down there in the last sentence under Number 4, where it would waive jurisdiction of children fifteen years of age or older at the time the commission of the offense who may then be tried as adults. Unless the law has changed, they used to try juveniles in juvenile court on the basis of affidavits only, right?

MR. DERBES

That's correct.

MR. BURNS

Well, what would you do if you transferred that juvenile over into the district court as an. . . and try him as an adult, you couldn't try him in district court except under an indictment of bill of information?

MR. DERBES

Well, the jurisdiction would be waived. In other words, the legislature would put together a package, Mr. Burns, a package of legislation which would be passed by a super majority of the legislature and that package would say, first, that based on certain criteria, on recidivism, on seriousness of the crime, on the circumstances of the crime, that the juvenile court's jurisdiction could then be waived--you want to listen, Mr. Burns-- if you want the answer, I'll be glad to give it to you.

MR. BURNS

I believe, so far, your answer doesn't answer the question I had.

MR. DERBES

Well, maybe I'm on the road to it, Mr. Burns, if you'd just wait one second. Then the legislature could also provide that once the jurisdiction of the juvenile court is waived by the juvenile judge based on certain criteria, that then the district attorney could indict the person by virtue of a bill of information or a grand jury indictment. It seems to me to be a procedure that is eminently feasible.

MR. DUVAL

Jim, for the record I just want to get something clear. Now, the way this reads, is it possible that it would call for the creation of a different juvenile court in each parish. . . a separate and distinct juvenile court in each parish?

MR. DERBES

I think not, Mr. Duval, and I. . . I don't believe that's Mr. Jackson's intention. I'd like to point out to you that all the language in the first paragraph, as sloppy as it may be, is the language of the existing constitution. That's why Mr. Jackson chose it and it's the language under which we've been operating for some time now.

MR. DUVAL

But, whatever happens it's your impression that it's certainly not the intent. . . to create a separate and distinct juvenile court.

MR. DERBES

As a supporter of the amendment, and as an attorney, I believe that under the language of the amendment taken as a whole it would not require the creation of a separate juvenile court in each parish. It would preserve the existing separate juvenile courts and would permit existing other courts who operate ex officio juvenile to continue to do so.

Further Discussion

MR. PUGH

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise in favor of this amendment, both as a coauthor thereof and with what I believe to be some knowledge about the field and the subject to which this amendment has been addressed. First off, for the purpose of setting at rest any misunderstanding that may have been created as a result of the suggestion from this podium that the use of the language

"there shall be a juvenile court for each parish," necessarily means that there is being created by this amendment a brand new set of courts throughout the State of Louisiana, that language is, and has been, in our constitution since 1936, without question, without qualification, word for word, has been there since 1936. This state has had the pleasure of having juvenile courts since 1906. The first one of which was created for the benefit of Orleans Parish. There are three specialized juvenile courts in the State of Louisiana today. Except for those district judges sit ex officio as juvenile judges. The present constitution does state that those judges who shall sit ex officio as juvenile judges. The failure to recite that language here has no bearing on whether or not new courts are being created. In a nutshell, the proposition before you is one: shall we continue in existence, with constitutional, jurisdictional status, the juvenile courts as we know them today? Tell me what thing has occurred since this convention was called to suggest that a system known to this law since 1906 no longer has any usefulness in our system. Now, as I told you once before, for some strange reason, we left the district courts in the constitution. We left their jurisdictional status in the constitution and spelled it out ad infinitum. We did the same thing for the courts of appeal. We did the same thing for the supreme court. So, what we're doing here, let's not kid ourselves, you throw this to the legislature and it's all over with by a majority vote. It was attempted in the last session of the legislature and the only reason they weren't successful is because the governor had the foresight to realize that there was a constitutional, jurisdictional requirement and that that jurisdiction could not be shifted or banded about by the legislature. It's cut and dried, that's it. We either want juvenile courts or we don't want juvenile courts and we'll probably make a decision within the next half an hour of whether or not we want juvenile courts. I say there's a place and there's a need for them. But, in all of our wisdom, if we make a mistake—look what Johnny Jackson has provided—if it's so bad, he says, "Okay, let the legislature by a two-thirds vote take them away." Let this onus be on the legislature. Let this cup pass to another. We came here at a time that our constitution spelled out jurisdictional status for the courts and there's absolutely no reason why the constitution shouldn't have it. You take away jurisdiction from a court, you take away its blood. That's like a haberdasher selling a hat and keeping the hat and giving you the hatband; they've got nothing—they've got nothing under the Judicial Article as it stands today.

Motion

MR. JACKSON, A.

Mr. Vice-Chairman, this is such a serious problem affecting the lives of children generations yet unborn, I would suggest that we have an absence of a quorum.

[Quorum Call: 81 delegates present and a quorum.]

Further Discussion

MR. JACKSON, A.

Mr. Vice-Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, this is a serious problem that we consider this day, and I would ask for about five minutes of your attention because I believe that what we do in the next few minutes will seriously affect the lives of young people in the State of Louisiana. Now, I know that you have heard arguments here about why we ought not to constitutionalize the jurisdiction of the juvenile court. But, I tell you that I serve in the distinguished House of Representatives of this state and I'm honored to be there, but I tell you that that is a political body as it should be and it makes political decisions. If you do not constitutionalize authority for juvenile courts, you're going to have the legislature of this state reacting and over-reacting to emotional situations and making laws that all of us will live to regret. Now, let me point out to you that the original package of legislation that was introduced in the last session. . . last regular session of the state legislature. As the bills were originally introduced would have placed a youngster for stealing a watermelon out of a country patch in Angola. I dare say that many of you would have found yourself there had not we had some authority for juvenile courts. I point this out because I do not fault the legislature for making a political decision because we had had an emotional situation in New Orleans, but I tell you that generations unborn were saved because the authority was constitutionalized. Now, the distinguished delegate said that we ought not to do this because we would have conflict with a past article already passed. Are we to the point in this country that we disregard the whole future of youngsters? Are we going to assign youngsters to long records and have it follow them the rest of their lives simply because we don't want to take time to give full consideration to an important matter? Now, we have problems emanating from youthful offenders that we have never had before, and so it makes no sense at all for us to say that we do not have to have a specialized court to deal with them. Mr. Jackson pointed out to you the increased numbers of youngsters that are now suspended and expelled from school. His information was not as current as the facts are. In 1972, we suspended over a hundred thousand youngsters from the schools of this state. On the figures. . . preliminary figures for 1973 would suggest that the figure is going to be higher. I would suggest to you that that in itself would suggest to us that we have rather serious problems that ought to suggest to us that we must be creative in terms of dealing with this situation. Now, I'm a politician, and I'm not about to stand here and tell you that we don't have a problem, but we do have a problem, but we've all got to solve the problem by dating the method that we deal with youthful offenders in this state by a hundred years. This is what you are about to do when you destroy specialized courts and specialized consideration for youthful offenders; you're about to date this thing about a hundred years and I speak to you as an individual who for twenty years studied the problems of youthful offenders. I would suggest to you that this proposal allows for flexibility. It allows for us to be creative. It allows for us to deal with the growing problems that we have in the area of youthful offenders. I would suggest to you that I don't believe any of you want your son or your daughter or the son or daughter of one of your friends, assigned to a life that would suggest that he was a habitual criminal or that he was engaged in crime simply because he went astray on one occasion. I don't believe any of us would, by way of our action in this convention, suggest that we don't want to find a way to rehabilitate youngsters, and we don't want to find a way to be understanding. We don't find a way to say to youngsters that we care. When we destroy the specialized courts in this country and in this state we turn our back on a serious problem that cannot be solved by way of the existing district and criminal courts that we have in this state. So, I would ask that you would vote for this amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. LANDRUM

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I was somewhat reluctant to come up here because I think we have heard some very fine reasons why we should support this amendment. I was just thinking a few years back when my little boy was about five years of age and my daughter was about nine. A man that owns a tobacco factory was running behind an eleven year old boy that stole a twenty dollar radio out of his car, grabbed my son and daughter and some other little kids in front of the church with a pistol in his hand. Now, when he caught the boy, some blocks away, he walked back with the boy to his place of business and called for the police. Now, my children was all upset—the children at my church. When I went around there, there's a guy walking around; he has done something real proud, big. I asked the officer in charge. . . I wanted the man to know—now, maybe Chief Giarrusso might remember this, because they had to call his office on it—I wanted that man to know if someone would steal his store, never to point a pistol in my child's face. Not only my child, but nobody's child. The policeman was very, very angry about it—very angry about it. He brought. . . he put the man in jail too. But, I am the one that went to the judge and asked the judge—when I went to court that morning, that man and his wife sat in the court afraid, just as a child would be afraid, because he didn't know what was going to happen to him—but I asked the judge not to put the man in jail. All I wanted him to let him know he has no right to do this sort of thing. I had attorneys trying to get me to sue the man. I got a great case. But, I wasn't interested in suing the man, either. Somewhere in life we have to show some mercy towards one another. If we cannot do it for young people, then America is already lost. I don't believe that we just want to put young people in a position, a crime is committed at an early age of life, nowhere in life can that child be forgiven for the crime. I think we need to go to our juvenile courts. We really need to do. . . to go to juvenile courts. I'm so sorry that this convention did not visit Pineville and Angola and all the other institutions. Then, we could have come here and tried to do some things that are right for people, whether we be elected again to office or not. But, I keep telling you, please God first of all—please God.

I think the Jackson amendment and those who are coauthors with him is a very good amendment. I think it's watered down too much, but I'm going to support it as it is. Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I want you to very carefully consider this amendment, because I'm afraid of the effect it will have upon our courts here in East

112th Days Proceedings—January 8, 1974

Baton Rouge Parish. We have a peculiar situation here in East Baton Rouge Parish. I think it's the only court in the state like that. But, our court is strictly a family court. It handles anything pertaining to family relations, domestic relations, which naturally includes juvenile matters. It includes divorce cases; it includes support cases; boards neglected children, the crimes of juveniles, or whatever they may be. I just have the feeling that when this particular amendment was drafted, they did not take that into consideration. I have. . .I can't help but feel like that it will have a very detrimental effect upon the already established court which has been operating since 1954.

For that particular reason, I must oppose this amendment and ask you to do likewise, because I think you don't want to upset what is already being done. I recognize they've got a problem, but certainly the amendment should have been drawn with consideration of all the courts, the way they are operated now, in mind at the time it was prepared. Until they can prepare an amendment which will not have an adverse effect upon the Family Court of East Baton Rouge Parish, I have no alternative except to oppose the amendment. I ask you to please do likewise.

Questions

MRS. WARREN

Yes, Senator De Blieux. I'm picking up bits and pieces, and I remember one of the other delegates mentioned that this is the same thing that was in the old constitution. I'm almost sure your courts in Baton Rouge were set up under this old constitution. Now, what is going to keep it from staying as it is, if this is the same thing that we've had? Just for the information, not whether you're against it or for it, but if you. . .if this is the same thing that we have had in the constitution, your courts are set up under it, so how is this going to affect it? Is it going to make them illegal, because you set them up under it?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, I do not think that, as I read the amendment, Mrs. Warren, it does not make enough separation between the existing courts. Now, you take in practically every court where you don't. . . every judicial district where you don't have a juveniles established court, the local district judge acts as the local juvenile judge, or the city court judge, as it may be. Now, that is not the case in East Baton Rouge Parish; I don't think it's the case in Orleans Parish because you have an established juvenile court there. It's not the situation in Caddo Parish. But, in other parishes where you don't have a regular established juvenile court, then the district judge acts as the juvenile court. Now, this particular amendment, as I see it, will say that those courts will continue acting as juvenile courts. I just think that it's going to have too great an effect upon our court in order to make it advisable that I support it. I have to oppose it for that reason.

MR. PUGH

Mr. De Blieux, you do recognize the fact that this amendment relates to juvenile courts, do you not?

MR. DE BLIEUX

That's right.

MR. PUGH

You do recognize that you don't have a juvenile court in East Baton Rouge Parish?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, we have in this respect: that it handles all juvenile matters.

MR. PUGH

It's called a family court, and it's under an entirely different section and article in both the old constitution and in the committee's treatment of the present constitution.

MR. DE BLIEUX

But, it makes the. . .the amendment makes no reference to the preservation of present juvenile courts.

MR. PUGH

But, that's not a juvenile court, just like the amendment makes no reference to the Supreme Court or to the city court, or the district court, or to the courts of appeal. The Baton Rouge court is a family court and is in an entirely different section and article in both the old constitution and their treatment under the new constitution.

MR. DE BLIEUX

I'm just afraid the way the amendment is read, here. I've spoken to other attorneys on the same matter, and they have also had that same fear.

MR. J. JACKSON

Senator, since we're talking an amendment--we're not calling for the sixty-seven vote, we're just talking about an amendment--couldn't it be very well that if you are that concerned that this does not include the language, that you could just offer a very simple amendment?

MR. DE BLIEUX

I'm not getting your question right. Would you state. . .restate. . .

MR. J. JACKSON

My question is that this is an amendment that we're discussing at this point--an amendment. Now, Mr. Pugh has given you his interpretation not only as a lawyer, but an authority who has wrote several books on juvenile courts and jurisprudence as such. Wouldn't it be very simple, Senator--and I would have no objections; I want to let you know I would have no objection--if you want to put a simple amendment that says that the Family Court of East Baton Rouge--if you need further clarification--that the Family Court of East Baton Rouge is hereby, as constituted, retained. That's just a very simple amendment, if you feel that you need that. I would, and I think the cosauthors and the proponents of this, if you think you need that additional clarification, we'll do that. But, I don't want you to feel as though that that amendment is aimed at denying the Family Courts of Baton Rouge its protection, because under the present provisions in the Judiciary Article, a majority vote of the legislature could change that just like that; did you know?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, Mr. Jackson, if you would incorporate that into your amendment, then I would have no objection to it. But, until that is incorporated, actually incorporated, I really wouldn't want to take the chance.

Further Discussion

MR. TOBIAS

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I hesitate to rise in opposition to this amendment. I was a member of the Committee on Judiciary of this convention, and for two solid days we debated the question of how to handle the juvenile court issue. After much debate, we finally decided that there was no satisfactory way to treat it in a constitution. This type of decision over jurisdiction has to be left to the legislature. It is indeed unfortunate. This provision does not protect the juvenile. It does not prohibit the legislature at all from saying that juveniles, for violation of crimes, can be sent to the Louisiana State Penitentiary. All this amendment does is protect the court--just the court. We are not here to protect courts, we are here to protect the people.

Read Section 15 of the Judiciary Article that we've adopted. It continues juvenile courts. Read the fourth line in the final paragraph of the Jackson amendment. Think about this: what criteria is set by this amendment with respect to waiving jurisdiction? I don't see any criteria. You're leaving it arbitrary to the judge. The flexibility must be kept in the system. I urge you, stick with what we've done. We've passed on this issue over and over again. The Judiciary Committee found no satisfactory way to handle it. I urge you to defeat this amendment.

Questions

MR. PUGH

Mr. Tobias, how is it that you all found no difficulty in establishing the jurisdiction for the district court, for the court of appeal and the Supreme Court, but even guided by the present constitution that we've had almost for forty years on this subject you found so much difficulty in laying out the juvenile court jurisdiction?

MR. TOBIAS

Mr. Pugh, the problem with laying it out is the present constitution does not allow a judge of a juvenile court to waive jurisdiction over people over the age of fifteen. We didn't want to freeze into the constitution the age of fifteen. It's arbitrary. The judge of juvenile courts ought to have the right to waive it at fourteen, or thirteen, or twelve. But, we don't want to freeze it here and now. The time has. . .the flexibility has got to remain in the constitution--it's got to remain.

MR. PUGH

Don't you think that it's not frozen if under Jackson's amendment it provides that the legislature can change it by a two-thirds vote? Does that sound to you like it's frozen?

MR. TOBIAS

You're spelling out something that I think has got to be left to the legislature. The flexibility has got to remain. It doesn't protect the juvenile. All it does is protect the court. There's a no. . . Do you see, Mr. Pugh, anything in this proposal, in this section, that would say that juveniles can't be sent to the penitentiary? This only says the court has jurisdiction over the matter.

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Tobias, you mentioned the fact that it wasn't any protection for those juveniles. I'm wondering if you want protection for the juveniles.

MR. TOBIAS

I. . .

MRS. WARREN

My next question is: you said it was unfortunate. Now, what is unfortunate about this situation? Unfortunate for who?

MR. TOBIAS

It's protecting the courts, and I'm not here to protect courts. I'm here to protect people.

MRS. WARREN

So, in order to keep a court from being protected, it should not be in the constitution? So, in other words, no courts should be in the constitution. It should all be left to the legislature.

MR. TOBIAS

If it had been left to me, I moved for that in the . . . on the committee. That was my concept.

MRS. WARREN

But, in essence of that, since you were one, and the others thought that these should be protected, don't you think they should think, under the same grounds, that this one should too?

MR. GAUTHIER

Max, can the legislature abolish a district court at any time?

MR. TOBIAS

No.

MR. GAUTHIER

Under this amendment, can the legislature abolish a juvenile court?

MR. TOBIAS

Under the proposal that the committee came up with and adopted on the floor, the juvenile court, the city courts, all of the courts except district courts, courts of appeal, etc., can be abolished.

MR. GAUTHIER

No, I'm not talking about. . . I'm talking about this amendment, because you indicated, if I'm not mistaken, that we were protecting the court far beyond what we should. Yet, I see a difference in that under this proposal juvenile courts can actually be abolished, whereas there is no way to do that to a district court.

MR. TOBIAS

Let me ask you this: why do you believe, though?

MR. GAUTHIER

No, it's my turn to ask the question.

[Previous Question ordered. Quorum
Call: 81 delegates present and a quorum.]

Closing

MR. J. JACKSON

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, first of all, it's very obvious now that some of the issues have changed from some of the people. . .

It's very obvious and it's very apparent to me, at this point, that those who raised issues back in September and November concerning the original amendment have come up to date with some new concerns. I don't. . . I guess this can go on and on and on. I'll candidly say to you that look, the amendment does not do what people have said it would do. So, my position is very. . . and I suggest to you, you know, if you are against allowing providing for the jurisdiction of juvenile court in the constitution, just say you're against it. Don't hide it in some other sort of smoke screen. If you say. . . if you are against providing that juvenile courts--and I take strong opposition to Mr. Tobias when he says that we got the interest of the court at heart. There's nowhere in the world can we list all the procedures that the legislature can do in terms of proceedings and matters of the juvenile court. That should not be in the constitution. He alone should know that. I suggest to you gentlemen, very strongly, we have provided--and I question very seriously, if we provide for the Supreme Court, the court of appeal to the district court, and particularly since there is a rising adult problem, how in the world can we say that we can justify for district courts but we can't say it for juvenile courts? My understanding is that there are more adult criminals and there's more of a serious problem among adults than there are among juveniles.

Now, I suggest to you that most of the issues--and I respect some of the opposition because I think there was some real concern, but I want to say it very clearly: who are we writing this constitution for--who are we writing it for? Are we writing it for this present generation alone, or for future generations? Are we that so much concerned about incidents that we are ready to expose not only those juveniles that commit vicious crimes to adult records and the full effect of the law, but everybody? Do we not recognize the impact of drugs among youngsters? Do we not recognize the fact of emotionally disturbed among youngsters? Do we not recognize, very seriously, the kinds of problems that we're having now as a result of suspensions? I say this committee made it up in its mind that they wanted three courts, and that was it. No consideration whatsoever about trying to work out something within the constitution to allow for constitutional jurisdiction for juvenile courts.

Again, Judge, and folks, I will not. . . and I say that it's unfortunately. . . that the problem was created in New Orleans. But, however, the judges from New Orleans have said, "Yes, you're right. The problem did crystallize in New Orleans. But look here, even us, we have sent you a communication saying that there ought to be constitutional jurisdiction." There have been problems in Jefferson, but even the judge of Jefferson has written a letter saying that to maintain semblance of jurisdiction. That judge said at the time he wrote the letter that I wouldn't yield under sixteen. But, yet and still, I have yielded since then. Now, I have tried very seriously, gentlemen, to address myself to each and every concern of each of the delegates in opposition to this amendment. I should say very seriously that there were certain delegates that wouldn't even sit across the table and talk to me about their reservations. I had to get it from notes that they had made in terms of drawing up a platform of opposition. Now, I say to you, this is very dangerous--it is very dangerous. I'm confident, very confident, that those of us who have supported some constitutional status for juvenile court feel that we have fought a good fight, and we're going to continue to fight. But, I'm saying to you that it's very risky, and that for every concern--and I think the utmost concern is about juveniles not getting in the way with vicious crime--you show me in that amendment where they can go before a district court--show me where they can go. Show me where I abolish your district courts that are serving as ex officio courts. Even Mr. Tobias said in this remark: that the present constitution didn't allow for waiver of jurisdiction. I allowed for it. You read 15 (A), you go back and read 15 (A). They say very clearly that the district court shall have exclusive original jurisdiction over all felony cases. Can the legislature pass a statute concerning juveniles? I wonder can you do it. Now, they don't want to open up the Judiciary Article, and I can understand why, 'cause they don't want somebody to touch some of the sacred things. But, I suggest that is not a reform. I suggest, as Representative Alphonse Jackson say, that is a move back into history, a move back into the past. You explain it very seriously when one of your sons or one of your kids get arrested, and somebody want to force him and force the equal application under the law to him. That's his first time, because he went to a party; somebody gave him something to drink; he did something foolish. But, yet and still, you know, the legislature provides that on certain offenses that this person must be tried. If he's not convicted--and I say it again--how many applications do you know of inquire about arrest records? How far can an arrest record, not necessarily a conviction record, how far can an arrest record go in destroying somebody's life? I suggest to you that it's going to come home to roost. I suggest to you that you not be committed just because somebody won three tiers. If three tiers is so good, now why was there never a move in the legislature to introduce a constitutional amendment to do it? It's a smoke screen. I ask the favorable adoption of the amendment.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

Questions

MR. DENNIS

Johnny, a couple of speakers said that this is the same language as in the present constitution. I'm sure they did not mean that it's the same exact language. I know you've tried to present the same meaning. But you do agree it is not the same exact language; don't you?

MR. J. JACKSON

Judge, if you'll look at the first section of the constitution except for the words "for", that is basically the same wording.

MR. DENNIS

Would you have....I'd like to read you the first two sentences of the Section 52, "There shall be a juvenile court for every parish of the state except as otherwise provided for the parishes of Orleans and Caddo, the judges of the district courts shall be ex officio judges of the juvenile court for the parish or parishes within the district in all cases where the legislature has not established separate juvenile courts." Then, that section goes on for two more pages. I think that additional two pages plus the difference in language that I've just read to you makes much more clear what is intended than what is in your amendment. Don't you agree that this is...that you have not really given the same exact language, I know you are trying to?

MR. J. JACKSON

I disagree, Judge, on the basis that when you talk about the other course with the exception of Orleans and Jefferson, if you look at the second paragraph it says that courts who presently serve ex officio juvenile court, Judge, are hereby retained. If you look at that, Judge, that is basically the same thing you are saying.

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Derbes sends up amendments at the present time.

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, delete lines 12 through 23, both inclusive, in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Section _____. Juvenile Courts

Section _____. (A) Jurisdiction. The juvenile courts shall have jurisdiction, except for capital crimes and crimes defined by any law defining attempted aggravated rape if committed by children fifteen years of age or older, of cases of the State of Louisiana in the interest of children under seventeen years of age, brought before said courts as delinquent or neglected children. However, by law enacted by a vote of two-thirds of the elected members of each house, a procedure may be established whereby the juvenile court may waive its jurisdiction over children fifteen years of age or older at the time of the commission of any offense so that they may be tried as adults in the district court. They shall also have such other jurisdiction as is now or may hereafter be granted to them by law."

"(B) Merger and Abolition. Notwithstanding the provisions of Section 15 of this Article, the legislature may by law merge juvenile courts into district or family courts; and may, by law enacted by vote of two-thirds of the elected members of each house, abolish juvenile courts."

Explanation

MR. DERBES

Ladies and gentlemen, this is a slightly different and, I hope, acceptable approach to the problem. This says nothing about adoption; says nothing about non-support; says nothing about criminal neglected family; it leaves all of that up to the legislature. It does, however--and, Mr. Landry, I would like to point out to you that it will not disturb in anyway the jurisdiction over your local city courts over adoption or any present jurisdiction that any courts have--this does, however, constitutionalize the principle that children shall be tried in the juvenile courts and it includes in addition thereto flexibility whereby the legislature may establish a system of waiver. Now, waiver is a new concept to our state and I do not intend to effectuate the waiver by this provision. I merely give the legislature the latitude to do so. Presently, the juvenile courts in this state cannot waive their jurisdiction in favor of any other court. Under the committee proposal as we've adopted it, the legislature may do anything that they please with juvenile court, they are not limited in any way. This would say that if a child is fifteen years of age or younger he must be tried in juvenile court regardless of the offense. If a child is over fifteen and under seventeen, he must be tried in adult court if he has committed a capital crime or attempt aggravated rape, that's the present law. Furthermore, it says that the legislature may establish a system, a procedural system, which implicitly would be based on objective criteria to be implemented by the judge whereby the jurisdiction of juvenile court in the instances of children over the age of fifteen would be waived in favor of the adult court. This would take care of, in my opinion, of recidivists of habitual offenders, of children who have committed serious crimes which are not necessarily capital in nature, but it would nevertheless give the juvenile courts those sitting ex officio and those sitting independently some basic constitutional grant of jurisdiction which would not be subject to impulsive derogation on the part of the legislature. I point out further that the second amendment that's before you now is considerably less restrictive than Mr. Jackson's amendment. My Amendment No. 2 on the page in front of you says that by a majority vote the legislature may merge juvenile courts into district courts or family courts, they don't need a super majority. So, this would essentially agree with what the committee proposed and also agree with what we've done so far with the exception of the fact that juvenile courts could not be merged into city courts or other courts than district or family courts. Finally, it requires that only by a two-thirds vote of the legislature may juvenile courts be abolished. So, what would happen if both of these amendments passed? You would have a constitutionalization of the age limitation and jurisdiction with flexibility to deal with the habitual offenders and with the requirement that only by a two-thirds vote of the legislature may juvenile courts be abolished and by a majority vote of the legislature juvenile courts may be merged into family or district courts. I see no substantial objection....I can contemplate no substantial objection to either of these amendments. I point out to you that the amendments are divisible. So, if you agree with the principle that the age limitation of juvenile court should be constitutionalized, as I do, you should vote for Amendment No. 1. If you have problems with the abolition of juvenile court and you want to make it easier for the legislature to implement a three-tier system, then you may have some objections to Amendment No. 2. But, nevertheless, Amendment No. 2 does give the legislature the opportunity to abolish by a two-thirds vote and to merge by a majority vote. I thank you for your consideration late in the day on a matter that's been before you for some time. I think it is important. I do not believe and do not anticipate that there would be serious objection to these particular amendments. I certainly urge your support of Amendment No. 1 and further of Amendment No. 2. I'll yield to any questions.

Further Discussion

MR. PUGH

Fellow delegates, I rise in support of the amendment. I do so and take your time because I feel so strongly for the need that we specify in this constitution some jurisdiction for juvenile courts; it's an important matter; it has been with us, as I pointed out earlier, since 1906. I suggest to you that it's important enough to now give it some seventeen lines in the constitution. Think back over the last four or five months as to many, many items that got page after page after page in the constitution without any serious dispute or difficulty. Is not the matter relating to juveniles not worth at least seventeen lines? I would like to speak no longer because I would like to have the opportunity of answering any questions from anyone who may raise them. I will suggest to those of you who are from East Baton Rouge Parish--East Baton Rouge Parish has a family court, it has an entirely different and separate jurisdiction from either a district court or a juvenile court. This in no manner addresses itself to the problem or problems in the East Baton Rouge Parish courts. If those from East Baton Rouge Parish wish to give the dignity to their court that has been attempted to do here for the juvenile court, I, for one, will speak for it and will certainly vote for it. Are there any questions?

Further Discussion

MR. DENNIS

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, again on behalf of the Judiciary Committee and the majority of its members I must rise in opposition to these amendments. These amendments are the same thing basically in substance as was presented in Johnny Jackson's amendment. Mr. Derbes has, I admit, cleared up many of the smaller problems that were contained by the drafting in Mr. Jackson's amendment but still it is a reversal, a flip-flop away from the basic decision that you made when we considered the Judiciary Article, that we debated so long and hard on. You decided that because of the need of flexibility in this area that you would not tie the hands of the legislature, that you would not distrust the legislature to deal with the area of juvenile law. I submit to you that there have been no new arguments, no new information presented to you since we made that decision which would justify such a drastic reversal. I submit to you that if one is counter to the basic theory of the Judiciary Article that we adopted. Also, I want to remind you in these closing days of the convention when our time is running short that we should strive not to create any more conflicts than necessary in what we have already done because each one of those conflicts will have to be dealt with again. If we pass this amendment or this delegate proposal, it will definitely create a conflict with the Judicial Article that has already been adopted. We will have to come back and probably spend another day on this issue again. I don't think you need to do that because I think you considered all of these arguments, all of this information back when we adopted the Judiciary Article. I think you made a wise decision. So, I'll ask you to stick with it and vote this amendment down and also the delegate proposal.

Questions

MR. PUGH

Judge Dennis, you indicate that this amendment reflects some disgust of the legislature. Was there any reason that the district court jurisdiction was put into the constitution? Couldn't we have left it out or did we distrust....the legislature when it related to the district court jurisdiction?

MR. DENNIS

Well, we have vested a lot of power in the legislature to affect district court jurisdiction. Our whole idea--I realize you disagree with me, you keep saying this over and over--but I'll just have to say to you that we felt that the top three courts should be established in the constitution. Personally, Mr. Pugh, I would have been willing to leave the structure of the district courts and the courts of appeal up to the legislature the way the U. S. Constitution leaves those kinds of courts up to the Congress; but, I was in the minority on that. The committee after hearing hundreds of people speak to us, from within this state and without, opted for a basic constitutional court system of three courts plus other courts to be set up by legislative act or changed by legislative law in order to keep up with the times. This juvenile court is one of those courts. You might have people who think that city court jurisdiction, or family court jurisdiction, or any number of these special courts should be in the constitution but the committee and I think this convention has come to an agreement on one occasion that we should constitutionalize the top three courts and leave the others to be changed by the legislature.

MR. PUGH

I noticed you're talking about the top three courts twice, you're talking about the district court being of greater import than the juvenile court and then the courts of appeal and the Supreme Court; is that what you are doing?

MR. DENNIS

Yes. These are our basic courts, the other courts are specialized courts.

MR. ABRAHAM

Jim, one short question. You said there would be a conflict with the Judiciary Article. Could you explain to me, I can't see any room for conflict or for any violence being done to the Judiciary Article because Section 15 says that "The family and juvenile courts existing at the time of the adoption of this constitution are retained and that the legislature may abolish the trial courts by a majority vote." The only thing I see different here is that it would take a two-thirds vote to abolish the juvenile courts. I'm confused on this, could you explain it to me?

MR. DENNIS

Flip over and read Section, I believe, it's 18 where it says that "The legislature shall establish the jurisdiction for family and juvenile courts." This amendment and delegate proposal takes away from the legislature the power to change juvenile court jurisdiction by the route of ordinary legislation; it puts protections on it and writes age limits in there that are not written in Section 18.

MR. J. JACKSON

Judge, trying to pursue Mr. Pugh's question, on what basis, seriously, on what basis does the district court have more import than that of the juvenile court when particularly almost half of the population of this state are juveniles. Now, other than that reason, what greater import does it have?

MR. DENNIS

It has no greater import; it is a basic part of structure.

The way we have written the Judiciary Article you can take any function that is now being served by a specialized court and handle it as a division of the district court. Now, the Judiciary Article doesn't require that but modern thinking is that this gives you better service and a better form of justice. We have allowed the legislature this option to go in this direction rather than stop it.

MR. J. JACKSON

Judge, if that's the case....

MR. DENNIS

But, maybe I should say this further, it's very difficult to say that handling juveniles is more or less important than trying adults for murder or handling adoptions, they are all important. That is the basic idea of having a unified court system is that all of these things are just as important as others and they ought to be handled by a judge having the same rank and dispensing the same quality of justice.

MR. J. JACKSON

So, in other words, Judge, what you are saying is that was an arbitrary decision based upon whether the committee wanted to cut it off at and that a court, which is America's only contribution to the judiciary system is not worth the constitution and jurisdiction?

MR. DENNIS

No, Mr. Jackson, we merely presented a view to this convention. Our view was that part-time judges such as some of our city judges maybe we should think about not letting them handle juvenile cases in the future because they are....

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. DERBES

Ladies and gentlemen, I respect the pride of authorship which the Committee on the Judiciary expresses here when they oppose this particular amendment. I suggest to you that the three tiers of which they speak could more appropriately be three tiers shared in the interest of juveniles of this state rather than the three-tier court system we've been hearing so much about. Now, I think that this constitution is an adequate and a good place to set forth the jurisdiction, the basic jurisdiction over the children of this state. I submit to you that this is a problem with which we should all have due concern and consideration. It is likely that the children of some of us will indeed for one reason or another have reason to go to juvenile court, whether it's for a trial on delinquency or for a minor traffic offense, it's something that we can all be concerned about and something which affects a great deal of the citizens of this state. There is nothing in this amendment to in anyway confuse the issue of adoption or nonsupport or a criminal neglected family. There is nothing in this amendment which prevents the kind of merger that the committee on the Judiciary encouraged and supported and set forth in their committee proposal. The only basic two premises in this particular amendment are: (1) an age limitation with sufficient flexibility for waiver and (2) a provision that requires a two-thirds vote of the legislature for the abolition of the courts. It would seem to me that this is the least that this convention can do in order to clearly set forth the jurisdiction of the courts in which the children of this state should be handled, that is all that the amendment asks. Judge Dennis apparently referred to various conflicts which the amendment would create. I suggest to you that his answer to Mr. Abraham's question illustrates that the conflicts are minimal. I further suggest to you that the propositions involved in this amendment are simple and with which we can all agree. I urge your favorable consideration.

Questions

MR. JACKSON

Jim, don't you feel that it's somewhat ironic that in the city of New Orleans when a problem was crystallized and even the judges of those courts who recognized the problem as suggested jurisdiction that at present right now for those parishes who feel that my amendment drastically affected their situation that what you do right now by not adopting your amendment is to jeopardize the juvenile court situation that has particularly been indicated by some of the questions raised here in the city of New Orleans?

MR. DERBES

Yes.

MR. GIARRUSSO

Jim, do you think that the present laws give the judges the necessary flexibility that they need to handle juveniles for rehabilitation, for proper sentences and everything?

MR. DERBES

Joe, we've got to distinguish between the present laws that are on the books and the books that we are working on here. The present laws, which are on the books, in my opinion having worked in juvenile court for more than four years now do not give the judges sufficient flexibility. The committee proposal that we have passed which would leave all of the juvenile courts jurisdiction to the legislature would give the judges sufficient flexibility provided that the legislature saw fit to do so; it's a matter of trusting the legislature to provide the juvenile court with the sufficient tools and techniques. This amendment tries to do so with flexibility but with specific limitations.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mrs. Warren sends up amendments at this time.

Amendment No. 1. On page 1. . . The copies are not out yet. They will be distributed here in just a moment.

On page 1, delete lines 12 through 23, both inclusive, in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Section 38. Jurisdiction of juvenile and family courts shall be as provided in Sections 52 and 53 of Article VII of the Constitution of 1921, as existing on the effective date of this constitution."

Explanation

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Chairman and delegates to this convention, in January of last year we started a long journey, and now we are coming to the closing of this journey. We have come to a dangerous intersection. I'm going to try to do something now that I have not ever tried to do before. I'm going to try to please everybody in this convention, even though I am reminded of a story of a man and a little boy who started out on a donkey many years ago. The man started out and he put his little boy on the donkey. As they reached the first town, they ran into a group of people who began to laugh and say how stupid it was for an old man to be walking and a little boy riding. So, the old man got down off the donkey. . . the little boy got down off the donkey and the old man got on. They journeyed on. When they got to the next town, a laugh came again that an old man was riding while a little boy was walking. So, the old man decided that they both would get on the donkey. They both got on the donkey and they began to ride. When they got to the next town, the laugh came again. How sad it was for the two to be riding a poor old donkey. So, the old man said, "We'll both get down." They got a stick and they tied the legs of the donkey, and they began to carry the donkey. So, when they got to the next town, they got another laugh; how stupid it was for these two people to be carrying a donkey. So, the old man got down and he cut the strings and he let the donkey loose. He put the little boy back on top of the donkey, as he had started out in the beginning. He said to himself, "he who tries to please everybody, pleases nobody."

But, I am going to try to please all of you. I heard Senator De Blieux said that this amendment would affect the courts in Baton Rouge. I heard Judge Dennis said how it was going to affect his area. Many are wondering how this thing is going to affect them. So, I say to you, let's keep it like we've got it, and let's make everybody happy. You have what you want and I have what I want.

I'll yield to any questions.

Point of Information

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Chairman, I just want to understand the status of the convention. After a delegate proposal is defeated--and this is certainly no reflection on Mrs. Warren's amendment, but I want to understand how this whole convention is going to operate--does that mean that amendments which are not delegate proposals can be introduced ad infinitum, or what is our parliamentary status?

MR. HENRY

Well, what Mrs. Warren has done. . . the delegate proposal has never been defeated, it's never been voted on, Mr. Duval. There have been two sets of amendments to amend this section of this proposal, both of which have been defeated. As I appreciate what Mrs. Warren is doing, now, she's coming in with another amendment to this section.

MR. DUVAL

I see. So, we could just offer amendments to the delegate proposal. . .

MR. HENRY

Just like you all have always done during this convention, Mr. Duval.

Questions

MR. DENNIS

Mrs. Warren, you are, as I understand it, you're attempting to make sure that the juvenile and family courts we have now are continued.

MRS. WARREN

Right. And to make you happy and all of the rest of you. You seem to be happy with what you've got. It seems to be good and working in your area. I'd like to see you keep it.

MR. DENNIS

Well, I. . . we share that concern on the Judiciary Committee. Did you know that Section 15 of the Judiciary Article that we passed says that "the district, parish, magistrate, city, family and juvenile courts existing at the time of the adoption of this constitution are retained"? Did you know that?

MRS. WARREN

I didn't keep up that much with it, Judge Dennis, but I tell you the truth, as I stand here and I heard one debate behind the other, and I decided once I wasn't going to get up because juveniles and their problems--just the very word "juvenile" says to me this: that this person is not mature. When it comes to crime or delinquency, it means that person needs some help and needs some specialized help. I didn't want any way that they would delete the juvenile courts from our constitution.

[Motion for the Previous Question on the entire subject matter rejected:
5-52.]

Further Discussion

MR. DENNIS

Mr. Chairman, I do hate to take the time, but I think. . . I just want to make it clear that the Judiciary Committee feels, and still does feel, that we have done everything Mrs. Warren is seeking to do in Section 15 by saying that all of these courts are retained.

Question

MR. JENKINS

Judge Dennis, just for clarity purposes, thus we should not agree to this because this is really different from what the committee has approved inasmuch as this would continue the jurisdiction in constitutional form, whereas the jurisdiction is continued in statutory form under the judiciary proposal. Is that correct?

MR. DENNIS

Yes, you are correct. I should have pointed that out, also.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, Judge Dennis pointed out exactly what I was thinking: that it wasn't in the constitution and he didn't want it in here. Other. . . but, he wanted his other courts in here. So, our juveniles are not important enough to be in the constitution. So, this is why I came back with the amendment. I wanted to convince myself and convince you that the issue is not that we've got it, we want to keep it. I'm asking you for a favorable vote on this amendment.

[Amendment rejected: 24-64. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

MR. POYNTER

Judge Dennis, you want to go with yours, or you just want to . . .

MR. HENRY
Read them.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER
Amendment No. 1. On page 1, delete lines 5 through 23, both inclusive, in their entirety.

Explanation

MR. DENNIS
Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I did not offer this amendment to delete the delegate. . .the substance of the delegate proposal earlier, because out of courtesy to Mr. Jackson, I wanted him to have the opportunity to present his amendment and debate it, with it before you. But, I think if I'm right--I may be wrong--but I think I sense that you agree with what we have in the Judiciary Article already. So, I'd like to give you this opportunity to terminate this debate and settle this issue so that we can move on to something else. So, I ask you to adopt this amendment which would delete the substance of the delegate proposal and will, in effect, defeat it.

Further Discussion

MR. J. JACKSON
Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen, I rise in opposition to the amendment to delete. Let me just say very seriously that it's inconceivable to me, very seriously, sitting here as a delegate, that in the expediency of time that we are willing to risk the future of our generation. Let me also say that I recognize the business of this convention is important. Lord behold, let me be the one to stymie that progress. But, I suggest that we're making a very serious mistake. I think it's going to be very difficult--very difficult--behind some other things that we have done to say to somebody, very serious, that we are writing a constitution that is futuristic in nature, that's rewriting a constitution that's supposed to provide for the adequate judicial administration of our court. That somehow or another, the question is posed to you, very seriously, "Well, how can, with the increasing adult problem, you provide for constitutional jurisdiction of district courts and not give some semblance of constitutionality to juvenile courts?" You may try to technically talk about my amendment; you may try to technically bring out the defects in the Derbes amendment. But, see, there's one thing that you won't be able to correct. You're not going to be able to correct, very seriously in my estimation, the kind of long-range adverse effect it's going to have, not on the intentional offender, but seriously, on youngsters who are victims or the prey of the kind of society that we live in. If you say or tell me that there's not going to be the opportunity where one youngster is going to fall victim to what we've done in the judiciary, if you can assure me of that, then I'll say we ought not continue to try to resolve this problem.

I suggest to you that the amendment to delete is not an amendment to give me full consideration on this issue. You know, that's just like me telling my neighbor, "You vote for it and I'll vote against it or I'll vote for it and you vote against it." Ladies and gentlemen, I thank and I'd like to compliment all the delegates who have wearily struggled on with this important question. I suggest to you very seriously that it's a question of the magnitude that even I don't understand the depths of. It was so important that even some of the authors of the legislation that was introduced took their name off because they began to see what were the possibilities. Just let some youngster get. . . Well, I don't want to keep giving you examples. But, I say to you that it's hard, it's very hard. I don't mind losing, but it's very hard and it's unconceivable in any stretch of the imagination when we can provide for constitutional protection for retirement systems and some of the things that we've done for special interest groups, that we can't even provide the semblance of it for half of the population that must live, in the future, under this constitution. I just can't. . .nobody can explain it to me. It's not that my mind is closed, but I just can't do it in comparison with some of the other vested interests that we've got embedded in this constitution, even to the extent that we've embedded it to allow a two-thirds vote of the legislature making it, as someone said, difficult to remove. I just can't understand it.

I ask you to reject this amendment and I'll return it to the calendar. If such time that this convention's got some laxity to talk about this issue again, I don't want to see it die of the kind of death the Judge is proposing by this amendment. I suggest that we defeat the amendment and then return it to the calendar.

Question

MR. LANDRUM
Mr. Jackson, don't you think that at this time that we should adjourn until tomorrow, and probably with better minds maybe we could work something out overnight to present to this body that would be acceptable to the delegates?

MR. J. JACKSON
Rev., I would say to all the delegates who are about that kind of business that I'll be willing to do that. But, you're going to hear the argument that that's just going to delay us, and I would hope that we could do it. I'm saying to you that I have sincerely, conscientiously, even to the point of reaching some delegates by the arm and saying, "What's the problem? Tell me." I just. . .I don't know. I think that it's so embedded at this point, that some folks have just got their mind that a reform is a reform. That what we're trying to do is not of importance to constitutionality and the constitution.

Point of Order

MR. TOBIAS
There's nothing left of the proposal. It's deleted the enacting clause; it's deleted everything providing; there's no committee for it to go to. It has nothing.

[Motion to return Delegate Proposal No. 43 to the calendar adopted: 46-40.
Motion to call Delegate Proposal No. 17 from the calendar adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Proposal

MR. POYNTER
Delegate Proposal No. 17, introduced by Delegate Planchard: A proposal making provisions prohibiting lotteries. "Section 14 of Article 11. Neither the state nor any of its political subdivisions shall conduct a lottery."

Explanation

MR. PLANCHARD
Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I reluctantly bring up my proposal right now because it seems to be a dark Tuesday for delegate proposals. But, my proposal, if you've read it, is a very simple proposal, but one which I feel is very important to put into this constitution. It's very few words, but this is the one area which I was approached about on many, many occasions. I must admit at the outset that where I first observed this was in the general provisions of the present constitution referring to gambling. There is a phrase in the present constitution strictly pertaining to lotteries. It goes a bit farther than my proposal, itself. In the present language, it says, "lotteries and the sale of lottery tickets are prohibited in this state." That means all lotteries. Now, I felt that it's very important to state in very plain language that the State of Louisiana nor any of its subdivisions should ever conduct a lottery. First, because I feel that this is not the proper way to finance state government. The governor thought of the idea some time ago, before the last special session. He mentioned the lottery because he felt that this was maybe a new way to get revenue for the state. I think you all know the opposition that he had. He appointed a commission to look into it for him, and they reported back--they reported back to him unfavorably. I think the reason is very good because in the first place you're talking about the means of supplying new sources to the state for about twenty million dollars, maybe twenty-three million. No one knows how much it would cost--and they've had many, many estimates--how much it would cost for the administration of a lottery in Louisiana. Another thing about relying upon this type of financing is the fact that you cannot really rely upon it. There is no way that you can actually state how much money that you will obtain from a lottery each year. It's not the same thing as a tax. A tax, you can predict. The taxing methods, revenue bonds or bond producing funds is the proper way to go about financing state government. Last but not least, the opposition to the lottery is on a moral ground. Now, if you want to cause political suicide, you propose a lottery in this state, because they are afraid of the infiltration from people without the state and the unscrupulous individuals that it may bring in. The people who have to suffer when you have a lottery is not the big boy, the one that you usually try to go after, because he's got the income. You tax him. . .

112th Days Proceedings—January 8, 1974

What I was about to say is the lottery only takes from those who cannot afford it, or that can afford it least. It's that little man that really can't afford even the two dollars that he would usually put on a lottery ticket. Now, I know already as soon as I yield this floor that there are amendments coming forth. I know that I have probably opened the door to a lot of amendments concerning gambling in the State of Louisiana. I know for the next hour and a half that we'll probably discuss gambling. It is not my intention, with this amendment, to affect the gambling section. All I can say is, folks, for the next hour and a half, just hang on. But, I would appreciate your consideration on this proposal as I have written it. I ask for its favorable vote.

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

Questions

MR. ABRAHAM

A. J., what do you think would be the end result if assuming you did have a lottery and you raised twenty million dollars and this money went for a teacher pay raise, let's say, and then three years from now you only raise ten million dollars by a lottery? Wouldn't that mean an automatic increase in taxes before it was over with?

MR. PLANCHARD

It seems to me it would have to. Yes.

MR. FAYARD

Mr. Planchard, assuming that this proposal fails, does this mean that the State of Louisiana will be under a lottery system or a lottery will be conducted in Louisiana?

MR. PLANCHARD

It means that they can.

MR. FAYARD

Means how can it?

MR. PLANCHARD

Because there's no mention. . . there's no mention of the lottery in Louisiana.

MR. FAYARD

But, what would it take?

MR. PLANCHARD

Or prohibition against.

MR. FAYARD

What would it take to be able to conduct a lottery in Louisiana if this would fail?

MR. PLANCHARD

Well, the legislature would have to pass an act . . .

MR. FAYARD

In other words, this proposal would place a limitation on the legislature, is that correct?

MR. PLANCHARD

Yes, it would.

MR. FAYARD

Now, what would happen if a political subdivision would conduct a lottery under this proposal? What does this proposal do to that political subdivision?

MR. PLANCHARD

I have not gone that far as far as trying to set out the legislation on it, or the penalty for such, that I leave to the legislature, but I think it important for us to express to the legislature that this is one of the things that we are going to prohibit.

MR. FAYARD

What I'm trying to get at is just exactly what does this do besides put a limitation on the legislature as far as the state is concerned? It provides no penalty does it?

MR. PLANCHARD

No, it does not. That's what I'm saying again.

MR. FAYARD

Well, are you putting it forth as a political move and an effort to pacify certain people who are against lotteries in an effort to sell the constitution?

MR. PLANCHARD

No, I am not.

MR. FAYARD

Are you in favor of also an amendment to this to prohibit gambling or the other vices that are enumerated under the present section of the constitution, or are you going to stick with this proposal?

MR. PLANCHARD

Oh, I'm going to stick with my proposal, if anyone else wants to amend it, they may.

MR. AVANT

Mr. Planchard, if this provision was in the constitution and a local governmental subdivision got the bright idea that they were going to sell lottery tickets and conduct a lottery, don't you think that a taxpayer could bring a suit to enjoin any such operation?

MR. PLANCHARD

Yes, sir, sure do.
I yield to Mr. Goldman.

MR. GOLDMAN

Mr. Planchard, is there any provision for defining what a lottery is? What is a lottery?

MR. PLANCHARD

I wish I knew, Mr. Goldman. I wish I knew.
All I can say it's a form of gambling.

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Planchard, does this mean that a political subdivision could have a poker tournament, but it just couldn't have a lottery?

MR. PLANCHARD

I'm sorry. I didn't get that.

MR. DUVAL

I said, could a political subdivision have a big poker tournament, but it just can't have a lottery? Is that what it means?

MR. PLANCHARD

That means they. . . if you don't say anything to prohibit that poker tournament they certainly could have one.

MR. DUVAL

What makes a lottery more insidious than a poker tournament, or off-track betting or any other type of gambling . . .

MR. PLANCHARD

I think you'll find that off-track betting is a form of lottery that you sell the lottery tickets for it.

MR. DUVAL

Is bingo a lottery?

MR. PLANCHARD

No.

MR. DUVAL

You're sure? You draw lots, don't you, you draw numbers. I mean I'm just wondering what this means.

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Planchard, this provision would not prohibit the state from legalizing private lotteries and then taxing them, would it?

MR. PLANCHARD

No, it would not.

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Planchard, what would be the case. . . how would your provision apply in the case where a private corporation was in a lottery and donated the proceeds to the government?

MR. PLANCHARD

Ms. Zervigon, in answer to your question, my provision as written, I'm not referring to that. I'm referring only to the states and subdivisions.

112th Days Proceedings—January 8, 1974

MS. ZERVIGON

Well, what about the case in which the state would contract with a private company to run a lottery, but the company would really run the lottery?

Amendment No. 4. On page 1, line 10, add the following: "Lotteries and the sale of lottery tickets are prohibited in this state."

Point of Order

MR. PLANCHARD

I think that you'd have to say if the state allows them to do it that's the same thing as doing it themselves. I think that would be prohibited by this constitution.

MR. FAYARD

Mr. Planchard, in response to a question asked by Delegate Jenkins, you replied that this would not prohibit the state from authorizing a private individual to conduct lotteries. Is that correct? Is that true? I want to make sure I understood that.

MR. PLANCHARD

That's correct. If you notice that my proposal is a delegate proposal which is presented to the finance section, and in discussing finances in the State of Louisiana is why I put in this proposal in this form. This is not a general provision. It's not the general provision that you find in the gambling section or article as in the present constitution.

MR. FAYARD

Well, by this, do you mean that it is all right for the legislature by a majority vote to authorize a private company to engage in lottery, so long as the state taxes it, but the state itself cannot enter into a lottery under its own auspices. . . . under their own control or the state government itself or a political subdivision under a governmental control.

MR. PLANCHARD

What we're doing is . . .

MR. FAYARD

It appears to me that you'd open the door to private lotteries, but prohibiting political weight entering it.

MR. PLANCHARD

There's nothing in this proposal which does prohibit a private lottery, but I know that there's an amendment coming forth to do that.

Personal Privilege

MR. GOLDMAN

Mr. Acting Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of this convention, I ask for this point of personal privilege and I hope you don't think I'm being facetious or silly, but I'd like to point out to you that there is a federal definition of a lottery. Under the federal law --public law-- a lottery is prohibited by the federal government and the definition of a lottery under federal law is "anything that has the following three elements is a lottery, consideration, prize and chance." I submit that we're pretty silly in talking about lotteries unless we really define it in the most specific sort of way because when a man runs for public office in this state according to the definition-- a federal definition of a lottery, a lottery is being conducted, first of all . . .

MR. CASEY

Now, Mr. Goldman, I recognized you on personal privilege, I'm not sure that it's appropriate for you to be arguing the merits of the proposal right now. If you wish to submit an amendment I think you're entitled to do so. If you wish to argue the merits of the proposal, you're entitled to do so.

MR. GOLDMAN

I'm not doing that, I'm just explaining what a lottery is according to public law. If I'm out of order, I'll step down.

MR. CASEY

I think so, Mr. Goldman.

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Burns, Smith and others send up amendments at the present time.

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 4, at the end of the line, delete the period "." insert the following: "and gambling."

Amendment No. 2. On page 1, line 7, at the end of the line, add the following: "; Gambling".

Amendment No. 3. On page 1, delete lines 8 and 9, in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Section 14. Gambling is a vice and the legislature shall pass laws to suppress it."

MR. O'NEILL

Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order. My point of order is that these amendments are not germane to the proposal as it is presented before us. My second point of order is that this delegate proposal, the amendments as they are written, have been presented to a committee that is, my Committee on Legislative Powers and Functions, and there they were deferred. Now, I'd like you to rule on whether or not these amendments are germane to this provision because I think that gambling is a totally different thing prohibiting gambling than is prohibiting a lottery.

Ruling of the Chair

MR. CASEY

Mr. O'Neill, the Chair rules that the amendments are germane, and I think it's appropriate that they be submitted at this time.

Explanation

MR. BURNS

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, Mr. Planchard as I understand it rather introduced his proposal back several months ago when a trial balloon had been sent up with reference to a suggestion that perhaps the state might consider going into the lottery business to raise money for the school-teachers, which has since been accomplished by the raise in gas and oil taxes. Subsequent to that, knowing the wishes or feeling that I know the wishes of a vast segment of the people of Louisiana, I prepared the present amendment. Now, what I would like to say at the very beginning of my remarks that this is not anything new, this is not anything that I thought up or conceived or prepared. The wording of this amendment in Section 3 and in Section 4 is the exact language that's in the present constitution. Would you believe that there has been a lottery section in the Constitution of the State of Louisiana since 1845 with a short interval and a very sad and tragic interval I might say in the history of Louisiana because back in the middle part of the last century the legislature . . . the constitution of the state that was held at that time voted to legalize lottery on the grounds that it would benefit. The proceeds would go to Charity Hospital and that was done. Lo and behold the first year that the lottery was in operation the first full year that the Charity Hospital got the magnificent sum of twelve thousand dollars and I don't believe it ever increased as long as the lotteries remained legal. In 1879, the people of the State of Louisiana became so aroused over the fraud and scandal, and shakedowns and payoffs, that they called a constitutional convention to rescind the lottery amendment section of the constitution. In that election, the lottery interest only got two thousand votes in the entire State of Louisiana and the lottery was put to an end once and for all. That's the way it's been up to this very moment. So, that is why I say ladies and gentlemen that this amendment is not anything new, this has been in the constitution of the State of Louisiana for over a hundred years. Now, I want to say this statement and I wish you would listen to this because I know this is the basis for perhaps some opposition. This is not going to affect in any way racehorse track, or pari-mutuel racehorse betting in the State of Louisiana, that has been taken care of by an act of the legislature, I have it here some place--and as you know, the state . . . the tracks are operating throughout the entire State of Louisiana with legal sanction. That's the way the law is now and this amendment is not going to change that in any way. I would like for you to call your attention to the fact that this amendment is not going to in any way affect bingo games that are being operated by churches at church fairs, American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Volunteer Fire Department, this is the law on the books today, and those bingo games and other games of chance are being operated openly and without any interference, and that's the way it will continue. Here just recently, it was suggested that the state go in the lottery business --and I'm not going to read all this-- but the governor's . . . here's a report, a recommendation on the governor's council of economic advisors, recommended very strongly that the State of Louisiana give up any idea of engaging in the lottery business and this is some of the excerpts in that report. "In view of the public opposition to the measure which has already been expressed, a lottery hardly seems worth the political effort and sacrifice involved in its establishment. Report, then cite the corruption infested Louisiana Lottery Company of the late 1800's as a reason the game appears too politically sensitive to be worth the effort." Now, ladies and gentlemen, I don't know whether you know it or not, I tried to show it, it's not going to hurt anything because it's not going to change any of the laws that are not in existence today. But, I don't know whether you know it or not, but to a large segment of the citizens of the State of Louisiana the very word, "lottery" is repulsive. I have here in my hand a copy of an article that went to I don't know how many hundred thousand church people throughout the State of Louisiana, and the headline is "Flash, Urgent" with reference to the various amendments that we're discussing here this afternoon. Now, I don't think where an amendment is not going to change anything, it's not going to add anything on to the present law, it's not going to put any further restrictions over and above what we already have and as I say we're people that like horse racing, they're enjoying horse racing, they're enjoying pari-mutuel betting. The people that like bingo games are enjoying them, so why by the actions of this committee, or this convention, especially with reference to the lottery article; why do we want to go out of our way and invite the open and active opposition of that large percentage of the citizens of this state who are absolutely, definitely opposed to lottery, that just as sure as we do it, we're going to get that opposition and I'm not saying that as a threat because they have documents here to show their sentiment? So, I ask you, ladies and gentlemen how can we go to the people when we finish this document. . . this constitution and present it to them without the present lottery article in it, because if we do, they have no other way to construe our actions. But, by our eliminating it from the present constitution or the new constitution, we are thereby -- and I agree with them-- we are thereby putting our stamp of approval on lotteries, and they're not going to accept it. So, I ask you,--and this is the strongest argument I know--if this is going to change the law, if this is going to put some . . .

But, all I'm asking is that we retain the law just . . .

Chairman Henry in the Chair

MR. HENRY

All right. You have a question, Mr. Avant?

Questions

MR. AVANT

Mr. Burns, you've explained to the convention that your amendment restores to the constitution, or the proposed constitution the exact language of Article XIX, Section 8 of the Constitution of 1921, except with respect . . . except one sentence dealing with agricultural futures.

MR. BURNS

That's right, and that was done. . . left out, Mr. Avant, because of the soybean interest in the state. It was thought that they would be affected by that, so we left that out.

MR. AVANT

Now, isn't it a fact that anybody who is afraid that this is going to keep them from having a private poker game in their home, or have a crap game at a fish fry or something like that don't have anything to worry about because the Supreme Court has said, that since there is no definition of gambling in the constitution, it's up to the legislature to define it, and that they have the right to define it? The only way they have defined it is when it is conducted as a business; isn't that right?

MR. BURNS

That's right.

MR. AVANT

Isn't it a fact that if you take this out of the constitution, it can be construed in no other way than that this convention is inviting the legislature to open up gambling as a commercial business operation in this state?

MR. BURNS

That's right-- and I repeat once more-- in answer to your question, this is not going to change one thing that we don't have at the present time except that it will keep it in the constitution and satisfy the voters when they go to the polls to vote on this constitution.

Further Discussion

MR. SMITH

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I know all of you are tired, been here all day, I've been here to, but I feel like this is a very important amendment. I'm much in favor of it. I coauthored it. I want to see it passed, and I feel as strong about this amendment and this legislation as anything in the legislature. I feel that the language should be put back in the constitution like it was in 1921. I see no reason to take it out unless you want to legalize gambling, that's just that simple. If we leave this out, the legislature in the future can legalize gambling and we don't want that in the state. I've had more letters and more people to talk to me on this, that they want this in the constitution. You say, well, it doesn't belong in there; neither did the three dollar car license some of us thought, but we put that in there. Gentlemen, I think, if you put this in the constitution, you're going a long ways towards helping pass it, and I certainly want to see it passed. I know a lot of you are against this amendment, but you want to see the constitution passed. Please, gentlemen, let's go ahead and put this back in the constitution. It's not putting it back. You took it out. I was on the committee. This came up before Revenue, Finance and Taxation. It was voted down. It went through the Legislative Committee, was voted down. So, the only way we could come in on this was on this lottery amendment here. I feel like the people of our state, gentlemen, feel like we must have this. We're not doing anything like Mr. Burns says, we're not putting some in there. It's already in there. You're taking it out. I feel like if it's not passed, that we're going to have a hard time. Like he says, this doesn't change anything. This doesn't prohibit pari-mutuel betting on the track nor does it prohibit bingo, but it's a statement in our constitution that tells people that we. . . that gambling is a vice and the legislature should pass laws to suppress it. I don't see how any of you can vote against it.

Questions

MR. FONTENOT

Mr. Smith, what is your definition of gambling?

MR. SMITH

Well, I can tell you a definition of lottery. I think that's what you. . . it's where it's defined as somewhere you have a prize and a chance and a price. It's gambling.

MR. FONTENOT

Do you have a definition of gambling?

MR. SMITH

No, sir. I couldn't . . . definition just exact definition, but you know what it is as well as I do. You can define it.

MR. FONTENOT

Okay. I mean for the record, I'm just trying to distinguish what is some gambling . . . something that you do is gambling or not, like a bingo game at a church, is that . . . do you consider that gambling?

MR. SMITH

No, sir.

MR. FONTENOT

Do you consider a private poker game at my house gambling?

MR. SMITH

No, sir, unless it's a house game.

MR. FONTENOT

Do you consider a poker game at a bar or a lounge in the backroom gambling?

MR. SMITH

Well, I'm not going to start answering all these questions. I think you're doing it . . . I think you're doubtful about voting for this.

MR. FONTENOT

No, it was for the record. I just wanted to distinguish what are some gambling vices and what are not, Mr. Smith. I'm just trying to get something in the record to show what we intend as gambling and what is not.

MR. SMITH

Well, I'm not an expert on the definition of gambling, but I know that we should put this in -- whether you're from North Louisiana, or South Louisiana-- our people feel very strongly about this up in our area and this is one of the things they want in there. So, gentlemen, I feel like we're going to hurt ourselves if we don't put this in our constitution. Leave it like it is. Just don't take it out.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Smith, the thing that concerns me about this. Isn't gambling presently prohibited in our Criminal Code?

MR. SMITH

Yes, sir, I think so.

MR. LANIER

Now, murder also is prohibited in our Criminal Code, isn't it?

MR. SMITH

That's right.

MR. LANIER

Do you think that by not including this in the new constitution it would be encouraging the legislature to repeal the gambling law more than it would be to encourage them to repeal the murder law because murder is not included in this amendment?

MR. SMITH

Well, I think, it would encourage them on the gambling law. Yes, sir. Of course, murder is something else, there are people who don't like that, but they like gambling.

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Smith, up in your area recently, or for the past four or five years, I don't know whether you consider track, off-track on track betting gambling or not, and a lot of people don't, pari-mutuel winners are not considered gambling, but I heard for years that they . . . your area, up there in the Bossier area, they did not want a racetrack, there was bitterness on both sides. So they finally decided the best they could do-- isn't this the truth-- that the best thing to do is be submitted to the people and it passed overwhelmingly, and you now have a track up there, don't you?

MR. SMITH

Well, that's not in Caddo, that's in Bossier Parish.

MR. NUNEZ

Well, I'm saying up in that, in that area, in that corner of the country.

MR. SMITH

I don't think it was overwhelming. I think it was very. . . but that has nothing to do with the gambling.

MR. NUNEZ

Well, I think, it's significant that the people when they finally got a chance to vote and other people talking for them they voted to put a track. . . years I've heard that you couldn't, it was impossible to get consent to put a track up in that area.

MR. SMITH

No, Senator, they just like to see horses race.

MR. NUNEZ

Well, you don't consider -- one more question-- you don't consider horse racing gambling evidently.

MR. SMITH

Well, it's . . . I mean it's not defined as gambling. No, I think it is. Yes.

MR. NUNEZ

Well, it's legalized gambling.

MR. SMITH

I think so, yes, sir.

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Smith, I just wanted to set the records straight, if I understood you correctly, you made a statement that Revenue, Finance and Taxation Committee had killed this proposal. That is not true, they did not. This delegate proposal that's before us now was reported out of that committee, Mr. Smith.

MR. SMITH

Well, I remember it coming up and I made a motion, Senator, I don't remember how it came up and it was . . . I believe it was recommitted to another committee.

[Motion to limit debate on the Amendments to twenty minutes adopted: 40-39.]

Further Discussion

MR. DREW

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I'll only take a few minutes of your time. But in answer to some of the questions that have been asked here, I think if those who had asked the questions had listened to Mr. Burns' explanation of this amendment and to the answers to the questions that Mr. Avant propounded to Mr. Burns would have seen what he was talking about. I want to remind you that this is not something that you can take lightly because it is very important to this proposal, I mean, and to the entire constitution. You can go around it in a half a dozen different ways by avoiding the issue. But, if you come head-on with the issue, this is something that we have been living with; it does not upset the status quo; it does not close pari-mutuel tracks. In answer to Mr. Fontenot's questions, our courts have held time and time again--I don't recall whether it's legislation or jurisprudence-- that unless it is operated as a business it is not prohibited gambling in this state, which allows your country club poker games, your other type games, friendly poker games, or whatever you want to do individually, as long as it's not operated as a business. I think that is the correct law in this state. It's very important that we adopt this amendment that Mr. Burns has offered, that I have coauthored. I sincerely hope you won't take it lightly because it can really mean a lot to the constitution. It will not harm anybody; it will not upset the status quo. I urge your support.

Questions

MR. AVANT

Mr. Drew, if this prohibition is not put back in the constitution, could not the legislature legalize gambling in this state a la the State of Nevada?

MR. DREW

There is no reason they couldn't, Mr. Avant.

MR. AVANT

Do you think that if the people of the State of Louisiana realize that, they are going to accept this constitution?

MR. DREW

Not from the correspondence I've had, Mr. Avant, they're not.

MR. STINSON

Mr. Drew, can't you foresee in the future sessions of the legislature every time that this is not in the constitution that the gambling element, from not nationwide but worldwide, is going to be here lobbying trying to pass every gambling law possible?

MR. DREW

I can see that, Mr. Stinson. I think you should take into consideration what the legislature did in 19__ --I don't recall whether it's '72 or '73-- in outlawing pinball machines in this state it was something the public demanded and it was something that the legislature did. The only people that came before the legislature opposing it were those who were actually operating the pinballs; I think that gave the pulse of the people there.

MR. STINSON

Do you believe that a state government should be financed on taxes on gambling?

MR. DREW

There is no way, Mr. Stinson, when half of our revenue is coming from the federal government and one major industry. I don't see how we can add something as uncertain as gambling to that revenue.

Further Discussion

MR. LANDRUM

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in support of this amendment. I would have you to know in committee I was one that advocated removing it from the constitution, that the constitution would be silent on this subject because I believe, even until this day, that the church should not impose its will on the people. I believe that we should try to tell people what thus sayeth the Lord, but not to put restriction that they cannot do a thing; that's my personal feeling. But, I have received letters, phone calls, telegrams over the past five or six months from clergymen of various different denominations throughout this state asking that this prohibition be placed back into the constitution. There were times when I mean I've had directive discussions with different clergymen about....I even brought it up in the barber shop or different places where a few people would be together and would try to get the feeling of the people just what do they think about it. Surprisingly, people want that prohibition in there because they are afraid of some organized type of gambling coming into the community. I did not come here to impose my will. I'm here to do the will of what I believe the people would want me to do and for that reason, I join in with this group to place this prohibition back into the constitution. I think if you would support this amendment you would be surprised to know that many people would be mighty, mighty happy. Thank you. God bless you.

112th Days Proceedings—January 8, 1974

Further Discussion

MR. FAYARD

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, my committee was mentioned on this, so I feel obligated to get up here and speak to you concerning this amendment. First of all, I would like to see what this amendment does; it says, "Gambling is a vice and the legislature shall pass laws to suppress it." We've heard speakers get up and admit that gambling is defined by the legislature and it has been defined so as to eliminate horse racing, bingo, other items of local poker playing, crap shooting and what have you, in your home. So, exactly what does it do? What is gambling? Does it mean that it's alright to play bingo and go bet on horses, but then you can't do certain other items? What other items cannot you do? I believe these are items that are certainly defined in the criminal statutes of this state. I believe, also as Mr. Goldman pointed out, that the U. S. Federal Government has a statute that prohibits lotteries, but it's not in the constitution of the United States of America. Of course, we are here to write a new constitution. I think we should delete unneeded material. My committee considered this carefully. We decided it was not necessary; it was handled by statute and actually it did nothing. Now, on the second portion of this amendment it says that "Lotteries and the sale of lottery tickets are prohibited in this state." This varies greatly from the Delegate Proposal No. 17 in which it says that "Neither the state nor any of its political subdivisions shall conduct a lottery." If you adopt Amendment No. 4, this means that not even a private company could engage in lotteries if the legislature in its wisdom some years from now decided that it was necessary for the state to do so in order to survive financially. There have been several states in the nation, I believe, that have conducted lotteries successfully and without the bitter experience that has been related by some of the delegates that Louisiana suffered a number of years ago. But, again, I have to rise in opposition to this amendment because of those reasons, but not only because of that reason. I am content to sit in my chair and vote no on these amendments until certain delegates get up and say, "A vote against this amendment is a vote to legalize gambling." I cannot stand for that. I can't believe that somebody can say that. That doesn't express my feelings at all. My feelings on this is that it should be up to the legislature. We don't say that murder is a crime and the legislature shall pass laws to suppress it. We don't say rape and prostitution are crimes and the legislature shall pass laws to suppress them. Why is gambling and lottery such an issue? I think we should trust our legislature and give them the authority that they need in this area and it would take a legislative act. I believe that the people would have to mandate the legislature before the legislature would ever legalize gambling in this state. I'm against legalized gambling, myself personally. But, I do not believe that you can sit there and listen to a comment that a vote in favor, or at least against, this amendment is a vote in favor of legalizing gambling and lottery; I can't see that. Now, again, please consider this carefully. What are you doing? If you think that it's politically expedient and it's necessary to adopt this to pass this constitution, I can see the reason why you would vote this way. But, don't get up here and say that it does anything; it does nothing with the exception of Amendment No. 4. Amendment No. 4 would actually prohibit the sale of lottery tickets in this state for any reason or any method. So, I ask you to defeat this amendment; it is not necessary. I'll yield to questions.

Questions

MR. JENKINS

Calvin, would you agree that Amendment No. 3 has no legal effect but is simply moralist preaching?

MR. FAYARD

Woody, I believe that the authors of this amendment agreed to that in their explanation of the amendment and in their support of the amendment, by admitting that the legislature itself defines what gambling means.

MR. JENKINS

Wouldn't it be hypocritical for the State of Louisiana on the one hand to say in its constitution that gambling is a vice and ought to be suppressed and on the other hand be getting a rake-off from the race tracks in the state? Wouldn't it be hypocritical for us to say that in our constitution?

MR. FAYARD

Woody, as you and I well know, certain state agencies are run by rake-offs from the race tracks....
I certainly believe that's a form of gambling.

Further Discussion

MR. STINSON

Fellow delegates, I would like to urge you to support this amendment. It's always being said, "Well, we don't need it." I don't think that, in answer to that, it is not in any way increasing the size of the constitution. You might say we don't need the preamble of the constitution that we have, "We the people of Louisiana are grateful to almighty God." There are a lot of people of Louisiana that are not grateful to God for anything, but we are forcing that element in the preamble because we think that the majority of the people believe in what's right, and are Christians. I'm not going into a count as to who are Christians and not, because when the final count as to how many are going to be in hell and how many are going to be in heaven, I expect we are going to be surprised. But, really, this is just a few words; it has been in the constitution. If you want to use the term, "the people can live with it", and it's not hurting anybody and it's helping a lot of people even if they are wrong in their thoughts and their beliefs but they want it in the constitution and it's not hurting anyone. They have gone into detail as to whether it'd apply to racing or whether it'd apply to bingo or different other church games and that has been answered. There is no one, I bet you, no one has asked you to take it out. But, plenty of people have asked us to leave it in there. So, let's do it; there is no movement that I know by any group putting pressure on to take this out of the constitution and let's don't be picayunish and say, "Well, we don't need it in there." If that little bit were helping to pacify a lot of good Christian people, I think we should leave it in there, put it in there; it's been in there for all these years.

Questions

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Ford, isn't it true you just told me right before you left here that everything you were for and liked was either illegal, immoral, or bad for your health?

MR. STINSON

Mr. Jenkins, the only thing I told you that I hope you live for a long time because some of the things you think about I was afraid you were going to hell; that's the only thing I said.

MR. FONTENOT

Mr. Stinson, do you think the legislature would legalize gambling if we didn't put this in the constitution?

MR. STINSON

Yes, sir, it would only take a majority vote, and I can foresee where it would; yes, sir.

MR. FONTENOT

Do you think the legislature took a gamble whenever it proposed these constitutional amendments for the superdome? Do you think the people took a gamble on this superdome when they voted for it? Don't you also think that everybody lost?

MR. STINSON

They thought it was assured and thought it was tied down, but they were misled.

MR. O'NEILL

Well, Ford, you're from Bossier Parish; right?

MR. STINSON

Yes, sir.

MR. O'NEILL

Isn't that where one of the race tracks is?

MR. STINSON

That's what I understand.

112th Days Proceedings—January 8, 1974

MR. O'NEILL
And, doesn't the state get money from that race track?

MR. STINSON
What's that?

MR. O'NEILL
Doesn't the state receive money from the taxing of those... that money from the race track?

MR. STINSON
It hasn't been completed; I don't know.

MR. O'NEILL
Well, didn't the people there vote to have that race track?

MR. STINSON
Yes, because it's legal and it would be legal under this, too.

MR. O'NEILL
Well, did you vote to have that race track?

MR. STINSON
Did I vote....I voted.....

MR. HENRY
That has nothing to do with what we are talking about.
Mr. Tobias, you have time for one quick question.

MR. STINSON
But, the majority of people voted for it and they ruled and it's going to be legal....

MR. TOBIAS
Mr. Stinson, you said good Christian people; what about good Jewish people?

MR. STINSON
Well, I couldn't get technical; I've lumped them all together-- all good people.

Further Discussion

MR. DUVAL
Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, at the outset let me say that I think, of course, this provision keeps exactly the present law. It's my feeling, of course, that the provision is not necessary. I think it's a moralistic issue which shouldn't be in the constitution. But, I think if we were pragmatists about the three dollar license plate we should probably be pragmatists here because as a practical matter this doesn't really mean anything because we still have, under this constitutional provision, horse racing, bingo and other various and sundry type procedures and you have criminal laws on gambling. So, I don't think it will have any material effect on the operation of the state. I think it's a purely pragmatic matter; it may facilitate the passage of this document which I would hope is paramount in all of our minds. Therefore, for a purely pragmatic reason, because it does not change the law at all, because we will operate as we always have been operating, I urge that we adopt the amendment.

Questions

MR. J. JACKSON
Believe me, Mr. Duval, I really don't want to be sarcastic. If I am, I'll apologize to you and this convention. But, isn't it odd, in your estimation, that we are willing to trust the legislature as it relates to future generations; when it comes down to gambling, we don't want to gamble with the legislature on that?

MR. DUVAL
I understand your question. I understand the oddity of it all, but the legislature has rights anyhow because they have already passed laws for horse racing and other things, so I... I don't want to intellectually defend this thing now; it's purely politically.

MR. VICK
How do you spell pragmatic, Mr. Duval?

MR. DUVAL
I don't know how you spell it.

MR. VICK
Doesn't it come out hypocritical?

MR. DUVAL
Well, Mr. Vick, let me just say for that question--as much as your questions are considerate to the convention, I think that question is hypocritical. Now, if you want to play that game, we can play it.

Closing

MR. BURNS
You don't have to worry, fellow delegates, I'm not going to say I'm not going to take long and then just take the full five minutes. But, I do...I just want to call this to your attention one more time. I'm very, very serious about this and there is no use in us trying to fool each other here getting up and arguing whether it's necessary or whether it's a legislative matter; that isn't what I'm talking about. I'm talking about what is the reaction of the voters of the state going to be. Now, you watch, I could be wrong about everything but see if I'm wrong about this. You watch what the headlines in the newspaper tomorrow morning is going to be. It's going to be to the effect that the Constitutional Convention put its stamp of approval on lottery. If it's not in the exact words, it's going to be the equivalent of. All I'm saying is it's not going to cost us anything. If you don't understand now that we are operating under the same law that my amendment covers and nobody is being hurt, and no church fair, and no bingo game is being interfered with. The racehorse interest is being taken care of. So, all in the world I'm asking is that they just retain it in the constitution because I actually am convinced--I could be wrong--but, I just think we are taking the wrong attitude about this and laughing it off and saying it's a legislative matter. But, the people are not going to understand it's a legislative matter. I make this final suggestion. I've been in politics and fooled with the public a long time and these things I never take personally, so whatever you do, that's your business and the vote will be recorded.

I do ask in all sincerity to give this your serious consideration with reference to overall effect it's going to have. Now, there has been a division of the question raised and some of you are so concerned about the gambling. If you are too overconcerned about that [Amendment] No. 4, which will be voted on separately, you still have that, so I'll leave it with you.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER
Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 8, in Floor Amendment No. 3 proposed by Delegate Burns and just adopted, at the end of line 2 of the text of the amendment, after the word "it" change the period "," to a comma "," and add the following: "but if it does exist, it shall be taxed."
There is a second amendment that says the same thing at the end of line 2 of the text of the second amendment: "but if they do exist, they shall be taxed."

Explanation

MR. VELAZQUEZ
Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I'm very serious about this amendment. This is a "have your cake and eat it too" amendment. If this convention wants to outlaw gambling, that doesn't bother me much one way or another. But, it hurts me to think that somebody out there somewhere is robbing this state of badly needed money. It was once said that the sun never sets on the British empire. But, I'm willing to tell you that every moment the sun shines or the moon shines somewhere here in Louisiana, somebody here is gambling illegally or somebody here is playing the lottery. Now, if these men are arrested I'm tired of them putting their money in the bank, going to Angola for two years, coming out and being the richest men in town. I think that if gambling does exist then we have a right and we have an obligation to tax it. If there are those who think that this sounds a little strange, I point out to you the law they have in Mississippi about illegal liquor and the fact that making and selling bootleg is illegal. But, if you're making it, and you're selling it, they expect you to remit the sales tax. I think that if anybody out here is doing illegal gambling, I think the people of Louisiana have a right to get a percentage of that money. If he's gambling, then it ought to be taxed, since this is a very straightforward issue. Now, if you want to pretend there is no gambling going on, that's up to you. But, I firmly believe that if it is going on and the guy gets arrested, I don't want him to be able to bank his money, go spend a couple years in Angola, come on back and spend the rest of his life in Cadillacs. If he's doing it, it ought to be taxed. I urge your support for the amendment.

112th Days Proceedings—January 8, 1974

Questions

MR. LEBLEU

Mr. Velazquez, would you suggest that Mr. Trsigle go around and take the house cut?

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Well, I don't want to tell him how to do it, the legislature... you're an expert on these house cuts, Mr. LeBieu, not me; you're a member of the legislature. You all provide how you want it done; I'm not trying to hamstring you that way. I think our wonderful legislature has enough experience with gambling and gambling people and know how this thing should be done. All I ever did was play a little bingo.

MR. KILBOURNE

Mr. Velazquez, isn't it a fact that for many years the federal government has collected...made people that gambled in this state to pay a gambling license or buy a gambling stamp or something of that kind?

MR. VELAZQUEZ

I want the state to get the money out of it, Mr. Kilbourne. The State of Louisiana is the one who is being more directly hurt than the federal government. The federals are taking care of themselves. It's up to us to take care of this state.

MR. KILBOURNE

But, your idea is nothing extraordinary. That's what I was trying to point out.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

You're correct, sir. I apologize for speaking to you in that manner. You are perfectly correct. You are perfectly correct, sir. We will do nothing out of the ordinary. We are merely trying to mirror one of the better things that the federal government has done which was to get every nickel that they are due. We want to get every nickel that we're due.

Further Discussion

MR. J. JACKSON

Mr. Chairman, at the risk of irritating certain delegates to the convention, I rise in support of Mr. Velazquez's amendment. I agree like a whole lot of other people agree. You know it's according to whose politics is being affected. That's all we're really talking about--whose politics is being affected. If you're really talking about...if you look at the Revenue and Taxation Article, and particularly you look at the damage that's done to a large extent, to the city of New Orleans, and if the fact that you can provide some of these organizations with tax exemptions, is that going to extend to things like bingo and all of that? I think that if we provide sufficient amount of tax exemptions, on the other hand, whenever some tax is being generated...there is gambling going on in the state, that we ought to be able to tax that to recoup some of the revenues that some of these local governments and school boards are going to need to operate as a result of what we've done in revenue and taxation. So, I ask you to support the amendment.

Questions

MR. LANIER

Mr. Jackson, if there's going to be horse racing, and I understand there's a substantial tax on that form of gambling, don't you think that if the people who are illegally gambling certainly ought to be able to pay a tax?

MR. J. JACKSON

I think very seriously that we all understand the rationale and I think that very seriously, and I wasn't being sarcastic when I raised the question to Mr. Duval, I think gambling in any form ought not be guised on "good gambling" and "bad gambling." Gambling is gambling is gambling is gambling.

MR. LANIER

In fact, it'd be pretty hard to understand how somebody could be against taxing illegal gambling.

MR. J. JACKSON

Right.

MR. MIRE

Mr. Jackson, you made reference to the money local government was going to lose because of the Revenue, Finance and Taxation Article; can you tell me where they're going to lose money?

MR. J. JACKSON

I'd cite in the city of New Orleans whereby we had by the Revenue and Taxation Article where we have included everybody under the sun, in my estimation--I'm giving you my personal opinion--where we have provided extensive exemptions, particularly to some of these organizations and institutions who are providing moralistic gambling under the distinction of a certain thing, then, I seriously think that well, this is one way for us to recoup some of the money. That's my opinion, Mr. Mire, and you and I may disagree on ...

MR. MIRE

Then, you'll agree with me that you don't understand our millage rollback or rollup.

MR. J. JACKSON

I understand rollback millages. I understand the time limits involved. I understand revaluations and all of that. What I'm saying is to you, that if we look, particularly, in the city of New Orleans, that we feel as though that by an inclusion of and expanding homestead exemptions and all the exemptions that we have granted, that if any of these institutions provide any form of gambling, that they ought to...that gambling ought to be taxed, and we ought to recognize, Mr. Mire, regardless of whether I'm wrong or not that gambling is gambling is gambling is gambling.

MR. MIRE

My question is not about gambling or taxes. My question is that, did you know that I can prove to you that New Orleans will not lose any money under Revenue, Finance and Taxation?

MR. J. JACKSON

Well, Mr. Mire, I'll come right over there and ask you to do that for me. But, regardless of that, Mr. Mire, we've spread into area of taxation, the area of exemptions, and some of the organizations do in some manner, provide for some forms of gambling. Now, the question is truthfully, not only is it part of this convention, but it's part of the people. Are we prepared to say that gambling is gambling is gambling? If you're not, then you vote against it. If you are, then, you vote for it. That seems to be the issue.

Further Discussion

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Fellow delegates, I supported the last amendment, not because I think it particularly did anything, but because, like the three-dollar license, I think a lot of people feel that it should be in the constitution. But, I object to this amendment because what we're saying is, we prohibit this, and you shall pass laws to do it, but when you say that if we do, then, we're going to tax them, what you are really saying is, "we didn't mean what we said in the first place," and I think that's wrong. If we're going to tax gambling, then we should say that all gambling in this state when authorized shall be taxed. I just disagree with ...I think what we're saying here is we said it, but we really wasn't too strong in it, and if there's some money in it, well, then, we want to get it. I'm not in agreement with that philosophy. Thank you.

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Champagne, do you know that I got a different understanding from you....

Because what?

Do you know that what I get from this is, if they make money gambling, you pay the tax on it, and then you pay the penalty, too?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

I see. Well, I don't gather the same thing. I say here that we prohibited, but if you do it, well, then, you get to be taxed for it. I think the legislature shall provide and prohibit it, and the legislature could well say that they shall tax anybody or just put them in jail and make them pay a big fine.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. VELAZQUEZ

I just want to say that how can you tell the children of Louisiana to do right when they see the gamblers riding around in Cadillacs? That's all I've got to say. The gamblers are riding around in Cadillacs; the honest folks are driving Fords. So, let's put a tax on the gamblers so when they get out of Angola they won't be as rich as they were when they went in.

Question

MR. GAUTHIER

Tom, the only thing that concerns me is for instance, a lot of churches have this Las Vegas night and what have you. Would they now be taxed on it?

MR. VELAZQUEZ

That is not gambling. The legislature's already taken care of that. This pertains to the guy who's out there running a lottery or running the wheel, just plain old-fashioned, no good, rotten, illegal gambling. You ever heard of a gambler having to get a free lawyer, you know, having to go ask for a free lawyer? Gamblers always have the best lawyers. That's our money they spend for those good lawyers.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

READING AND ADOPTION OF THE JOURNAL

UNFINISHED BUSINESS

PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

MR. POYNTER

On unfinished business is Delegate Proposal No. 17, introduced by Delegate Planchard.

A proposal making provisions prohibiting lotteries and, as amended, making provisions prohibiting lotteries and gambling.

The section has been, so far, substantially amended.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Guarisco, Mr. Fayard, Mr. Nunez send up amendments at this time.

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, delete lines 7 through 10 in their entirety and delete all floor amendments adopted thereto and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"ARTICLE XII. GENERAL PROVISIONS

"Section 12. Gambling Prohibited

Section 12. All forms of gambling, including without limitation, lotteries, pari-mutuel betting, pinball machines, football cards, printing of point spreads, bingo, dice, card games and other games of chance shall be prohibited in this state. The legislature shall define the crime of gambling and provide criminal penalties therefor."

Explanation

MR. GUARISCO

Yesterday, as you know, we included in the 1973 proposed constitution a prohibition against lotteries, a prohibition against gambling, insofar, that it tracks the 1921 Constitution that gambling is a vice and the legislature shall pass laws to suppress it." Now, what does that mean? I don't think under the language it means a darn thing because as you know, throughout the years the legislature has made exceptions. Although the constitutional mandate against gambling is ever present, the legislature takes this position: The following things are gambling except this-- and they have accepted pari-mutuel betting, that is, at the race track; they have accepted bingo games. Now, let it be understood that I have no objection to gambling whatsoever insofar as the prohibition in the constitution. I have no objection to pari-mutuel betting except that people have come time after time before this podium and argued morality. Now, if you want official morality, I don't think we should couple it with official hypocrisy, that is, the morality is only limited to who gets the cut. When you go to the track, the state gets a cut of the pari-mutuel window, therefore, that's moral. If somebody gambles in a back room some where or he gambles in private and somebody cuts the pot or takes a cut, then that's immoral. If some individual does it that doesn't go to some i.e. worthy cause, then that's immoral. Now, that's hypocrisy any way you look at it. Now, if we are going to be against gambling, if we are going to prohibit gambling, if we are going to prohibit these evil vices, then let's do it across the board. Let's don't have pari-mutuel betting. Let's don't have horse racing. Let's don't have dice games, skin games, rake-offs, cutbacks, what have you. The very people who will stand up here...the church people will come up here and say they don't want gambling and they got the biggest game in town at the bingo game. So, I think we ought to not be hypocritical. I'll yield to any questions.

Questions

MR. ALEXANDER

Mr. Guarisco, am I correct in assuming that pari-mutuel betting at race tracks which would mean the end of racing in the state is intended here, huh?

MR. GUARISCO

That would be my purpose; yes, sir.

MR. ALEXANDER

Then, what would happen to the race track?

MR. GUARISCO

I don't know what they would do with it; maybe make a football field out of it, Reverend Alexander. I don't know.

MR. ALEXANDER

Now, you named bingo. You mean the church bingo would be outlawed?

MR. GUARISCO

Yes, sir, any form of gambling that's listed in this; there would be no exceptions. I don't have anything against church bingo. But, if we are going to be selective, let's don't be selective, let's go across the board and allow no gambling.

MR. ALEXANDER

How about the social card game?

MR. GUARISCO

Social card game probably under the law would not be exempt... would not be against the law. The law is now that someone has to get a cut, that is, a house or some third party should get a cut. But, as far as I'm concerned, if this amendment goes through, that would be outlawed too.

MR. ALEXANDER

Then, the golfer who bets two bits on a hole...per hole, he could be jailed; is that right?

MR. GUARISCO

No, sir. I don't think that would be the intention of this; no.

MR. BURNS

Mr. Guarisco, how did you vote on the lottery and gambling amendment yesterday?

MR. GUARISCO

Well, it's a very obvious how I voted. I voted to put no prohibitions or that the constitution should remain solid insofar as so-called what you call a vice. But, if we are going to have a prohibition, then I think we ought to list those things that we are going to prohibit and let's take them all out. Let's don't be selective and let's don't be hypocritical.

MR. BURNS

Didn't you vote against the lottery and the gambling amendment yesterday evening?

MR. GUARISCO

Of course, I did.

MR. BURNS

Now, isn't horse racing and pari-mutuel betting legal in Louisiana at the present time?

MR. GUARISCO

Yes. I think it's hypocritical and I want to make it illegal.

MR. BURNS

I see. Now, I want to ask you one more question and this is the most important one. Isn't this just an effort to defeat the amendment that was passed yesterday evening by bringing up bingo, and legal horse racing, and interests that you know the people in this convention and the people of the State of Louisiana are interested in?

MR. GUARISCO

No, not necessarily. I think if we are going to do it, let's do it all the way.

MR. DREW

Mr. Guarisco, if the legislature under your amendment, I mean this is a pure prohibition you say, if the legislature adopted the jurisprudence of this state that gambling was a game of chance operated as a business, other than by a religious or a social organization, we would have the same status we have right now and that is a possibility under yours.

MR. GUARISCO

That is a possibility; yes, sir.

113th Days Proceedings—January 9, 1974

MR. DREW

If the legislature enacted the jurisprudence of the state into law, then....

MR. GUARISCO

No, sir. They can't enact the jurisprudence of the state into law insofar as these items are concerned because there would be constitutional prohibitions against this specific activity. I don't say that the legislature might find a way to even get around this and find a roulette table or something else that might be a likely exception.

MR. DREW

Let me call your attention to the last sentence: "The legislature shall define the crime of gambling." Now that gives them the absolute authority to say what is and is not gambling; doesn't it? So, your pure and holy amendment is nothing more than what we have right now, then, isn't it?

MR. GUARISCO

No, sir. I think it goes further because it actually prohibits certain things and one of them is pari-mutuel betting, and the state gets its cut and that's moral. These fellows all come up here and talk about the morality, yet gambling is allowed in this state. I can't reconcile the two in any way, form or fashion.

MR. SMITH

Mr. Guarisco, isn't all you are doing with this amendment is ridiculing the amendment we passed yesterday, Mr. Burns and others of us?

MR. GUARISCO

Yes, sir. I'm trying to perfect it. If anybody has any other vices that they would like to add to the list, I would be willing to accept those amendments, also.

MR. SMITH

No. I mean you are ridiculing...what we used to say in the legislature, loading it down with jokes so that people won't vote for it; isn't that what you are trying to do?

MR. GUARISCO

No, sir. I'm not particularly trying to load it down. I think that these things are hypocritical and they ought to be listed.

MR. SMITH

Are you really conscientious in this amendment?

MR. GUARISCO

I'm against the prohibition, as I've already stated. But, if we are going to have a prohibition, I don't want official hypocrisy; it's as simple as that.

MR. SMITH

If your amendment is passed, you would vote for the whole proposal, then?

MR. GUARISCO

Sir?

MR. SMITH

If your amendment is passed, you would vote for the proposal?

MR. GUARISCO

I don't understand; if my amendment is adopted?

MR. SMITH

Yes, sir. Would you then vote for the proposal?

MR. GUARISCO

Yes, I will.

MR. SMITH

But, I say...this just your idea of being ridiculous, just a joke?

MR. GUARISCO

No, sir. I don't think it's a joke at all.

MR. JENKINS

In other words what you're saying, Mr. Guarisco, the latest expression by this convention is the provision from the present constitution, "Gambling is a vice and the legislature shall enact laws to suppress it"? If we believe that, if we believe it's a vice, if we believe it ought to be suppressed, then this is exactly how the legislature would do it anyway, so we might as well do it; is that correct?

MR. GUARISCO

Absolutely, that's right, that's right. I'm trying to get them all, but I might not have everything. If anybody has any other vices they want to add to the list, like I said, I'll be willing to accept them.

Further Discussion

MR. DREW

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentleman of the convention, I'll be very brief. It's quite apparent what this amendment is attempting to do, but through the way it's drawn it is not even accomplishing the force it was attempting to accomplish because under this amendment, which is very poorly worded--if Mr. Guarisco means what he says he means, the legislature could define gambling--in fact, it is mandated to define gambling--and you would have the same situation that you have today. The only thing you would have would be a force in the constitution the way this particular amendment is. I urge you to defeat this amendment and stand with the Burns' amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. BURNS

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I'm going to be very brief and not hopefully take up any more time. I just want to ask all of those who voted for the amendment yesterday evening, of which I was one of the authors, I would ask you to please vote against this amendment. It's so obvious that it's just a back door effort to kill the amendment that we adopted yesterday evening. I made it very, very plain. I've had at least three delegates come to me this morning and tell me they didn't understand it yesterday evening. That the amendment is exactly the same wording that's in the 1921 Constitution and has been in there off and on since 1845. We haven't added anything to it; it's the law we have been living under all of these years; it's the law that the church bingo, the American Legion bingo, the Veterans of Foreign War bingo, all those different civic and charitable and church organizations have been operating; it won't change it in one iota. So, I ask you to defeat this amendment and any other amendment that....of a like nature. There is going to be an amendment coming up in a few minutes to delete the Velazquez amendment. Let's stick with the original amendment that we adopted yesterday evening and get on with the other work of the convention. Thank you.

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected: 15-63. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Chatelain sends up amendments as follows:

On page 1, line 8, in Floor Amendment No. 3 proposed by Delegate Burns and adopted by the convention on the 8th, delete Floor Amendment No. 1 proposed by Delegate Velazquez and adopted on yesterday, and at the end of line 2 at the end of the text of the Burns amendment after the word "it" delete the period "." and add the following: "and the legislature shall provide penalties for the violation thereof."

Amendment No. 2--a similar amendment--deleting Floor Amendment No. 2 by Mr. Velazquez, and at the end of the second Burns amendment after the word "state" delete the period "." and add the following: "and the legislature shall provide penalties for the violation thereof."

Explanation

MR. CHATELAIN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I think that most of us are serious in this business of going on with the convention, and I think that this will bring us right back to where we presently are in Louisiana. We are speaking more than about a three dollar license plate or the way the educational system shall be in Louisiana. We are speaking about the very way of life in Louisiana. All of us know you have problems in Louisiana in many, many areas so far as the way of life as it relates to gambling, and to horse racing, and to so-called lotteries, and other things. I think this is one way we can resolve this thing this morning and go about our business. I would certainly appreciate it if you would listen and try to ask the questions you think are necessary. At this time, I would like to yield the rest of this time to a coauthor, Mr. Drew.

Further Discussion

MR. DREW

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, let me see if I can put this thing in proper perspective. What we are attempting to do by this amendment is to more or less put the law exactly, as nearly as we can. Now, we are bound procedurally is the reason we have inserted this clause in there. But, I think that the Velazquez amendment is something that would certainly detract from the thing to say "if it does exist, you are going to tax an illegal operation if it is illegal." But, now, under the present law there is the only question that seems to be of any major importance is the use of the word "lotteries" because lotteries--bingo games, have been determined to be lotteries. There will be an amendment right behind this one that will say the sale of lottery tickets shall be prohibited. Therefore, that protects your bingo games that so many people are interested in. No one is getting hurt under the present constitution. We are not trying to hurt anybody. We are not trying to change the status quo. We are trying to leave it as nearly as we can as it is now. As was mentioned yesterday, I don't believe that there have been over one or two people that have approached any member of this delegation that see any necessity for a change. I mean, we have different areas in this state. Up in the northern end of the state they are extremely interested in having some expression in this document about gambling. Now, when you say gambling, you have to go to the jurisprudence of this state which defines gambling as being a game of chance, operated as a business, and that has not applied to religious and civic organizations; it has not been made applicable to them. You are not hurting your churches. You are not hurting your Legion and V.F.W. posts and your other civic clubs. If we take the word "lotteries" out and leave it "sale of lottery tickets" then, we have left the bingo games to where there would be no question there. We are not trying to upset the jurisprudence. We are not trying to upset anything. What we are trying to do is put an expression in this constitution that could mean many hundreds of thousand votes for or against. Like I say, I don't see how anyone could object to this amendment. It's nothing that couldn't be done under the present 1921 Constitution. It's just that we had to do it. I'm going to be frank with you. I understood that an amendment just to delete would have been out of order and possibly that would have been just as well. But, we couldn't do it procedurally and, therefore, we have put this in there which is in there without being said. Please, consider this amendment seriously. Delete the Velazquez amendment. Let's delete the word "lotteries" if you are concerned about bingo games. Then, you have everything in its status quo and I don't think there has been any serious objection to the present situation. I will yield to questions.

113th Days Proceedings—January 9, 1974

Questions

MR. BURNS

Mr. Drew, you know I have no objection to your amendment. Further, I have no objection to the amendment that you said was coming up and eliminate the word "lottery" and substitute "the sale of lottery tickets" because as I tried to make very clear, I wasn't doing anything to try to hurt bingo games for charitable or civic purposes. I think that will take care of the last objection.

MR. DREW

Thank you, Mr. Burns. This is a serious question and I hope you will go along with us and adopt this amendment. Thank you.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Drew, you were one of the coauthors of the original amendment, yesterday, weren't you?

MR. DREW

Burns. . . Yes, sir.

MR. LANIER

At the present time, we have a law on the books that authorizes local governmental subdivisions to prohibit bingo and keno under certain restrictions. Would it be correct to say, for the record, that your original amendment that you cosponsored with Mr. Burns and this amendment in no way will affect the existing legislation in this field dealing with nonprofit charitable type bingo and keno?

MR. DREW

I don't think it makes any change, Mr. Lanier. I think that the status quo would remain.

MR. LANIER

So, therefore, as there are many communities, for example, in south Louisiana that have community bingos or fire company bingos or V.F.W. bingos. If we ultimately adopt the Burns amendment and this amendment, those games that are sponsored by these charitable and nonprofit organizations like Jaycees, etc., would not be affected in any way. This is intended to maintain the status quo.

MR. DREW

Mr. Lanier, with this amendment to delete the word "lotteries" and limit it to "sale of lottery tickets," I think it has accomplished exactly what you said.

I move the adoption of the amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I hate to have to rise in opposition to Mr. Chatelain, Mr. Drew, and Mr. Conino, but I think that we have to put some realism in the things that we're doing here. We've had laws on the books in Louisiana since 1921 saying that gambling is illegal, it's immoral, it's a vice and laws shall be passed to prohibit it. Today, as we all sit here, as I stand here, they got people out here making a fortune on lottery and on illegal gambling in this state. For us to sit here and refuse to believe that this is going on is ludicrous. Last night when I went home, I spoke to a number of people. One gentleman phoned me, told me he had won a thousand dollars betting on the lottery in New Orleans, and the gamblers don't want to pay him. He wanted to know could I get a law passed up here in the convention that if you win any money gambling, they've got to pay you. I said, "Look, why don't you just go to the police and have him arrested?" He said, "Look, I don't want to have him arrested, I just want my thousand dollars. Besides, where else am I going to play? I always play with this company. I've been playing with them for thirty years." The fact is that illegal gambling is going on. It's going on everywhere, and it's making people rich. It's taking money out of the State of Louisiana. Now, there've been very few efforts made to try to get any of that money back. It seems to me that we just can't let people. . . if we can't stop them, if we can't prevent it, then the only thing that's left to us to do if we're going to remain a responsible group is to tax it. If we go back with a federal example, we all know--everybody in America knows--that Al Capone had thousands of people. . . had dozens of people killed, that he ran all sorts of illegal enterprises, all sorts of vicious immoral enterprises, that he engaged in large-scale bootlegging, that he smuggled alcohol from Canada to the United States and across the Gulf coast. Yet, when he was finally caught, he wasn't caught with machine guns like you see in Elliot Ness. He was caught with adding machines. They sat down--the federal authorities did--and they added up every nickel he had spent for five years. They added up the value of everything that he owned--his automobiles and his clothes. They arrested him and said, "Mr. Capone, we want you to explain to us how come you own this much and you claim your income was only so many thousands of dollars." This is the way they caught Al Capone and put him in the federal installation. When the federal government got through wringing him--and according to a policeman I spoke to last night--they wrung him for everything they could get out of him. They took his Cadillac; they took what money they could find. I've even been told they took some of his suits. Here in Louisiana, a man's a big-time gambler and he gets arrested. . . .

he goes and spends a little bit of time in Angola. When he gets back, his Cadillac is still waiting, and his customers are probably lined up waiting for him, too. So, it seems to me that if we know that we can't completely knock this thing out, we're going to have to control it. The only mechanism I can see for us to control it is to tax it.

Questions

MR. SHANNON

Tom, are you saying because the law enforcements in your city will not enforce the law, that you want to relax it and have it as it is?

MR. VELAZQUEZ

That's not what I said. That's not what I said. I said it appears to be continuing despite vigilant and persistent efforts by the law enforcement authorities in the city of New Orleans to stop it. Many people seem to want it.

MR. DREW

Mr. Velazquez, speaking of Mr. Capone, do you realize that earnings, whether legal or illegal, are also taxable in this state as income, already?

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Are we getting it? I only. . . I wish we were getting it. If I thought we were getting this money, then my amendment would be unnecessary. But, I don't think we're getting this money.

MR. DREW

If we are not getting it by income tax, then how do you see that we could get it by some other type tax? What is your reasoning?

113th Days Proceedings—January 9, 1974

MR. VELAZQUEZ

It seems to me if we arrest . . . if a big-time gambler is arrested, then we should get that money. . .

Further Discussion

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Chairman and delegates, as I sat and I listened, I began to think. I voted for Mr. Giarrusso's. . . Guarisco's amendment purely out of principle. I say to you, had it been left to me, I wouldn't have said anything; I wouldn't have even had Mr. Burns's amendment. One of the deacons in my church mentioned when they were talking about gambling for the state and paying teacher's salaries, he said, "Oh, Mrs. Warren, I sure hope they won't let this happen." I said to him, "As I'm going to say to you and especially to the ministers in this church, if you want to stop gambling, you do it. It is your job as Christian people and as your churches to see that the principles of life are instilled in the children that come to your churches." I have been wondering how you would explain to a young child that it is all right to gamble for a profit for a church, and it's not all right for him to gamble for a profit for himself when he needs it. I say to you, if it's this way, and I'm not arguing one way or the other, that the young people are going to find a way of chartering organizations, and they are going to have many, many enterprises which are going to be doing the same thing that you're doing. I repeat to you, "What is good for the goose is good for the gander."

As far as Mr. Velazquez's amendment is concerned, I say yes, because if we file income tax we are supposed to list all the money that we have made in the year, regardless of how it comes in. So, if a person knows he's going to have the penalty for paying taxes on money that he got illegal, plus a fine, he is not going to be as likely to go into it again. I say to you, vote your conscience and let God be your judge. Thank you.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. CHATELAIN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I'm not going to take any of your time. I think your mind is made up. I think you can see the whole picture.

I urge your support of this amendment.

Questions

MR. LANDRUM

Mr. Chatelain, do you believe that in passing the Burns amendment yesterday and then come behind with the amendment of Mr. Velazquez you are stating in one . . . prohibit in one and then find in another should you decide to do so, well, then we are going to tax you? Now, it's a conflict somewhere there, don't you think? In the Drew amendment. . . in your amendment, I believe that it kind of clears up. . . it. . . we do what we are supposed to do--write the law, leaving it to the legislature to provide the penalty. From that point, local officials to enforce the law. It's not our place, here, to enforce it. Am I right?

MR. CHATELAIN

You are right, sir. Right, sir. You are right. I appreciate your observation. Thank you. I urge your support of the amendment.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Do you believe that crime doesn't pay?

MR. CHATELAIN

I don't believe that crime pays; no.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Then how come the gamblers are driving Cadillacs?

MR. CHATELAIN

I'll yield to anyone else, sir.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Chatelain, for the sake of the record, what you and your fellow coauthors are intending to do here is to maintain the status quo with reference to this problem in the State of Louisiana; is that correct?

Right, sir.

MR. LANIER

For example, in south Louisiana like in Lafayette where you live or Thibodaux where I live, we have very many nonprofit organizations that sponsor bingo games. What you're suggesting and proposing here would not make those types of events illegal; is that correct?

MR. CHATELAIN

Absolutely.

MR. LANIER

The main thing we're going after is the organized gambling that is done on a . . . as a business. Is that correct?

MR. CHATELAIN

Right, sir; absolutely. Thank you very much.

MRS. ZERVIGON

I'd like to follow up a little on what Mr. Lanier was asking you. We haven't put a definition of "gambling" in the constitution in any place, have we?

MR. CHATELAIN

Not to my knowledge.

MRS. ZERVIGON

So, the legislature would still continue its job of defining "gambling," wouldn't it?

MR. CHATELAIN

I would guess so.

MRS. ZERVIGON

So, that leaves open the possibility that church bingo games could be declared gambling because they are games of chance. Isn't that correct?

MR. CHATELAIN

Well, I would think you're right, but I think the legislature, in their wisdom, has handled it properly.

MRS. ZERVIGON

It also leaves open the possibility that horse race gambling that pays for the Legislative Council could be declared illegal at some point, because gambling on horses is, per se, a gamble, isn't it?

MR. CHATELAIN

I would think so; yes.

MRS. ZERVIGON

So, I don't know that we can feel so comfortable that we know the definition of "gambling." It seems to me that it could be changed at any time by statute. Isn't that correct?

MR. CHATELAIN

Well, Mary, as you know, we are trying and attempting in the best way we know how to write a constitution that would satisfy the majority of the people in this state. I think that. . . as far as I'm concerned, the people feel that the status quo is all right in that area. So, I can't answer anything beyond that. I'm not. . .

MRS. ZERVIGON

Well, we haven't necessarily assured the status quo, have we, because we've left. . .

[Record vote ordered. Amendments adopted: 69-17. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Drew sends up amendments joined with several coauthors. Reads as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 10, in Floor Amendment No. 4 proposed by Delegate Burns, et al, and adopted by the convention on January 8, at the beginning of line 1 of the text of the amendment, delete the words "Lotteries and the" and insert in lieu thereof the word "The". (Need to make an addition). And after the word "tickets" on said line strike out the word "are" and insert in lieu thereof "is".

Now, I'm sure that's not making a lot of sense right now. The Burns amendment as presently amended, the second part of it would read:

113th Days Proceedings—January 9, 1974

"Lotteries and the sale of lottery tickets are prohibited in this state, and the legislature shall provide penalties for the violation thereof."

Mr. Drew would propose to amend that line so it would read, simply:

"The sale of lottery tickets is prohibited in this state, and the legislature shall provide penalties for the violation thereof."

Explanation

MR. DREW

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this is the amendment I mentioned to you awhile ago which deletes "lotteries" and prohibits the sale of lottery tickets and leaves everything else just as it is.

I ask for the adoption of the amendment.

Questions

MR. O'NEILL

Mr. Drew, what exactly does the constitution say now about lotteries?

MR. DREW

I don't have it in front of me, the exact words, Gary.

MR. O'NEILL

Well, doesn't it just prohibit lotteries?

MR. DREW

I believe it does, as my recollection.

MR. O'NEILL

Well, I'm a little worried that maybe you're making a real change in the law and that by having the sale of lottery tickets different from lotteries, you're going to prohibit car raffles by Jaycee organizations and some things like that.

MR. DREW

Mr. O'Neill, what you're not taking into consideration and which I think has been overlooked so bad is that the jurisprudence of this state says that--and it would apply to lotteries as well as gambling--unless it's operated as a business for profit other than by religious or civic organizations, it's not prohibited.

MR. O'NEILL

Well, isn't that jurisprudence founded under the old constitution, though?

MR. DREW

Yes, but I mean, if the sale of the tickets. . . you can't have a lottery without sale of tickets, so it's the same.

MR. O'NEILL

Oh. . . Mr. Drew, I'm just not anxious to fool around with the law. You're saying on one hand you want to keep things like they are, but then you're making a change. So, you know, I'm getting a little confused as to what you want to do.

MR. DREW

Well, since the '21 Constitution, and I'm not too familiar with it, Mr. O'Neill, "bingo" has been defined as a lottery. That's the purpose of this amendment.

MR. STINSON

Mr. Drew, but you're tying it down to tickets. Now, I don't. . . they may call it something besides tickets. In other words, there may be some other way they could operate a lottery. You know, it's getting so computers can do everything. They might even computerize lotteries, and you wouldn't have any sale of the tickets. So, you just have it tied to a ticket. Don't you think there's a danger, maybe, you could get around it?

MR. DREW

Mr. Stinson, I guess there's some way to get around every prohibition in the statutes, if you want to.

MR. STINSON

Well, don't you think it would be better just to leave it as lotteries instead of lottery tickets?

MR. DREW

I think this would be acceptable to the people, Mr. Stinson.

MR. COMAR

Mr. Drew, I don't really understand the distinction between the two. Why would you change it to the sale of lottery tickets? It seems to me like we're flying into the teeth of the question that was just raised with regard to. . .

MR. DREW

The main reason, Emile, is because of bingo games, and I don't think you could say there's any sale of tickets to play bingo.

MR. COMAR

Well, I know in my section of the country every kind of church and charity and civic organization in the world that wants to raise money raffles off a car or raffles off a T.V. set or something of value. I'm just afraid if we tamper with that language, we are going to endanger those in the future.

MR. DREW

But, Mr. Comar, I don't think our jurisprudence is ever going to say that a civic or religious organization raising money is operating as a business. That has been the criteria.

MR. GIARRUSSO

Harmon, I'm not against your amendment, I'm just trying to get some information to see if it accomplishes what you have in mind. Isn't lottery just one form of gambling?

MR. DREW

No. Well, when you say form, do you mean as a business, 'or

MR. GIARRUSSO

No, I don't mean as a business. Is that. . . what I'm saying is that there are several forms of gambling that cannot be classified as lottery or gambling per se--card games, for example, football cards, bingo, horse racing.

MR. DREW

Well, we have statutes that define the different types of gambling, which I think we would still have that same authority.

MR. GIARRUSSO

Okay, that brings us to the next point, is that would it be possible that the legislature, if this constitution were adopted, would be able to enact legislation that would make off-track betting legal?

MR. DREW

We already have as far as pari-mutuel; yes.

MR. GIARRUSSO

No, you don't. You don't have off-track betting in. . . it's not legal in the state now for off-track betting.

MR. DREW

I didn't say off-track; I didn't mean to. I think pari-mutuel is what I said.

MR. GIARRUSSO

You do have. . . well, this is enacted by statute, and it is legal, provided it's within the confines of a racetrack. My question to you is, is that you know, are you accomplishing what you want? Could we have. . . could the legislature enact laws that would have off-track betting similar as they have in New York State?

MR. DREW

We. . . I think we could do it under the '21. I don't see any prohibition there. This is a. . .

MR. GIARRUSSO

I respectfully disagree with you. I'm just simply saying to you that I don't believe you're accomplishing, you know, really what you're trying; is that there are just other forms and aspects of gambling that are not included, and you're just taking lottery and you're making. . .

MR. DREW

No, no, Joe. You misunderstand. This does not delete the gambling provision of the Burns amendment. All this did was amend the lottery provision. The gambling provision is still in there.

MR. GIARRUSSO

No, I'm trying to make a distinction between a constitutional prohibition and something that the legislature can do. If it's doing what you want it to do, well, it's okay. I'm just merely pointing that out to you. That's all.

MR. DREW

I move adoption of the amendment.

113th Days Proceedings—January 9, 1974

MR. BERGERON

Mr. Drew, I just want to clarify something that . . . you had answered Mr. O'Neill a little while ago, and it caused a little confusion. The amendment essentially says that "the sale of lottery tickets shall be prohibited." Am I correct?

MR. DREW

That's right.

MR. BERGERON

Did you say that you classified bingo as a lottery--the sale of bingo tickets as a lottery?

MR. DREW

You don't sell tickets.

MR. BERGERON

You do sell tickets to bingo games. Would that be classified as a . . . I'm just trying to figure out in my mind whether this would prohibit or stop in any way bingo tickets from being sold.

MR. DREW

Well, Philip, personally, I liked it as it was without this amendment. Several people were concerned about bingo and thought this may take care of it. That's the only reason I offered the amendment. I liked it like it originally was.

Further Discussion

MR. PUGH

Fellow delegates, fellow delegates, I rise in support of this amendment for these reasons: yesterday, when the original Burns, et al, amendments were presented for your consideration, 1, 2, and 3 were grouped together for voting purposes, and 4 was voted on alone. I voted against 1, 2, and 3, and I did so and explained my vote because I thought they were legislative in nature. Your wisdom dictated that they should be passed, yesterday. After 4 was passed--which I voted for--it became obvious that additional amendments would be submitted to this, the result of which, in my personal opinion, without . . . and would do deference to everyone, many of which would be extremely detrimental to not only the passage, but the constitution itself. This morning, I suggested to the individuals who were interested in the question that if we eliminated the word "lotteries," then we would protect the right of these organizations to have their keno and their bingo. I believe you can effectively curtail and prohibit lotteries that we are really talking about by prohibiting the sale of tickets therefor. Now, in answer to inquiries made relative to the sale of tickets for an automobile, there ain't no doubt in my mind the sale of a ticket on an automobile is a lottery. What's happened that . . . enforcement officers have ignored it. There's no doubt in my mind that bingo is a lottery, and the federal courts have so held. But, again, in deference to the wishes of the people by their continued use of the system, the fact that the law is violated has been ignored. I say that we can resolve this entire problem by voting for Mr. Drew's amendment, by eliminating the word "lottery," by leaving the phrase "prohibiting the sale of tickets," and we can move on to other worthwhile and important provisions.

I yield to any questions.

Questions

MR. TOCA

Mr. Pugh, you know in some clubs when we raffle off automobiles, etc., when we make up these tickets, we put "Donation, $1." Now, what would you consider this?

MR. PUGH

Sir, I think that's a lottery. I don't care whether you call it a donation, how you cut the mustard, it's a lottery. Any way you handle it, it's a lottery. Whether or not it goes to the benefit of a public or a private organization or a charitable organization, in my opinion, has nothing to do with the main thrust of the question: whether or not it is or is not a lottery.

MR. TOCA

Why do you think we put "Donation" on this ticket?

MR. PUGH

Because you think somebody might charge off the dollar and try to win the automobile at the same time.

MR. BERGERON

Mr. Pugh, in taking up in Mr. Toca's questioning, this would prohibit raffling off an automobile, etc.?

MR. PUGH

I suggest to you, sir, that it has been in the constitution of Louisiana since 1913; prohibiting the sale of lottery tickets has been in the Louisiana Constitution since 1913.

MR. BERGERON

I'm just trying to clear this up in my mind. Is this language that this amendment would inject into the constitution, is it in our present constitution?

MR. PUGH

Yes, sir; it is in our present constitution. Our present constitution, I quote and read: "Lotteries and the sale of lottery tickets are prohibited in this state." I assure you it's been there. . . it's been there since 1845.

Further Discussion

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, I'd like to suggest the reason we're having so much difficulty with this section. The reason is that we're dealing with words that attempt to express concepts, which concepts are not clear, and which concepts could not possibly be included in a constitution by any constitutional standard. Take the first sentence: "Gambling is a vice, and the legislature shall suppress it." Consider that language. What does that accomplish? What does that do? Does it circumscribe any sort of action whatsoever?--No. Is it enforceable in any way at all? Can the legislature be mandated to suppress anything? -- No. Now, look at the first clause: "Gambling is a vice." Now is that true? Is it true that gambling is a vice? Earlier, when someone passed a football board around this convention, was that wrong? Was that a vice? Was that immoral? If someone goes to the racetracks in New Orleans and places a bet, is that a vice? By what standard? By whose judgment?--By some people's standards, by some people's concepts of morality, by the overwhelming judgment of the people of this state; they don't consider those things wrong. If my experience and my limited knowledge of human reasoning is any standard at all, they don't consider those things wrong. They consider gambling a vice only under certain circumstances--only, usually, when carried to extremes. But, then we know that anything when carried to extremes is a vice. Eating is a vice if carried to extremes. Perhaps, we should say that eating is a vice, if carried to extremes. What does it do when we say "gambling is a vice, and the legislature shall enact laws to suppress it." As a convention, we're not being particularly hypocritical because we didn't say that horse racing will be made legal and that the state will get a rake off the top of it. We didn't do that. But for the State of Louisiana in its constitution to say that "gambling is a vice, and the legislature shall enact laws to suppress it," the State of Louisiana is being hypocritical because the State of Louisiana is profiting from gambling; the State of Louisiana permits gambling. Now, look at the second concept in there: the idea that lotteries are prohibited or the sale of lottery tickets or whatever are prohibited. Now, what does that do? Do you really think anyone can be convicted and sent to jail if he runs a lottery under that? Well, you better read the United States Constitution and the other aspects of this constitution because a law must be definite in order to be enforceable, and in order to put somebody in jail you have to have a penalty. This doesn't do that. If the legislature did not enact a penalty for the conducting of lotteries or for the sale of lottery tickets, this would be meaningless. It is meaningless. About the only thing, probably, the courts would hold that this does is prohibit the state from conducting a lottery itself. Probably, you could get that out of it. Now, that's why the thing we started with, Mr. Planchard's original proposal, is the only reasonable thing I've seen put forth. It says "neither the state nor any political subdivision shall conduct a lottery." Now, that's constitutional material. It circumscribes state action; it limits state authority. A constitution, by its nature, does not limit personal actions. We don't have in here "murder is a vice, and the legislature shall prohibit," and we shouldn't do it in this instance either.

Further Discussion

MR. LANIER

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I believe that the problem that we're grappling with here is one of trying to fashion the law to fit an existing situation. As a matter of fact, under the present law, local governmental subdivisions are authorized to permit keno and bingo within their jurisdictions. In many places in South Louisiana we have volunteer fire companies, civic organizations, and religious organizations that use this as a means of financial support. Now, I certainly don't think that we want to prohibit this type of conduct when it's done for this type of a purpose. So, I think we have to be very careful how we fashion something here to fit this type of a situation. To ignore the problem, or to create a constitutional provision that we know is going to be observed in the breach, to me is not the proper way to draft a new constitution for the State of Louisiana. Now, I can understand the concern of our delegates from North Louisiana and the concern that they have for the feelings of their constituents about the prohibition of gambling as a business. I certainly think, as we have done in many other matters, that we should work together to accommodate this feeling. But I think we also have to recognize here that in South Louisiana we have many religious and civic nonprofit organizations that do use keno and bingo and raffles as means of raising money to support their operations. Now, quite frankly, I'm going to probably vote for Mr. Drew's amendment because it is removing part of the problem as I see it with reference to the nonprofit religious and civic organizations. But, I think really what we are getting to here and what we're going to ultimately have to face is that by making a blanket prohibition against this type of conduct is not going to solve the problem. If it is our intention that nonprofit religious and civic and public service organizations should be allowed to have raffles and keno and bingo, well then let's just say so. In that way it will be clear. In that way we will not have to require these people who are doing these types of things to operate in violation of our constitution and in violation of the law. I don't think that's our purpose here, and I don't think that we should fashion our constitution so that in the future we have existing or similar type situation that we have today. Now, like I say, with reference to the keno and the bingo, this is presently covered by existing law, but with reference to other things that you and I know go on, if this is what the people want--and as long as it's not done by organized crime, or it's not done for a business--if it's done for a good religious purpose or a civic purpose, this is something I don't believe anybody in this room is opposed to. If this is what we want to say, then let's say it. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment reread. Amendment adopted: 63-23. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Velazquez's amendment reads as follows: Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 8, in Floor Amendment No. 1 proposed by Delegate Chatelain, and adopted by the convention on today, on line 1 of the text of the amendment, after the word "penalties" and before the word "for" insert the words "and special taxation".

Mr. Velazquez, as I appreciate it, the effect of this amendment would be as follows: the first sentence of this section as presently amended reads: "Gambling is a vice, and the legislature shall pass laws to suppress it, and the legislature shall provide for penalties for the violation thereof." As Mr. Velazquez would amend that first sentence, it would read: "Gambling is a vice, and the legislature shall pass laws to suppress it, and the legislature shall provide penalties and special taxation for the violation thereof."

Point of Order

MR. SMITH

Didn't we consider almost this same thing in the Velazquez amendment we defeated awhile ago? I'd like a ruling on that, Mr....

Ruling of the Chair

MR. HENRY

It's not indetically the same; no, sir, Mr. Smith.

Explanation

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I don't intend to belabor this point much longer, but it seems to me that taxation is the only method to control illegal gambling. It seems to me that we have had criminal penalties for years, and as yet, gambling continues to flourish. It seems to me if we add the concept of special taxes, we may have found the technique we need. I don't see how any delegate in this convention could go back home and tell the people that illegal gambling should not be subject to special taxation by the state. Whenever the federal government gets their hands on a gambler, they extract every nickel they can get out of him before they send him to the federal penitentiary. In Louisiana we don't quite seem to have reached this level yet. Gamblers tend to be incorrigible. They go to the local state penitentiary for a short period of time, and they come back, and they go right back into their old business. It seems to me that if gamblers know we will not allow them to retain the fruits of their endeavors, they may decrease the level of their endeavors. Special taxation seems to be only fair because gamblers cost the people of Louisiana extra money in policing and in court costs. Special taxation merely allows the state to get back some of the money that the state must spend to undo their efforts. This amendment deletes nothing of anyone else's amendment. It merely includes special taxation in addition to the penalties. You hit the man in his pockets...hit the gamblers in their pockets; this is the way you're going to hurt them. It doesn't really seem to have done that much good to have been sending him to the penitentiary all these years, though I'm not in favor of stopping that practice. I urge your favorable adoption of the amendment.

Questions

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Don't you think the legislature, if they have a notion to, could extract all kinds of money from them if they wanted to by simply providing high penalties or going back with additional taxes? They can pass that in the legislature if they wanted to; don't you think now?

MR. VELAZQUEZ

My only reply is that they also could give penalties so there was no need to put that there. The legislature didn't need any special authorization here to put penalties on people for illegal gambling, but this convention chose to include that line. If they choose to include that line, how is it so much more illogical to also include the concept of special taxation? If it's necessary to add a superfluous line about penalties, I see no logical reason not to include an additional line--additional three words--to say "and special taxation," unless of course you don't believe that the gamblers...you believe the gamblers should be allowed to retain whatever they have that they have gotten illegally. I mean, if this is your belief, I can see a logic behind your position, but I don't feel that that's your position.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Do you understand what I'm trying to say...

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Yes, sir. I understand exactly what you're trying to say.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

No, no. If that the legislature does not want to do this, they could provide a special taxation--for every million, we get a dollar; you see.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

And my answer must be that this convention just adopted words telling the legislature that they can do something that they could already do, but they've only allowed us a one shot at the problem. I'm trying to give the legislature two shots at the problem.

Further Discussion

MR. LANDRUM

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in opposition to Mr. Velazquez's amendment. This convention is really getting to be something. All year Velazquez and I have been voting together; Harmon Drew and I have been opposing each other. But all yesterday evening and all this morning, Drew and I have been voting together so that may be a good sign. I believe that you cannot impose a tax on a gambler for a penalty. If you can do that for a gambler, then every crime committed, then there should be some form of taxation as a penalty. Now, maybe if we would do that for all crimes, maybe our prisons wouldn't be as crowded as they are. But, I don't see how we can afford to say to poor people you've committed a crime, and no amount of money will get you out of it. To those who have money, who are able to pay a tax when they are caught, well then, all you do is pay a tax. I don't think we should do it that way. I believe that, whatever the penalties are, that function should be left to the legislature to decide what the penalties will be. I don't think this body should set a penalty in the form of taxation. Certainly we could use the money, but I'm inclined to believe that anybody... any corporation of gamblers would love nothing better than to be able to pay a tax for a penalty. Now, either we are going to have it in the constitution prohibiting gambling, or we are not going to have it one way or the other. I voted yesterday to prohibit gambling. I'm going along with that today, and I would hope that we would continue in that vein. Thank you.

113th Days Proceedings—January 9, 1974

[Previous question ordered.]

Closing

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I just want to clear up a misapprehension that some delegates seem to have. I am not getting rid of criminal penalties. All I'm saying is that if a man robs a bank, we don't just send him to jail. We take the money he stole from the bank and give it back to the bank. If a man has been gambling and has been using this as a way of getting rich, we shouldn't just send him to jail; we should take back some of that money he got gambling. Now, as far as this being against poor people, there are very few poor gamblers. If he's a poor gambler, he gets out of that business and he robs banks; I guess. But, it seems to me that you allow a man to retain the fruits of evil, in effect, you are encouraging evil. If you take away the fruits of evil, then you decrease the evil. The criminal penalties will continue; we're going to continue to send them to Angola, but before we send them, we're going to skin them. That's all this amendment says.

[Amendment rejected: 23-66. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Gravel, Mr. Lanier, Mr. Arnette send up amendments at this time.

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, delete lines 8 through 10, both inclusive in their entirety and delete all floor amendments adopted thereto and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Section 14. Neither the state nor any of its political subdivisions shall conduct a lottery. Commercial gambling shall be defined by and prohibited by the legislature."

Explanation

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this amendment is very simple and it, of course, does adopt the Delegate Proposal of Mr. Planchard in its first sentence. Now, frankly, I think that to be honest and fair with the people of Louisiana we ought to put something in this constitution that is meaningful and honest. What we really all are talking about, and what we really are concerned with, is a prohibition against commercial gambling. Now, I don't think that we can or should try to define what constitutes commercial gambling in this constitution. But, I do think it's proper and appropriate for us to mandate the legislature to define commercial gambling and to prohibit it. I believe that's all that we can reasonably accomplish in the constitution. I don't believe that there's any effort on the part of this convention to try to put language in here that can...that fairly interpreted would prevent the church bingo game or some of the other forms of gambling-amusement that people engage in on a private basis--playing cards for money or things of that nature. Some people think that's wrong and some people think it isn't, but I honestly do believe that if we pass this proposal, as I have before you, that we will be presenting to the people of Louisiana in the proposed new constitution a fair and honest proposal that has meaning and that will accomplish the principal purposes that those people have who are against the state being engaged in gambling in the form of government-sponsored operated lotteries.

I yield to any questions, Mr. Chairman.

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

Questions

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Gravel, it's my understanding that---maybe I shouldn't say who because I really don't know who---but there was a survey recently--and I think the governor made an announcement on it--on a lottery in this state. He thought enough of it to conduct a survey, not only from a standpoint of the popularity of it, but the standpoint of the finances of it--who would accept it; how would it be financed; how would it be run? I think the results of that survey--you probably have... will you tell the convention some of the results of that survey? I think it's important to what...

MR. GRAVEL

Well, the results of the survey was that a significant minority of the people in the State of Louisiana would vote against the constitution that didn't prohibit lottery. The majority of the people polled seemed to favor a lottery for certain purposes. On the other side of the coin, a significant minority of the people would be opposed to lottery in any form, and I think those people would tend to vote against the constitution if we didn't have this kind of a prohibition in the document. Senator.

MR. NUNEZ

Evidently, the people who had the survey run and thought enough of the method of raising revenue to look into it a little further than it had been in the past; that was my point. I don't think the constitution was in question at that time, 'cause if I remember my chronological sequence of time events right, it was something like six or eight months ago.

MR. GRAVEL

That's correct.

MR. NUNEZ

Or maybe longer.

MR. GRAVEL

That's correct.

MR. CHATELAIN

Delegate Gravel, of course, I have a very serious question that I think...the way I interpret this; you said "neither the state nor any of its political subdivisions shall conduct a lottery." That means the state can't have a lottery; the parish police jury can't have a lottery; no political subdivision can have a lottery; is that correct, sir?

MR. GRAVEL

Correct, yes, sir.

MR. CHATELAIN

But what would preclude me, as an individual, from entering into a contract with the state or a political subdivision and have a lottery that would then give it part of the proceeds of the profits of that lottery back to this political subdivision? That's the question I'm concerned about.

MR. GRAVEL

I don't think there's any question but that this language would prohibit that. I think it's...

MR. CHATELAIN

Well, that's not what it says, Mr. Gravel. Please elaborate on that.

MR. GRAVEL

I don't think there's any question. I'll answer it to you this way, Mr. Chatelain, but that the state can't do indirectly what it is prohibited from doing directly. I don't think that the state could enter into any such contract and not violate the provisions of this first sentence. You can't do indirectly what you can't do directly.

MR. KEAN

Mr. Gravel, my question is related to the last part of your proposal. I ask you: what do you mean by "commercial gambling?"

MR. GRAVEL

I don't mean anything by it other than to say that "commercial gambling" subject to such definition as the legislature may provide with respect to that term "shall be prohibited."

MR. KEAN

Does that mean that the legislature couldn't define gambling?

MR. GRAVEL

Sir?

MR. KEAN

Would that mean that the legislature could not define gambling?

MR. GRAVEL

No, sir. This provision, Mr. Kean--and I wish you'd read it very carefully--is a mandate that the legislature must define commercial gambling and must prohibit it. Now, now wait a minute. It does not say that the legislature cannot act otherwise in the field with respect to gambling, but this...as you know, Article 90 of the Criminal Code defines commercial gambling at this time.

MR. KEAN

Well, that's my point. Article 90 defines gambling, which is prohibited at the present time, as gambling for a business. But, there are other statutes which permit a definition of gambling without reference to whether it is being conducted as a business. It seems to me that this would lend to the suggestion that the legislature could not define any other gambling other than commercial gambling.

113th Days Proceedings—January 9, 1974

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Kean, you're a better lawyer than that. This does not prohibit the legislature from doing what it has already done--and I think this is very important--right now there's a law on the statute books that authorizes municipalities to define gambling in a manner different from the manner that it's defined in Article 90 of the Criminal Code. This could not in any way adversely affect that right of the legislature.

MR. KEAN

Well, if that's the case, would you have any objection to deleting the word "commercial", and simply make it read "gambling shall be defined and prohibited by the legislature"?

MR. GRAVEL

Well, what I'm doing here, Mr. Kean, is making it mandatory for the legislature to define "commercial gambling." Whether the legislature may want to define other forms of gambling is permissive and within the authority that they may have. Here we are directing the legislature to act. Now, if you want to later on add another sentence, all right; but I sure don't think it's necessary. This is a mandate to the legislature.

MR. ABRAHAM

Mr. Gravel, is there any really need for this right here from the standpoint that in the Burns' amendment where it says "the legislature shall enact laws," won't they have to define gambling and define lotteries when they enact the laws?

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Abraham, that language absolutely means nothing. It's just fooling the people of Louisiana. We had on the statute books, as you've been told, the provision that gambling is a vice, and the legislature shall pass laws to suppress it. In the Gandolfo Case the Louisiana Supreme Court held that commercial gambling operate..the operation of a racetrack, did not violate that provision. This is meaningful; that language--in my judgment, in view of the jurisprudence--is not.

MISS WISHAM

Mr. Gravel, I have the same concern as Mr. Kean's. I was concerned about commercial gambling. I also readily feel that since you are a legislator, you should be able to give us some meanings of commercial gambling?

MR. GRAVEL

Well, I'll have to answer you the same way I answered Mr. Kean. If you have the same problem, my answer to you is the same as the answer I gave to him that this sentence mandates the legislature to define and prohibit commercial gambling. It does not prohibit the legislature from defining gambling otherwise, or from authorizing local government authorities to define gambling on a different basis which they presently do.

MISS WISHAM

You wouldn't be willing to delete this statement--the last line--would you be willing to delete it?

MR. GRAVEL

I'm perfectly willing to delete the whole section, but I'm talking about trying to put something honest in the constitution that's meaningful and that will respond to what I think are the wishes of a substantial segment of the voters of Louisiana.

MR. BURNS

Mr. Gravel, did the wording of your amendment satisfy all these gentlemen who are concerned about church and fire department bingo games?

MR. GRAVEL

I don't think there's any question but that unless the legislature was to define as commercial gambling, those kinds of operations that are traditionally engaged in by churches and fire departments, etc., in the way of raffles and bingo games, that this would not in any way adversely affect them.

MR. BURNS

Did they also define different forms of lotteries for commercial purposes?

MR. GRAVEL

I think so. Absolutely.

MR. STINSON

Mr. Gravel, my question is along the lines of the others. But, would you be in favor of deleting commercial and just say, "Gambling shall be defined by and prohibited by the legislature?"

MR. GRAVEL

Well, I think mainly this means more to put it this way. I wouldn't have a particular problem about that because I think that the legislature could, you know, make such distinctions as it wanted to...as it already has done, permitting, you know, local option, for example, in bingo games. But, if that would help to pass this, and, frankly, I think we need to pass something in this regard, I would have no serious objection to it.

MR. STINSON

Now, commercial...do you think that's easily definable by the legislature or anyone? Commercial...someone said well, that means for profit.

MR. GRAVEL

Well, the reason I say that, I think it is very significant to put in here "commercial gambling" because, since 1942, we have had a state law prohibiting commercial gambling. There's a body of jurisprudence that's been built up under Article 90 of the code. I think that we would have some value there.

MR. STINSON

They use the word "commercial" not just for profit or gain?

MR. GRAVEL

As a business....the words "as a business" are involved in there. It's been....it is commercial gambling.

MR. STINSON

Well, isn't it a fact, then, that someone could incorporate a non-profit corporation and could carry on gambling and that would not be commercial?...and pay it all in salaries to the officials and it'd be non-profit, and it would not, therefore, be commercial?

MR. GRAVEL

No, sir. That's not the judicial interpretation of it. No, sir.

MR. TOBIAS

Mr. Gravel, why did you choose the word "prohibited" rather than "suppressed" as the present constitution uses?

MR. GRAVEL

Because...of the Gandolfo case. The word "suppressed" apparently had no meaning to the Supreme Court of Louisiana when they said that you could have commercial gambling in the form of pari-mutuel betting and it didn't violate that provision of the constitution.

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Gravel, I want to ask you a little bit about the section as it now stands without your amendment.

The first thing, "gambling is a vice. The legislature shall pass laws to suppress it. They can enact penalties with regard to it. Sale of lottery tickets is prohibited, etc."

Does that in any way prevent the State of Louisiana from ever allowing a Nevada-type, completely open gambling situation? Does the present section in any way prohibit that?

MR. GRAVEL

Under the Gandolfo case, I don't think it would.

MR. JENKINS

In other words, so long as the legislature has not enacted specific criminal penalties for specific offenses, then really, slot machines, dice games, keno...anything is completely legal...or it could be made completely legal so long as there are no criminal penalties specifically enacted by the legislature.

MR. GRAVEL

If we didn't have Article 90 of the Criminal Code, if we didn't have the statute prohibiting it, the constitution would not prohibit it under the Gandolfo case. That's correct.

MR. JENKINS

Wouldn't the only way that we could really prohibit the Nevada-type situation in Louisiana, would be to enact a detailed criminal provision that we made self-executing and put it in this constitution?

MR. GRAVEL

That's correct. Or, by statute.

113th Days Proceedings—January 9, 1974

MR. JENKINS

No. But, the only way we could do it as a convention would be to do that.

MR. GRAVEL

Oh, I agree with you....

MR. JENKINS

So, really, the difference primarily between your amendment and the section as it stands now, is that yours is in constitutional terms, prohibiting and limiting certain state action with regard to a lottery, and then giving a.....somewhat of a mandate to the legislature with regard to commercial gambling. But, the legal effect is about the same. Isn't it?

MR. GRAVEL

Now, keep this in mind, though, Mr. Jenkins. I don't think there's any problem with the first sentence; "Neither the state nor any of its political subdivisions shall conduct a lottery." The Gandolfo case recognized that there was a positive prohibition against lotteries, even under the existing constitution. This just makes sure we are talking about a prohibition against governmental lotteries which is, I think, what we're really talking about.

MR. JENKINS

But, even under the present constitution, the prohibition against lotteries in general, and meaning, I guess, private lotteries, unless there is a criminal law making it a specific offense, specifically defining it, and putting a specific penalty in the statutes for the conducting of a lottery, this really is meaningless, too, isn't it?

MR. GRAVEL

No, sir....

MR. JENKINS

Well, how is it meaningful?

MR. GRAVEL

Because the provision with respect to lotteries in the present constitution could form the basis for injunctive relief....

MR. JENKINS

But not criminal.

MR. GRAVEL

...even if the legislature did not. Correct. Because it's a clear-cut prohibition. But, the provision says that gambling is a vice, and the legislature shall pass laws to suppress it. We can sum up that pretty quickly by saying that's been judicially declared to be meaningless. So, why perpetrate that kind of situation in a new constitution where we are supposed to reform and correct the errors of the past.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Further Discussion

MR. CHATELAIN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in opposition to this amendment. I don't want to argue a great deal with what we've already done. I'm not hung up with that. I certainly want to do this thing right. I'm sure that you do. But, let's just read together this amendment. It's very plain English. I'm not an attorney. It's been said here many times before. But I can certainly reason.

Now, it says in the first sentence, "Neither the state nor any of its political subdivisions shall conduct a lottery." Now, we all agree to that. Certainly the state shouldn't conduct a lottery. But, that's the hooker I don't like in this first sentence....the word "conduct." If you remember in history, the previous lotteries that we have was not a state operated lottery. It was a privately operated lottery that some of the proceeds was given to the state. Do we, in fact, eliminate this possibility in the future? I ask you this question. Do we, in fact, eliminate that possibility in the future?

Let's read the second paragraph....the second sentence. "Commercial gambling shall be defined by...and prohibited by the legislature." We've gone on for two days, now. What is commercial gambling? Where would the legislature be in the future as compared to today? Exactly where it is today. The legislature has a right to define commercial gambling today. I think they have in many cases. They said that you could have public horse races, or you could have pari-mutuel betting, and on and on. But, we're not doing anything here except shirking our duty. But, I ask you. Please, let's not leave the doors wide open. Let's try to maintain status quo as near as we can. I still think that for the moment, that the Burns amendment, as presently amended, does what most of us really want. So please, give some serious thinking to this before you vote for this amendment.

Thank you.

Questions

MR. O'NEILL

E. J., now let's go over exactly what you are saying. You say you want to keep Mr. Burns's amendment as it presently is. Well, let's explore a little bit what that means.

"Gambling is a vice, and the legislature shall pass laws to suppress it." Now, under the current legal jurisprudence, did you know that that has no legal effect....the word "suppress?" Would you agree with that?

MR. CHATELAIN

Well, if that's your argument, I accept your argument. I don't have time to research it.

MR. O'NEILL

Well, now, with the amendment that Mr. Drew put on, he prohibits the sale of lottery tickets. The current constitution prohibits lotteries and the sale of lottery tickets. Now, you're a smart man. Don't you think you could figure out a way to have a lottery without selling tickets?

MR. CHATELAIN

Absolutely.

MR. O'NEILL

Well, O.K., if you can figure that out, you know that the amendment as it currently stands before us means absolutely nothing. This one does mean something. Under "Commercial Gambling" private lotteries could be defined by the legislature and prohibited. So, this one actually does mean something, doesn't it?

MR. CHATELAIN

Well, that's again your argument, Mr. O'Neill. I'm not going to debate that.

Thank you. I urge your defeat.

Motion

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Chairman, I would like, for the purpose of deleting the word "commercial" in the second sentence, permission to withdraw this amendment and then resubmit it with that word deleted, and of course, the word "gambling" beginning the sentence, and with a capital "G".

[Motion adopted without objection.
Amendment resubmitted with correction.
Motion to limit debate to ten minutes adopted without objection.]

Further Discussion

MR. SMITH

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I wish to say first I'm opposed to this amendment as I feel that it is rather meaningless. We passed a good amendment yesterday. We ask that the same language that is now in the 1921 Constitution be put back. "Gambling is a vice; the legislature should pass laws to suppress it". The people want it in there. I see nothing wrong with it. Like I told you yesterday, you said we need things to pass the constitution. This three dollar car license was put in there. I wasn't for that but it was to help pass it. I feel like we are compromising something here that I don't think is right. Talking about the legislature's going to pass it. It may, and it may not. I don't know. It says "shall pass it." But, they say that we may not get sixty-seven votes if we don't go ahead and pass this particular amendment. Well, we may not get sixty-seven votes, gentlemen, but I'm going along. I voted what I thought right yesterday. I still think it's right to leave the same language in the constitution....quit trying to play around....ridicule this. But, go ahead and vote like it is now. Leave it alone. Vote this amendment down. Let's go on with the work of the convention and put this back in the constitution. I am not going to compromise, and I hope that you all won't either. It said, rather being meaningless, "Let the legislature define gambling." I'd rather let it stay like it is. That's my feelings on it.

Further Discussion

MR. STOVALL

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, we are here to provide responsible government for the State of Louisiana for the years to come. We are here to provide the basic structure of government that will contribute to the well-being of the citizens of our state. At this moment, I deeply appreciate the great concern that I think all of you have shown as we have tried to deal with this very difficult issue. It is true that some have referred to it as being simply a moralistic issue. May I suggest that this issue is as moral as any issue, and all of the issues that we have been dealing with, are moral issues because they have to do with the future and the well-being of our people. I feel that this amendment which has been presented here really strengthens our prohibition against commercial gambling in this state, and I think that it will satisfy all groups of our people. People all over our state want an atmosphere in which our children and young people can grow and develop in a healthy, moral atmosphere. I think that this amendment will serve that purpose. I encourage your support of it. I've had the privilege of living in every section of this state. There is no people throughout the state who want organized crime, or extensive commercial gambling. I think that this provision which has been presented here really strengthens our law. I encourage your support.

Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman, and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in support of this amendment because I think this is all we need in the constitution. It contains the fact that the state, or none of its subdivisions, shall engage in any lottery operation. It also mandates the legislature to define and prohibit gambling. I think it's about as meaningful guidelines as you could possibly get into the constitution. Just because something was in the 1921 Constitution doesn't mean that it was good. It doesn't mean that it was bad, but it certainly doesn't mean it's good. If we were going to adopt the 1921 Constitution, there's no need for any of us to be here. So, I think that this sets forth the necessary guidelines...all that's necessary, for the definition of gambling--which the legislature should do from time to time when it finds something that it gets out of line, and out of practice, so that we can keep up with the mores, and the desires of people during the time. Yet, it sets the guideline that we shall not engage, as a state, or any of its political subdivisions, in any lottery operations. So, therefore, I rise in support of that and hope that you will do likewise so that we can put an end to this particular proposal and go ahead to something else.

Questions

MR. STINSON

Mr. De Blieux, as I see it, the only difference in the two is that the one that we've already adopted, it says "all lotteries," and this says "state or political subdivision." Now, don't you think that sort of leaves the gate open to...you and I could go in the lottery business and it wouldn't be prohibited?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Stinson, I think the second paragraph adequately takes care of that because it says "gambling shall be defined by and prohibited by the legislature." I think that would take care of any private lotteries you may speak about.

MR. STINSON

So, you don't need any reference to lobbyists at all, then, do you?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, you...the first part of it could be sure that the state and any of its political subdivisions ought to engage in any of the practice.

In the second paragraph, it says the legislature could prohibit any private individuals from engaging in any lottery practice.

MR. STINSON

But, I want to ask you this. Mr. Gravel, when he was first presenting this, said the only reason he was introducing it because he had to use the word "commercial." Now, he agrees to take "commercial" out, so I'm wondering about that.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, I didn't see the need of "commercial" either because that was one of my objections to the original amendment as he proposed it, because then, it meant that...it was engaged in as a business. Now this way, with the taking the word "commercial" out of it, would allow the state to even define and prohibit private gambling, if we wanted to go that far.

[Previous Question ordered. Quorum
Call: 97 delegates present and a quorum.]

Point of Information

MR. KEAN

I just want to make certain, Mr. Chairman, the amendment we are now voting on has the word "commercial" deleted from it.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Clerk, you will verify that on your official copy?

MR. POYNTER

That's correct.

It reads, "Neither the state nor any of its political subdivisions shall conduct a lottery. Gambling shall be defined by and prohibited by the legislature."

[Section reread with proposed Amendment.
Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted:
77-26. Motion to reconsider tabled.
Motion for the Previous Question on the entire subject matter. Motion withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Planchard has a technical amendment. This is a typical amendment that we've done before to correct a title:

On line 7, delete all floor amendments thereto in their entirety, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Article XII. General Provisions
* * *

Section 12. Lotteries; Gambling"

(Incidentally, by Judge Tate's amendment to the prior article, we made General Governmental Provisions Article XII, and, I believe, reserved Article II to Separation of Powers. So, that's the reason from going to...from Article II to Article XII.)

Amendment No. 2...it has to be changed, now.

On page 1, in Convention Floor Amendment No. 1 proposed by Delegate Gravel and just adopted, at the beginning of line 1 of the text, strike out "Section 14," and insert in lieu thereof "Section 12," which the staff advises me is the appropriate section under Article XII. General Provisions.

Explanation

MR. PLANCHARD

It's self-explanatory. It's very technical and very passive.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

All right. This is the Nunez amendment, Comar, Alario, and others. It would have to be...the instructions change somewhat. The text would stay the same.

On page 1, immediately after the text of the Gravel amendment just adopted, add the following paragraph:

"Nothing in this Section shall be construed to prohibit any such activity, when engaged in by a charitable, benevolent, civic or religious organization."

Explanation

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Acting Chairman and fellow delegates, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, all this amendment would do would be to...would do what many of us feel, in the southern part of this state, especially, is probably an absolute mandate from the people. There's been...it had been prohibited over a number of years. We talk about the 1921 Constitution, and we talk about gambling as a vice and shall be...legislation shall be forth as such. But, it's been there since 1921. If you will remember, in 1952 we had a State Police superintendent that did extensive raiding in this state and closed down all gambling. I think since that time, we haven't had...we haven't had it as we have known it in the past. But, evidently, the proponents of the amendment which we just adopted feel like the constitutional provisions that we've had since 1921 is sufficient to prohibit what has been prohibited.

113th Days Proceedings—January 9, 1974

Well, as you know, about four or five years ago, or six years ago, the legislature authorized by local option bingo, etc., to charitable, civic, and religious organizations. I can tell you unhesitatingly without a doubt, that in many of our communities, that the practice of bingo is extensive; that the churches participate in it; that charitable organizations participate in it; that civic organizations participate in it; and benevolent organizations participate in it. I can tell you without a doubt that it's doing good for those people who are conducting it. I've never participated in it myself. But I just pass around these halls, and the elderly people who enjoy it... I think it's a form of recreation for them. I'd hate to see it stopped. I'm not sure... what we have adopted would curtail or prohibit that particular activity. Then, I'm not sure, also, that it wouldn't allow the legislature to go ahead and start to pass laws to prohibit it. Then we'd find raids on our churches and our civic and our religious groups, and our charitable groups, and our benevolent groups, etc. I think... I don't think that the people who are proposing... this amendment want to prohibit this particular amendment that I've got here. I don't believe they do. Maybe some people do, but I don't think the majority of you do. I've said from the beginning, and I sort of believe maybe none of it should be in the constitution, we ought not authorize it by not putting it in there. But, I believe if we don't put this in here, ladies and gentlemen, just like many of you said, and I'm sure you said it rightfully; I think I understand your problem, that you'll have a lot of people against this constitution. I believe if you don't allow those activities that are now being participated in by the religious, civic, and charitable organizations, if we stop those activities, I would say to you... that they would have a lot of people on the other side of the fence that would be against this constitution. I hate to use those kind of words. But, it seems like every time somebody does something, this is what they use.

So, I would ask you in all sincerity to go along with this amendment. I think it just does up real clear what this constitution, what this convention wants to do. On the one hand you've prohibited it. You've said the legislature shall enact laws as such.

On the other hand, if we come back and say that nothing in this section shall be construed to prohibit the activities when engaged in by charitable, benevolent, civic, and religious organizations, I think it's a reasonable compromise. I think it will be satisfying all groups that are concerned with the bingo game, etc., or what they do participate in. Maybe it's wrong. Maybe the churches shouldn't have bingo. Maybe the firemen's association shouldn't have bingo. But the fact of life is, they have them. The fact of life is that many of their financial arrangements are based on this type of activity. The fact of life is if you curtail them or cut them out, Mr. Burns, I think you'd bankrupt a lot of them. I'm sure the church can find additional revenues. They have in the past, and have survived for over two thousand years. But, at this particular point, at this particular time in our history, a great amount of these organizations are deriving their revenues from this type of activity. Believe it or not, but it's a fact. The facts of it is that they fought so hard in the legislature to get it in, to be allowed to do it. The fact of the matter is that they've got so many of the local governing authorities in the area to go ahead and allow them to do it. So, what will we be doing if we prohibited them from engaging in the activities that they are now engaging to? Number 1, I really believe you'd make some people angry. In return, I think those people would take their hostilities out on the support of this constitution.

I think that we have already, as someone said, we shouldn't, by putting in all these amendments, we are spotlighting a situation that we should have left alone. Well, I possibly agree with that statement. But... the fact of life is that it's in. Someone prohibited gambling, and lotteries, etc. There's an amendment in. It's already passed. It's here. Now, how far does it go? I don't know, and I don't think you know, either. How far do you want it to go? How far do you want it to go? Do you want to really prohibit the bingos that the churches conduct, and the civic and charitable, and religious organizations conduct? Do you want to do that? Then, vote against my amendment... then vote against the amendment. But, if you think that a lot of people are, in good faith, are conducting their business and their activities in this state, then I would say you ought to pass my amendment, and I don't think it would interfere in anything you have done because we have already... we have already brought it to the attention of the public of this state. When we adopted the anti-lottery amendment, and we added on the Burns amendment, I think we focused, we polarized. We had no need to polarize the people in this convention, and the people in this state; the people who think that gambling is not a vice, or the state should be allowed to engage in lottery--there's about fourteen states, I understand, that are doing it. There are a number of them that are looking towards doing it. But, we have absolutely done it. We're here at this point in time where we either have to go ahead all the way with it, and prohibit it--just strike it all down the line, or, just allow the latitude that we've been allowing in the past. We have allowed some latitude. I think you will agree to that. I don't agree with the philosophy that what's in there now is innocuous. If it is, I think it shouldn't be. I think we should have gone all the way if we are going to go at all. But, since you have adopted that, I would ask you all, in all sincerity, to adopt this amendment. I think it tells those people--those people who now conduct those activities which you are trying to make vices and illegal--it allows them to keep doing it. It allows them to run their businesses as such. I'm just talking about if you read it carefully. I know there'll be some questions about churches going into full-scale gambling. I don't think you believe that that's the intentions of this amendment. But, they are doing it. They are conducting it on a very... you know... I'd say a substantial scale. If you go to any of our church fairs, I think you're going to find what I'm saying is an absolute truth. I don't think you can go to a church fair and turn to any corner or any booth, or come to anybody that don't give you a lottery ticket. Now, are you prohibiting that? I think you are. I think you are. I don't think they don't raffle television sets, or automobiles, or cash, or what have you. Why when I looked in the Times Picayune. There's a lottery going on the States Item, I see... I don't know if it's a lottery, but it's similar to a lottery. Are you prohibiting that? I think you are. I think you are.

I will ask you to seriously think about this amendment. It deals with charitable, benevolent, civic, or religious organizations. Now, if you think some gambling syndicate from Las Vegas can come in here and form a charitable, or religious, or civic organization, then possibly you'd better vote against it. I don't believe they can. I don't believe they can.

So, Mr. Chairman, I'll answer any questions that anybody wants to ask. But, if there's no questions, I would certainly appreciate that you vote for...

MR. CASEY

Senator Nunez, let me just remind a few people--everybody is pointing to their clocks--first of all, anybody who introduces an amendment has ten minutes to introduce it and five minutes to answer questions, a total of fifteen minutes.

Questions

MR. BURNS

Senator, I saw you and Camille Gravel over there in a huddle for about fifteen minutes, and then he came out with his amendment in which he stated that would take care of this situation. On that basis, I went along with it. Now, you're up here with this amendment in effect saying that the Gravel amendment doesn't take care of your problems, here. I've said from the very start, if you recall, that I'm in favor of churches and fire departments and different civic organizations operating bingos. But, do you think this is necessary? That's the point I make.

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Burns, I absolutely believe it's necessary or I wouldn't have it up here. The fact that you saw me talking to Mr. Gravel, I guess you could say you see me speaking to just about anybody in this convention. If I can work out a problem, I will try to. I believe if you want to do what you just said you want to do--and I think you want to do that--you'd vote for my amendment. I made no commitment; I don't think I did. I didn't. . . I don't think I spoke to you or anybody in this convention and said, if you vote for Gravel's amendment that my amendment wasn't necessary or that I would retract it. I don't think I said that to anyone here. In fact, I had a serious. . .

MR. BURNS

Well, you answered my question.

MR. NUNEZ

I had serious reservations in my mind whether I was going to vote for Mr. Gravel's amendment or not. But, I thought it was the lesser of two evils saying the amendments that have been previous passed and his amendment. But, I still think there's a reservation in my mind and many other people's mind that this amendment will do exactly what the. . . almost the majority of this convention wants to do.

MR. BURNS

Number two--this is a short question--your amendment, in my mind, is so broad that, for instance, the legislature could pass a law prohibiting the operation of slot machines. But, under your amendment, a church, we'll say, could operate slot machines. Is that right?

113th Days Proceedings—January 9, 1974

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Burns, I don't read that into it. If you think the church is going into the slot machine business, I think you'd be entitled to your opinion. I would. . .

MR. BURNS

Well, what's in there to prevent it? Well, show me what's in your amendment that would prevent it.

It ssid that any law the legislature passes doesn't. . .

MR. NUNEZ

Prevent the church from operating slot machines? I think their morals. . .

MR. BURNS

Any law that the legislature passes defining gambling and prohibiting under the Gravel amendment, your amendment said it shouldn't apply, "engaged in by a charitable, benevolent, civic or religious organization."

MR. NUNEZ

That is correct, Mr. Burns. "Neither the state or any of its political subjects shall conduct a lottery." . . I'm in the wrong one.

My amendment simply says that this does not apply to a "charitable, civic, benevolent or religious organization."

MR. JENKINS

Senator Nunez, you know I'm sympathetic with what you're trying to do. The only thing your amendment seems to be based on an erroneous assumption. The assumption being that Section 14, as it stands now, prohibits gambling. It does not. It says, "Gambling shall be defined and prohibited by the legislature." It's going to be prohibited by the legislature. The only thing prohibited here, is it not, is state run lotteries. So, there's nothing in here that does prohibit gambling, and thus, your amendment seems irrelevant. Isn't it really?

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Jenkins, I think if you want to say and tell the people of this state that there shall not be laws prohibiting the activities that we know as such that are going on in our charitable, religious and civic organizations, then you'd adopt this amendment even if it doesn't say that the legislature. . . if the legislature can do. . . the way I read the amendment, it shall define and prohibit it by the legislature." What do you mean by "prohibit it by the legislature?"

MR. JENKINS

Well, it's going to be the legislature, is it not, that does the prohibiting? This section does not prohibit it, does it?

MR. NUNEZ

Well, suppose the legislature doesn't prohibit it?

MR. JENKINS

Well, it's the same thing as under the old constitution where it says, "Gambling is a vice and the legislature shall enact laws to suppress it." That provision does not prohibit gambling. Is it not left to the legislature to suppress gambling under the 1921 Constitution, just as under the section as it stands now, by Mr. Gravel? Is that not correct?

MR. NUNEZ

I think you're correct to a certain extent, Mr. . .

MR. JENKINS

Wouldn't the appropriate time to make exceptions. . . Wouldn't the appropriate time for making exceptions for charitable organizations, etc., be at such time as the legislature may define and prohibit it in the statutes? In other words, isn't the statute on gambling both the place to define and prohibit it and make certain exceptions to it as your amendment would do?

MR. NUNEZ

Well, Mr. Jenkins, you can look at it that way. But, I think if we're going to go as far as to put the antigambling article in the constitution, that we should put the provision that would allow it. . . allow the organizations that are now doing it to do it. This state, for years, has adopted a dual role when it comes to gambling. I think you're well aware of that. But, as long as you take the proceeds from the racetrack and you allocate four or five million dollars to the various people that are allocated to, then it's not gambling. Well, that's a matter of opinion, I believe. Some people think racehorse betting is gambling. Because you take seventeen percent and give it to fifteen or twenty organizations, then certainly you're not gambling. Well, that's your opinion.

[Motion to suspend the rules to allow additional time. Rules Suspended: 74-9.]

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. . . Sammy, I realize what you're trying to do, but you don't think that the language in the Gravel amendment that was just adopted is clear enough on this particular subject matter?

MR. NUNEZ

Senator, I don't think it is. If I thought it was, I would not have introduced the amendment. I had. . . I spoke with Mr. Gravel; Mr. Burns is right. I told him that I thought that we should. . . if we're going to go ahead and prohibit the activities in the constitution that we should at least define the section that we are operating in today and allow it to operate.

MR. RAYBURN

Well, Sammy, do you share my views in reading this particular amendment that in the event it was adopted that the--I'll just use the Lions Club because that's a civic organization of which I used to be a member--the Lions Club, in my opinion, if this language is adopted, could conduct a statewide lottery throughout this state. Am I correct? Am I reading the language correct?

MR. NUNEZ

"Neither the state nor any of its political subdivisions shall conduct a lottery." I would say that very possibly, unless the legislature denied them the right to conduct that lottery, that they possibly could conduct that lottery; yes.

MR. RAYBURN

We couldn't do that, Senator, because you say "Nothing in this section shall be construed to prohibit any--to prohibit--any such activity." That would be in our constitution. Then, regardless of what the legislature wanted to do, they could not prohibit it. My interpretation of a civic organization are many organizations throughout this state, and they could conduct a statewide lottery and be within their constitutional rights. Now, if I'm wrong, I wish you'd tell me.

MR. NUNEZ

Senator Rayburn, you are partially right, you are partially wrong. But, I think that we should adopt the provision if we're going to have the other provision in there.

MR. CHATELAIN

Delegate Nunez, I have the same problem, except I'd like to go a little further. The Gravel amendment provides that "neither the state nor any of its political subdivisions shall conduct a lottery. Gambling shall be defined by and prohibited by the legislature." All right, you come back and say, then, that any civic organization, the legislature cannot prohibit any civic organization, church or other benevolent association the right to do this. In other words, in the State of Louisiana, there are hundreds of questionable religious sects, as far as I'm concerned, and there could be another sect that comes into the State of Louisiana and say, "Well, look, we want to open a church, and we want to go ahead and have a statewide lottery." Well, your amendment would permit them to do this, wouldn't it?

MR. NUNEZ

Absolutely.

MR. CHATELAIN

Wouldn't you consider withdrawing this amendment on this basis, Mr. Nunez?

MR. NUNEZ

No.

Further Discussion

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in opposition to this amendment. I think that insofar as allowing the purposes of which Mr. Nunez has intentions, I certainly think he has good intentions of that, and that can well be taken care of in the second sentence of the Gravel amendment. We don't need anything else in this particular proposal to allow that particular activity if we see fit. But, I can envision when even private, benevolent, charitable organizations may go too far, and we may need some legislation on it. If we put this kind of legislation. . . language into our constitution, it would open the door to them to do anything that they see fit. I just don't think that's what we intend, here. I certainly think that the provision as is presently worded is adequate to take care of what Mr. Nunez wants to do without letting it get out of hand by so-called benevolent and charitable organizations. As I see this particular provision and which has already been indicated by some of the questions that have been asked here, that we can have organizations that would be organized simply and purely upon the basis of conducting lotteries and things of that kind. They could do it under this particular provision. There's nothing in the world the legislature could do about it.

So, I'm going to ask you to oppose this amendment and vote it down. I think the proposal as we have it right now is good and sufficient and we should go with that and defeat all other amendments to it. I ask you to vote against the amendment.

Question

MR. ROLLINGER

Senator De Blieux, in the months of July and August, you were seen around the convention floor with a little book in your pocket. Would you explain to the delegates what was that book and what you were talking to the delegates about and giving them these little pieces of paper for?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Rollinger, I better not give away some of my secrets, here. You might think that I'm inconsistent. I don't want any opposition.

Further Discussion

MR. TAPPER

Mr. Acting Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I know most of you have your minds made up, however, I rise in support of this amendment. I see some of the problems that this amendment could raise and some of the objections that some of you have raised to it are valid. However, I am not only in support of this amendment, and I think it should be adopted to show that this convention--although Mr. Gravel's amendment did, in some manner, make it more palatable--I think that this convention should not have anything in the constitution with reference to gambling. Now, I know that I will be chastised for saying this, but nevertheless I didn't come here to receive accolades. Let us discontinue putting our heads in the sand; let us discontinue being hypocrites in this state. We've attempted for years and years and years in this country and this world to legislate morals, and we have failed pitifully, we have failed pitifully, ladies and gentlemen. Putting a prohibition in the constitution against gambling is like saying, "I'm going to stop the sun from shining tomorrow." You're not going to do it. The only thing you're doing is telling the legislature that they're going to say what is gambling, what is not, who can, who cannot. Yes, possibly under this amendment you might have slot machines operated by these charitable organizations. One question was to the effect, is this thing necessary? I think Mr. Burns said it--is it necessary in view of the Gravel amendment. I say, possibly not. But, I ask the question: "Is this provision in the constitution necessary?" Further, if it is, what are we going to do about it after you put it in there? Do you think you're going to stop gambling? Do you think you're going to stop horse race booking when you say pari-mutuel betting is legal? The people in the state are tired of the hypocritical manner in which we have been treating gambling.

So, I urge you to adopt this and to defeat the proposal.

Question

MR. CONINO

In this amendment we state that civic organizations may be allowed these games of chance. Now, I'll ask you if the Chamber of Commerce and the Young Men's Business Club, the Pontchartrain Improvement Association and Ninth Ward Improvement Association, will they be allowed, under this amendment, to have these games of chance?

MR. TAPPER

It's my interpretation, Joe--and I don't profess to be the best constitutional lawyer nor a constitutional lawyer; I'm only a delegate, here--but, the legislature, in my understanding, can and does now define charitable, benevolent, civic and religious organizations, and the legislature, after the adoption of this, will be able to continue doing this. If that presents a problem, the legislature can correct that problem.

Further Discussion

MR. ABRAHAM

Fellow delegates, it's now the ninth of January. We've got about ten days left, and we've got a lot of work to do. I would ask this convention to quit putting forth these amendments. If Mr. Tapper is correct that this is a facetious amendment and was intended to defeat the proposal, I think we've gone far enough.

It looks like the further we go, the worse it gets in trying to legislate material into this constitution. So, I think we need to look ahead. We've got just a short time to go and a lot of work to do. I would ask that we get on with our work and let's move these things along as fast as we can and try to get out of this thing.

If there are no other speakers, Mr. Chairman, I move the question on the amendment.

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected: 39-60. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Recess

Vice Chairman Roy in the Chair

[73 delegates present and a quorum.]

Amendment

MR. HARDIN

The next amendment is sent up by Delegate Casey. Amendment No. 1. On page 8, in Floor Amendment No. 1 proposed by Delegates Gravel, et al. and adopted by the convention on January 9, 1974, on line 3, after the word "and" delete the remainder of the line and insert in lieu thereof the word "suppressed" and on line 4, delete the partial word "hibition".

MR. CASEY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I understand, first of all, that as I understand the... Mr. Gravel--who offered the last amendment, which is really the body of the proposal that we're acting on right now--himself, has no opposition to this. This idea merely is to delete the word "prohibit" and substitute in lieu thereof the word that is now used in the constitution, and that is the word "suppressed." There may be a connotation that the word "prohibition" certainly may be much stricter and more prohibitive, and the word "suppressed" is something that we have jurisprudence on today, that has already been interpreted. Those in the New Orleans area have some fear that it may... there may be some prohibition against pari-mutuel betting, and we certainly do not wish to affect that.

I would ask adoption of this amendment.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

Question

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Casey, is it your view that this will maintain the present jurisprudence on this subject?

MR. CASEY

That is the real purpose of this amendment, Mr. Jenkins. I'm very fearful of the use of the word "prohibit" because that may be a mandatory obligation placed upon the legislature that they completely outlaw anything that could have a connotation of gambling, and certainly, pari-mutuel betting may. That's all I'm afraid of.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: 68-9. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. HARDIN

Delegate Segura sends up the next amendment. Amendment No. 1. On page 1, delete lines 8 through 10, both inclusive, in their entirety and delete all floor amendments adopted thereto and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Section 14. Neither the state nor any of its political subdivisions shall conduct a lottery; however, the legislature may authorize the conducting of a lottery subject to approval by a majority vote of the electors of the state in an election which shall be called and held in the manner provided by law. Gambling shall be defined by and prohibited by..."

[Motion to waive reading of the Amendment adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. SEGURA

Fellow delegates, this simply takes the Gravel amendment, the Gravel-Lanier amendment that we adopted this morning and inserts some language in order to not have to come with a constitutional amendment in the event that we ever want to . . .the people ever want to consider legalizing lotteries. I don't know that they should or they would or they ever want to, but we've tried to write this constitution to where the constitution would not . . .to where it would be flexible, and it wouldn't have to be amended. By doing this, the legislature--because you don't know what's going to happen. I mean, someday you may find it necessary to have a lottery, to want a lottery. Some states have a lottery. I'm not saying it's good; I'm not saying it's bad. What this whole section does--what this whole section does--is legalize. . . is trying to legislate against morals. So, I say, I don't think you can do that, in my opinion. I'm going to vote against the entire section. But, there may be some day where the people of this state want to consider this. If they want to consider it, then you shouldn't have to go through the motions of amending your constitution. This would give the legislature the authority to call an election. It would not legalize lotteries without the people of the state voting on it and approving it.

I'll yield to questions.

Questions

MR. CHATELAIN

Delegate Segura, did I hear you properly? You said you're going to vote against the section; is that right?

MR. SEGURA

Yes, sir.

MR. CHATELAIN

Regardless of whether this amendment passes or not?

MR. SEGURA

Yes, sir.

MR. CHATELAIN

My goodness, we're spending a lot of time, then for nothing, aren't we?

MR. SEGURA

That's correct. I don't feel this should be in the constitution.

MR. CHATELAIN

Second question, sir: could not under the existing Gravel amendment that we've adopted already, could the state not call... amend the constitution and do this very thing?

MR. SEGURA

That's what I said, and this is exactly why I put this in here. The state would have to amend. First, the legislature would take two-thirds vote. Then you'd have to amend the constitution if it ever became necessary to have a lottery, or if the people ever wanted a lottery; and it's the people themselves that are going to decide whether they want a lottery or not. If the people ever want a lottery, you don't have to take the time and go through the motions of amending your constitution.

MR. CHATELAIN

In other words, you want to make it easier to have a statewide lottery. Is that correct?

MR. SEGURA

No, sir. I want to make it easier for the people to decide. It's the people, not you and I that's going to decide.

MR. CHATELAIN

Well, I think a great deal of the people have already decided they don't want it, sir.

MR. SEGURA

I disagree with you.

MR. HENRY

Would you yield to a question to Mr. Tobias?

MR. TOBIAS

Mr. Segura, in light of the Casey amendment which we just adopted which changed the word "prohibited" to "suppressed" would you be willing to withdraw your amendment at this time, and change the word "prohibited" on the second to last line of your amendment, and change it to "suppressed"?

MR. SEGURA

Yes, sir, I would.
I so move, Mr. Chairman.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. HARDIN

On the next to the last line of the amendment, the word "prohibited" is deleted and the word "suppressed" is inserted.

MR. SEGURA

Any other questions?

MR. HENRY

Mr. Abraham, for a question.

Questions

MR. ABRAHAM

Perry, you made the statement twice that you didn't want to have to go through the motions of amending the constitution, but aren't you going through the very same motions here? A constitutional amendment would be submitted to the people, and this is going to be submitted to the people. I don't understand what you're accomplishing by this.

MR. SEGURA

You have to let the people vote on it, yes. But, to amend the constitution you have to get two-thirds vote of the legislature. This will not require two-thirds vote of the legislature. It'll require a majority vote, and then they call the election, which means that they could immediately call the election. You don't have to call the election to amend the constitution, and then call another election to do the lottery. Do you follow me?

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Segura, if we would have had a prohibition in the constitution, as they have sought to put against race betting, race horse betting, pari-mutuel betting, we would probably never have had racetracks as we've known it in the state, and you know, evidently it's doing a lot of good. One question further, if it would have been in the constitution, the Downs up in North Louisiana--I don't know what they call it; I think it's the Louisiana Downs...

MR. HENRY

Bigby Downs.

MR. NUNEZ

Bigby Downs? Whatever you want to call it, Mr. Speaker. I know Mr. Bigby tried very hard to get the funds after it was had. I don't know if he was for it, but he tried to get the money that it's bringing in, to divide it equally. Those people never would have a chance to vote on the racetrack; isn't that true?

MR. SEGURA

As far as I know, Senator, that's right.

MR. HENRY

I think it's Stinson-Bigby, or Bigby-Stinson Downs. I'm not sure.

MR. HAYES

Mr. Segura, on the last sentence here, I was wondering, after the people would decide, then what would the . . .the legislature would provide a method, and the people would approve it. Wouldn't that be sufficient, and you wouldn't need this last sentence?

MR. SEGURA

The last sentence was in Mr. Gravel's amendment... Delegate Gravel's amendment, and that's why I didn't want to take it out.

MR. HAYES

But, you don't feel the need for it. You just left it there for that reason?

MR. SEGURA

Well, the delegates voted it here, and I felt that I didn't want to go against the wishes of the delegates.

MR. JENKINS

Is it your view with this amendment, Perry, to provide that before any lottery, private or state-operated could be initiated, that it would have to be put to a vote of the people; or that only a state lottery would have to be put to a vote of the people?

MR. SEGURA

Well, I don't understand about a private lottery. I thought we were only legislating against a state lottery, or a, you know,

113th Days Proceedings—January 9, 1974

a lottery by a political subdivision. I think a private lottery, if a church wants to give a private lottery, well, that's not included in this.

Further Discussion

MR. PLANCHARD

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I am apposed to this last amendment, and I'm opposed to all future amendments pertaining to this actual proposal. I think that we have finally come up with our last amendments with something that we can all live with. It still keeps in mind the original thought I had in mind, and that was pertaining to financing state government--the prohibition of the use of lotteries to do so. It goes farther to satisfy those who are concerned with having some mention of the prohibition or the suppression of gambling. Now, I do not want my proposal to be the sacrificial lamb. I would like very much to ask you at this time, let's preserve what we have. It's good to have in the constitution. Let's vote down all the other amendments, and move on in this convention. Thank you.

MR. STOVALL

Mr. Planchard, if this amendment were passed, might it not be a possibility that the legislature at some future time, rather than dealing realistically with taxes and the needs of the state, that they would turn to this as a kind of scapegoat as an easy way out of a difficult situation?

MR. PLANCHARD

I wouldn't accuse my legislators of anything like that, Rev. Stovall. I think they're all competent people.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Mr. Planchard, wouldn't you agree that since the previous speaker was honest enough to tell us that he was against the section, there's no point in voting for this amendment because even if we voted for it, he'd vote against it anyhow?

MR. PLANCHARD

That's absolutely correct. Thank you.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. SECURA

Fellow delegates, I wish I could pass, but I can't because of the last statement that was made. I wish I were all-powerful that by my vote against this section, that it would fail. I don't know that it will fail. But, if the section passes, there may be some day when the state will have to be financed through such a system because just look at the severance tax that the legislature just passed. If anybody would have predicted that a year ago, that they would have more than doubled the severance tax, we'd all said they were crazy. You don't know what the future holds, and you're still not taking the power away from the people. So, I ask you to consider this favorably. Thank you.

[Amendment rejected: 20-66. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendments

MR. HARDIN

Amendment sent up by Mr. Shannon:

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, delete line 4 in its entirety, including all amendments adopted thereto and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Making provisions relative to gambling and lotteries".

Amendment No. 2. On page 1, delete lines 7 through 10, both inclusive, in their entirety and delete all floor amendments adopted thereto and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"ARTICLE XII. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Section 12. Gambling and Lotteries

Section 12. Gambling is a vice and the legislature shall pass laws to suppress it. Lotteries and the sale of lottery tickets are prohibited in this state."

Point of Order

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, I suggest as a point of order that this amendment is out of order, that when we adopted Mr. Cravel's amendment, the essential question before the convention was whether or not to continue with what was essentially this language or to go with Mr. Cravel's. That is once again the issue before the convention.

Ruling of the Chair

MR. HENRY

Let me look at it, Mr. Jenkins.

Mr. Jenkins, as much as I'd like to agree with you, Lord knows I would, I don't think the exact same circumstance have come before this convention yet, but I would be glad to...whose amendment?

No, now Mr. Burns had a series of amendments which were four in number, I believe. Well, it wasn't exactly the same amendment. I'm not arguing with you on the thing, Mr. Abraham, but technically speaking it was not identically the same.

[Motion to limit debate to ten minutes adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. SHANNON

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, we have argued this back and forth, back and forth, and I don't know what the prior amendments would have made it now because we added to and deleted and so forth and so on, so for the sake of clarity, I am offering this amendment. This amendment which replaces all prior amendments, let's face it, up until now deletes all prior amendments, merely tracks the present constitution, merely tracks the present constitution. These are the exact words in the present constitution, and they have served through these many years, and we have gotten the gambling that most of you wanted, with that into effect, and it will not affect those type of gambling deals in the future. So, you cannot be disturbed by that. All of this argument back and forth, I just want you to make up your mind whether you do or whether you don't. It kind of reminds me of the tale of several children were out in the backyard, and out there there was a hole of water. They had a cat, and they were trying to immerse that cat under that water, and each time just before the cat went under, he came up clawing and scratching and meowing, and they tried that about three times, and one of the children said, "Oh, let's just sprinkle her and let her go to hell." So, you've made up your mind on this, and that's not in deference to anything or anybody, but let's make up our mind whether that's true on that or not; that's beside the point. We need to get along with this convention. We have other business. Now, there's been alluded to here what the governor has said. The governor spoke to the legislature and told the legislature that he would never recommend to the people of this state a lottery except they approve it, and that would be by constitutional amendment, which is permitted. I do not want it made where the legislature can just offer an amendment. I think that it should be that the people should be able to vote on this as a whole. This does not interfere with your bingo games; it does not interfere with your pari-mutuel betting. Let me tell you one thing. It was mentioned lightly up here, but there is close to one-half million Baptists in this state who want this left in. I repeat that: one-half million Baptists in this state that want this provision left in the constitution. So, I suggest to you that you pass this amendment. Thank you.

Questions

MR. FAYARD

According to your amendment, just reading it; it says, "gambling is a vice, and the legislature shall pass laws to suppress it." Now, I believe yesterday and some today, we have gone over exactly what is gambling, and we have determined, have we not, that it is not bingo and it's not horse racing, and it's not a poker game in your home. Don't you feel that this language sort of misleads the public of this state, and those Baptists that you were referring to? In reading this, don't you feel like they would get the idea that this is going to do away with horse racing when really it doesn't; does it?

MR. SHANNON

Mr. Fayard, they've been living with that since 1921, so I suggest that they continue to live with that.

MR. FAYARD

But, Mr. Shannon, you would have to agree, would you not that this really doesn't do what it says?

MR. SHANNON

It does what the present constitution says, and I'm only tracking the present constitution here, Mr. Fayard, for the benefit of those people who have had their fears.

113th Days Proceedings—January 9, 1974

MR. FAYARD

Well, don't you think it would be a little more honest to go with Mr. Gravel's language, and tell the public exactly what it has to expect; that is, that the legislature, even under this language, can define gambling to mean whatever it wants it to mean?

MR. SHANNON

No, Mr. Fayard, because we can still have lotteries under Mr. Gravel's amendment. We can still have private lotteries; and that's one thing that I wanted to prohibit in the constitution--any type of lottery.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Shannon, if one of the fire companies in Lafourche Parish had a raffle for an automobile to get money to support the volunteer fire company, would that be prohibited by your prohibition against lotteries?

MR. SHANNON

Has it been prohibited in the past?

MR. LANIER

I'm not worried about the past, Mr. Shannon. I'm worrying about your language and what you intend it to mean. Now, is that what your language is intended to mean?

MR. SHANNON

I intend for this language to mean exactly what it meant in the present constitution....that it's not prohibited those things, that's what it means now.

MR. LANIER

Well, is it your position that when you say "lotteries and the sale of lottery tickets are prohibited in this state," that that means except for nonprofit organizations?

MR. SHANNON

I would suggest that that's the position that the legislature has taken on it up to this time, and I would think that they would continue to do so, yes. That's my intention.

MR. LANIER

Would you have any objection to an amendment that added that language?

MR. SHANNON

No, sir, I don't want any more amendments. Let's get this dog now and run him or let's kill him.

MR. LANIER

Well, now, if that's what you intend, don't you think it'll be a lot clearer if we put that language on?

MR. SHANNON

No, because I am merely tracking the present constitution.

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Shannon, if the convention adopts this amendment, I would say there is a definite need for the amendment that I and seven or eight delegates presented earlier that you defeated. Would you in return allow us to put that amendment on, allowing the charitable, benevolent, civic, and religious organizations to have bingo games?

MR. SHANNON

Mr. Nunez, you've been living and doing these things since 1921. Why are you up in the air now?

MR. NUNEZ

We just want to make it legal, what we're doing. If it's illegal, we don't want to be illegal.

MR. SHANNON

Well, it must be legal.

MR. LANDRUM

Mr. Shannon, do you know that most of the communication, the letters, the phone calls, the telegrams that I have received from the clergy has been from, not just Baptists, but Methodists, Presbyterians, quite a few denominations? Do you know that?

MR. SHANNON

Yes, I realize that, Rev. Landrum, but I was speaking because I am a Baptist, and I am familiar with the Louisiana Baptist Convention and their resolutions, and I was only expressing that denomination. I do realize that there's other denominations that are for an article of this type.

Further Discussion

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, you know the thing that disturbs me about this discussion, it seems that nobody in here really believes that gambling is a vice under all circumstances. But, they believe apparently that it's going to lose us some votes in North Louisiana if we don't include the present constitutional language. In other words, the assumption seems to be that the people of the state are stupid, and that they can't understand the language in this constitution, that they can't understand that when you say gambling is a vice, and the legislature shall enact laws to prohibit it, that...or to suppress it, that you have done nothing. Well, they can understand that. They can understand that perfectly well. They know that there is gambling in this state right now, that there is legal gambling in this state. They realize that, and they know that if you say gambling is a vice and is going to be suppressed, that you're being hypocritical. They know that. What Mr. Gravel's amendment did, I think it's a workable compromise because on the one hand it prohibited a state-run or locally-run lottery, just as many people in this state would like to see us do. On the other hand, it also made a stand against gambling in general, but left the specifics of it up to the legislature. Now, we know that there's going to continue to be gambling in this state. We know that horse racing and betting on horse racing is going to continue. We know that bingo, and we know that football boards, and we know that a lot of other things are going to continue. Now, we have language in Mr. Gravel's amendment which would certainly be inoffensive to most people in this state. I think any reasonable person would find the Gravel language inoffensive because it continues the essence of the present law with regard to gambling. One thing Mr. Shannon said was that he wanted the old constitution's language as opposed to Mr. Gravel's because he wanted to make sure that private lotteries were prohibited. Private lotteries are not prohibited under the 1921 Constitution. It says "lotteries and the sale of lottery tickets are prohibited in this state," but unless the legislature enacts a criminal penalty to punish someone for selling lottery tickets, that is no effective prohibition or bar whatsoever. It depends on statute for its effectiveness. Without a statute, it is ineffective. So, the 1921 Constitution is no effective prohibition against private lotteries at all. It's unfortunate that most people don't have a copy of this report by the Governor's Council of Economic Advisors, which was made available to the legislature last month. The question that it discussed was "should Louisiana adopt a state lottery?" It's an in-depth study of this question, and it concludes that Louisiana should not adopt a state lottery for many reasons. I wholeheartedly agree with and subscribe to this report. It's excellent, and I wish that if you have a chance to read it, you would. What it says, though, is that it may be desirable at some time in the future to have privately run lotteries. Now, that's going to be true and that's going to be possible either under the old constitution's language, or the new constitution's language. There is nothing that makes it legally impossible, and it will be up to the legislature either way. The question is, whether or not we're going to put moralistic preaching, which is hypocritical in nature in the new constitution just as it is in the old one. Whether or not we're going to purport to proscribe private action when we are not in actuality doing so. I think the Gravel amendment is a reasonable compromise, and I think it's the only thing that can get sixty-seven votes. If we adopt Mr. Shannon's language, I really don't think that this convention's going to agree to anything on this question.

Motion

MR. SMITH

Mr. Chairman, I think this is a good amendment. I'm not coming down front. I'm not going to make any talk on it, but I feel like everybody's got their mind made up, and I now move the previous question.

MR. HENRY

We have one other speaker on the list.

MR. SMITH

Maybe he'll waive.

MR. HENRY

Mr. Tapper, do you pass? The gentleman refuses to waive. Do you insist on your motion, sir?

MR. SMITH

Yes, sir. I insist on it.

MR. TAPPER

Mr. Chairman, and fellow delegates, first, thank you for allowing me to speak. I will not belabor the point. However, I feel that I should get up in opposition to this amendment. Since I said what I said earlier in the day, that I believe that we're wasting our time here in the convention with this type of amendment, or with this type of proposal. I've asked you to vote against the proposal before, and to reiterate what I said before; you know we've attempted to stop the gambling in this state for years and years, and haven't been able to do so. I don't think that we ever will be able to do so, and I'd like to ask each and every one of you who are delegates here--and I don't want to put you on the spot--but, I'd like to ask every one of you to examine your consciences and you within your own conscience make a determination as to whether or not you feel gambling is a vice. Now, I'm not saying that all of you gamble. But, I feel certain that quite a few of you do. As I said before, you know, we've been very hypocritical in this state, and I'm not calling you hypocrits because I've been a hypocrit, too. I've voted against it...against gambling in the legislature, and that was hypocritical on my part because I thought maybe that's what the people wanted us to do. But, I believe that we have to be realistic in a constitutional convention. You know, the last constitutional convention was in 1921. This...we started in 1973 and we thought we'd get finished, but we had to extend it because we couldn't. The year is '74 now. It could be that in the next fifty years or fifty-one years, we'd have another. But, then, again, it could be that it might take another hundred years before the people would allow an assembly like this to come back because we've heard the criticism of the people throughout this state as to what we are doing here. Now, I agree with most of the things that we've done here, but because of some things that I am not aware of, the general public believes today--and I believe today--that if this constitution, as we have it in its present form, were put to the people today, that it would fail miserably, miserably. I think you feel the same way. You don't agree with the fact that they believe that, or that they should do that, and I don't either. I think that the constitution that we have prepared here is far more superior than the one that was adopted in 1921. But, nevertheless, this is the way the people feel throughout this state. I hope that in the next few days before we've completed our deliberations that we can convince them otherwise. But, we're not going to do it if we attempt to continue to be hypocritical. The people throughout this state know. They know what's going on. They know what the people want, and they know that you're not going to prohibit gambling just because you say, "It shall not be done in this state, in this..." I urge the defeat of this amendment.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. SHANNON

Mr. Chairman, I'm going to waive closing, but I would like a record vote quorum call, and a record vote on the amendment.

Point of Information

MR. AVANT

Would you be so kind as to have the Clerk read the section as it now stands, as amended, without Mr. Shannon's amendment on it?

MR. HENRY

Read it as it now stands, Mr. Clerk, please.

Recess

MR. HENRY

It would appear that we have completed--at least for the moment--most of or all of the committee and delegate proposals that we're going to take up for the moment. We're going to begin on the reports of the Style and Drafting Committee in just a few minutes. We've got about ten days left, and I would hope that we'll use it as wisely as possible. We're getting to the point now where we're talking about style and we're talking about drafting, and we're not talking about substance. We're beyond the point of the educational part of it. I would hope that you all would help us expedite the proceedings of the convention because we have a great deal of mechanical work yet to be done before a week from Saturday. The governor is going to come and address us in the morning at 10:00 o'clock--in the morning at 10:00 o'clock. I'd hoped that he would be able to come tomorrow afternoon but, because of a conflict in his schedule, it was impossible. So, I have extended the invitation to him, and he has accepted the invitation to address us at 10:00 o'clock in the morning.

[Quorum Call: 91 delegates present
and a quorum.]

Motion

MR. ARNETTE

Mr. Chairman, I rise to bring up a problem to the convention. When we passed the multi-parish banking prohibition, we made an exception for one of the banks that is now operating as a multi-parish bank--that being Calcasieu Marine National Bank over in Lake Charles. Now, when we drafted this language, we put the word "operating" in our proposal, and we made a slight mistake I guess in meanings of terms. But under the same statute that authorized them to operate in this multi-parish area--the four parishes being Cameron, Calcasieu, Allen, and Jeff Davis--all the other banks were given the equal rights of operating within this four-parish area. Now, what we've done by putting "operating" in, we have protected the big bank, who now has these branches, but we have hurt these small banks who had the right by statute before, and we've taken this right away from them. Now, I don't want to open up the entire thing and bring up everything for debate; all I want to do is rectify one inequity that we have, and that being to have this grandfather clause apply to all these banks equally that had the same rights before. Very simply... Mr. Chairman, are my amendments passed out?

MR. HENRY

No, sir; they haven't been. We'll have them passed out.

MR. ARNETTE

Pass out my amendment and the copy of the proposal as it was enrolled, please.

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman, just a point of order so that we understand how we're going to operate from here on in. It was my understanding that where a proposal had been adopted and referred to Style and Drafting that any proposed amendments to that particular proposal had to await its being referred back to the convention by Style and Drafting.

MR. HENRY

You're absolutely correct.

MR. KEAN

And if we're now going to begin to take up amendments prior to that, I've got a couple I want to get in the mill, too.

MR. ARNETTE

Well, Mr. Kean, I would seek the indulgence of the convention as a whole to allow a suspension of the rules for this very limited purpose, and for this sole purpose, and I will explain further if you'd allow me. As I told you, by putting in the word "operating" instead of "authorized", I think that the meaning of the convention was not exactly what we intended. I think our intent was to protect all these small banks as well as the large banks. I seek a suspension of the rules to rectify this inequity. There are several reasons why I think it should be without much opposition. First of all, I talked to many, many of the delegates here, and I have heard no one opposed to this. Secondly, it's purely of local interest to these four parishes, and no delegate in those four parishes that I have talked to has any objection to this. It will save a debate in Style and Drafting because this might require or might be construed to be a substantive change. Now, all I seek to change by this amendment is change the word "operating" to "authorized by the Revised Statute 6:55" which brings the constitution that we're proposing in direct, exact line with our statutes as we had before. Now, let me reiterate: all this does is gives these small banks the right that they had under the statutes and makes them equal to this big bank we gave a special treatment to. In other words, the grandfather clause, I hope, would apply to all equally. I've talked to all affected parties. Mr. Roy, the author of the original amendments on this, does not have any objection; the Calcasieu Bank who got the benefit of this grandfather clause has no objection. I've talked to one of their representatives, and it's purely a local problem and is completely all right with the affected parties. I hope we would save valuable time in Style and Drafting Committee and on this floor if we would solve this problem right now.

Therefore, I move to suspend the rules to allow us to report out Committee Proposal 35, out of the Style and Drafting Committee and to consider Section 9 for the limited and sole purpose of considering my amendments that you have on your desk now. Then, we can resubmit this back to Style and Drafting. It is merely to rectify this inequity. I ask your vote on this to help out the people affected.

Question

MR. ROY

Mr. Arnette, I think that you would also move that your amendment only and no other amendments be considered with respect to this section, and it would be opened up for the sole purpose of passing your amendment and no others; is that right?

MR. ARNETTE

That's exactly right. That's why I said the "sole and limited purpose" would be to consider my amendment and no other. That way we're not going to get embroiled in the whole question of multi-parish banks. All we're going to do is, I think, put the true meaning of what this constitutional convention wanted to do, but we just had a slightly poor choice of words.

Point of Order

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, my question is directed at you now, as a point of order. What Mr. Arnette has requested is, as I understand, permissible under the rules, and if the convention votes to suspend the rules for that purpose, then it would vote only to take up his amendment and no other amendment to that section; is that right?

MR. HENRY

Well, what he's doing is moving for just an almost blanket suspension of the rules, when he limits it for that purpose. Certainly that's what we're going to limit it to, but nothing would—in all honesty if the delegates decided to further suspend the rules, and it could keep going on. But, the limitation placed on his intentions by the nature of the motion that he makes would, unless the convention takes further action, prohibit him from offering anything else.

MR. ROY

Then, if the convention—I understand—if the convention voted to suspend the rules further, it would take another vote and another sixty-seven votes.

MR. HENRY

That's right. That's correct.

MR. ROY

All right.

MR. ARNETTE

So, in other words, if you vote for a suspension of the rules here, you are voting only to consider my amendment and rectify this situation and no other.

Point of Order

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Yes, sir. It's directed to you, Mr. Chairman.

Under the rules, there's something about a yellow amendment or something when there is a possibility of a question of a change, and that could be taken care of in that manner, I understand. Style and Drafting; I heard the Judge mention it.

MR. HENRY

No, sir. What's going to happen if the convention allows it will be that he will move to suspend the rules for the purpose of discharging the proposal from the committee. Then, if everything goes the way he plans, then what we'll do is once we get it here, we'll adopt his amendment, then readopt the section, and then the proposal, and then order it reengrossed and report it back to Style and Drafting. Now, the color of the amendment is confusing me. I'm not....

MR. CHAMPAGNE

I understand exactly what he's proposing. The only thing that I'm saying is through the setup procedure as now, it could have been taken care of very easily as one thing we did in Revenue and Taxation, too. In other words, there is a position to take care of it without suspending the rules. I have....

MR. HENRY

Yes, sir, you could do it in the normal course of events once it came out of Style and Drafting, but still it's going to take a suspension of the rules for the purpose of reopening that section. At some point in time, it's going to require a suspension of the rules.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

I have absolutely no objections.

MR. HENRY

Yes, I understand. This is a substantive change, though, as opposed to a style or drafting change.

Point of Order

MR. ROEMER

Mr. Chairman, is my logic straight or incorrect here? Even though we were to suspend the rules and reopen this matter for the express purpose of this particular amendment, the convention could still....then we have to revote on that whole proposal; don't we? So, we have the danger here, in my mind—am I true—of voting it down, even though we accepted his amendment, that we could vote the whole thing down.

MR. HENRY

You take that chance. There's no skirting it, but it would... You're right.

Question

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Chairman, Mr. Arnette, I believe that the intentions of this convention when we passed that section was to do no violence to that situation that you have over in your area. That was the way I voted several times with Mr. Roy and Mr. Roemer's, I think, amendment—to do no violence to those banks that were now practicing multi-bank or branch banking concepts. I would recommend—and I don't know what procedure—it's been said before; but it seems like to me it was a controversial issue, and it still is controversial. I've heard things in this stand this morning that the big banks were trying to get the provision out. I would hate to see us open this up and get into a situation whereby we would become involved in the controversy again after we've passed it. Would you get with the chairman of Style and Drafting? I would be willing to vote—I don't know how you could do it—that the intentions of this convention, don't you agree, would be to do exactly what you're trying to do with your amendment, and do it by Style and Drafting rather than opening up the article.

MR. ARNETTE

Well, Mr. Nunez, the reason I choose to take this vehicle to do what I would like to do is because I don't think there is any opposition to my amendment at all, and I thought it would be very quickly passed by the convention. The only problem is I figure if I would bring it up this way, it would save us first of all time in Style and Drafting, presenting the case before them, having them introduce the caveat, have us vote on it again. We're going to have to vote on it again on the floor anyway.

MR. HENRY

Now, look, let's just make our answers and our questions as brief as possible. We've already spent about fifteen minutes on this.

113th Days Proceedings—January 9, 1974

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Arnette, just for your information, there is opposition. I've just been told that there's opposition to it. I'm not opposed to it, but...

Point of Information

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman, point of information. As I understand it, if we do what Mr. Arnette is asking us to do and then the convention adopts his amendment, that then the section, as amended, will have to be readopted, and that will require sixty-seven votes.

MR. HENRY

Correct, sir.

MR. AVANT

And if it does not get sixty-seven votes, it's dead as a dodo; isn't it?

MR. HENRY

Well, it's not necessarily dead, but it's not real healthy is what it...it could get sixty-six.

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman, if we bring this back up now under suspension of the rules, do we then have an opportunity to debate the section all over again?

MR. ARNETTE

Mr. Chairman, in the interest of time, I didn't think it would be controversial, but since it seems like it might have some controversial aspects, we'll just go through Style and Drafting on it and get them to introduce the caveat to the convention.

MR. HENRY

I think you're making a wise decision, Mr. Arnette.

PROPOSALS ON THE CALENDAR FOR APPROVAL OF FINAL STYLING

[Motion to call Committee Proposal No. 21 from the calendar adopted without objection.]

Committee Proposal No. 21

MR. HARDIN

Committee Proposal No. 21 by Delegate Dennis, and many other delegates, members of the Committee on the Judiciary.

A proposal making provisions for the judiciary branch of government, and necessary provisions with respect thereto.

MR. HENRY

This is very tedious, and it's got to be done very meticulously. Our purposes will best be served if you will do your best to get in your seats and remain as quiet and as attentive as is possible. Proceed, Justice Tate.

Explanation

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, before bringing up the amendments, I would like to refresh your memory as to the procedure we will follow. All of you have been distributed a package of materials with a big "I" on the front, followed by a green package and a yellow package and a white package. Now, those who do not have the package and who want it, if they will raise their hands, the pages will bring you to them. If you're right next to a friend, just take one because we did just pass out a hundred and thirty before, and we lost some. If there's any shortages, pages, there's a few more over behind that counter not collected.

To refresh your memory, what we are doing, sometime ago--it passed the floor--was the first enrollment of the Judiciary Article, a white piece of paper, which I suggest to you you need not look at unless you are going to meticulously check the lines and page because on the green collection of papers on the left hand side is the same text that passed the floor. On the right hand side is the stylized version which puts into consistent language the same language, the same concepts, that were on the left hand side. To refresh your memory as to the procedure, this passed through a staff draft of our senior staff, then through the Style and Drafting Committee, then to the substantive committee headed by Judge Dennis, and then back to reconcile any views that might have changed the sense or the substance, and then it is now to you. Now, these amendments will be called up section by section. They're on the third white sheet collection that says Amendment 1, Amendment 2. But, most of you probably will be like me who won't follow it. Someone who's got more sense than me is following this thing by line and page. Senator De Blieux will follow it, I know, and I'm glad he will. Mr. Dennery will, to keep us honest, and Mr. Perez has already double-checked it. Now, the speaker will call the amendments slowly, section by section. We'll just mention briefly--you'll see on the right hand side where changes are made in the inked in numbers. You will be able to see what they are. Before I report on these amendments, I would like Judge Dennis, the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, to ask him if he would like to say a word.

Further Discussion

MR. DENNIS

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, the Judiciary Committee has reviewed all of the changes recommended by the Style and Drafting Committee and has approved of them. So, we join with the Style and Drafting Committee and ask that you adopt the changes in style and drafting recommended.

Amendment No. 1

MR. TATE

Thank you, Judge Dennis. On Article V, Section 1, as you see in the right hand side, there were two changes made. They changed the word "shall be" to "is", and they changed the word "constitution" to "article" because nowhere else in the constitution are courts authorized to be created except by this article.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 2

MR. TATE

In Amendment 2, with regard to Section 2, you will see we added a comma to be consistent, and we added an "a" in front of court of appeal to be consistent with the styling.

[Amendment No. 2 adopted without objection.]

MR. TATE

In Section 3, a slight error was made when the floor said it was four ten-year terms instead of fourteen years, and...no, that's a joke, and the last time I made a joke up here I learned about that.

MR. HENRY

Let's keep bringing on the bacon, Judge.

Amendment No. 3

MR. TATE

That's a terrible meat, sir. You'll see we changed a phrase to make it in line with the general consistency to say that "the term of a Supreme Court judge shall be ten years," instead of the term "the judge of the Supreme Court." Saves a couple of words.

[Amendment No. 3 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 4

MR. TATE

All right. In Amendment No. 4 we made just stylistic changes of tense, and in line with the consistent philosophy throughout the constitutional provisions, when we spoke about the legislature, the general intent of the membership in every instance we could determine except once or twice was they meant "by law." They may pass a law, and when we say by two-thirds of the elected members, it was by law enacted by two-thirds of the members. So, in order to carry out that consistent intent throughout the constitution, we so recommended these changes.

113th Days Proceedings—January 9, 1974

[Amendment No. 4 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 5

MR. TATE

On Amendment 5, the changes were strictly to singularize where we used plurals, to make resentment structure without changing the sense, to do away with the possessive, and in general, all through this, unless you have any questions, they're just strictly stylistic changes in the interest of consistency.

Questions

MR. JENKINS

Sir, I have a question on lines 32 and 33. The original language said that the following cases shall be appealable: "a case in which a law or ordinance has been declared unconstitutional." Then the style and drafting changes say "a case shall be appealable to the Supreme Court if a law or ordinance has been declared unconstitutional." I'm wondering is your change, perhaps, ambiguous in that it might be argued that a case which comes about under a law which has previously been declared unconstitutional might be considered appealable under your style and drafting changes, whereas it clearly would not be under the original language?

MR. TATE

We thought, Mr. Jenkins--perhaps missed the full force of your question--we thought the appeals had to be always some cases because the appeals come from cases. We did not think it made any difference. Would you explain again, sir? I'm sorry if I...

MR. JENKINS

Well, under the original proposal, it was clear that a case is appealable if, in that case, the law or ordinance in question in the case was declared unconstitutional; whereas it appears in the style and drafting changes that the interpretation might be that a case is appealable if it involves a law which has been declared unconstitutional.

MR. TATE

No, sir. No, Mr. Jenkins, because it says "a case shall be appealable if a law or ordinance has been declared unconstitutional." I think within its context it means within that case, sir. I see what you mean, but I see no problem with this, if I may. But, I see your question, sir.

[Amendment No. 5 adopted without objection.]

Point of Information

MR. TAPPER

Point of information, Mr. Chairman. We're adopting amendments to these sections, and my question is: can we adopt these amendments to the section without a record vote and without having sixty-seven votes? I'd like to have a ruling on that because...

MR. HENRY

Under the rules, yes, sir, we can.

MR. TAPPER

But don't we readopt the section after... Shouldn't we have to do that?

MR. HENRY

No, sir, we are following the rules as set out, Mr. Tapper. I think you are confusing the rules relative to Style and Drafting with the rules of the adoption of sections. Don't let Senator Nunez lead you astray. Proceed, Judge.

Amendment No. 6

MR. TATE

Ladies, gentlemen, and Senator Nunez, now on Amendment 6, there was a simplification of language and a combination of two...the two sections. As originally drafted, you remember, we needed to say when a vacancy occurs, because at that time, as the committee drafted it, it would not necessarily have gone to the senior judge. The present chief justice is a very great chief justice, incidentally, and they wanted to be sure that he was not disrupted in service. Since we retained the present system, that was no longer necessary, so it was possible to simplify the language as done.

I move the adoption, Mr. Chairman, unless there's some questions.

[Amendment No. 6 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 7

MR. TATE

Section 7 involves some standardization of language with ...when we say "has authority"...the standard language is may... it means may. We added a comma, I believe, in line with our general drafting.

[Amendment No. 7 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 8

MR. TATE

In Amendment 8, we used the...we simply clarified the language slightly by saying, "with one court of appeal in each," and saved a few words. Then, we standardized the use of the judgment to a judgment, a district court, etc., and we rearranged some of the clauses or phrases to put them closer to their modifiers, or something. I can't read your writing, Lee.... Any questions?

[Amendment No. 8 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 9

MR. TATE

Now, for Amendment 9 has to do with Section 9 as it passed the floor, you remember, with the Miller amendment. Later, in the yellow amendments, you later, this convention, with the concurrence of Mrs. Miller, adopted the Drew amendment which left out some of the language. But, on our first go 'round, we just approved...we just stylized the language as it originally passed the floor. When we get to the yellow amendments, we'll call your attention to the inconsistency between the two versions and ask for your...go faster?

[Amendment No. 9 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 10

MR. TATE

Section 10 again has to do with standardization of language omitting needless words, making a consistent sort of parallelism, and adding numbers for the sake of clarity.

If there are any questions, Mr. Chairman? Otherwise, I would move its adoption, sir.

[Amendment No. 10 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 11

MR. TATE

Section 11 again, in Amendment 11, Mr. Chairman, involves just using shorter words, and we think, little clearer language, omitting some words that seem to have no function. If there are no questions....

[Amendment No. 11 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 12

MR. TATE

Section 12 was, in effect, a simple incorporation language leaving out "there is" in line with the Style and Drafting Manual that we...usually, when you say "there is" you don't need it. You can just say whatever follows is.

[Amendment No. 12 adopted without objection.]

113th Days Proceedings—January 9, 1974

Amendment No. 13

MR. TATE

Likewise in Section 13, we changed "has authority" to "may" in line with the general Style and Drafting Manual on that issue. Amendment 13, Mr. Chairman, if there are no objections.....

[Amendment No. 13 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 14

MR. TATE

Amendment 14....Section 14 we simply singularized the parishes in the district judge in line with the consistent usage throughout the Style and Drafting.

If there are no questions, Mr. Chairman....

[Amendment No. 14 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 15

MR. TATE

On Section 15, which is Amendment 15, we rearranged the courts in the proper hierarchy. We standardized the language. We rearranged the section number. Most of our other exceptions....stylistic changes, were simply to make standard language....use standard language, and to keep related words together, and substitute words for phrases. The one thing that we did do here is that Section 15.1, the Jack Avant-Hawk Daniel amendment, was added. It said, "a judge of a city court shall be elected to the same term as a district judge." Rather than having a separate Section 15.1....we just added "city judge" here when it says the term....formerly says "the term of a district or parish judge," it says, "the term of a district, parish, or city court judge shall be six years. Mr. Singletary....Mr. Chairman, are there any questions?"

Questions

MR. SINGLETARY

Judge Tate, what are the little brief, descriptive words following the section? Are they supposed to reflect the little title at the beginning after each number?

MR. TATE

Yes, sir....

MR. SINGLETARY

I see (D) says "number of judges," and it's not reflected up there in the descriptive....should that be up there?

MR. TATE

Oh. No, sir. I'm sorry. The....we took a judgment that the section title should not necessarily be a complete index to what everything in it....but this would be generally descriptive of what is concerned, because in some of the longer, later articles, it would have been an awfully long title. So, we thought that simply that if you generally suggested what was in the amendment....in the article, and then, I understand, the indexing will pick up the subtitles for easy reference.

[Amendment No. 15 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 16

MR. TATE

On Section 16 which was repeating most of the language from the prior constitution on the exclusive jurisdiction of the district courts, we tried to break down that sentence with....let's see. We tried to break down that first sentence into two sentences. Let's see. We tried to clarify the language in lines 10 and 11 of the old section to say the same thing more clearly in 9, 10, and 11, of what the jurisdiction is. There will be a caveat on this, will there not? Later on, we will bring to your attention a slight change that we were unwilling to make ourselves, although we figured that it was your intent, which is the traditional language as used here that the district court has exclusive jurisdiction when the state, or a political corporation or a succession as a defendant. Political corporation has been in the constitution a long time. It was defined at one time in the projet, '54 Projet attempted to define it.

In the present constitution, we use "political subdivision" to refer to local entities, but that doesn't quite include these political corporations....the....perhaps it might include the domed stadium, but things like the R.F.C. and so, we will later in a....ask you to consider adding to that not only political corporation, but political subdivision to carry out your full intent. But, that's a later amendment. That is, otherwise....the changes submitted are to omit needless words, take out a useless colon, etc.

Mr. Chairman, if there any....I yield to any questions.

[Amendment No. 16 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 17

MR. TATE

Section 17....we....simply stylistic changes of changing a....using an indefinite article in the context and omitting needless words.

I'll yield to any questions, Mr. Chairman.

[Amendment No. 17 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 18

MR. TATE

All right. Section 18, one of the amendments requires a little explanation, but not much, I hope. The others, except for the addition of Section 16, there are stylistic changes only about voiding a needless word, etc. We....as it passed the floor, it said, "Notwithstanding any provision of this article to the contrary." In context, this was a Tate-Tobias amendment. We went out and got the floor debate, the transcript. Senator De Bieux said, "Well, what do you mean?" The debate plainly indicates that it was in deference to Mr. Jackson's worry that the definition of the district court's jurisdiction of felonies, of conduct and duty constituting felonies, would possibly take away from the juvenile courts their jurisdiction.

In order to avoid any possibility, we added "notwithstanding any provisions of this article," meaning only Section 16. The floor debate clearly illustrates that....all that was involved....in order to clarify the intent, we recommended the stylistic change to add Section 16.

Questions

MR. SINGLETARY

Judge Tate, you said that the indexing is going to be according to the titles....it's going to pick up the titles?

MR. TATE

The subtitles, yes, sir.

MR. SINGLETARY

The subtitles. Well, since this paragraph deals with both juvenile and family courts, shouldn't the description say juvenile and family courts?

MR. TATE

We...goofed, Mr. Singletary. We should have. It was a floor amendment. We didn't pass it in the title.

MR. SINGLETARY

I recommend that change.

MR. TATE

Well, the trouble....our trouble is at this point, we either can only take the Style and Drafting amendment, or take the floor amendment. So, I'm sorry. We tried to get a one hundred percent perfect job, but even a fellow who likes bacon makes mistakes from time to time.

Point of Information

MR. JENKINS

Why can't we just move for a suspension of the rules to allow him to make that slight change? I so move, if I may.

MR. HENRY

Well, no, now, we can either do that, but this is going to be resubmitted to Style and Drafting, I believe, Mr. Jenkins, where that could be taken care of. You can do what you want to on the thing. But, it's going back to Style and Drafting. So, it...when you suspend the rules, you know, you are going to open up that section again. So...

113th Days Proceedings—January 9, 1974

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, can I suggest this, maybe. If we will note this. It comes back to us for rearrangement. We will, at a certain point, there are maybe one or two other places, no more than I...I don't think we have any more in this section. But, last time when we opened it up, we inadvertently left out commas in that floor amendment...Mr. Chairman, I suggest, maybe, if we will note that this change will, at one time, when we get the final enrolled copy, we'll come and try to rearrange it as to permit....

[Amendment No. 18 adopted: 77-6.]

MR. TATE

Section 19. The language was standardized. We standardized the language...oh! it's very good. This is the first time that it's come up in this article. It has come up in others. It says, "mayors' courts and justice of the peace courts existing at the time of the adoption of this constitution." The question then came whether they meant on the day the people voted on it, or the day it came into effect. Since in this instance it would take a constitutional amendment to, as far as the justice of the peace courts are concerned, we thought we would carry out the intent which was to continue the...those existing on the effective date of the constitution. We thought it made little difference, but it had to be clarified whether it was the day of the election, or the effective date. Generally speaking through the constitution, we have been using on the effective date, although we're trying in a given instance, when it doesn't mean on the effective date, but something else, to specify that date.

Further Discussion

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I do not rise at this time in opposition to the particular proposed amendment by Style and Drafting. But, I did want to very clearly set forth before the convention that we do have a problem as far as this convention is concerned as to the proper use of the words when we come around to the effective date of certain provisions because there are...we have in a number of different places used different terminology. In one case, we may have meant upon the effective date of the constitution. In other cases, we say "as now exist." I'm satisfied that the great majority of the delegates were thinking in terms of what they know exists today, not when it may exist upon the effective date of the constitution. I only wanted to make these brief remarks at this time so that the adoption of this particular amendment would not be construed as standardization of language to be used throughout, whenever we talk about when something becomes effective.

[Amendment No. 19 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 20

MR. TATE

Section 20, Amendment 20, is...oh! In amendment 20, we... in Section 34 as it passed the floor, it said, "No attorney general, judge, so and so...shall have a salary or retirement benefits diminished during his term of office." This Section 21 referred only to judges and said, "No term of office or compensation." Because the two sections didn't include totally similar things, we took the judge's reference out of the former Section 34, which is on page 45, and put it here as to retirement benefits. We left the... what was included, as with regard to the attorney general, district attorney, and so on, in former Section 34, now Section 32 on page 45.

[Amendment No. 20 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 21

MR. TATE

Now, we go to Amendment 21, Section 21, which, on your green page is 27, and, I believe, 28.

The changes involved here were again strictly stylistic, using standard language, adding commas, putting phrases in a better place, using shorter words where meaning the same thing, trying to put in the same sentence the related ideas.

[Amendment No. 21 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 22

MR. TATE

All right.

Amendment 22, which is to Section 22, which is on page 29 of your green copies, again involves using standard language and consistent form with regard to where we place exceptions, the...excuse me...omission of needless words, and doing our best to use shorter..short sentences when a long sentence could be broken into two.

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

[Amendment No. 22 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 23

MR. TATE

Section 23, which is Amendment 23, that's on page 31; we later will have a caveat. I'll tell you about it at the time, which it strictly has to do with the standard time when you have the qualifications, either at election or time of qualification. As it passed the floor, it said, "Shall have practiced law in this state for at least five years prior to his election." This green...copy, we are just stylizing the language by omitting a needless word or two, and putting a separate thought in a separate sentence. But, we will come back with the second yellow amendment to use a standardized time of eligibility for office.

[Amendment No. 23 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 24

MR. TATE

Now, Section 24...Section 24 which is page 32 of the green copies, was a long section that was restyled. It looks longer, but it's because the margins are different, to use consistent language throughout, parallel uses, lower case titles, and enumeration in order...not to have one big long sentence about because, for instance.

[Amendment No. 24 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 25

MR. TATE

Section 25 deals with the attorney general, and is.....

Motion

MR. STAGG

Mr. Chairman, I'd like to move that we pass over Section 25 and Section 26 which deals with the attorney general, and take that up after the completion of the rest of the Styling and Drafting on the Judiciary Article.

MR. TATE

Mr. Stagg, I know we are going to bring to the floor with the executive department...a question of where this goes. We will... the floor will have a clear choice. But, I understand one of our problems, now, if you are wasting against the mechanical time of this passing the floor, and people typing things out in final enrolled copies. I think if it passes the floor in your form tomorrow, when we rearrange things, we will come back to take this out. But, I think, if you wouldn't mind, we could get rid of the stylizing now and leave the question of which article it goes under until later.

MR. STAGG

Well, Judge Tate, if we clearly understand, it's simply what we are approving today are the words on the page, and not necessarily that they belong in the Judiciary Article, then I will acquiesce.

113th Days Proceedings—January 9, 1974

MR. TATE

Thank you, Mr. Stagg. That's my clear understanding of how it's going to be handled, sir.

Amendment continued

MR. TATE

All right. Section 25 again just used the shorter sentences, and used the active voice, for instance, in the last sentence, instead of the passive, in line with our consistent usage.

Question

MR. JENKINS

Judge, you notice on line 12 there is a reference to the state general election. You know in the Bill of Rights and Elections Committee, we scrupulously avoided mentioning general elections. Every time it came up, we deleted it on the floor. I was wondering if the committee, since it will have another shot at this, could look at that and see if, perhaps, we wouldn't want to delete this in the interest of consistencies because of the possibility of over.....

MR. TATE

All right. O.K. Representative Jenkins, I think you are quite right. This is the floor language. But, what's going to happen on that is that in the Executive Department, let's say, should be elected at the time of the election of all statewide offices. So, I think we will be able, on the final consolidation of these articles, either in this...article, or in the Executive Branch, to take care of that. But, we are asking the staff to note it, if they will. You are quite right, Representative Jenkins, I'm sorry we...it's one of the early ones we styled.

[Amendment No. 25 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 26

MR. TATE

All right. Section 26 which is on page 36 of your green copies, again involves the use of standard punctuation, singularizing plurals, omitting needless words, and correcting... giving a preferred spelling of "supersede."

Question

MR. DENNERY

Just for the record, the same caveat that Mr. Stagg applied to Section 25 applies to 26?

MR. TATE

Yes. It's my clear understanding that, at this point, we are not making a final judgment where it should be placed, but simply approving the styling of the language.

[Amendment No. 26 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 27

MR. TATE

All right. Section 27 deals with district attorneys. You will...we will have a yellow amendment, again with regard to the time of qualification. It says "shall have resided in the district for the two years preceding election."

Don't worry about that. I'll come back with it in a minute. What we did in general, aside from standardizing the language, we took from Section 37 (B) the Perez amendment which was adopted when they were talking about grand juries, and talked about the duties of the district attorney. We took from a separate Section 29, the prohibition against district attorneys defending in criminal prosecutions and consolidated them into one....into one section. There was no change of substance.

[Amendment No. 27 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 28

MR. TATE

All right. Section 28, on page 41 of your green copies, Amendment 28, we simply, we standardized the little language at the bottom; we took out a comma; we clarified something; and when it said "and shall be a collector of state and such other taxes and licenses as provided by law." Technically, sheriffs, my good sheriff friends, the sheriff doesn't collect licenses. He collects license fees in order to be grammatically accurate; we said "shall collect license fees" in this case.

[Amendment No. 28 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 29

MR. TATE

All right. Section 29, Amendment 29, which is page 42 of your green copies, again involves strictly the use of consistent punctuation and consistent language, consistent parallel use of parallelism in the grammatical form. There is no change of substance.

Question

MR. DENNERY

Judge, isn't this another section in which the parish of Orleans should be excepted about recorder of conveyances and mortgages?

MR. TATE

I think that you are going to find that when we get to your section, they say "notwithstanding"....

MR. DENNERY

O.K. All right.

MR. TATE

The caveat to make this fellow appointed---it didn't quite pass, because we were all afraid Ambrose would unappoint us.

[Amendment No. 29 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 30

MR. TATE

All right. Section 30 dealing with coroners, on page 43, in Amendment 30, again it was using the consistent forms of grammatical tense, using shorter sentences, using the positive for statements instead of the negative, and omitting needless words, and using consistent punctuation.

[Amendment No. 30 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 31

MR. TATE

All right. Amendment 31 which is to Section 31, on page 44. We enumerated the offices involved for readability and otherwise used consistent...followed consistent usage in omitting surplus words that don't add to the meaning, and that's it. Any questions?

[Amendment No. 31 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 32

MR. TATE

All right. Amendment 32 to Section 32, on page 45, we stated in the positive...we rearranged...rearranged the structure to conform with Section 21 which talked about judges. We arranged the officers in the order in which the constitutional provision speaks of them, and...removed judges from this article as earlier you may have noted when we put them in 21.

We might note that Section 32, the fact that we refer to the attorney general in this article....

MR. STAGG

Mr. Chairman....I would like for the record to make the same reservation with respect to Section 32 as it refers to the attorney general.

Question

Point of Order

MR. DENNERY

Judge, this doesn't....it's not going to worry the constitution. But, aren't all the things you were just talking about in Section 20, and not in Section 21? I notice in Section 20 you say "removed from Section 34 to Section 21." But, I don't know why.

MR. TATE

You're right, when we renumbered it, we forgot....it's Section 20. It's the original 21. See, it's the original 21. That's why it says 21. But, it's a new 20. The note was originally prepared for Style and Drafting referring to the original 21.

MR. DENNERY

O.K.

[Amendment No. 32 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 33

MR. TATE

Amendment 32....33, referring to Section 33 on page 46, has to do with Orleans Parish which says "notwithstanding any other contrary provision, etc.," it real....it continues the parochial offices of Orleans Parish which are found nowhere in our statutes except in the constitution. It is my understanding, and the Judiciary recommended, that those provisions will be carried on in the Schedule of Statutes. The changes made were simply ordinary grammatical changes, adding a comma, using a semicolon instead of a comma in a certain place to break up a series that should be broken up, and adding commas in series, etc.

[Amendment No. 33 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 34

MR. TATE

All right, Amendment 34 has to do with jurors. Very slight changes were made like omitting needless words and keeping related words together.

[Amendment No. 34 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 35

MR. TATE

Section 35 dealing with the grand jury also had the amendment that added the duties of the district attorney. As previously noted, we had moved the district attorney....the district attorney's duties from Section 37, here, to Section 27 (B) as enrolled, for purposes of more logical organization, because the district attorney's duties should not be in a section about the grand jury.

Questions

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, this is really a question for the chair, and for purposes of amplification. I'm sure everyone in here knows by now that I intend to try to change a portion of this section. However, as I understand it, no section, or no proposal is finalized, even though Style and Drafting has been approved, because we still have Section (L), or final enrollment to come. Not wishing to interrupt the Style and Drafting procedure which seems to be going well, I would simply like to make it clear at this time that I have not abandoned that attempt, but will simply make it at a later time.

MR. CASEY

You are reserving all rights; is that correct, Mr. Burson?

MR. BURSON

That's correct. I would assume that I am correct. That nothing is being laid on the table at this time.

MR. CASEY

That's correct. These are strictly stylistic corrections and amendments.

[3244]

MR. AVANT

Now although no proposal was laid on the table, many, many sections, well, all of them, in fact, were laid on the table. Now, I want to know, and would like to inquire, as to what the failure to lay a proposal on the table means. It seems to me that we have this question.

Does that mean that it was left open so that someone could come back and add something that may have been omitted, and should be added? Or, was it done to permit a vehicle by which someone could come back and reargue and rehash the provisions of a particular section with the view of amending that section and changing it to suit their own wishes, even though it had been laid on the table? In other words, what did the failure to lay the proposals on the table mean?

MR. CASEY

Well, first of all, under the parliamentary rules, Mr. Avant, as you know, to remove something from the table would require a two-thirds vote.

MR. AVANT

Question at this point, then?

MR. CASEY

Yes, sir.

MR. AVANT

To delete something from a section would require that it first be taken from the table, then?

MR. CASEY

Well, first of all the....let me answer your other question. The reason we did not table the proposals was primarily, and I have to say primarily, my understanding was that we could get back into the proposal primarily in order to make corrections or additions if some were necessary.

Also, individual delegate proposals, really, we knew would be passed, then would have to be added to these proposals. So, there were certainly many reasons primarily for purposes of good, clear procedure, and for making corrections that we did not lay the entire proposal on the table. That certainly does not prohibit going back into a proposal to do, for instance, what Mr. Burson, I think, has in mind--to make a substantive change as long as he can get the votes--

MR. AVANT

Two-thirds?

MR. CASEY

Right. As long as he can get whatever votes are necessary to remove a particular section from the table. He well knows that he must go through that parliamentary maneuver in order to accomplish that.

Senator De Blieux, why do you rise?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman, in trying to explain to Mr. Avant, theoretically that means that that particular issue is laid to the end of all other business. If you take up and continue all other business until you have finished that--unless by that vote of two-thirds, you decide to take it up before the end of the business that you are sitting for.

MR. CASEY

Well, that certainly was in the prerogative of the convention, Senator De Blieux.

MR. TATE

Mr. Dennery is not satisfied, but he's a fine gentleman, and he says he withdraws his question.

It was on an earlier section which we passed over which says "the Supreme Court may do something, or something else." He wanted to be assured that it had to do something. I....after some discussion we thought that....

[Amendment No. 35 adopted without objection.]

MR. TATE

All right. Now, Mr. Chairman, if we could pass on to Amendment 36 which is your first yellow amendment.

113th Days Proceedings—January 9, 1974

All right. Now, with regard to the same Committee Proposal No. 21, you have these yellow amendments. The first amendment is to Section 9 which is on page 11 of your materials. You may remember, during the floor debate, the Miller amendment was adopted providing that after January 1, 1975, no judge shall be elected at large from within the circuit.

The Drew delegate proposal went to the floor and deleted that particular provision in a rearrangement of Section 9. Mrs. Miller withdrew her objection to the language. It passed the floor here, I think, 98 to 3, and we are calling to your attention the later...language on the right hand side of the Delegate Proposal No. 32, and recommending that you adopt it in substitution for the Section 9 stylized version.

I yield to questions, Mr. Chairman.

Further Discussion

MRS. MILLER

Judge...excuse me...Judge Tate, since they seem to go back and play some tapes on these, I would like for it to be remembered that Mrs. Miller withdrew her objection on the sincere, bottom of the heart, deep-hearted promise of Representative Drew that this matter would be taken up in the Judiciary Committee of the legislature and something be done about it. I want to make sure that gets on the tape again.

MR. TATE

Yes, ma'am.

Now, what we are literally doing in the actual instructions of the amendment, which, if you'll read, Dr. Hardin, is taking this Section 9 on the right hand side of your yellow, and substituting it for the Section 9 on the right hand side of your green, as representing the later delegate proposal which replaced this.

Amendment No. 36

The next four amendments are caveat alternative amendments presented by the committee for the consideration of the delegates, beginning with Amendment No. 36. The effect of Amendments No. 36, 37, 38, and 39, with my own caveat on 37, we had to change the instructions a little bit, is that if you adopt this, you are adopting it in place of an earlier amendment that you adopted today. So that what you will be adopting is what you read on Amendment No. 36, which is Section 9.

"Each circuit shall be divided into at least three districts, and at least one judge shall be elected from each. The circuits and districts and the number of judges as elected in each circuit on the effective date of this constitution are retained, subject to change by law enacted by two-thirds of the elected members of each house of the legislature."

Point of Order

MR. PEREZ

My question is directed to the chair. I think it's about the time that we have a determination from the chair, from the convention, as to where we go with the so-called yellow amendments, because, if, in fact, it is a suggested substantive change by the Style and Drafting Committee, then, under the rules, it would be necessary to suspend the rules and to get sixty-seven votes before we do it. If, in fact, it is not a substantive change, then, of course, it could be done by amendment.

Now, how do we straighten out that can of worms?

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, if I understand the situation, we'll wait until the Chair rules on it. Of course, this first amendment is not... is a change that the floor itself adopted as a later delegate proposal which is in conflict, and was intended to replace the green amendment.

But, as to the further ones, if I understand it, as to the further changes, if anyone thinks it's a real change of substance, and we'll get a ruling from the Chair, he shall raise that as a point of order, and which is why we have tried in every instance to go to the Substantive Committee. If it's a real change of substance, tried not to propose it. If it's an ambiguity, it is within this province. But, it will be up to the Chairman to rule.

Is the Chairman...?

MR. PEREZ

Again, the purpose of my question was to attempt to try to resolve this problem now because I know somewhere along the line, some delegate is going to say this is a substantive change, and it should require the sixty-seven votes. I'm trying to get our procedure established at this stage of the game, if possible.

MR. CASEY

I understand, Mr. Perez. Just a minute.

Mr. Perez, I would hope that we can clarify the problem. However, I'm not positive that we can. My understanding of the purpose of the caveat, first of all, is to clarify ambiguities, and possibly to, through the clarification in the ambiguity, for the convention to come back and express in clear terminology what it's intention was when it adopted, possibly, a certain section, or amendments to a certain section.

Now, you may disagree with that interpretation. But, that is my understanding of the purpose of a caveat. So, to again give back to the convention...rather to get from the convention a clear decision of what its intention was, you're on Style and Drafting. Is that...does that answer your question?

MR. PEREZ

Well, that, again, is the reason I asked the question because in my judgment, in a number of cases, there is a strong possibility that there are substantive changes. I just want to be in a position...I just wonder what rules we are playing by, because I want to play by the same rules with respect to the first and the last, and all the ones in between. If it's just going to take a majority of those voting to take anything that Style and Drafting suggests, then I want to know that at this stage of the game. That's the reason I asked for a ruling from the chair.

MR. CASEY

I would have to say we would not have to remove anything from the table at this point. Of course, I would prefer to say that maybe we should just judge each caveat, each individual amendment in a caveat as we get to it. If you feel, as an individual, that there is a substantive change, maybe we should handle the matter at that time.

MR. PEREZ

What you are saying, then, is in each individual case the Chair will rule if objection is made, as to whether it is or is not substantive. Then, the only recourse by a delegate would be to appeal the ruling of the chair?

MR. CASEY

Mr. Perez, I'm not always going to be in the Chair. As you know, I am rarely in the Chair. So, I don't know what is going to happen. But, my ruling would be that we would handle a caveat as it is without removing anything from the whole.

MR. PEREZ

Well, let me suggest that I don't believe we have any serious problems immediately, now, but I wanted...to point this out to the convention at this time, because I think it is going to come up. I wanted the Chair to be thinking about it so that we will know where we stand.

MR. CASEY

It's also my understanding that Style and Drafting was quite careful not to go into intentional substantive changes; that if they did, this will be pointed out.

Mr. Avant...I'm sorry. Senator De Blieux had a question; then Mr. Avant.

Further Discussion

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman, as I understood the rules, that Style and Drafting were given a lot of leeway in making suggested changes insofar as the style, the wording, or duplication. When they came to a caveat, so that the convention might clarify itself, and only for the purposes of ambiguity, or inconsistency in proposals that they could make those recommendations to the convention, and which could also be adopted only by a majority vote of the convention.

MR. CASEY

I think that was primarily the intention, Senator De Blieux.

Point of Information

MR. AVANT

Just to make sure of one thing, regardless of how all that business works out, in the final analysis, each proposal, or each article in this document, and then the final document itself in its entirety, is going to have to be adopted by sixty-seven votes and then laid on the table. Is it not, sir?

113th Days Proceedings—January 9, 1974

MR. CASEY

Mr. Avant, it's my understanding that each proposal has already been adopted, and merely has not been laid on the table. Now, the parliamentarian is here, and I'd be subject to correction there. It is my understanding every proposal has been adopted. All we are doing is going through the stylistic changes. The final adoption has merely not been laid on the table.

MR. AVANT

Well, question then. The document itself, in its entirety, from the first word to the last word as a body, is going to have to be adopted by sixty-seven votes. Is it not, sir?

MR. CASEY

I'm sure that will have to happen at the end....whatever the last thing we do on the document, is to vote on the final document, Mr. Avant.

The Clerk indicated you might refer to Rule 47.

Further Discussion

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Chairman, I think we...the caveat of the committee is that the....if we had a delegate proposal that came in and changed something in the original proposal that had been adopted, that the delegate, or the later proposal would prevail as being the last expression of the will of the convention. Now, I want to point out that often when we took up these delegate proposals, we took them out of context, dealing with one specific little thing. This convention did not look at that delegate proposal, or that later committee proposal in the light of the whole context. For instance, now, right on this proposal we have before us. When we considered removing...when we considered Mr. Drew's provision that you could change...would retain the large judgeships for the court of appeal, it was not considered at all in the light that it took two-thirds majority of the House and Senate to change these judicial districts. That puts it all in a different light. If it was the original will of this convention to eliminate large judgeships, then to come back in and say you want to eliminate them now, but you'll let the legislature change it, but you make it so difficult to change, that you can have a handful of judges controlling, 'cause I think enough....I think you could control a third of the legislature pretty well....very easily, let's say. So, what we are doing is we are taking things out of context when we take them as delegate proposals, and let them be the latest expression of the will of this convention.

Further Discussion

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, if I might say, we will try...use some discrimination. If it's out of context, we will report it to the convention as an alternative, as we did here. We did not think we were doing anything, because the whole direction of the debate was exactly whether this should replace the former one. As I understand it, you had no objection to it upon Representative Drew's assurance that the future legislative attention would be given to your problem. But, we will not blindly say the later one, necessarily. We are calling it to your attention. We thought our remark was not a value judgment here in view of the debate. I'm sorry if I gave the impression that we were automatically going to say that the latest was always out of context. We just feel it our duty to call it to the attention of everybody that there is an inconsistency.

[Amendment No. 36 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 37

MR. HARDIN

The instructions on the amendment as you have it are incorrectly drawn. The instructions should read,

"On page 5, line 17, in Committee Amendment No. 16 proposed by the Committee on Style and Drafting and adopted by the convention on January 9, 1974, on line 10 of the text of the amendment, after the word and punctuation "corporation," and before the word "or" insert the words "or political subdivisions,"

Explanation

MR. TATE

Comma.

The amendment, as I previously explained, we had said that the ancient language was that when a political corporation is a party to the defendant, the district court has exclusive jurisdiction. This is a term that's not used in the present constitution except here and one or two other places. We thought of replacing it, but it is a little broader than political subdivision. But, the clear intent is to include political subdivisions as they are defined in this constitution so that our suggestion to you was that you add "or political subdivision" to the enumeration of those cases when their party is a defendant, of which the district court has exclusive jurisdiction.

Questions

MR. DENNERY

Now, how come you didn't put numbers in this one?

MR. TATE

Well, the only change made in this one was....

MR. DENNERY

No, no. I mean in the....you say "in all cases"....you have to read it about three times to see....to make it make sense is what I mean, unless you put numbers in between those semicolons. I was just curious as to why the committee did not do that?

MR. TATE

All right. We played with numbers. But, here's your problem. There's not a complete parallelism. You see....you put a one in front of felony cases, and put a two in front of what? So, you'd have to put a two in front of 2 cases involving (A) title of.....(B) the right to office. We played with it, but it actually didn't, because of the structure, and we played with the structure, we ended up thinking it would be better to keep the present language because, after all, it's fairly traditional in the second part of it.

MR. DENNERY

In other words, "of cases" is what's carried through here, rather than cases involving....is what is carried through. Is that correct?

MR. TATE

Right.

Yes, sir. We would have had to put "of cases....", see, you couldn't say "cases of felonies" because it might have changed the meaning a little bit, so we would have to put cases....felony cases....

MR. DENNERY

No, I was talking about after your felony.

MR. TATE

....down below that we would have had to put cases in front of every numeral to make it....in cases involving in front....It's a....we gave serious consideration, Mr. Dennerly, but it was a tricky question.

[Amendment No. 37 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 38

MR. TATE

Amendment 38, which is going to be to Section 23 as you adopted it, on page 31, and it's going to be....if the Clerk reads it. But it's in the....it's going to say "must have practiced law in the state for at least five years prior to his election, and for at least two years preceding his election."

Now, in the legislative article, you adopted the consistent approach of prior....you have to have the requisite qualifications prior to the time of qualification. In an effort to be consistent throughout, in some of the other articles they say preceding his qualification and preceding his election. To be consistent with that, we thought since it had passed the floor once in the legislative article about preceding, you have to have the requisite time span preceding his qualification for office, or the requisite eligibility characteristics preceding his qualification for office. In order to be consistent with that sort of approach, we recommended that you substitute this language on the yellow amendment which, in each case says he has to practice law five years prior to his qualification, and be domiciled two years preceding his qualification instead of preceding the election.

Questions

MR. DENNERY

Judge, I can understand the change as far as domicile is concerned. But, why should you have it as far as the years of practice are concerned? It seems to me that what you are doing here is raising the age limit in each case, conceivably by the difference between the date of the election and the date of the qualification. I can understand how you would want someone domiciled in a particular area for a specific period prior to qualification. But, I do not understand the reason for making the change as far as years of practice, for instance, either in the judiciary or the district attorney, etc.

MR. TATE

All right. Mr. Dennery, the reason we...it's a valid question—a valid choice of value. As a matter of fact, however, the current case law has had...hasn't interpreted the party requirements that you have to have the qualifications at the time you qualify for office; for instance, in the case of city judge, it was three years. There's a case...Marvin...anyway, there's a couple of cases on it that said that in that practice, to say you have the time spent in practice at the time he qualifies for office. You have a valid objection. But, we had to choose between the two. This has been the consistent practice. It's more consistent with the way the constitution goes with the way the other portions of the constitution goes. So, we did do...for better, for worse, that's what we thought. It's an easy test, too, because you can...go ahead.

MR. DENNERY

I was going to say, you don't consider that to be a substantive change...the committee didn't?

MR. TATE

Because it could have been a substantive change is why it's here...why it's here. We doubt the floor thought about it at the time. Because it might be inconsistent with the general approach other places; that's why it's here. It's perfectly appropriate of the...for the committee...for the convention floor not to adopt it.

MR. KEAN

Judge Tate, let me elaborate on Mr. Dennery's questions, because I was not present at the Style and Drafting Committee at the time this was considered. I raised the same point when we were dealing with the attorney general.

As I appreciate this change, under the language as adopted by the convention, you merely had to have that qualification at the time of election. We are now providing that he has to have the qualification at the time he qualifies so that if the qualifying date is six months before the election, we've actually added six months to the requirement so that we're really talking about five and a half years at the time he takes his office. Is that right?

MR. TATE

It's perfectly true, Mr. Kean. On the other hand, in the legislative article, they adopted that clarification. That's why it's here. I doubt at the time...we voted on it, we seriously thought whether you had to be qualified at the time you qualified for a candidate, or whether you could qualify before you had enough practice to run for an office....

MR. KEAN

But, in the legislative article we were talking about the qualification by reason of domicile, were you not? Here, we are talking about a qualification that goes to your capacity for carrying out the job. It seems to me that as long as he's got that qualification at the time he was elected and takes office, that that ought to be sufficient. I don't see where there's any difference...any inconsistency between what we've done in the legislative article dealing with domicile, and what we've said here dealing with qualification for a judgeship.

MR. TATE

All right. I will say this. The present constitution uses this language; the case law has permitted the party requirement that he be qualified at the time he qualifies for office to prevail over that.

MR. KEAN

You mean the present jurisprudence is in line with what the convention adopted?

MR. TATE

The present jurisprudence has approved the general requirement of the political party so that at the time you qualify, you have enough time and practice to possess all the qualifications necessary to be elected. For what it's worth, that's what it does.

MR. LANIER

Ian't it true, Judge, that under the jurisprudence, there is a difference between the point in time that you qualify for office, and the time that you qualify as a candidate for the office, the difference being that at the time that you qualify for the office is when you are sworn into the office? Whereas, at the time that you qualify for the...as a candidate for the office, is when you put in your papers, and you're qualified to run in the election. So, actually, we are dealing with three points in time here that we could be talking about; one, the time that he qualifies as a candidate for the office; two, the date of the election for the office; and three, the date that he's actually sworn in. Is that correct?

MR. TATE

Yes, you see, it could be, you see, you have to clarify it one way or another. It could be that the date of election wouldn't be the determining thing because you...when you take the oath on January 1...you are elected in November, I guess you could argue that you are not elected to the office until that day. So, I fully realize everything you say, Mr. Kean. But, it is.... it is a choice.

MR. DENNERY

My question really was aimed at why you didn't submit this in the form of two amendments so that the floor could have the opportunity to choose between these two. My recollection is that in the arguing the debate on the floor when this came up there was strong argument for not having any years qualification as a requirement because it differed from the age qualification for instance, in the district attorney...in the attorney general's situation. So it seems to me we are making somewhat of a substantive change here. I quite agree with you on the date of qualification as far as domicile is concerned. I think that's a sound change and I don't think it's of a substantive nature because I think the convention recognized that there was confusion there, but when you get to the years of practice, it seems to me we're making a considerable change in what the convention adopted. Is it possible? As the amendment is worded, I'm sure there is no possibility of dividing the question; is there, Mr. Chairman? Is there a possibility of dividing the question as it's written?

MR. CASEY

No, sir, I'd have to say that it's one amendment and I don't see how we can divide it.

MR. TATE

If we'd been appraised of objections, we would have tried to divide it, Mr. Dennery; we thought it was the same question though actually...and I can see the argument to the contrary.

MR. PUGH

Judge, although conceivably it is a change other than in substance. In the final analysis, however, you really are providing that the judge would have more qualifications rather than less qualifications. So, if anything, if it's an error, it's on the error of what's good rather than what's bad; is that not correct?

MR. TATE

Well...it could be said that, yes, sir. Thank you.

MR. NEWTON

Judge, there may be an ambiguity here and there may not be an ambiguity, but you say in line 10, "qualification as a candidate," then down in line 15, you say "qualification." Now, is that intended to mean the same thing?

MR. TATE

Yes, it was. We thought that we didn't need to say again qualification of a candidate because when you said, "qualification" up ahead in the same sentence, it seems...it seemed to us that when you say "preceding qualification" it must mean the one up there-- two...three lines up.

MR. NEWTON

Don't you think that there is a possibility of ambiguity and maybe the committee ought to think about it a little more?

MR. TATE

I think there's a possibility, but you know ninety-nine point five, you know.

113th Days Proceedings—January 9, 1974

MRS. MILLER

Judge Tate, you know we have a lame duck situation in the Court of Appeal judgeship where some judges have had to wait a year, eight months or so to take office after they've been elected. So, you can be too young for the job by six months at the time you'd have to qualify if you go it the way this committee is recommend. You'd be an old man by the time you got in office if you were elected. I really think you've made too substantive a change.

MR. TATE

Well, that's a valid argument Mrs. Miller. Incidentally, we did cure that hiatus about the Court of Appeal Judges where a fellow is elected and then for eighteen months he sat around while a lame duck exercised the functions until he could take office. You, in the convention, could cure that in your . . . one of the articles in this Judicial Article.

MRS. MILLER

Well, I do oppose the amendment as it's recommended.

MR. CASEY

Is that a question, Mrs. Miller, or . . .
Judge Tate, have you completed your remarks?

MR. TATE

Yes, Mr. Chairman.

Further Discussion

MR. DENNIS

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, as Chairman of the Judiciary Committee I would just like to inform you that we are supporting this change for consistency. We considered the Style and Drafting's Proposal as you know, and approved of it before it has been presented to you. It is my appreciation from the discussion in our committee that we never really had a clear intention as to whether or not the date would be from election or one of the other two dates that Judge Tate described that you could use. After discussing it, we felt that the value . . . the greatest value lay in making the qualification period date from the date of qualification, to be consistent with what was done in the Legislative Article. Also, I'd like to remind all of you that you have been receiving copies of what we've been doing in these committees and none of you has really objected to this change. I haven't heard any real substantive objection to it. The Judiciary Committee, after considering it again, after it had passed the floor and been through Style and Drafting, felt that this is the best way to draft it. So, we urge you to go along with the Committee on Style and Drafting and adopt this change purely for consistency and purely because we have to settle on a date clearly and firmly.

Questions

MR. ARNETTE

Judge Dennis, the only question I've got here is that when you change it from quali . . . I mean from election time . . . the election day to qualification day, then you're putting something that's kind of arbitrary when you say "qualification date" because the qualification dates are arbitrarily set. However, an election date . . . it will probably be handled in the future by election code that elections will be held on a definite date and, whereas, if somebody didn't want somebody to run, they'd make sure the qualification was cut off say a week early or something like that?

MR. DENNIS

Well, as Judge Tate pointed out, election . . . date of election might mean either the date upon which the election is held or the date upon which the candidate is elected or the date he's sworn in. I think that's another virtue for using the qualification date because even though the date might be different, it does establish a clear date.

MR. ARNETTE

My only objection is that the date of qualification though is thoroughly arbitrary and just set by some public official. If you don't . . . in other words, if you're not saying whatever qualification you have to have-- five years practicing law-- if you don't have it by that date then you're out. Whereas, you might be fully qualified by the time you'd take office or be elected.

MR. DENNIS

Well, Mr. Arnette, the date that a man . . . that a judge takes office is even more arbitrary because that's up to the judge.

MR. ARNETTE

Well, that's what I'm saying though, the date of elect. . .

MR. DENNIS

I chose to take office on January 10th, which is the day after my birthday because it was on a Monday and it was convenient to have the ceremony on that date, but I know a lot of other judges that chose some other date after the first of the year. So, I don't think it's arbitrary; I think . . .

MR. ARNETTE

Well, I realize the date you take office is arbitrary, but not your election day; that is not arbitrary, the date of election. But, what I'm getting at, suppose that I didn't want somebody to run against me for an office and maybe he wouldn't have the requisite qualifications until July 15th. I would set the last date for qualification at July 10th. That's where I see the problem; that date is very arbitrarily set.

MR. DENNIS

All I can say is, you've got problems with any one of these three dates, as Judge Tate explained. I think in the interest of consistency it's better to have everything date from date of qualification and this precedent was established in the Legislative Article.

Point of Order

MRS. MILLER

I object. I consider this a substantive change and I would like for the convention to express itself on it.

MR. CASEY

How about just letting the Chair express itself? The purpose of the caveat is that . . . the purpose of bringing it before the convention is to let the convention express its opinion. If the convention feels it does not want to do what the Judiciary Committee is recommending, then, it has the right to vote the amendment down and let the amendment rest on its own merit. You rise to a further question?

MRS. MILLER

Now, it takes sixty-seven votes to prove this if it's a substantive change?

MR. CASEY

Mrs. Miller, it does not take sixty-seven votes; it takes a simple majority of those present and voting, as long as we have sixty-seven people that we're operating with.

Point of Order

MR. PEREZ

This is the very question that I posed to the Chair a little bit earlier. When a delegate comes forward and suggests that this is a substantive change and not a Style and Drafting change, is the Chair going to rule that it is or is not substantive and then--or else submit it to the convention, because we need to get this procedure well established?

Ruling of the Chair

MR. CASEY

Okay. Mr. Perez, let's just try to settle this once and for all. The Chairman is here; maybe he can listen to this and if he's going to disagree with me at a later date he can say so. But, let's just get this straight right now. First of all, as I explained previously that the purpose of a caveat is to clear up any ambiguities, and we have to assume that that is the purpose that the Judiciary-- I'm sorry-- that Style and Drafting is setting forth in the caveat. I would have to rule that it does not take sixty-seven votes, that we do not have to remove a certain section from the table, and that all it takes is a vote of the . . . a simple majority of those present and voting, as long as we're operating with sixty-seven members of the convention, and that, we will just let the convention itself make the determination by its vote on the caveat as to what its wishes are, without determining that it's going to take sixty-seven votes to adopt or not adopt a section. It's merely . . . it's a proposal by the Style and Drafting Committee itself.

MR. POYNTER

I think we're all in agreement up here; we're just not saying it the same way. That's all presuming that no point of order is raised. Now, Mrs. Miller inquired and the Chair obviously would like to decline and just let the delegates decide it. If someone insists on a point of order, Mr. Perez, that the committee has exceeded its authority, I think the Chair could be put in the position of being forced to rule or, in the alternative, exercising its prerogative of allowing the convention to determine itself by putting the question to the convention. If the Chair or the delegates would determine by whatever procedure that the amendment was out of order as exceeding the authority of the committee, then, in that case I think it would be necessary to call the motion to reconsider from the table --of course, under a rule suspension and do it that way.

113th Days Proceedings—January 9, 1974

MR. PEREZ
That was my point. . .

MR. POYNTER
Yes, sir. To date, Mrs. Miller has not raised a point of order, she's kind of had an inquiry and I know the Chair would like to avoid those situations if it possibly can.

MR. PEREZ
Well, again that was the next point of information because if in fact, the question is raised as to whether or not the committee exceeded its authority, it would seem to me then it's time for the Chair to rule or else to turn it back to the convention for it to rule.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

Further Discussion

MR. KEAN
Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I would appreciate it if you would give me your attention just a moment, because I think we're dealing here with a substantive change from the content of the section as adopted by this convention on the floor. I don't take issue with the Style and Drafting Committee for having raised the point and having called our attention to it, but I want to point out to you that if we're talking about consistency, there are more instances where we provided in the case of these qualifications that they had to be applicable at the time of election rather than qualification, than there is otherwise. When you vote on the approval of this amendment, if you accept the amendment offered by the Style and Drafting Committee, you must understand that you ought to be prepared to accept a similar amendment, not only on the judges, but on the district attorneys and on the attorney general, because in all three of those instances the convention in its wisdom put into the sections as a basis of qualification, five years of experience prior to election. Now, we are now coming along and we're going to change that and make it prior to qualification. Now, I don't know that five years is any criteria in the practice of law as to your capacity to be a judge or a district attorney or to be an attorney general, but I say to you when we change it. . . change that qualification from the date of election to the date of qualification, we've added on to the experience that we're going to require of these candidates to these offices. I think that is a substantive change that this convention ought to give its attention to and it ought not to be considered merely as a Style and Drafting change in the interest of consistency. Now, how you vote on it, I'll leave it to you, but I simply want you to understand that we're dealing with a rather substantive change in the amendment that is proposed here and if you adopt this amendment you must be prepared to make a similar change when we get to the sections dealing with district attorneys and with the attorney general. I simply want you to have that information and you can decide on it either way you want to go. I'm going to vote against the amendment because I see no reason to extend the time that's required in order to be eligible for service in one of these positions.

Point of Order

MR. NEWTON
Whether the amendment proposed by the Style and Drafting Committee constitutes a substantive change?

MR. HENRY
I think the Chair is going to let the delegates to the convention decide whether or not it is, in effect, a change in substance as opposed to a stylistic change.

[Chair declined to rule. Question put to the Convention.]

Questions

MR. DENNERY
Mr. Kean, isn't it correct that the date of an election is a fixed and positive date?

MR. KEAN
It's always been my understanding, Mr. Dennery.

MR. DENNERY
Now, isn't it a fact that the date of qualification varies with the party or whether or not the candidate is an independent?

MR. KEAN
I would think there would be more variation and it would be more difficult to determine what the date of qualification would be than it would be to determine the date of the election.

MR. DENNERY
So that conceivably the consistency should have been the other way around; is that correct?

MR. KEAN
If you were going to try to get as many things consistent with each other, we've got three instances where we said that it was five years prior to the date of election. We had one instance where we said it was five...whatever number of years it was prior to the date of qualification, so if you're going to measure it by the number of times you say it, we should have changed the thing in the Legislative Section and not in these.

MR. DENNERY
Thank you, sir.

MR. STINSON
Now, Gordon, isn't it a fact that suppose a person was running as a democratic candidate, now the qualifying date would be when he qualifies for the first primary, wouldn't it?

MR. KEAN
Right.

MR. STINSON
Now, if a person was running as an independent it wouldn't be until he qualifies some months later for the general election, so it would give someone advantage, writing it that way, wouldn't it?

MR. KEAN
That's correct; you'd have two different rules or two different dates of determining eligibility under those circumstances.

MR. HENRY
All right now, gentlemen, before we go any further, Mr. Newton has raised a point of order which I think we need to go ahead and dispose of, that being whether or not the amendment to Section 23 is in order.

Further Discussion

MR. ASSEFF
Mr. Chairman, delegates, I am a member of the Committee on Style and Drafting. We just considered the same point relative to the Executive Article and it was my understanding, as we discussed it, that the committee agreed that it is a substantive change, and that we would . . . though I agree to the change that we would submit it to this convention for its approval or rejection. In my opinion it is substantive. It would be extremely dangerous to do it by majority vote. We would subject every other article, every other section, to the same thing. I urge you to, please, consider this a substantive change. I shall vote to approve the change, but it is still substantive, and I feel that it should require the regular vote to reopen the section and to approve it. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

MR. STINSON
Dr. Asseff, being as you were speaking on the change, why do you think it's a good change?

MR. ASSEFF
I did not say it was good, Mr. Stinson. . .

MR. STINSON
You said you're going to vote for it.

MR. ASSEFF
. . . I simply. . . well, I simply said that I am disagreeing-- that it is substantive. I'm simply giving my opinion that I will vote for it. You may vote as you please, but I feel that we should follow the regular procedure and that we should require the sixty-seven votes to reopen and change.

MR. STINSON
But, isn't it a fact though, that the change would give an independent candidate, as far as yours is concerned, over a Republican or a Democratic candidate if you had . . .

113th Days Proceedings—January 9, 1974

MR. ASSEFF

I have no objections. I am arguing that it's substantive, Mr. Stinson. I simply said that as . . . I should have just kept my mouth shut. It's really substantive is all that I am arguing. Thank you.

MR. ARNETTE

Doc, the only question I have is that we've talked about qualification date being more definite and Mr. Stinson already brought out that it would be a different qualification date for Democrats, Republicans and independents, depending on what their central committee decided, and also, that this date can be changed quite a bit by that committee; can't they do that?

MR. ASSEFF

Mr. Arnette, I am not arguing that. I am simply stating that when the Committee on Style and Drafting considered this, as well as the Executive Department, we felt it was substantive in nature, but we were recommending it to the convention for the purposes of consistency. I am only urging that we follow the usual procedure for reopening a section and approving it; relative to whether you approve the change, that's immaterial to me. Thank you.

[Record vote ordered. Convention declared Amendment out of order.]

Motion

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise both on a point of personal privilege and then to make a motion. First, I want to say that we, of course, have no objection to . . . it's fine what you all decided, but we have an obligation to Style and Drafting to call your attention to things that may be inconsistent with the general scheme, whether or not they're substantive. We did our best. We don't care what you do on that and we're happy with your decision. I do suggest to you that perhaps the better approach would be for us to let . . . move to suspend the rules to let you consider this amendment now as if it were substantive, realizing it takes sixty-seven votes, so at least there will be an opportunity to have a consistent framework throughout the constitution. The point is, if you have to be . . . have that amount of time in residence, preceding your qualification, which is . . . was the concept, you should have the . . . it's not so inconsistent to say you have to have the other qualifications preceding your qualification for election. It doesn't make us any difference, but it leaves us with a difficult thing to relieve those inconsistencies throughout the constitution, or should we call it to your attention. We don't care; it's less work for us. But, I therefore move, as an effort to get an expression on the merits to the floor, to suspend the rules to consider as a substantive change that amendment. . . yellow amendment there.

MRS. MILLER

I object.

Point of Information

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Chairman, we are leaving this order of business. . . suspending the rules to leave this order of business and going back to an order of business dealing with the adoption or rejection of that section. Is that my understanding?

MR. HENRY

It would just be a suspension, by and large, of all the rules for the purpose of dealing with this right now, Senator, like we did on the Legislative proposal.

[Motion to suspend the rules to reconsider Section 23 rejected: 53-35.]

Motion

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, I then move to withdraw that amendment and there's only one more amendment on Proposal. . .

MR. HENRY

We don't have an amendment there.

MR. TATE

What? With the amendment pending. . . Oh, then I then move to withdraw the final amendment on that. . . which is. . .

MR. POYNTER

Final amendment No. 39, relative to Section 27, is that right? District Attorneys, is that the one. . .

MR. TATE

District Attorneys, is that the final amendment? I think there's one more.

MR. POYNTER

No, sir.

MR. TATE

Well, that's the final amendment. Then, Mr. Chairman, that completes our work on Style and Drafting with regard to the Judicial Branch Article.

[Motion to withdraw Amendments No. 38 and No. 39 adopted without objection. Motion to take up other orders adopted without objection. Adjournment to 9:00 o'clock a.m., Thursday, January 10, 1974.]

PRAYER

MR. ASSEFF

I shall read a brief quote from each of the six major religions of the world: each has a message. Hinduism: "As one may ascend to the housetop by ladder, rope, or bamboo, so there are many ways to reach God." Buddhism: "Hatred does not cease by hatred but only by love." Confucianism: "To be in ones own heart in kindly sympathy with all things, this is the nature of righteousness." Judaism: "That doeth the Lord require of thee but to do justly and love mercy, and walk humbly with thy God." Christianity: "All things whatsoever ye would that men should do unto to you, do you even so unto them." PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

READING AND ADOPTION OF THE JOURNAL

PROPOSALS ON THE CALENDAR FOR APPROVAL OF FINAL STYLING

[Motion to call Committee Proposal No. 25 from the calendar adopted without objection.]

Committee Proposal No. 25

MR. HARDIN

Committee Proposal No. 25, introduced by Delegate Jackson, Chairman of the Committee on Bill of Rights, on behalf of that committee.

A proposal to provide a preamble and a declaration of rights to the constitution.

Explanation

MR. TATE

All right, Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, you should have on your desk before you a packet of papers with a large Roman II. In the front part of it will be the Committee Proposal No. 25 on green, in the same format as yesterday's, followed by the white amendment; following that will be Committee Proposal No. 33 on Elections in the same format. Before we report the Style and Drafting amendments, we would like Representative Jackson to make a brief comment, Chairman of the Bill of Rights and Elections.

Further Discussion

MR. A. JACKSON

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of this convention, Judge Tate, we have examined carefully the amendments proposed by the Committee on Style and Drafting. We find no basic differences with these recommendations, and we would recommend that you would adopt the amendments as proposed by the Committee on Style and Drafting.

MR. TATE

Thank you, Representative Jackson. Mr. Chairman.

MR. HENRY

Yes, sir, Justice Tate.

Amendment No. 1

MR. TATE

With regard to the preamble we had no change...stylistic change recommended. With regard to Section 1, we have...Amendment No. 1 which is simply to delete...which was to combine the two objects of the same infinitive...we took out a comma ",".

Mr. Chairman, are there any questions?

[Amendment No. 1 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 2

MR. HARDIN

Amendment No. 2 is the only amendment to Section 1. On page 1, at the end of line 35, delete the comma ",".

Explanation

MR. TATE

Any discussion?

Well, you don't need a comma when there are two objects of the same preposition; it's just a stylistic change, in line with the ordinary rules of the punctuation.

[Amendment No. 2 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 3

MR. HARDIN

Amendment No. 3 is the only amendment to Section 2. On page 2, line 5, after the word "liberty" and before the word "or" insert a comma ",".

Explanation

MR. TATE

The reason, of course, under the rule we have been following is that when there's a series you have a comma after every one, including the one before the "and" or "or", the conjunction.

[Amendment No. 3 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 4

MR. HARDIN

Amendment No. 4. On page 2, delete lines 8 through 15, both inclusive, in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Section 3. No person shall be denied the equal protection of the laws. No law shall discriminate against a person because of race or religious ideas, beliefs, or affiliations. No law shall arbitrarily, capriciously, or unreasonably discriminate against a person because of birth, age, sex, culture, physical condition, or political ideas or affiliations. Slavery and involuntary servitude are prohibited, except in the latter case as punishment for crime."

Explanation

MR. TATE

All right. We standardized the language when it says you can't discriminate in one part "on account of" and another "by reason of"...to say "because of" in each instance, we omitted needless repetition like "religious ideas, religious beliefs, religious affiliations" and said "religious ideas, beliefs, or affiliations," and similarly with political ideas and political affiliation. In general, those are the stylistic sort of changes we made.

114th Days Proceedings—January 10, 1974

[Amendment No. 4 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 5

MR. HARDIN

Amendment No. 5. On page 2, delete lines 17 through 35, both inclusive in their entirety and on page 3, delete lines 1 and 2 in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Section 4. Every person has the right to acquire, own, control, use, enjoy, protect, and dispose of private property. This right is subject to reasonable statutory restrictions and the reasonable exercise of the police power.

Property shall not be taken or damaged by the state or its political subdivisions except for public purposes and with just compensation paid to the owner or into court for his benefit. Property shall not be taken or damaged by any private entity authorized by law to expropriate, except for a public and necessary purpose and with just compensation paid to the owner. In such proceedings, whether the purpose is public and necessary shall be a judicial question.

[Motion to waive reading of the Amendments to Committee Proposal No. 25 adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. TATE

All right. The Amendment No. 5 which is to Section 4 which rewrites Section 4 on pages 5 and 6 of your green material--in the main paragraphs, an awful long one paragraph sentence into three paragraphs, I mean, awful long one paragraph into three paragraphs and slightly rearranges the order of the ideas in order to connect logical ideas together, omits a few needless repetitions, singularizes in accord with the conventional practice and tries to separate some of the ideas into separate....separate ideas into separate sentences.

[Amendment No. 5 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 6

MR. TATE

The Amendment No. 6 which is to Section 5 on page 7 of your material makes three very minor changes like when they say "any court of law"; we said "any court" and when to raise the legality...it's legality" instead of repeating "of the search and seizure." We slightly changed the punctuation and added an "and" in order to clarify what the reference was to the particular description required before a warrant or affidavit.

Question

MR. STAGG

In the Supreme Court decision, the U. S. Supreme Court decision, handed down earlier this week on the use of illegally seized search and seizure material, Judge, you think that has any affect on this section?

MR. TATE

No, Mr. Stagg, for about five hundred years they required warrants to be described with particularity; what happened since '61 is that they said if something is illegally seized, you can't use it in evidence. But, the traditional safeguard of the home is supposed to be a private....supposed to be that no officer can break into somebody's home unless a court has told them just how and which one.

[Amendment No. 6 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 7

MR. TATE

All right. Section 6, of course, we had no comment on or no proposed amendment. On Amendment No. 7, which is to Section 7, on page 9, if you will see what we did, we just broke it into two sentences, used standard usage about "any" and "every", and punctuated it in accordance with the consistent standards followed throughout the manual on Style and Drafting for our constitution. We put unrelated ideas in separate sentences. Mr. Chairman...

Question

MR. GOLDMAN

Judge Tate, for the record, when you refer to "freedom of speech or of the press" do you intend that to include radio and television broadcasting?

MR. TATE

Yes, Mr. Goldman. I think the sense of the convention was that it had the traditional safeguards of the United States Constitution, which is to every form of expression, including radio and television.

MR. GOLDMAN

Thank you.

[Amendment No. 7 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 8

MR. TATE

All right. Amendment No. 8 is to Section 11....Oh, Mr. Chairman.. Mr. Chairman, the last amendment we are going to have is going to rearrange these in a logical.....order, so I'll have to.... Amendment No. 8 which is to....is now numbered...which is to Section 11 which is on page 10 which will become 9 if you approve the reordering later on...the reordering; it's simply to clarify that "No law shall impair the right of any person to assemble". We've changed the title.

[Amendment No. 8 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 9

MR. TATE

All right. Now, Amendment No. 9 which is to Section 19 in the original proposal, which is on your left hand side and will become Section 10 on your right hand side if you approve the reordering; it was....used...simply repunctuated, we used commas to set up parenthetical questions and added a verb to make sure that there's a perfect parallelism in the use of...the expression of parallel ideas. I'll yield to questions.

[Amendment No. 9 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 10

MR. TATE

All right. Section 11....Amendment No. 10 is to the old Section 26 which is on your left hand side and it...in order to, we thought, to be clear, we omitted needless words and said.... as it passed the floor it said "In access to public areas, accommodations, and facilities, every person shall have the right to be free from discrimination based on race, religion, or national ancestry from arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable discrimination." Now, we added a comma "," after "facilities" and when it said "shall have the right" we said "shall be free"; we thought that meant the same thing.

[Amendment No. 10 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 11

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 11 which is to the old Section 12 on the left hand side of page 14, generally speaking, involved minor changes of tense and singularization and in the interest of consistent grammatical usage.

114th Days Proceedings—January 10, 1974

I'll yield to any questions, Mr. Chairman.

[Amendment No. 11 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 12

MR. TATE

Well, in Amendment No. 12 which is to the old Section 27, which is on page 16 on the left hand side, we rearranged a sentence, we thought, making it a little clearer.

I'll yield to any questions, Mr. Chairman.

[Amendment No. 12 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 13

MR. TATE

All right. In Amendment No. 13, which is to the old Section 13 on the left hand side of page 17, we thought what we simply did there was omit needless words, standardize the language, singularize the use of the language so we wouldn't use plurals, and make consistent parallelisms.

I'll yield to any questions.

[Amendment No. 13 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 14

MR. TATE

All right. In Amendment No. 14, Mr. Chairman, which is to the old Section 15 on the right...left hand side of page 18, we again... all we did was change tenses and the moods of verbs in order to be consistent with our usage throughout the constitution and we omitted an unnecessary comma.

[Amendment No. 14 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 15

MR. TATE

All right. In Amendment No. 15, which is to the old Section 16 on the left hand side of page 19, again we simply singularized where the plural words were used, in line with our usage. We broke it into short sentences. We attempted to rearrange the placement a little bit in line with the...we attempted to change the sentence placement to be more logical, in line with the sense of the meaning. We've made...we're convinced there is no substantive change.

I'll yield to questions, Mr. Chairman.

[Amendment No. 15 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 16

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 16, which is to the old Section 17 on the left hand side of page 21, again involves simply standardized singularism of use of verbs, of words, of nouns, using a word for a phrase when it would work...when it says the same thing or combining a sentence in one instance in order to clarify the intent and in our judgment, of course, amounted to simply a stylistic rewriting of the article without much change in words even.

Mr. Chairman, I'll yield to any questions.

[Amendment No. 16 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 17

MR. TATE

All right. Now, Amendment No. 17, which is to the old Section 18 on the left hand side of page 24, involved two minor changes to make the parallel complete; we put "to", "to", "to" in front of each of the separate ideas in order to clarify the parallel separate ideas and we singularized "punishments" in line with our context...in line with our standard procedure, I mean.

Mr. Chairman, I'll yield to any questions.

[Amendment No. 17 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 18

MR. TATE

All right. In Amendment No. 18 on page 26 to the old Section 22 we inserted a comma "," in order to clarify the sense of the sentence and in line with our usual usage.

I'll yield to any questions, Mr. Chairman.

[Amendment No. 18 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 19

MR. TATE

All right. Amendment No. 19, which is to the old Section 25, with regard to Section 24 of unenumerated rights, we had said as the floor language passed "the enumeration in this constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny or disparage any right." It was the sense of the committee that this meant "shall not deny or disparage other right" because who determines it except through a court and if this doesn't deny it, then it can't be construed to deny it.

I'll yield to any questions, Mr. Chairman.

[Amendment No. 19 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 20

MR. TATE

Now, Mr. Chairman, the final amendment is in the nature of a technical amendment rearranging on your yellow sheet...on your white sheet you will see it rearranges the section numbers and the sections, in line with what both committees agreed on was a more logical organization; for instance, putting at the end all of the criminal procedure sections and trying to put the fundamental rights protected...group them in some sort of a logical basis. Reasonable minds could differ, you could leave it like it was but both committees thought that rearranging them as we are...recommend here on Amendment No. 20, which was...for instance, by which Section 9 would become Section 7, Section 10, Section 8, and so on. We thought it would be a more logical organization, both committees have...there's a little disagreement, we talked back and forth and reached what both of us thought would be a more logical organization.

[Amendment No. 20 adopted without objection.]

Motion

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, if it's in order, I move to take Committee Proposal...that finishes Committee Proposal No. 25, Mr. Chairman, and if it's in order, I would like to call from the calendar a very short committee proposal from...on Elections, Committee Proposal No. 33.

[Motion adopted without objection.]

Explanation and Amendment No. 1

MR. TATE

All right, those are the...
...that's at the bottom, that's the bottom two groups of paper, the green paper and the white paper in the bottom of that packet with a Roman II on it; it's a Committee Proposal No. 33 on Election. I recommended restyling as you can see; it shortens the language considerably; we think keeps the consistent language throughout the constitution and goes along with the general rules of punctuation followed by the convention. Mr. Chairman, with regard to Amendment No. 1, I move its adoption, which rewrites Section 1, the Election Code, and shortens it somewhat. It eliminates the guarantee of the right to vote because that's already in Section 7 of the Bill of Rights which we just had adopted.

114th Days Proceedings—January 10, 1974

Question

MR. STINSON

I don't have the folder. What was Section 1 about, you take Section 2 and make it Section 1, well.....

MR. TATE

Section 1 was eliminated on the floor, Mr. Stinson, and no one tried to renumber them....that no one tried to renumber them because they were relying on this convention to do it, I mean, at this time.

[Amendment No. 1 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 2

MR. TATE

All right. Again, it made shorter sentences, made the verbs consistently in the present tense, tried to omit needless words that were repetitious, or used a word instead of a phrase and in line with better usage, eliminated...better for constitutions, not for legal writing...eliminated an italics of Mr. Duval's viva voce. You are supposed to say viva voce--when you put a foreign language in normal writing, you often underline it but on a constitution it just doesn't look good to have italics or footnotes.

Questions

MR. STINSON

Judge, I'm wondering when it came up in committee I was wondering, but we did pass it, it says "Ballots shall be counted publicly", of course, we don't vote by ballots except in tax elections. Don't you think the wording should be changed instead of "Ballots shall be counted publicly"?

You couldn't say "Votes shall be counted publicly or votes cast"?

MR. TATE

Well, Mr. Stinson, I guess we should have perhaps caught it except this is the language that passed before in view of....this is the language that passed the floor; it's given us no trouble. I'm not sure that you wouldn't have the same problem if you said "Votes shall be counted publicly as well as "ballots." Ballots are a term of art, I'm informed by Professor Landry, and the ballot could be, I guess when you take that thing off the voting machine and it says "Stinson, nine hundred and forty; Tate, twenty-two or something like that," that could be the ballot maybe.

MR. STINSON

I could see where it would be "tallies" but not "ballots" and, of course, you said the court has passed on it, but I understand we got a court there now that's sort of changing a lot of things; do you think they will change this?

MR. TATE

I laugh even though it hurts.

[Amendment No. 2 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 3

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 3 on the new Section 3 simply to make it parallel adds a "while" to it, because that was a parallel idea that was introduced. The other parallel part was introduced with a "while." They added a "while," here, to emphasize the parallelism.

Is there any. . .I'd yield to any questions, Mr. Chairman.

[Amendment No. 3 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 4

MR. TATE

All right. Section 4, Mr. Chairman, just involves using the standard "a" that we've been using throughout when we refer to "any"--"a" for "any." "A" means "any" except. . .and we omitted a "however" because it's implicitly that it was "however," and it was a needless word involved. We omitted a "the" because it was unnecessary.

I'd yield to any questions, Mr. Chairman. I'll yield to any questions, Mr. Chairman, and if there are none, I'll move the adoption of the amendment.

[Amendment No. 4 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 5

MR. TATE

Section 5, again, involves simply the. . .Oh, it said, here, "subject to and not inconsistent with the provisions of this constitution." There were no provisions adopted that were inconsistent with this, unlike in Local Government, Mr. Avant, where there is a reason for the phrase. There was no reason found for it here, and it was then thought to be just a simply use. . . a simple use of surplus of words. Otherwise, otherwise, there are just stylistic changes.

I'll yield to questions, Mr. Chairman.

[Amendment No. 5 adopted without objection.]

Recess

[Quorum Call: 116 delegates present and a quorum.]

Motion

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Chairman, I move that the convention go into a Committee of the Whole for two hours for the purpose of hearing the governor of Louisiana speak to us.

[Motion adopted without objection.]

Committee of the Whole

GOVERNOR EDWARDS

Somehow I'm not quite as tall as I was.

Thank you very much for this opportunity. It hardly seems possible that it was a year ago that we met at the L.S.U. Center, and I had the opportunity then of talking to you--fresh from the victory of your election; anxious to get on with the job at hand; convinced that you had been charged with the holy and great opportunity to render public service; I'm certain, totally unaware of how agonizing the decisions would be from that day until this one; and as you find yourselves in the last days of your convention.

I come before you as a citizen of this state; as one who proudly accepts the credit and the responsibility--and, yes, even the criticism--for this convention; as one who says again, as I have said for many years, that the single greatest legacy we could leave our children, the people of the state when we have finished our terms and have served out our capacity, is to provide Louisiana with a good, basic constitutional document.

I need to say some things to you this morning which will smack somewhat of braggadocio, will rob me of my traditional cloak of humility, possibly make you feel that I'm really not all that sharp; and you may wonder sometimes whether I've taken leave of my senses. But, so that you will understand my heart and understand my sincerity and will feed that into your own thinking in the last few days of this convention, please know that however wrong you may think I may be about anything that I say, there is no doubt whatsoever in my mind about the correctness of everything that I will say to you. Necessarily, I will express opinions and, necessarily, I will be saying to you things that I cannot prove; but I simply want you to know that I honestly, sincerely state to you what I, today, feel is the political atmosphere and climate in Louisiana. These are situations and facts, attitudes that you must deal with and take into consideration in preparing a document to be submitted for approval to the people, because no matter what you do--how great and wonderful and perfect the document may be--it is meaningless and worth nothing and is a total effort in futility, if it isn't adopted and put to use. Hence, we approach the problem between two extremes: on the one hand, my own preconceived, firm convictions of what a constitution is and should be; and, on the other, my own awareness, as a practical person in public life, that it is indeed difficult to draft such a document and even more difficult to get its acceptance by a population of almost four million people with various degrees of desires and attitudes, feelings, sensitivities. Hence, between these two extremes, we must come together on what we believe will be a consensus sufficient to address itself to the public good and sufficient to allow for public acceptance.

Necessity, this morning, compels me to speak to you in what I believe to be true statements, rather than pleasing ones. I would like to please you, but I prefer to save you--whatever your attitude may be towards me after I have finished--because, in saving you, I save myself and, in saving you and saving myself and saving this constitution, we save the people; and what higher calling could we respond to?

I will have to philosophize a little bit before getting into the meat of my appearance here--again, hopefully, to translate to you why I am taking some of the positions that I will take in the last moments of my appearance before you. Walter Lippmann, after nearly a half century of observing public figures and observing voters--the electorate--made a rather caustic and harsh judgment, both of us as politicians and of the people as voters, which I'd like to read to you. "With rare exceptions, public officials are regarded as miracles of nature. Successful democratic politicians are insecure and intimidated men. They advance politically only as they placate, appease, seduce, bamboozle, or otherwise manage to manipulate the demanding, threatening elements of their constituencies. The decisive consideration is not whether the proposition is good, but whether it is popular; not whether it will work well and prove itself, but whether the active, talking constituents like it immediately." How harsh that is, but how well it applies to the efforts of certain special interest people to get in or out of this document--not what they or you consider to be in the public interest, but what they happen to consider, immediately, to be in their own interest. Now, I must suggest to you, in defense of myself and trying to soften the harshness of my furies, that what criticisms I have of the document, and what problems have arisen in the feel and the hustlings and bustlings of our state, arise, very candidly, from your failure to recognize that you were here to write a constitution, rather than to serve as legislators.

Had you stopped your work after completion of the Bill of Rights and the three Articles on the Executive, the Legislature, and the Judiciary, a beautiful, fantastically well-engineered and prepared document would have been your work product. Practical aspects of your job, however, required you to go further; and it is when you got into those provisions which are really legislative, and not constitutional matters, that the problems began to develop, and the most serious objections began to be heard on the streets and were reflected in the reports of your work. Everyone of the items that I will comment, later on, upon are matters which do not belong in the constitution at all. It matters not what side of the argument you are on, whether you are for or against the proposal, there would be legitimate, beautiful things to argue about--as members of the legislature, or as a police juror, or as a person in some legislative capacity--but, ladies and gentlemen, have no business at all in a constitution. I'm going to say that repeatedly during the time that I will be before you, but I want you to know that it applies generally to every item of concern that I and people in the state are expressing concern about.

I want to also paraphrase from the remarks made by a senator in the United States Senate one hundred and fifty years ago, because I want you to know that I feel for you; and, in the months that you have been here, I know, as a person who has been in public life for twenty years, the pressures you have been subjected to. I come today not just simply to criticize, but to tell you that I sympathize with you and I understand the problems that you have had. I know how it is for ten or twelve people who have a special interest to harass you and to insist upon having their way and to corner you and to pick you in an effort to get from you a commitment. I know how disconcerting and discouraging it is that that vast group of people out there we call the public never takes time to listen, to study, to express an opinion, or to ask for assistance, but rather is content to wait until after you have done your best and then begin to criticize. But, it's part of the system; and if I had been able to leave one message with you, when I spoke to you a year ago, it would simply have been that remember that each of you represents, basically, fifty thousand people. Two or three or four or five hundred, or one thousand, descending upon you at one time, on a certain issue, cannot by any stretch of the imagination be construed to represent the will of the fifty thousand. They only represent the will of a vocal group, interested in a particular aspect, without regard to the total effect of the document.

I come to you today, not speaking for the farm bureau or organized labor or the lawyers or the judges or the bankers. Do they need one such as I to be their spokesman? Have they not exhibited to you, far better than I in my poor way, their ability to promote their own interests--as indeed they should, and I criticize them not for it. But, today I don't speak for them. Today I speak for the people. And, in a larger, broader sense, is that not in effect also speaking for them? because are they not also members of the public-at-large? What have you done for the bankers? Or the lawyers? Or organized labor? Or for the Chamber of Commerce? Or for any one group? If you make it possible for them to succeed and be successful and to have what they want--and do so at the cost of jeopardizing the opportunity of other people, in some other phase of life, to have an equal opportunity to succeed--how have we served any group if we don't make it possible for all groups to live and to progress and to succeed? Are bankers going to be happy if they have everything they want, yet we so jeopardize the possibility of other people to succeed that they will not be able to support the bankers by the deposit of their funds? Are lawyers served if we give them what they want, yet the public is so dissatisfied and unhappy that revolution reigns in the streets and people just will not accept the peaceful workings of democratic process? Have we served organized labor if we kill business that provides them with jobs? and have we served business if we make it impossible for the laborers to work for them? and have we served the farmers if the consumers cannot buy their products? and have we served ourselves if the people cannot tolerate what we have imposed upon them and they will not accept our judgment?

The senator said "a man becomes a public official, not able to dream in advance the ordeals to which he will be exposed. He has no way of knowing the courage that he must possess to resist the temptations that daily beset him. He knows not the shrinking of duty from undeserved censure that he will have to learn to control. He knows not, in advance, the ever-recurring contest between the natural desire for public approbation and a sense of public duty. How can he know in advance the load of injustice he must be content to bear, even from those who should be his friends? How can he know in advance the imputations of his motives, the sneers and sarcasms of the ignorant and the malicious? How can he know in advance all of the manifold injustices which partisan and private malignancies will heap upon his unprotected head, as he seeks to do what he thinks to be his sworn duty? If we are to retain our integrity--those of us in public life--we must learn to bear, unmoved, and walk steadily onward in a path of duty, sustained only by the reflection that time may do us justice---or, if not, then after all of our individual hopes and aspirations, and even our name among men, they should be of little account to those of us who serve in this life, when weighed in the balance against the welfare of the people for whose destiny you are the constituted guardian and defender." I pass that on to you because you cannot expect instant popularity or instant approbation for what you do. Hopefully, if we succeed in what we're doing, years from now people will look back upon us and say: In a day and age when it was hard and difficult to do, and the cynics said it was impossible, these whose names are emblazoned on this document were willing to stand the test; they did for us what others said could not be done, and we are the happy legatees of their work product.

I ask you then, this morning, to recognize that courage is not alone the absolute dedication to one unflinching principle. Courage sometimes requires compromise, and sometimes it is more courageous to compromise if the end result is in the public interest. So, I come to you this morning as one willing to compromise.

I needn't tell you again that, in eighteen months of a long, tough, and expensive campaign, I talked till I was blue in the face about not electing large numbers of statewide elected officials. And fusing into the constitution a cabinet system of government--how dear to my heart and thinking that concept is. I don't insist upon it before you, as I didn't during the year that you deliberated. You know why? Because, although I am positive that that is where the best interest of our state lies, I don't think I represent or reflect the prevailing opinion of the people of this state. I'm going to continue that dialogue in an effort to someday--hopefully, before my time comes--to convince people that that is the best way to run government, because I'm absolutely satisfied that that kind of a change is in the public interest. But, I will not, at the risk of jeopardizing this document or doing violence to you, come to you this morning and say, unless you impose into this document that form of government which I know is the best, that I will not support it—even though I strongly feel that way—because I don't think, in that regard, that I speak for the majority of the people of this state.

What I am going to talk to you about as necessary changes to the document not only represent my own views but, I know, represent the majority view of the people of Louisiana. Let's be well aware of something that I also know. I know that you have already adopted these provisions and, therefore, they represent the majority opinion of this body. Hence, I am asking a majority of you to change your minds, but I do so in the assurance that the document will be better, in the belief that it is necessary to make these changes to get it ratified, and in the certainty that it is a better way to approach the problems and address ourselves to the issues. Before I go into those items, I want to say again: None of these should be in the constitution, no matter which side of it you're on. A constitution is simply a basic document which guarantees people, in an organized society, certain rights and privileges and liberties, and then provides a system of government—nothing more. We would be better off if we didn't have any of this that I now talk about in the constitution, but I also recognize from a practical standpoint that out there we must satisfy, to the extent that we can without doing violence to our obligations, the public because we have to get their support.

I therefore make these suggestions. Before I do them, I want you to know that I'm fixing to not offend, but prick, the conscience and probably create the friendly or unfriendly criticism of many people, sitting in the convention, whom I consider to be political and personal friends. I know my good friend, Lawrence Chehardy, in spite of his weight, is going to break one of those light bulbs when he jumps out of his seat. I hope Vic Bussie isn't in the audience. My friend Ed Steimel is probably somewhere already deciding how he's going to react. The Farm Bureau, my friends at L.S.U., the bankers, the lawyers, the district attorneys. How much I wish this cup were passed from my lips. I don't need, at this stage in my political career, to take upon myself this burden. I could lead a long, happy life without saying the things I'm now going to say to you.

I looked at a poll, day before yesterday, which indicated that eighty-four percent of the people so polled believed that I was doing a good job as governor. There's little likelihood that I could increase that percentage. There's every likelihood it will go down after today. But, that's temporary, and the overriding, serious, most important question is a new constitution. So, I come today not to please you and not to please people whom I consider personal and political friends, and I hope they will understand the spirit in which I make these recommendations. You will know that—because many of you have tried to talk to me in the last ten days, and many of these people have tried to talk to me in the last ten days when they found out that I was to address the convention, each, I'm certain, anxious to convince me of the validity of their position and the wisdom of their ways—I have refused to talk to them and to you because, very candidly, I didn't want to be swayed. I wanted to get it over with and do what I thought was in the public interest. So, here I give it to you.

Tax exemptions relating to [...] institutions, educational institutions, or what industrial institutions, do not belong in a constitution and should have been stripped. The legislature on a continuing basis, as circumstances dictate, should make those decisions. You have chosen, however, to leave in the constitution all exemptions except the industrial exemption. I, therefore, recommend to you that you either strip the constitution completely of such exemptions, or if you are going to leave them, then, as a compromise, I would suggest that you also include the industrial exemptions and that you do so without the efforts of some to give local government veto power on the granting of the exemptions. Now, I can say to you as one who knows something about industrial expansion that more than ever we are going to have to emphasize and increase our industrial expansion. The great oil and gas reserves, that for so many decades attracted industry to Louisiana as magnets, are depletable and exhaustible resources. We must emphasize, as I have, the importation of people-oriented industries. Every effort that we can make to make that possible should be done, and, therefore, if you're going to leave exemptions in the constitution, you should leave that one, without political interference on a local level. Now, you say, well, why not give the local people—the local police jury, school board, the city council—the right to veto it. Simply speaking, because those who are interested in industry do not want to be imposed upon in some isolated areas—and there will be some—by local officials who want to be responsible for finding the land, or selling the insurance, or furnishing the employees, or building the building. They want to be able to move in devoid of having to address themselves to the whims and caprice of local officials. No police jury is ever going to refuse a legitimate industry in its parish, and if they did, I'm certain that the adjoining parish would be very glad to have it. The local objection feature, which some have sought to infuse into these exemptions, are just not necessary and would give us one more obstacle to the importation of industry, and I urge you to leave that out. I don't think that you're being unfair to local government. I don't think you're going to find that any industry is going to want to go to a parish where those in charge of the power structure of the parish indicate publicly or privately they do not want the industry. Hence, it only serves as a red flag and brings no good purpose.

You should delete—and I repeat again; I may say this too many times, but all of this should be left out of the constitution completely—all of these items, but since you're going to—I think, and I have to be practical—recognize if you're going to want to say something about it in the constitution—I suggest that you delete from the provisions of the constitution that provision relating to automatic rate increases for public service applications. Even with bond and assurances, it doesn't belong in the constitution and should be handled on a legislative basis. I'm going to be frank enough to say that I don't join the hue and cry of some who are concerned about the effect of that provision. As a matter of fact, I would be perfectly content, and if it isn't put in the constitution—I would be perfectly content—to suggest to the legislature in May that a companion piece of legislation be adopted by the legislature in May because there's a great deal of merit for the passage of that kind of provision, but it doesn't belong in the constitution, and I ask you to take it out.

The constitution must give the attorney general of our state, subject to court approval, the independent right to institute and prosecute criminal proceedings. District attorneys who are violently opposed to this provision, in my judgment, have no real basis for opposing it. They do; I understand that; I do not challenge their position. I merely say that I think in the interest of what is good for government that the attorney general of our state should have that authority.

The constitution should not, as you have provided, provide that all witnesses who appear before grand juries should have the right of counsel. That is a legislative matter which should be left to the legislature to be handled on a continuing basis. I must agree with district attorneys that in instances that would impede the orderly prosecution of criminals and those suspected of violations of the laws, I do not believe it to be in the public interest, although I recognize that in some instances, grand juries do take advantage of witnesses, and I recognize that in some instances some witnesses will suffer because they do not have an attorney. I just think that it is a price that we have to pay, living in a society such as ours. I suggest that you strip that from your document.

There are serious questions which have now been raised as to whether or not the language in the proposed article on revenue and finance impairs the authority of the Superport, HEAL, and some other state agencies to issue revenue bonds. On the advice of bond attorneys, whose opinions I respect, and in the knowledge that we may some day want to issue revenue bonds, I suggest that you clarify that language, and we will submit for your consideration a document for that purpose.

Other areas: multi-banking, a classic example of things that do not belong in a constitution. Now, I have said publicly, and I'll say it again, that as a governor of a state or as a legislator, I would never support multi-banking unless and until the banking association of this state, whose interests are concerned, supported it. Today, they do not; although it's about sixty-forty. But, I'm going to tell you right now—you can mark it down—before my term as governor ends, if I happen to get reelected, these same people who asked you to put this provision in this constitution are going to flood the legislature begging for a multi-banking provision in the statutes. They will do so because the national government is beginning to authorize multi-banking by national banks, and the fifty-four federal banks in this state will be in that business before long, and as a matter of self survival the state banks are going to require it. But, it doesn't matter whether they never require it. The Bankers' Association has enough strength and muscle with the legislature on a continuing basis to protect its interest. We don't want to put something in a constitution which may ultimately require us to go back to the people to have it amended in order to get something done that we do not now, maybe today, believe is going to come about, but five, six, or ten years from now, may be an absolute necessity. I predict—and I'll put my political career on the line—that before the next six years, the bankers of Louisiana are going to beg for a multi-banking statute. So, I suggest to you that this is not the proper place to consider that. The concept of multi-banking statutes is so complex and so difficult to understand that I really don't believe any of you, with the exception of those of you who sit on bank boards or who are attorneys interested in the problem, really know what it is all about. It's nothing but absolute, pure legislation, and I suggest to you that we remove it from this document with the assurance, that I now give you and the bankers, that no one is going to make any effort to provide for it until the bankers themselves want it.

Income tax schedules and the federal income tax deductions: In one afternoon this gracious, generous body delivered to the people of the state a hundred million dollars worth of benefits. You doubled the royalty provisions to certain parishes, and you constitutionalized the federal income tax deduction as an exemption on state income tax. That's great! I'm for that. I was the governor who provided the money from other sources to restore the federal income tax deduction. But, ladies and gentlemen, I don't know what the situation of this state is going to be eight years from now. The taxation and the revenue measures needed to fund the functions of government is a function of the legislature. Whether or not the people are going to want federal income tax deductions, or higher than a six percent rate on income taxes in lieu of sales taxes, or property taxes, or some other taxes, is a legislative matter. I ask you not to bind the hands of future administrations of this state by putting a ceiling on the income taxes and constitutionalizing exemptions on income taxes and giving to people now what we can afford to give them because of the work that the legislature has done but which we may not be able to do in the years ahead. Now, let me say this. I am satisfied, based on projected revenues and expenditures, that during the term that I'm going to be governor, we don't need to raise taxes. I'm not asking for anything for Edwin Edwards and sure it would be very popular for me to say, "Oh, you're right, man, put it in the constitution, man, we are going to give the people all these things." But, I have to concern myself with the problems and agonies of future legislatures and future governors who have to respond to public demand for public functions and public services. It is wrong for this constitution to bind their hands to where they are limited in what they can do. Let the legislature make the decision at the appropriate time and determine what is the best way on a year-to-year basis to raise revenue. I suggest you remove that from this document. O.K.?

The two tough ones, education and property taxes. A constitution by anybody's definition should do nothing more than commit a government to providing an education for all people, at all levels in the highest way possible. How you do that is not a constitutional matter. I am appalled at the arguments made by my friends from L.S.U., and I'm an alumnus of L.S.U., about how we are going to erode the greatness of L.S.U. if we don't have a separate board for L.S.U. That is not right. It is wrong for county agents and people in the agricultural extension service to tell you that if we don't have a separate board for L.S.U. that we are going to lose the extension service and the experiment station. It is wrong for L.S.U. to say that we are doing violence to L.S.U. if we don't have a single agency. It is wrong for L.S.U. to say that if we don't have in the constitution a Board of Supervisors for L.S.U. that there will be scandals at L.S.U. as there were in the 30's. Words, and papers, and constitutions, and statutes don't create fraud and do violence to obligations. It is people. Whether you have five, or four, or one, or three, or two boards, crooked people on five boards or crooked people on one board will do crooked things. You're talking about a system of government here, not what individuals will do yet unnamed in the next thirty years. How do they know that that is necessary? How will we know ten years from now what is the best way to administer education in Louisiana? Concepts of today in less than five years are archaic, laughed upon, spit upon as new concepts become viable and people recognize there's a better way to do things. If we are to bottom all of this in our constitution, you are stamping it with a self-destruct stamp because every time we want to rise above the old way to do something new, we have to amend the constitution, and that is what has got us in the situation that we are in now--the amendment of the constitution, seven hundred and thirty times in less than fifty years. Five hundred amendments were passed to the constitution; it is what has caused the problem. Why stigmatize the constitution? Why stigmatize education with a constitutionally provided system by which it will be run? Even if you are positive today that that is the way it should be done, how do you know how it needs to be done ten years from now? If we are to make a change, are we going to be archaically imposing upon the people of this state the need to digest and consider complicated amendments and give it to them in disgusting amounts saying "amend, amend, amend, change, change, change, change, change, change" because back in 1974 we didn't have enough confidence in the future leaders and people of this state to give them the elasticity, and ability, the leeway to deal with problems as they arose. You don't need anything more in a constitution than a constitutional commitment of government to furnish a good education at every level. "O.K., Edwin, that might be right." But, I'll admit to you that I don't think this is what the people want.

I really believe that that's the best way to handle the problem; it's in their interest. But, I'll admit to you now that as strongly as I feel that way and as much as I think I know it's in the public interest, I don't think in making that statement I represent the majority interest or majority view. I hate to say it, but I think people want you to put in this constitution how the colleges and universities will be managed--not good constitutional provisions, not necessarily in the public interest, but I think reflects public opinion. They are scared; they want to know exactly what it is.

The other things that I have talked about I think are right, and I think they represent the public view; in this instance I think I'm out of step with the public. But, I publicly say that that's the best way to do it. I wish that's what you did because I think we could sell the concept in the next four, or five, or six months to people by showing them how we can make it work and how other states have done it and how we need to retain the right on a decade to decade basis without having to go back to the people in constitutional amendment form to handle our educational institutions. How beautiful it would be if we could express here in written words our own faith in the ability of people to govern themselves and to change as the years change and as the mind of man engineers better ways of doing things. Okay? You don't think you can go that far, and you think I'm a little too radical, and, I know, a little bit far out, so you have to have something in the constitution. For goodness sakes, nothing more or less than one board for the colleges and institutions. I don't care how you provide for its membership. I think you ought to have some of them appointed so that we can always have a balance and make sure that educators get on it because it's a sad commentary on our system that very few educators want to get in the political processes. Then, you should have another board for elementary and secondary education if you can't have one giant superboard for all education which would plan the education from the kindergarten to the doctor's degree, which if I were in the legislature, I would be arguing for that. Before the convention, I argued for nothing except a commitment to education, but if you're going to legislate on the subject--and that's what you'd be doing--my first thought, my first proposal suggestion, and the one that I think... Now, I don't think the public joins with me on the "no" provision, but I suggest to you in spite of the lobbying by my effective and good friends--and I know what you've been through because I've heard from them, too, you know. "How can you, a graduate of LSU, do this to our university? But, I suggest to you, if you're going to legislate, that one board for all education from the time a child starts kindergarten until he gets his doctor's degree--which would coordinate it and plan it, take care of the vo-tech schools, the private schools to the extent that state government may be involved in books or in curriculum--all of that one gamut should be in the hands of one group of people. In that group some of them should be appointed by a governor charged with the responsibility to select people whose educational experience, expertise and dedication is in the field of education. If you can't go that far with me, then I suggest that you have two, then: one for colleges and universities and one for the rest of the educational system. I implore you to do that. The five board system you have is not as bad as I thought it was when I heard about it, but it doesn't respond; it isn't good; people don't understand it. They are opposed to it; it isn't popular; and it's going to defeat the constitution. I will not support it, and I don't think the people will either. I beg you to reconsider that, because past the Bill of Rights and these three articles on the government, this is, in my judgment, the most important thing that the people are looking at.

Property taxes: Oh, how happy I am to publicly state my position on property taxes. How popular it is going to make me with everybody. How anxious I was to get here and let you know what I think should be done about property taxes. How much I wish you had done it, and I could say, "well, those fellows did a good job; that's enough." Okay, I believe you did a good job. I really do. I think to the extent that you can write--and again I want to say that it doesn't belong in the constitution. There should be nothing in this constitution except the right of state to levy taxes, the right of local government to levy taxes. How they do that should be done by the legislature and by police juries and school boards and city governments. I really mean that. There's no need to put in this constitution how taxes are to be raised or levied, but I know that people out there want it. I recognize that, and to that extent, I am again willing to compromise. I think that if you need to write something, that what you have written responds as well as one can engineer, or think out in advance, a provision for that. But, it won't sell; it won't sell. You can't fight PAR. It has too much the attention of the business community, the good government people, and the majority of the people who are really going to take an interest in this document and who will decide to support or denounce it. It won't sell to the editorial media. Now, look, with the exception of one of the papers in New Orleans, I've been fairly treated by the editorial media, and the one paper in New Orleans hasn't hurt me at all. You can't do better than eighty-four percent in a poll. But, on an issue such as this, personalities are not concerned. People are not going to sit down and digest it for themselves. They're going to pick up an editorial, and in two minutes time, jump to a conclusion that you've agonized over for a year. One person sitting in an ivory tower somewhere, who won't sign an editorial, won't identify himself, who poses as an expert on everything from tourism to high finance in the stock market, is going to write an editorial, and in five or six devastating lines--maybe unfair, maybe untrue, maybe inaccurate--is going to point out how this provision is going to drive industry from Louisiana, and PAR is going to attack it. When the editorial writers and the policymakers get through with you, you're going to jeopardize the passage of this document.

Now, consider the alternatives, for those of you who are as concerned about it--and Mr. Chehardy, I speak especially to you because I know of your concern for the property tax situation. Consider the alternatives. What happens if we don't get a new constitution adopted? What happens if we don't put a provision in the constitution which protects property owners? Is that not your main concern--to protect them? How have you protected them if you write the most beautiful property tax provision in the world for their benefit, and we can't get it passed? We've done nothing for them. Is it not better to consider a compromise which doesn't do violence to them, which may be acceptable, and which we can get passed, to give us a new beginning to work towards the ultimate good and total aims that we're trying to do for property owners. Unlike some of the other people who have criticized us on this regard, I'm proud of the fact that property owners in Louisiana pay a smaller property tax than in any other state in the nation. I don't think that's anything to be ashamed of. I'm not gleeful when people say that it's necessary to raise property taxes. I don't buy the argument that some people say that if people don't pay taxes, they don't support government, and they don't relate to it, and don't want to be a part of it. I don't buy that at all. I think people expect us to run government, to provide them with the services they want provided in as efficient a way as possible. I think people are willing to pay for that, but at the same time, if we can pass the burden somewhere else, I don't think anybody is going to object about that. I tell you what, I've had very few people tell me they thought it was wrong that we're making those people in Tennessee, and Pennsylvania, and New York pay for the taxes they used to pay on food and drugs, and giving them back their federal income tax deduction. You don't hear very much of that. I only heard it from one person, and that's a guy who had a girlfriend here. He lived in Tennessee.

Now, get to this: I don't care whether you are a public official now, you're never going to run again, you've never run for anything, or whether you plan to run for the legislature or something in two years, there is no compromise that you can make. There is no compromise that you can make on this or any other provision of this document which will help pass it which is as important to you, means more to you, than on this area because there is where the meat of the coconut is. But, at the same time, nothing you do here is going to hurt you as much as being a signatory to a document that goes down in dismal defeat. It is going to haunt you for the rest of your political life if you have been party to a three million dollar venture looking for the golden fleece and, after you have spent a year of your time and three million dollars of the taxpayers' money, it gets badly defeated at the polls. I don't care how strong you feel about anything I've talked about; I don't care how strong you feel about anything. As far as you are personally concerned, no vote you can make in the next ten days, to compromise and to adjust and to mold this document into an acceptable document, is going to mean as much to you as what's going to happen if you don't provide a document that we can sell and get the public to accept. You remember that. You're interested in your career, and you're fighting for your people, you think, and you've got to have it your way because you think that that's what you're running on, or that's what you stand for, or that's what people identify you with. All that's very important. I tell you right now, it's not going to do you nearly as much good as being one of the authors of an acceptable constitution.

To get this document passed, I suggest we're going to have to make a change. Now, you can put it down; there's nobody who has been bombarded about this as much as I have since it came out. I have vacillated from one extreme to the other, and I am willing, in an effort to get those people--I'm talking about the editorial writers and the PAR and others who are legitimately concerned about it. I don't agree with their conclusions. I want you to understand that. I don't think we're doing violence to industry; I don't think we're running industry out of the state, and I don't think we're being unfair to anybody, and I think we are doing something good for property owners. But, after all I can be wrong, and they may be right. They've studied it. I'm anxious--I say that publicly--I'm anxious to get their concurrence in this document. Hence, I am willing to go a step further. I suggest that you do two things. One: recognize that if we don't do something and get it passed, we're leaving the people of this state burdened with court imposed obligations on the part of assessors to do what assessors have resisted doing for fifty years, and that is: to reassess everybody's property on an equal and uniform basis at actual cash value. Now, you can make all kind of arguments about that's not the law, and that's not going to be required, and that ain't going to happen, and you can make all kind of arguments about yes, well if they do, then the police juries and the city councils can reduce the rate of tax, and that's true. They can do that, but they don't have to. That is not the law. You are leaving property owners exposed. I'll be the first to admit I don't think the danger is real, but it is certain that they are exposed to some very damaging possibilities. I think it important that we try now, since we're going to get into this business, to tie it down to where we protect them as much as possible, consistent with our obligations to leave local government the opportunity to raise necessary revenues from property taxes. Bear in mind that I'm not concerned about this as a governor because we have no state property taxes. I was successful in getting the legislature to remove them. I am talking now for local government and for property owners. I don't want to. If we don't pass a constitution, we're going to have to pass fifty statutes--listen to this--fifty statutes and seven constitutional amendments to straighten out the property tax mess. You hear that? Fifty statutes and seven constitutional amendments are going to have to be submitted to the people in order to straighten out the property tax mess and keep us from having a revolution from the property owners. Hence, it is important that we pass a document, and that we have some provision in here which clarifies the property tax problem. Now, what I am going to propose is not going to satisfy anybody. But, I think it can be sold to the public, and I think it will be in the public interest. I think it is going to give us a new base, hopefully, to work from. You should have some specific, harsh, definite provisions penalizing assessors who do not do their duty in accordance with whatever is decided. That's very important. We have to have an automatic triggering device which will require the compliance with whatever decisions are made on assessment practices. We can no longer tolerate the situation which has existed for fifty years, where there's no certainty, and where property owners are left to the whim of the assessors. You know I don't have a better group of friends than the assessors. But, that's not good government. I must say to the credit of the assessors that they are willing to accept such a provision because they want to do their duty. But you cannot expect an assessor elected in 1974 to undo a fifty-year pattern of his predecessors in property tax assessments unless we give him the basis to do it and the mandate to do it. I, therefore, suggest that when you finish your provisions, you put it in there in such a way--and we'll suggest the language--that those assessors who do not comply with the law are subject to harsh penalties, suspension of salaries, the possibility of being addressed out of office because we need to assure them and the public and the courts that we are serious about the change.

I am content with the three thousand dollar level of homestead exemption. Sure, we'd all like it to be more. How sweet it is to tell people that you've raised the assessment, but we, at the three thousand dollar level, I think have hit the vast majority of homes that really need the protection. That narrow group from three to five or three to six that would be hit by an assessment practice will be only subject to a very small amount of taxes. I think it's a fair compromise, and I suggest that you stay with it. To get away from the most serious argument made by those who opposed the provision, that is the disparity between the assessment ratio for residences and land and commercial establishments, I suggest that we fuse the two, and instead of having ten percent in one and fifteen on the other, that we make it twelve and a half percent across the board. No one can then say that we've been unfair to business, or we're taxing business more than home, or that we're jeopardizing anybody's right to own and hold a piece of property or to own and hold a home. I think it is a provision that people will be willing to accept. I think it would be a response to the problem, and I think with the constitutional mandate that assessors be required to follow it that we can get it sold. In my judgment if you do not make these changes, all of us together, with the tongues of ten thousand angels, cannot sell this document and get it adopted. I believe with these changes, and with these changes I would be willing to spend my money and my time in the public interest, in concert with you on an individual basis and as a group to try as much as possible to educate people on what we have done, to tell them that, for all of its imperfections and for all that it may not have and for all that it does have, it will be by far a much, much, much better document than the one we now have. I think you would be able to say to yourselves and to those you represent that with tough, difficult, hard decisions to make, you, in the long run, did respond to the public interest.

I speak to you as governor and as a citizen, and I'll close by saying that I'm going to treat you just as I treated the legislature. Not one of you can say that at any time I have called or talked to you, and said, "You'd better do this or you will lose my friendship or my support." I don't do that today, and I'm not going to discuss this with any of you again. I'm sincere in what I say, but the judgment must be made by you. I'm not a delegate; I don't vote here. But, I express my opinion, and I reflect what I believe to be the opinion of the people of the State of Louisiana. I don't think I would have served in public life for twenty years if I didn't have some ability to judge public opinion. I ask you to set aside your own allegiances and your own obligations; I ask you to set aside what commitments you may have made to some people who, I think, will understand in the long run that commitments made are always subject to the requirement to reevaluating. Whatever commitments you made to those people to do something for them isn't going to be well served if the document isn't passed. It doesn't matter how strong or how hard you've argued for and put into the document something they wanted you to put; if they don't get it passed, you haven't done anything for them. I'm going to tell you right now we're not going to pass the document as it is, but we can pass it with these effective changes. I implore you to consider that this will be the last time, either as a group or individually, I will talk to any of you about it. The Chairman, Mr. Gravel, Mr. Graham, and Mr. Pugh between now and Monday will file in appropriate form amendments, documents, or what have you, to implement the changes which I have suggested. I recommend them to you because I think that it's in the public interest.

I appreciate your attentiveness and I appreciate your courtesy. I hope that no matter how offended you may be by what I have said, or how much you disagree with me, you will at least recognize that I'm here today not because I thought I was going to promote myself, or because I thought that you depended upon or needed my sage advice to tell you what to do, and not because I really thought any of you were going to jump up and clap and say, "Well, if the governor said do it, that's what I'm going to do," because I'll tell you what, I've found out differently in the year you've been here. I like it that way. If it's no good, I can say it's your document. If it's good, you can say it's your document, and I'll say I helped. But, in any event, I'm here today because I feel I have an obligation to the people, just as any other citizen whom you've listened to attentively and patiently during the past year, simply to express to you my feelings.

I value solid popularity, and I value the esteem of good men for good action. I would not be a public figure if I didn't subscribe to that sentiment. I have no desire for and no basis for wanting the bubble popularity that comes temporarily and that is won without merit or because people believe you have done something for them that, in fact, you have not, or because people believe that something has occurred, or because you are able with a slick or glib tongue to convince them that you have worked in their interest when, in fact, you've not. I despise that kind of popularity because, I'm going to tell you something: I know it doesn't last long. It's a bubble popularity and ultimately will pop. I intend to be here for yet a few more decades, and I am as concerned about what people will say about and think about me thirty years from now as I am the reaction that's going to be in the streets when the news media report my suggestions this afternoon. I've been in public life for twenty years, and I've sometimes had to act against preconceived opinions and first impressions of my constituents---those of you who come from the district I served in Congress know what I'm talking about---but I've always done so with a full reliance; and I leave you with this thought: upon the intelligence of people to understand me, and to do equity and to do me justice--I'm going to tell you something--I've never been disappointed because in the long run I find that the people are just as smart as I am. Ultimately, they see as well as I do, and the same clarity, same reasoning that I use, people ultimately get around to using it when they begin to think. When the decision time comes, those who for the past year have insulated themselves from you and have not come to you and offered you advice and counsel, they're going to begin to think. They'll think as we stimulate their minds and as we help them to make their opinions. I'm convinced that we together can convince the people of this state that we will have done a good job for them, and, consistent with all the conflicting philosophies and obligations and rules and thoughts and partisans and personalities, that we have conferred for them the best kind of document the minds of men can confer in the political climate which now exists. I could write a better constitution; I have one written. But, I couldn't get it passed. You could write a better constitution, but you couldn't get it passed because there are certain accommodations that have to be made, and I recognize that. It's part of the courage of compromise. I only ask that you consider it. I do so because I'm concerned, because I want a new constitution, and because I want you to succeed. Thank you.

PROPOSALS ON THE CALENDAR
FOR APPROVAL OF FINAL STYLING

Committee Proposal No. 12

Amendment No. 1

MR. POYNTER

Do you want to go in numerical order, Judge Tate?

The first one would be Committee Proposal No. 12, dealing with human resources.

Do you want me to read the proposed amendment to the proposed section, Judge?

All right. I'll read the amendment.

The proposed change to the section included in Committee Proposal No. 12, which does deal with human resources, reads as follows, as proposed amended...to be amended by Style and Drafting:
"State Penal Institutions; Reimbursement of Parish Expenses.

Section 1. The state shall reimburse a parish in which a state penal institution is located for expenses the parish incurs, arising from crime committed in the institution or by an inmate thereof."

114th Days Proceedings—January 10, 1974

Explanation

[Amendment No. 1 adopted without objection.]

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, as a word of explanation, all of these one-paragraph sections...some of them duplicate one another as section numbers. Eventually, you'll see when we come back with the final rearrangement, they will probably be consolidated either in a General Provisions Article or in a Human Resources Article, and at appropriate instances are in the Transitional Article. So, don't worry at present about the section numbering or lack of them.

Section 1 of State Penal Institutions is simply what was done since the rest of it was abolished like the Section (B) and all the rest. It was the just the language was simplified with the same meaning. Are there any questions?

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

[Amendment No. 1 adopted: 81-2.]

Committee Proposal No. 14

Amendment No. 1

MR. POYNTER

Next proposal is Committee Proposal No. 14, dealing with human resources, dealing with welfare, unemployment and compensation.

The proposed amendment would read as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, delete lines 19 through 23, both inclusive, in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Section 2. Welfare, Unemployment Compensation, and Health."

Explanation

MR. TATE

We simply simplified the title and added a comma "," in the text in line with the usage prevailing through the other sections of the constitution.

[Amendment No. 1 adopted without objection.]

Committee Proposal No. 22

Amendment No. 1

MR. POYNTER

Next amendment deals with Committee Proposal No. 22, which is the Code, and in particular, in Section 1, dealing with the Code of Ethics.

You all want me to read it or dispense?

[Motion to waive reading of the Amendment adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. TATE

This, as you may remember, was what was left out of a longer proposal, substituted for a longer proposal on the Code of Ethics. In line with our thought that probably this is eventually going to be one section in a General Provisions Article, it was consolidated in and for purposes of clarity, consolidated into the one paragraph with the short sentences. The sense is exactly the same, just using simple language, for instance, not using the former language "by a board or boards." "One or more boards" is probably a little better English, a little more normal English than "board or boards."

Committee Proposal No. 23

Amendment Nos. 1 and 2

MR. POYNTER

Next proposal is Committee Proposal No. 23, section there dealing with dual employment and dual officeholding.

Two amendments to that, read as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 18, after "Section _____." and before the word "The" delete the letter and punctuation "(A)".

Amendment No. 2. On page 1, line 20, after the word "regulating" and before the word "and" insert a comma ",".

Explanation

MR. TATE

The amendments are self-explanatory. The (A) was omitted because there's no longer a (B), and a comma "," was added because of being in a series following our usage of having every word in the series followed by a comma, separating it from the next part of the series.

[Amendment Nos. 1 and 2 adopted without objection.]

Committee Proposal No. 31

Amendment Nos. 1 and 2

MR. POYNTER

Next proposal deals with Committee Proposal No. 31, a schedule provision dealing with mandatory reorganization of state government.

There are two proposed amendments from the Committee on Style and Drafting to that proposal deleting...

First Amendment. Page 1, line 19, deleting the "(A)".

Second Amendment. Page 1, line 23, after the word and punctuation "constitution." and before the word "allocation" delete the word "Such" and insert in lieu thereof the word "The"

Explanation

MR. TATE

The amendments are self-explanatory. "(A)" was deleted because there's no longer a "(B)". In line with the general attempt to use more normal English rather than the legalese English. "The" was used with the same meaning as "such."

[Amendment Nos. 1 and 2 adopted without objection.]

MR. POYNTER

That completes what we presently have from the Committee on Style and Drafting. It's my understanding that the staff is working, and perhaps later this afternoon we'll be ready on Executive Branch; is that correct, Judge?

MR. TATE

I understand they're xeroxing Executive Branch right now, and Revenue and Taxation, and Education are somewhere in the works.

[Motion to advance to other orders adopted without objection. Motion to call Delegate Proposal No. 16 from the calendar adopted without objection.]

PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

Reading of the Proposal

114th Days Proceedings—January 10, 1974

MR. POYNTER

Delegate Proposal No. 16 you'll find in your books. The proposal would be on final passage. It has been amended. It appears, as engrossed delegate proposals do, on gold stock paper.

Delegate Proposal No. 16 introduced by Delegates Alario, Chehardy, Edwards, Mire and others.

A proposal making provisions for homestead exemptions. Now, this proposal has, I believe, four sections to it.

Explanation

MR. ALARIO

Mr. Vice-Chairman, members of the convention, Delegate Proposal No. 16 seeks to take in and rewrite partially Article XI of our present constitution. Article XI presently provides for the homestead exemption from the seizure and sale by any process whatsoever other than the seven exceptions that are listed in the proposal, and are presently listed in the current constitution. It prohibits the sale, if the return does not yield four thousand dollars for that homeowner. The proposal, as amended now, would increase that amount to fifteen thousand dollars. There are several exceptions to this exemption from seizure and sale. Among those are the purchase price of the property or any part of such, the purchase price, the labor, money and materials furnished for building that home or repairing the improvements thereof; liabilities incurred by any public officer, attorney at law, for money collected or received on deposits, the taxes or assessments, for rent which bears the privilege upon said property, and for amount due a homestead or building and loan associations. I have the same exact language as is in the present constitution with the exception of the fifteen thousand dollars. I also delete some language which, of course, is outdated and does not need to be in our constitution, which also provided that this exemption would apply if the homestead did not go up to four thousand dollars, would apply to "two work horses, one wagon or cart, one automobile-truck, a yoke of oxen, two cows and calves, twenty-five head of hogs, and one thousand pounds of bacon or its equivalent in pork," I just don't think today that that type of language is needed in our constitution. I ask that you would adopt it, and I would be glad to answer any questions that you might have.

Questions

MR. BURNS

Can you hear me now?

Can't you eliminate the bacon and the hogs and the chickens and substitute gasoline in there?

MR. ALARIO

That probably would be some help, Mr. Burns. You're absolutely correct.

MR. LANIER

John, in Section 4 you talk about the registration of homestead. What does that mean, and why do you require it in cities of over two hundred and fifty thousand, but don't require it in cities of less?

MR. ALARIO

Walter, I'm glad you brought that up. I forgot to mention it in my remarks. The present constitution calls for this registration, and I didn't want to change that language without some explanation, possibly from the people in the city of New Orleans as to why this would be in the constitution. If they wish to have it and have a legitimate reason for leaving it in, then I see no problem. However, I personally don't think the people of New Orleans ought to be treated any other differently, and particularly those homeowners, and other differently than people throughout the state. I don't think, for instance, the vast majority of the homeowners in the city of New Orleans realize that they have to go down and register for their homestead exemption from seizure and sale whereas the rest of the state just gets it automatically.

MR. KEAN

John, am I correct that this proposal is similar to what is now in the present constitution except that it increases the amount of the homestead exemption from four thousand to fifteen thousand?

MR. ALARIO

That's correct, Mr. Kean.

MR. KEAN

So, that if you owe someone an unsecured debt, and they've got a judgment against you for twenty-five thousand dollars, then under those circumstances, they couldn't seize your home, or at least the first fifteen thousand dollars of the home value would be not subject to that seizure.

MR. ALARIO

That's correct.

MR. THOMPSON

John, on 4 you have homestead exemptions must be registered only in cities having a population of two hundred and fifty thousand or more, and shall be recorded or provided by law. What you going to do on the towns smaller than this?

MR. ALARIO

In the towns smaller, it's automatic; it's just like--there'll be no problem. You'd have it. It's entitled to you, and whenever a person wants to file for bankruptcy or some other proceeding, then he's automatically entitled to this exemption.

MR. THOMPSON

Why wouldn't it already be recorded in these larger towns?

MR. ALARIO

The only town you're talking about here, Mr. Thompson, is the city of New Orleans, and in answering Mr. Lanier's question, I said, I don't know why it was in the present constitution. I just had the staff draft up that same language and if someone from the city of New Orleans, or other delegates want to delete that section, I have no objection, personally.

MR. SLAY

My question was on the same thing. Why do the people in the city of New Orleans have to have their homestead recorded before this can be effective down there?

MR. ALARIO

That's the way I read it, Mr. Slay.

MR. SLAY

You mean if I live there, I've got to go down and have it on record?

MR. ALARIO

That's correct. I would think, as I've mentioned, that most homeowners in the city of New Orleans are not aware of that fact, that they have to go down and register.

MR. SLAY

Well, now, as I appreciate this thing, it is only to protect me. Suppose I ran up a bill against you, and you were going to seize me. This is to protect my home against seizure. That's what the purpose of this is.

MR. ALARIO

That's correct.

MR. SLAY

I would wonder why a person in New Orleans would have to have that in there, if I don't have to have it up in Rapides.

MR. ALARIO

I wondered myself, Mr. Slay, and no one has come forward yet. I would certainly support and ask for an amendment to delete that section.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

The reason being here is mostly in...

MR. ALARIO

You talking about Section 4?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Right.

...Well, no. Section 1, 2, 3, and not 4, but...the whole article is that mostly it's to protect the individual who might become liable to someone by, say, an accident, or something to that effect, is it not?

MR. ALARIO

That's correct, Mr. Champagne.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

In other words, really and truly, most people sign this waiver to get a loan anyhow. It wouldn't apply in that case.

114th Days Proceedings—January 10, 1974

MR. ALARIO

Well, Section 3 provides for the waiver. If someone wanted to borrow twenty-five thousand dollars, as Mr. Kean mentioned, then it's easy enough if he wanted to sign that waiver. It mostly protects him in the event of a suit.

MR. ABRAHAM

John, maybe I missed it. Maybe you explained this in your remarks, but why wasn't this included as a part of the original article on Revenue and Taxation?

MR. ALARIO

I would...Mack, when we were discussing property taxes as such, no one brought it up that this was assigned to us as such, and by that time before anyone noticed, our article had already been drafted and gone. We were at one point, and it was suggested by the committee that we offer amendments on the floor, but we were jammed at the time, also. I would think if we don't include this here, then we have taken away a right that people presently enjoy, and are not including in back in this new constitution. It just was an oversight, whether by the staff, or us, or where, but it was left out.

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Alario, first let me ask you, isn't that a misprint in line 28? Shouldn't it be "as provided by law" rather than "or provided by law"? This is just as Style and Drafting can have the benefit of that.

MR. ALARIO

It appears to be, Mr. Dennery. I would hope someone would present an amendment to delete that section entirely unless you individually from the city of New Orleans can tell us why it should be in there.

MR. DENNERY

No, as a matter of fact, my second question was: Don't you think it might be invalid under our Bill of Rights provision because what this does is distinguish between husbands and wives, as far as the requirement that nothing...

MR. ALARIO

I would think this would help them to erase an injustice in the city of New Orleans at this time, Mr. Dennery, by eliminating this section altogether.

MR. DENNERY

Well, why wouldn't you do it the other way around, and say that "no wives have to sign homestead exemption"? Why require, if their husband is head and master of the community, why require the wives to come in everywhere else and waive that homestead? Why don't you let the husbands waive it for all community property? I was always curious as to why the wives had to sign in the country, not why they didn't have to sign in the city.

MR. ALARIO

I don't know the answer to that.

Reading of the Section

MR. HARDIN

"Section 1. Property Exempt; Valuation; Claim of Benefit.

Section 1. There shall be exempt from seizure and sale by any process whatever, except as hereinafter provided, the homestead, bona fide, owned by the debtor and occupied by him, consisting of lands, not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres, buildings and appurtenances, whether rural or urban, of every head of a family, or person having a mother or father or a person or persons dependent on him or her for support to the total value of not more than fifteen thousand dollars.

Provided, that in the case the homestead exceeds fifteen thousand dollars in value, the beneficiary shall be entitled to that amount in case of a sale of the homestead under legal process realizes more than that sum; if the sale does not realize more than that sum, over and above all costs and expenses, said sale shall be null and void.

The benefit of this exemption may be claimed by the surviving spouse, or minor child or children, of the deceased beneficiary."

Explanation

MR. ALARIO

Mr. Chairman, as I explained in the opening remarks, this simply increases the exemption to fifteen thousand dollars. The present exemption of four thousand dollars was put in the constitution. This whole article, 1932 was the first time it was amended, and 1938 was the last time. I think this brings it a little more up-to-date. I ask for the adoption.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Newton sends up an amendment that reads as follows:

Amendment No. 1. Page 1, line 17, immediately after the word "than" and before the word "thousand" delete the word "fifteen" and insert in lieu thereof the word "ten" and in the same amendment on line 19, immediately after the word "exceeds" and before the partial word "thou-" delete the word "fifteen" and insert in lieu thereof the word "ten".

Explanation

MR. NEWTON

Maybe some of you all are not familiar with what this "homestead exemption" is all about. It's designed, frankly, to provide a grubstake for somebody that gets just completely busted out because they can take everything, you know...the creditors can seize everything except the homestead, and then they get everything in excess of four thousand dollars. Now, I think that four thousand dollars, when that was written, was fine. I think it's not enough now. I think fifteen thousand is too much when we're talking about a grubstake for somebody that's gone busted to start over on, and that's what we're talking about. Now, Mr. Dennery, do you have a question? I'll be glad to yield.

Questions

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Newton, the question I wanted to ask you was: since it has changed from four to ten and possibly may change again to where fifteen would be proper, don't you think this is one of the "constitutional" provisions which might well be left to the legislature?

MR. NEWTON

I agree with you wholeheartedly, Moise, but we've had a lot of things passed through this convention that were statutory matters. If we're going to have it, let's dress it up a little bit.

MR. DENNERY

That was before this morning, and I wonder if possibly an amendment to provide that the legislature shall provide for exemption procedures.

Explanation continued

MR. NEWTON

There was one point I wanted to make about this exemption is: if you get this exemption too high, you're not really protecting the "little people". You're really hurting them because the lending institutions are going to limit their credit to people that don't have holdings, or they'll raise their credit requirements because they know that the man's property is not going to stand good for his security unless he's got a specific mortgage on that property. In the country parishes, that's not such a big problem, but in the city--especially in New Orleans--when you're talking about putting a mortgage on a piece of property, you're talking about spending a couple of hundred dollars at least, and this certainly doesn't protect the little man. I, therefore, would urge you to... I would like to see this whole proposal in the statutes, but I would like to reduce this to ten thousand dollars to provide an adequate grubstake, but on the same time to protect the consumer because if you get it too high, you're going to hurt the consumer. I'll yield to any further questions.

Further Discussion

MR. ALARIO

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise, of course, to oppose the Newton amendment which seeks to cut down this exemption now to ten thousand dollars. In our committee when I first introduced this proposal, we introduced it at a fifty thousand dollar range, and, of course, it was amended down to fifteen thousand dollars which is more realistic and practical. It is the average worth or cost of a home today in this state given to us by the figures that PAR gave us when they were trying to make us raise the property taxes as such, and we used those figures to come up with the fifteen thousand dollar range. In all the time that I had this proposal introduced--all the time--not one lending institution called or contacted me or anyone else that I know of on our committee and said that we would be hurting the little man from getting any loans as such because we were putting this provision in. I don't think the little man goes to the bank or any other institution and gets fifteen thousand dollars on his signature, that's not so. If he did need fifteen thousand dollars on his signature, he certainly wouldn't mind paying whatever legal costs are involved in recording that mortgage because that's exactly what he would be doing--putting a mortgage on his home for fifteen thousand dollars. I don't think Mr. Newton has given that much thought to it. He's just trying to lower it down. I ask that you would stick with the proposal as is, leave it at the fifteen thousand dollars which certainly would help to provide that a man once he got sick, couldn't meet certain obligations, would at least have time to get back on his feet before they take his home away from him, before his wife and children might be put out in the street or be looking for another place at a time when he doesn't even have money to pay rent someplace. It would help that little man that Mr. Newton says we're trying to hurt by not loaning him fifteen thousand dollars at the bank. Who ever heard of a little man going to the bank and borrowing that kind of money?

114th Days Proceedings—January 10, 1974

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected: 36-60. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

[Quorum Call: 86 delegates present and a quorum.]

Amendment

MR. HARDIN

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, delete lines 9 through 27, both inclusive, in their entirety, and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Section 1. Exemptions from Seizure and Sale Section 1. The legislature shall provide for exemptions" (then strike out "of homesteads") "from seizure and sale."

In the copies that are being passed out now, in the second line, strike out "of homesteads".

Explanation

MR. DENNERY

Provision is a perfect example of what was discussed this morning by the governor--namely, it's legislative material which we are putting into the constitution. It's true that homestead exemptions have been in our constitutions for a long time, back, I think, since 1879. But, exemptions from seizure for other purposes are all in the statutes. For instance, your insurance policies, your life insurance policies are exempt from seizure by statute. The tools of your trade are exempt from seizure by virtue of statute; your rights in pension are protected only by statute; the exemptions from garnishment of wages and salaries is contained only in the statutes. It seems to me that the legislature could very well provide for--and should provide--for all exemptions including homestead exemptions: that is, an exemption from seizure and sale of one's homestead. I think the very language that has been deleted in the delegate proposal from the present constitution indicates how quickly things change. Just since 1921 we had to take out oxen, bacon, etc. Maybe as someone suggested, we ought to put gasoline in there. Furthermore, the amount of the exemption is going to change currently. What...maybe fifteen thousand dollars is the correct amount today, but five years from now, fifteen thousand dollars may either be worth a lot more or a lot less than fifteen thousand dollars today. So, the purpose of the amendment is to place this duty in the hands of the legislature so that it will be made more flexible and permit the legislature to change the exemptions as time requires. Mind you, this does not remove the homestead exemption from seizure; it merely gives it to the legislature. I believe that Mrs. Zervigon's Committee on Transitional Measures should certainly be sure, if this amendment is adopted, that there is some transitional provision which would protect the homestead exemption until such time as the legislature enacted it. Otherwise, we might have a hiatus arise where a man might go into a bankruptcy and once in bankruptcy without the exemption from seizure of one's homestead, that homestead would be seized and sold and all of the proceeds delivered to the creditors. I would also point out that the language in the delegate proposal protects only the heads of families. As I read it, it does not necessarily protect a single person, be it male or female, who might own his or her own home, and that home would not necessarily be protected from seizure. These are things that a legislature can correct a lot more easily than can be corrected by a constitutional amendment. I urge the adoption of this amendment. Of course, if it is adopted, we will have amendments to delete the other language in the delegate proposal.

Questions

MR. LANIER

Mr. Dennery, to follow up on your remarks about the transition of the present language, if we provide for a transitional provision, then the present language would be transposed into the statutes; is that correct?

MR. DENNERY

Well, either the present language or something similar to that, and then the legislature could then amend that statute.

MR. LANIER

Right. Then, at the next session of the legislature, in its wisdom, it can do a cleanup job such as this is attempting to do and put whatever ceiling it wished, which ceiling could then be modified from year to year at the annual session of the legislature as changing conditions and circumstances warrant.

MR. DENNERY

Or in addition to that, the legislature could add other items of exemption or delete other items exempted.

MR. SMITH

Mr. Dennery, doesn't your amendment take homestead exemptions out of the constitution? The way I read it, it does.

MR. DENNERY

Well, what it provides is that the legislature shall provide for exemptions from seizure and sale, which would include homestead exemptions and the other exemptions which they now provide. I would have no objection, Mr. Smith, if...as a matter of fact, Mr. Planchard I believe, if this amendment is adopted, will come back with an amendment which will put a minimal limit as indicated by the convention previously of "shall provide for exemptions of homesteads of not less than fifteen thousand dollars."

MR. SMITH

Don't you think, particularly, the homestead exemption should stay in the constitution?

MR. DENNERY

Now, we're talking purely of the homestead exemption--the exemption of the homestead from seizure and sale. Now, I don't think it's any more sacrosanct than life insurance policies which weren't that important in 1879, or pension rights, or garnishment rights, etc.

MR. SMITH

Don't you think man's home is his castle? I think at least that should stay in the constitution and have a set exemption. I feel like...

MR. DENNERY

Well, are you suggesting, Mr. Smith, that what we should do is put back what I deleted, and just say that the legislature shall provide for exemptions of homesteads, or are you suggesting that the entire provision remain?

MR. SMITH

Well, I don't have any fix on the...I think it ought to be a reasonable figure. But, I think the homestead exemptions ought to stay in the constitution.

MR. ABRAHAM

Moise, don't you think that the language as you have it actually would be better from the standpoint that the legislature could not only provide for the exemption from seizure of homesteads, but it might include other things because we have many people who don't own a homestead. The legislature in its wisdom may want to provide some grubstake for these renters,

114th Days Proceedings—January 10, 1974

these people who are renters and who declare bankruptcy. So, they may want to exempt other items for those people. Don't you think as you have it would be a better way of handling it?

MR. DENNERY

Well, that's why I put it that way.

MR. PLANCHARD

Mr. Dennery, we discussed the problem of the transition from the four thousand dollars to a fifteen thousand dollar figure a moment ago. I wasn't able to hear what you had said about it. Did you mention it to them that we do have this problem?

MR. DENNERY

I think we do have such a problem, but I think if we placed in as a transitional measure the present provisions of the constitution, we would at least be protected until the next session of the legislature to the extent of the four thousand dollars. And as a matter of fact, I think the transitional measure could make it fifteen thousand.

MR. PLANCHARD

But, as it presently stands, it would have to stay at four thousand; is that correct?

MR. DENNERY

That's correct.

MR. STINSON

Mr. Dennery, along the lines of Delegate Smith, I know you're trying to keep this short, but don't you think...we could put this amount but that's not the tops. The legislature could add to it. If we put ten or fifteen or whatever it is, that's what we put, but the legislature could increase it, I would think, legislatively. But don't you think a person's home is too important and sacred to leave it up to the legislature? And one time we get up here and say, "Well, leave everything to the legislature." Then the next time we don't. Well, there are good legislatures and there's bad, and the bad ones would take away and the good ones would give, and the people can't depend on that. They should be secure in their homes; don't you think?

MR. DENNERY

Well, except that the language provides that they "shall" provide exemptions.

MR. STINSON

But there are a lot of things that it says that, and they don't do it. Suppose they don't do it?

MR. DENNERY

That's correct.

MR. STINSON

Then, a man doesn't have any exemption at all.

MR. DENNERY

That's correct.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Mr. Dennery, I understand that the present law also says "the tools of trade" and such, and we don't have that in the proposal; is that right?

MR. DENNERY

That's in the statutes right now, Mr. Champagne.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

I see. So, but if we...I understand. So, actually, this would include that by just saying that they shall do it; right?

MR. DENNERY

Right.

Further Discussion

MR. ALARIO

Mr. Vice-Chairman, members of the convention, I ask that you would turn down the Dennery amendment which seeks to delete this proposal and leave it strictly up to the legislature. Now, I don't plan to stand up here and tell you that I should let you know whether this belongs in the constitution or the statutes. I didn't have a popularity poll made of myself to find out if I have eighty-four percent or sixty percent or forty percent of the people who like me. I'm just trying to do what I think is right and just by the people that I represent. This homestead exemption has been in the constitution in this state since 1879--1879. Just think about that for awhile. That's a right the people of this state have been enjoying since that time, and it's been a protection for them by putting it in this constitution. Now, Mr. Dennery seeks to remove it. Those people back home can't afford to send lobbyists up here to wine and dine us to look after their interests. They expect you and I to do just that for them. That's what they elected us for. They can't do as you and I have been treated in the last few months to all the fancy salads, to the fancy hors d'oeuvres, to the fancy appetizers, to the big steaks, to all those flaming desserts, to cherries jubilee and baked Alaska.

I wouldn't be surprised at one point if some of those lobbyists wouldn't have brought the cook out on fire if it would have done them some good.

But the people back home can't afford to take you out and wine you and dine you like that. They expect you to do that job for them, and that's why I ask you to leave this provision in the constitution and provide for an increase, to make sure that they are well protected. I ask you to defeat the Dennery amendment.

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected: 39-66. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendments

MR. HARDIN

I have desk copies of an amendment by Delegates Alario, Planchard and Mauberret.

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 15, immediately after the word and punctuation "urban," delete the remainder of the line and delete line 16 in its entirety and at the beginning of line 17, delete the word "support" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "owned and occupied by any person"

Amendment No. 2. On page 1, delete lines 25, 26 and 27, in their entirety.

Explanation

MR. PLANCHARD

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, what we're attempting to do here is change the wording where it's much more easily understood; it's better worded. In wording it the way we have to just "owned and occupied by any person" it grants this exemption to every person who owns and occupies a home. They have also taken out lines 25, 26, and 27 that since we use this type of language "owned and occupied by any person", the other...this whole paragraph would be useless; so, we've just taken it out because, necessarily, if you are a surviving minor, or you are a surviving spouse, you're included in the "owned and occupied by any person" category. I ask for your favorable adoption.

Questions

MR. AVANT

A. J., I think I understand the amendment. I want to make sure. This would mean that a person who had no dependents, no wife, no child, and nobody dependent upon him for support, but who owned his home or her home and lived in it, that then the exemption would extend to such a person?

MR. PLANCHARD

Absolutely.

MR. AVANT

Where it does not extend to such a person as it is now written?

MR. PLANCHARD

That's correct.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

MR. HARDIN

Delegate Tate, chairman on behalf of the Committee on Style and Drafting submitted the following report:
To the Chairman and delegates of the Constitutional Convention:
I am directed by your Committee on Style and Drafting to submit the following report:
Committee Proposal No. 4 reported with amendments.

[Motion to suspend the rules to consider the committee report at this time adopted without objection.]

PROPOSALS ON THE CALENDAR
FOR APPROVAL OF FINAL STYLING

Committee Proposal No. 4

Explanation

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, in front of you you have in the same organization we had before, in green, the Executive Branch Proposal restyled with, as far as both committees could possibly ascertain, no subjective changes. The whites are the amendments amended by amendment. At the end, are the yellow amendments--the final ones--one of which, at least, will probably be controversial concerning whether the attorney general is in the Executive Branch or the Judicial Branch. However, on the first time around, as we go through it, we're just not worrying about placement, just worrying about language. Now, with the permission of the Chairman, I will discuss Amendment No. 1.

Amendment No. 1

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 1. The sole change there was that the word "composition" was added in front of (A) to give. . . in line with our styling that we'd have a subtitle in front of every subparagraph.

Questions

MR. PEREZ

I'm trying to find out where we stand. Again. . .

MR. TATE

Well, Mr. Perez, on the white sheet is the amendment. The only change there on (A) is we added a subtitle, "Composition." As you remember, on the left side is as it passed the floor. On the right side is the styling recommendation.

MR. PEREZ

I just want to get it clear, so when are we going to take this problem of the attorney general up. That's what I'm trying to get to.

MR. TATE

Yes, sir. As I mentioned in introduction, we will get to that at the very end. The first green amendments concern only language changes. The yellow amendments are what we have been calling caveat amendments which. . . in the effort to clarify ambiguities in the constitution as drafted or conflicts between the two sections or to find in case the legislative intent is ambiguous, to bring to your attention a possible clarification that we have been informed is what the meaning of the amendment was. But, they are to call. . . to alert you on the yellow amendments, that they are to alert you that there is something that we want you to study like you did yesterday. But, the green amendments--the green amendments--which I'll refer to them in order, we're first going through the green sheets. . . Perez's question, the alternative amendments which we'll reach at the very end are going to be in 46 and 47.

[Amendment No. 1 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 2

MR. TATE

All right. Amendment No. 2 restyles Subparagraph 1 (B).

It follows the styling thing of placing the exception first. It omits "of state government" as unnecessary words since that's all we're talking about. It omits "respective," according to the usual idea that "respective" doesn't mean. . . is an unnecessary word, in context, here.

[Amendment No. 2 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 3

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 3 is to Section 1 (C) on the green. On page 3, it adds a comma (,) following "executive branch" in order to set off the contrasting elements. It uses the. . . it puts "responsibilities" in place of "departments" because if you will notice (B), they were talked in that order: "functions, powers, duties and responsibilities." That is the obvious meaning of what they intended to say there. "And shall be as provided by statute," we shall use it in the standardized language throughout the constitution, "shall be as provided by law."

[Amendment No. 3 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 4

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 4, which is to Section 2 on page 4 of your green materials, it, first of all, it combines the attorney general's qualifications with the other qualifications of other statewide officers. Mr. Stagg, this is just a language change, and Mr. Perez, just a language change. Later, you're going to have a chance to vote on whether it should be here. It. . . as you will notice, it. . . as you will notice, it uses commas, it reconstructs the sentence so to allow the elimination of useless words later on. The duties of the attorney general were not repeated here because they were in Section 8, below, continued again--found again in Section 8.

[Amendment No. 4 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 5

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 5 is to Section 3 (A), on page 6. What it does is it rearranges the offices in the same order they are found in 1 (A). It uses a comma when needed in the series in line with the usage. It omits the word "each" when it says "shall each be elected." It says "shall be elected." It deletes the comma (,) after "state," when it says, "electors of the state at the time and place of voting." The. . . if you'll go to page 7 where (B) is--the old (B) is--it was found. . . thought to be more logical to put that, the term of each elected official, in with that first paragraph, because they're talking about all of them, including the attorney general. Incidentally, in line with the usage throughout, instead of using the word. . . no, we use the word "official" throughout. Whenever we found "officer," we changed "officer" to "official."

It omits needless words like as "for the next succeeding term;" it says, "for the succeeding term." That can be the only one. As noted, there are only strictly grammatical sort of changes and eliminating language that's plainly surplusage.

Questions

MR. DENNERY

Judge, I'm looking at Section 3 on the righthand side of the page, line 17. "The term of each official shall begin at noon." Now, that was taken, as I gather it, from old (B) which is found on the next page.

MR. TATE

Right.

MR. DENNERY

Which says "the term of office of each elected official enumerated in this section." I only ask for the sake of the record, sir. When you have deleted all of these "such's" and each "elected official named herein, etc.," do you come out with the same result?

114th Days Proceedings—January 10, 1974

MR. TATE

Yes. It obviously refers just to those elected officials in the first sentence of the paragraph.

[Amendment No. 5 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 6

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 6 is to Subparagraph 1 (C), on page 7. It just rearranges it, the language, to put the exceptions first, in line with the usual usage throughout the constitution.

[Amendment No. 6 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 7

MR. TATE

Section 4. . . amendment. . . Section 4, on page 8--Section 4 on page 8--which is Amendment No. 7, we. . ."except as otherwise provided in," we provided the standard language which is "except as otherwise provided by this constitution." "Shall be fixed by the legislature," the intent was "by law." We checked with the Executive Branch Committee which had drawn this, and we said, "Does this mean each elected official throughout the state or just each statewide official?" They said the intent was just to refer to the statewide elected officials who were previously enumerated. For that reason, for clarification, we had recommended putting "statewide" here, with the thought that there will be a general provision which will probably let us take this out of here, in general provisions, and say "of each official shall be fixed by law."

Questions

MR. DUVAL

Judge Tate, since this has been. . . I think you may have answered my question with your last statement, but since this has been clarified to only refer to statewide elected officials, is there any need for an exception clause, because is there anywhere else in the constitution where a statewide elected official's compensation could be fixed, other than by the legislature?

MR. TATE

I think you're right, Mr. Duval.

MR. DUVAL

But, you were saying that perhaps you're going to clear this up with a single amendment?

MR. TATE

You see, this was adopted way in the very beginning, and I guess that's why the exception was in there. I just don't know why we didn't. . . it didn't occur to us.

Maybe Mr. Conroy will whisper to you, and you can ask me in a question.

What we do hope, Mrs. Duncan, is that. . . Mrs. Duncan will nod. . . is that on the final go around, this provision may be taken out of here, and we will have a general provision, if we're certain it's true throughout the constitution, that the compensation of each elected official shall be provided by law. But, it probably may not be true. I'm not sure about that.

[Amendment No. 7 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 8

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 8, which is to Section 5 on the green page 9, simply broke into two sentences the long sentence found as 5 (A).

[Amendment No. 8 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 9

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 9, in the interest of. . . Amendment No. 9 slightly clarified the language by the use of additional commas "," and omitted the unnecessary words "of each regular session of the legislature." It omitted "of the legislature," because it had to be "of each regular session." "Make reports and give information to the legislature," in other words, it. . . we slightly simplified the language. By setting off the time requirements in commas, we think we made it more readable, more understandable.

[Amendment No. 9 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 10

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 10 is to the Section 5 (C) which is found on page 11 of the green material. We. . . the phrase was placed at the beginning of the sentence to improve the flow of its lines in lines 4 to 6. The. . . we, for instance, the others are the usual standard sort of changes that we are making, with your approval, in the interest of readability like as in saying. . . instead of saying "such," in most instances saying "the" because it means the same thing in context.

[Amendment No. 10 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 11

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 11 is to Section 5 (E), on page 12. Incidentally, on both Section 5 (D) and 5 (E) are found both in the Executive Branch and with some slight addition, in the Revenue and Finance provisions. Sometime, hopefully, before we conclude, the convention will be asked to decide whether to keep the identical provisions in both, or to have them only in one. But, that's not before us now. The only change made was to add a comma (,) to 5 (E), and in order to carry out the parallelisms of "shall submit," added "shall request implementation" in order to kind of carry out the parallel ideas in, perhaps, a more easily readable form.

[Amendment No. 11 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 12

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 12 is to Section 5 (F) about pardon, commutation, etc. The. . . you'll see. . . it said, for instance, "The governor shall have the power." Well, in the standard usage, "shall have the power" means "may." Instead of "those," we used "persons." We used commas to set off the phrase, "upon recommendation of the Board of Pardons." We. . . in line with the idea of verb in the indicative mood is better than a long. . . we change "may grant commutation of sentence" to "may commute sentences," thinking it read a little stronger, without a change of meaning. The proviso clause in line with the Style and Drafting Manual is made a separate sentence preceded by "however." Following the standard usage, we used "a" instead of "each first," and so on.

Question

MR. DUVAL

Judge Tate, I may have. . . I notice you changed the word "automatically" in here in its position. Is the purpose of that, for the record, to make it clear that no other procedure has to be gone through, that it. . .

MR. TATE

Mr. Duval, that's one of the yellow amendments when we come back, because from the floor debate, it was apparent that they meant that automatically he was pardoned, not eligible for pardon because eligibility, in context, means you've got to apply to the governor. So, we'll come back, but we did not think it appropriate, here, to change it. But, we did have the adverb follow the verb. . . follow something, anyway.

[Amendment No. 12 adopted without objection.]

114th Days Proceedings—January 10, 1974

Amendment No. 13

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 13 is to 5 (G), on page 15, and the consent. . . the sensus of the . . .the consensus of the Executive Branch Committee as well as of the . . .in response to our question was that it's clarified if we say the date and hour when a bill "finally passed"--add the word "finally"--"is delivered. . .shall be endorsed," because passed by the legislatur'd might mean passed by either house or something like that.

Question

MR. ABRAHAM

Judge Tate, I have a question with the language. I think the intent of the committee and of the convention was that the date that it was delivered to the governor "shall be endorsed thereon." The way I read the language as proposed, is it the date that it's delivered to the governor or the date that it's finally passed by the legislature that it's endorsed?

MR. TATE

No, the date. . .frankly, Mr. Abraham, Style and Drafting had recommended saying "the date of delivery". . ."the date and hour delivered to the governor." The Executive Branch Committee turned down our proposal and wanted to retain the original floor language which is, in my opinion, not quite as clear as Style and Drafting had recommended. But, we really don't want to get into controversy with the substantive committees that have strong views and joint membership with ourselves with strong views. We just gave into you all.

I agree with you, but it takes a little reading. But, it does say as the real test the date and hour when a bill is passed by the governor "is delivered." You see, "is delivered" is what it means. I do agree with you. Personally, I think it would have been clearer if our amendments had been accepted. But, I'm not much on sour grapes at this point.

[Amendment No. 13 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 14

MR. TATE

Amendment 14 is to Section 5 (H). At the time. . .the first exception, "Except as otherwise provided by this constitution" was added at the suggestion of the Executive Branch, because by that time, the governor. . .the civil service amendment had been passed and the governor was no longer able, under it, to item veto an appropriation to the Civil Service Branch. . .Department under certain. . .there are limitations that make this statement inaccurate. So, that was recommended that it was added; "any item" is used instead of "the items" in line with the rule of singularization. The other amendments were to leave out what were felt to be unneeded words, to improve the flow of the sentence and unnecessary commas.

[Amendment No. 14 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 15

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 15, on page 5 (I). . .Section 5 (I), pages 17 and 18, dealing with "Appointments." Incidentally, we have a yellow amendment coming back, Senator Brown, to. . .we'll have a yellow amendment that will raise your attention. . .that you probably meant. . .may wish to consider whether it shouldn't be "public confirmation," as it is by a later amendment, of first assistants--subordinate officials. But, you'll. . .that's a separate question. We're just looking at the styling of the language right here. The general changes had to do with singularizing language: using the standard language--like "by law" instead of "by statute", using the indicative mood of a verb--"if the legislature is not in session" instead of "should the legislature not be in session"--and stating it positively.

[Amendment No. 15 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 16

MR. TATE

Sixteen is to 5 (J) on your green page 19. We singularize. . . well, we singularize the "those" to "a person," saying "The governor may remove." We use the standard language "by law" instead of "by statute."

[Amendment No. 16 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 17

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 17, as it passed the floor, he said, "He may call out the armed forces of the state to preserve law and order." Right up in front of it, it said, "He's the commander-in-chief of the armed forces of the state, except when they're in the service." So, we thought if you said, "He may call out these forces," it says the same thing and doesn't repeat the same long-winded phrase.

[Amendment No. 17 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 18

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 18 is to Subsection 5 (L). It. . .in general, it had to do with eliminating the word "such" as unnecessary, when it says "have other powers and other duties authorized by this constitution or provided by law" means exactly the same thing. It said. . .we said, "provided by law" instead of "provided by statute" in line with the standard language being used in the constitution today.

[Amendment No. 18 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 19

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 19 is to Section 6, on page 21. The. . .as you see, it breaks the long sentence into two, and it follows the. . . as we have done in the other sections, the rules of omitting "such" when unnecessary, and changing "statute" to "law."

[Amendment No. 19 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 20

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 20 is to Section 7, on page 22 of your green. The. . .following the rule of capitalizing the entity the first time you refer to it and as referring to it as a particular entity, "Department of State" was capitalized. Following the parallel structures we follow in most of the succeeding sections about the other statewide offices, the next sentence was. . .we broke that first long sentence into two. In fact, we broke that long whole page sentence into at least three sentences--four sentences--without changing the language.

[Amendment No. 20 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 21

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 21--and this is going to be one that later you're going to discuss in the yellow amendments--is in line with the standard organization of the following sections as well as the preceding section. We broke it into two sentences and capitalized the department as an entity the first time it was referred to.

[Amendment No. 21 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 22

MR. TATE

Section. . .Amendment No. 22 is to Section 9. The. . .aside from the changes in line with what we did in the previous sections about the organization between department and the treasurer. We added a "to" to parallel it, and it was thought to be more. . . read a little better and say. . .instead of saying "in advance of the regular session," just "before each regular session." The remainders of it omitting "such" as we do very commonly when unnecessary.

Are there any questions?

[Amendment No. 22 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 23

MR. TATE

Section 10, the commissioner of sgriculture. The changes made are in line with those made in the other departments. Style and Drafting had had some reservations as to the last sentence, but we were assured by Executive Branch that's exactly what it meant. So, no change is made in it insofar as its structure. We did omit as unnecessary some adjectives. We recommend your omitting some "such's," and the Executive Branch concurred on that.

[Amendment No. 23 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 24

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 24 which is to Section 11 did its best just to simplify the language and shorten it a little bit. It provided the standard capitalization of the first time the department was referred to.

[Amendment No. 24 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 25

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 25 is to Section 12. It's the Department of Elections and Registration, and the commissioner of elections. The styling changes recommended are in accord with those you have just approved in the preceding four or five sections.

[Amendment No. 25 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 26

MR. TATE

Amendment 26 is to Section 13. The...you'll see, we think we simplified the language of the initial sentence. We think we made it a little clesrer at the end of the sentence, without changing the context, of course. We omitted "same" because it was unnecessary, and "as those" is unnecessary.

[Amendment No. 26 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 27

MR. TATE

Section 14...we thought that it might read a little better is to say "when a vacancy occurs in the office of governor," instead of how it reads, "the order of succession, the office of governor in the event of vacancy shall be." The other changes have to do with the standard....usage, or omitting unneeded, surplus words.

Any questions, Mr. Chairsmn?

[Amendment No. 27 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 28

MR. TATE

Amendment 28, to Section 15, is...whenever it was changed to "should," we were outruled by Dr. Asseff on our original proposal, and we accepted that as saying "if a vacancy occura it would be parallel with the one in front of it."

Question

MR. ABRAHAM

I didn't get the reason for changing the word "when" to "should." In the previous one, you said that you...when a vacancy occurs in these other offices.

MR. TATE

Mr. Abrsham, I couldn't agree with you more. We...but we were...we...for internal reasons, sa well ss the fact that your committee went along with our internal reason, we did it for variety, our internal reason man says--for variety. We did it there.

MR. ASSEFF

I take the blame. I inaiated on the "should" for variety. So, don't blisme Judge Tate.

[Amendment No. 28 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 29

MR. TATE

The next amendment, which is Amendment 29 to Section 16 involves, in general, the use of shorter words. The setting off of a phrase by commas....the omisson of needless words....an attempt to break down this long sentence into two sentences, anyway. Those are the general reasons.

[Amendment No. 29 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 30

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 30, which is to line 17 (A) and (B), and it's found on your green .... Section 17 (A) and (B), and it's found on your green pages on Section 33 and 35, in general made sensible changes in accord with what we have been doing in the preceding parts, of substituting a word for s phrase, using, deleting Hackney's reference words which were unnecessary, using the present tense, etc.

[Amendment No. 30 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 31

MR. TATE

Section 31 is to Section 18. It...this is as it was passed in the executive branch. It said, "A vacancy as used in this constitution shall occur in the event of death, resignation or removal, or failure to take office for any resson."

Since it was used only in reference to this article, we queried the Executive Branch Substantive Committee, if they did not mean this to be an article that would go...if we shouldn't bring it up to the floor for this to go into the general provisions. They informed us that the intent of the drafting of this was that it meant the vacancy of the offices in that article. To clarify that intent, we substituted...recommended substituting "article" for "constitution" and we, I understand, that for general provisions and transitory provisions at the end of the conatitution, thought would be given to having a similar definition that will apply to all of the provisions of the constitution; in which event, this would be deleted.

[Amendment No. 31 adopted without objection.]

114th Days Proceedings—January 10, 1974

Amendment No. 32

MR. TATE

Amendment 32 which is to Section 19, on page 37 of your green material, you will see that we...made "statewide elected" instead of "elective" to conform to the usage through the article. We thought that by, you didn't have to say presiding officer twice in front of both Senate and House of Representatives, by saying "the presiding officer of both", and the other changes have to do with the consistent usage and deletion of unnecessary words that you have been approving up to now in the preceding parts of the article.

[Amendment No. 32 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 33

MR. TATE

All right.

Section 20, on page 38, the determination of the inability of statewide elected officials. The changes are petty....very nominal, like "whenever" was changed to "when." We said "a written declaration of this effect" instead of repeating a whole, the whole language over again. The...let's see...the...so far, and this is the change recommended; "so file a written declaration to this effect to the presiding officer of each House, and shall file a copy of the declaration with the offices of the secretary of state." This is the Executive Branch article. We've raised the question that if they had to file the same written declaration in all three places, and then intent was that the copy was to be filed in the office of the secretary of state. The rest of the changes involved have to do with putting in commas, changing...omitting a section; putting in instead of "the elected," changing a.... deleting "said office," and making it "that office," etc. The standard changes that we have been recommending to you in all the other provisions.

[Amendment No. 33 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 34

MR. TATE

Amendment 34 is to Section 20 (B) on your green pages on page 40. The language involved was simply...well, some of the changes made were vetoed. So, some of those changes like we'd originally recommended the removal of a hyphen, well, we put it back in. But, as you read it there, the main changes were omitting needless words and using standard language, keeping related words together.

[Amendment No. 34 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 35

MR. TATE

Amendment 35 to Section 20 (C), on page 41 of your green copy, using the standard language which, except in a couple of provisions we were unable to follow it; "two-thirds of each House." I'm using copy again....using a copy because that was the intent of it... a copy of the resolution to be sent to the Supreme Court.

[Amendment No. 35 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 36

MR. TATE

No. 36 makes a simple amendment. It adds "with;" "by preference and with priority," it gives "by preference and priority." It was a parallelism, but "with" is the proper preposition in front of it. It adds a phrase "with."

[Amendment No. 36 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 37

MR. TATE

All right. No. 37 is to Subsection 20 (E)...20(E) Subsection. The....standard language, and the changes comparable to those minor technical changes that were made....recommended to you in line with what we've been doing up till now.

[Amendment No. 37 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 38

MR. TATE

No. 38...wait, wait...let me see.

No. 38 is to Section 21...and...as you will see, we simply, we thought shortened and made the language more readable. Instead of saying "in the event of a temporary absence of the governor of the state," we said, "when the governor is temporarily absent from the state."

[Amendment No. 38 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 39

MR. TATE

Amendment 39....Amendment 39....and I...Mr. Chairman, Amendment 39...but I'm trying to see....it's not on my copy right here. Amendment 39....deleted lines 31 through 35 on page 1...would someone give me...it was something, I think, we put up ahead....I just didn't see it. We....that was where Mr. Stagg informs me Section 22 is Reorganization of the Functions and Powers, etc., shall be as provided, except those functions and powers allocated by the constitution....

Here's what will happen, Mr. Perez. In Amendment 3, we added Section 1 (C) which was a former Section 22 of the first enrolled copy. To put it to where we thought it was more logically situated, you've already approved that without any objection at the time. But, of course, if there's an objection, we can do something about it. But....at this point, it's no longer necessary to have Section 22, the substance of which is now in 1 (C). Section 22 provided "reallocation of the functions, powers and duties of all departments, officers, agencies, and other instrumentalities of the Executive Branch, except those powers, functions, and duties in the departments allocated by this constitution, shall be as provided by law." You go up and look at Section 1 (C); we have already put it there. For that reason, Mr. Chairman, subject to further questioning, I move the approval of Amendment 39 to delete from the first enrolled copy the language which we've included up in 1 (C).

[Amendment No. 39 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 40

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 40 has to do with the appointment of officials, and the merger or consolidation, etc., of departments that's found on pages 45 and 46 of your green copy, of these changes made, technical changes about standardizing language, keeping related words together, using the right voice and mood of a verb, place.... in a deal with comma placing, and without change of substance. Subject to further questioning, Mr. Chairman....

[Amendment No. 40 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 41

MR. TATE

Now, Mr. Chairman, we go to the yellow amendments. In line with your decision yesterday that has to do with the fact that the...when we fight in the constitution...you have to have the qualifications, "at the date of his qualification," or "the qualifications on the date of his election," we will withdraw Amendment 45, even though in the same...section they use different dates at which to determine the qualification. But, I take it from your judgment yesterday, that you feel has to be a substantive change. Even though a substantive changes that are inconsistent are within the purview, your purview at that time. I take it that you don't want to mess with it. For those reasons, Mr. Chairman....

Questions

MR. DUVAL
Yes, sir.
Judge Tate, it would appear to me that qualification...
I see....

MR. TATE
You see, they use qualification up in the first part. But in the second part they use sense. I know nobody thought about it. But, you all determined yesterday that it's none of our business. I'm glad it's none of our business, gentlemen and ladies....

MR. DUVAL
Well, Judge Tate, did Style and Drafting feel it was a conflict in this specific article?

MR. TATE
Well, we thought that probably, if it looked...look, we lost yesterday. I don't care. But, we had...where's Mr. Duval? We had thought that as a matter of logic, you probably would have wanted to have all of the dirty qualifications, if you had to have some of the qualifications, the date of qualification, you ought to have the rest of them on that date of qualification. That's what we thought. You disagreed. We are happy that you... we have no objection, do we?

[Motion to withdraw Amendment No. 41 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 42

MR. TATE
Now, No. 42 deals with that matter of the Board of Pardons we were worried about a minute ago, which is an amendment to Committee Amendment 12, which, on your green copy is Section 5 (F), and (G), which is on page 13 on your green copy. Now, this has reference to Mr. Duval's question that the language that says "however, a first offender never previously convicted of a felony shall be eligible automatically for pardon upon completion of his sentence without recommendation of the board," did not, apparently, carry out the intent of the membership of this convention. We referred it to...the Executive Branch. They recommended either deleting the word "automatically" or else inserting instead of that, the language here on your second amendment....

Motion

MR. AVANT
Mr. Chairman, I don't mean to hurt anybody's feelings, but this particular thing that we are going into right now, and I don't care how it's resolved. But it is a matter of considerable consequence, and for that reason, I would like to ask for a quorum call. I would like to request the delegates to really pay attention because I think this is a matter of considerable importance, and I'm not all hung up about how it's resolved, but I do...would like to see it resolved by an intelligent vote.

[Quorum Call: 91 delegates present
and a quorum.]

Point of Order

MR. CONROY
I think that the procedure we had agreed upon was that if there was a question as to being a substantive question, that we would raise it as a point of order. I so raise.

MR. CASEY
That's correct, Mr. Conroy. Are you raising that point to Amendment No. 42?

MR. CONROY
Yes.

MR. CASEY
That Style and Drafting has exceeded its authority, that it is a substantive change?

MR. CONROY
Yes.

[Chair declined to rule.]

Point of Information

MR. AVANT
Is that point of order subject to debate or discussion?

MR. CASEY
When we put it to the convention, it is subject to debate, Mr. Avant. So, we'll put the question to the convention.

[Question put to the Convention.]

Explanation

MR. TATE
On page 13, green, Section 5 (F), there's a second sentence at line 18 through 24 of Paragraph...Subparagraph 5 (F), says, "however, a first offender, never previously convicted of a felony, shall be eligible automatically for pardon upon completion of the state...of his sentence, without recommendation from the board." Of course, the word "automatically" is not necessary if...is not necessary....

Then, on your yellow copies on page 2, on the 5 (F), the...recommended substitute language would, on pages 13 through 19 would add "and without action by the governor." On your white sheets...on your white sheets it's page 10, and Amendment 42. Now, in brief...I'm not going to...I'm not arguing the merits either way. We thought it was subject to construction....

All right. Subject to your views, we thought it was subject to construction when they added the word "automatically." The question was, "What was in the convention's mind?" From the floor debate, they have talked about once that first offender finishes five years, he didn't have to go to the governor. He didn't have to go to a lawyer. He didn't have to go to any... he's just automatically pardoned. So, we asked the Executive Branch Department if that was not the intent. They came back and recommended to you, language that carries out that idea in this yellow amendment. We realize it's a possibility that it's substantive, and that's why we put it on the yellow amendment, although we thought for that reason that it was appropriate for us to call it to your attention.

Further Discussion

MR. STAGG
Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I wish to begin by saying I think that the committee on Style and Drafting has done a yeoman job. They have, as they saw their duty, prepared on this yellow sheet under Section 5 (F) what they thought might be a substantive change.

When we were discussing in committee, and when we were discussing on the floor of the convention, we thought that the language that provided that a first offender, one never before convicted of a felony, when he completed the sentence assigned to him by the judge, that he was automatically to be pardoned--that he wasn't to go have to hire a lawyer; he wasn't to have to go over here to the pardon board and present a petition; he wasn't to have to do a darn thing. He was automatically to be pardoned. Well, the word that crept into our language was that "he shall be eligible automatically for a pardon." It is the word "eligible" that has caused Style and Drafting to scratch its collective heads to determine that this was, indeed, perhaps, a substantive change. What the committee believed it was doing, and what I think the convention believed that it was doing, is reflected on the yellow sheet in the right hand side that upon the completion of that first offender's sentence, he didn't need a recommendation of the Pardon Board; he did not need the signature of the governor; this constitution gave to him automatically a pardon. That was what we thought the sense of the convention was. We would trust that this convention, in its wisdom, would take the yellow amendment and approve Section 5 (F) as it appears in the right hand side of this yellow sheet.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Further Discussion

MR. JACK

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, please give me your attention a minute.

I was the author of the amendment that set up this five person Pardon Board. Now, on the automatic pardon for the first offender, we track the language that was amendment several years ago, to the present constitution. The Committee on Styling and Drafting, unknown to them, has exceeded their authority and completely changed what is an automatic pardon entirely. Now, here, the column to the left, follow that. "However, a first offender never previously convicted of a felony, shall be eligible automatically for pardon upon completion of his sentence without recommendation of the board."

Now, if you'll read up right at (F) you'll see, though, the governor is the one that grants reprieves to persons convicted of offenses against the state. Upon recommendation of the Board of Pardons, may commute sentences, pardon those convicted of offenses." The governor is the one that grants the pardon. Now, the only exception made about the Pardon Board is down there in two, when the...I mean under No. 1 down there where your first offender, never previously convicted of a felony, you are eligible for a pardon automatically--by automatically means without going to the Pardon Board. But, you still have to have the governor sign it. Now, that is what the present law is for first offenders. It's what we said in this to the left.

Now, over to the right where Styling and Drafting has handled it, they are saying "however, a first offender never previously convicted of a felony shall be pardoned automatically upon completion of his sentence without a recommendation of the board" correct so far. But, they are legislating when they say "and without action of the governor." That is not what the amendment and the thing that we passed. The governor is the one that grants the pardon. Now, I can see if you are going to say that the warden up there says this man leave, he's a first offender, and we are automatically handing him this pardon, then you're going to have some pretty rough people that are granted pardons. Purposely, I tracked the present law because under the present law, even a first offender has to get a pardon, he don't go to the Pardon Board. He goes direct to the governor. You go through the local office. You do not have to have a lawyer. But, let me tell you, if you are going to let the warden hand everybody...a first offender...a pardon when he walks out, you're going to turn loose the worse type of man that wouldn't behave there, but did just finally serve out his full sentence; got no good time under 1, 2, or No. 3 provisions for good time. Now, that is not the amendment that is in the present constitution... put in there during Governor McKeithen's either first or second term, about these automatic.... and if they are legislating, I hope the others have caught on better than you, Mr. Acting Chairman.

May I have one more minute, please, I ask the motion?

[Motion to suspend the rules to allow additional time adopted: 77-2.]

Further Discussion

MR. JACK

All right. I'm just saying this is a very serious thing and this is not what was passed. The governor should have to still sign those things. You can have a first offender down there, can be down there for attempted rape, manslaughter, and theft--all three--but still be a first offender because it all happened there for his first trip and you better not....and maybe he's been a terror down there. Now, you don't want just automatically give it, the governor ought to be able to consider that man but it don't need to go to the Pardon Board. I believe that if Styling and Drafting would think this over and they would see it. Unfortunately, very few lawyers as a whole know Pardon Board law. So, that's about all I can tell you; you're just changing the meaning entirely if you adopt this as amended by Styling and Drafting.

Point of Order

MR. DUVAL

What I'm wondering is, is the question before the convention whether this is in fact a substantive change or not and whether we want to hear it or not; which one is it?

MR. CASEY

The question is, Mr. Duval, is to whether it is a substantive change or not.

MR. DUVAL

And, what if it is?

MR. CASEY

...and, I believe that's the way it was put to the convention.

MR. DUVAL

What if it is a substantive change, but we do want to hear the matter?

MR. POYNTER

Well, the first thing to be determined, a point of order has been raised, is to whether it's in order or not. Mr. Conroy is suggesting it's out of order because it is a substantive change and, therefore, exceeds authority or the committee. So, if you want to stay real pure, I guess, and you think it's out of order because it is a substantive change, you could vote "no" declaring it out of order, that it's not in order. Then, I'm sure that some of the proponents will make a motion to suspend the rules to call from the table a motion to reconsider.

Further Discussion

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, at the risk of maybe making somebody mad or even being ruled out of order, it's something that I feel that I've got to say at this point on this subject. I don't... people get up here and they say, "Well, the Style and Drafting Committee is recommending this or recommending that in the area of these yellow amendments." I'm speaking just for myself, but I think I want to put it in the proper perspective as I understand it. I don't think the committee is recommending anything. We are simply saying that in certain areas you have adopted certain language but based upon all of the discussion, it's the sense of the committee that the language you adopted did not accurately express what you intended. Now, here is what you've said and here is what we think you meant, now you tell us what you meant; we're not recommending anything. So, I want to...as far as I'm concerned clarify that; it simply...that as we go through these things and because of different ways of expressing what appears to be the same concept in maybe more than one place or based upon what was said on the floor at the time a certain amendment was adopted, we are not sure or were not sure what the true intent of the convention was. We just feel that we are duty bound in those circumstances to point those things out and then it's up to you to say what you meant, not for us to say what you meant. But, I just had to get up here when people keep saying that the committee is recommending that you do this or that you do that when it comes to simply matters of style, that may be true but in this area I don't think it is true; and I wanted to clarify that point.

Further Discussion

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I'm going to make this as short as possible. In deference to what Mr. Jack understood, my understanding is just the opposite from him and I think this...what the Committee on Style and Drafting stated in the yellow sheet is exactly what this convention adopted because I remember the specific question that Burt Willis asked me after I explained, I said it was against my interest really to argue for this provision as a lawyer because it meant that a first offender would get a pardon without having to hire a lawyer. Burt Willis got up and said, "What you're saying Mr. Roy, isn't it, that the constitution of this state in the future will grant a pardon to a first offender and not the governor and no person will have to be kowtowed to," and I said that's precisely what was said and that's precisely what we intended. I think we ought to get along with the program and get this passed as the committee has seen fit to put in the yellow sheet.

Further Discussion

MR. ABRAHAM

As a member of the Committee on the Executive Department, I simply want to add my comments to Mr. Roy's and those others, this was the intent of this amendment. I feel that this particular recommendation of the Committee on Style and Drafting is not a substantive change, the intent of it was that the pardon would be automatic. So, I urge that we approve this and go along with our business.

Further Discussion

MR. ASSEFF

Mr. Chairman, delegates, I am a member of both of the Committee on Style and Drafting and the Committee on the Executive Department. I have talked to Mr. Stagg and we discussed this numerous times. It is the opinion of our committee--disregarding Mr. Abraham--that it is in fact a substantive change. We, therefore, urge you to so declare and when it is Mr. Stagg on behalf of the Committee of the Executive Department will recommend the change which comes unanimously from our committee. But, we do feel that it is substantive and, therefore, we should ask for a suspension of the rules; it is substantive, thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. BURNS

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, the only reason I'm getting up here for one minute, maybe a half a minute, is because I'm not a member of this committee or either one of the committees. I just think reading the two together we're making a mountain out of a molehill, there's no difference in them, they left out the word "eligible" which I think is a very good change. So, let's vote whatever is necessary to get rid of this and let's proceed along with the business.

[Previous Question ordered.]

MR. POYNTER

This committee has presented Amendment No. 42 before you. Mr. Conroy has risen to a point of order and sought a ruling of the Chair that the amendment is out of order as containing a substantive change and, therefore, beyond the authority of the Committee of Style and Drafting. The Chair under the rules has declined to rule on the point of order and has put the question to the convention. The vote will be put in the affirmative. Therefore, those of you who are in favor of declaring the amendment in order would vote no. In opposition, those who feel it is a substantive change beyond the authority of the committee and, therefore, the amendment is out of order would vote no. I'm sorry, I did it wrong myself. Those who are in favor of declaring the amendment in order as not constituting a substantive change would vote yes. In order as not constituting a substantive change would vote yes. Those in opposition who feel it is a substantive change, therefore, out of order would vote no. I apologize.

MR. ROY

Maybe Mr. Poynter will answer this one or, you, Mr. Chairman. If we vote yes, it means we finish with this and we go on and it's adopted like the committee recommended it in the yellow sheet or what?

MR. POYNTER

Well, you would have to vote on it, this is just a point of order, Mr. Roy, as to whether it's in order or not. If the convention determines that it is in order, you would then proceed to vote on the amendment and dispose of it.

MR. ROY

O.K. In other words, if we want to proceed to vote on it to vote what the committee has come up with we would vote yes, and then vote yes again?

MR. POYNTER

Well, yes, but...again there are people who perhaps like Mr. Duval expressed himself maybe in favor of the concept, yet feel it's out of order and should be handled through the other procedure, so that's kind of your conviction on that point. The question here....

MR. ROY

I've got my instructions, all right.

MR. POYNTER

All right.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman, if I may ask the question: If you are with the committee proposal, you vote yes. If you are against the committee proposal, you vote no; that is, with the proposed amendment that the committee has proposed?

MR. POYNTER

Well, Senator De Blieux, you can certainly vote that way but there will be people who don't share the conviction that just because they are in favor of the concept that they want to declare the amendment in order, they would rather do it the other way. So, the question here is whether the amendment is in order because there is no substantive change contained in it or whether in the opposition, it is out of order in that it does constitute a substantive change, that's the sole question.

MR. STAGG

Mr. Chairman, would you inform me if I am correct? That if this convention finds that this is indeed a substantive change and, therefore, rules that it is out of order, then do we suspend the rules to call from the table the Section 5 in order that for the limited purpose of offering Amendment No. 42 for reconsideration, then to reconsider it and then to adopt it; is that not the proper procedure when Style and Drafting feels that it has gone beyond its purview?

MR. CASEY

That would be the procedure followed, Mr. Stagg, if somebody makes the motion, somebody would have to make the motion in order to do that.

MR. STAGG

If the point of order is upheld that it is out of order, then I intend to be recognized by the Chair to make that motion.

MR. CASEY

O.K. Now, let's take our vote.

Let's have the Clerk state the motion one last time and let's take the vote.

MR. POYNTER

Those who feel that the amendment is in order, as not constituting a substantive change, would vote yes. Those who feel the amendment is out of order because it does constitute a substantive change and beyond the committee's authority would vote no.

[Convention declared the Amendment in order: 57-39. Previous Question ordered. Amendment No. 42 adopted: 77-19.]

Amendment No. 43

MR. TATE

All right. Amendment No. 43, again we have the situation that we've called to your attention as something that you may consider beyond our jurisdiction. As Mr. Avant said, we are not trying to do anything but call your attention, in this case, a possible inconsistency which could be a substantive change but still was in the jurisdiction of our recommendation to you. If you think our recommendation is wrong, you can simply vote it down. It has to do, Amendment No. 43, which is an amendment to Section 5 (I) that's in Committee Amendment No. 15 on this sheet, it's on Section 5 (I) as on page 17 on your green sheets and it's on page 3 on your yellow sheets. The effect of it is if it passes the floor, "the governor shall appoint, subject to confirmation by the Senate the head of each department." The effect is to add "public confirmation by the Senate." The reasoning is that you may wish to look on this as an inconsistency is that in Section 13 where the first assistants to statewide elected officials are concerned...Senator Brown after debate secured an amendment to say that those appointments are subject to public confirmation. You may remember Senator Brown was absent when [Section] 5 (I) came up, he was having a baby, he does that every couple of years--that's a joke and I hope I'm not quoted as predicting.

Question

MR. JENKINS

You know, Judge Tate, I certainly think that all of these things ought to be public, but there was a distinction in this case. The distinction was that we were talking here about first assistants who were going to be moving up to the position of a statewide elected official; we provided in that case that there would be public confirmation. Now, in the case we are presently on with department heads, there's not nearly the arguments since these don't hold the equivalent of a statewide elected office. I don't understand how the Style and Drafting Committee can bring these things up when there is an obvious distinction in cases like that.

114th Days Proceedings—January 10, 1974

MR. TATE

Well, Representative Jenkins, you may well be right, some people thought there was not an obvious distinction, that's all, and they thought that it was a parallel idea. Mr. Chairman, I would prefer, for instance, that Senator Brown or someone spoke a little about it because it was brought to our attention as a discrepancy, had he been present he would have given this convention a chance to rule on it. As I understood what he said is that the public confirmation did not mean a public debate, but just...it could be an executive session on qualifications but a public confirmation by public vote. But, I mean I have no views on it, gentlemen, I'm just doing what I thought our duty might be.

Further Discussion

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Acting Chairman and fellow delegates, we are purely getting into substantive changes now. I think you can open a Pandora's box by doing this. Confirmation as to the department heads is certainly different than the confirmation to the first assistants as pointed out by Mr. Jenkins. Senator Brown's amendment applied to first assistants and although he may have introduced it as to all confirmations it did not occur that way. I can tell you as a member of the Executive Department Committee it was certainly my intent that confirmations of department heads would not be an open forum. Certainly the announcement would be open and public but not the actual process of confirmation because I think with department heads you can end up either destroying a man or not bringing out things which are important because of the public confirmation nature. But, despite the merits, it's purely substantive; it's quite substantive. I urge you to vote it out of order because it's really substantive and we can just reopen the whole door on this stuff if we keep doing this.

MR. CASEY

Now, just a minute, Mr. Duval, there's been no motion that it... no point of order except your mention right now that it was out of order; I just thought I would point that out to you.

Point of Order

MR. DUVAL

Well, I'll move that it's out of...to be declared out of order.
...in that it's substantive.

Point of Order

MR. DENNERY

I rise to the point of order, Mr. Chairman. I ask for a ruling from the Chair that this recommendation is out of order.

[Chair declined to rule. Question put to the Convention. Previous Question ordered. Amendment No. 43 declared out of order: 11-73. Motion to suspend the rules to reconsider Section 5 of Committee Proposal No. 4 rejected: 37-52. Motion to withdraw Amendment No. 43 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 44

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 44 which is to Section 5 (1) which is on page 17 of your materials...green materials and which is on page 4 of your yellow materials. I do not believe you will find this—but I may be mistaken--this one to be as controversial or as subject to the construction that it is substantive, although you may. As it passed the convention floor it says, "Should the legislature be in session, the governor shall submit for confirmation by the Senate the name of an appointee" and so...and so "failure shall constitute rejection." Then, it says, "If the legislature is not in session, the governor may make appointments, which shall expire at the end of the next session." Now, the present constitution would have said it expires at the end of the next regular session. The effect of what was believed to be an unintentional change by the convention floor would be that if there is a special session such as that last one we had, all of those interim appointments would just expire automatically unless he remembered to put them in the call and special sessions normally don't have time to fool with that kind of stuff. So, it was believed that this will be a clarifying amendment to add "regular" in every place where you refer to "session." I'll yield. Again, I have no...I have no axe to grind. We don't care whether the amendments are rejected or accepted, but we are raising to your attention the possibility that there's an inadvertent change from the present constitutional provision which permitted interim appointees to serve until the next regular session, not for any little session that happened to be covered in the middle.

Questions

MR. NEWTON

Judge, I would like to get you to repeat. It's your opinion that if there were these interim appointments were not in the call, then they could not be considered by that session of the legislature and they would lapse automatically; is that right?

MR. TATE

That is what my understanding of the legislative...people that know something about legislatures, which I don't, except from what I've learned here, so to speak.

MR. DENNERY

Judge, I didn't quite understand the last answer you gave to the question. Did I understand you to say that a governor cannot submit to a special or extraordinary session...?

MR. TATE

I've just been informed that he could submit them, but if he forgot to submit them...if he forgot to submit them they'd all expire, although the...if this were adopted, if this were adopted unchanged, they'd all expire.

MR. DENNERY

I understand that. I just wanted to make sure that you didn't...it does not have to be included in the call of a special session.

MR. TATE

I have been corrected. That was a mistake on my part when I said that.

MR. JENKINS

So, what you're saying, then, is Judge, is first, this is a substantive change. Is that not correct?

MR. TATE

Mr. Jenkins, I'm leaving it to you if it's a substantive change. I think we thought, and I think the other committee agreed with us, that this was the intent--we thought this was the intent--to carry on the present provision when it was passed. They were not thinking of the fact that a special session could be called that would disrupt the tenure of the interim appointee.

I will leave it to you, Mr. Jenkins. I don't care. You know, I mean, I honestly don't care. I'm not an advocate for the thing. We just...our duty is to bring it to your attention and let you think about it.

MR. JENKINS

Well, Judge, I do care because I want us to maintain the intent and the language, you know. I think many of us voted for that thing with the...just as we did for most things, knowing what we were voting for; and knowing what was said. When the words are unambiguous, I don't see how you could...

MR. TATE

All right. Mr. Jenkins, the language has been interpreted--session, to mean to the regular session, in the case of Saint versus Dowling 167, LA.907127593, a 1929 case. We really thought we were clarifying what the intent was and avoiding lawsuits like that in the future. It makes no difference, as I say. If you gentlemen think, and ladies, think it's substantive, raise a point of order and defeat it. If you think it shouldn't be, fine. I'm not here to advocate it, Mr. Jenkins. I'm just here to call it to your attention.

MR. JENKINS

One other question.
Inasmuch as it's in the governor's interest to have his appointees continue in office, there would be little doubt that in...if a special session were called in a given instance, he would include the confirmation of his appointees in the call. Isn't that true?

MR. TATE

Well, I would hesitate to speculate. But, I do remember one session when they forgot to confirm all the notary publics of the state, and they had to reconfirm them by act. But, I suppose they'd usually remember them, I guess. I don't know.

[Amendment No. 44 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 45

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 45, which is to the Committee Amendment No. 40, about the appointment of officials, Section 22 which is on page 45 of your green material, and on page 5 of your yellow material. The effect of it is, it says "at the time of adoption of the constitution-- after the first election of state officials following adoption of this constitution." The recommendation was, and we have no strong views on it. Consistently-- we have been trying in most instances, unless it amounts to a change of substance, to use the consistent, "the effective date of", to make it clear...to clear up the ambiguity that may exist, whether the adoption means the date of the election, or the date the constitution becomes effective.

[Amendment No. 45 adopted without objection.]

Amendments Nos. 46 and 47

MR. TATE

Now, Amendments 46 and 47 are controversial. There will be a view of some that they are substantive. I am going to try to give you the balance of the debate. Then, I think for our committee, and for the Executive Branch Committee, you will have representatives speak.

Amendment 45...in the view of some, an ambiguity arises whether the attorney general is a member of the Executive Branch, or whether he is a member of the Judicial Branch. The ambiguity in the view of some results from the following:

There was an amendment to Section 1 (A) which is page 1 of your green materials, which took out the attorney general from those people listed as members of the Executive Branch. On the other hand, in subsequent articles of the Executive Branch Article, Sections 2, 3, 4, and 8, I believe, and maybe one more, the attorney general is spoken of in the same breath as the other members of the Executive Branch, and...within the title of Executive Branches includes the Department of Justice.

On the other hand, in the Judiciary Branch Article, they also have the Department of Justice, telling about the Executive Branch. So, in an effort to let this floor decide this question, and this question that has to do with whether there are going to be twenty or twenty-one departments. It may have to do with the power of reorganization. In an effort to let the floor resolve that issue, we have prepared first, Amendment 46 which has the effect of taking out of the Executive Branch the provisions 2, 3, and 4, that list the attorney general, and placing them in the General Provisions Article, because they refer not only to the attorney general, but other statewide elected officials. Also, of the leading Section 7, which talks about the attorney general, and which is repeated in the Judiciary Branch.

The alternative amendment, if that amendment is rejected, the...alternative Amendment No. 47 will, to clear up the ambiguity, reinsert the attorney general back in Section 1 (A). Now those are the two amendments before you.

Mr. Chairman, with your permission, I would yield to a member of the Style and Drafting Committee, I think Mr. Perez, who would probably speak in favor of Section...Amendment 46.

Questions

MR. NEWTON

Judge Tate, could the issue be stated, really, whether we are going to put the attorney general in the Executive Department or in the Judicial Department? Is that the issue here?

MR. TATE

I think that's the issue. I think that's....

MR. NEWTON

Now, I think there's a concomitant problem that comes along with placing him in the Executive Article. We've provided for what...twenty departments?

MR. TATE

Yea, sir, that's....

MR. NEWTON

This would be one of the twenty?

MR. TATE

That's the principle. It is my view the principal, practical difference.

MR. WEISS

Delegate Tate, one of the requirements in the Executive Article is that there be a Department of Justice. So, it's not that simple, is it?

MR. TATE

No, sir. It's not at all that simple. But, you listen to Mr. Perez and you'll see...frankly, my initial view may have been similar to yours. But if you'll listen to Mr. Perez, you'll see there's another view, too.

Further Discussion

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I would hope that I could have your attention just briefly because we do have a very serious problem which needs to be straightened out. It affects not only the attorney general's office, but all of the other statewide elected officials except the governor and lieutenant governor.

If I could have you go back to the Executive Branch, to Section 1 (B) which appears on page 2 of the document which is now before us on the Executive Department, it reads, "Except for the offices of governor and lieutenant governor, all offices, agencies, and other instrumentalities of the Executive Branch, and their functions, powers, duties and responsibilities, shall be allocated according to function within not more than twenty departments."

Now, that means, without any question, that in the allocation of functions, that there is no limitation, and that the constitutionally established functions of these various statewide offices could be taken away from these various offices through this reorganization process, except to the extent it's limited by the words "allocated according to function." Now, the answer which would...some have tried to give me with respect to this problem, is the fact that in the schedule provision...

MR. CASEY

Just a minute, Mr. Perez. A couple of people in the back of the room say that they cannot hear you. I'm not sure if it's the other delegates, or whether you're coming through on the mike. But delegates, please give the speaker the courtesy of your attention. Please hold down your voices.

Please proceed.

Motion

MR. PEREZ

This matter is of such importance, if you don't mind, for those who could not hear, I will begin the explanation again.

In Section 1 (B), adopted by the Executive Department, there is no exception in the provision which would limit the reorganization to not allowing the reallocation, or the allocation, of the constitutionally established duties and responsibilities of the statewide elected offices. There is, however, in the schedule, when a provision is made in the schedule, which is this thing that we talk about from time to time at the end of the constitution, but not really a part of the constitution, it does contain an exception that when it requires the legislature to allocate within not more than twenty departments, the functions and powers, etc. It does say in that case, "except those allocated by this constitution." But, there is no question that the constitution itself is superior to the schedule. Of course this schedule supposedly is superior to any laws which may be adopted. So, I do feel that we have a very, very serious problem which has to be straightened out in order to make it clear in 1 (B) that the powers and duties of the constitutionally designated offices cannot be affected by a reorganization in the first allocation of functions and duties. As long as that particular provision remains as it is, I would have to strongly object to the inclusion back into the Executive Article, of the attorney general when this convention voted squarely on the issue as to whether the attorney general should be, or should not be in the Executive Branch. I offered that amendment. The amendment carried before the floor. So, there is absolutely no question whatsoever that this is a totally substantive change.

Now, there are those who would say that further in the article there are provisions with respect to the attorney general. In the Local Government Article there are provisions with respect to school boards. That doesn't make school boards part of local government. So, I say to you that I am sincerely trying to work the situation out so that we will have an independent attorney general, in a position where he is independent of the governor, where his functions cannot be allocated away to the point where he is no longer what we know as an attorney general. I would strongly suggest to the...to Judge Tate, that we pass over this subject matter now; that we suspend the rules in order to amend Section 1 (B); and, if we can get 1 (B) in the right posture, then I don't believe that the problem would be as great as it now poses itself.

So, I would move at this time that we pass over the recommended amendment by Style and Drafting.

It has been suggested that I move to defer action instead of pass over. Therefore, I move to defer action on the remainder of the committee proposals....committee amendments.

Questions

MR. AVANT

Mr. Perez, the committee amendment suggested No. 46 is rather complicated and is really hard to follow. You have to have, I guess, a bundle of papers maybe that high and spread them all out to really figure out what it does. As I understand what you simply are suggesting is that we pass over that and go back and call from the table Section 1 (B) so that the exception can be added there which would render this rather complicated amendment, perhaps, unnecessary.

MR. PEREZ

That's what I'm hoping can be accomplished.

MR. TATE

I was going to ask Mr. Perez, although I think we have no objection, if it might not accomplish his ends better if I move to return it to the calendar so that it can come up tomorrow. But, I'll yield, if you have....

MR. PEREZ

I have no objection. I was just trying to do what was suggested by the Chair. I'll go along with any one of the suggested procedures as long as we can hopefully straighten out this Section 1 (B) before we can take action on the attorney general.

MR. TATE

All right. I withdraw this question. I just....it really....

MR. POYNTER

Deferring action, returning to the calendar, it's about six of one and half-a-dozen of the other. In fact, we just--kind of an in globo motion to do those two things would probably be the best thing to do to defer action and return the remainder of the proposed amendments to the calendar which would appear on the order of business under Regular Order No. 5, Proposals on Calendar for Approval of Final Styling. So, I think you all are both saying the same thing.

[Motion to defer action on Amendments Nos. 46 and 47 adopted without objection.]

Motion

MR. DE BLIEUX

If you defer action, Mr. Chairman, the matter is still....you....defer action, but we've still got the other matters. So, I just make a substitute motion that we return the whole proposal to the calendar for the time being.

[Motion to return the Proposal to the calendar adopted without objection. Motion to revert to other orders adopted without objection. Motion to call Delegate Proposal No. 16 from the calendar adopted without objection.]

PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

Delegate Proposal No. 16

Amendment

Explanation

MR. POYNTER

I have one further amendment here to Section 1. Copies of it are being distributed....are getting ready to be distributed here at the present time.

Amendment sent up by Delegates Kelly and Nunez....Kelly and Nunez.

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 17, immediately after the word "not", before the word "than", delete the word "more" and insert in lieu thereof the word "less."

MR. KELLY

Mr. Acting Vice Chairman, and Mr. Acting Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, all this amendment does is deletes the word "more" and inserts the word "less." Mr. Dennerly ran an amendment earlier which in essence would have left this entire matter to the legislature. Well, quite frankly, I voted for that amendment, the primary reason being that I don't think fifteen thousand dollars is even enough when you start talking about homestead exemption from seizure and sale. It's been four thousand dollars for years and years and years. Due to inflation and the devaluation of the dollar and so forth, this just doesn't mean anything nowadays. I would hate to see the thing locked at fifteen thousand. In essence, that's what this amendment does. It guarantees to the people of this state, at least a fifteen thousand dollar homestead exemption from seizure and sale. Yet, in the future, it allows the legislative flexibility to increase this if it becomes necessary. Quite frankly, if inflation continues, I think within the next twenty or twenty-five years we'll see the same thing, that this will need to be increased. It's a very simple amendment. I don't see that it....you're probably either for or against the concept. But, I would ask that you give it your favorable vote.

Questions

MR. DENNERLY

Mr. Kelly, I appreciate the purpose of your amendment. My question involves the next sentence, however, which reads in the proposal, "provided that in case the homestead exceeds fifteen thousand in value, the beneficiary shall be entitled," and so forth. Wouldn't your amendment have to include something about that as well? Or otherwise, it would have no meaning at all, would it?

MR. KELLY

We may well, Mr. Dennerly, we may well have to work that up afterwards.

MR. CONROY

My question was similar to that of Mr. Dennerly's. It seemed to me that the way this was worded, it would really effectively....might be self-operating, and exempt all homes from seizure, no matter what the value was, if you just change that to....to not less than fifteen thousand dollars. It seems to me it might automatically exempt all homes.

MR. KELLY

Well, let me say this, David, that's not the intention of the amendment. In other words, the intention of the amendment is to lock the fifteen thousand in, leaving legislative flexibility in the future--to increase it, but never to decrease it--and if you feel that appropriate language needs to be added in Paragraph 2 of Section 1, then I would have no objection to seeing that added.

Further Discussion

MR. ABRAHAM

Ladies and gentlemen, I hate to get up here and speak so much. But, I just have to speak out on this. I think this is just another example of where we get up here and on the spur of the moment, we start trying to legislate things in this constitution. We don't know what they're going to mean, or what is going to happen with it. This takes care of one part of the section and leaves the other paragraph hanging loose. I say to you, I guess we'll be legislating into this constitution until January 19. But, if we don't get out of this business, we're going to be in for serious trouble. We're never going to finish. I don't think any of this belongs in the constitution. It could very well be handled by the legislature. I urge the rejection of this amendment, and I hope that we can reject the entire proposal before it's over with and leave this thing up to the legislature. It's not going to hurt anything. If we are worried about taking care of people in the future, we're going to have to leave these things flexible. I urge the rejection of the amendment.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Acting Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, certainly we believe this is necessary. It's one of those things that the people look for. It's been in the constitution for years and years and years and years. All we are doing is to bring it up to modern day prices, modern day standards, and what is considered a moderate protection for an average home. What...all we are doing with this amendment is not putting a ceiling of fifteen thousand, but putting a floor of fifteen thousand. I think it's a good amendment. I think we'd be derelict if we didn't put this back in the constitution to protect a man's home from sale and seizure. I would certainly want, ask you to go along with this amendment of Mr. Kelly and I, that puts "not less than fifteen thousand" in the event that we can change it in the future. If we put "not more," it means that in the next ten years, and at the rate that prices are going up, as you and I both know, or all know, the average cost of a home is increasing like something like two and three percent a month in the past year. You bought a home in 1963, it's almost double in value in 1973. God knows what they will be in 1983 and 1993. I think we are writing this constitution, not based on what's going to be tomorrow, but based on what's going to be fifteen, twenty, thirty years from now. So, I think this is a worthwhile amendment and one we should adopt. So, I would ask you to adopt this amendment and certainly go on to adopt Delegate Alario's proposal on sale and seizure.

Questions

MR. FONTENOT

Senator Nunez, under the present system, or under what the committee has proposed, if you have a house worth...and land and everything else...worth ten thousand dollars, then if I try to seize it, then you could claim this homestead exemption. Is that correct... up to an amount of fifteen thousand dollars?

MR. NUNEZ

Yes, sir.

MR. FONTENOT

Now, if you had a home worth twenty thousand dollars, under the present committee--I mean the delegate proposal--what would be the...how would you treat that extra five thousand dollars?

MR. NUNEZ

How would you treat the extra five thousand dollars over fifteen....

MR. FONTENOT

Well, you can claim the fifteen thousand dollar exemption, but then, what would happen to that extra five thousand dollars whenever I seize that property and sell it?

MR. NUNEZ

That would be...to whoever did the seizing, whoever did the selling.

MR. FONTENOT

All right, now, under your proposal, if you put "not less than fifteen thousand dollars," and if you have a twenty thousand dollar house, couldn't you claim your exemption for the whole amount of twenty thousand dollars?

MR. NUNEZ

No, sir, that's not my understanding of what we're trying to do, Mr. Fontenot.

MR. FONTENOT

Well, by putting...or to support to a total value of not less than fifteen thousand dollars, it would seem that a twenty thousand dollar house would be exempt. I don't know if that's what you intend, but that's the way I read it.

MR. NUNEZ

Well, Mr. Fontenot, if you'll recall, when we had this proposal in the committee initially, we had not more than twenty thousand dollars. Because some of you, I think it probably was you, and several others, in a very close vote, we changed it from twenty thousand dollars. I think some people wanted it down to ten. We struck a compromise at fifteen thousand dollars.

[Amendment rejected: 32-50. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Further Discussion

MR. ABRAHAM

Ladies and gentlemen, I rise in opposition to this section, and to this proposal. I think we need to defeat this section first. I see no need for any of this type of language to be in the constitution. Now, I have heard Mr. Alario get up here and say that we're supposed to be representing the people. We can't leave this matter up to the legislature. Well, I ask him, as a legislator, does not he represent the people in the legislature? Why can't he represent them, in the legislature, the same as he's doing right now? Now I agree that this has been in the constitution for a long period of time. But I say, I don't think there is a legislator in this state who is going to take anything away from the people through the legislative process, that they've enjoyed in the constitution for this number of years, by any manner of means, that if anything else, they are probably going to increase the benefits to the people. But, when we start writing language like this into this constitution, I say again, we tie the hands of the legislature. We don't know what's going to happen in the future. This does not provide in any way for any exemption from seizure for those people who rent. This is still going to have to be provided by the legislature if they're going to make any provisions for this type of people.

In the homestead exemption article, we provided for some relief, or we said that the legislature would provide for some relief for renters. If the legislature is providing for exemptions from seizure or various other things, then why not let this be part of it? Let's let the package be all in the hands of the legislature so that it can be changed. When you limit it to just the homestead, I think you simply just complicate the issue. This says every head of a family. Well, suppose the person owns his home and he's not the head of a family, if he's a bachelor, or suppose say, a woman who is no longer the head...who is not the head of a family. Will her home be seized? I think it's poorly written, it's poorly drawn. I think it just adds language that we don't need. I think it better could be handled in the legislature. I strongly urge the rejection of this section.

Further Discussion

MR. PLANCHARD

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I regret that my good friend, Mack, did not understand this. But, I am sure if he went back home and told the people he was against homestead exemption, that they would explain it to him. This is so important, Mack, I hope you understand what we are doing here. If we do not do anything, if we do not put it in the constitution, as it's stated properly, right now, then, you do not have this exemption. Then you have to wait for the legislature to act. Now, Mr. Dennery put up an amendment while ago trying to change it and to put it in the hands of the legislature. We soundly defeated it. I think this is a very important exemption to have. It's the only protection a man has if he has a home. He has one piece of property. He gets down in his luck. He's financially bankrupt. Why not preserve the one last thing he has...is his home? We're not doing anything to hurt anyone in business by this amendment. We've had it since 1921. It's worked well, and I expect it to go on working well. The only thing that we have done here is increased it from an exemption of four thousand dollars, which obviously had to be increased, to the fifteen thousand dollars. I think as this proposal now stands, it's adequate. I think it is most important that we pass it for the people.

Questions

MR. DESHOTELS

Assuming that we do nothing on this particular provision, what would happen to the present law on homestead exemptions? I'm not talking about tax homestead exemptions, but homestead exemptions as far as judgments are concerned. What would happen?

MR. PLANCHARD

You said exemptions from seizure? It would be no more.

MR. DESHOTELS

Wouldn't it be in the statute, in the schedule? Wouldn't it be transferred to the statutes?

MR. PLANCHARD

I don't believe it is. No.

MR. DESHOTELS

If we simply say nothing about it, don't do anything to it, and it's in the '21 Constitution now, what would happen to it?

114th Days Proceedings—January 10, 1974

MR. PLANCHARD

Well, it would no longer be the law.

MR. ABRAHAM

A. J., isn't it true that all items in the present '21 Constitution, which are not covered in the new constitution, that particularly, this particular item here, that the Committee on Revenue and Taxation would simply recommend that it be transferred to the statutes as provided for in the committee resolution for transitional measures. So, this would be, could be transferred to the statutes. It could either be placed in the statutes to be changed by a majority vote of the legislature, or by a super majority of the legislature. Isn't that true? The committee resolution does provide for this?

MR. PLANCHARD

Yes it does. But when?

MR. ABRAHAM

Well, our committee has already acted on transitional measures, and won't every committee have to act on transitional measures?

MR. PLANCHARD

Yes, but Mack, in order to increase it to the fifteen thousand dollars, you've got to have it in here.

MR. ABRAHAM

Well, now, this could be a matter for the legislature to handle, could it not? But, the point I'm trying to make is, the exemption from homestead....from seizure, would be transferred to the statute if so recommended by Revenue and Taxation, immediately on the effective date of this constitution.

MR. PLANCHARD

But, there is no guarantee that they will act, or when they will act. Is that correct?

MR. ABRAHAM

There is no guarantee that the legislature may increase it to fifteen thousand, but....

All right. I'll ask the questions.

Let me ask you another question. Did you hear me say that I was against exempting homesteads from seizure, or did you hear me say I was against placing it in the constitution?

MR. PLANCHARD

You are against the fifteen thousand dollars, apparently, exemption.

MR. ABRAHAM

I would like to ask you, if you did not hear me say that I was against placing this into the constitution. I'm not against the provisions of the present constitution. I am against this proposal because it does place it in the new constitution. Am I not?

MR. PLANCHARD

If you are against the proposal, you necessarily have to be against the limitation of fifteen thousand being placed in the constitution as it presently is.

Further Discussion

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen, I have to agree with Mr. Abraham on this particular proposal. This is another one of those matters which we have allowed to get out of hand by placing into our statutes....I mean placing statutory material into our constitution. If I'm not mistaken, I think the exemptions are already covered in the statutes. But, certainly they should be. Furthermore, it would allow the legislature to adjust the need of the exemptions, the amount of the exemptions as the time may call and the economic and social situation may justify. When you place this material in the constitution without any leeway of the legislature to make the adjustments as this particular proposal is drawn, you are not really helping the debtors. You are handicapping them because as it is presently seen, the four thousand dollars is entirely unrealistic. So, therefore, let's leave this matter to the legislature. Let the legislature take care of it. I'm sure that they will because they are just as responsible to the people, and they are just as responsible as the delegates of this convention are.

Therefore, I ask you to go ahead, let's vote down the proposal and leave it to the legislature to adjust as it sees fit.

Recess

[Quorum Call: 78 delegates present and a quorum.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The amendment reads as follows:

Amendment 1. Page 1, delete lines 9 through 27, both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Section 1. Exemptions from Seizure and Sale

Section 1. The legislature shall provide by law for exemptions from seizure and sale as well as waivers of and exclusions from such exemptions. The exemption shall extend to at least fifteen thousand dollars in value of a homestead as provided by law."

Explanation

MR. CONROY

A majority of the delegates to this convention have indicated that they do want to provide in the constitution some minimum homestead exemption of fifteen thousand dollars. I disagreed with that figure. But, I think the majority has spoken on that issue. We then come to the question of how much detail should be spelled out in the constitution on this particular issue.

This amendment is intended to replace all of the language that's presently in the proposal--not just Section 1--but, ultimately would relate to all the remaining sections so that the detail that's presently spelled out in the proposal would not be part of the constitution. The details would be left to the legislature to define the homestead and the applicability of the homestead exemption. It would put in the constitution the very minimum statements necessary. That's the only purpose. I think that if anything goes in the constitution, this is as much as we ought to have in the constitution. I urge your consideration and favorable vote. I'll answer any questions.

Questions

MR. FONTENOT

Mr. Conroy, I had a question while ago. I'm still not really....I'm not sure what this means. But, if you have a home worth twelve thousand dollars and I seize it, and I try to sell that home, can I get any....I mean I have a five thousand dollar debt that you owe me. Now, you have a twelve thousand dollar home. Can I get any of that money when I sell the property?

MR. CONROY

Are you the creditor or the owner?

MR. FONTENOT

I'm the creditor.

MR. CONROY

I don't think you can sell the home at all under those circumstances.

MR. FONTENOT

I can't sell it at all because it....

MR. CONROY

That's my understanding.

MR. FONTENOT

Now, if it's worth....

MR. CONROY

It's only if the house is worth more than the exemption value that it could be sold. Then, the creditor would get only the amount over the amount of the homestead exemption.

MR. FONTENOT

O.K. You, in other words, you are the debtor. You claim... you claim your homestead exemption up to at least fifteen thousand dollars.

MR. CONROY

Right. Right.

MR. FONTENOT

Now, if your home is worth twenty thousand dollars, and I seize it, can't you claim your exemption?

114th Days Proceedings—January 10, 1974

MR. CONROY

I...but the way the present provisions spell it out, I don't think it's necessary to spell it out. But the way it's presently spelled out in Section....I can't remember which section it is.... but the owner would get to receive the first fifteen thousand dollars of the sale price.

MR. FONTENOT

Under the present provision, and I would get the excess, or the five thousand dollars extra.
Now, under.....

MR. CONROY

Well, that's assuming your debt was five thousand or more. Yes.

MR. FONTENOT

Now, assuming this is passed, you can claim your exemption. Your last sentence says the exemption shall extend to at least fifteen thousand. So, I'm not sure....

MR. CONROY

As provided by law. That's right. The details....I leave all the details. I recognize....

MR. FONTENOT

I mean they....the legislature could set it at a hundred thousand dollars?

MR. CONROY

Yes, that's correct.

MR. FONTENOT

In other words, we are not setting....

MR. CONROY

We're not setting the figure. That's correct.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Pugh had a question; then Mr. Duval.

MR. PUGH

I'm embarrassed to ask my first question which is preliminary to the others.

Where did the fifteen thousand come from?

MR. CONROY

This is what's in the proposal--well, as a matter of fact, I think it was adopted by amendment by this convention. I think the figure that's in the proposal...assuming the proposal was fifty thousand...the committee amended it to fifteen thousand as it came out on the floor. It's fifteen thousand in the proposal. There was an attempt made to change that figure to ten thousand which was rejected by the convention.

MR. PUGH

Your proposition, really, is to take it, in effect, out of the constitution and put it in the statutes.

MR. CONROY

That's correct. But, to take that figure that apparently the convention has approved and use that figure in the constitution only.

MR. PUGH

They are, then, aware from previous discussions on the floor as to the fifteen thousand. If a fellow takes bankruptcy and owes a hundred thousand dollars and has got a twenty thousand dollar house, they gave him fifteen thousand dollars for taking bankruptcy?

MR. CONROY

That's correct.

MR. DUVAL

David, I think your premise was that apparent that the majority of the convention wanted some statement.

MR. CONROY

Yes.

MR. DUVAL

Well, didn't we, though, vote on an amendment, and at least the amendment that was soundly defeated?

MR. CONROY

Well, the reason I voted against that amendment was because

I wasn't sure whether its effect would be automatic, or whether it would be up to the legislature. I have no problem in giving it to the legislature. But, I do have problems if it extended automatically to any home. That's....the interpretation I gave to the amendment that we rejected.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Your amendment would, in effect, mandate the legislature to provide what we now have to a little larger amount in the constitution without using a number of words to do so. Is that right, sir?

MR. CONROY

That's the intention of this amendment.

MR. ABRAHAM

David, the delegate proposal says "not more than fifteen thousand." Why did you change it to "at least fifteen thousand"?

MR. CONROY

Because I thought it ought to be left to the legislature.

MR. HAYES

Mr. Conroy, I only have one problem. It didn't say "homestead exemption" or anything about it. I noticed that the delegate proposal did say something about it. It didn't mention that.... it didn't mention....it said "the legislature shall provide by law for exemption from seizure and sale as well as"....it didn't say anything about what. What are you exempting?

MR. CONROY

Well, the next sentence does.

MR. HAYES

Oh, yes. I've got it now.

MR. KEAN

David, the only thing that concerns me is that the original proposal had certain transactions; mortgages, building and loan mortgages, etc., to which the exemption did not apply. It also had a provision that if you waived it, it didn't apply.

MR. CONROY

Right.

MR. KEAN

Now, I'm concerned about this last sentence which says "the exemption shall extend to at least fifteen thousand in value of a homestead as provided by law" as only referring to the amount and, therefore, not permitting the legislature to make those kind of exceptions from the application of the exemption.

MR. CONROY

Mr. Kean, that's the reason I worded the first sentence the way I did is because the...they can provide exemptions from seizure and sale as well as waivers of, and exclusions from such exemptions. It would be intended that in defining this exemption they would provide the methods of waivers and exclusions from it. That's the intent of the language in the first sentence so that the second sentence is to be read with the first sentence, and those exclusions and waivers would be available to the legislature to spell out as they apply to a homestead as well as to anything else.

[Quorum Call: 82 delegates present and a quorum.]

Further Discussion

MR. KELLY

I'm not sure that everyone here has paid adequate attention, and I hate to sound in such an accusatory manner, as to what this, in effect, does. But, whether you know it or not, I mean we are dealing with people's homes. Now, quite frankly in my own opinion and in the opinion of some of the people that I have talked to, they are really more concerned about their homestead exemption from seizure and sale, than they are from a homestead exemption from taxation because primarily there, you are dealing with a percentage. Usually, when those people....the taxes in Louisiana have never been too high. But here we're talking about a man, a wife, and some children actually possibly losing a home. I think this is of utmost importance. I don't think that we've given this material the time and attention that it needs. Here in the delegate proposal, they lock it in at fifteen thousand dollars. That just isn't very much to protect a home owner. Quite frankly, I think it should be fifty thousand dollars--sixty thousand dollars. But, that is my own opinion. Quite frankly, I'm of the opinion that any time a man has a home and has a family, etc., that his home should be completely exempt from seizure and sale. But, we can't go that far. I understand that you are not willing to go that far. But for gosh sakes, let's don't lock this in at a straight fifteen thousand dollars because time, and in the future we are going to see inflation continue. I think that's apparent. What today is worth fifteen thousand dollars maybe ten years from now will be worth thirty thousand dollars of those same dollars. Now, what is wrong with us giving the home owners some protection within this constitution? Gee whiz, we've gone so far abroad we've done everything else in this constitution. Quite frankly, I'm not concerned about some of the others. I'm greatly concerned about some. But, there are a lot of homeowners throughout this country.

We keep concerned...being concerned about whether the police jury is going to support this constitution, whether this one's going to support it, or whether that one's going to support it. Well, what about the guy that lives across the street from you, is he going to support it? Because these are the people that are going to ultimately have to vote for the adoption of this constitution. Those are the votes that we've got to convince.

Now, I'm not saying that this should go into the constitution as a selling item. I'm not promoting that at all. What I'm saying is, and I firmly believe, that a person's home ought to be protected from seizure and sale. Now, in essence, what Mr. Conroy's doing, he is laying down a legislative mandate, and he's saying that there shall be a homestead exemption not less than fifteen thousand dollars. In other words, we're going to say that they are at least going to have a homestead exemption from seizure and sale of fifteen thousand dollars. In the future, because of inflation, and the devaluation of the dollar, if it becomes necessary, the legislature can increase this.

I urge that you support Mr. Conroy's amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. FONTENOT

Well, I wasn't going to say anything. But, I tried to call the question three times, and there was always somebody after me to speak. So, now, I will say something.

The fifteen thousand dollars was the maximum by which a person, if he was sued by somebody else, he was protected up to the value of fifteen thousand dollars. Now, if a person wants to...take a poor man. He goes to make a loan at a finance company or a bank. If he borrows a certain amount, sometimes the bank are going to lend this amount without a mortgage; he won't need security for the loan. If he borrows a big amount, he's going to have to have some security for that loan. If it's his home, in the mortgage, he waived this homestead exemption. Now, right now a lot of banks and finance companies are loaning out money to poor people without any security at all. So, he's protected by this homestead exemption because he doesn't waive it. Now, if you're going to put this provision in this constitution leaving it up to the legislature, then these small...these banks and finance companies, when they come to lend money to a poor man, they are going to require some security. The security might be his furniture, or his car, or his home. But, if it's a small loan, what that's going to require him to do is hire an attorney and either get out...take out a chattel mortgage or a mortgage to this finance company or to the bank. Now, that's costing the man a lot of extra money. He's going to have to go to an attorney and get these papers fixed, and then he's going to waive his homestead exemption. So, he's not getting protected at all.

Therefore, I think that the fifteen thousand dollar limitation we originally put in this delegate proposal was a good, medium figure for an average family and a home of fifteen thousand dollars you are protected. Anything over that, if you can't pay your debts, then maybe they ought to seize your house. I think it's a big mistake what we're trying to do by this amendment, and I urge your rejection of it.

Motion

MR. ALARIO

Mr. Chairman, members of the convention, I'd like now for you to...I would move on each individual section, Sections 2, 3 and 4, to move that you would reject those sections so that we might go ahead with the spirit of Mr. Conroy's amendment, and thus leaving this...these different exemptions, the waiver and who might be excluded in the legislature, and leave the legislature to handle it up to that matter. I certainly will promise you, at this point, that I will be birdogging it and looking after it in the legislature to see that the homeowners of this state don't have any less protections than what they have now and would be looking to make sure that if anything else, we'd be looking to increase those benefits.

So, I now move that we reject Section 2.

ROLL CALL

[92 delegates present and a quorum.]

PRAYER

MR. DE BLIEUX

Our Heavenly Father, we thank Thee again for having the privilege of gathering here. We ask Thy blessing upon this delegation, members of the families, all our officials, and those who are interested in our work. May we have the foresight to listen to Thy wisdom as we go about our duties this day, and for the rest of this convention, so that we may do it in a spirit of true humility insofar as our work is concerned, wisdom insofar as Thy grace gives to us, that we may truly be Your servants of Thy kingdom. We ask all this in our Savior's name, Jesus Christ. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

READING AND ADOPTION OF THE JOURNAL

Personal Privilege

MRS. DUNLAP

Let me begin by making it quite clear that what I'm about to say are my own thoughts and ideas. Nobody has inatilled any thoughts in my mind. I realize being an appointed delegate is a strike against me. Why the governor appointed me, I'll never know, but he did. To the few original appointed delegates that are left, remember the governor told us to vote our conscience. I have taken him for his word. I have had no instructions from the governor concerning any of my voting. I am a delegate-at-large, and I define that to mean "a representative of all the people." Now, believe it or not, that's a hard job. However, I can honestly say that being a farmer's daughter and a doctor's wife has given me the insight to the way I think the new constitution should be written. I'm not talking about Style and Drafting. I'm not talking about the legal ramifications. I'm talking about a constitution that will benefit all the people. No one particular race, section, group, parish, or sex will receive all the goodies or all the burdens. Everyone must carry his fair share of the load. Government must be returned to the people. In my civics class in high school, I remember reading in my civics book that government is by the people, for the people. I know there's a third phrase that goes with this, but I can't remember what it is. Now, if something is wrong with my theory about government, that's where it started. But, I don't think I'm wrong. The people must be made to realize that they, and they alone, are responsible for the kind of government they have. They elect their senators and representatives to represent them. They have sent you here to do what is best for them. They trust you. They are waiting for you to go home and say, "It's all right. It's a good. Trust me. My only goal has been to serve you to the best of my ability and knowledge." The people from your area will turn on you and say, "Yes, what about such and such article? It's not so good for us." You must turn to them and explain, "Yes, but so and so article is good for us, and in order to get, we must give." I take issue with the governor on some of his suggested changes. Some I can agree with. Some, I can't. If he cares to know my reasons, then all he has to do is ask. I would like to see him with us. We need him. I appeal to him to reconsider his remarks. I know that I have said things that upon reconsideration I wish I hadn't said. After all, we are all mere human beings, given to our weaknesses and our faults. I care. I do believe I have cared too much.

PROPOSALS ON THE CALENDAR FOR APPROVAL OF FINAL STYLING

Committee Proposal No. 7

Amendment No. 1

MR. TATE

O.K.

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, there should be on your desk in front of you two packets of paper headed in green. The one with the rubber band is Committee Proposal No. 7; 11-8-74. The other one we would take up subsequently is on retirement benefits. It's just stapled together. It's a short one. Before you, you should have as we've noticed before the green copy and the yellow copy being those amendments which we thought you may or may not think are appropriate to be within our function or which we thought would be necessary to resolve ambiguities, but we wish your views as to what they are. Now, with regard to the first amendments—and when we get to the yellow amendments, we will alert you some more—with regard to the first amendments, Amendment No. 1, which rewrites the preamble, just simply places it in the present tense and keeps related words together. If ...Mr. Chairman, I'll yield.

[Amendment No. 1 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 2

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 2 simply changes the words "Section 2" to "Section 1". As you remember, Section 1 had been deleted on the floor, and the old Section 2 now becomes Section 1.

[Amendment No. 2 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 3

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 3 rewrites the old Section 3 which is now Section 2, which is on page 2 of your green material. It rearranges the language slightly. It...in line with the titles expressed in the first article of the Executive Department. It calls him the superintendent of education. Then, it goes on "for public, elementary, and secondary education." It omits needless words. It took a sentence out from Section 4(A), the old Section 4(A), and placed it in Section 2, which has to do with the effect that...if the office is made appointive, which was found in the former Section 4(A). It seemed to be more in continuity to put it in Section 2 under the office rather than under the state board. The other changes are of a strictly sort of clerical or grammatical nature.

[Amendment No. 3 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 4

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 4, which is—and from now on, I'll talk about the new titles, which is...of the new section numbers, I mean—which is Section 3 on page 4 of the green copy. It singularized and standardized language. It, for instance, it tried to use shorter language where appropriate, and in general, it amounts to nothing....and it took out 4(A) the section about who shall appoint the state superintendent of education and put it with the preceding article, as I previously noted.

[Amendment No. 4 adopted without objection.]

115th Days Proceedings—January 11, 1974

Amendment No. 5

MR. TATE

Section 3(B), on page 5 simply has standardized the language or kept related words together and omitted a few needless words.

[Amendment No. 5 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 6

MR. TATE

Section 3(C) on page 6 of your green, rewrote the provision for clarity, took out...the provision about members serving without pay except for per diem, and put it in a general section which you're going to find under 8(C) below which refers to all boards. We repeat it under each board, 8(C), I said.

[Amendment No. 6 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 7

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 7, which is...it's s Section 4, rewrites Section 4, strictly a grammatical rearrangement and singularization and so on.

[Amendment No. 7 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 8

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 8, again, changed the form of the sentence from "there is created" to the "active board of regenta is created," omitted needless words...the floor amendment says "are provided in this section and by law." In context it clearly meant "or by law." "In this constitution or by law," so we accordingly changed the "and" to "or."

[Amendment No. 8 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 9

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 9, which is to Paragraph ...Section 5(B). "Membership; Terms," singularized, omitted "there is" in a sentence, and in general followed the rules of...

MR. CASEY

You've completed your remarks, Judge.

MR. TATE

Somewhat incoherently, yes, sir.

[Amendment No. 9 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 10

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 10--1 should call your attention that 7(C) had been deleted here--this is the per diem business--and was combined with 4(C)--the similar provision, 4(C)--and made a new Section 8(C). The amendment that we've just adopted took it out. We're about to put it back in.

Literally, Mr. Chairman, I repeat it as an explanation of the same amendment. Amendment No. 10 is a simple omission of commas that's unnecessary and using (B) to (A). Amendment No. 10, Mr. Chairman.

[Amendment No. 10 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 11

MR. TATE

We'll go to Amendment No. 11 now, and I'll explain 11 Amendment. Amendment No. 11 involves a rewrite without change according to the views of both Style and Drafting and of the Education Committee of the language of Section 5(D), which refers to the powers of the Board of Regents. The changes made are strictly the substitution of a word for a phrase, the general standardization; for instance, on page 9, it said "the board." Well, since there's several boards, we made... to make it clear, we said "the Board of Regents shall have the following powers and duties." The remaining phrases have to do with strictly, as you will notice, the usual sort of grammatical and stylistic changes we have been following in order to follow a consistent pattern of styling for the convention.

[Amendment No. 11 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 12

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 12 has to do with Section 5(E) on page 14. Two slight changes were made...four slight changes were made but they are of the same nature. We had to add, incidentally, the Southern Board because at the time this was adopted, the Southern Board...the Board of Trustees for the Southern University had not been added to...as a constitutional board. So, we added that in order to be consistent with the general intent. You'll see...Mr. Chairman, I'll yield to any questions.

[Amendment No. 12 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 13

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 13, slightly rewrites Section 6(A) about the board of trustees for state colleges, omit "there is," kept related words together, substituted words for phrases, omitted needless words in line with the previous styling of the previous article.

[Amendment No. 13 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 14

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 14 which is to Section 6(B) on page 17 simply rewrote the paragraph to state composition of the board before stating the terms the members served, so this would be a little more logical.

[Amendment No. 14 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 15

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 15, Section 6(C). On page 18 of your green, we standardized the language like saying "with consent" instead of "with the consent," and we used "a" in line with our usual practice of using an indefinite article for a definite article.

[Amendment No. 15 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 16

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 16 has to do with the Board of Supervisors of L.S.U. and of Southern. The . . . most of the changes were strictly of a . . . all of the changes here are of a mechanical nature. You will see we have a rewrite amendment. . . a yellow amendment that will add "subject to the powers vested in the Board of Regents" by this article. We'll bring it to your attention because we think that was the intent and they use a parallel discretion about the. . . the construction about the Board of Regents. But, that is not before you right now. This is strictly a rewrite on making shorter sentences, omitting "there is," putting unrelated "are's" in separate sentences, etc.

115th Days Proceedings—January 11, 1974

[Amendment No. 16 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 17

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 17, which is to Paragraph 7 (B) on page 19. We again rewrote the paragraph to state the composition of the board before stating the terms the members are to serve on it and to achieve a construction parallel to 6 (B) which is about the State Board of Trustees.

[Amendment No. 17 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 18

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 18 makes the same stylistic changes for the L.S.U. and Southern Boards that it did for the Board of Trustees of state universities with regard to vacancies.

[Amendment No. 18 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 19

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 19 to Section 8 (A) on page 21 simply puts the related words together, and did not split the infinitive, Mr. Dennery.
I yield to questions, Mr. Chairman.

[Amendment No. 19 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 20

Amendment No. 20 dealing with Section 8 (B). "Student Membership", was rewritten to avoid listing again all the higher education boards. It's been checked carefully for accuracy and this is exactly what the boards that were listed in Sections 6 and 7 are relisted here.

[Amendment No. 20 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 21

MR. TATE

All right. Amendment No. 21 deleted on page 3 of the enrolled copy, lines 24 through 30, which again spoke about the per diem, and it's going to consolidate them back in Section 8 (C), which we're coming to right away.

[Amendment No. 21 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 22

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 22 here has the catch-all phrase about the per diems that we've been talking about under each board Article separately. The three places consolidated in one in this catch-all Article or section that deals with all the boards. It substitutes the language of 8 (C). On page 22, it says that "a member of a board created by this Article shall serve without pay, but per diem expenses may be provided by law", in line with the floor language.

[3282]

[Amendment No. 22 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 23

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 23 deals with Section 9 (A) on parish school boards on page 23. It simply substituted a word for a phrase and omitted unnecessary words.

[Amendment No. 23 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 24

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 24 dealing with school superintendents, Section 9 (B) on page 24. On the right of your green... made a shorter sentence out of the long last sentence and it put unrelated ideas in a separate sentence in that regard.

[Amendment No. 24 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 25

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 25 deals with Section 10, Recognizing Existing School Boards Systems. As you may remember, here and there in the Education Article, you're going to have to deal with the problem of the Monroe and Bogalusa City School Boards which were created by the former Constitution. So, when you see references to city boards those are the boards and there are no others that can be created or have been created. So, keep that in mind as to the meaning of the language.

Section 10 (A), which is the subject of Amendment No. 25 simply omitted needless commas and words.

If there are any questions, Mr. Chairman, I'll yield.

[Amendment No. 25 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 26

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 26 dealing with 10 (B) on page 26 of your green-specks....of the Monroe and the Ouachita....Monroe and its parish school boards. It was the....Judge Dennis--Mr. Shady Wall amendment. It involves a minor stylistic change, stating in one case a sentence in positive form.

[Amendment No. 26 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 27

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 27 deals with 10 (C) and involves a... just placing the exception first, as general stylistic manual requires, and otherwise, standard changes of punctuation and language.

[Amendment No. 27 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 28

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 28 is to Section 11 on page 29--in your green. It's a simple...it's a minor...it says "state boards" in order to be consistent because there was no legislative intent that it meant parish school boards.

[Amendment No. 28 adopted without objection.]

115th Days Proceedings—January 11, 1974

Amendment No. 29

MR. TATE

Now, I'm going to Section 12. Amendment No. 29, Section 12. On page 30--that's Amendment No. 29--we omitted a needless word and we, where it said "that appropriations"...we said "the funds appropriated" because that's what it means.

[Amendment No. 29 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 30

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 30 is to Section 13 on page 31 of your green. The only change made was to add a title to the subsection.

[Amendment No. 30 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 31

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 31, which is to Section 13 (B) on page 32. It changes a "such" to "the", puts...we think shortens and makes more clear the language; omits a "the" that's unnecessary; omits "to the time"...just says "prior to making the appropriations"--it's self-explanatory, referring to that event.

[Amendment No. 31 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 32

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 32 deals with Section 13 (C) on pages 33 and 34....On pages 33 and 34, the changes are strictly the stylistic ones that we've been following throughout about omitting needless words, using standard language, placing standard punctuation.

Questions

MR. JENKINS

Judge, this is really a stylistic question. You know this section includes that First, Second, and Third--these subparagraphs--and this seems to be the only place we've done that and I really can't see any rhyme or reason to it. Couldn't you all improve that?

MR. TATE

Mr. Jenkins, you're exactly right. You're exactly right. However, it was our understanding that they had hammered out the Education First, Second, and Third with such detail that is found in the present Constitution, although elsewhere in the Constitution we would have said, (1), (2), and (3). Nevertheless, because of the circumstances that every now and then we...rather than disturb bond attorneys or school boards, we departed from the standard practice, just as we have a Preamble in this Article, for instance, where we don't have anywhere else.

MR. JENKINS

Wasn't the reason the First, Second, and Third were in there before is because there were dedicated funds involved and we're not now talking about dedications, but rather a mere taxing authority?

MR. TATE

I do not know the reason it was in there before, but we were advised someone might regard it as tampering with sacred language.

MR. JENKINS

You don't think, then, if instead of First, Second, and Third, you just put (1), (2), (3), that that would do the same?

MR. TATE

I frankly think it would, Mr. Jenkins, but we yielded to expediency. Some of us voted for three dollar license taxes.

Some of us tried to make compromises that get to the subject of ham and other things, but now and then you have to move things along.

[Amendment No. 32 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 33

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 33 deals with 13 (D) on page 36. It makes no change. It's substantive, of course, and follows the general rule of granting...of the general consistent usage we've tried to follow in standardized language, and using words for phrases.

[Amendment No. 33 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 34

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 34 is about Tulane University, Section 14 on page 37. We omitted the needless commas and words and otherwise, such as it is, bring it to your attention for stylized adoption as is.

[Amendment No. 34 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 35

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 35. We now get into the yellow amendments. Amendment No. 35 on this white sheet--it's the first yellow amendment here. Now, it refers to Section 7 (A) on your green. 7 (A) on your green deals with the Board of Supervisors of L.S.U. and Southern and the effect of this amendment would be--on your green--on your Board of Regents....it's "subject to powers vested by this Article in the Board of Regents." The reason why the committee thought it was not substantive and that it might be needed is that in Section 6 (A) the same construction was used with regard to the Board of Trustees of State Colleges and Universities. "Subject to powers vested by this Article in the Board of Regents"....it was felt that the sense of the convention was and the meaning and context was that the....it was subject only to the....it was subject to the powers vested in the Board of Regents only by the constitution, that the legislature could not later on deprive those boards of the powers that were granted to them by the constitution. In order to be perfectly clear that the same treatment was going to be given to L.S.U. and to Southern as to the other Board of Trustees and that there's no intentional differentiation in their approach, we recommend to your attention placing those words....adoption of this Amendment No. 35, which has the effect of placing the parallel construction of the L.S.U. and Southern Boards.

[Amendment No. 35 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 36

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 36 is going to deal with Section 10 (B) and the complications that result from these city school boards being in the constitution. Then (B), as you see you adopted it, is a stylized version on pages 26 and 27; and includes the provision at the end which says "the provisions of this Paragraph shall be operative notwithstanding anything in this constitution to the contrary." Now, Section.....Paragraph (B) (1) provides for voting for and membership on the Monroe City and the Ouachita Parish School Boards. (B) (2) provides that the board member not meeting those requirements must vacate his position. (B) (3) provides that the Paragraph shall not be operative until 1977 or until reapportionment occurs. Then after this, follows the provision...."the provisions of this Paragraph shall be operative notwithstanding anything in this constitution to the contrary." Now, if the last sentence applies to all three items then there would arise the question as to whether the consolidation of the two school boards under Section 10 (C) would be prohibited. But, Section 10 (C) indicates that the school boards may be....any school system may be consolidated under procedures enacted by the legislature. In other words, there was no intent to prevent the subsequent--excuse me, I'll go back--now, one interpretation of the language which would give effect to both the language in Section 10....there's no intention to stop consolidation in the future. In other words, the provisions of this paragraph were going to be operative, but only as to (3) the election of school board members taking office. It was not intended to prevent the consolidation under the general provision in the future. So, what the intent was....was that the notwithstanding clause of Paragraph (B) that you'll see on the bottom of page 36 really meant that "notwithstanding any contrary provision of this constitution, this Paragraph shall become operative upon the election of members of the parish school board taking office in '77 or upon the first reapportionment, whichever comes earlier." Now, if that interpretation is correct, then you can restyle and shorten Section 10 (B) as is recommended by Amendment No. 36. Now, Judge Dennis is closely familiar with the issue, Mr. Chairman. Might I yield to him to clarify any incoherences that have resulted?

Further Discussion

MR. DENNIS

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I believe Justice Tate has given all the explanation that I can offer. I'd just like to urge you to go ahead and adopt this styling because if it is not styled properly, it might be interpreted to stop these two school districts from merging under the general provisions in Paragraph(C) in the future. I know that this was not ever the intention of Mr. Wall or myself, when we finally worked out a compromise to put this paragraph in. It was simply our intention that the school board be reapportioned immediately, but we both agreed that if the people in these two school districts wanted by an election to merge and consolidate the two school systems in the future under Paragraph (C), that they should be able to do so.

Question

MR. AERTKER

Judge Dennis, then it is my understanding that even though this allows and takes care of Ouachita and Monroe that this still allows for the consolidation of any school systems under procedures that could be established by the legislature.

MR. DENNIS

Yes. With this stylistic change it makes that clear. Without it, there would be some doubt. That's why I'm asking you to adopt this change.

MR. AERTKER

All right.

[Amendment No. 36 adopted without objection.]

MR. TATE

That completes, Mr. Chairman, that completes Committee Proposal No. 7. I think before you report it out, Committee Proposal No. 11 on Retirement and Survivors' Benefits. . .

MR. POYNTER

The gentleman moves to take up the Style and Drafting amendments to Committee Proposal No. 11 dealing with Human Resources, particularly retirement benefits.

[Motion to take up Committee Proposal No. 11 adopted without objection.]

Committee Proposal No. 11

Amendment No. 1

MR. TATE

All right. Mr. Chairman and delegates, the styling amendments you're about to take up are found in a second short pack . . . short section. . . the second short package headed by green material. There is a paper clip in the middle of the page. Take it off. (Some of our Bourbon Street friends got the wrong idea. Ha! Ha!), but anyway, then you'll have a yellow, a green, and the committee amendments which you will see, for a change, are on front and back. Now, Mr. Chairman, shall I move Amendment No. 1?

I should say preliminarily that the....Article VII. Human Resources is....again, we've titled it Section 1. We've got about six or seven Section 1's to Article VII. Human Resources. In the final rearrangement it is anticipated that possibly the Civil Service will be put in a separate section called "Civil Service" and that many of these other miscellaneous articles might be better consolidated together in general provisions, but that will await your determination later. I'm just saying it so you don't worry about Section 1 being repeated. Now, Amendment No. 1 simply rewrites and puts a title to the first Section 1 (A). It has been checked by the--Oh, Mr. Aertker, I should have asked you to say whether--what I did there. I forgot I'd failed to show the great Chairman of the substantive Committee on Education the courtesy of having him express his input into our styling and drafting.--and he says it's unnecessary, he has no objections. In Section 1 (A) no changes are made that are substantive in nature, it's just the usual standardized rules and the singularizing that is common to what we've been doing in the other sections.

[Quorum Call: 89 delegates present and a quorum.]

MR. POYNTER

We have now the Style and Drafting amendment. We ask your indulgence for basic information. There is an amendment which Mr. Womack has had prepared and we've revised to fit in with respect to the proposed Style and Drafting Committee amendment which would call for a motion to reconsider the vote by which the vote was taken on the final adoption of this particular section. But, it will fit with the Style and Drafting Committee amendment, so Judge Tate at this time proposes to go on through all the Style and Drafting amendments and submit those for your consideration and Mr. Womack, or in his absence if he's not here at that moment, I believe, Mr. Aertker will handle the proposed substantive amendment.

Amendment continued

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, what we have before you is the Retirement and Survivors' Benefits in Human Resources, Section 1, as I started to explain. The first three amendments are purely stylistic. Then the two yellow amendments, which are to carry out the floor intent, which have been recommended and then you will later see, Mr. Burson or Mr. Aertker will move to suspend the rules to add something that...there's no question that the floor intended, but didn't exactly express.

All right. The first amendment deals with Section 1 (A) and it rewrites 1 (A) omitting needless words, standardizing language, attempting to clarify the language at the end, "payable to the member of the system or to his lawful beneficiary at his death or retirement." It attempts to clarify between the member of the system and his lawful beneficiary.

[Amendment No. 1 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 2

MR. TATE

Amendment No.2 is to Section 1 (B) on page 3 of your green. It makes similar stylistic changes that were made in 1 (A). This has to deal with retirement systems of other officers, employees and schoolteachers. I yield to questions, Mr. Chairman.

[Amendment No. 2 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 3

MR. TATE

In Section 1 (C) similar stylistic changes are made. On change 4, it says "shall be introduced into". "Shall be introduced in" was thought to be the appropriate language. Otherwise, they are the same sort of changes we've been making up to now, present tensing.... shortening the sentences, etc.

[Amendment No. 3 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 4

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 4, again, is a stylistic amendment. It's on page 6. For the compensation of law enforcement survivors.... survivors of law enforcement Officers and firemen--the changes are strictly to use the standardized language. In other words, instead of saying "as may be defined by law", "as defined by law" meaning the same thing, etc. "Who suffer death", "who die".

[Amendment No. 4 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 5

MR. TATE

All right. Amendment No. 5, --now these next two are yellow amendments, caveat amendments-- we are convinced that they represent only a carrying out of the floor intent, but in the event we are wrong, we wanted to alert you to the fact that this involves an addition of language that you may wish to study. This had to do with the consequences of a floor amendment by Mr. Lanier, which originally the last sentence of this said, "membership in any retirement system of the state or of a political subdivision shall be a contract between the employer and the employee" and it said, "and the state or the political subdivision shall." Now, that was deleted on the floor when it said, "the political subdivision shall guarantee benefits." But, the effect of deleting it was unintentionally to make the state guarantee benefits to the members of any retirement system, state or local governmental. It was agreed that the original intent and the entire intent, the Lanier amendment had no such intent. So, to clarify that the state guarantees benefits only to the state retirement system, the recommendation is to add the words "of a state retirement system" after members "shall guarantee benefits payable to members of a state retirement system at retirement, etc." We did not think this was any substantive change, but we thought we should alert you to the fact of the clause or of the ambiguity and the necessity for its resolution.

[Amendment No. 5 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 6

MR. TATE

The changes in retirement systems. The very plain intent was that it would be...require public notice for changes in the retirement system for public employees. Now, as broadly written it said "to any retirement system", it being a constitutional provision...while we thought it doubtful that anyone could really think it meant that any private retirement systems still had to have to have the notice of intention, etc. In order to avoid the possible confusion, the possible lawsuit, we recommended adding to any retirement system...adding the words "for public employees" to make it crystal clear that the intent was only to require public notice of intentions to change public retirement systems by publication in the Journal and so on of the state.

Mr. Chairman, I'll yield to any questions.

[Amendment No. 6 adopted without objection.]

MR. TATE

All right. Mr. Chairman, I think Mr. Aertker and Mr. Womack desired at the request of the State Retirement Systems, State Teachers' Retirement Systems to introduce some amendments to carry out...there is no question this was the intent of the floor language except it didn't exactly say this.

Motion

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, Mr. Aertker had to leave and asked me to handle this amendment for him. Apparently the attorneys for the State Teachers' Retirement System are concerned that if you simply phrased Section 1 in terms of a member's benefits that you may not be guaranteeing a retiree's benefits because once a person retires he is no longer a member of the system but he is...his proper designation should be retiree; this is more of a technical change. It does not, in my view, change in any way the substance or the intent of the original amendment but it simply clarifies it and makes certain that the benefits of retirees are protected as well as those of the members who are contributing.

[Motion to suspend the rules to reconsider Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 11 for the limited purpose of offering the Womack amendment adopted without objection.]

MR. CASEY

O.K. Section 1 is under consideration now. Let's have the Clerk read the Womack amendment now.

Reconsideration

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

All right. Set of two amendments. Amendment No. 1. On page 1, in Style and Drafting--you can follow this from your Style and Drafting amendments before you--page 1 Committee Amendment No. 1 adopted by the convention today, on line 9 of the text of the first amendment immediately after the word "member" strike out the words "at retirement" and insert in lieu thereof "or retiree" and on line 10, immediately after the word "upon" strike out the words "the member's" and insert in lieu thereof "his".

Amendment No. 2. On page 1, in Style and Drafting Committee Amendment No. 2 adopted by the convention just now, strike out line 11 of the text of the amendment in its entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "or retiree or to his lawful beneficiary upon his".

Point of Information

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Clerk, do not the instructions on the second amendment now have to be changed? Haven't we already adopted a yellow amendment which covers Section 1 (B) and will not, therefore, your instructions have to be changed accordingly?

MR. POYNTER

If by...and I'm going to have to get back and glance at it again. As I recall, the way that amendment was drafted it only added language to the end of line 10; I may be incorrect in that. I believe that's Amendment No. 5; am I O.K. on that? It just adds some language at the end of line 10 in which case, I believe... you're agreeing, Mr. Dennery? I can't see you back there. I believe we are alright. O.K. No. 6, no that goes to Committee Amendment No. 3. O.K.

Questions

MR. PLANCHARD

Jack, in Amendment No. 2 "or retirees or to his lawful beneficiary upon his", the lawful beneficiary...isn't the word lawful a little extra word in there? Do we really need that? What is meant by lawful?

MR. BURSON

Well, that's the same word that was used in the original section and I suppose that's the reason they used it there. The purpose, as I understand it, would be to make it plain that the beneficiary is one spelled out by the retirement law and not his beneficiary under his estate or anything of that nature.

MR. PLANCHARD

Well, couldn't it also mean that that could be the beneficiary as designed by the forced heirship laws or couldn't it also mean by designation in the contract itself? I don't know, I....

MR. BURSON

As I understand, the Teachers' Retirement System, Mr. Planchard, it sets up definite categories of beneficiaries and the contingent beneficiary in all cases is the estate. So, if you didn't have one of the listed beneficiaries then it would be forced heirs in that instance because your estate would be....it would be distributed according to your estate in other words.

MR. PLANCHARD

But, do you feel that if we just said "to his beneficiary" would be sufficient?

MR. BURSON

I'm afraid that if you didn't say "lawful beneficiary" then it might not be plain; it would have to be those beneficiaries established by the law. I didn't draft the amendment and I'm presenting it for these other gentlemen. I would hate to change anything in it without clearing it with them first.

115th Days Proceedings—January 11, 1974

MR. PLANCHARD
O.K., thank you.

MR. CASEY
Mr. Sutherland, has a question; then, Mr. Goldman; then, Mrs. Corne.

MR. SUTHERLAND
Jack, this is probably, for the record, a clarification but you took out the word "member's" and you put in there "his" and down below you say "his lawful beneficiary." Now, in some systems males are recognized to have beneficiaries, females are not. I think the intent here is "his or her," and I just want to be sure that that is the intent.

MR. BURSON
Yes, sir. In other words, it's used generically here "hia", in other words, in the English grammar sense.

MR. SUTHERLAND
O.K.

MR. BURSON
...that modify back to "member's" or "retirees" whichever is involved.

MR. GOLDMAN
Mr. Burson, my question was along the same line. I assume or for the record I would like to know the reference in all of these Styling and Drafting amendments where personnel are involved the "his" is ambisexual; isn't it?

MR. BURSON
As far as I know, yes.

MR. GOLDMAN
In other words, it means either sex?

MR. BURSON
Yes, sir.

MRS. CORNE
Mr. Burson, my question refers to the necessity of adding the word "retiree." In a contractual relationship a member must sign the option that he wants on his retirement while he is a member and, therefore, this option cannot be changed when he becomes retired.

MR. BURSON
Yes, ma'am.

MRS. CORNE
He's then called a retiree; is he not?

MR. BURSON
That's correct. Frankly, I think this is being a little technical with it but apparently the attorney of the retirement system felt it was necessary, and we are talking about guaranteeing the benefits by the state and in that sense, perhaps you could make a distinction. Frankly, I don't think it would hold up but he is being super cautious and...

MRS. CORNE
And, also upon the death of the member he has when he is a member, he has signed the option and he has indicated his beneficiary in the retirement system and, therefore, he is a member at the time that he does that and then cannot be changed even if he becomes a retiree he cannot change it.

MR. BURSON
That's correct. I think it would be a vested right. I think it would be a vested right even if we didn't have this provision in the constitution but I suppose the purpose of all of this is to spell it out where there is no doubt about it and where you don't have to go to court to establish it.

MRS. CORNE
I'm just wondering, Mr. Burson—you have a legal mind and I don't—would this mislead some people into thinking that they can change from the time he was a member and signed these options and become a retiree?

MR. BURSON
I don't think so because it's used as an either or proposition here. I don't think it implies even that he could change his beneficiary.

MRS. CORNE
So, it will not be violence. Thank you, sir.

MR. BURSON
Yes, ma'am.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

[Motion to alter the Order of Business adopted without objection.]

SPECIAL ORDER OF THE DAY

PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

Reading of the Proposal

MR. POYNTER
Committee Resolution No. 13, introduced by Delegate Stovall, Chairman on behalf of the Committee on Rules, Credentials and Ethics which is a substitute resolution for Committee Resolution No. 3 by the same gentleman.

A resolution to amend the Standing Rules of the Convention to add a new Rule 37.1 to provide expressly for submission of alternative provisions.

Explanation

MR. STAGG
Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, if you will take from your books Committee Resolution No. 13 that came from the Rules Committee, its printed on blue paper. If the pages would cooperate with those delegates who have not a copy of it before them it would be helpful to be able to follow what we are proposing to do. When this rule was first being considered in the Rules Committee, there was a subcommittee appointed by the Chairman of the Rules Committee composed of Mr. Flory, Mr. Sandoz, Mr. Velazquez, Mr. Mire and myself. We prepared back before Christmas a proposal on the alternative. It is late coming to the floor so it will be necessary to go through an amendment process so that the amendment can be presented...or so that the proposal can be presented to you in a form for use by those delegates who wish to propose to the convention alternative proposals. If I may, Mr. Chairman, I would like to run through on the blue copy the way the amendments will be presented to the convention.

On page 1, on line 31, the first word is plural, it is to be changed to singular.

On page 2, on line 1, the semicolon ";" behind the first word is eliminated and the date in line 6 is "January 14" instead of "January 5."

We proposed to entirely delete Subparagraph (B). We have rewritten Paragraph (C) so that Paragraph (C) would now read that proposals would be sent to the convention on January 15 and on that date the debate on each proposal for an alternative will be limited to an hour with the time divided equally among the proponents...between the proponents and opponents and upon a receipt of sixty-seven favorable votes an alternative provision would be referred to Style and Drafting. Style and Drafting would have a day and a half to check out the language and to bring it back to the convention by twelve noon on the seventeenth of January and on that day debate would be had on the alternatives with sixty-seven votes....

Point of Information

MR. KEAN
Mr. Chairman, I've got what purports to be two amendments. I just don't see all of this material that Mr. Stagg is referring to in these two amendments.

MR. HENRY
There are five separate amendments.

115th Days Proceedings—January 11, 1974

MR. STAGG

There are five separate amendments and they are in the process of being passed out.

MR. KEAN

I would like to suggest we get all the amendments before we start discussing them; I think it's too important a matter for Mr. Stagg to be talking about them....

MR. HENRY

Well, Mr. Kean, I think what he is doing is just giving an overall rundown of what the amendments do and then he is going to take them up one at a time for adoption, sir.
Proceed, Mr. Stagg.

Explanation continued

MR. STAGG

That's right, Mr. Chairman, I'm trying to explain what is to come so that it will not be entirely in the dark.
The first amendment that will be proposed, Mr. Chairman, is that amendment...or that page on which there are three technical corrections, Amendments No. 1, 2, and 3. The first Amendment No. 1 is to make "alternatives" "alternative". The next one removes the semicolon ";" and the next one substitutes for 5 January, "January 15" on line 6 on page 2.
I move the adoption of the three amendments. I'll be glad to answer any questions on any one of these three amendments.

MR. HENRY

No. We haven't offered the amendments yet, Mr. Stagg. We will go ahead and ask the Clerk to read the first set of amendments.

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

The first set of amendment reads as follows, it's a group of three amendments.
Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 31, at the beginning of the line delete the word "alternatives" plural and insert in lieu thereof the word "alternative" singular.
Amendment No. 2. On page 2, line 1, after the word "native" and before the word "if" delete the semicolon ";"
Amendment No. 3. On page 2, line 6, at the beginning of the line delete the number "5" and insert in lieu thereof the number "15".

Explanation

MR. STAGG

Mr. Chairman, they are in the way of technical amendments to make the document applicable to the status of the convention as we find it today.

Questions

MR. CHAMPAGNE

....alternatives to alternative.

MR. STAGG

It was suggested as a matter of style that the proposal shall state specifically: (1) the text of the alternative. In other words, it is felt that a delegate with an alternative proposal is going to prevent an alternative proposal and they will be separately presented in the....alternatives will be separately presented to the convention.

MR. BURNS

Mr. Stagg, I don't know whether this is the proper time to ask this question but it will have to be answered anyway, so I imagine it's just as good now as ever. As I understand it, do we first when we get to that stage, do we first vote on whether or not to allow alternatives and then subsequently vote on the individual alternatives in the event the convention votes in favor of receiving alternatives, but is that the first vote?

MR. STAGG

Mr. Burns, there has to be a rule before anybody can get to line No. 1---there ought to be a rule of the convention. In this rule in Paragraph (A) it is required that there be forty coauthors on an amendment or rather on an alternative; that's the first roadblock a delegate with a serious alternative has to cross is he has to have forty coauthors. Then is when the convention would decide whether they can have sixty-seven people agree that that ought to be an alternative.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Second amendment reads as follows:
On page 2, delete lines 7 through 9 both inclusive in their entirety.

Explanation

MR. STAGG

Mr. Chairman, back in December when the rule was written there was time for the following of the order of processing of proposals; that time no longer remains and in order to make it a workable rule, it is suggested that lines 7 through 9 be deleted.

Further Discussion

MR. FLORY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I rise in objection to the proposed amendment for the following reasons. You look at Rule No. 44 which it proposes to eliminate its requirements. The committee that drafted this resolution put it in there for the sole purpose of allowing the Substantive Committee to handle the subject matter that might be contained in an alternative proposal and who had the benefit of the year's study on that particular subject matter would also consider the alternative proposal. By the elimination of this provision, what you are doing as a member of a Substantive Committee is turning over to Style and Drafting your responsibility and to allow them to do the committee work. I don't believe that to be the proper approach for this convention to take at this late hour. I'm sure in all deference to the membership of the Committee on Style and Drafting, they don't have all of the answers on the issues that came before the Education Committee on the education proposal. I don't think that they had the benefit of all the testimony that that committee had, nor do I believe that the Committee on Revenue, Finance and Taxation ought to yield its jurisdiction to the Committee on Style and Drafting because, likewise, they didn't have the benefit of all the testimony coming before that Committee on Revenue, Finance and Taxation. We're talking about substantive issues that might be presented to the voters of this state in the form of alternative proposals. I suggest to you that we ought to retain the committee's structure of this convention. We ought to proceed along the lines of using and utilizing to the fullest extent the Substantive Committees who have deliberated these issues for the past year. I recognize that it might be expedient; you might cut some corners. But, I suggest to you that that's not the best approach; it's not the wisest approach. I don't believe that the people in the final analysis will judge us as being prudent by bypassing for the sake of a few hours. If the Committee on Style and Drafting can handle all the proposals within the time prescribed here, I don't believe we can; that committee can do it with its other work and at the same time come back to this convention with a proper report. I believe if we are going to go into the issue of alternatives, we ought to utilize the committee structure and allow those committees to function as they have this past year. I ask you to reject the amendment.

Questions

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Flory, let's leave aside the question of the Education Committee right now and discuss, for example, the Committee on Revenue, Finance and Taxation with regard to the governor's speech yesterday. The governor was asking us to change the bond issue provisions as they relate to revenue bonds. The measure that he's talking about, that we adopted on the convention floor, was reported out of the Committee on Revenue, Finance and Taxation with a substantial majority. Any alternative to go on the ballot that would change that, that we referred to them; wouldn't that stand a good chance of being killed in committee?

MR. FLORY

Not necessarily if you read the rest of the resolution. I think that if that committee doesn't act and report that out, then they can take...come forward, the convention can take possession of it on a certain date.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Thank you.

115th Days Proceedings—January 11, 1974

MR. PLANCHARD

Gordon, isn't it true if we leave this in here that we could still as the body, suspend this rule?

MR. FLORY

There's no question that the body can suspend any of its rules if they get two-thirds of those present and voting sixty-seven votes whichever is the lesser number. But, I think we ought to utilize the structure that we set out as far as committees are concerned. Originally, we divided the constitution into eight substantive matters and assigned to those eight substantive committees the subject matter that ought to go to them for the purpose of discussing these issues. It came before those committees, and I think it's too late, now, to change that.

MR. PLANCHARD

I think you . . . you believe in the integrity of the committee system. . .

MR. FLORY

I certainly do; I certainly do.

MR. GAUTHIER

Gordon, I, like you, hesitated dropping the structure we've worked so hard to create and use so wisely up until this time.

MR. FLORY

I'm sorry; I can't hear you.

MR. GAUTHIER

I said, I, like you, also hesitate at dropping a procedure we have used well to this point. But, if we do not, will time permit us to go through the regular channels that we have in the past?

MR. FLORY

Well, I don't see why it won't. If it will allow you to go through the same procedure and go through Style and Drafting, I don't see why it won't let you go through the other committees. I see no reason why you can't suspend the rules when a delegate proposal is introduced and send it to the substantive committee just the same as you can send it to Style and Drafting.

MR. GAUTHIER

Now, do you see any distinction, though, in the fact that it requires that an alternate have at least the signature of forty delegates? Wouldn't that put it in a class of its own and therefore be a different procedure in itself?

MR. FLORY

Well, let me say this: we've already . . . I presume the amendments that were offered to that particular Section (A) have been adopted without objection, in my appreciation. Now, I know of no further amendments to that particular section, and I haven't had a chance to read all of the amendments. But, it was the thought of that committee that . . . in order to have and because some of those were not . . . require the forty signatures.

Further Discussion

MR. STOVALL

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in support of the amendment that is before us for this very obvious reason: by adopting this amendment, we are not yielding so much to Style and Drafting as we are to the wisdom of this body. I think all of us, by this time, are knowledgeable on the substance of the various issues that are before us and that might come before us. I submit to you that this is a more democratic procedure that is suggested in this amendment, and I furthermore suggest that we are at a point in time when we must eliminate as many unadministrative procedures as possible and get to the substance of the issue. The adoption of this amendment will enable us to do so. This is a completely democratic procedure. It will be left to the wisdom of this body concerning the substance of the matter that is before us.

Mr. Chairman, if there are no other speakers, I move the previous. . . there are some questions.

Questions

MR. ROEMER

Reverend Stovall, if we adopt this amendment, we haven't circumvented the convention in any way, have we? Won't these alternatives have to be brought up on the floor of the convention as they deserve?

MR. STOVALL

We're not circumventing the committees. We are, as a total group, making certain decisions concerning matters of substance.

MR. ROEMER

Well, isn't it true, Reverend, that every member of every committee is also a member of the whole convention and will get a chance to debate it on the floor of the convention?

MR. STOVALL

Yes.

MR. ROEMER

So, we haven't done any injustice to anybody or any committee, have we not?

MR. STOVALL

Absolutely not.

MR. ROEMER

Haven't..furthermore, we have looked at the calendar and know that we are running out of time, aren't we?

MR. STOVALL

Yes.

MR. ROEMER

If we have to go through a long, involved process just to get an alternative on the floor, then we're not going to get a chance to even discuss alternatives, are we?

MR. STOVALL

Right.

MR. ABRAHAM

Reverend Stovall, an alternate proposal will be very similar to a delegate proposal, would it not, in effect? It's going to be just like a delegate proposal that would have gone to committee, will it not? What would the committee do with such a proposal? The only thing it can do is it can either report it with amendments or report it without action. Then, it would still have to come back to the floor, huh? So, really. . .

MR. STOVALL

The substantive committees have already dealt with the issues that will come before us.

MR. ABRAHAM

Right. So, there is probably nothing that the committee--if it were referred to committee--there's nothing the committee could add to the proposal at all, could it not, other than just report it back to the floor.

MR. STOVALL

I think so. I think that's correct.

MR. ABRAHAM

So, we really haven't lost any ground if we were to adopt this amendment and go ahead and bring it to the floor, have we?

MR. STOVALL

I think you are right.

MR. GOLDMAN

Reverend Stovall, wouldn't the defeat of this amendment, in effect, defeat this resolution, and then we wouldn't have any chance for alternatives?

MR. STOVALL

Mr. Goldman, I would not say that we could not operate within that framework, but this . . . to eliminate . . . to pass this amendment will certainly expedite our parliamentary and administrative procedure in dealing with whatever alternative proposal might be presented to the group.

Mr. Chairman. . .

MR. FLORY

Mr. Stovall, isn't it true that you could have brought this resolution up prior to the Christmas holidays?

MR. STOVALL

We're not dealing with the time schedule of the Rules

115th Days Proceedings—January 11, 1974

Committee at this time, Mr. Flory. I think the thing we're dealing with is Amendment No. 2.

MR. FLORY

No, what I'm talking about, as the author of the resolution, couldn't you have brought this resolution up prior to the Christmas holidays to allow more time for consideration of alternatives?

MR. STOVALL

We could have done many things in the past that we have not done, Mr. Flory.

Further Discussion

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I think it's unfortunate that we have to consider this proposal at this late hour. I can certainly understand the desire of the committee to amend the original committee proposal in the interest of expediting alternative proposals, if we want to consider them. It seems to me that the real problem that we've got to face up to is not so much in shortcutting the usual procedures that are contained in Rule 44, but in the subsequent amendment which would bypass the substantive committees and refer the alternative proposal directly to the Committee on Style and Drafting. Now, I say this for this reason: these alternative proposals are not going to be simple propositions. It will be necessary for that alternative proposal to, among other things, state the effect of the alternative--if adopted by the people--in terms of additions to and deletions from the body of the proposed constitution, and the text of the ballot proposed on the alternative. Now, it seems to me that the substantive committees who worked with some expertise in the various fields that were within the scope of their jurisdiction are in a much better position to consider these particular factors which will go into the alternative proposition than would be the Committee on Style and Drafting. What we're really saying is that we're going to try to confect alternative proposals on the floor, and then really refer them to Style and Drafting for nothing more than style and drafting. It means that we will not have any real committee consideration of alternative proposals to be considered by this convention, and I think that's wrong. If we want to have alternative proposals, fine; that's one thing. But, let's have them deliberated; let's have them considered by committees in the proper manner so that if we finally adopt the alternative proposal, we do it in a sensible, reasonable fashion. What we're doing here is now simply becoming a Committee of the Whole for the purpose of considering alternative propositions and using the Style and Drafting Committee as a means to put it in final form. I simply do not believe that's the way we ought to conduct our business. I think we're going to end up with long and lengthy debates over alternative proposals and the language of those proposals that are going to take far greater time with less results than would be the case if these proposals were submitted to the substantive committee and by that committee, ordered to be considered and referred back to the floor by some specific date.

I suggest to you that you look at this matter carefully, and that if we want to bypass any of the procedures, that we do it not with respect to the committee it will be referred to, but we do it with respect to the time in which that committee would have to make a report back to the floor with respect to whatever proposal is referred to it. I think otherwise we are simply not going to get proper consideration of these proposals, the consideration which they deserve. For that reason, I oppose the amendment which is now before you.

Questions

MR. LANIER

Mr. Kean, as a matter of principle, do you favor the concept of alternate proposals?

MR. KEAN

Mr. Lanier, I haven't made up my mind on what I'm going to do with respect to alternative proposals. I have stated before that in some instances it may depend on what they are. But, I don't think the way to consider them is to bring them up, get sixty-seven votes and send them to Style and Drafting, because I think we're going to spend all next week--the last few days that we've got to complete this constitution--in debating alternative proposals which could be better served by being referred to the substantive committee for further consideration.

MR. FLORY

Mr. Kean, if this amendment is adopted--and I don't believe that the delegates have looked at Rule 44--but if this amendment should be adopted, under (J) and (K) and they are--let me read it to you--"Referral to Committee on Style and Drafting," "The Convention's Approval of Final Styling," and (L) is "Final Enrollment," then these alternate proposals wouldn't even have to comply with. . . the convention wouldn't have the opportunity, necessarily, to adopt the Committee on Style and Drafting's final report, nor would we finally have to enroll these documents; would we?

MR. KEAN

That's correct. You'd have to follow the procedure. . .

MR. HENRY

You've exceeded your time, Mr. Kean.

Further Discussion

MR. JUNEAU

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in as strenuous support as I can of the amendments offered by Mr. Stagg. I think that we ought to be apprised of the fact that we have approximately eight days left in this convention. So, let's not pussyfoot around with the issue. The question is--and let's have a record vote on it--do you want to delay and do you want to consider the mere mechanism of allowing the people to decide questions of magnitude that could effect the passage or defeat of this constitution? I tell you that we're within eight days; we're running on a short fuse now. To support the position that Mr. Flory took would be nothing other than a vote denying the people of this state the right to consider issues such as education, and such issues on education that were mentioned by the governor of this state to this convention. Now, you want to talk about a full and free debate, what fuller and freer debate do we need or what more information do you want on education than we've had over the past year? I'll tell you--and let's lay the cards on the table--what a lot of us are interested in is education. We want to put to the people the question of whether or not they want the multiplicity of five boards in the constitution, 'cause the alternate will be simply put--and I want to lay the facts on the table--that we will not change the responsibilities nor duties nor functions of the lower board. We do not propose to change the duties, responsibilities, or functions of the Board of Regents. We would make a change in the composition of the Board of Regents to provide for some elected officials. We would remove from the constitution, as advocated by the governor and as advocated by many, many people throughout this state and a substantial majority of the people in this convention, those management boards which were. . . had been deemed to be administrative in nature, and we would leave that to the legislature for flexibility. Now, I'm not asking you, and I don't think anybody is asking you to necessarily support that concept. But, what we are asking you for, by Mr. Stagg's amendment, is for. . . why don't you just give us a chance to present those arguments to you, and then let us decide whether or not you want to circumvent the right of the people to make that determination? So, what I'm asking you to do is to vote "yes," not only on this amendment by Mr. Stagg, but on all of the subsequent amendments that are offered by Mr. Stagg so that we can get to the issue and cut out what you know and what I know to be pigeonholing of a committee report.

I'll yield to any questions.

Questions

MR. ROEMER

Pat, I find you to be a reasonable, intelligent person. What do you. . . what, in your best opinion, do you think are the chances of an alternative going to a substantive committee? An alternative flies directly in the face of what that committee's pride of authorship is. What do you think are the chances of that alternative either getting a favorable hearing or a favorable report out of the committee?

MR. JUNEAU

Zero.

MR. ROEMER

Thank you.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Mr. Juneau, did you know that before the opinion of various delegates became polarized on certain issues, in fact in the first or second week of this convention, that I inquired what provisions would be made for alternates, and I was told, "It shall be taken up at the right time"? Apparently, late is the time to take it.

115th Days Proceedings—January 11, 1974

Further Discussion

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, Mr. Juneau has just about made my talk for me. I want to emphasize, too, the fact that we have got to have some input in the way of decision making from the voters of this state if we expect to get this document passed. The only way in the world that they feel like that they will have been able to make some choice is if we have some alternatives on this ballot. I don't believe that our voters are any different than that of other states, and as you have seen from the staff reports that we have had, in every state that they had a constitution submitted to them that there wasn't alternatives on, that constitution was rejected. You've attended some of the seminars we had at the very beginning and even last year and the year before that on this constitutional convention in which we had some of these people who have worked on those constitutions. . .

They have told us in no uncertain terms that we should submit alternatives. Since 1966, nine states--nine states--have submitted new constitutions. Five of them didn't have any alternatives, and all five of them failed. Even one state that had a constitution with alternatives failed. Only three of them were able to pass it, and they all three had alternatives. Now, I ask you, let's be sure if you want to get this document passed, let's be sure we provide a mechanism by which we can get some alternatives on that ballot. I'm not trying to tell you what the alternatives ought to be. That's something we can make up our mind on when we get to that particular part. But, let's, for goodness sakes, provide the mechanism to do it. I ask you to support these Stagg amendments so that we can get that done.

Questions

MRS. CORNE

Mr. De Blieux, a vote against this amendment would, in effect, kill the resolution, would it not?

MR. DE BLIEUX

A vote for these amendments would kill the resolution?

MRS. CORNE

A vote against this amendment would kill the resolution, would it not, at this late date?

MR. DE BLIEUX

That's right. That's exactly right. We can't possibly do it without these amendments.

MRS. CORNE

We are then, in effect, telling the people that it is none of their business?

MR. DE BLIEUX

That's exactly right, and we are going to tell them what they ought to do and what they can't do.

[Motion to limit debate to 15 additional minutes adopted without objection.]

MR. FLORY

Senator De Blieux, you said your position was dictated by the wishes of the people. Could you tell me, if you delete Rule 44 requirements, when the public is going to be heard on these alternatives?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Flory, they will have their chance, whenever we get these alternatives on the ballot, to be heard, and I think they're going to speak loud and clear on them. They haven't been able to hear every amendment that we. . .that is, have a hearing before a committee on every amendment that's been proposed here, and you know we have had some radical amendments.

MR. FLORY

Do you know of any proposal that's been introduced in this convention that has not gone to a committee and that a public hearing has not been held on it, and that the public has been offered the opportunity to come and present their views before that committee acted on that proposal?

MR. DE BLIEUX

We haven't done that with all the amendments, Mr. Flory. I say, if you want to kill the chance for a proposal. . .a proposed alternative. . .

MR. FLORY

We're talking about alternative proposals, Senator, not amendments. We're talking about alternative proposals.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, these alternative proposals, in my opinion, is something like an amendment to the proposal. That's all that they are going to be.

Further Discussion

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in strenuous opposition not only to the amendments before us right now, but to this entire concept of going through all of this without due process. If this same deal outlined in these amendments could be followed, we've wasted a lot of the state's money. We have really pooped it off, because all of this time that we have been led to believe that before a proposal could be finally passed on by this convention, it should be heard by. . .it should be heard by these committees: that is, give everybody that was interested enough to come to Baton Rouge--and there have been a lot of them--give them a chance to be heard. Then, let that committee form its opinion.

Now, we propose to cut short all of that. All these proposals that have been heard before substantive committees and had people testifying from all over the State of Louisiana, just what are they going to think about this? Now, Mr. Juneau referred to the passage of this constitution by the electorate. Now, I've heard that mentioned many times. I do not think that should have a great place in this convention. I do not think that that should determine anybody's vote. We were elected or appointed to draw up the best constitution possible that we were capable of producing. Now, everybody--that's wrong. A lot of people throughout this state think that we have done so--a lot of people. There are also a lot of people that think we have been puppets, but those are in a minority. Now, if we can cut this thing so short as just to follow the procedure outlined by these amendments presented us today, how in the world could anybody think that we're more than puppets? They have not had a chance to testify; we have not had a chance to learn. Now, if these proposals--alternate proposals--are to be submitted to a committee, why should they not be submitted to the committee that has heard this information for a year, not to a group of men--and no matter how intelligent they are and what fine people. Certainly, I have the greatest respect in the world for these members of Style and Drafting, but they have not had all the. . .they have not had the opportunity to hear all the information that the members of the substantive committees have heard. So, if you're going to do this thing, let's be a little decent about this thing and give it to the committee that's heard all the information and can intelligently pass on it. Now, certainly I wouldn't. . .I wouldn't say that this Committee on Style and Drafting is not composed of some of the smartest members of this convention, but they just haven't had an opportunity to hear all these presentations. Some of them have been good; some of them have been by experts. Certainly there has been a lot of expertise that has been given to these committees. Now, when this thing gets out how this is attempted right now, we are going to lose more confidence of the people of the State of Louisiana by so doing than anything that we have done. That is my honest and considered opinion. People just can't keep from thinking that. . .that what some of them suspicioned all the time is true. I just cannot, for the life of me, see how it could be possible to do this and still us maintain the confidence of the people in the State of Louisiana. I can just imagine--of course, everybody is not like. . .

they are up in Vernon Parish, but I can imagine what's going to be said to me in Vernon Parish.

I urge your rejection.

Further Discussion

MR. WEISS

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I ask of you to accept overwhelmingly and resoundingly the acceptance of this floor amendment. I think that the Rules Committee has done good by us all these months, and I would like to read to you the members of that committee in case there's any question in your mind as who composed it: Reverend Stovall, Delegates Arnette, Corne, Bel, Bollinger, Elkins, Flory, McDaniel, Mire, Sandoz, Shannon, Singletary, Stagg, Velazquez and Warren.

115th Days Proceedings—January 11, 1974

Now, there are two major issues, here, and I think we should resolve it. It will be resolved upon the vote, in a moment. The reason I think you should accept this amendment is that we are now faced with the usual problem that has come to this convention repeatedly: that is, the fact that the history of successful constitutional writing is in no small measure the history of procedure. This procedure is essential for us to go on.

The second fact is that we should exhibit due faith and respect to the highest elected officer of this state, our governor. Our governor, as he concluded his remarks, made it very clear that it was not only in his best interest, but our best interest and the best interest of the people of the State of Louisiana to have this proposal passed. Now, you may differ, as I do, on some of his recommendations, but there is little question that he is the highest elected officer of this state and should know the feelings of the sentiment of the people of this state. He tried to convey to you these points. I would suggest that we listen to what he has to say, to debate it, to earnestly and sincerely consider them. That's all he asked, that we consider these proposals. At the present moment, we are hog-tying the whole situation by procedure. I would suggest that this floor amendment clearly be voted overwhelmingly by this convention. In turn, the subsequent amendments of this committee be voted favorably, and let us go on with debating these matters and see whether we will accept or reject the governor's suggestions. I think that that's a very clear mandate to us. I would suggest and urgently try to persuade you to vote favorably in this floor amendment vote that will follow.

Questions

MR. MCDANIEL

Dr. Weiss, you read out the names of the Rules Committee of which I am a member. Are you aware that this Rules Committee has not met since we returned in January?

MR. WEISS

I'm aware of a lot of things that happened under my committee that I wish we could have avoided, but I think in all, the job has been commendable. I hope that you will meet and carry out the wishes of this convention, if we so vote to have it done.

MR. MCDANIEL

But, are you aware that the entire Rules Committee adopted the original proposal, but most of us had no committee meetings this morning and there was ample time for a rules meeting? But, these amendments are not amendments of the Rules Committee, but possibly a few members of it?

MR. WEISS

I'm not aware of that, but it doesn't surprise me. Procrastination is the nature of man.

MR. MCDANIEL

But, that is a fact.

Further Discussion

MR. JACK

Mr. Chairman and members, almost from the inception of this convention there has been discussion of alternatives. My appreciation has been that we wouldn't make the setup early on it because it would encourage too many of them. This resolution on the blue page limiting them to six. We've purposely, apparently delayed in taking them up. But, it has been the intention of this convention, at least the people have that idea, that on certain things there will be alternatives.

Now, they are entitled to choose on certain major issues here. Now, nobody has mentioned it, but it's the boards of the colleges and universities. Now, let me tell you something. There's a power struggle going on among the alumni of the different colleges and universities of Louisiana. I believe I'm in a position to look at this matter more fairly than people who are alumni of these various state colleges and universities. Let me tell you, I'm for allowing an alternative on the ballot for this board business. I was educated mainly during the depression. I didn't go to LSU---probably the main reason, I couldn't get a job down here in Baton Rouge. It was a small town, then, depression. Most of my college education---the depression started with the stock market crash in 1929---I was educated where I could get a job. That included Shreveport at Centenary, University of North Carolina, and law school way out at Southern California where I was a process server. I came back here my last year of law when my mother had a breakdown. I went to Tulane because I had to go home each Friday night, the first semester; every other weekend, the second. Now, I can look at this fairly. I'm not prejudiced. I'm not in the power struggle of the alumni. This is a people's decision. What you are doing when you are fighting allowing an alternative, you are saying the power struggle about what kind of board is a matter for the alumni, and for this convention alone. Most of you in this convention who went to college, went to a state-maintained one. You are looking at your own school. You are not going far in being fair about it. Now, let me tell you, the vast majority of the voters in Louisiana did not go to college at all. A lot of them got more self-education and sense than a lot of people that did go to college. I'm not knocking college. I managed to have three degrees. But, I've seen people with an eighth grade education that have educated themselves. The people of Louisiana.... ought to have the say-so here. So, I'm for this amendment. Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. ASSEFF

Mr. Chairman, delegates, I am a member of that illustrious committee on Style and Drafting. I am tired of all the hot potatoes being given to us. I wouldn't touch it with a ten foot pole. If it is given to Style and Drafting to review what this convention has done, I will resign from that committee. We have been here fourteen months, and it is rather late to think of the people. This is too important to be considered only on the floor of this convention. We must have full committee hearings in the proper manner

...we must have full committee hearings in the proper manner with everyone being given an opportunity to be heard. We have done that throughout our sessions. Now, we want to consider a complete reversal on the floor of this convention. Let us do it correctly, or not at all. Let us have committee hearings, or forget alternates. This proposal has been on the calendar for a long time. Why have you suddenly decided to call it up today? I certainly want no part of it. I certainly will vote against the resolution if this amendment is adopted. I do not want you to return it, to refer it to Style and Drafting. Please, refer it to your own committee.

Thank you.

Closing

MR. STAGG

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I have a great deal of respect for those delegates who spoke in opposition to this amendment. They don't particularly care for alternatives, some of them. Others quite genuinely do not want to depart from the established rules of the convention. I feel we are being asked by Mr. Flory and others literally to throw the baby out with the bath water. There are strongly held beliefs by delegates to this convention, that are mirrored by the citizens of this state they represent. To the extent we have failed to mirror that citizen belief, then in some areas, we have written an imperfect document and they have no alternative. Certainly it would behoove us to at least direct the machinery by which alternatives might be considered and voted on, reminding you that it takes sixty-seven votes before an alternative provision can be placed on the ballot for consideration by the people. So, no half-baked proposal is going to get out of this convention without a majority of the delegates having spoken in favor of it.

There literally is not time to follow Rule 44 which requires three readings on three different days; it requires referral to committees; it requires referral back to the convention with the committee decision; then a second reading; then a vote on the floor; and then to advance it to Style and Drafting; then to bring it back to the floor. There isn't time. If you would take out your calendar you would find how strongly the clock is running. You might put down on your desk pad the number seventy-six because when we adjourn today, the maximum number of hours you have left in this convention is seventy-six hours, provided we are willing to work ten and eleven and twelve hours a day. That simply is the size of it. I would hope, Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, that you will vote for the amendment and allow at least this convention to erect a usable piece of machinery by which expeditiously valid proposals for alternatives can be brought to the floor of this convention, at least to be considered by, and debated by, these delegates.

Questions

MR. GOLDMAN

Mr. Stagg, don't we as citizens of this state, and as a Constitutional Convention urge the people in this state to take a more active part in the political processes of the state?

MR. STAGG

Yes, sir. Always.

MR. GOLDMAN

When we do that, and we kill something like alternatives, aren't we just saying to them we... "you ought to take an active part in it," but are we giving them an opportunity to take an active part in it?

MR. STAGG

We are giving them a document to consider, Mr. Goldman. I would hope that those who were for the convention, except for maybe one or two items, would find the ability to express their opinion at the polls on those two items, and cause the convention to survive. You will remember--or no, you were not here, Mr. Goldman-- but, early on in this convention, the Chairman of the Illinois Constitutional Convention appeared before the delegates in a seminar and he very clearly stated that but for the four alternative provisions on the Illinois ballot for their constitution, it would have failed to pass.

MR. GOLDMAN

Do you know I attended that seminar?

MR. STAGG

Very good.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Mr. Stagg, did not the greatest number of delegates to this convention receive... their mandate from the people?

MR. STAGG

Yes, sir. The greater number did.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Do you not think it's unfair, then, to say that these same people who are wise enough to pick the greatest majority of these delegates are... don't have sufficient wisdom to make the choice that they think is best for Louisiana; that they should not be given alternatives?

MR. STAGG

Mr. Velazquez, I am struck with the wisdom of other conventions in recent years--not those that happened way back-- but it is a matter of history....
...of the recent conventions that those that did give their voters a choice on sticky issues succeeded in passing their constitutions.

[Record Quorum Call: 109 delegates present and a quorum. Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted: 78-32. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The next set of amendments sent up by Delegate Stagg goes to Paragraph (C). There were two different sets of amendments passed out by Delegate Stagg on this. This is the shorter... this is the shorter set of amendments... reads as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, delete lines ten through twenty-two, both inclusive in their entirety, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"(C) All proposals setting forth proposed alternatives shall lie over for convention action on January 16, 1974. On that day, there shall be put to the convention the question of the final passage of each such proposal. Debate on the question on each proposal, shall be limited to two hours with the time equally divided between proponents and opponents (that should be a comma and a lower case instead of the period. The "with" ought to be lower case there, Mr. Stagg. We're not going to have us a sentence.) limited to two hours (then just simply) with the time equally divided between proponents and opponents. Each proposal receiving a favorable vote of sixty-seven delegates shall be adopted and shall be referred to the committee on Style and Drafting."

Explanation

MR. STAGG

Mr. Chairman, in the previous amendment that was adopted, we set a date by which forty delegates had to agree on introduction of a proposed alternative. In order to assure that the document was printed and distributed to the delegates, it was felt that it was required that on January... that until January 16... would be a proper period of time and that on January 16 any alternatives would be placed before the convention for debate. The voting should be limited... the debate should be limited to two hours. We had had an earlier time in my first proposed amendment of one hour, and I didn't think that was sufficient for some of these things of such magnitude, and two hours' debate should be devoted to each one. Then, again, before any alternative can be sent to Style and Drafting for final action by that committee, a majority of the delegates to the convention shall have had to vote favorably on its adoption. Mr. Chairman, I do move the adoption of the amendment.

Questions

MR. KEAN

Mr. Stagg, as I appreciate your proposal, you could actually come up on the day of January 16, introduce an alternate proposal on January 16, and have the convention debate it that same day, couldn't you?

MR. STAGG

Mr. Kean, there was an amendment proposed on line 6, on page 2, which stated that no such proposal may be introduced after January 15... no proposal may be introduced after January 15. It would lie over and come before the convention on the 16th.

MR. KEAN

So, we'd have it one day before we get ready to take it up.

MR. STAGG

That's correct, sir, the time necessary to have it printed.

Further Discussion

MR. FLORY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I rise in opposition to this amendment. I have always been of the opinion that regardless of what side of an issue that I was on, I did not want to gag this convention or to limit debate while there were those who wished to speak. I have voted consistently, almost, throughout this convention, when someone wanted to speak, not to cut off debate. What you have before you now is something that says that within two hours we're going to decide an alternative issue that it may have taken thirty days for this convention to come to a conclusion. After series, after series of amendments were proposed--and I tell you, I can see the handwriting on the wall-- I don't, didn't believe that this convention would ever come to the point merely because a majority felt one way, they were going to stifle the minority and they were going to implement the gag rule. I ask you, in all fairness, regardless of what issue it is, and regardless of which side you are on, to look at this amendment. I have no idea what will be proposed, if any, in the way of alternatives. I haven't seen the first language of any alternative proposal. But, I can tell you this, I'm not one who wants to sit in my seat for two hours without the right to submit amendments, without the right to have it openly and fairly debated on its merits, and then say that we have completed our work and submit it to the people for their adoption. I don't believe that it's fair to the delegates of this convention. Above all, I don't believe it's fair to the people of this state to say that we can, in two hours, decide an issue that we might have spent thirty days now, in coming to a conclusion on, and a majority would have spoken. Whatever issue we are talking about in the form of an alternative, has to get sixty-seven votes in this convention on its initial passage. I ask you not... not to adopt this amendment; not to limit debate. If we've got an issue that's so serious that it ought to be submitted in the form of an alternative, we ought to give the utmost consideration to that. You can't do it under what's proposed here. You can't do it here.

I ask you to reject this amendment.

Questions

MR. LANIER

Mr. Flory, on the firemen and policemen civil service, weren't you the one that came off the floor with the two page proposal that the convention ultimately considered?

MR. FLORY

I probably had some amendments longer than that that were offered, Mr. Lanier. I know you did, in local government. It took a lot more than two hours to decide them, too.

MR. GAUTHIER

Gordon, excuse me, but did I hear you say that you had never voted to limit debate?

MR. FLORY

No, I didn't say that. I said, almost throughout this convention, I had voted not to limit debate. Oh, yes. I voted to limit debate...on rare occasions. Yes.

MR. GAUTHIER

On rare occasions when you felt that there was enough material presented on that matter. You, then, in those instances, voted to limit debate. Correctly?

MR. FLORY

That's correct.

MR. GAUTHIER

So, there are some occasions when you did say, "We've heard enough, we know enough. Let's vote."

MR. FLORY

No question about that. No question about that, but we weren't facing a one hour or two hour deadline when we started.

Further Discussion

MR. BURNS

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I don't know what position those of you who had to run for this office took in your campaign, but in St. Tammany Parish, you would have thought that we were running for governor instead of such an unappreciated job as this turned out to be. We had platforms and made pledges and had ads in every weekly paper, and made speeches. In every one of my appearances, and every one of my ads, I said that I strongly advocated alternatives in highly controversial matters so that the voters of the state would not be bound by either voting against the whole constitution because they very strenuously were against some particular article, or some particular section. Now, I've arrived at that position with reference to my pledge, and with reference to my campaign promises. I...that is the reason for me being up here on this particular occasion. I'm not trying to change one of your votes, or one of your opinions. But, to carry out that pledge, and to keep my word, I'm going to vote for one alternative if it's submitted to this convention, because I've... that's been my position for weeks. I haven't changed since yesterday morning, and those of you with whom I've talked, I believe that you would realize that I said that there's one article, or one provision of one proposal that we passed, that I think is about as highly controversial as anything that we've done in this convention. If it ever gets to that stage, I'm going to so vote. But, I just wanted to get up here so it would be a matter of record for the people of St. Tammany Parish in particular, that I kept my word.

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I accept the vote of the majority of this convention which just took place, which clearly indicates to me that the convention wants to have a device by which they can consider alternative proposals.

I'm not here opposing this particular amendment in the interest of setting aside what this convention has already indicated it wants to do. I have prepared, and will offer after this amendment is considered, another amendment which would have the effect of referring these proposals to the Substantive Committee that would normally act upon those proposals. I have included in that amendment, procedure by which those proposals can get back to this convention floor, as rapidly and at the time indicated in the Stagg amendment. I simply think that if we move forward with the Stagg amendment as it's presently drawn, where we're going to consider alternate proposals, in effect, on the floor, that we do violence to what we've done here for the year's time that we've been in session, where we have used the committee system as a means of getting the benefit of advice and assistance prior to consideration of that proposal on the floor.

Now, my proposal would be to refer it to the Substantive Committee, but require that that Substantive Committee report it back in order for it to be considered on the same timetable as Mr. Stagg's proposal, and further provide that if the subcommittee did not on that time bring it out, that the convention, by a majority vote, would have a right to proceed to consider it to the same extent as if they had done so. It seems to me that that is a much preferable method of dealing with this problem than simply saying we're going to take it up on the floor and send it to Style and Drafting. What the Stagg proposal means is that there will be no committee consideration of any alternative proposals because when it goes to Style and Drafting, Style and Drafting under the rules has no right to make any change in that proposal other than those which relate to Style and Drafting. Under the circumstances, what we're really saying, and we might as well lay it out on the table, that is that we are going to consider alternative proposals on the floor, without the benefit of any committee consideration. I think that does violence to what we've done here in the past year in considering our proposals. I hope that if the Stagg amendment passes, I would hope that they would be willing to withdraw it in favor of mine. But, if it passes, I hope you'll give consideration to that point when my amendment comes up.

Further Discussion

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I urge just as strongly as I can possibly urge, the rejection of this amendment. Now, it amazes me...it amazes me, and I don't impugn anybody's motives or integrity, don't make that inference, but it amazes me that highly intelligent people can come up with a Mickey Mouse, Rube Goldberg type of proposition like this amendment, and another amendment that I see on my desk, presents. Now, I want you to consider this. This amendment says that these proposals will be considered on the 16th of January. They will be voted on by this convention on the 16th of January. Any one that receives sixty-seven votes will then be referred to the Committee on Style and Drafting. Now, that may well be at midnight on the 16th of January.

The next amendment that comes to my attention is that not later than 12 noon on the 17th of January, the Committee on Style and Drafting will report back each such proposal to this convention. Now, I'm on the Committee on Style and Drafting. Now, let me tell you just what that does. If that's what you want to do, so be it. That's a fourteen man committee, eight members of which constitute a quorum and five members of which constitute a majority of a quorum. That means that it is possible for five members of that committee, and I don't say anybody would do this deliberately or willfully or maliciously, but it places the fate of those proposals in the hands of as little as five men, to rewrite under the guise of Style and Drafting, in any fashion they see fit. Then it gives this convention...it gives this convention about a day and a half to straighten all that out. Now, if that isn't the most dangerous possible system that you could devise on a matter of this importance, I don't know how you'd go about devising one that had more quicksand in it. We sat down here for a week, as I recall, and debated the rules of this convention. Now, in the last minute, we are going to throw all of the collective wisdom of this convention, with respect to the procedures by which proposals are adopted, down the drain, and in a mad stampede we're going to come in here and substitute a system that to me is so replete with dangers that it just borders on the verge of being absolutely ridiculous. Without intending to insult anybody, I just don't see how any intelligent person could come up with any such of a Rube Goldberg proposition.

I urge the defeat of this amendment.

Personal Privilege

MR. JACK

Mr. Chairman and members, I want to read you a little appropriate saying that my daughter sent me. It fits in line with this. As she said, "Towards the closing days, all of you, including you, have talked enough and you all ought to just vote on things." Now, here's what this said, and it's very appropriate. Two hours is really too much under it. I read you:

"Lord, fill my mouth with worthwhile stuff, and shut it when I have said enough." That applies to everybody.

Closing

MR. STAGG

Mr. Chairman, I'll be very brief. I don't wish to respond to any questions. I just want to say to those delegates who oppose this amendment that nothing...nothing really new is likely to be presented in the alternative. You've heard these opposing viewpoints discussed, some of them to the point of exhaustion. If the proponents lost, they found a way to bring it back to the floor time and time again. We are asking, by this amendment, that the people be given the privilege of considering some alternatives if the convention in its wisdom produces them. I do wish, please, to urge you to vote for this amendment.

115th Days Proceedings—January 11, 1974

[Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted:
70-43. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

I have amendments sent up about the same time by both Mr. Flory and Mr. Kean. You gentlemen have a preference as between your amendments? You want to take yours, Mr. Kean?

O.K. It's probably still being passed out because it was an amendment to the amendment, and was held until we saw the disposition of your amendment, Mr. Stagg.

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, line 10, delete Floor Amendment No. 1 proposed by Delegate Stagg (Delegate Staff) and adopted by the convention on January 11, 1974, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"(C) Every proposal setting forth a proposed alternative shall, upon introduction, be immediately referred to the appropriate Substantive Committee and shall be reported by that committee to the floor of the convention not later than January 16, 1974. On that date the convention shall proceed to consider each proposal. Debate on the question on each proposal shall be limited to one hour with the time equally divided between proponents and opponents. Each proposal receiving a favorable vote of sixty-seven delegates shall be referred to the Committee on Style and Drafting. Any proposal failing to receive such a majority vote shall be deemed withdrawn from the files of the convention. In the event the Substantive Committee does not report a proposal on or before January 16, the convention by a majority vote may proceed to consider the proposal to the same extent as if a report had been made. The Committee on Style and Drafting shall not report later than January 17, 1974."

Explanation

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I regret very much that Mr. Stagg did not consent to yield to questions before the last amendment was considered, because the question I wanted to ask him, and it is not entirely clear to me, and from what was said to me by another delegate, indicates to me that perhaps no amendments would be permitted when these alternative proposals would come up for consideration. In other words, the Stagg proposal could be construed, as I see it, to mean that we've got to take it or leave it, and vote on it in that manner, and debate it in two hours and dispose of it. Now, I think that, if that is the intent of it, then we need to go back and take another look at it. If it's not, I still say that we do violence to our long-standing rules of referring matters to the Substantive Committees by the adoption of that amendment.

Now, I have proposed an amendment which I think would enable us to follow our rules, and at the same time get the matter out for floor consideration in the same time sequence and frame that Mr. Stagg proposes with his amendment. My proposal is that we refer it to the appropriate Substantive Committee. That means that those of you who have proposals that you want to have out, have got to get them in as soon as possible so the committee can proceed to take them up. Under those circumstances, have that committee report back to the convention by January 16, which means by the report of the committee's item on the agenda on January 16. We would then proceed to take up those proposals as submitted back to us in the same time and the same sequence as Mr. Stagg would have proposed. Then, at that time, following the same two hours of debate that Mr. Stagg would propose, the matter would then be referred to the Style and Drafting Committee for final consideration and a report back on January 17, if it passed. Now, it seems to me that puts it in the proper context for consideration. It makes it possible for the Substantive Committees to at least have an opportunity to look at it and to give us the benefit of any comments, thoughts, amendments that they might suggest before it comes back to this floor. I respectfully suggest to you that to do it otherwise is to simply deal with alternative proposals on a most arbitrary and unreasonable basis, contrary to what has been the deliberative process of this convention. Perhaps we should have taken this matter up a month ago, but we didn't. But, I don't think under the circumstances that the convention ought to be placed in a position of not giving fair consideration to these proposals simply because the governor waited until yesterday to come before us, and the members of the committee now come out at the last minute with the means by which we can take up alternative proposals. I sincerely suggest to you that we ought to follow the Substantive procedure out. This amendment giving us an opportunity to do it without delaying in any way the timetable that Mr. Stagg and his committee placed on the consideration of these alternate proposals, as important as they are.

Questions

MR. KELLY

Gordon, am I understanding your amendment correctly that in essence the proposed alternative would be submitted to the convention? It'd be referred to a Substantive Committee. Is that correct?

MR. KEAN

That's right.

MR. KELLY

Then, that committee would have until January 16 to sit there and work on it and amend it and do anything they want to, and then they report it back out onto the floor, possibly, with all of their amendments, then we've got one hour to try and clear up what they've done. Is that correct?

MR. KEAN

The only way I...that's correct. The only way I can find any fault in that system, Mr. Kelly, is that Mr. Stagg's amendment must mean that no amendments would be permitted to any proposal because it's inconceivable to me that you are going to consider amendments in that time, two hours. At least this would give somebody an opportunity to offer some amendments.

MR. JUNEAU

Following Mr. Kelly's question, then you've gone one step further, Mr. Kean, since you've got the amendment process back in it, you've eliminated Mr. Stagg's time of two hours to one hour, isn't that right? So, if you've got amendments on, fifteen or twenty amendments, I've got to do all that in one hour to make it look like the alternate that more than forty people have to sign.

MR. KEAN

If the one hour is in here, it was by mistake. I intended to follow exactly what Mr. Stagg had. I'd be willing to withdraw it and put the two hours in there. But, it concerns me, ladies and gentlemen of this convention. I think my concern has now been borne out by Mr. Kelly's question, that it was anticipated under the Stagg proposal that no amendments would be permitted to any alternative proposal submitted to this convention. I think for that reason, all the more, we need to have the regular process which is suggested by this amendment followed.

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected:
44-68. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Next set of amendments sent up by Delegate Flory.

The amendments read as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, line 10 in Floor Amendment No. 1 proposed by Delegate Stagg and adopted by the convention today, on line 5 of the text of the amendment, immediately after the word and punctuation "proposal." delete the remainder of the line and delete line 6 in its entirety, and on line 7, delete the word and punctuation "equally divided between proponents and opponents".

Explanation

MR. FLORY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, what this amendment does, it takes out the following language: "Debate on the question on each proposal shall be limited to two hours with the time equally divided between the proponents and the opponents." All this does is to remove the time limit of debate. If it gets to the point in this convention, the convention decides that they've heard enough testimony, then they have the right to move the previous question. But, I suggest to you we ought not to tie and limit debate ahead of time on something that we don't know what ramifications is going to be presented. I think this is only a matter of good business with the full realization that we have a provision in the rules to limit debate. We ought to go by that rule rather than setting forth a prescribed limit on debate before we even know what we are going to consider. I ask you to adopt the amendment.

115th Days Proceedings—January 11, 1974

Explanation

Questions

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Flory, under your...under the amendment that we have adopted already, if we wanted to extend it beyond an hour, wouldn't we be able to do that by a vote of the delegation just as easy as we would in suspending the rules under your proposal?

MR. FLORY

No, sir, Senator De Blieux, you're not going to get me in that trap.

Under what you're talking about, if the amendment stands as it is, you have to have a suspension of the rules which requires sixty-seven votes, or two-thirds of those present and voting, whichever is the lesser number. But if you stay within the rules that we have, it only takes a simple majority of those present and voting to limit debate.

MR. FAYARD

Mr. Flory, under your amendment, wouldn't it be more probable that amendments to the proposal could be presented to the convention if you delete the limitation that you're talking about?

MR. FLORY

If you delete the limitation, it's quite possible that the convention could consider amendments. If the amendments were meritorious enough to be considered, the convention could consider them. If they were not, then the convention could move the previous question. Very simple.

MR. KELLY

Gordon, also, isn't it true that if you leave the time limitation in there and it becomes apparent that extra debate or testimony is needed, that the convention could suspend this rule and proceed further?

MR. FLORY

That's quite true. I answered that for Senator De Blieux, Mr. Kelly. The same answer will go to you that it takes a two-thirds vote to suspend the rules, or sixty-seven votes, whichever is the lesser number. As on the other hand, if the convention decides to limit debate under its present rules, it can do so with a simple majority of those present and voting. It's much easier and much more feasible to work it under the present rules rather than setting up a special rule for this particular situation.

MR. CONROY

Mr. Flory, aren't you concerned that there may be a lot of delegates who would feel the same way you earlier expressed, that you would prefer never to vote to limit debate?

MR. FLORY

No, sir, I don't believe. As the time draws nearer toward the end, I think if the reason is that we've heard enough debate... the reason I didn't vote to limit debate, Mr. Conroy, prior to that time, we had months ahead. It was the first time we had considered something on the floor of this convention on that subject matter. I was willing to listen to everything that could be said. There may be a time, as the time draws near towards the nineteenth that you might want to limit debate.

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected: 45-63. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Next set of amendments sent up by Delegate Stagg read as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, delete lines 23 through 28 both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Not later than twelve o'clock noon on January 17, 1974, the Committee on Style and Drafting shall report each proposal referred it to the convention."

MR. STAGG

Mr. Chairman, this is simply a follow-on of the other amendments that have been accepted by the convention. It does place a serious limitation. But serious limitations on time are absolutely necessary. I believe that the provision for forty delegates, which is almost one-third of the total membership of this convention, makes it mandatory that no half-baked proposal be brought to the floor. When those proposals have come to the floor with forty coauthors, and have been adopted by the convention by more than sixty-seven votes, then I think Style and Drafting can work its will on it in the time limitations proposed to it. I do not agree with what was said from this microphone a few minutes ago that this process does not allow floor amendments. That simply is not true. There's not a word in this amendment proposal made from the time we began debate on it, no word in the proposal itself nor in the debate, that says floor amendments may not be offered. That simply isn't true. Mr. Chairman, I do move the adoption of the amendment.

Questions

MR. KEAN

Mr. Stagg, as I understand you, it's your position that the Stagg amendment would permit amendments....

MR. STAGG

Yes, Mr. Kean.

MR. KEAN

....on the proposals as they are offered on the floor.

MR. STAGG

Yes, Mr. Kean.

MR. KEAN

Well, would you have any objection to an amendment to this section which would say that?

MR. STAGG

No, Mr. Kean.

[Amendment adopted: 79-26. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The next set of amendments also sent up by Delegate Stagg reads as follows:

Amendment No. 1. Delete lines 1 and 2 in their entirety.

Explanation

MR. STAGG

...there seems to be no particular reason at this stage of the convention proceedings to place an arbitrary limit, upper limit on the number of alternatives. I don't believe that time would allow much more than two, or three, or perhaps four alternatives. To put six in the rules seems to invite that there be six. I think this convention, in its wisdom, will hold down on the number of alternates, and it's not necessary to put it in the rule. I move to adopt the amendment.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: 69-36. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

MR. POYNTER

We don't have the distribution copies on these yet. It's Mr. Kean's amendment that he mentioned on the mike awhile ago. It's not a lengthy amendment.

Motion

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman, I wonder if we can take about a two minute recess until I get this amendment straightened out. In the meanwhile, I think this amendment is important. What it does or will do is provide that every proposal that is submitted and considered under Subsection (C) is subject to amendment. The reason I offer it, despite Mr. Stagg's comments from the floor, is that I have been told by other persons from the floor that they do not agree with

115th Days Proceedings—January 11, 1974

Mr. Stagg's interpretation. I think under those circumstances, we need to get this matter straight because if we can't offer amendments to this proposal, then we'd better find out about it right now. If that's the intent of the proposal, then we'd better change it. I'd like to ask for a three minute recess to get the amendment straightened out.

Point of Order

MR. STOVALL

Mr. Chairman, could we have a judgment from the Clerk as to whether or not this amendment is necessary? Or would the Chair rule that amendments can be offered to alternative provisions which are...which might be presented under this rule?

MR. HENRY

Well, certainly, Reverend Stovall, there's nothing to prohibit the amendment to any alternative proposition that might be offered. But, it doesn't hurt...it won't hurt anything to put it in, in my judgment.

MR. STOVALL

Well, it won't...Mr. Kean, if this is the official ruling of the Chair, I simply don't see the necessity of the amendment. I would suggest that Mr. Kean accept the judgement of the Chair in this.

MR. HENRY

Mr. Champagne, why do you rise?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Mr. Chairman, I don't think we've reached a point in history when a three minute request will be denied, sir. I consider this, in other words, a steamroller tactic. I appreciate a three minute recess, and I beg of you to grant it to the man as he asked for it.

MR. HENRY

I'm not refusing the three minute recess. I was just trying to get people like you and Reverend Stovall quieted down, Mr. Champagne, because I don't want you to have a heat stroke. We'll stand at ease for two minutes.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendment sent up by Delegate Kean reads as follows:

Amendment No. 1. In Floor Amendment No. 1, and just for clarity, to make sure, since Mr. Stagg's had a number of amendments here, add the language in Floor Amendment No. 1, affecting page 2, lines 10 through 22, so one is certain which amendment we're talking about, proposed by Delegate Stagg and others, and adopted in the convention today, at the end of the text add the following:

"Every proposal shall be subject to floor amendment."...every proposal shall be subject to floor amendment.

Now, that goes to the revised Paragraph (C) so that the Stagg amendment adding a proposed revised Section (C). You would just add that sentence at the end of that paragraph.

Explanation

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I would not have pursued this particular amendment in light of Mr. Stagg's explanation had it not been for the fact that one of the delegates came to me and said that they did not share Mr. Stagg's view of that particular amendment. I think it's vital under those circumstances that we make it clear that these alternative proposals, when they come to the floor, would be the subject of floor amendment just like other proposals have been when submitted to the floor throughout this entire convention. Now, under the circumstances, in order to clarify the point, I ask your favorable consideration of the amendment.

Questions

MR. ABRAHAM

Gordon, wouldn't this defeat the purpose of the alternate proposal to begin with? Isn't it conceivable that the proposal could be so amended that actually it winds up just like the amendment...the proposal we already have in the constitution so that it no longer becomes an alternate.

MR. KEAN

Well, that might be the case, Mr. Abraham, but I still think that we ought to have the right to offer floor amendments. If it ends up bringing it back to where we started, I guess we simply just wouldn't have an alternative proposal.

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Kean, I don't believe that your amendment is clear in the intent as to how many delegates it would take to introduce an amendment because of the fact that it takes forty to introduce any such alternate proposal. I wanted it to be clear. Did you intend that any one delegate could offer an amendment?

MR. KEAN

That's the way it's been in the past, Mr. Perez, under the rules.

MR. PEREZ

I just wanted that clear so that we would know the intent in the event that this particular amendment passed.

MR. GAUTHIER

Gordon, I, like Mack....

MR. KEAN

I'm having a hard time finding you, Wendell.

MR. GAUTHIER

....if I grew a few inches it would help.

I, like Mack, am having a hard time, to distinguish how we should allow alternatives to be amended when, in essence, we are dealing with two separate views. We're dealing with two conflicting views. It's not like having one proposal and trying to straighten out that proposal. You're dealing with two different views. Yet, the same proposal that we may be working on would at one time have been passed by a large majority, or a majority of the delegates of this convention. Therefore, that same majority could affect the alternate so that you would, in essence, have, not an alternate, but two proposals to vote on. Do you understand what I'm...?

MR. KEAN

I...appreciate that, Wendell. My problem is that...you've either got to do it one of two ways. You've either got to say there will be no amendments, or you've got to say there will be amendments. Under those circumstances, you'll just have to try to work it out.

MR. GAUTHIER

Well, could we possibly clarify that a little bit further in that we may have technical amendments, but not substantive amendments that would change completely the proposal recommended by forty delegates to this convention?

MR. KEAN

Well, I would think that if forty delegates propose it, and a majority of the delegates want to amend it, they ought to have the right to do so. Now the technical amendments are the... that's the only reason that I can see for referring it to Style and Drafting is to permit that committee to make whatever technical amendments might be involved. Now, if we don't allow amendments on the floor, then we're simply saying you take or leave this proposal as it is. I don't think this convention wants to do that.

MR. GAUTHIER

But, Gordon, don't you agree one of the reasons for offering alternates is that you are dealing with a topic matter that is highly controversial and that represents two different views. Is that correct?

MR. KEAN

Well, certainly they're going to do that....

MR. GAUTHIER

All right. But, don't you also follow me when I say by offering amendments to the alternate views you could, in essence, come out with not two different views, but two proposals which represent, possibly, the same view?

MR. KEAN

Well, my position would be, Wendell, that if a majority of the people in this convention end up amending that proposal in such a way that it's no longer an alternative proposal, they simply didn't want it in the first place. I think it's going to be up to those who offer these alternative proposals, to do whatever is necessary to keep it in the proper frame as an alternative proposal. Otherwise, you'd take away the right to amend.

115th Days Proceedings—January 11, 1974

MR. GAUTHIER

But, in this particular case, Gordon, because of the type of substatantive matter, I do believe that the ability to amend substantially would do injustice to the whole idea of offering alternatives.

MR. KEAN

Well, I respect your position. Mine is that you have to have the right to make amendments on the floor to these proposals. That's what I have offered in this amendment to the convention.

MR. ARNETTE

Mr. Kean--over here--the thing that worries me about your particular amendmer: is that you are allowing one person to introduce a change in an alternate which may completely change the entire alternate, that it took forty people to introduce. Do you see this as a problem? In other words, one person is introducing a new alternate by himself now.

MR. KEAN

Well, if that person can introduce the amendment and get a majority of this convention to support it, I think there's nothing wrong with it.

MR. ARNETTE

Well, then, that brings up my next question. Do you foresee the possibility of say, one individual, if he doesn't like a particular alternative, of offering, say, twenty amendments to it and tying up this convention?

MR. KEAN

I think you'd have a right to, under those circumstances, to suspend the rules and deny further amendments just like you do with respect to the right to speak.

MR. ARNETTE

Excuse me, I didn't hear your answer, Mr. Kean.

MR. KEAN

I said if that resulted, and there was an abuse of the right to amend, the convention would have a right, under those circumstances, as I see it, to suspend the rules and limit the number or the length of the amendments just like we do with respect to the right to speak.

MR. ARNETTE

Now, Mr. Kean, my final question....

MR. KEAN

In other words, we've got rules that if we....

Further Discussion

MR. WEISS

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, a while ago I argued against the procedural death of the governor's suggestions. I would now to argue now for the procedural safeguards in this convention. I think that the last floor amendment is an example of reason being lost and a rationality prevailing or as one of the delegates referred to this as "railroading." Let me read to you the resolution....the floor amendment that you wiped out on arguments that are beyond reason, "No more than six alternative provisions shall be placed on the ballot," you deleted this. The argument for this was that there's only going to be one or two. Now, I'm no attorney but I can read this and it said, "No more than six," so why did we have to vote on it in the first place? I urge you to support Delegate Kean's amendment. I think that every proposal should be subject to floor amendments; we've abided by that throughout the convention; I think we should continue. Now, let's listen to some of the arguments that disturb you and disturb me if it's to be overdone. The rules can be suspended. If the extension of...if the two hours is insufficient to discuss the matter, the convention can extend this for further time. The argument that the proposal may be amended to equal the article in the present constitution is certainly a good one. If a majority of the delegates wish it that way, then the result will be there will be no alternate provision as recommended. Now, let's argue these as they come about. But, let's give ourselves some procedural safeguards. I ask that you do adopt the Kean amendment that "Every proposal shall be subject to floor amendment."

Questions

MR. STINSON

Dr. Weiss, in view of the procedure we've followed during this long year; don't you think everyone should be heard and everyone should be able to offer their alternatives?

MR. WEISS

I think everyone has been heard; our Chairman has been excellent. I don't think it's his intent to squash anyone. But this amendment, if not accepted, will be automatically squashing the delegates of this convention as to their expression, or the governor's, or whoever's proposal may come up.

MR. STINSON

The last week we are coming up and taking a radical departure from what has been the procedure in the past.

MR. WEISS

Sir?

MR. STINSON

I said this last week we're coming up and changing and trying to cut off debate. I don't have an alternative, but if anyone did, I think they should have the right; don't you?

MR. WEISS

I think you're right. I think this body has exhibited intelligence enough to go on with its deliberations and complete this document as it was instructed to do. I have the faith and confidence that the majority of these delegates will see that it's completed.

Further Discussion

MR. GAUTHIER

Mr. Chairman and members of the convention, I know at this time it's hard to command any attention, but I can assure you I'm going to give it all out effort and I wish you would bear with me for just a few seconds. I guess we just as soon stop playing this little cat and mouse game and lay it on the line. Probably the one subject matter that is demanding an alternative more than any other in this convention is that on education. Something I feel that I'm not a professional in. Something I'm sure you feel that you're not a professional in. I do feel this, though, that the educators in this state could not get together; they could not come to this convention with one view. The committee proposal they submitted to us came here very divided and since this time this convention has been divided. I submit to you that they did not do their jobs. I submit to you that it would behoove us to say, "These are the two proposals that the education people gave to us, the people who are professional educators in this state. These are the alternatives. Now, you, the public, decide which one you want." Don't let this convention go down because you were forced to decide with going on one proposal because the professional educators in this state could not get together and come to a compromise. Now, we're talking about amending alternatives. I find myself, Mr. Leithman, in a strange paradox when I stand before you and I recommend that you do not allow a proposal or an alternative to be amended because isn't this the democratic process? But, what are we dealing with when we deal with alternatives? We're not dealing with a compromise. We're not dealing with a proposal that by the amendment process was worked out to conform to the group. We are dealing with two conflicting views. If you allow it to be amended, in essence you can come away with two proposals but not an alternative. We would have two proposals on the ballot all right, an (A) and a (B), or a (C) and a (D), or whatever it may be. But, it may not convey the different views that have been brought to us--again now--that have been brought to us by the professional educators in this state. Let me say this here and now, that I have the utmost respect for Robert Aertker, Ralph Cowen, Jimmy Morris who have done a terrific job. But, I also very much respect Kenny Leithman, Eloise Corne, Pat Juneau; they have also done a very worthwhile job. This is the one area where the professionals have not been able to compromise; they have not been able to get together and it's the one area that you and I know that the citizenry of this state reacted to and said, "We've got to have some change. We've got to do something to this thing, give us another point of view." Don't allow alternates to be amended because I say now if you do so, you will not have two views but rather similar views. It takes forty signatures to bring an alternate to this convention. Now, someone up here before said, "Don't do this because in the past we've always allowed delegates to introduce amendments."

The difference--and please if I may have your attention, Woody--the difference, and there is a substantial difference, is that an alternate will have forty signatures on it; it's not a committee proposal; it's not a delegate proposal, therefore, the amending process should be different. Now, to allow substatantive amendments that could do injustice to the entire alternative would be, in essence, to allow no alternatives. I admit that we should possibly seek a way to make those corrections that need to be done. But, to allow carte blanche amendments to be proposed by one delegate --and now remember we'll be working under a two hour time limit--we could see amendment after amendment come out that would be proposed by one delegate and yet you require forty delegates to bring this alternative to you. I say to you if you allow this amendment process to go carte blanche on alternatives you will, in essence, have destroyed the concept of alternatives. I urge you to please, please defeat this amendment. Thank you very much.

Further Discussion

MR. JUNEAU

Mr. Chairman, and fellow delegates, you know in the course of the debate we've had in the past fifteen, twenty, or thirty minutes I heard the statement made that the train was rolling through the convention. Well, I don't know if it's the same one that came through here three months ago or not. But, let's talk about fair play. I'm willing to play fair in consistence with Mr. Kean's amendment. I think the intent is not to cut off debate nor have we ever attempted to cut off debate as debate was cut off, as you will recall, on the Education Article when they had the votes to shove it down when they...the proposal you now have before you. I oppose this particular amendment not to cut off debates. I oppose it because it does not mandate that we have the same number of signatures as you want to mandate to file the amendment. So, all I'm telling you is I think that the appropriate amendment would be if you take forty signatures to sign it, to file it, then you ought to have forty signatures to file an amendment. I can assure you that shouldn't be very difficult to do, but I think it is consistent and for that reason I would oppose this amendment and would support an amendment which could be, by anyone here filed, to put in that additional requirement which I think is fair play and keeping it consistent.

Questions

MR. PEREZ

I didn't quite understand your comments. Do you mean you would have to have forty people on the amendment under your proposal?

MR. JUNEAU

Well, not my proposal. I said I would vote for something like that, Mr. Perez, yes, sir, which is consistent with asking for the original forty signatures.

MR. FLORY

Mr. Juneau, how many signatures did we have to have to introduce a committee proposal?

MR. JUNEAU

It's my understanding it's forty; am I correct?

MR. FLORY

No, I said a committee proposal at the outset of this convention.

MR. JUNEAU

One.

MR. FLORY

Not a committee proposal, you had to have a majority of the committee.

MR. JUNEAU

Oh, excuse me, I misunderstood you, with committee that's right.

MR. FLORY

All right. How many did it take to amend that on the floor? How many signatures?

MR. JUNEAU

One. I don't know of anything that we had on the floor of this convention, the rule which we just previously adopted which required forty. I'm just asking what I think it to be fair play.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: 59-47. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Yes. I have an amendment by Mr. Avant.
Amendment reads as follows:
On page 3, line 1, insert the following:

"F. No alternative proposal shall be considered by the convention until all other business has been disposed of by the convention."

Explanation

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this amendment I respectfully submit to you is a necessary amendment. As I look at this proposal with the amendments that have been placed upon it, on January 16th, the convention will turn aside from all of its other business, whether that business has been completed or not, and will begin to debate on these alternative proposals. The Committee on Style and Drafting is mandated to not later than noon on the seventeenth of January to report those proposals back to the convention. As I have said many, many times before from this podium, I am just not the kind of a person that believes in putting myself in a straight jacket or putting this convention in a straight jacket. Now, we have much unfinished business in this convention, just how much I don't know, but I know that there's a considerable volume of work that remains to be done by the convention...

I'm going to read it again, Mr. Chairman, with your permission and start over. This amendment adds a provision to this resolution which I'll read to you, "No alternative proposal shall be considered by the convention until all other business has been disposed of by the convention." Now, as I've said before, I think that is an absolutely essential amendment that must go in this resolution and I'll tell you why. If you will look at this resolution as it has been amended, it says that on the sixteenth day of January regardless of in what position we may find ourselves at that time with respect to the regular affairs and business of this convention, we are going to turn aside from that and consider the debate of these alternative proposals. It also says that after that one day, at not later than twelve noon on the seventeenth of January the Committee on Style and Drafting shall report each of these proposals back to the convention. Now, I know that much work remains to be done on the regular business of this convention. I know that much work remains to be done by the Committee on Style and Drafting. I recall that several delegate proposals and perhaps some other matters were returned to the calendar and must yet be considered by this convention. I say that it would be a sad day if on the sixteenth of January when we have only three days left to finish the work of this convention, that regardless of that fact, we would turn aside from what we have debated one year and considerable money of the taxpayers of this state toward accomplishing and get into the question of these alternative proposals and let the rest of the document, the main basic document that we devoted our time to, just go by the wayside. I think that would be a very, very bad thing for us to do. I simply ask you to adopt this resolution...this amendment to this resolution so that in the eventuality that the sixteenth of January rolls around and we still have work to be done, such as putting this document together in its final form as one constitution, that we will finish that work before we enter this thicket of delegate proposals, of alternative proposals. I'll answer any questions.

Questions

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Avant, if we accept your amendment, wouldn't it be possible for one single soul to frustrate this rule from ever going into action by proposing amendment after amendment after amendment to Style and Drafting by talking at great length on Style and Drafting?

MR. AVANT

Mrs. Zervigon, it would be no more possible than it is now under what you in your wisdom have adopted so far, that same process could be accomplished if people were so inclined to do so, and I think more so than if you adopt this proposal. I pointed that out, if you will recall, earlier when I was up here because I would like to point out--well, I'll say that later when we get to the proposal.

MR. GRAHAM

Mr. Avant, my concern apparently is the same as Mrs. Zervigon's. Wouldn't you say that especially those people who are opposed to alternates per se could bog this convention down so much in little minute detail with Style and Drafting and any other thing that would pertain to all other business that we would run out of time before we would ever get to alternatives?

MR. AVANT

They can do that anyhow and what good is it going to do, Mr. Graham, to have two alternatives or one alternative and an incomplete basic document if people want to do that?

115th Days Proceedings—January 11, 1974

MR. BERGERON

Jack, I read to you language from a Stagg amendment previously adopted by the convention, it's number (C), "All proposals setting forth proposed alternatives shall lie over for convention action on January 16, 1974. On that day there shall be put to the convention the question of the final passage of each such proposal." So, would not, in effect, this amendment completely reverse a decision which we just adopted on the Stagg amendment?

MR. AVANT

Mr. Bergeron, I'm not sure that I understand your question. But, the reason for my amendment is, what if on the sixteenth day of January when we are mandated to take up these alternative propositions and nothing else, we haven't finished the basic job we were sent here to accomplish?

MR. BERGERON

Well, Jack, don't you agree that this decision requires on the sixteenth day of January there shall be put to the convention the question of the final passage of each such proposal? So, in effect, this would put off a decision which we have already made today; am I correct?

MR. AVANT

Would put off?

MR. BERGERON

This would reverse a decision which we have already made today saying that we shall decide on the sixteenth of January all such alternative proposals.

MR. AVANT

Well, I know but those things are going to have to come up on final passage and be debated and as I read it, you will not be considering anything but alternative proposals on that day.

MR. BERGERON

The sixteenth, which has been set out in this amendment.

MR. AVANT

That's right. Where are you going to be if you haven't finished the basic document?

MR. JUNEAU

Mr. Avant, you just said that the only thing we'll take up on the sixteenth is alternates on the ballot; is that what you said?

MR. AVANT

As I read this, it says, "On that day there shall be put to the convention the question of the final passage of such proposals," that's the alternative proposals. Now, you can debate that for two hours. If you've got several of them, it will consume that day.

MR. JUNEAU

All right. Mr. Avant, if we have one proposal and we don't go through a filibuster with amendments and we dispose of it in two hours--two hours--we can go to Style and Drafting or whatever the convention wants to do.

MR. AVANT

How do you know you're going to have but one? You got that already fixed up, Mr. Juneau?

MR. GOLDMAN

Mr. Avant, this is a friendly question; I hope you'll take it in a friendly manner, but would you object to an amendment to your amendment which would delete everything after the word "until" and then just add to it "until January 20, 1974"?

MR. AVANT

No, that....I'm not trying to do that, Mr. Goldman. The sole purpose of my amendment is not to engage in any shenanigans but to just have the convention say that if we are going to consider alternatives, we're going to do it after we finish the job we were basically sent here to do.

Further Discussion

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, today is January 11, 1974. My understanding of the law on January 19, 1974 at twelve o'clock, we are going to shut this business down and then we haven't got another chance to do anything, not one single thing with this constitution. I had spoken to you and I'm glad Mr. Avant came up with this amendment. I had spoken to a number of you about this particular provision as to how to handle it. I didn't know that we can do it by amendment, I'm certainly glad that he did. Let me quote you something from what the governor said yesterday and let me give you my own opinion about where I and you as a convention, as individuals, as public officials, as prospective public officials, and just citizens of this state who's been working one year in this convention hall, one year. I'm just....but at the same time nothing you do here is going to hurt you as much as being a signature to a document that goes down in dismal defeat. It is going to haunt you for the rest of your political life; if you have been appointed to a three million dollar venture looking for the golden fleece--I don't know what that means--after you have spent a year of your time and three million dollars of the taxpayers' money, if it gets badly defeated at the polls. I take strong issue and strong disagreement with that, just like I take strong issue with a lot of things that were said here yesterday. But, I'll tell you what can hurt Sammy Nunez or you in this convention more than anything else that come January 19 at twelve o'clock if we don't have a document to submit to the people of this state. I'm not sure there's a lot of people that don't want us to be in that exact position, I'm not sure at all. You think about it a minute, you think about it. We've been handling ten different proposals of things we have debated for over one year in this convention and I think we've come to some good, good, good considerations, that we have made some good decisions. I'm ready to support what we have made. I'll go one further than that; I'm ready to give him an alternate and I'm ready to give some considerations because I think we need the governor to pass this document. But, I don't know whether I'm going to take the chance that on January 19 at twelve o'clock we'll still be debating whether education should have an alternate, whether property tax should have an alternate, whether Revenue, Finance and Taxation Article on the income tax provision should have an alternate, or whether we are going to take what we have. I don't know, and I don't think you do. Now, if you want to take a chance and start debating alternatives, and I think we are getting pretty close to where it looks like that's what this convention wants to do. Well, possibly the amendments that have been passed have given us some protection. But, you talk to Judge Tate and the people working on Style and Drafting; we've debated almost three or four hours on this particular provision already, just on whether we are going to have alternates or not; we are still talking about a rule change. We haven't made any definite conclusions yet. I'm telling you we have got a lot of work to do here. I'm ready to sit here from now and twenty-four hours a day and doing it. I believe that the worst, and contrary to what the governor said, the worst single thing that can happen to me and happen to you too is that we're not ready to give to the people of this state a document. If they beat it, then it's their business. If he wants to be against it, it's his business. But, I've worked here for one year just like you have and I think as conscientious as anyone of you have. We're running short of time. It takes us hours to....our procedures are established and it takes us hours upon hours upon hours to come to some decision. I don't think we should look at this amendment lightly. I think it's a good, good amendment. I think it gives us something to put our hide on, after all you're here, almost seventy-five or eighty percent of you are elected by the people to do a job. Now, if you want to go home, I think it would be a disastrous thing for us individually, collectively as a state and I think a lot of people would sit on the outside and gloat over it. They've failed. We told you they were going to fail. They have wasted three million dollars of the taxpayers' money. I don't want to do that. I can not afford to do that if I want to run for public office again.

....and, I would ask you to consider very, very seriously--very seriously. Mr. Chairman, if they want to give me time to answer questions, I'll answer anything anybody wants to ask.

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered.]

Closing

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I just want to say this, you read the Stagg amendments--it's on page 2 and in lieu of lines 10 through 22--it says "debate on the question of each proposal shall be limited to two hours," each proposal will take two hours. Now, if you are convinced that there's only going to be one proposal, as Mr. Juneau suggests, then I think you better take another look at it because I think you are going to be in for a great surprise.

[Amendment rejected: 39-72. Motion to reconsider tabled. Motion to limit debate on the resolution to five minutes adopted without objection.]

Further Discussion

MR. MCDANIEL

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, most of you know that during this year I have used my time here very sparingly. Most of you in this convention hall know my position on alternatives. I am against the rule on alternatives; I am against any alternatives in any fashion or form. But, I do think that I need an opportunity, or I should have the opportunity to express myself in that if this time had been divided by a hundred and thirty-two, I'd have a lot of credit coming. We've hammered out this constitution. What we've done up until this time I can support. I don't agree with it all. But, collectively, we, by compromise, by careful consideration we have hammered out a document that has been compromised and worked and represents a collective effort of all hundred and thirty-two whether we want to admit it or not. If we have made glaring errors, there is a provision under the rules that are already adopted. We have not laid it on the table. I'm not an authority at a lot of this, but we have the machinery to do it. We don't need to get into this. Looking at it as a practical matter, I don't want a bunch of side fights on a lot of issues here while we're trying to pass this constitution. A lot of reference has been made to apathy on the part of the public. I think this is a plus for our side. Once the debate is over, once we have collectively come to a decision, then we can go and sell it. I would like to see the governor on our side, but I maintain the capability is on this floor today for the success or failure of this constitution. I hope it's where I can support it in my weekly columns. I came within a very, very, close margin last week of formally endorsing it, but better judgment told me I'd better just wait. I think you can look at any of these articles that we have approved from the Legislative, Executive, Judiciary, or whatnot. Why, you take the Bill of Rights. Twenty-eight of us even voted against the entire article. This is a substantial group. I can accept it even though I voted against it. When you look at it in relation to the total article and the good that's in it, we really have an alternative built in already. What this group has collectively done in this year with the benefit of research, with staff, with study, with testimony, and blending of ideas from the northern part of this state to the southern, against the 1921 Constitution, that is...we all are in general agreement on is outdated and doesn't meet our needs. Why you take here in this case of alternatives in my committee on Revenue and Taxation. It took us six months--six months, mind you--to agree to discuss the ad valorem issue. Yet, here in a few hours we're going to come and come up with an alternative. I just don't think it can be done. If there are mistakes here, I think that with the machinery we have, they can be hammered out. We can give everybody an opportunity to have his last say. What I'm trying to say, as one delegate, never been involved in public office of this type before, let's complete our work; let's move on. The main alternative is the '21 Constitution or what we've done up to now. Thank you.

[Previous Question ordered on the resolution. Quorum Call: 112 delegates present and a quorum. Resolution adopted without objection. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Recess

[Quorum Call: 82 delegates present and a quorum.]

Motion

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, I've got a matter which I was going to, for some time, request be reconsidered by the convention, and I don't know what the time schedule is today--whether it would permit it or not--I'm simply...

MR. HENRY

You're talking about...

MR. BURSON

The counaer and the grand jury proposal.

MR. HENRY

You propose to take that up now?

MR. BURSON

I would like to if it be acceptable with...

[Motion to suspend the rules to discharge Committee Proposal No. 21 from the Committee on Style and Drafting adopted: 74-10. Motion to reconsider Committee Proposal No. 21.]

Explanation

MR. BURSON

Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I have made an effort to talk to every delegate in the convention personally about the matter I wish to ask you to reconsider, which is Section 35(B) of the Judiciary Proposal which relates to the proposition that a person testifying at any stage in grand jury proceedings shall have the right to the advice of counsel while testifying. I'm sure there are a few of you that I have not talked to. In fact, I know there are, but I've tried to talk to most of you. When we completed the Judiciary Proposal and the Bill of Rights, I felt it would be inappropriate of me to conclude on my own that this particular provision would cause the difficulties that I thought it would. So, I requested counsel from every district attorney in this state, and thirty-two of the thirty-four said that in their opinion this measure would do more harm than good. Mark me well; I'm not saying that the good intentions of the original proponents of this measure were not valid. I'm not saying that there never have been abuses of the grand jury, although in my own personal opinion I think these abuses have occurred more often in the federal grand jury procedure than they have in the state. What I am saying is simply this, that this would do more harm, far more harm than it could ever do good because, for instance, in parishes the size of mine, with ninety thousand people and fifty lawyers, it would simply be a practical impossibility to provide counsel for each and every witness we call before the grand jury when we may call as many as a hundred and fifty witnesses in a day. You cannot say that something is a right unless you give it to everybody. You can't just give it to those who can afford to pay for counsel. We don't do that at any other stage of the criminal law. We use the grand jury in state proceedings more often to kill bad charges, charges that were made out of spite, than we do to investigate. I'm here to tell you that if we impose upon the state grand jury system the absolute requirement of counsel that we will be to all practical effect, eliminating its use for that good purpose, for that purpose which helps the defendant and will be limiting its use only to those that we have absolutely mandated in this constitution, such as a capital crime. I think that would be a bad thing, and it would be a bad thing for criminal defendants. I would remind you also that when you create a vacuum in law, it's got to be filled. The governor mentioned this yesterday. I'm glad that he did. I'm glad that he did mention this proposal because I think it's in the best interest of the people of all the state if you allow me to reopen this to present an amendment which would leave this to the legislature and the Code of Criminal Procedure because we researched this matter, and the staff could find only one mention of it, and that was in the Code of Criminal Procedure of the State of Washington. I'll answer any questions.

Questions

MR. CHATELAIN

Delegate Burson, is this the same amendment or the same thought that you discussed with me some one week ago, when myself and many other delegates joined with you on this thought?

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chatelain, it is not only the same thought; it is the identical language. The language in the amendment that has been passed out, sponsored by Henry, Gravel, Pugh, Graham, Alphonse Jackson, and myself, is the identical language I discussed with you and I had that before the governor's speech, I had more than forty coauthors on it.

MR. CHATELAIN

Is it fair to say in our discussion over one week ago that I who voted for this in the first place, realized my mistake and considered to reconsider at that time? Is that correct, sir?

MR. BURSON

Yes, sir. I might mention that I made the same mistake, so you're not by yourself.

MR. BURNS

Mr. Burson, isn't...doesn't it very often happen--I know it used to happen--that a district attorney, where they have a family quarrel between two big local families and he doesn't want to take either side, that he'll put the whole matter before the grand jury, and each side, each family may have ten witnesses apiece. In a situation like that every witness may demand an attorney. There'd be twenty attorneys there representing witnesses in a little two-bit misdemeanor case. Isn't that right?

115th Days Proceedings—January 11, 1974

MR. BURSON
Yes, sir. That's correct.

MR. CHAMPAGNE
Is it correct that your intention to open this section is for this one specific purpose?

MR. BURSON
That one limited, specific purpose, yes, sir.

MR. JENKINS
Mr. Burson, I know that we have included in this constitution a number of protections for those accused of criminal offenses, and that some of our district attorneys in the state have been concerned about the extent of that protection. Do you feel that if this change is made, on the basis of your discussions with the members of their association and the individual district attorneys that they will be able to support and enthusiastically defend the aspects of this constitution that deal with criminal justice and district attorneys?

MR. BURSON
In every case and every person I've talked to, I've been told that, and in fact, your district attorney here has authorized me to say that he would unquestionably support this document, if we can make...

Point of Information

MR. DENNIS
I'd like to know the exact extent of Mr. Burson's motion. Is his motion solely to take from the calendar for the purpose of offering amendment to Section 35?

MR. BURSON
Yes, sir.

MR. DENNIS
Of the article?

MR. HENRY
When we get there, that's what I appreciate and understand his motion will be, but now...there's the motion to reconsider the adoption of that committee proposal which we have to dispose of before we can ever get in that posture, Judge.

MR. DENNIS
Well, then, could I ask him a question?

MR. HENRY
Yes, sir.

MR. DENNIS
Is this the only section that you are going to ask that be reconsidered, when you get to that point?

MR. BURSON
Absolutely, Judge. The only reason I'm discussing it at this time is so that the convention will be fully aware of my intention, and as I understand it, the motion to call from the table is to suspend the rules to reconsider the Section 35 is not a debatable motion. Therefore, I have to explain it now, or I don't get to explain it.

MR. DENNIS
Well, I appreciate your explanation. I just wanted to make that clear.

Point of Information

MR. TAPPER
Really, it's for a point of information, Mr. Chairman. If Mr. Burson's motion carries, then I assume that the whole Judiciary Article would then be opened.

MR. HENRY
Well, no, sir. It won't. Now, if Mr. Burson's motion to reconsider is adopted, then his next motion would be to call from the table the motion to reconsider the vote by which Section 31...

35 was adopted, and then Section 35 would be all that we'd be talking about right then. A similar motion would have to be made to get into any other of the sections in that proposal.

MR. TAPPER
Well, Mr. Chairman, wouldn't you first have to call the proposal from the Chair before...from the table before you can consider a section within the proposal?

MR. HENRY
No, sir, because the proposal has never been tabled, the motion to reconsider. You see, we never acted on the motion to reconsider, on any of these proposals, if you recall, just for this specific purpose, in the event we did need to get back in to do something to one of the sections.

Point of Information

MR. TAPPER
One other question, or point of information, Mr. Chairman. How many votes would it then take after, if assuming that this motion passes, how many votes would it take to call that section off the table?

MR. HENRY
Sixty-seven, or two-thirds of those present and voting, whichever is lesser.

Further Discussion

MR. STINSON
Fellow members, I'm sure in view of a few of the past votes that I'm shouting in the dark, but I like to shout in the dark even if I'm by myself. Any time one group, especially the district attorneys, that they think they are so smart and so strong that they can come in here and say, "If you don't change one thing, then we're going to beat the constitution." Well, I say they should have written the constitution to start with instead of us here laboring for one year. Now, you get up here and talk about having a lawyer for a two-bit case. It may be a two-bit case, but if someone jumps in there and is questioned by the district attorney, and he can have two or three assistants with him, and some poor person that's not educated can, through error, make a false statement, it won't be a two-bit case as far as he's concerned; he's going to be sent to the penitentiary for lying before the grand jury. One person, now, if he doesn't testify the way they want him to, and can be tied up and confused, and unintentionally tell a falsehood, he can be prosecuted. It doesn't say he has to have a lawyer; it says he has one if he wants one, and he can afford it, or can get one. They used a two-bit case, but there are a lot of cases that are not two-bit cases, and two-bit cases shouldn't be put before the grand jury. Now, we came up here, and I don't know, but I'm advised there were ten votes against it, including Mr. Burson's, and he's an educated, smart person, but he didn't understand it, and we're going to still take some person who's not educated before a grand jury, and possibly send him to the penitentiary because he couldn't get advice when he needed it. You have to go before the grand jury. If you refuse to testify, they can send you away. But, we're going to take these people, we're supposed to be protecting everybody with a Bill of Rights, and we're going to take this out, that only ten people opposed, and that wasn't including Mr. Burson; he voted for it. Now, he comes up at this late date and says he made a mistake. We've got to change it; if we don't, the district attorneys are going to defeat the constitution. Well, I don't appreciate a threat like that from the district attorneys, or the governor or anyone else. Just because he couldn't win what he wanted, he's going to quit playing ball, and go against it. Now, if we're going to give in to threats like that--I personally don't care about this--but it's the principle of it, and the fact that we're supposed to protect these little people. If we're going to come up here this last week and after voting only ten against it, and say because the district attorneys threatened us, we're going to have to give in and bow down. Well, there's going to be one "no" vote up there when this comes up, I can assure you. If you think the legislature is going to pass this, well, you're just whistling in the dark. I've seen the district attorneys control the legislature so it is pathetic. We are considered as a nonpolitical group because we are not going to run for reelection, but the representatives and senators do. This will never stand a snowball in heck if it's left up to the legislature. What's wrong with letting someone have a lawyer to advise him as to what he should testify? I think we are taking sway a right, and we are giving in to pressure from the district attorneys. If we've got to depend on the passage of this constitution by the district attorneys or anyone else, I'm sorry that I'm here as a delegate. I wish I had not run, and if I was foolish enough to have won, I wish I had lost. I'm not coming here and let one group say, "If you don't do this, well, we're going to beat it." As far as I'm concerned, they can just take that and do whatever they want to with it. Yes, ma'am.

Questions

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Stinson, do you realize that whatever I do, I'm not doing it because of any special persons? I'm going to ask this just for information. What does a witness--I've never been a witness before a grand jury--what does one testify to when he's before the grand jury? Is he supposed to tell the truth, or does the attorney have to tell him to tell the truth?

MR. STINSON

But, the way they twist the questions around as all lawyers try to do to confuse them if they're on the other side; you don't know whether you're telling the truth or not. Some witnesses don't, and they can prosecute them if they unintentionally do not state a fact that happened the way it did.

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Stinson, don't you think if a person doesn't know whether he's telling the truth or not, he shouldn't be there in the first place?

MR. STINSON

He didn't offer to go there. He was summoned and required to go there, Mrs. Warren. He wasn't there by choice.

Further Discussion

MR. TAPPER

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this has been debated before. I think we debated it quite extensively the first time. We all know what it means. The handwriting is on the wall. I still feel the same way as I did when I asked you to pass this amendment. I do understand the problems that the district attorneys will have with it. However, I still feel that this is necessary. If you will recall just a few weeks ago, the United States Supreme Court has issued an order ordering counsel in grand juries in certain cases throughout these United States. So, I'm asking you not to go along with Mr. Burson. I'm not making a forceful request of you because what I'm telling you is this, that regardless of what we do in this constitution--and Mr. Stinson is correct, it will never be passed in the legislature. Mrs. Warren, if you've never been before a grand jury, I can understand why you don't know why someone would need representation. It may be just to keep you from perjuring yourself, or to keep you from being held in contempt when you don't know whether you should answer a question or not, or whether you have to answer a particular question that might be discriminatory against you, or whether or not you--you may volunteer to go before a grand jury, and if you're not given immunity, then what you say there can be held against you. I don't think this is proper. I think you should be told first before and advised as to your rights before you appear before the grand jury. The passage of this amendment was not an indictment of the district attorneys in this state. It was just for the protection of the individuals who might be innocent that are called before a grand jury. I ask you not to go along with Mr. Burson, but if you do take it out of this constitution, the federal government and the United States' courts are going to do it for us anyway, so I don't think we're going to be hurting anybody. Thank you.

Motion to suspend the rules to call from the table the motion to reconsider Section 35 for the limited purpose of considering the Burson amendment adopted without objection. Motion to reconsider adopted without objection.]

MR. HENRY

Mr. Burson offers up amendments.

Reconsideration

Committee Proposal 21, Section 35

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

I might point out this goes to the final enrollment so that if you have the first enrollment, the lines may not match up.

On page 11, delete lines 24 through 26, both inclusive, in their entirety, being the entirety of Paragraph (B) of Section 35, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"(B) Right to Counsel. The legislature may establish by law, terms and conditions under which a witness may have the right to the advice of counsel while testifying before the grand jury."

Explanation

MR. BURSON

I think I've already explained it. What this will do will allow the legislature to respond to whatever the requirements may be in the future, either of the federal law, as Mr. Tapper pointed out, or simply of the needs of reform in our criminal justice system. I think we all know and we all admit it needs a lot of reform in a lot of ways. But, the legislature can respond to these needs, and we will not freeze in a rule. I might point out; I understand the depth of Mr. Stinson's commitment on this issue, but I did not say, and I hope I was not misinterpreted as saying that the D.A.'s would beat or fight this constitution if this amendment did not pass, 'cause I certainly would never say that. The only thing I will say, and I think this is true, is that the passage of this amendment will help to pass the constitution. I'm convinced of that.

Questions

MR. STINSON

Mr. Burson, when the legislature introduces this, you all will be there fighting it, won't you?

MR. BURSON

Mr. Stinson, of course, whatever the legislature presents will have to be considered on its merits at that time. I can think of a lot of circumstances where it might be justified.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Burson, your amendment doesn't say "Notwithstanding," and then mention the section number of the secrecy section on the grand jury. But, what this is meant to do is to be an exception to the secrecy in the grand jury room, isn't that correct?

MR. BURSON

This is the reason why we're putting this language in here: because it might be susceptible if you didn't say it; that maybe the secrecy would prohibit anyone from going in there. I think it's quite clear with this language that this...they're in the same section. This whole section deals with the grand jury, and this permits the legislature to do whatever it thinks appropriate in this regard.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Burson, you may have already made mention of this. If you did, I didn't hear you. Is there any need to distinguish between the word "witness" and the word "defendant"?

MR. BURSON

Well, I think that in order to answer this question you've got to understand that the law of the State of Louisiana right now, under the case of State vs. Harrell, which is an old case, the defendant in a criminal prosecution, if he's not advised that he's the focus of the interrogation before the grand jury and warned of his rights against self-incrimination, then anything he says in the grand jury can't be used to form an indictment against him or an infirmation except on grounds of perjury or public bribery under an old constitutional section that we have.

MR. CASEY

Well, I guess my question is, then, under your answer, is the defendant going to have...can a defendant be granted a right by the legislatively established terms and conditions; can a defendant have the right to counsel?

MR. BURSON

There's no question if he's a witness before the grand jury. A witness, here, means any witness, if he's a defendant or any other witness.

115th Days Proceedings—January 11, 1974

MR. CASEY

Well, that's what I'm driving at. Under your interpretation, for the record, the term "witness" includes defendants?

vious Question ordered on the Proposal. Proposal passed: 106-2. Motion to reconsider pending.]

MR. BURSON

Yea, sir. I think under present federal requirements the defendant, once he becomes an accused, and under our state law, he's got to be appointed counsel within forty-eight hours, I believe, anyway.

MR. WEISS

Delegate Burson, the floor amendment you propose, would you say it's to the benefit or the detriment of a majority of people of the State of Louisiana?

MR. BURSON

If I didn't think it was to the benefit of the majority of the people of the state, Dr. Weiss, I wouldn't offer it.

MR. AVANT

Jack, I'm just a little bit confused by the question and answer between you and Mr. Casey. But, to me, a defendant is a person who has been charged with a crime. In other words, a prosecution has been instituted, and he is the defendant; the state is the plaintiff.

MR. BURSON

That's right.

MR. AVANT

Under no circumstances could such a person be compelled to go before a grand jury with respect to the offense with which he has already been charged. So, you don't have any problem there, do you?

MR. BURSON

You're absolutely right. That's been the law of this state and of the United States under the self-incrimination provisions which we have. . . also have in this constitution in the Bill of Rights.

MR. AVANT

I just wanted to clarify that in the record.

MR. GIARRUSSO

Jack, I'd just like to clarify something: to be indicted, you don't have to appear before the grand jury. Is that correct?

MR. BURSON

That's correct.

MR. GIARRUSSO

But, it is possible, under the law, that if you are an accused that you can be summoned before the jury?

MR. BURSON

It's possible under federal law, I believe, Chief; but I do not think, as my understanding of state law--and I did quite a bit of research on this--that if you are subpoenaed, then you must be told at that time of your rights about self-incrimination or given some indication that you're more than just a witness: that you are, in fact, possibly a focus of the investigation. Or, if you're not given that warning about self-incrimination, then I don't believe, under the three cases I've read, the district attorney could use whatever you said in a bill.

MR. GIARRUSSO

I'm asking; I don't know. Would it not be better to say that an accused is entitled? This is the one that you are talking about, when he appears before the jury, that's entitled to counsel and not a witness.

MR. BURSON

The problem you get into is you may not know in all cases that he's the accused before he gets called. This is why "witness" gives you more protection, because it's a broader term. It includes everybody.

Motion

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, I move to suspend the rules to consider the proposal in the local. . . general governmental provisions, particularly Section 9 which deals with multi-banking.

MR. HENRY

Well, then what you want to do, first, is move to suspend the rules for the purpose of calling it from the Committee on Style and Drafting. Is that right?

MR. ROY

That's correct.

Point of Order

MR. NEWTON

Mr. Chairman, I believe we suspended the rules to call that Proposal No. 21 from Style and Drafting. Would it be necessary to move to return it to Style and Drafting?

MR. HENRY

No.

MR. POYNTER

That would be automatic, under the rules.

MR. HENRY

It automatically goes when we get through with it, sir.

[Motion to suspend the rules adopted: 83-7. Motion to reconsider Committee Proposal No. 35.]

Explanation

MR. BOLLINGER

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, we sat here yesterday morning and listened to the governor say that unless we made some drastic changes in what we have adopted, the constitution did not have a chance of being adopted by the people. He was right in a lot of the things he said. But, look and listen. How much flack did anyone get on the proposal we adopted on multi-bank holding companies? How much did anybody get? This is the proposal that's going to make every small bank in this state get behind this constitution. It's going to make them work for the adoption of this constitution. If you don't think little banks have an effect, you go to every small rural town and see who kind of controls it. Who says what's good and what's bad in most cases? Who is respected? Now, if we take this out, you're going to disenfranchise all of these small banks. The governor said that the Banking Commission or the group of bankers in Louisiana were split about 60-40, and that might be right. But, I venture to say that every small bank in Louisiana would back this constitution if this provision remains in it. Everybody got up here the day this came up and said, "This is good for the small people. It keeps the personal element in doing banking business." Do you want to see, in ten years, the banks out of New York come up and buy up all the banks in the state, or just have maybe one or two state banks and do away with all the personalization you get now when you go to your bank? Do you want this? Do the people of Louisiana want this? If so, take the provision out.

We have not locked in forever and ever a provision to prohibit multi-bank holding companies. We have just said that if you're going to have them, it's going to take two-thirds votes of the legislature. This is good. But, with a majority vote, it's very possible that the will of the minority is going to rule. Please, vote to leave it like it is. We've debated it well. The governor, for some unforeseeable reason, has said. . . picked this, of all issues, to say it's not. . . shouldn't be in the constitution. Look at the other things we have in the constitution. Just look at some of them. But, yet, we're going to take out the little provision about multi-bank holding companies.

Please vote no on the motion to reconsider and leave the small banks protected so that the people in the rural areas of this state will keep the personal contact they now have.

Further Discussion

MR. ROEMER

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I've been trying to sit at my seat the last hour and watch what's going on. I. . . frankly, I just can't believe it. I guess the longer you live, the more you realize how little you know. Every day I learn something new. Somebody asked me a few minutes ago, "What's going on?" Well, here's what I think what's going on: One little fellow from North Louisiana thinks that what this constitutional convention is going to do is going to go down the governor's checklist one by one and make every absolute change he wants. Now, it's not right. Where was he when we needed him? Now, it's not right. We debated every one of these issues, and I'll debate them with you all over again because some of them, I think, were a mistake, and I lost.

115th Days Proceedings—January 11, 1974

On the specific issue of multi-bank holding companies, it's quite clear to me in the area where I come from that what we did and have done in this convention is in the best interest of the people that I represent--the people that I represent. But, I'm not going to argue against it on the basis of facts. I just want to point out to you my personal opinion that any one man, no matter who he might be or no matter what he might want to become, does not have the right to expect of you that you go down a checklist and make the changes that in his personal opinion you ought to make. No documentation, no facts, no substantiation whatsoever, and he's asking us--or somebody is asking us--in this case, the very proponent of the thing we passed is asking us to wipe it off the books, perhaps with no debate whatsoever. Now, I don't resent Edwin Edwards. I appreciate him; I think he's a fine man and a great governor. But, I do resent not standing up for what I believe, or being asked not to stand up for what I believe. I'm going to tell you what I believe, right or wrong. I believe in you. I believe in the debate we gave it and the effort you put into it. Now, I just think this is dead wrong.

I ask you to let's stop it now. This is not an alternative. This is not something we're going to give the people a choice on. This is something we're just going to wipe off the books altogether. I say let's stop it here; let's stop it now.

Questions

MR. LANIER

Mr. Roemer, for those of us who are like me that happen to think on this particular point that the governor is correct, wouldn't you recommend that we vote our convictions?

MR. ROEMER

Yes, I'd do that. I certainly do. I'm not here to suggest that just because you vote a certain way that you're just following the dictates of the governor. However, I am keenly aware of the mood on the floor in certain segments, as you are, Mr. Lanier. I just don't want you to vote one way or the other without thinking about what you're doing. That's all I'm asking. If you vote against me, that's your right, and you might be right. I'm just asking you to think about it; that's all.

MR. GRIER

Buddy, don't you feel that the two-thirds vote of each house gives the flexibility, here, to change this section in the future as the governor stated yesterday, already?

MR. ROEMER

Yes, Bill. Mr. Roy, who brought this to our attention before this convention, had in his first draft no flexibility whatsoever.

MR. GRIER

Right.

MR. ROEMER

We compromised, here--you and I did. We agreed to the two-thirds rule. I think that gives all the flexibility we need.

MR. GRIER

Right.

Further Discussion

MR. STINSON

Fellow delegates, what I say, I'm not reflecting against anyone. If it reflects against anyone, it's against me, as an individual. I'm ashamed that I am a part of a farce that we've gone through for this last year. It's a shame and a disgrace, and I look with pride up to this week on what we had done. We had debated and we had fought and we had been good winners and good losers. But, now, within the last week, because the governor doesn't like, we're going to become a group of puppets and roll-over and play dead. Now, this is not the first time I have been shocked and disillusioned. I have been shocked and disillusioned for twenty-four years in the legislature, because the same thing has happened there. I felt that we were a different group. I'm not criticizing you. You have your rights, and certainly I respect it in every way. But the idea to come up here on something we debated and fought and it carried. It happened that I prevailed on this, but if I'd have been the loser, I would still be making the same speech. We are not to come up here and be a group of puppets, which we are being made. Just because one man, yesterday--it happened to be the governor--got up here and said he didn't think it was right, and a poll that the paper said was made on the fourth floor, which is in his office, and we're going to come in here and completely reverse ourselves on anything that he wants. If that's so, the governor should have been here and written the constitution and submitted it to the people. We have wasted the money. Are we going to use it as a window dressing or something to say it's the will of the people? But, anything that he picked out at random will come up and we're going to just roll over and play dead and say the governor wants it--the last week of it.

I hope I'll never be ashamed enough of myself to vote for "yes" on something like that.

MR. HENRY

Mr. Leithman, have a seat.

MR. STINSON

Mr. Leithman is referring to a sign that I was given in the legislature when anything like this came up. It was in . . . respecting the French and English, it says, "Kill that snake." I wish I had it today. But, I still say, right or wrong, when it's sent down here from the governor and we're going to play dead and do what he wants. If so, we've been a farce with what we've been doing this year, so far. I'm sorry that I have been against them. I want to say that I'm sorry that I've been part of this. Certainly, after I get through, some of you are going to think I'm reflecting against you and I, but I'm thinking out loud. What my children and the people after them--I can never point out with pride and say, "I helped write the constitution in 1973." When it goes down in history we came up here the last week and one man--even though he's the governor--gets up and says, "Well, that's wrong; you have made a mistake; you've got to change it." Then we're going to come up here and, with about four or five people who vote ridiculously, as I do--because they have a little pride left--going to say, "Yeah, we were wrong; he was right; and we're going to change." Now, we don't know how many are coming, but I'll bet you if it gets through like this, and we play dead, it's going to be quite a few others. The old saying is: "If you don't hang together, you're going to certainly be hung when you get separated." That's what's happened now. I'm not an administration man, and that's what I don't like is steamrolling. I'm sorry that it's happened in this convention, because I felt and hoped that we were independent.

Thank you for my ridiculous remarks that I'm sure most of you think they are.

Further Discussion

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, on this occasion I rise in support of this amendment, not because the governor was here yesterday, because as I told a good friend of mine that I thought in a month or two we'd play a game with the delegates in this convention--something like "Let's see your score." The score would be a result of the whip he would use on us. I hope that mine would be just about as big as anybody else's. But, the reason why I rise in support of this amendment is because when Mr. Roy circulated it among these delegates, many of you asked me my opinion on it. I really felt that it could best be done not in the constitution. But, I urge you to support the amendment for the sole reason that there was many rumors to the effect that many people are going throughout the state buying up banks and would like this to exist. I had the pleasure of reading telegrams from some of these people. But, on yesterday, the governor of this state made a pledge in our presence that he would never support legislation that the banks of this state would not want. I assume when he made that statement he didn't mean the big banks would want. But, I assume and I have, in my estimation, his word that he meant the majority of all the banks of this state. This concerns the banks of the State of Louisiana, and I suggest to you--with that commitment and the fact that I, personally, have never heard of him lying to me on any occasion--that I can urge you to support this amendment. I feel I have a commitment from him that as long as he's governor, he will not advocate or support, and I urged. . . I suggested that would mean he would suppress any move for multi-banking.

115th Days Proceedings—January 11, 1974

Questions

MR. WINCHESTER

Mr. Champagne, you are assuming that the present governor will continue to be governor an indefinite time. . . term?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

No, sir. But, the reason for the amendment, I am told, is because some people thought that possibly he was in favor of this.

MR. WINCHESTER

Mr. Champagne, do you know that I'm not in favor of the amendment? I'm still standing like I did the other day.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Fine.

Further Discussion

MR. WEISS

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I don't think there's any question, for those of you who remember my discussing this, that I never thought this should be in the constitution, anyway. But, I think I should discuss with you some of the statements that the delegates are using now and tell you that I consider this extremely unfair. I would like you to say that although we may not agree with you, you would still defend the right for me to say it. I think that's the position that I would take with Mr. Stinson and other members, here. On the other hand, we heard our governor speak yesterday, and he asked us--I think very reasonably--to consider nine sections for political expediency. I'm a neophyte at this game, and I'm graduating at the end of this week. But, I'm taking his suggestions seriously. In this particular matter, as I say, I have no problem. I'll vote the way I voted before. I'm certainly opposed to it being in the constitution. But, I am astounded at the people, here, who consider personal matters far in excess of those which should be considered for the people of the State of Louisiana. There are far more little people than there are little bankers. I don't think it's fair to make the governor the whipping boy of your dissatisfaction. He has come before you honestly and sincerely and has given you a political opinion and left it for us to decide. Furthermore, I resent very much the statement of delegates here that the governor did not come here. I personally recall, some months ago, going before a committee where he was completely rejected by the committee, where one of the delegates, here, said, "We don't want an Edwards' constitution." He has been rebuffed repeatedly by this body, and it was only recently that we invited him. For weeks I had proposed that he come before this group, but could not get enough support. So, don't blame him for not being here. If you wanted him, why didn't you ask him? When you did ask him, he came. Now, I must say that my short lesson in politics indicates that this last minute, this last week, is very important. If he's not a politician, then give him credit for what he's done, because Senator Rayburn told you this when we started this out in July. He brings these matters up at the end of the game, and this is when the action goes. I think we have given ourselves sufficient procedural safeguards to prevent too much shenanigans. Now, let's go about debating these issues. For those of you who have reconsidered your stand on the banking matter, I congratulate you. I congratulate you not only, perhaps, for political expediency, but because you've reconsidered and decided that this was not a constitutional matter and will vote against it. . .

Questions

MR. JONES

Dr. Weiss, just to put it in proper perspective, the laws are already on the books protecting the small state banks. The latest amendment was in 1948. All that we are asking, or has happened here so far, is for a majority vote of the legislature. They're trying to tie it down to a two-thirds vote of the legislature; is that not correct?

MR. WEISS

I concluded my remarks in opposing the matter, originally, on that basis. This amendment only shows that a two-thirds vote is needed. There are 453 pages of statutory law that are concerned with bank and banking. Why pick out the issue of multi-banking holding companies and the other, unless it's a personal matter for the delegates here, rather than the people of the State of Louisiana?

MR. JONES

Thank you, Doctor.

MR. CHATELAIN

Delegate Weiss, is it not true that there's not anything in the present constitution relative to this?

MR. WEISS

It doesn't even list multi-bank holding companies. It's so new that it's not even on the books. This is newly introduced in a new constitution. That is correct, sir.

MR. CHATELAIN

There's nothing in the present constitution?

MR. WEISS

Absolutely nothing.

MR. CHATELAIN

Thank you.

[Motion to limit debate to five minutes adopted without objection.]

Further Discussion

MR. NEWTON

I don't plan on taking five minutes. I would just like to remind you that a two-thirds vote in the legislature is a two-edged sword. While it might protect these banks now, suppose the national banks got multi-banking and multi-parish banking and all this, and then they got one-third--they just got to have one-third of the legislature to keep the state banks from being able to protect themselves. I urge that you call this thing from the table and that you pass this amendment.

I move the previous question.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I feel that you're entitled to know. . .

I feel that since I was the person who initiated all of this and started it, that you're entitled to some comment from me. I'm not one who, when it comes time to eat crow, would try to pass it on to anyone else. If I have to eat crow, I'll eat it myself. I was very much concerned, and I can state to you right now, that philosophically I abhor the practice or maybe the thought of little banks going under to big banks. The governor came here yesterday and made what I believe a personal commitment. He made the commitment to everyone in here, and he made the commitment to all the bankers in this state. I believe the governor when he makes a commitment of that nature. The other thing that I know is that the people who were very much concerned with this feel, after having heard the governor, after having read his remarks, that they are fully protected and that, unless their association decides that they want some change, that there will be no change. I must, of course, give credence to their views, and I do so. I think that one thing that's proved here--and I'm glad that it was--and that is, that for those who will deal with this matter in the future--and it is more statutory than constitutional material--I thought that it could be rationalized on the basis "well, it's something like civil service and we ought to deal with it very cautiously." I still think it's very serious, but I think that with the reflection of this body politic on the philosophy of the issue: that is, whether you believe in multi-bank holding companies or parish-wide branch banking, that those who serve in the legislature who should deal with this in the future at least have a pretty darn good feeling of what this convention--which represents the views of the people of this state--feel. For that reason, and in view of what I've said, I'm going to vote to delete this from the constitution because in the final analysis--in the final analysis--we have what I consider the best possible constitution in the state of the whole United States. I'm committed to this constitution, and I will compromise even my own personal beliefs about things if I'm not sure that I'm absolutely right. I will compromise those for somebody who's got his hands on the pulse of the people more, particularly when that person is most responsible for us being here by having the guts to have called this constitutional convention. For that reason I'm going to vote to delete it from the constitution.

Questions

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Roy, as the prime author of this amendment, when you placed it in the constitution, did you get any reaction from the small banks throughout this state?

115th Days Proceedings—January 11, 1974

MR. ROY

I spoke with the two people who are most responsible, Mr. Will Whitmore, who's President of the LIAB, and I spoke with Mr. Easterly who's very much concerned with it. Of course, I've spoken with my brother who was very much interested in this matter, and they feel that, with the commitment made by the governor, with the feeling that was shown by the convention, that they would take their chances with the legislature and would not want some type of confrontation with any political group at this particular time.

MR. NUNEZ

You spoke about the pulse of the people. What type of people do you think requested to take this out of the constitution?

MR. ROY

If you're talking about did I get a lot of telegrams, I didn't get any. I only got a couple when I brought it up.

MR. POYNTER

Amendments sent up as follows by Delegates Henry, Gravel, et al. Amendment No. 1. On page 2, delete lines 17 through 26, both inclusive in their entirety.

Mr. Roy, you know you're going to handle this. As I appreciate it, that second amendment is out of order. It would have the effect of changing the future section numbers, but the rules suspension was just to reconsider the one section, and quite frankly, this thing has not even been through final styling of Style and Drafting. I think you could just withdraw that second amendment.

ROLL CALL

[114 delegates present and a quorum.]

PRAYER

MR. BURNS

Our Heavenly Father, Thy greatest of all lawmakers and lawgivers, we ask that Thou would be with us from now until next Saturday, January 19. We pray, Father, that You would give us the power and the courage to complete this constitution in a manner which will not only be acceptable to Thee, and be a credit to the delegates, but last, but not least, be acceptable to the people of the State of Louisiana. We pray that for the next eight days Thou would give us divine guidance that we would put the interest and the welfare of the people of the State of Louisiana before our own personal interests. We ask these things all in Jesus' name and for His sake. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

READING AND ADOPTION OF THE JOURNAL

Personal Privilege

MR. AERTKER

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise this morning to speak to you just a little bit in the way of explanation because I feel that in the last two days, the work of what I consider some conscientious, dedicated folks has been seriously criticized. I thought, perhaps, maybe I might try to shed some light on that entire matter, rather than let you go away from this convention, feeling that we had a bunch of people who didn't know what they were doing on the matter of education in this state.

We had in that committee, as I explained to you previously, spent many, many hours coming up with the proposal that we had. Two days ago, there appeared before this very microphone, the governor of this state, and who implied that we had come up with something that was completely unworkable and unpalatable, and that frankly, I began to question my own judgment in the matter. I did just a little research in the matter. I would like to just read you the minutes of the Education Committee of May 8. Maybe it will give you some enlightenment on why we proceeded in the direction that we did. I'd just like to read those minutes for you for your edification, and maybe for my way of explanation. It says:

"The committee then heard from Governor Edwards. He said that the board for governing education in the state had no business in the constitution. The constitution should be short and concise. However, assuming that it is in the constitution, education at the college level could be best served by a single board. If one board would have the responsibility, the competition would be eliminated and there'd be a better chance for fair play.

If the one concept is not agreeable, then there should be one Board of Regents that would have exclusive power for all universities and colleges in the state, to form policies, to be responsible for the budgets, and take care of long-range planning at college level. Under this board there would be a separate administration board for the LSU system, and a separate board for other colleges and universities. A separate state board, with its membership elected, would continue to exist and operate and plan for, and obtain funding for education in the elementary and high school level."

Now, if you will read Committee Proposal No. 7, you will see that it tracks what was stated as agreeable to Governor Edwards exactly as presented to this convention floor. In fact, the proposal that we presented to this floor actually had more powers into the Board of Regents. If you will again get out Committee Proposal No. 7, you will see that we have designated nineteen powers given to the Board of Regents, and that we have left stripped down to practically no board, or no powers, the LSU Board of Supervisors and the Board of Trustees. As I pointed out to many people in this convention, perhaps the one mistake that our committee made was that perhaps maybe we shouldn't have called the other, lesser board to the day by day management boards, boards, we probably should have called them councils or commissions, etc., and then we wouldn't have had this misrepresentation that has been presented to so many people...presented to so many people.

Yesterday, you heard from this microphone, the statement that the professional educators on the committee could not get together. I state to you that all you have to do is look at the record. There were six professional educators on that committee, and five out of that six have supported it, five out of that six members of that committee have voted every time to go along with the committee recommendation. I think that five out of six does represent pretty well some understanding and some common agreement as to what is good for education in this state.

Unfortunately, there has been misrepresentation about this whole document to many people. Unfortunately, our committee was exposed to people who came with false testimony. We had student groups come before us who had been misinformed about what we were doing as a committee. This is regrettable, and this is something that will have to be overcome. I rise this morning to talk to you, to tell you that this committee on education did not represent a bunch of loose-jointed, brainy people. These people came up with something that they heard, and they understood represented what the people did want. I think that unfortunately, that if we had been given the opportunity to sell our cause to the people of this state, that it could have been done. Perhaps, maybe, it still will be done, hopefully. I make these statements to you because I recognize that the die is cast and that we will be moving into another direction. But, I do hope that what other direction we do move in to, that we do remember some of the points that I have pointed out to you today, and that we move in a direction that is compatible, and something that the majority of the people of this state can live with as far as the cause of education is concerned. Hopefully, I await the judgment of this convention in that direction.

PROPOSALS ON THE CALENDAR FOR APPROVAL OF FINAL STYLING

[Motion to take Committee Proposal No. 35 out of its regular order adopted without objection.]

Committee Proposal No. 35

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, we are presenting the report of Style and Drafting concurred in by, insofar as the language is concerned, by the Bill of Rights and Elections Committee on Committee Proposal No. 35. Now, that is the little bunch of material that you have with a paper clip in the middle that says Committee Proposal No. 35, 1-11-73. This is Article II, Distribution of Powers, and Article XII, General Powers. You will have only the green page and the yellow amendments.

The first amendment, Mr. Chairman, if I may...

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

Amendment No. 1

MR. TATE

The first amendment of the...the first amendment is to Section 1, it changed "the government of the State of Louisiana" to "of the state" in line with our usage, because it's only this state, into "three separate branches" instead of "three distinct branches"; and it used a colon instead of a double hyphen...instead of a -- whatever that is.

[Amendment No. 1 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 2

MR. TATE

"Except", in Section 2, Amendment 2, we put the exception in the beginning of the language as is done throughout the constitution. Otherwise, no change in language or...

[Amendment No. 2 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 3

MR. TATE

All right. Now, you will see then, ladies and gentlemen, that Article II which will be up at the beginning of the constitution consists of those two articles about Executive, Legislative, and Judicial. Now, Article XII, Section...General Provisions, the Bill of Rights has recommended renumbering this. We did not go along with this simply because this general provision, as we anticipated, there will be a lot of other general provisions transferred from other parts of the constitution, or from those one page articles adopted into this position. So, do not at the present time worry about the particular placement. Because of that, for instance; you'll see in a minute we'll be able to take care of the matter of the amendment yesterday without any major change of numbering.

116th Days Proceedings—January 12, 1974

Amendment No. 3 simply changed the numbering here for reasons unnecessary from 3 to 1.

[Amendment No. 3 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 4

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 4, again, simply changes the numbers.

[Amendment No. 4 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 5

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 5 repeats the oath of office. We thought "I (AB)" and then as you see on line...3 of the 4 oaths as is found in the present constitution, and line 12, just a long space, or with a line. After some discussion, we thought both would be better, read better, look better, and say the same thing if you said "I..." which in legal abbreviation means some words are left out, and go on, and then "upon me as" instead of leaving a blank space and putting in line "as..." meaning the name of the office is left out. Otherwise, there's no change in substance, Mr. Chairman.

[Amendment No. 5 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 6

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 6 is just a change of numbers, Mr. Chairman.

[Amendment No. 6 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 7

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 7 is a change of number. Also, we inserted a comma --wait a minute --after "by law," in order to break up the two independent sentences.

[Amendment No. 7 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 8

MR. TATE

Independent clauses is what I meant... Amendment No. 8, let's see, Amendment No. 8, Mr. Chairman, this is a matter that was deleted yesterday, and Amendment No. 8,-- we just withdraw Amendment No. 8. Will that kill it?

[Amendment No. 8 withdrawn.]

Amendment No. 9

MR. TATE

May I ask one thing, Mr. Chairman, as a parliament thing, when we withdraw the amendment, that means the whole thing passes out of the constitution because the previous amendment took it out of the first enrolled copy. Is that correct?

It's gone.

O.K.

All right. Amendment No. 9 is simply a change of numbering, an insertion of commas in series, in line with the usage throughout the constitution.

Any questions, Mr. Chairman?

[Amendment No. 9 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 10

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 10, Mr. Chairman, aside from changing the numbering, in line with a suggestion from the authors of the amendment, as well as from the Bill of Rights Committee, made "origins" plural because it was thought by them, at least, that despite our rule of singularization, it was a little more accurate to say "origins", that one person could have several origins, I guess.

[Amendment No. 10 adopted without objection.]

PROPOSALS ON THE CALENDAR FOR APPROVAL OF FINAL STYLING

Committee Proposal No. 26

Amendment No. 1

MR. TATE

...Article XI. Revenue and Finance. Committee Proposal No. 26.

In this package, there are three components, three items: the green amendment, the yellow amendment, and then the white formal description of exactly what we are doing. By formally, with reference to the first enrolled copy.

Now, with this introduction, Mr. Chairman...

All right, Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, with regard to Amendment No. 1, aside from adding a title to the Subsection 1 (A), and breaking the long sentence into two sentences, deleting "as such", the...change in the interest of accuracy, because "use value" was added by a floor amendment by Subsection (C) so that the initial statement is not quite accurate.

The initial statement was "property subject to ad valorem taxations shall be listed on the ad valorem rolls at its assessed valuation which shall be a percentage of its fair market value." Subsequently, the floor adopted an amendment that provided also it could be valued on use value. In order to make it perfectly clear, and on the representations of agricultural groups that there might be a--it might seem to be an ambiguity--both committees, at least the Style and Drafting, recommends, and without objection from Revenue and Taxation, adding the words on line 7 and 8 "which, (and adding these words,) except as provided in Paragraph (C)," (that's a use value thing,) "shall be determined at a percentage of its fair market value. It makes no change in substance so we didn't bring it to you as a yellow amendment. But I do think since it's a little additional wording, I should mention it before submitting the amendment for your consideration.

Question

MR. DENNERY

Judge, my question relates to the last sentence. Wouldn't you have to make a similar change there, that the percentage of use value should also be uniform?

MR. TATE

Mr. Dennery, in all frankness, our committees originally thought you could handle the matter by saying, "should be listed at its fair market or use value, and that the percentage of fair market or use value shall be uniform throughout the state."

This was felt by some to be substantive. We think that whatever ambiguity is...settled by the provision in 1 (D) "that shall be determined in accordance with the criteria which shall be established by law, and which shall apply uniformly throughout the state."

But, in view of the representations of some that we might be making a substantive change, which we didn't think we were, we withdrew the...we withdrew that proposal, as proposed amendment, and are approaching it in this manner, sir.

[Amendment No. 1 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 2

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 2 involves--the chief changes were we thought it looks a little better typographically, not to have caps on "the classifications and percentages", and not to have the series of dots following each. In line with these things, when you say "all land", it means "land" will be subject to this percentage. We deleted "all" and we've deleted "all" in front of "all other property". You would either to add "all" in front of "the improvement" or delete all three. It seems to us, to be consistent, and we feel that there is absolutely no change of substance. We omitted a "such" on line 5, "before each such classification", we omitted "such" as unnecessary.

116th Days Proceedings—January 12, 1974

MR. CASEY
Any...Mr. Dennery has a question.

MR. DENNERY
Again, you don't think you have to put the "except as provided" in Paragraph (D) as you did in (A)?

MR. TATE
Well, in this instance, we thought that when we say "the classification of each market value--of each property subject to ad valorem taxation and the percentage of fair market value", you see, I think, possibly, you are right. But this is the only amendment recommended. I don't think it's ambiguous. We just think it's self-explanatory. It's not an inaccurate statement, I don't believe.

[Amendment No. 2 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 3

MR. TATE
Amendment No. 3. You see in line with your structure, we first said that "it shall be assessed at fair market except as provided 1 (C)." Then (D) says how fair market value is classified. Now we come to (C) which is use value. We--you'll see that we think that the sense, there's an unnecessary "lands" in there. You either have to add a "lands" or delete a "lands". We thought it would be better to just say "cultural marsh, horticultural marsh, and timber lands" rather than "horticultural lands, marshlands, and timber lands." So we recommended a delete of "lands"...we used "for tax purposes" instead of "for the purpose of taxation". We thought that when you say "the legislature may make similar provisions," it may read a little better, or may not in your judgment, "may provide similarly for buildings of historic importance."

[Amendment No. 3 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 4

MR. TATE
Amendment No. 4, which was on page 2, delete 9 through 13. In the organization of these amendments, apparently up until now we would have included Amendments 3 and 4 at the same time. Amendment No. 4 is simply to delete the prior language "on bona fide agriculturally, horticultural, etc., lands" that you've just substituted. I'll have to watch that in the future. But, this is just a technical amendment, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

MR. AVANT
Judge Tate, we are on page 3, Section 1 (C)?

MR. TATE
Yea, sir. I'm sorry, we just now passed from page 3, Section 1 (C). Yes, sir. I'm sorry.

MR. AVANT
All right. This is something that apparently slipped by us on the committee. I was wondering if you would, or could, I'm talking to you and the chairman, withdraw this particular amendment for the purpose of resubmitting it so as to add on line 8, on the right hand side, following the word "legislature", ", by law,".

MR. TATE
Mr. Chairman, what does it require? That is exactly...

MR. CASEY
I think what Mr. Avant is asking you is can you change your committee report which I don't think you can do. I don't say we can solve the problem, but that's not the way we can solve the problem.

Motion

MR. AVANT
Well, I guess I would move for a suspension of the rules, then, if that would be right. You see, we have tried, as I understand it, to, you know, when we say legislature, we say "by law" to avoid any question of whether it be by resolution. This is just one we didn't get, apparently.

MR. CASEY
Mr. Avant, just a minute, Judge Tate. I won't say you can't suspend the rules because you can. We were discussing this on yesterday. There's a lot of things you can suspend the rules on. I think we have tried to be extremely cautious not to do that in any case, but to follow a more formal procedure because this may happen to be not controversial, but one of these hours, it's going to be something that you and I won't like.

MR. AVANT
Well, I'm not all hung up about it. I think since we tried to put "by law" everywhere we say the legislature may do something, except when we meant other than by law. I just asked your assistance, Mr. Chairman, so we can get "by law" in here if we want to.

[Motion withdrawn.]

MR. TATE
All right. I move the adoption of Amendment No. 4 which deletes that language from the present constitution which we have just substituted in Amendment No. 3. We may--it's just by nature of a technical amendment. There is an amendment that will come back to put that "by law" in.

[Amendment No. 4 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 5

MR. TATE
Now, Amendment No. 5, we are later going to come back with a caveat amendment to call your attention to an ambiguity which the Revenue Committee agreed should be clarified. But, Amendment No. (D) Amendment No. 5 is simply, with regard to the language in the provision, and we--the general, aside from adding a title, the general change made was to singularize the usage of assessor--each assessor--instead of assessors within his respective parish--respective parish or district--and, since everywhere else when they speak of an existing body they add, "or its successor", we thought the sense of the committee, that "or its successor", or the sense of the convention floor, that you meant the Louisiana Tax Commission. But, if they call it something else in the future, it'd be "or its successor". So, we recommended that adoption.

The last one is just to--we thought the language read a little smoother if we said "which shall apply uniformly throughout the state" instead of "which shall be uniformly applicable throughout the state".

[Amendment No. 5 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 6

MR. TATE
Amendment No. 6 is to Section 1 (E) on page 4 of your green. We thought that the sense would be slightly clarified if we said "the assessor shall be subject to review by the governing authority of the parish, then by the Louisiana Tax Commission, and finally by the courts," we said the parallelism would be more accurate if we said "review first by the parish governing authority". We added the word "first", then by the commission, finally by the court. Then, because of that series, to be sure that it didn't mean just by the courts, only in accordance with the procedures, we recommended adding a comma and saying "all in accordance with procedures" with "procedures established by law."

[Amendment No. 6 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 7

MR. TATE
Section 7 simply eliminated...Amendment No. 7 is to Section 1 (F)

116th Days Proceedings—January 12, 1974

on page 5 of your green, it eliminated "the provisions of" as unnecessary and added a comma "," after section thinking that it showed the natural interruption and the flow of the language.

[Amendment No. 7 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 8

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 8 is by nature of a technical amendment here, it should have been included with Amendment No. 7. But, I'll have to watch this in the future because in some instances there are two amendments together. Amendment No. 8 deleting lines 11 through 13 is the parent provision which is shown on your left as [Section] 1 (G) and it says to delete the language which we just replaced by Amendment No. 7.

[Amendment No. 8 adopted without objection.]

Amendments Nos. 9 and 10

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairmen, again, Amendment Nos. 9 and 10 are really in a series. Amendment No. 10 is going to delete the language which is replaced by Amendment No. 9. All right. So, I move the adoption of [Amendment Nos.] 9 and 10 together.

[Amendments Nos. 9 and 10 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 11

MR. TATE

All right. Amendment No. 11 which is to the homestead exemption on Section 3 (A) and (B) pages 7 through 9 on your green copies. The changes recommended in every case amount to omitting needless commas, added a "shall" in one point to carry out a parallel construction to the previous shall. We, in an effort to make this long, long, long, long one sentence...section which goes on for two pages read a little better and to separate the ideas, we recommended breaking it into these paragraphs and, in general, simply carry out stylistic...standard stylistic practices adding subtitles and breaking it into paragraphs.

Questions

MR. DUVAL

Judge, this is...might be nit-picking, but I guess that's what we are on right now. I noticed in this amendment you refer to "exempt from state, parish, and special ad valorem taxes" in the prior section where we dealt with the amount of state taxation, we didn't use ad valorem taxation and we limited to five and three-quarters mills. Now, if there was an inheritance tax on the property in addition to five and three-quarter property tax, that wouldn't apply would it?

MR. TATE

No, that's why we...no.

MR. DUVAL

I'm just wondering why you said ad valorem taxation, what place is that?

MR. TATE

Well, I think because we were uncertain about special. You see, I think in context it had to be ad valorem taxes. Special taxes, we don't know, and Mr. Lanier will tell you at length how much we don't know what special taxes mean, but in context we knew it had to be ad valorem special taxes.

MR. DUVAL

And, certainly, you only refer to ad valorem taxes in the other sections where you merely have taxation.

MR. TATE

Oh, of course, because it's in the ad valorem taxation thing. The reason we added it here was simply because of some uncertainty and we were unwilling to try to take "special" out here because it's in, but we don't quite know what it means.

[Amendment No. 11 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 12

MR. TATE

On Amendment No. 12 it's the Section 4 (A) on page 10 of your green material. The section numbering was changed to conform with the previous section numbers. You may at line 15 we say, "the following property and no other shall be exempt" because in order to take...put right in the beginning the provision added at the conclusion of this section by the convention floor which was... it was added as a section--let's see if I have it here--and no other Section 3 (H)...in the original floor amendment there was a [Section] 3 (H) added when we finished our entire deliberations; it said (H) "No additional property shall be exempted from taxation". It was easier, it seems to us to be, better to put it right in the beginning and say, "No others shall be exempt from taxation" which would then permit us to delete that section when we later come to it; that is the principle change made. We left out "all" in both instances because public lands means all public lands.

[Amendment No. 12 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 13

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 13 is to Paragraph (B) (1) on page 11. There is minor change. We left out "exclusively" because it must mean "organized and operated exclusively", we put "exclusively" in front of what it was for rather than in front of exclusively organized and operated, meaning the same thing and carrying out the intent a little bit better. I think that's the only change and we singularized "profit corporation." Two, (B) (2) on that page we thought that Mr. Flory...we might sneak one by and we take out that property of a "bona fide labor organization"....

Questions

MR. DE BLIEUX

Judge Tate, I just wondered why...you notice in the...looking at the recommended change following the word "exclusively for religious on line 4, "dedicated places of burial." Wouldn't it have been much better if that particular clause had been placed after the words "educational purposes" on line 7 rather than where it is? Doesn't it seem like it's a little bit out of place hanging up here?

MR. TATE

Senator De Blieux, there is an ambiguity there but it was the definite intent of the Revenue and Tax people that it means...here is how you have to read it...but, it is an ambiguity and we have a floor amendment to somewhat clarify it, now here's the history on that. Dedicated places of burial were under the previous constitution whether they were nonprofit or profit were exempt from ad valorem taxation. The assessors' association called the attention of the Revenue and Tax Commission that there were large, large tracts that might be dedicated but not in use, you know, not sold for bodies.

MR. DE BLIEUX

I'm not speaking about the particular merit; I'm talking about the smoothness of the article because you see you start off and say, "operated exclusively for religious, charitable, health, welfare, fraternal, or educational purposes, or dedicated places of burial, you see.

MR. TATE

Well, Senator De Blieux, I think....

MR. DE BLIEUX

....or/and dedicated....

MR. TATE

I am inclined to believe you are right but the trouble was we were dealing with something that is...here's the way they read it: "operated exclusively for dedicated places of burial purposes, no part of the net earnings inure to any shareholder." Now, I think we could have said "or dedicated" but you see it's no part of the net earnings. It was hard to make modify dedicated places of burial unless you use it as an adjective, you see, it is not grammatically accurate but to move it to somewhere else...you either have to have organizations operating dedicated places of burial, no part of the profit...it's just a difficult concept but after some fooling with it, we just figured we better leave it like it passed the floor because I can see the intent and to express the intent otherwise is going to very...is quite difficult, but we were... the committee did inform us and we have the yellow amendment that there was no intention to subject to ad valorem taxation actual private...actual family plots, plots in which there were bodies, plots that were already sold to individuals. We have a floor... a caveat amendment to call to your attention. There is no question in what you say, it's a great deal accurate but we wrestled with the problem as best we could and the sense of the thing as best carried out if you think of dedicated places of burial as kind of a phrase or adjective phrase sort of modifying dedicated places of burial purposes---that is apparently the meaning as difficult as it is to justify it grammatically.

116th Days Proceedings—January 12, 1974

MR. JENKINS

Judge, you know when this thing was put in there "dedicated places of burial" I was under the, I guess, mistaken belief that all dedicated places of burial regardless of who they were owned by, or so forth, would be exempt. For those of us who had that concept of the thing it would definitely have to be moved out of here; wouldn't it?

MR. TATE

Well, Mr. Jenkins, originally after it passed Style and Drafting and you, yourself, were good enough and another representative to go to the Speaker, the Speaker said to bring it up. We went back and looked at it. We went back to the legislature history and the legislature history is very plain, you see, the difference is if it's in Subsection (C) dedicated place of burial whether they operated for profit or not is exempt. If it's in Paragraph (B) (1), it's got to be a nonprofit operation to be exempt from taxation. If it's in Paragraph (C) where it used to be under the old constitution, whether it's profit making or not it's exempt. It was...I'm sorry to say, I mean, we were seriously concerned in view of the representations of those people that may have been a miscarriage of the intent. But, we followed the legislative history through. The Revenue, Finance and Taxation was adamant that that was its intention; it passed the floor in that way and we just were unable to do anything with regard to it except to have that caveat amendment to carry out the other intention which was, (1) to tax profit-making places of burial up till the time that the plots were sold to somebody but not to tax plots in which bodies are placed on which...but we haven't come to that caveat amendment yet.

MR. JENKINS

One other question. You remember that right after this thing passed I had come to you and asked about it and the initial reaction was you didn't think there would be any problem and then later we realized that there would be. So, if I do come and try to deal with this problem when you get to your caveat, I hope you will understand it's because I was told at that time that this would be the appropriate time to do it.

MR. DUVAL

Judge Tate, there's something that really concerns me in this provision is that I don't know...I'm sure everyone here probably read the book or saw the movie, "The Loved Ones." I just wondered if I dedicated a place of burial to pets, it wouldn't be exempt under here, would it?

MR. TATE

Well, that's a joke, son. You've got to leave the courts something to do.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Duval wants to know if he can get an early opinion from you, Judge, on it.

MR. COMAR

Judge Tate, I recall the discussion on this exemption as far as the burial places are concerned because I worked on it with many people including Senator Rayburn who was probably the most concerned individual. But, I know we are not on the caveat yet, but I believe that that does not express the sentiment of the group as I understood it. In other words, if a church organization owns a place of burial which is wholly dedicated to burial purposes and under this amendment, do you think that it would be exempt?

MR. TATE

Oh, no question about it. Look, this is what it means. "Property owned by a nonprofit corporation or association organized and operated exclusively for religious, dedicated places of burial, no part of the net earnings of which inure to the benefits of any private shareholder," you don't have any private shareholder....

MR. COMAR

Under the proposal as you have drafted I read that. But, do you read that also if we discuss it in the yellow pages?

MR. TATE

Oh, no. When the yellow pages come up that would mean in addition to nonprofit burials that's totally exempt. These others are exempt when for your own loved ones if not for your pets.

MR. COMAR

Fine, thank you very much.

MR. JENKINS

Yes. Judge Tate, as I understand it your caveat would not delete what you are putting in here on the right.

MR. TATE

Oh, no, oh, no, it would add an additional category.

MR. JENKINS

Well, so, in either case you are leaving in this dedicated places of burial as an adjective, that whole phrase as an adjective?

MR. TATE

Yes, Mr. Jenkins, it was the intent of the floor, we could work it out no other way without doing violence to what was the apparent intent of the floor.

[Amendment No. 13 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 14

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 14 is to Section 4 (C) on page 13. This has to do with property that's totally exempt from ad valorem taxation, you know, whether or not it's nonprofit and so on. Now, the changes made were in general we singularized and provided an "however." However, we were not able to...some members...we singularize by "a homestead" but in general the Committee on Revenue and Finance preferred we kept the plural on stocks and bonds and so on obligations, and we went along with them along that idea since they thought they had some views on it. The only other change made, there are very few changes made, you notice. In line with the general approach of styling, instead of having "it provided" we said "however" on line 15.

[Amendment No. 14 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 15

MR. TATE

As you will notice in [Amendment No.] 14 it was self-evident and I didn't call it to your attention, we also enumerated rather than have that long sentence. Section 15 is to 4 (D) on page 15. We generally just eliminated unnecessary "suches" and that's in general what we did. We simplified the language....(D) ending on page 16 if you will see that's, I think, the only changes made were along that line, don't use double prepositions, omitting needless words, voiding hackneyed reference phrases, using a comma to set off a nonrestrictive participial phrase and so on...and paragraph renumbered.

[Amendment No. 15 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 16

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 16, I forgot to call it up at the same time as [Amendment No.] 15. Again, this was to delete the section that you just replaced. On line 5, page 23 through 25 was the "raw materials", etc. exception which is shown on the left hand side of your green sheet...your green collection of Style and Drafting materials on page 15 which we have just replaced by that on the right hand side.

[Amendment No. 16 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 17

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 17 is to Section 4 (E) on page 18 of your green materials. As we did earlier, it added public motor vehicles used on the public highways of this state are exempted from special. We added "ad valorem taxes" because that's the context in which it's used. If you didn't use ad valorem, possibly some people would say it exempted them from other taxes.

116th Days Proceedings—January 12, 1974

[Amendment No. 17 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 18

MR. TATE

All right. The next amendment, No. 18, is to revise stylistically Section 4 (F) on pages 18 and 19 of your green materials. It involves standardization of language and usage and the usual rules we have been following in stylizing in sections up until now.

MR. CASEY

Any questions?
Judge, did you want to consider [Amendment Nos.] 18 and 19 together?

MR. TATE

No, sir, for once you will see [Amendment No.] 19 refers back to something we added way up in Section 1, a section at the beginning.

[Amendment No. 18 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 19

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 19 is to delete the old [Section] 3 (H) which said "no additional property may be exempted from taxation." I believe it's Mr. Denney's amendment because what we did as I earlier explained, the old Section 3 became Section 4. So, in the introduction to the old Section 3, which is now Section 4, we said "and no other" in order to carry out the intent and put it right at the beginning for emphasis of what used to be Section 3 (H) and the deletion having done that, this should be deleted because it's no longer necessary because we said at the beginning of this section instead of at the end.

[Amendment No. 19 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 20

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 20 is to Section 5 on the right hand side of your green materials. In line with the usage we said instead of saying "the provisions of this article," you don't need that to say, "This article shall" it said "in no way shall be construed or applied," shall not be applied means the same thing; "In such a manner" there's one more such, it was a bad such "imposed prior to the effective date of this constitution," in this instance it made no change whether you said adoption or effective and in later sections you will see we found there was a problem and the same change in the latter. In other words, it says in the adoption it's not sure whether you mean on the date of the election or the date it becomes effective, but in this instance it made no difference.

[Amendment No. 20 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 21

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 21 is to Section 6 on pages 21 and 22 of your green materials. We again, on (2) we added "or its successor", on line 7 "Louisiana Tax Commission or its successor" in line with the situation throughout the constitution where we refer in the few instances, thank goodness, that we refer to a nonconstitutional board that could be changed by the legislature, then we will add "or its successors" in case the legislature changes it so it will be an accurate phrase in the years ahead. In general, the remaining changes here are simply the usual stylistic changes we have been making of avoiding hackneyed reference phrases, omitting needless words and so on. Now, this has been checked by Revenue and Finance as well as by ourselves and we found no...there was no...incidentally, in the interest of clarity, for instance, on line 17 in which Sections 1 and 3 of this article are implemented and in line 27 which Sections 1 and 3 of this article are implemented was felt it advisable to add those because that is what they are talking about when this purpose of implementing the provisions of this article. Those are the specific provisions that we are talking about, the reassessment according to fair market or use value. In order to make it crystal clear, that's exactly what you intended, that was the...that specification was recommended to be substituted for the vague thing of implementing the provisions of this article.

[Amendment No. 21 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 22

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 22 is to Section 7 (A) at the top of page 24. Aside from adding a title the Revenue Sharing Fund was put in the active voice instead of the passive voice, in other words,... the fund was put first. "The Revenue Fund is created as a special fund" instead of a special fund "is created that it's known by..." It was thought that the better emphasis should be on what is created instead of saying, generally a special fund is created which shall be called "and so on.

[Amendment No. 22 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 23

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 23 which is Subsection 7 (B) is on page 24 of your green materials. Generally, we just eliminated a "hereby" as unnecessary and had a general reference to the fund instead of repeating "Revenue Sharing Fund" over again.

[Amendment No. 23 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 24

MR. TATE

Now, in the next section, Section 7 (C) we should point out to you that lines 14 to 29 were formally found as part of Section 6 (D) on page 27, onto your left---that part was formally found in that section. By putting it here it is thought that it would be...it's the beginning part of [Section] 6 (D)...excuse me, it's the end part of the original [Section] 6 (D) which is generally to all parishes. We thought it was more logical to put that up in [Section] 6 (C) which is talking about the general formula for all parishes and to leave in (D)...as to (D) the distributing officer requirement as a separate section. The other changes, Mr. Chairman, are simply style...ordinary stylistic changes.

[Amendment No. 24 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 25

MR. TATE

All right. Amendment No. 25, Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, simply restylized the beginning portions of former [Section] 6 (D), the latter half of which has just been transferred to the preceding section, practically no changes were made.

[Amendment No. 25 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 26

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 26, Mr. Chairman, is to [Section] 7 (E) on page 28 of your green materials. They were simply stylistic changes made here and I don't think that anything that requires any explanation that's not immediately apparent.

[Amendment No. 26 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 27

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 27 to Section 8 (A) on the top of page 30, the right hand side of your green materials omitted "there is" as unnecessary; shortened a sentence and rearranged the phrases to place "election" first in this series, "election, duties, and compensation" because it's in that order. He's elected; he's got duties and he might get paid.

116th Days Proceedings—January 12, 1974

[Amendment No. 27 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 28

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 28, Orleans Parish, the seven assessors....we left their "shall be" because it was the easiest way to get into Board of Assessors and it seemed to be....and also because our suggested stylistic chaoging wasn't approved by the Revenue and Taxation Committee as I remember, except for the same sort of stylistic omission and punctuation as in the preceding subsection, there are no changes made.

[Amendment No. 28 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 29

MR. TATE

Twenty-nine is to Subsection 8 (C)--8, Subsection (C)--on page 32 of your right-hand side. The changes are:using a comma to set off the introductory clause, omitting needless words, and the usual stylistic changes, that we've been following, to be consistent.

[Amendment No. 29 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 30

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 30 is on tax sales. This is on tax sales. It's more about tax sales than there is about the executive and legislative branches of government. It goes on from pages 33 on through 36. Despite our best efforts, we couldn't shorten it very much. It could have been shortened a lot, but what had been proposed to be shortened a lot by...had not been approved by the floor. So simply, our general work that we did was just to subsection it, and try to break the sentences up a little bit so that it would read a little bit clearer. Of course, this is the kind of material that ordinarily--in this detail--you wouldn't have in a constitution, providing for all that detail, but nevertheless, the floor rejected that approach. So, this is just an ordinary stylized stylizing, doing the best we could. The only sort of change that I might call to your attention is that when it mentioned the State Board of Liquidation in the middle of all this, we changed it to the Interim Emergency Board, which is a new name of what, in the old constitution, was called the State Board of Liquidation.

[Amendment No. 30 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 31

MR. TATE

Amendment 31, which was the old Section 1 (H) found up way in the beginning, which talks about reevaluating property according to fair market value or according to the use value. It was thought better, Mrs. Zervigon, to put this at the end of Section 10 so, in the event later on, we can get to transitional measures, this could be taken out very easily and put into the transitional provision. It was formerly Section 1 (H) on page 3, line 14, following the enrolled copy, and it was thought better to remove it to the end like this, as I said, specifying that it passed the reevaluation according to the fair market use value, but also placing it at a place where Mrs. Zervigon's committee--if we have the chance to, say--might more easily get it over to transitional measures.

MR. CASEY

Are there any questions of Judge Tate on Amendment No. 31?

Is there any discussion on Amendment No. 31? Judge Tate, inasmuch as it looks like this adds a new section, the Clerk suggests that we ought to have a record vote, just so there'll be no problem in the future.

[Previous Question ordered. Section passed; 91-0. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment No. 32

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, Amendment No. 32 is to effectuate the intent of the last amendment and to delete from the original enrollment lines 14 through 21, which had that provision in Section 1 instead of as Section 10. By now, it's in the nature of a technical amendment.

[Amendment No. 32 adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Before we go into the caveat amendments, since yours didn't appear to be controversial, you want to go ahead and take it now? Yes, sir, we're having them distributed right now.

Amendment No. 3--there was a little confusion at that time--Amendment No. 3 had been adopted when Mr. Avant got up and made that question to Judge Tate. We were really on Amendment No. 4. Mr. Avant's amendment has been prepared as an amendment to the amendment adopted, which is Amendment No. 3--Style and Drafting Committee back on the first white sheet here. So, it will amend the first white sheet, Amendment No. 3.

Explanation

MR. TATE

The reason for the amendment--and I'm glad Mr. Avant caught it; we haven't missed it much; we missed it here--is when you say the legislature shall do something, ordinarily, almost always the intent has been that you meant "by law". It passed "by law" and the governor can veto it. It's not something independent of government, and to specify that, wherever it is appropriate --which is, usually, we have said "the legislature by law". We've been making the heading "by law" or saying, "it shall be done by law," instead of by the legislature. We have watched a few instances in the constitution where they meant only by a concurrent resolution.

[Motion to suspend the rules to reconsider Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 26 for the limited purpose of considering the Avant amendment adopted without objection. Motion to reconsider adopted without objection.]

Reconsideration

Committee Proposal No. 26, Section 1

Questions

MR. DE BLIEUX

Judge Tate, I'd like to just ask this question to find out whether or not the amendment of Mr. Avant is necessary. You see, in the provision that you have, you say "the legislature may provide" similarly. Now, if the legislature provides, isn't that by law? Why do we need the repetition by saying "by law"? Because if the legislature is making the provisions, it's by law.

MR. TATE

Senator De Blieux, I would be inclined to agree with you except for the couple of instances where the court has gone wrong where they said the legislature shall do something, and they say they could do it by concurrent resolution. That's now a possibility in our law. The most normal--I forget the other instance. Many people think that the original requirement when it said "the legislature may waive immunity," they meant "by law"-- "by law". But, that is now accepted as a concurrent resolution. The language in that... we have tried to clarify it. I think you're right. I don't think they would, in a million years, say the legislature could do it without the governor, but because of the fact that we've used the standardized language--and when we say "by the legislature", tried to say "by law" instead, through-out---it might be a good thing to adopt Mr. Avant's amendment just because that's consistent with our usage. I kind of agree with you; it's not necessary, but...

intent if that is the intent. That particular one was rejected and placed in this form because some people thought that it might...public service properties, you know, and where I don't agree with them, that was the best way to do it.

[Amendment No. 33 adopted without objection]

Amendment No. 34

MR. DE BLIEUX

I just feel like if you're going to change it that much that maybe the whole phrase should be changed to eliminate the absolute-- looks like to me--duplication by the words. If you say "similar provision may be made by law" for buildings of historic architectural importance, I could see that. But to say the "legislature by law", that just looks like redundant duplication.

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 34 which I'm going to ask Mr. Conroy to explain because he has been with the Committee on Revenue throughout the deliberation, is on page 3 of your green materials. It adds a Subsection 10; it inserts one that's not there, in saying, "properties exempt from taxation"--totally exempt, that means-- "of property irrevocably dedicated places of burial held by individuals for purposes of burial of themselves or members of their families;". This would be an insertion on your other materials on page 13; it's between 9 and 10 on line 28. That paragraph would be inserted. The remainder of the amendment is to change the numbering, if you approve it. Now, Mr. Conroy, if he'll be good enough, he can explain to you the background and history of the thing.

MR. TATE

Senator, if we'd caught it, we would have done it this way. I agree; maybe it could be done better. But, this will avoid that ambiguity. I agree with you that it probably could be done better, but we're now aiming for 99.2 instead of 99.4.

Mr. Chairman, in further answer to Senator De Blieux, incidentally, the other provision in the constitution that has that interpretation is Article III, Section 34 of the present constitution, which says "Salaries may be changed by a vote of two-thirds of the members of each house of the legislature," and when they didn't say "by law", the later attorney general's opinion says it just needs to be by the legislature, not by the governor. That's the sort of thing we're trying to avoid.

[Amendment adopted without objection. Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 91-0. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Explanation

MR. CONROY

Actually, I think that Judge Tate has already explained the reasoning that went behind this. The question had come up as to the meaning of this phrase as it appeared in Paragraph (B). The Committee on Revenue, Finance and Taxation, I think, unanimously felt that the only error that had been made was possibly in failing to give an exemption for places of burial in which somebody had been buried, or which had been sold to an individual for burial use. The committee felt that it was not intended in any way to extend the exemption for burial places to burial places commercially owned to be sold by a commercial operation at a later date. That's the reason we suggested this additional exemption. I don't know whether Mr. Jenkins wants to pursue the questions he had raised earlier, but this, we felt, clarified the intent of the Committee on Revenue, Finance and Taxation, to add this exemption.

Amendment No. 33

MR. TATE

Now, we're getting to the caveat amendments. They are, of course, on your yellow sheets. The first is going to be on Amendment No. 33, which on your yellow sheets, adds the phrase... adds a sentence in lines 10 to 13: "Each assessor shall determine the use value.....which is to be so assessed under the provisions of Paragraph (C)." That is found on your original materials at Section 1 (D), page 4. Now, the reason we ask for clarification: as the committee draft wrote it, there was no mention of use value. So, they said "the assessors shall determine the fair market value of property subject to taxation within his district, except public service properties," and those are valued by the Tax Commission. Now, this seems to leave a hiatus to some who would assess the use value, but the obvious intent from the floor debate, from the structure of the article, and all that, was that the assessor would determine the use value of the property under (C), which is agricultural, horticultural, marsh, and so on lands, and the historic buildings and the historic architectural importance. Now, in order not to leave that sort of hiatus, we asked revenue and taxation if we shouldn't be clarified in some way; and they came back and suggested this language, which we are calling to your attention for your consideration in order--if it is your intent--to end the ambiguity and to provide...to clarify that in the whole Section 1 who does what as to each use and fair market value. This would clarify that and place it--as we believe--with your probable intent to, let's say, the assessors shall determine use value subject to the other provisions. You have to do it by criteria established by the state legislature.

Questions

MR. AVANT

Mr. Conroy, if this amendment is adopted as is, then under the terms of this constitution, the only places of burial that will be exempt from taxation will be those that are owned by an individual or those that are owned by a nonprofit corporation for that purpose; isn't that right?

MR. CONROY

That's correct.

MR. AVANT

Now, isn't the law that even a profit-making venture, when it opens up a cemetery and files a plat and says "this is a cemetery, and this property is dedicated for places of burial," that they have to comply with certain perpetual care requirements, etc., and in effect, that property is taken out of commerce? It can never be used for any other purpose; isn't that right?

Questions

MR. ABRAHAM

Judge Tate, why was it necessary to just add a complete new sentence here dealing with use value? Why couldn't you have simply said at the beginning that "each assessor shall determine the fair market value or use value of all property subject to taxation?"

MR. CONROY

I'm not sure that it's that irrevocable, Mr. Avant, but, yes, there are statutory provisions along those lines. If they were an area of a cemetery that had not been used, I think you could probably, with the consent of the parish governing authority, get a part of that dedication revoked at a later time if you hadn't sold any plots.

MR. AVANT

But, you're not sure of that; are you?

MR. CONROY

No.

MR. TATE

Mr. Abraham, that's exactly what we had proposed. However, for some reason some people thought it might get in the way of... upset the use value of corporations, and you have the amendment that we thought...we initially recommended to carry out that

MR. AVANT

Under the law as it now exists, once property has been dedicated and laid out as a cemetery and a plat has been filed, then that property is not subject to ad valorem taxation?

116th Days Proceedings—January 12, 1974

MR. CONROY

At the present time, all places of burial are exempt at the present time. That's correct.

MR. AVANT

I wanted to clarify that.

MR. CONROY

That's correct; it is a change.

MR. AVANT

I just want to speak against the amendment. I have another amendment that I'm going to offer.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Is it true that some people felt that without this amendment there was a possibility that individuals owning places of burial in a commercial place might be taxed?

MR. CONROY

Yes, that was the purpose of the additional amendment as far as the concepts involved in what the committee had initially done and what the convention had initially done. I think the concepts applicable here to cemeteries was the same that we applied to schools, nursing homes, etc. and that is: that those who are operated commercially would be taxed; while those who were on a nonprofit basis would not be. However, unintentionally in doing that, we subjected to possible taxation, places of burial held by individuals, and we did not intend that result. That's what the purpose of this amendment.

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Conroy, the question you just answered was one I was going to ask you. One step further: Wasn't it brought out in committee--I think by Mr. Slay--that there are several places in this state that have dedicated places of burial? Maybe there's forty acres that are dedicated, or we tend them, are being used for burial; the other thirty would be used, for example, for something like a golf course. As it's needed for burial, they'd just take another acre or two acres. Wasn't that brought out in that those other thirty acres are not now subject to taxation?

MR. CONROY

There was discussion...I don't recall whether that there was a discussion of it being at this time used for other purposes, but the fact that it could certainly be held for investment purposes on that basis, and then later the dedication revoked and the property sold and have escaped taxation during that time that it was held. That's right.

MR. NUNEZ

The only purpose for this amendment then would be to guarantee that an individual or a family that had title to that property would be exempt from taxation?

MR. CONROY

That's correct.

MR. NUNEZ

And not the people who are making profit on the other piece of land?

MR. CONROY

That's exactly the concept of the committee.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Conroy, I noticed that there is no provision in the amendment to eliminate the language that was previously adopted in the section.

MR. CONROY

That's correct.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Now, this would in essence--even though it might be that I know it was the intention of the committee--so this would be the adding of additional exemptions which was not really adopted by the convention, even though that was our intent; is that correct?

MR. CONROY

Well, I guess that question could be raised. Yes, we felt I thought the committee unanimously had felt that this was clearly our intention.

MR. DE BLIEUX

I feel like that was the intent of our committee.

MR. CONROY

That's correct.

MR. DE BLIEUX

There's no questions about that in my mind. But I say this does add something which we inadvertently left out.

MR. CONROY

This is additional language; that's correct. The other would not be changed; it would be left as it was.

MR. DE BLIEUX

But it would not change the other, previous wordage, which was adopted?

MR. CONROY

Correct.

Further Discussion

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman, I'm not going to go with my amendment. I yield to anybody else who may have one.

Further Discussion

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment. Now, I suppose their amendment will have to be adopted first; is that correct?

Well, then in that case, I would like to speak on the amendment that's being offered.

Mr. Chairman, delegates, I'd like to have your attention for just a moment....

This is a matter that, in the whole scheme of the state, is not very important and, certainly, in terms of the financial income of the various political subdivisions, is not very important; but it is something that is very important to some people in our state who have made investments in cemeteries, and it's important enough that we need to address ourselves to it. As you know, under the present constitution, all dedicated places of burial of every sort are exempt from property taxation. Now, there is an amendment adopted, when we were on revenue and taxation, which included--if you'll look on the yellow sheet, page 3, the top of the left-hand column, where it says "dedicated places of burial"--there was an amendment inserting those words: "dedicated places of burial." At that time, I felt--and a number of people thought--that we were thus continuing the exemption for all dedicated places of burial. However, because of the context that amendment now finds itself in, it means that only dedicated places of burial owned by nonprofit corporations are exempt from property taxation. When the Revenue and Finance Committee found out about this change, they realized that we would then be taxing places of burial, even if someone's buried there or even if it's held for burial. Thus, they have proposed this caveat amendment, and I think their amendment is good. I think that it clarifies the intent of the amendment as originally introduced, but I don't think that this amendment by Revenue and Taxation goes far enough. It is still leaving some problems unanswered; so I'm going to ask you to adopt their amendment, but I'm going to offer a further amendment after that; to try to clarify it. The amendment that I will offer would, in item number (10) on page 3, delete part of what they have and insert some other language, and it would say: "irrevocably dedicated places of burial not used for other purposes." Now, the reason for this is as follows: We have had people in this state undertake to build cemeteries--to clear the land, to invest the money required--some of them, ten, twenty, thirty years ago. They have set up a business that's going to last, probably, for centuries. They have established trusts; they've made plans; and they have made a situation whereby the financial structure of their organization is dependent on the fact that they're not going to be required to pay property taxes. Unless we make the change that I'm going to suggest to you, we're going to put additional taxes on someone that have not now contemplated paying these taxes, and I think we're going to create some havoc for this segment of our economy. Now, let me give you an example of what can happen. Suppose a man has a thirty-acre plot that he purchased twenty years ago for purposes of development as a cemetery. In that time, ten acres has been developed. At the time that he began his development, he was out in the country--in a rural area--and the property was not worth very much; and, even if he didn't have a cemetery on it, he wouldn't be paying much in taxes. But, in the meantime, the city has grown up around it--in the last twenty years--and there are now subdivisions all around it. If this man is required to pay property taxes on that remaining twenty acres that is yet to be developed, it will be assessed at the fair market value of the surrounding subdivisions, and he will be forced to dispose of that land and not continue to keep it for cemetery purposes. He'll have to sell it for a subdivision. Now, that means that we're going to see, increasingly, it almost impossible for people to develop cemeteries. We're going to either have postage-stamp cemeteries or all of them owned by nonprofit corporations. Now, here's the thing you must remember: The people who pay taxes on plots of burial are not the owners of the cemetery, the person who's developing it. The people who pay it are the people who buy the plots. If we tax cemeteries--whether they're in development or not--it's going to be the people who are going to buy the plots who are going to ultimately pay these taxes. I just don't see any reason that we need to start today--in 1974--start taxing places of burial, when they've been taxed before. There's no reason for it whatsoever. So, for that reason, I'd urge you to adopt this Style and Drafting caveat. Then, after it's adopted, I want to offer an amendment to further clarify this situation. I hope you'll consider my amendment at that time.

116th Days Proceedings—January 12, 1974

Questions

MR. LANDRUM

Don't you think, since 1921, you've had a great change in the business of burying people? At one time, there wasn't any money in it too much, but that's a big business today. Don't you think developers should pay a tax?

MR. JENKINS

Oh, I think they're paying plenty of taxes, Reverend. I think they're paying plenty in income taxes; they're paying all sorts of taxes. But, what we're talking about now is whether or not we're going to start taxing dedicated places of burial that have never been taxed before. Now, I don't think we should. I think we tax people all through their lives....

MR. LANDRUM

No, now, I'm not talking about your churches' cemeteries or army cemeteries or either city cemeteries. I'm not talking about such places.

MR. JENKINS

Well, that is what you're talking about, Reverend, because the people who pay these....

MR. LANDRUM

I'm talking about those persons that go into the business. You have your rest beauties and, well, quite a number of places where you bury people. I mean it's not a cheap business today; it's quite an expensive business. Now, don't you think those people should pay taxes?

MR. JENKINS

Reverend--just let me answer your question is--the only income these people have is from the people who are buried there. Those people have to pay these taxes. That's who's paying the taxes--the people who are going to be buried there--because that's the only source of income these cemeteries have.

MR. LANDRUM

A built-in tax system--that's what you're saying then?

MR. JENKINS

Of course.

Further Discussion

MR. SLAY

Mr. Chairman, members of the convention, I don't rise here with real strong feelings about assessing property that is owned by commercial establishments who are out in the cemetery business, but I want to point out to you that, if I bought a tract of land--say, forty acres--and I start selling that at about six hundred dollars for each burial plot, I am going to get about two hundred thousand dollars per acre for that piece of land. It's inconceivable to me that I can come and ask you to exempt me from a piece of land that, in time, I'm going to get about two hundred thousand dollars per acre. Now, we talked about it being irrevocably dedicated. There's no such thing. There's nothing that we can do that can't be undone. I'm going to give you an example. There's a place in Rapides Parish where we had a cemetery that had been there for about a hundred years. All of a sudden, the government decided they needed an airport there. They dug these people up--or dug up the ground of people who had been there about a hundred years--moved them five miles over, and there now is an airport, Esler Field, sitting on top of the cemetery. What I'm trying to say to you: If I had a piece of land there, and I put a plat on record--said this is going to be a cemetery--I sold a few plots off, I'm going to hold a piece of land that I'm going to make a profit off of, and I'm going to ask you now to exempt me. If we're going to do that, why shouldn't we go to the funeral directors and exempt the caskets from ad valorem taxes because, after all, they're going to pass those taxes on to the consumer. Everybody passes their taxes on to somebody else. So, I urge you to adopt what we have--what Mr. Conroy has submitted to you--and that we should stop at that point. Thank you, sir.

Questions

MR. ROEMER

Charlie, we never meant to--and don't--with this language tax religious cemeteries, do we?

MR. SLAY

We've never taxed religious....

MR. ROEMER

And, we also don't tax nonprofit cemeteries, do we?

MR. SLAY

Nonprofit ones are not on the roll.

MR. ROEMER

We also don't tax plots that are occupied by bodies, do we?

MR. SLAY

No.

MR. ROEMER

We also don't tax plots that are held by members of a family for members of that family, do we?

MR. SLAY

We do not.

MR. ROEMER

All we're getting at here is those corporations in business for a profit who have land that's not developed, even though it's for burial places. Isn't that true?

MR. SLAY

That's right, and let me point out to you that we have four commercial cemeteries on the tax roll of Rapides Parish, and not one of these people have asked us not to put them on there.

MR. ROEMER

So, don't you think that we ought to adopt the Style and Drafting caveat here because it clears up our intent, but then hold the line against any further amendments?

MR. SLAY

I agree a hundred percent, Buddy.

MR. JENKINS

Charles, don't you think that we're going to be, for one thing, creating clouds on a title of burial plots? because, if a man doesn't pay--say, the developer failed to pay the property taxes on it one year, and it sold the next, you would have a situation arise where a person could be concerned about whether or not he...back taxes are owed on these plots for burial and things like that?

MR. SLAY

No, I don't believe there's any danger at all of that. Let me point out to you that very few times do they even put those deeds on record when a plot is sold.

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Slay, isn't it true that very seldom do people include the burial plots in the succession records when they're transferring title? It just kind of stays in the family and goes on and on, but no transfer of title on these private burial plots?

MR. SLAY

Well, now, I don't know about successions. You'd have to ask a lawyer on that, and I don't know whether you're speaking about commercial plots or not.

116th Days Proceedings—January 12, 1974

MRS. MILLER

No, I mean private.

MR. SLAY

On private, in the cemeteries--most church-owned cemeteries--there is no title to that plot to start with. It's just owned by the religious order there.

MRS. MILLER

Now, in some of your cemeteries, you have the families--someone will buy the plot from the association that owns the thing; this is still noncommercial. Like in Jennings--the city of Jennings has title to all the property and, yet, you buy this lot. It's been our experience with the IRS it's not required that you show the ownership of this burial plot, though you may have paid fifteen hundred or two thousand dollars for it. So, this would indicate that the state, too, should not try to tax private burial places.

MR. SLAY

That's right. Now, you're speaking about--if I understand you correctly--in a nonprofit corporation, not a profit corporation.

MRS. MILLER

That's correct.

MR. SLAY

Of course, what we have exempts those nonprofit corporations from taxes. What we're speaking about here is only those that are owned by a commercial establishment.

MRS. MILLER

So, you think we'll be protected on these private things by adopting the committee proposal.

MR. SLAY

They sure will be.

[Amendment No. 34 adopted without objection.]

MR. POYNTER

Before we go to Amendment No. 35, Mr. Jenkins, of course, had mentioned on the mike, and he does have a pending amendment which would propose--and the amendment has been passed out--would propose the addition of further language to the Amendment No. 34. Of course, that's ultimately going to take a suspension of the rules. Did you explain your purpose, Mr. Jenkins, when you made your original remark?

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, I don't know whether it'd take a suspension of the rules or not, truly. I think that this is a style and drafting change that I'm proposing, not a substantive change in relation to the intent of any of the delegates, because when we inserted the language--and this was one amendment that inserted the language "dedicated places of burial"--my intent, and the intent of many delegates, was that all dedicated places of burial would be exempt--just what it said. But, because of the context in which it was inserted, it ended up not meaning that. So, the amendment that I'm now proposing keeps that intention intact. Frankly, you know, I have no interest in this, one way or the other; but it was called to my attention immediately after that vote what we had done, and I was told that the appropriate place to deal with this was when we got to style and drafting changes, and I've been preserving it throughout this time. So, for the limited purpose of considering this--which I consider a technical change in relation to the original amendment--and to maintain the meaning of the original amendment, I'd like to ask for a suspension of the rules for the purpose of offering this amendment.

[Motion to suspend the rules to reconsider Section 4 of Committee Proposal No. 26 for the limited purpose of considering the Jenkins amendment. Record vote ordered. Motion rejected: 54-48.]

Amendments Nos. 35, 36 and 37

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, the next three amendments deal with the same technical point which is this: taking over from the present constitution the treatment of exemptions. We refer to points outside the continental United States--for export to a point outside the....Now, these amendments--let me tell you where they are, first, and what is being done.

On page 5 of your yellow copy, on line 9 where it says "states of", circle that. That "states of" is going to be substituted for "continental United States." On same page, on line 4 of Section (D), same thing--"continental" to "states of". On the next page, 6, the amendment is correctly worded, by the way; but through a typographical error, the correct language you just adopted that you're going to amend is on the left-hand side. But, in either event, what you're doing is changing "continental" to "the states of". It's on the left-hand side because, by error, they copied the old language here and the new language on the left-hand side, instead of vice-versa. Now, the reason for all three amendments is this: As adopted from our previous constitution--or, rather, from the existing constitution of 1921--we had certain exemptions which did or did not apply with regard to trade within the continental United States, or only to trade outside the continental United States. Now, "continental" was accurate at the time it was adopted because we had forty-eight states, all within the continental United States. We now, of course, have fifty states--one of which clearly is outside the continental United States, Hawaii; the other, which is Alaska, which in the view of some might be considered outside the continental United States. Now, all of these three amendments--they would be denial of equal protection to the citizens of these other states that might be outside the continental United States, or that are outside the United States, under the federal constitution. It raises questions like that, and it raises questions of an unreasonable burden on interstate commerce, if we don't include within the exemption, or nonexemption respectively, all of the states of the United States--not just the forty-eight or forty-nine continental states. So, in order to avoid the complication and in the unanimous opinion of both committees, the sense of what you intended and what was the stark purpose of the original exemption, or nonexemption, as provided by the previous constitution, is carried out by substituting for "continental" the words "the states". So, these three amendments--35, 36, and 37--in each case, substitute for "continental" "states of the," meaning states of the United States for "continental United States. With that explanation, Mr. Chairman, and subject to further questioning, I move the adoption of all three amendments, which are related--35, 36, and 37.

Questions

MR. WINCHESTER

Judge Tate, does that give any more rights, or it just clarifies it?

MR. TATE

In the opinion of the committee--we brought it to your attention in case you think it gives more rights--in the opinion of the committee it gives no more rights than the federal constitution would allow. In our opinion, it clarifies your intent, which is commerce within the United States--within, at least, the states of the United States--is either protected or nonprotected, as the case may be; and, in our opinion, it does not do anything more than clarify it. But, because of the fact that we wanted to be sure that you here could pass on it, we bring it to your attention by way of yellow amendment.

MR. WINCHESTER

Thank you, sir.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Judge Tate, I'd just like to ask: Why didn't the committee consider just leaving out the word "continental" rather than adding in the words "states of the United States"? What difference would it make?

MR. TATE

The committee considered saying "outside of the United States," but the question is it might become a change in intent, because the territories of the United States, historically, may not have been considered part of the continental United States, and there's no federal constitutional question raised as to denying equal protection to a citizen of a state when we say "the states of." That is the reason. Our initial recommendation was just to delete "continental." The Revenue and Finance pointed out to us that it might amount to a change, because up until the present time, let's say, Puerto Rico--a territory of the United States--or Guam--a territory under the administration of the....or our protectorates throughout the Pacific. It might be a change; so, in order to hold it down to what we felt was the meaning of continental United States as it passed the floor, meaning the states of the American Union, as well as to avoid questions as to if it was restricted only to the forty-eight original states, or the forty-nine states on the continent--whether it might not be a denial of equal protection to the citizens of any states excluded.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, that's the point that concerns me, because I know, as the verbiage was originally written many years ago--that's even before 1898--we referred to the continental United States as being only those states located within the, you might say, the North American continent at that particular time. Now, if you use the words "states of the United States," then you're excluding that territory which is part of the United States which has not achieved statehood yet.

MR. TATE

At the present time, Senator De Blieux, there's no part of the United States that is a territory. There's no part.

MR. DE BLIEUX

What about Puerto Rico?

MR. TATE

That's not part of the continental United States.

MR. DE BLIEUX

It's not part of the continental United States any more than Alaska is or--well, I might say Hawaii--but it is a state. That is, Hawaii is a state, but it's not located within the original confines of the original forty-eight. I can see that possible discrimination there, insofar as the territory. If you're speaking about territory which is under the jurisdiction of the United States, then, by this particular amendment, you're excluding Puerto Rico and Guam and those particular areas, while, on the other hand, if you wanted to limit it to the original forty-eight states, well, then, you're including Hawaii, which has no connection with the original forty-eight--or Alaska. The way it's worded, I think you're inviting some problems; that's my point.

MR. TATE

Well, Senator, we brought it to the attention of the convention floor for their consideration. Our view, with regard to what you mention, was that, if Puerto Rico is excluded now, it would still be excluded. If Puerto Rico is considered a state for certain purposes, as is, for instance, the District of Columbia, then, that it would be protected. We yield to the expertise and the judgment of the membership. We are only calling it to your attention as an area that may need clarification. You may not think it does, or you may think it'd be better to be left unclarified.

MR. DE BLIEUX

I just wonder if the possibility for clarification of what the original intent of the amendment might be, that if it might not be better that we just exclude the word "continental" rather than just saying "states" because, insofar as state is concerned, even the District of Columbia is not considered as a state; and yet, it is part of the original continental United States as originally existed. It certainly was included within the definition originally part of our constitution, while, on the other hand, the territory of Alaska was not included in that. Yet, under the amendment you have now, it would be included, you see, while the territory of Guam and Puerto Rico would not be included, you see, in this. So, I think, if we're to say "the United States"--which, I think, was the original intent as we had before we acquired Alaska and those territories--that we ought to just say "United States" rather than "continental."

MR. TATE

Well, Senator, here's the situation: that was our recommendation--to delete "continental," to consider caveating deleting "continental." The Revenue and Finance Committee came back with the thought that continental United States, as used, does exclude our overseas territories--our noncontinental territories like Puerto Rico and Guam right now--but that the probable intent, and, at any rate, it'd raise a serious federal question of denial of equal protection and interstate commerce if we leave out Hawaii. So, for that reason, instead of deleting "continental," they recommended inserting "states of." The only alternatives that were given to us as nonsubstantive changes were either to leave in "continental," with its questions and inaccuracies and intent, or putting "states of," which would include most of the intent, at least--if not all of the intent--and avoid the federal constitutional question. That was our problem, Senator.

MR. ALEXANDER

Judge Tate, if you were to utilize the language that's found in the constitution of the United States and simply state at the end of the sentence, "or any territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof," would it not include Senator De Blieux's objection, possibly, or satisfy his objection? which would include Guam or Puerto Rico, or any other place which may come under the jurisdiction of the United States government subsequently.

MR. TATE

Yes, Reverend Alexander, if we did include that, it would include those territories; but our problem was that, if it did include them, it would be regarded as substantive. We had originally thought that leaving out "continental" would accomplish the result. There were objections made by the tax experts that it would change the intent if we said--in effect--said "or territories." So, for that reason, whatever equities there may be in it--for that reason, since it would be a substantive change, we regarded ourselves as limited to the amendment we're proposing now, sir.

[Amendments Nos. 35, 36 and 37
adopted without objection.]

Personal Privilege

MR. PUGH

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, you will recall that the Honorable Governor of this state on Thursday suggested to you, and I quote, "There are serious questions which have now been raised as to whether or not the language in the proposed article on Revenue and Finance impairs the authority of the Superboard, HEAL, and some of the other state agencies to issue revenue bonds. On the advice of bond attorneys, whose opinions I respect, and in the knowledge that we may someday want to issue revenue bonds, I suggest that you clarify that language, and we will submit for your consideration a document for that purpose. In that connection, Mr. Juddell, a lawyer of great prominence in this field has made an examination of the constitutional provisions as passed by this body and has made certain recommendations. In connection with those recommendations, I call your attention to the fact that three illustrious lawyers in this body who also have a great deal of knowledge on the subject have concurred and agreed that the provisions that you will be considering in a minute would rectify the problem that has been brought to the attention of the governor. These lawyers are Mr. Conroy, Mr. Kean, and also, Mr. Dennery. I would like to submit these matters to you this morning for your consideration."

Committee Proposal No. 15 from the Committee on Style and Drafting adopted without objection. Motion to reconsider Committee Proposal
No. 15 adopted without objection.

Reconsideration

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendment No. 1-- and, of course, this is drafted to the first enrollment of the proposal.

"However, any state board, agency, or commission heretofore or hereafter authorized by law to issue bonds may, in the manner so authorized, and with the approval of the State Bond Commission or its successor, issue bonds which are payable from fees, rates, rentals, tolls, charges, grants or other receipts or income derived by or in connection with an undertaking, facility or facilities, project or projects or any combination thereof without a pledge of the full faith and credit of the state. Such type bonds may but are not required to be issued in accordance with the provisions of Section 7 (A) and (B) hereof and if issued without a pledge of the full faith and credit of the state the issuance of the bonds shall not constitute the incurring of state debt under this constitution."

Explanation

MR. PUGH

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, by my preliminary remarks, I have suggested to you what there is before you for consideration. I reiterate, that if any or all of these gentlemen were called to appear before you, that's Mr. Kean, Mr. Conroy or Mr. Dennery, they would all evidence to you their approval of this amendment. In that connection, I'm also authorized to say that Mr. Kean had discussed this with you at 7:30 p.m. on the night in which we actually adopted this section. We were all tired. We did not at that time take his suggestion. I highly recommend at this point in time that we do so, and I'll submit to any questions.

116th Days Proceedings—January 12, 1974

Questions

MR. ROEMER

Bob, in the last sentence of this proposed amendment it says "such type bonds may but are not required to be issued in accordance, etc., provisions of 7 (A) and 7 (B)." That means, as I understand it, that these bonds may circumvent our intent of a two-thirds vote. They also may circumvent our intent of having them in the capital budget; is that not true?

MR. PUGH

Let me get those sections; just a minute.
I am informed that they do not have to be issued by the legislature, and to that extent the statement is correct.

MR. AVANT

Mr. Pugh, as I read this, these bonds may be issued without compliance with the two-thirds vote and those other provisions and they may nevertheless constitute a pledge of the full faith and credit of the state. Doesn't say that they may be issued, but if issued, they won't have a pledge of the full faith and credit. So, they may be issued without going through those safeguards that were put in there and nevertheless have the full faith and credit of the state behind them; isn't that right?

MR. PUGH

As Mr. Kean has explained to me, the only way that can occur is by then having the two-thirds vote of the legislature.

MR. AVANT

Well isn't the two-thirds required under either 7 (A) or (B)?

MR. PUGH

7 (A).

MR. AVANT

All right. So they are not required to be issued in accordance with the provisions of 7 (A) and "if issued without a pledge of the full faith and credit shall not constitute the incurring of debt," but if you go back up in the preceding sentence they say that they "may be issued without a pledge," but there's no prohibition against them being issued with a pledge of the full faith and credit; isn't that right?

MR. PUGH

As I understand from Mr. Kean-- I just don't have it before me is the reason I'm asking, he's very familiar with it-- it still takes the two-thirds vote of the legislature for you to have the full faith and credit.

Further Discussion

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, you may recall that when this section was before you originally, I spoke not so much in opposition to it, but with the request that we lay it over for further consideration because of the practical problem I saw in dealing with the matter of revenue bonds. This proposed amendment simply provides a means by which the legislature could authorize the issuance of the revenue bonds, and where those bonds were secured by a pledge of the user fees, charges, etc., they would then . . . it would be able to issue them under the general authorization rather than have the legislature by specific authorization authorize that issuance from time to time. Now, the only way under the sections together as I view it, that the legislature could pledge the full faith and credit to these bonds would be under the provisions of 7 (A), which would require a two-thirds vote of the legislature on the specific bonds to be issued. Otherwise, the bonds would be issued under the general authorization without a pledge of the full faith and credit. I think this gives us the flexibility we need in order to deal with the problem of revenue bonds. It is impractical, as I pointed out before, to have revenue bonds bearing in all instances the full faith and credit of this state. It is equally impractical to have revenue bonds only issued by specific authorization of the legislature and coming up every year during the legislative session, and for that reason I suggest to you that this amendment is a needed amendment to clarify a situation which is otherwise going to cause considerable difficulty insofar as the issuance of these important bonds by the state and its agencies is concerned. I support the amendment and ask that you do likewise.

Questions

MR. FLORY

Mr. Kean, could you tell me in the past--let's take the port authority or someone who would issue revenue bonds based upon user fees or rent on a long time purchase agreement, etc. It's my understanding in the past that they've only had to go before the Bond Commission in order to get the approval to issue the revenue bonds. Is that correct?

MR. KEAN

Yes, that's correct.

MR. FLORY

They did not have to have the full . . .

MR. KEAN

If you had the general authorization to issue the bonds, . . .

MR. FLORY

But, you didn't carry the full faith and credit of the state, so you didn't need the approval of the legislature; isn't that correct?

MR. KEAN

That's correct.

MR. DREW

Gordon, under the last sentence in this amendment these agencies would be permitted to issue bonds without complying with (A) or (B)?

MR. KEAN

That's correct.

MR. DREW

Therefore, (C) would still be applicable--putting the full faith and credit of the state behind those bonds?

MR. KEAN

Only if you had the two-thirds vote of the legislature. That is . . .

MR. DREW

No, it doesn't say that, Gordon; it says it can be done without (A) or (B). But, it doesn't say that would automatically delete (C) requirements, which is your full faith and credit of the state.

MR. KEAN

Yes, but (C) only becomes applicable where you have had a two-thirds vote of the legislature, as I understand the section.

MR. DREW

Well, the way this last sentence reads, I think you've deleted that requirement of the full faith and credit of the state. Don't you agree?

MR. KEAN

Well, we were simply trying to take out the requirement of the full faith and credit, but leave it in a posture where if the state legislature by a vote of two-thirds did authorize the bonds, you would then have the full faith and credit, and they would then become debt obligations of the state. That was the intention of the amendment; I think that's what it does.

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Kean, the state now issues bonds --as a specific example,-- such as our universities will issue revenue bonds, the dormitory bonds, and our ports, harbor and terminal districts such as the Baton Rouge Port or New Orleans Port, and they . . . my understanding is that they do come before the legislature now and they are revenue bonds without the full faith and credit of the state. But, it's also my understanding that these bonds without the full . . . even though they're revenue bonds, they carry the full faith and credit of the state. The state will never forfeit on dormitory bonds or on port bonds or things like that or direct state agencies. Won't you agree with that?

MR. KEAN

No. I think, Senator Nunez, that there's a vast difference between full faith and credit bonds and legitimate revenue bonds. I think the buyers who buy revenue bonds based upon a pledge of fees which have been developed by reason of feasibility reports look to those sources of income as a security for the bonds. If we had some trouble in the past with respect to dormitory bonds which seems to be the hang-up in this whole problem, and it seems to me that the State Bond Commission simply has to do a better job in studying the feasibility of these type bonds. These bonds have to be approved by the State Bond Commission; they've got the facilities to review them and determine that they do have feasibility and if they don't, then they've simply got to deny the right to issue the bonds. But, they don't carry the full faith and credit of the state and the buyers who purchase them don't look upon them as having full faith and credit.

116th Days Proceedings—January 12, 1974

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Kean, what you're saying is that the only agency that they would deal with then would be dealing with the State Bond and Building Commission. There's no other restriction on the issuance of these revenue bonds but the State Bond and Building Commission, if they don't carry the full faith and credit of the state according to law?

MR. KEAN

Well, of course, the legislature would have to authorize the issuance of the bonds in the general terms to begin with. Once that authorization has been approved by the legislature then if there were revenue bonds to be issued, the particular agency would have to develop a feasibility report showing that the fees, income, or whatever it may be would justify the issuance of the bonds and the payment of the principal and interest. It seems to me at that point that it then becomes the obligation and the duty of the State Bond Commission to make certain that the revenues that will be produced will be adequate to meet the principal and interest requirements of the bonds. I don't see why you would want to have a full faith and credit pledge. I think all that that will do if we leave it as it is, we're going to have revenue bond issues being approved by the legislature on the strength of full faith and credit where they can't stand on their own bottom based on the user fees and the feasibility report.

MR. ABRAHAM

Gordon, reading the section in chronological order, Section 7 (A) deals with the manner in which you can issue the bonds, and 7 (B) is for capital improvement. Then in Paragraph (C) it says "the full faith and credit of the state shall be pledged to the repayment of all bonds," you see. Now, we're going to put this language at the end of Paragraph (C). "All bonds" to me would also include all these. Don't we need some additional corrective language to state "the full faith and credit of the state shall be pledged to the repayment of all bonds issued in accordance with Paragraphs 7 (A) and (B)?"

MR. KEAN

I would have no objection to such an amendment.

MR. ABRAHAM

I think we're going to need some corrective language there to clarify the intent.

MR. KEAN

If that would be helpful in satisfying that objection, I would certainly be in favor of it.

Further Discussion

MR. ROEMER

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, as a member of the Revenue, Finance and Taxation Committee, I can tell you that we studied this problem long and hard in our committee and our first report to you, and what you passed on the floor of this convention, would be to eliminate revenue bonds. The reason we felt that we should eliminate revenue bonds is that we wanted to put all bonds, that is, obligations of the future generations of this state, through the state legislature. It is the authority and obligation of the state legislature to review this bonded indebtedness and pass on it, we felt, by: Number 1, a two-thirds vote and Number 2 to put it in the capital budget each year, so that the legislature could set priorities for bonds. You see it's not enough for an agency to say, "We have money coming in and we ought to issue bonds." It's the obligation of the legislature to the people of this state not to spend all the money that comes in, but to set up priorities on the money. So, I feel we ought to do away with the revenue bonds. Now, it was brought to our attention the last couple of weeks by Mr. Juddell, who's a bond attorney, Darwin Fenner who has the same title, and others, that there might be a time we want to issue revenue bonds without the full faith and credit of the state for very limited purposes. Well, they convinced me that there might be times. They gave an example of a project through HEAL with Tulane University, and I agree with them, the full faith and credit of the state wouldn't be behind those bonds and we would actually hurt HEAL and Tulane University in this case if we didn't have some provision like this in the constitution. However, I strongly disagree with the language as set forth here because as set forth here these bonds would not be subject to the provisions of 7 (A) and (B), but would be subject to the provisions of (C) and the full faith and credit might be somehow construed to be behind these bonds. I don't think it's the intent of the authors of this amendment to let that happen. I would ask them to withdraw this amendment and let's put language in it that makes clear that the full faith and credit of the state is not behind these bonds. I think that's the only way we can be protected from future dome stadiums in this state and things like that. The same proponents of this amendment talk about the Superport. We've already exempted the deep-water ports from the provisions of general obligation bonds in this state, and that's not a problem. That's just a straw dog, that's just something to divert your attention from what I'm afraid might happen if we let this amendment go in like it is now. If we pass it just like it is now the legislature doesn't have to pass on these bonds by two-thirds vote; they don't have to be in the capital budget; they don't even have to fit the priorities of the state as a whole. I don't think you want to do that; that certainly would be a change from what you and this convention voted on just a month and a half ago. So, I ask the authors of this amendment to draw this thing down so we can correct it, and if they won't do that then I ask you to vote it down because we don't need to open the door again to more dome stadiums, to more agencies just issuing bonds willy-nilly without the priorities of the state being involved.

Questions

MR. DREW

Buddy, as this amendment is drawn, if those bonds that could be issued indiscriminately did not definitely negate the full faith and credit of the state they would automatically have it, wouldn't they?

MR. ROEMER

That's my understanding.

MR. DREW

Without the safeguards in (A) and (B)?

MR. ROEMER

Yes, sir, that's my understanding and that's what upsets me about it. I don't think it was the intent of the authors; I hope it wasn't. If it was, maybe they ought to get here and say that. I don't want to put that on their back; I don't think they want to do that any more than I do. I think that the revenue and taxation proposal was quite a good one. We called for a capital budget; we called for some priorities. But, if we pass this amendment, we've just completely circumvented what we tried to do.

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Roemer, if it was not the intent of the ones drafting this then they should be happy to withdraw it and make the corrections, shouldn't they?

MR. ROEMER

I hope so, yea ma'am.

MR. JONES

Buddy, it was the intent of the authors who drafted this to make it exempt from provisions of (A) and (B) for revenue bonds. You're talking about two different kind of animals. When you're talking about general obligation bonds you want to be very careful about it and you want the state legislature to okay it on a two-thirds basis. But, we're talking about oranges and apples here. When you deal with revenue bonds you're not talking about serial bonds or bonds that are backed by taxing authority of the state. Now, . . .

MR. ROEMER

Well, you know I understand that, but you're not talking about apples and oranges here, Mr. Jones, you're talking about the money owned by the people of this state, and we have a responsibility to spend that money wisely. I would suggest to you that we'd be better off to have all bonds under Section (A) and (B); that is to require some legislative perusal and require them to be in the capital budget. But, I will accept . . . rather than that, I will accept a flat statement here that such bonds do not require the g. o. obligation of this state in any shape, form or manner. This does not clearly say that.

116th Days Proceedings—January 12, 1974

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman, I've been informed that the authors of this amendment are willing to temporarily withdraw it to make some changes in it and, therefore, I don't have anything to say.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

MR. POYNTER

Just so that the proposal won't be open, I understand Mr. Gravel is going to check this a little bit and probably maybe do this on Monday, but not just to leave it up in the air Mr. Gravel at this time, would go ahead and move once again the adoption of Section 7 and, in the proposal, to put the proposal back in the same status it was.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Gravel now moves the adoption of Section 7.
Okay. Just so everybody will understand. The amendment has been withdrawn, and they're going to have to resubmit it on another date, so all we have to do is put Committee Proposal No. 15 in the condition it was before we started. So, we have to adopt Section 7.

PROPOSALS ON THE CALENDAR
FOR APPROVAL OF FINAL STYLING

Committee Proposal No. 17

Explanation

MR. TATE

On this proposal, fellow delegates, as you will see, you have the green as usual with the floor version on your left, and the drafting proposals on the right. You have just one yellow amendment, but you do have an addendum, some technical amendments that were added at the last moment and not included on your package of materials, but that's separate; everyone got them separately. Now, in this particular proposal there are ten instances where the green copy does not...there are two words added in most cases by law; and I'll call your attention to them where the green copy is not in accordance with the amendment. That is strictly because due to logistical difficulties we had to run the green before the absolute final drafting; and I'll call your attention to those instances. May I say one more thing? Local Government did an excellent job of digesting four hundred pages of present statutory material down to what we have before us, which actually is just a fraction of the four hundred pages. However, in this particular section, both committees were forced to retain in some instances, very technical language to allay the fears of some of the interests affected by the removal that they would be deprived of some of the powers they now have; and we were assured that with these technical wordings that the people would be spared the numerous special and local constitutional amendments that were necessary in the past. Now, with that as a preliminary, Mr. Chairman, I would first like to move the adoption of Amendment No. 1.

Amendment No. 1

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 1 is the first of those instances. On line 13 of your green copy right after "The legislature" the words "by law" was added and it's found on your amendment to specify that it's by law, by act, not by joint resolution that the legislature may establish and organize new parishes. Are there any questions?

[3322]

[Amendment No. 1 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 2

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, would it be in order, if I went to Amendment No. 67 at this time, which is a technical amendment to Amendment No. 1; or would you rather I waited till I got there?

The Clerk suggests I go straight through. We'll do that. Amendment No. 2, which was to Paragraph (D) of Section 1, just has a formalized language and of using "established" instead of "created" as we've been doing in other instances, and otherwise, there's no change.

[Amendment No. 2 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 3

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 3, likewise contains purely stylistic changes. There will be a technical amendment brought to your attention later at 68 to clarify the existing question, but there's just simply stylistic changes.

[Amendment No. 3 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 4

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 4, which is to Section 3 on page 5, again, it's very simple, breaking something into a sentence.

[Amendment No. 4 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 5

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 5 is to Section 4 on page 6. Again, it's a simple rearrangement of the language, and otherwise, the... and formulates, "so also enjoys" made "shall have," and "any" as "admitted". Otherwise, it's a simple...that's all the stylistic changes.

[Amendment No. 5 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 6

MR. TATE

On page 7--this is on your green materials--Section 5(A) on page 7, again it's simply stylistic consistency.

[Amendment No. 6 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 7

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 7, which is to the Section 5(B) on page 8

117th Days Proceedings—January 14, 1974

of your green material, "fewer" was substituted for "less" because "less" is supposed to refer to quantity, and "fewer" to numbers technically, although it made no difference. Otherwise, it's the same, just stylistic changes, Mr. Chairman.

[Amendment No. 7 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 8

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 8 is to Section 5(C) at the top of page 9. No real change except to add a title and substitute the word "held" for "called" to standardize the language. That's all, sir.

[Amendment No. 8 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 9

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 9 is to Section 5(D) on pages 9 and 10 of your green material. There, again, it's just usual stylistic things of omitting needless words, and putting parallelism in and so on.

[Amendment No. 9 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 10

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 10 is to Section 5(E). Now, you will note that Section 5(E) contains a...as passed the floor contains a sentence from pages 14 to 22 which affect all home rule charters, even though it is only found in Section...what is now Section 5, but was formerly Section 8. So, this was taken out of this. It's recommended that this be taken out of it, and it will be found as Section 6 on your materials on page 14. Otherwise, they are simply stylistic changes.

Questions

MR. JENKINS

Yes, Judge, I'm wondering, do you really think that this is a technical change, or do you think that this is more of a substantive change?

MR. TATE

In the judgment of the committees it was a technical change, Mr. Jenkins.

MR. JENKINS

So, you would take the left-hand portion on page 11, and take the last sentence in it, and make that a new section, found on page 14.

MR. TATE

Yes, sir.

MR. JENKINS

Now, we have on that part on page 11, on the left-hand, don't both of those sentences have to be read together? Aren't they really being read together in that 8(E), whereas they're not read together because of the placement that you have here, on page 14?

MR. TATE

All right, let's see. "A home rule charter adopted pursuant shall provide for the structure and organization, powers, and functions which may include the exercise of any power...that is not denied by general law or inconsistent with any provision of this constitution." Then, "The legislature shall not pass any law, the effect of which changes, modifies, or affects the structure and organization under a particular distribution of powers." If that is so, which I think is correct, Mr. Jenkins, it is also so when it's in Section 6.

MR. JENKINS

When it's in Section 6 like that on page 14, it then applies to all home rule charter political subdivisions, whereas before, it only applied to a particular category. So, isn't that then a substantive change that's being made?

MR. TATE

Mr. Jenkins, in the judgment of both committees, it was intended to apply to both although it was found in that particular section because it says it without qualification.

MR. JENKINS

So, in other words, its placement clearly would make it apply only to one type of home rule charter political subdivision, but because of your change, because you think that this preserves the intent, it would apply to others?

MR. TATE

Yes, sir, because as it passed the floor it says "any local governmental subdivision which operates under a home rule charter" which then referred to both those under 8 and those under 7, and we thought it would clarify the intent and neither committee... nobody raised any question in either committee on it, sir. On this broad language it says "of any local governmental subdivision," and it is apparently to apply to all home rule charters. I think it's a good question you raised, sir, but that's our judgment on it, submitted for your consideration.

Point of Order

MR. JENKINS

You know, this has just been placed on our desk, and we've just now had an opportunity to look at it. It's very lengthy. There are rearrangements of sections affecting, perhaps, the whole context of the meaning. Isn't there some means whereby we would be allowed to even read it before we approve it? Don't you think that would be appropriate?

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Jenkins, you could move to pass over the section or this particular amendment if it's just the amendment that concerns you.

MR. JENKINS

No, no, it's the whole thing. I mean, we have a seventy-six page report here that we haven't even had a chance to look at. I would move to return it to the calendar, yes.

MR. TATE

All right, Mr. Chairman, for what I can say, it's only in this instance that I can recall, and in consolidating two similar provisions found in two other sections that the...it was rearranged. I would say that the...Mr. Chairman, we'll never finish the work of the convention, although I agree with Mr. Jenkins that it's important that we not do something hastily. But, if in your judgment the view of both committees, I think we should perhaps pass over this amendment, and after Mr. Jenkins has had a chance to think about it, then we can maybe come back to it. But, rather than pass over the...

MR. CASEY

Judge Tate, I think you're probably arguing the merits of returning it to the calendar. That's not really a debatable motion.

[Motion to return Committee Proposal No. 17 to the calendar rejected: 7-73.]

MR. TATE

Unless there's objection, I'll proceed with Amendment No. 10, which is on Section 5(E) on page 11, and move for its adoption subject to further discussion.

[Amendment No. 10 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 11

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 11 is 5(F) on page 12. It is simply stylistic changes.

[Amendment No. 11 adopted without objection.]

117th Days Proceedings—January 14, 1974

Amendment No. 12

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 12 is to 5(C) on page 13. There's just a slight rearrangement of the language; one little rearrangement to keep related words together.

[Amendment No. 12 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 13

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 13 is going to delete Section 8(H) because the same provision about nothing in these particular legislative provisions can affect the establishment of courts which shall be established or affected only as provided by Article V. Section 8(H) and Section 9(C) were continued, were consolidated in Section 27, which is found...Section 26, which is found on page 40 of your material. At that point you can consolidate them and avoid saying the same thing twice. Judge Dennis, the author of both amendments, had no objection to this rearrangement, and in the judgment of both committees, it affects no change of substance.

[Amendment No. 13 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 14

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 14 is the amendment we've just talked about which took the second half of 8(E) and made it a separate section, Section 6. In the judgment of the committee, both committees, it says the same thing but says it at the right place.

Questions

MR. JENKINS

Judge Tate, if we did not create this as a separate section, what would be the legal effect of keeping it just the way it was passed from the convention floor?

MR. TATE

Well, Mr. Jenkins, as it passed the convention floor, it said, "any local governmental subdivision which operates under a home rule charter." This referred to both those before and those after the creation of the new constitution, and it just seemed to us self-evident, and I heard no objection on either committee to the fact that it does refer to any local governmental subdivision which operates under a home rule charter and therefore logically it should be placed here rather than create the ambiguity which some people might raise, but it was not intended. It seems not to have been intended to put it here; it offers stylistic clarity.

MR. AVANT

Judge Tate, however, if the language was left in the section that dealt with the adoption of home rule charters by municipalities after the effective date of this constitution, which municipalities did not have a home rule charter prior to the effective date of this constitution, then it would be possibly susceptible to the interpretation that it was applicable only to those type of home rule charters. Is that not correct?

MR. TATE

That is correct, but because in broad language it said that any local governmental subdivision which operates under a home rule charter, the intent was more clearly shown by putting it in a separate section, and to avoid that susceptibility which I think would be defeated by the words of the language, we thought it would be clarified by putting it like this.

MR. AVANT

Well, I understand what you're saying, and that's about as far as I can go.

MR. TATE

Yes, sir.

MR. FLORY

Judge Tate, let me refer you back to Amendment No. 4, if you will, on Section 3, which gives the authority to the legislature to classify parishes or municipalities according to population, etc. It says "legislation may be limited in its effect to any such class or classes." But, then when you go and separate that, and make a separate section under Amendment No. 14, in my judgment that gives identical authority or carries identical authority as would Section 3 which then would prohibit the legislature from enacting legislation affecting local government in this regard even though you give them the authority in Section 3. I think you only do that with the separation by section, whereas you couldn't do it if you kept it in the same section earlier.

MR. TATE

I see your point, Mr. Flory. I think, however, that the language...if the language means more, I regard the language as meaning that shall enact no law of the effect which changes the structure organization, but it's subject to up above, and the previous things that say about home rule quarters. But, anyway, I do not regard its meaning as being changed, as being removed from one section to another; under specific language it says "any local governmental subdivision, which operates under a home rule charter." I personally think that it probably means in line with what is said up above in Sections 4 and 5, that it's subject to and not inconsistent with, and it's subject to the police power. I mean I know what you're worrying about. Don't get me wrong.

MR. FLORY

If you follow the reasoning of what I just stated, then why wouldn't the committee have put in Section 6 in its new section, "subject to and not inconsistent with the other provisions of this constitution"?

MR. TATE

Well, because I believe it is implicitly so, but primarily because that particular thing was not found as an introduction to this provision applying to any local governmental subdivision. But, I do believe that, as a matter of what the proper construction probably is that obviously it's subject to and not inconsistent with any other provisions.

MR. FLORY

Then, let me ask you categorically, in your opinion, and in the committee's opinion, then, it was their intent that this new Section 6 would be subject to and not inconsistent with the other provisions of this article?

MR. TATE

Mr. Flory, I can't speak for the committee, of course, because we didn't discuss it in that regard. In my opinion, of course, that is true because Sections 4 and 5 limit the home rule charter to the "subject to and not inconsistent with any provision of this constitution." But, that's not a good answer to you, no.

MR. FLORY

Specifically, then, this would be subject to the provisions of Section 3?

MR. TATE

In my personal opinion it is, Mr. Flory.

MR. AVANT

Judge Tate, it would likewise be subject to any other provision in this constitution, would it not, sir, specifically?

MR. TATE

Yes, Mr. Avant, it was regarded as subject to all other provisions in the article, and in the constitution, subject to the police power and so on, things like that.

MR. AVANT

Specifically, Section 14, it would be subject to Section 14, would it not, sir?

MR. TATE

Yea, it'd be definitely subject to Section 14, which is about the law, about increasing expenditures except for police and firemen. It would definitely be subject to that.

MR. CASEY

Judge Tate, as I understand, this is the adoption of a new

117th Days Proceedings—January 14, 1974

section. I think the committee would have to have a record vote on it. Sixty-seven members would have to vote for the adoption.

[Previous Question ordered. Quorum
Call: 92 delegates present and a quorum. Amendment No. 14 adopted:
96-0. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Point of Order

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, before proceeding, may I note the circumstance that we did not object to the ruling of the Chair that it required sixty-seven votes, which I didn't understand to be a firm ruling because we...but we think that under the rules, this is not a new section, but a reorganization. Just in case the question comes up in the future, we wouldn't want to accede to the ruling that every time you renumber something, or put it in a different place, it's a new section, sir.

MR. CASEY

Not on a renumbering, Judge. On a brand new section we would have to have a record vote, we think.

MR. TATE

I won't fight the Chair now, until we have to. We won't have to, I don't believe. O.K.

Amendment No. 15

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 15 is simply a stylistic revision of Section 7 (A). I yield to further questions, Mr. Chairman.

[Amendment No. 15 adopted without objection]

Amendment No. 16

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 16 deletes Section 9 (C) and it adds it over in the new Section 26 about the organization of the courts. It consolidates the similar provision found in the, as 8 (H), and makes it one section in the interest of...in the interest of serving, repeating it twice at the end of every section. But, it's the same provisions as found under another number.

[Amendment No. 16 adopted without objection]

Amendment No. 17

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, I have just explained Amendment No. 17. Amendment No. 16 is simply a...that was 17 that deletes it and 16 is the one that just stylistically arranges 7 (B) on the top of page 17.

MR. CASEY

We've already adopted 16.

Questions

MR. AVANT

Judge Tate, this is not a question about the substance of what we're talking about. But, would it be possible for you to refer to the page in the green material that we have? It would be much easier to follow, I believe.

MR. TATE

Surely. I'm sorry, Mr. Avant. I had consented to do that and I forgot.

Page 17 is..Amendment No. 17 is to page 17. It deletes Section 9 (C) on the left hand side of the page. Later on, it will be found as Section 26 which is on page 40 of your material, consolidating Sections 8 (H) and Section 9 (C). Judge Dennis, the author of both amendments, had no objection to this consolidation of the same concept. The courts, excuse me, are created and established only as authorized by Article V and that we need not talk about them in the home rule section.

MR. BERGERON

Judge...Judge Tate, you said Section 9 (C) becomes Section 26?

MR. TATE

Twenty-six on page 40, it consolidates Section 9 (C) and also Section 8 (H).

MR. BERGERON

O.K. I was just--just a point of information. My green copy has it become Section 27.

MR. TATE

That's an error. The 27, we didn't catch the renumbering and changed that in ink. You see, that's just a staff note in ink on the bottom. We are apologizing for that, too.

[Amendment No. 17 adopted without objection]

Amendment No. 18

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 18, simply in line with the usual practice in the constitution, singularize cities, towns, and villages to "no parish shall prohibit the incorporation of a city, town, or village as provided by general law." Of course, that means one or more cities. But, it was singularized in line with the rule of singularization we're following throughout. When you say "a judge can't do that" you mean all judges can't. "A city" can't do anything, all cities can't, and so on.

Question

MR. J. JACKSON

Judge, I just heard your explanation. I just want to make sure that it's not a limitation on parishes which may have, maybe, three cities incorporated, and might want to expand, or might not want to expand. You might use the argument, "well this is the limitation." So, in effect, what you are saying for the records that this is not a limitation to one city....

MR. TATE

To one city. No, that's true.

It's "no parish shall prohibit the corporation of a city"--one or more cities, it means----any cities, all cities.

[Amendment No. 18 adopted without objection]

Amendment No. 19

MR. TATE

Amendment 19 once again singularizes. Instead of saying plural "local governmental subdivisions", it says "no local governmental subdivision shall", and otherwise is simply stylistic changes, leaving out words as we ordinarily leave them--"except as may be" and "except as" provided by law, mean the same thing.

[Amendment No. 19 adopted without objection]

Amendment No. 20

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 20, which is to Section 9 (B) on page 19 of your green material...simply adds a title, and otherwise, no change in language.

[Amendment No. 20 adopted without objection]

117th Days Proceedings—January 14, 1974

Amendment No. 21

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 21 is to Section 10 on page 20, talking about the Singletary codes. It shortens the language and has the same effect. I want you all from now on when these municipalitiea and other local governmental units start to enact these codea, we got to remember to call them the Singletary codes. That will be Alvin's....one of Alvin's immortalitiea.

[Amendment No. 21 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 22

MR. TATE

Amendment 22 is to Section 11. Again, it just...omitted as unnecessary the repetition of the words "of any governing authority." and it felt that "from single-member districts" with a hyphen said the same... the same thing a little bit more--with a little more punch than" on the basis of single-member districts."

[Amendment No. 22 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 23

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 23 is to Section 12 on page 22 of your green copy. It is simply using standard punctuation and renumbering the sections to conform to the new section, singularizing, and the usual rules of consistency we have been trying to follow.

[Amendment No. 23 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 24

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 24, aside from other clearly stylistic changes, removes the reference to the assessor in the Local Government Article because he has been provided for in the Revenue and Taxation Article. Otherwise, they're simply stylistic changes.

[Amendment No. 24 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 25

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 25 which is to Section 13 (B) on page 24 of your green material. It was simply standardized language and singularizing it.

[Amendment No. 25 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 26

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 26, very minor changes in punctuation, adding the comma in a series and so on, were made.

[Amendment No. 26 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 27

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 27, which is to Section 15, on page 26 of your material.

Now, as you find it there, there is a comma after "levied,". That comma, the amendment is not found in the comma--I mean the comma is not found in Amendment No. 27. It was removed as incorrect punctuation because there are just two in the series-- "prior approval of any charge or tax levied or bond issued." There are three in the series, and you either had to have no...omit the "or", one "or", or omit the comma. That was done without changing the substance.

[Amendment No. 27 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 28

MR. TATE

Amendment 28, on page 27 of your material. As you see, we shortened it without leaving out any of the substance, put in commas, and put statements in a positive form--the usual stylistic changes.

[Amendment No. 28 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 29

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 29 is to Section 16 (B)...on page 29. It's just the usual stylistic changes.

[Amendment No. 29 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 30

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 30 is to Section 17 on page 30. We singularized and made other usual changes. We did legislatively establish procedures established by law in line with what we have been doing throughout the constitution to clarify that it's a law when the legislature acts, except for the two or three instances when it's not, and so on.

Questions

MR. FLORY

Judge Tate, under your proposed Section 17 as you have it, do you believe that this would negate any authority that a state official might have insofar as enforcing regulations passed or adopted by the legislature?

MR. TATE

No, Mr. Flory. We deliberately left that question to the future. We couldn't spell it out. It's a policy question that we did not think it appropriate for us to try to bring to your attention because it's just one of those things that is best left to the future to decide.

MR. FLORY

The future of what?

MR. TATE

The future of the...whether he does or does not would not be changed by our language, we took language there as it was found. I would say that it is...personally, I would say it's subject to the police power of the state which may be exercised through the state fire marshal, etc. I would say that, because you have in other provisions "nothing shall abridge the police power of the state." But, I would say that we did not attempt to clarify that lurking issue here, because it required more of a policy judgment than was available to Style and Drafting.

MR. FLORY

In other words, you believe that this section would be subject to the police power of the state.

MR. TATE

I personally so believe, Mr. Flory.

MRS. MILLER

Judge Tate, in the last sentence, you've changed the word "districts" to "commissions." You don't know what we've created in some of our areas. We've created districts under the revised statutes. To some extent, this parallels statutory things, but, I'm wondering, because we create the districts and commissions run them.

MR. TATE

Mrs. Miller, we have caveated that to Local Government because the only existing one is a commission and not a district. Local Government came back and said that "commissions" would be more accurate. There's only one, the Vieux Carre Commission. So, this only refers to the existing one. There's only one. They thought, to be accurate, we should say "commission" instead of "district." I'm glad you called that to attention....

MRS. MILLER

Well, now, I do want to say now we have created a Historic Preservation District out in Jeff Davis Parish.

MR. TATE

Correct.

MRS. MILLER

A commission runs it. But, I don't know if changing the term here—in fact, I almost think you need both the words "districts" and "commission" rather than just limiting it to one.

MR. TATE

Well, are you created by the constitution in Jeff Davis?

MRS. MILLER

We created this under the statute...under statutory authority, the same one under which Toledo Bend Recreation District was created.

MR. TATE

Yes. But this....

MRS. MILLER

Well, I just wonder. I mean, I'm--because we used the word "districts"....

MR. TATE

For what it's worth, the floor debate showed--would someone clarify me--the floor debate showed this was only intended to refer to the Vieux Carre. The others are automatically continued.... the others are automatically continued because they are in the statutes or under statutory authority. But, this one was put in simply because the local government people repealed the Vieux Carre. They got some--quite a few pages out of the constitution on that. But, in order to protect the Vieux Carre, which is nowhere else in the constitution, this sentence was added, "the existing constitutional authority for historic preservation commissions is the same." My understanding, and I'll yield to a question from Mr. Perez, if necessary, is that the only one at issue was the Vieux Carre Commission established in the constitution.

[Amendment No. 30 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 31

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 31 is to Section 18 on page 31. Again you have--this is the third instance where your green copy does not show two words that are on your amendment. Your amendment shows "the legislature by law may." In other words, on line 4, after "the legislature" add "by law" in line with the usual stylistic clarification that we've been following through the rest of the constitution. Otherwise, present tense is singularized and the usual stylistic changes made.

[Amendment No. 31 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 32

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 32 is to Section 19--Amendment No. 32 is to Section 19 on page 33. Again, you have here for the third or fourth time a slight variation between the green copy and your amendment. On line 20, the comma is removed, and the "and" is put in because those are series of two; it's not properly separated by a comma but by an "and". Otherwise, there's simply standard language being used.

[Amendment No. 32 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 33

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 33 is to Section 20. The usual changes are made. Now, an "and" was changed to "or" in line 11, either with--because in its sense, it meant--this says "a political subdivision may perform any authorized function, etc., including financing either within or without the state, or with the United States or its agencies". The "or" was recommended to us by Local Government to clarify that you didn't have to have all--you didn't have to do it with the United States and its agencies--either within or without the state, or with the United States or its agencies." They recommended it to us, and it seems to be in accord with its sense.

[Amendment No. 33 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 34

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 34 is to Section 21 and--which is found on pages 35 and 36 of your material. This is, again, about the fourth time where there's a slight variation between your green copy and the amendment. On page 15--I mean on line 15 of page 35, by words "by law" are inserted; "the legislature by law may authorize" in line with the standard practice in the rest of the constitution. The other changes made are the usual standard--slight changes made using standardized language, and so on. Some of this language we wanted to simplify, but we were--the bonding attorneys informed us this was what they wanted. This is what the Local Government had agreed to in exchange for removing hundreds of pages out of the present constitution.

Questions

MR. AVANT

Judge Tate, my question relates to Section (B) on page 36 of the green material, and beginning with the line 4.

MR. TATE

Section who?

Oh, and I should also say thank you, Mr. Avant, about "no, property expropriated under authority of this article." We checked with the Local Government, and back with us, and it went under this section.

That's what you meant?

MR. AVANT

Now, you know we had some discussion in the committee about that. I want to clarify the intent of that section.

It was the intent of that section, it was more or less agreed, was it not, that property which was expropriated under this section, that is Industrial Development, cannot be expropriated for the purpose of selling it or donating it to the alien or the prohibited class of persons. But, it was not the intention of this section that if property is expropriated and sold to someone not within the prohibited class, that some years later in a bona fide transaction that it could not be sold to an alien. It is strictly the prohibiting of government from expropriating property for this purpose either directly or by subterfuge through, say, a party interposed or something like that. Is that correct?

MR. TATE

That is correct, Mr. Avant. In other words, you can't expropriate it to sell it to the alien or alien controlled. It doesn't go out of commerce forever because later on it can go back in.

MR. AVANT

By a bona fide transaction and not as a way of subterfuge of getting around this prohibition. Correct?

MR. TATE

That was our understanding, Mr. Avant.

MR. NUNEZ

Judge Tate, why do we have to take exception that this does not apply to a school board?

MR. TATE

Mr. Nunez, Mr. Burson put it in. We couldn't take it out. We might have been able to take it out, but apparently, school boards want to be able to expropriate....I don't know, Mr....

117th Days Proceedings—January 14, 1974

MR. NUNEZ

Then, they can expropriate and sell to alien countries?

MR. TATE

Well, that was in before the (B) was added--that was in before (B) was added. They had some reason--they didn't want school boards, anyway, to be able to buy property, I guess. Oh, I remember why. The reason why...they talked about any political subdivision....let's see...the legislature authorized any political subdivision to do this. The school board is technically a political subdivision. The school boards, in their generosity, did not want to get into the business of industrial plants. So, they got excepted from it to make it plain that school boards couldn't do so. Does that answer your question, whoever asked?

MR. CASEY

It was Mr. Nunez that asked the question.'

[Amendment No. 34 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 35

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 35 is to provide a Section 22....I mean just simply revises Section 22, rennumbers it in accord with the usual stylistic changes.

[Amendment No. 35 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 36

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 36...usual stylistic revision of Section 23.

[Amendment No. 36 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 37

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 37 to Section 24, on page 39 of your green materials--minor stylistic change in accord with consistent practice.

[Amendment No. 37 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 38

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 38 makes no change, but simply rennumbers the former Section 29 into Section 25 on the right hand side of your green material.

[Amendment No. 38 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 39

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 39 is the one we talked about earlier. It creates a new section. It creates a new...under some interpretations it creates a new section; under others it simply consolidates under a new number, provisions found earlier to avoid repeating. It simply says "notwithstanding any provision of the Local Government Article creating subdivisions, courts and their offices may be established or effected only provided by the Judiciary Article."

[3328]

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment No. 39 adopted: 98-0. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment No. 40

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 40, which is to Section 27. On page 41. About the parish ad valorem tax. Just simpler words. That's all--the usual singularization rules and using standard language, substituting a word for a phrase, etc., and the usual punctuation rules.

[Amendment No. 40 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 41

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 41 is to Section 27 (B) Millage Increase Not for General Purposes. On page 42 of your green materials. Just made it into shorter sentences--broke it into two sentences.

[Amendment No. 41 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 42

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 42, which is to Section 27 (C). On page 43 of your green materials. Here again is a change. On the amendment, what is shown, on line 8, is "a population in excess of one thousand" had been changed to "exceeding one thousand". Otherwise, the green copy reflects the amendment. That, along with the other changes, are simply for stylistic consistency.

[Amendment No. 42 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 43

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 43 is to Section 27 (D). On page 44 of your green materials. Just using standard language and omitting needless words. We're using "the effective date" instead of "on the date of adoption," etc.

[Amendment No. 43 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 44

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 44 is to Section 28 (A). On page 45 of your green materials. The standard language and standard stylization is done. On line 20, for interest of clarity: It said "Millage rates may be increased in any municipality when approved". In context, that's what it means; and it was suggested to us by Local Government that for purposes of clarity that should be added, and we concurred in their recommendation.

[Amendment No. 44 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 45

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 45 is to Section 28 (B) and (C). Practically no change was made, except to add titles and to break the first (B) into two sentences. That's about all.

[Amendment No. 45 adopted without objection.]

117th Days Proceedings—January 14, 1974

Amendment No. 46

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 46 is to Section 29. On page 47 of your green materials. Again, standard stylistic changes have been made.

[Amendment No. 46 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 47

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 47 is to Section 30. On pages 48 and 49 of your green materials. Again, it simply standardizes the language. There are only stylistic changes that, I think, are self-evident.

[Amendment No. 47 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 48

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 48. On page 50. Once again--this is one of the last times; this will be about four more times, I believe--your green copy does not reflect two words in the amendment. The words in the amendment that are not reflected are: On line 4, it says "the legislature"---insert "by law"---"may uniformly exempt or exclude any goods"---in line with the usual stylistic practice.

Question

MR. SINGLETARY

Judge, when you say "by law," you mean by statute as opposed to by resolution; right?

MR. TATE

Yes, sir. We wanted to be darn sure there's no subsequent litigation, as there was under the prior constitution in two instances.

[Amendment No. 48 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 49

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 49 is to ... On page 51. Incidentally, the capital "S"--Subdivision--on line 5 was a clerical error. It was caught after this thing was run. "Political subdivision" is a small "s"--subdivision--there on line 5. Otherwise, of course, it's exactly what's in the amendment and involves the usual standard changes.

[Amendment No. 49 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 50

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 50. We're going to come back and submit to you a yellow amendment recommended by the Local Government Committee; but, for the time being, the only changes made are standard language's. The intent was--when we come to it, I'll try to explain it, subject to further question--was just to continue all taxes that were authorized for special purposes under the present constitution. But, anyway, presently before you are stylistic changes only.

[Amendment No. 50 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 51

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 51 is to Section 33. On page 52 of your green materials. Three simple, usual sections have been made. Former Section 36 (B) it creates into a special section because it refers to a different subject. It makes [Section] 36 (B) into a separate section on special taxes. Section 32 maintains present taxes for special purposes; Section 33 authorizes special taxes, in the future, for certain purposes "when authorized by a majority of the electors". It does take a part of a prior section and give it a new number.

[Previous question ordered.]

Point of Information

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman, have you called the question on that amendment?

MR. CASEY

I have, yes.

Motion

MR. AVANT

The reason that I ask that: I think that that amendment, which makes a separate section of that particular language, is tied in with and related to the one yellow amendment that you have on this section. I don't want to take the time to explain it right now, but I think that that should be continued and taken up at the time we take up the yellow amendment. I will be glad to explain the reason for that, if the Chair would desire.

MR. CASEY

Are you suggesting that we pass over Amendment No. 51?

MR. AVANT

Pass over this particular amendment until we can take it up and consider it in connection with the yellow amendment; and I don't know what number it is, but there's only one on this proposal.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Avant now moves for a suspension of the rules for the purpose of passing over Amendment No. 51 until we consider which amendment, Judge Tate? Until when, Mr. Avant? Till what amendment?

MR. AVANT

So that it may be considered at the same time that the yellow amendment is considered. Number sixty-six.

[Motion to suspend the rules to pass over Amendment No. 51 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 52

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 52 deletes the former Section 38... Amendment No. 52 deletes lines 17 through 35 on page 14 of the original draft--which is the Section 38--and it will delete both sections--former [Section] 38 and [Section] 39--and it will consolidate them into a new [Section] 34 (A), with the former [Section] 38, following as [Section] 34 (B) being in its more logical place. You talk about the authorization of political bonds in [Section] 39, and then you talk about them being full faith and credit. It seemed more logical to both committees to do it, first, talk about authorization and then, second, talk about their full faith and credit. So, for that reason, this organization was made. There's a fairly little change in language because our friends in the bond profession had a great deal to do with the language used, and they didn't want much Englishification of it.

[Amendment No. 52 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 53

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 53. The amendment, as it shows you, does not... The green copy does not include "the legislature by law" on line 3. "By law" is in the amendment. Otherwise, there is no change. The green does not cover that standard phrase "by law" at the end of line 3, but it is in the white amendment. Otherwise, there's no change.

117th Days Proceedings—January 14, 1974

[Amendment No. 53 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 54

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 54, which is [Section] 36 (A). On pages 57 and 58. Most of the changes are the usual stylistic changes. There is one change that was suggested to us by Local Government: to eliminate the language "as provided for, held under the provisions of this section"--to eliminate that because this applies to all tax elections, we are informed. For that reason, we do not have, on line 22, "authorized or provided for"--"held under..this section." We are informed that it has the same meaning and might create some ambiguity because it was intended to refer to all bond elections. On your page, by the way--page 13--Amendment No. 54, somewhere--it doesn't show as Amendment No. 54 on your page, but it's the one between [Amendment No.] 53 and [Amendment No.] 55, and I guess we can deduce it was intended to be [Amendment No.] 54. You all got that?

[Amendment No. 54 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 55

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 55 is to Section 36 (B). The general, slight changes we were able to make with this bond and tax language are very minor and in the interest of a little more Englishification, but very little.

Question

MS. ZERVIGON

Judge Tate, what is Englishification?

MR. TATE

Englishification is what we hope to make this constitution. It's between legalese and standard English.

[Amendment No. 55 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 56

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 56 rennumbers Section 42 into 37. It includes [Section] 37's (A) through (C)--which are on pages 61 and 62 of your green material. Aside from adding titles, it has simply the standard punctuation changes, etc.

[Amendment No. 56 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 57

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 57 is for Section 38. On page 63 of your green materials. Again, it's standard language. Now, there's one.... Your green copy does not show that on page 4 of line 63, inserted "The legislature by law may authorize". It does not show that, but that's in line with the standard practice that's been followed.

[Amendment No. 57 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 58

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 58, Mr. Chairman. This is the first time we have reached this question. This has to do with levee districts. Generally speaking, we've used the standard language "on the effective date of this constitution" when something will come into effect, on the idea that this constitution--if adopted--will succeed the old constitution. Occasionally--and this is one of the two or three instances in the constitution--there was an intent to refreeze the situation as of the time we left the convention so that, say, a special session of the legislature, for example, couldn't change what the convention thought it had adopted. This said: "Levee districts as now organized shall continue to exist." "Now," of course--we don't know whether that means "now, when it passed the floor," "now," etc. "As now organized," at the latest, meant January 19, when we put our signatures to the convention. We thought of putting January 19 and then submitting a yellow amendment to you to change it back to January 1, 1974, because fifty years from now, if this constitution is successful enough to be adopted and survive, they wouldn't know why you picked January 19 instead of any other year. So, it just looked--and these two or three instances like this when they tended to freeze the situation--as we left this convention hall, to use January 1, 1974. Now, that's the first time, and it'll happen two or three other times at the most--maybe two other times. Occasionally, when there's real doubt, we've left, in a couple of instances, "when adopted"--when there's a real question and when it's unlikely the question would rise up and there was resistance to changing the floor language from "when adopted" to "on the effective date." This is not before us. Generally, we'll have made the provisions become effective "on the effective date of the new constitution" because that's generally what's intended. We've tried, in every instance, though, to check it. Now, that's the only change here that I think requires explanation. The others are the usual atylistic changes made.

[Amendment No. 58 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 59

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 59 is to Section 40. Which is on page 66 of your green materials. I think all we did was add a title and remove a comma.

[Amendment No. 59 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 60

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 60. This is the millage increase. Here is one of the last occasions where you'll find this. On lines 7 and 8 of your green copy. It says: "as specified by the legislature". For "the legislature" substitute on the amendment "as specified by law". Otherwise,--and that's one of the usual stylistic changes made throughout--the other changes are the usual ones about mood, singularization, using a word instead of a phrase, trying to omit needless words, etc.

[Amendment No. 60 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 61

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 61 is to Section 41. On pages 68 and 69 of your green materials. The changes are the usual formal, standard changes made in styling the constitution. I'd yield to questions, Mr. Chairman.

[Amendment No. 61 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 62

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 62 is to Section 42. On page 70. The usual changes about....the simplification of language and singularizing. The usual stylistic changes.

[Amendment No. 62 adopted without objection.]

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 63 is to Section 43. We consolidated the former (A) and (B) into one section and made Section (C) into Section (B) and, aside from those changes, broke the long first sentence into two sentences and, otherwise, made normal stylistic changes.

[Amendment No. 63 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 64

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 64 retitled the Part IV of the section. There's a "Part IV. Port Commissions and Districts." Mr. Clerk, may I ask you something, sir? It doesn't show in caps on here. Do you need a technical amendment to make it caps? Part IV should be in caps for stylistic conformity. "Port Commissions and Districts" should be in caps--all caps after "Part IV." Then, "Section 44" would be upper and lower case. It changes it from "Ports" to "Port Commissions and Districts" at the recommendation of the Local Government Committee because of the circumstance that it more accurately describes what's in the section. I should call your attention that, on line 14, your green copy says "The legislature may grant"; the amendment says "The legislature by law may grant". On your green page 74, it says "it may be changed only by the favorable vote of two-thirds". The amendment is going to say "by law enacted by the favorable vote of two-thirds" to specify, in each case, that it is a law and not a resolution.

Question

MR. CANNON

Justice Tate, having served on this subcommittee on ports and shepherded this particular section through, there seems to be some question raised, and I wanted to raise it for a point of clarification so that there can be no misunderstanding about it. When we say these deep-water ports and "deep-water port harbor, and terminal districts as organized and constituted on January 1, 1974, including their powers and functions, structure and organization, and territorial jurisdiction, are ratified and confirmed and shall continue to exist," by this we're meaning the powers including all the powers they presently have under the Constitution of 1921 and its amendments? This includes their bonding power--the general obligation bonding power--which they are allowed to issue bonds with the full faith and credit of the state, since they are state agencies.

MR. TATE

Well, we understood that to be the intention; and, if that was the intention when it passed the floor, it is not changed by the styling and drafting.

MR. CANNON

I wanted that read into the record for future interpretation, sir.

MR. TATE

Yes, sir. I did forget to call your attention. This is the second time they said "as now organized." We froze it on January 1, 1974, to prevent any possible question that, between now and the ratification or effective date, something could be changed to change the will of what the delegates here adopted.

[Amendment No. 64 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 65

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 65 is the definition section. The changes are self-explanatory. We standardized the usual standard. . . like "in the state" instead of "in the entire state," etc. and "incorporated city, town, or village," singularized it instead of using the duplicate.

The only . . . on (7) it said, "Deep-water port commission and deep-water port, harbor, and terminal districts;" they meant, "deep-water port commissions" and "deep-water port, harbor, and terminal districts." The two phrases were to be defined, so we made that clear by adding the appropriate quotation marks.

Amendment No. 66

MR. TATE

All right. Now the . . . Section 66 has to do, as it passed the floor--and Mr. Avant is going to have a question about it. Should I explain it first and then turn it over. . .

Section 32, which is on page 52 of your green materials, said "Any special tax being levied by a political subdivision under prior legislative or constitutional authority on the effective date of this constitution is ratified." Paragraph (B) said, "for the purpose of acquiring certain special taxes may be levied." Now, the Local Government Committee, and they will. . . after I yield to Mr. Avant, and then Mr. Lanier, I think it is who called our attention may want to explain it--said that this created an ambiguity because what they were talking about was "special purpose taxes" other than the "general purpose taxes" and whereas ordinarily the "special tax" is a word of indefinite connotation. But, put so close to 34. . . the old. . . the old (B) section or even followed by Section 33, talking about certain types of special taxes, it might appear to restrict its meaning to those sort of "special purpose taxes" being continued as beyond this date. So, they recommend your attention, and they think it is not a substantive change, the amendment that leaves out "special tax." Now, some question, I think, has been raised later on. . . which is either one is subject to, is whether it could be a. . . does that continue an invalid tax. I would have thought that under prior legislative and constitutional authority it would just keep it as to taxes validly levied. But, then I would. . . I think Mr. Avant wants to explain both sections together. Then I think Mr. Lanier. . . Mr. Lanier.

Further Discussion

MR. AVANT

I think the problem has been solved, Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates. But, this particular section, as originally adopted by the convention, was only one section. It was Section 36, and it had (A) and it had (B). (A) was a section which. . . a subsection which confirmed and ratified existing special taxes being levied by political subdivisions. Then, in (B), it was a grant of authority to levy special taxes. It defined those taxes, as I read it, as "a tax for the purpose of acquiring, constructing, improving, maintaining or operating any work of public improvement." Now, what that section, in my humble opinion, meant when it was adopted by the convention, was that any such tax which was being levied at the time this constitution became effective was ratified and made valid whether it was valid when it was adopted or whether, in fact, it would be even valid under this constitution. If that's what the convention wanted, it didn't particularly disturb me, because it was limited to taxes "for acquiring, constructing, improving or maintaining or operating a work of public improvement." Now, what the Style and Drafting Committee did, was they first recommended the division of that section into two sections--into 36, and then I guess it would be 37. Then they come along with an amendment that is being offered at this time which would, in the original Section 36 or (A) delete the word "special." So, that would, in my judgment, ratify any tax that was being levied by a local governmental subdivision on the effective date of this constitution whether it was valid when it was enacted or whether it was, in fact, valid under this constitution. But, anyway, I have been informed by someone that the people who want to do this have no objection to going back and inserting in 36 the word "validly," so that it will read, "any tax being validly levied by a political subdivision is hereby ratified and confirmed." Now, if they are willing to do that, then I have nothing else to say, and that would be satisfactory. The main thing is I would not want to validate retrospectively an invalid tax, because there are several suits now pending attacking the validity of certain taxes. We don't want to come along at this point and say, "Oh, well, you lose your lawsuit. The tax is valid whether it was or wasn't."

Questions

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, in view of Mr. Avant's remarks, I'm wondering that maybe a point of order might be appropriate, because it seems as though this is clearly a substantive change that the committee is proposing.

MR. CASEY

Now, you are raising that on Amendment 66, Mr. Jenkins?

117th Days Proceedings—January 14, 1974

MR. JENKINS

On the caveat amendment.

MR. AVANT

I'm authorized by Mr. Jenkins to state that if the proponents of this amendment are going to put the word "validly" in there, that then he won't raise the point of order.

Further Discussion

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, there is no question in my mind, and I'm sure not in the minds of any members of the Local Government Committee or of the Style and Drafting Committee that the law had to be validly imposed in order for it to be ratified. To satisfy Mr. Avant, we'll be happy to get the word in there, provided we can get the procedure worked out in order to be able to get the word "validly" in. So that. . . we have no problems with it at all. We did not intend to have any substantive change. We don't think it's a substantive change, but to satisfy Mr. Avant, we'll be glad to go ahead and get it worked out.

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption. I understand immediately after this they will move to suspend the rules to insert the proper language on "validly." They'll need you to be present, I imagine, to have sixty-seven votes or something. But. . . adoption of 66, Mr. Chairman.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment No. 66 adopted without objection.]

Point of Information

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 67, Mr. Chairman. What have we done with the amendment we passed over?

MR. POYNTER

We haven't, yet, but we. . . you want to go ahead and take Mr. Avant's amendment now to Amendment No. 66, first?

MR. TATE

If the amendment to 66 is prepared and ready, we could do that. Otherwise, we might go back and finish 33 or whatever it was and go through 67 and 68.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Well, I have the amendment at the desk. I don't have the distribution copies.

All it does is add the word "validly."

On page 14, line 7, in Committee Amendment No. 66 proposed by the Committee on Style and Drafting and adopted by the Convention on today, on line 2, after the word "tax" and before the word "being" insert the word "validly".

[Motion to suspend the rules to reconsider Section 32 for the limited purpose of considering the Avant amendment adopted without objection. Motion to reconsider Section 32 adopted without objection. Previous Question ordered on the Amendment.]

Reconsideration

Reading of the Section with Proposed Amendment

MR. POYNTER

If you can. . .

You want to read the entire paragraph? All right. It would read:

[3332]

"Any tax validly being levied by any political subdivision under prior legislative or constitutional authority on the effective date of this constitution is ratified."

Just insert the word "validly" after "tax and before "being."

[Amendment adopted without objection. Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 105-0. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Motion

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, we previously discussed 51. Mr. Avant had asked us to hold up its adoption until we clarified the question on Section 32. Since we just have, I see. . . move the adoption of Amendment 51 which is Section 33. . . which is on Section 33, page 52 of your green, which allows special taxes for certain purposes when the majority of the electors voting vote to hold them. . .

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment No. 51 adopted: 106-0. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment No. 67

MR. TATE

Yes, Mr. Chairman. Now, Amendments 67 and 68 are of the same nature. They are on the sheets like this that says "Addendum." They are amendments to catch the stylistic uniformity, something that we had missed until final styling. They are an amendment to your Amendment No. 1, on page 1 of your white material. Where it says, "Section 1 (A) Parish and Boundaries Ratified. Parishes and their boundaries as established," it says, "under existing law are recognized and ratified." Amendment No. 67, because fifty years from now we won't know what "existing law" was, and the intent was, "as established existing on the effective date of this constitution--as established existing on the effective date of this constitution are recognized and ratified."

You could do it a little bit better than that, but that carries out the sense that "the effective date of this constitution" determines when the parishes. . .

Mr. Perez has suggested, and on behalf of the committee I'm sure we have no objection to deleting the first word of the proposed amendment, which is the present amendment, page 57, and deleting the "existing" and just put in it, "on the effective date of this constitution." Then the section would read: "Parishes and their boundaries as established on the effective date of this constitution are recognized and ratified."

I think he correctly points out it will make a little better English.

[Amendment No. 67 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 68

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, No. 68 is a similar provision. Your Amendment No. 3 on page 1 of your green material says, "however, an existing special legislative charter." There are very few of them. Since the '21 Constitution, at least, the legislature has been prohibited from granting special legislative charters. So, however, when you say "an existing special legislative charter," if they read it twenty years from now, they won't be sure what. . . when it was existing. To make it crystal clear, the amendment has recommended to delete "an existing" and put "a special legislative charter," and then insert between "charter" and "may," "existing on the effective date of this constitution may be amended, modified or repealed by local and special law." It's regarded as a technical change.

Recess

[Record Quorum Call: 108 delegates present and a quorum.]

[Motion to suspend the rules to permit Committee Proposal No. 26 to be discharged from the Committee on Style and Drafting.]

MR. PUGH

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, you will recall when the governor spoke to this body last Thursday, he made certain recommendations for your consideration. In connection with those recommendations and to specifically carry into effect those of the governor's relating to property tax, we have submitted for your consideration three amendments.

Point of Information

MR. CHEHARDY

Mr. . . Well, here's what I want to find out: in other words, if we are not interested in changing the ten and fifteen percent, we vote against Mr. Pugh's call of Section 26. Is that right?

MR. CASEY

Mr. Chehardy, I might say this: of course, the purpose of the suspension of the rules is to get back into that proposal. The idea of the amendments granted is to change that. We, of course, can't debate the merits of this one way or the other. But, that would be the end result of it if we. . .

MR. CHEHARDY

So, the trick is to vote against this if we don't want to change the ten and fifteen. That's what I wanted to know.

Point of Information

MR. TAPPER

Mr. Acting Chairman, you know, you used the word just now-- you said something about "discharging." I haven't heard that here in this convention since we started. Now, would you explain what we're talking about?

MR. CASEY

Mr. Tapper, under the rules, Committee Proposal No. 26 is now in the Style and Drafting Committee. Under the rules, it's properly there. So, we have to suspend the rules in order to take it out of that committee and bring it back to the floor of the convention. Does that answer your question?

MR. TAPPER

Yes, and I object to that, sir.

[Record vote ordered.]

Point of Information

MR. SINGLETARY

A point of information, Mr. Chairman. We have several amendments dealing with the property tax thing. Which amendment is this that Mr. Pugh wants to. . .

MR. POYNTER

It's a set of three amendments. It's on one sheet of paper; there are three amendments. The first one deals with the twelve and a half percent fair market value. The second one deals with paragraph . . . proposed Paragraph (B) on use value. The third one would propose just to reletter paragraphs to Section 1, Mr. Singletary.

Point of Information

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Acting Chairman, my question is: Is this suspension for the limited purpose of discussing these three amendments, because the governor also made suggestions about exemptions? I was wondering if we were to consider them at the same time.

MR. CASEY

Mrs. Zervigon, of course, that is up to the person making the motion. But, I would say when that motion is made in order to suspend the rules for the purpose of taking whatever subject matter we're going to take up, that would be appropriate at that time. That's not really the matter under discussion or debate right now. What the matter is merely to suspend the rules in order to bring it back, and that's all. It's the sole thing we're going to vote on.

Point of Information

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Acting Chairman, I. . . as a lot of others asked a question about the. . . what the suspension was for, and I know that's not the point of discussion. But, I didn't quite understand Mr. Pugh. Is this the amendment that assesses all property--residential, farmland and industrial property--at the same level, twelve and a half percent? That's the one we're going to suspend the rules for?

MR. CASEY

That's correct, Mr. Nunez.

Point of Information

MR. CHATELAIN

Mr. Chairman, if we suspend the rules here, now, this doesn't in any way obligate us to vote on the amendment or anything; is that right, sir?

MR. CASEY

The only thing you're voting on now is the suspension of the rules. How you vote on the amendments is entirely up to you after the discussion.

MR. CHATELAIN

I can vote to suspend the rules and still vote like I want later on, right?

MR. CASEY

That's up to you, Mr. Chatelain.

Point of Information

MR. TAPPER

Mr. Acting Chairman, if we suspend the rules, is it not a fact that under our rules that the whole proposal is then up for discussion, and amendments can be made in any area of this proposal? You can't suspend the rules, is it not correct, for one specific purpose? If you suspend the rules, you're bringing the whole proposal back; don't we?

MR. CASEY

No, Mr. Tapper. You can. . . that's not the motion right now. The only motion is to bring the proposal back into the Convention. But, once you get to that point, a motion can be made to suspend the rules for a limited purpose. We have done this at least twenty times in the last few days.

MR. TAPPER

I understand that, but we could also say it's for an open debate on everything; can't we?

MR. CASEY

That's up to the convention, Mr. Tapper.

Point of Information

MR. CANNON

A point of information. How many votes would be required to suspend the. . . to. . .

MR. CASEY

Sixty-seven votes or two-thirds of those present and voting, whichever is less.

117th Days Proceedings—January 14, 1974

MR. CANNON

. . .necessary green lights to suspend.

MR. CASEY

That's correct.

[Motion to suspend the rules rejected:
34-72.]

MR. CASEY

Mr. Chehardy, why do you rise?

Motion

MR. CHEHARDY

To move to reconsider the vote by which the proposal was adopted, and to lay the motion on the table.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Chehardy, the Clerk has rightfully advised me that that motion is out of order because. . .

MR. CHEHARDY

Why?

MR. CASEY

I'm going to explain right now. Because the convention just. . . just now, this moment, refused to suspend the rules in order to bring the proposal back from the committee to the floor of the convention.

MR. CHEHARDY

So, it's on the table?

MR. CASEY

No. The whole point is, Mr. Chehardy, that the proposal isn't even here to make that vote on.

MR. CHEHARDY

But, isn't the proposal presently before the constitution, passed upon, but not laid upon the table?

MR. CASEY

No. But, the point is, the proposal is in the Committee on Style and Drafting. In order to do anything with it, we had to bring it back to the floor of the convention. Most of the convention just refused to do that just now.

Let me just go one step further, Mr. Chehardy. Also, we had. . . .the convention had a gentleman's agreement that in the interest of taking care of any problems that had to be resolved with these proposals, we did have a gentleman's agreement that we would not do that at this time.

MR. CHEHARDY

Yea, but we'd rather not have anything else done with this particular section.

MR. CASEY

Well, Mr. Chehardy, your motion's out of order.

Motion

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman, I move for a suspension of the rules for the purpose of discharging Committee Proposal (whatever it is) having to do with ad valorem property taxation from the Committee on Revenue, Finance and Taxation, for the purpose of having it finally adopted by this convention, and reconsidering the vote by which it was adopted and laying that motion on the table.

Point of Order

MR. TATE

I thought that under the rules of the convention, I. . . like the rest interpret that vote as decisive, that we are not going to go into the merits of the ad valorem, twelve-and-a-half percent and fifteen percent again. But, I thought under the rules of the convention, you wanted to hold all these things together because we might, for instance, renumber it from Article XI to Article IX, if some of the earlier articles disappear and so on.

MR. CASEY

Judge Tate, that's absolutely correct. But a gentleman has made the motion. We may question the wisdom of it, but, we have to vote.

Now, Mr. Avant has moved for a suspension of the rules for the sole purpose of discharging and removing Committee Proposal No. . . .

[Motion withdrawn.]

Point of Information

MR. RAYBURN

Can you get better recognized if you run and grab a mike, or can you get better recognized if you stay in your seat and hold your hand up?

[Quorum Call: 102 delegates present
and a quorum.]

Point of Information

MR. SHANNON

Mr. Acting Chairman, I believe the rules of this convention specify that no one be acknowledged unless he is at his seat. Is that not right?

MR. CASEY

Mr. Shannon, you're absolutely correct. As you know, we've tried to use, interpret the rules as liberally as possible. Do you--are you--what point are you making, however?

MR. SHANNON

I would like to that we insist upon that. That we not recognize anybody unless they are at their seat.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Shannon, that is perfectly in order, and if the-- as long as the convention understands the rules will be strictly interpreted, don't be surprised if you don't get recognized if you're not at your seat.

Motion

MR. GRAVEL

I just want to be sure that I present this fairly and clearly to the convention. In just a moment, I'm going to ask for a suspension of the rules in order that we can, through whatever parliamentary procedure is necessary, reconsider Committee Proposal No. 37. In the event the suspension of the rules is granted by this convention, I'm going to ask that we reconsider that proposal for the limited and exclusive purpose of making it clear that the provisions of Committee Proposal No.37 with respect to automatic rate increases by the. . . .automatic rate increases for public utilities is an area that's left up to the legislature and the legislature only. That's the only purpose that I rise for at this time. I wanted to make it clear what I intended to do in the event that you do suspend the rules and permit us to consider Committee Proposal No. 37.

Questions

MR. TATE

Mr. Gravel, if the amendment is going to specify that the legislature may do what you want, many members voted here on the idea that it--the present language does--and Style and Drafting plans, in the recommendation of both Natural Resources, and its own committee--to submit to the floor language to this effect, which may carry out what you want. It says, 14 (D) 3, "after the effective filing date"--so on and so on--"if no decision is rendered on the application within twelve months after such filing date, the proposed increase may be put into effect but only if and as provided by law and subject to protective bond." Now, would that accomplish the objectives of your amendment?

MR. GRAVEL

Not exactly, Judge. If we get to it I'd like to explain it because I do think there needs to be some explanation.

MR. SCHMITT

Well, he's been up there for five minutes.

I'd like to ask a question with reference to this. Is my interpretation correct that according to this (D) 2, the legislature could put the rate increase into effect immediately and would not have to wait for the twelve month period of time according to this amendment here. Is that correct?

Explanation continued

MR. GRAVEL

Well, Mr. Schmitt, I don't, I hadn't intended to discuss the merits of this proposal at this time. I'm perfectly willing to do it.

MR. SCHMITT

I just want to know whether that's correct or not. It seems to me that by adopting this the people are much worse off than they are with what we have in here. I don't see how this is protecting anybody.

MR. GRAVEL

Well, Mr. Schmitt, I'm perfectly willing to discuss it on its merits. But, I don't think now is the time to do that.

MR. SCHMITT

Well, I object to you....

MR. CASEY

Now, look, gentleman. Mr. Gravel is up there to make a motion which is not debatable. We tried to allow a fair amount of latitude just to explain in advance what he intended to do.

[Motion to suspend the rules to permit Committee Proposal No. 37 to be discharged from the Committee on Style and Drafting.]

Substitute Motion

MR. PEREZ

My substitute motion is for a suspension of the rules for the purpose of allowing Mr. Gravel to explain to the convention and submit to questions with respect to the difference between what his proposal is and what the present provisions which have been adopted by this convention are.

So, I move for a suspension of the rules for a period of fifteen minutes for that purpose as a substitute.

[Substitute Motion adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. GRAVEL

Well, I hope I don't need that long, Mr. Acting Chairman, but I'll be glad to do the very best I can on this.

Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, with respect to the provisions that were adopted when we considered the Public Service Commission Article, there was a Section (D)....

There are two or three people that are asking a lot of... either want to ask questions, or waving their hands. I don't know what the trouble is.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Gravel, just let them wave their hands and go ahead and make your remarks. I'm putting them on the list.

MR. GRAVEL

I have no objections to answering any questions to the extent that I'm able to do so.

MR. CASEY

In other words, you yield for questions at this time?

MR. GRAVEL

I'd rather make a statement as to what we are trying to do here, and the background of it, to the extent that it might enlighten some of the delegates, and we'll see exactly where we are.

MR. CASEY

Go ahead and make your statement, first, Mr. Gravel. We'll take up questions later on.

You are now recognized for your statement, Mr. Gravel. Go right ahead.

MR. GRAVEL

I'm not going to yield to anybody until I get through making a brief statement. I'd appreciate it, Mr. Chairman, if I can go ahead, then, with this.

MR. CASEY

You have the floor, Mr. Gravel.

MR. GRAVEL

The governor came before us and suggested that some changes be made in the proposal dealing with the Public Service Commission insofar as there appeared to be substantial misunderstanding throughout the entire state about what had been accomplished by this convention.

MR. CASEY

Just a minute, Mr. Gravel.

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Shannon, while we're waiting here a second....where's Mr. Shannon? You want to know which amendment he's talking about? It's the one at the bottom that says "Amended Proposed Amendment." He passed out two of them and he revised it. So, it's a revised one. I think it says "Amended Proposed Amendment" at the bottom.

MR. GRAVEL

Yes. Go ahead, Mr. Clerk, please.

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

I'm sorry, Mr. Gravel.

Mr. Gravel, prior to that. If we get that far, prior to the actual introduction there are a number of small changes that even to the amended proposed amendment need to be made.

In Subparagraph 2, on line 2, after the words, "the legislature may", the word "be" should be corrected to be "by" not "be". On the very same last line of the text of it the word "appealed", I believe, is misspelled. On the fourth to the last line which begins with a portion of the word "requirements as it" striking the word "it" and for clarity putting "the legislature shall provide." So, that paragraph would read "notwithstanding any contrary provisions of this constitution the legislature may by law provide a proposed rate increase to be put into effect pending final action by the commission, and pending appeal in the courts but only subject to protective bond or security requirements as the legislature shall provide, and subject to refund with legal interest thereon, of amounts collected in excess of the rate schedule finally approved by the commission or, if appealed, by the court."

Explanation continued

MR. GRAVEL

As I stated before, there's been a great deal of misunderstanding about what this convention has done with respect to the so-called automatic rate increase provisions that relate to public utilities. There is some serious concern about just what effect exists with regard to the language that was adopted by this convention in that section, Section (B), when we considered the Public Service Commission Proposal. What this particular proposal will do is to retain Section (B) 2 that provides that within twelve months from the effective date of filing, the commission shall render a full decision on every application, petition, and proposed rate schedule. That section, (B) 2, is now incorporated in the proposed amendment as (B) 1. All of the other provisions of Section (D) of that proposal are deleted by the amendment which I will propose in the event that this convention permits me to do so. In lieu, thereof, we will insert the language that is now set forth as amended by the statements made by the Clerk, as (B) 2 of the proposed floor amendment that you have before you.

What this, then, will do is to make it perfectly clear that the legislature may provide with respect to automatic rate increases in the event it sees fit to do so. This simply carries out completely the suggestion that the governor made that this being an area in which the legislature should operate, and not the constitutional convention, we afford the legislature the opportunity to do so. Now, some of you have had some concerns and some doubts about the exact language as here employed. Perhaps it can be recast in such a way to make it more acceptable by the Style and Drafting Commission--Committee. But, I do suggest to you this. That those who supported the original proposal that was adopted by the convention--I'm talking about delegates on the floor and people who had the interest to some extent of both the commission and the utilities at heart--have approved of this language as it is, and have subscribed to it as accomplishing the purposes that the governor said should be accomplished by this convention. Now I urge you to suspend the rules, give consideration to this proposal, and hopefully adopt it so that we can relegate to the legislature arena those provisions that have to do with the putting of public utility rates in effect under protective bond and security, where there hasn't been any final decision either by the commission or by the courts. That's about all I can say to you at this time.

Questions

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Gravel, if I understand this amendment correctly, you are putting the provision in the constitution where that if a decision has not been reached--a full decision on every application, petition, and proposed rate schedule--you are saying that the Public Service Commission members will have to render a decision within twelve months.

MR. GRAVEL

Yes, sir.

MR. RAYBURN

Now, the second part, you are saying that you can leave it up to the legislature, subject to protective bonds or security requirements with refunds and legal interest rate. Does not the legislature have that power and authority now?

MR. GRAVEL

I think, Senator Rayburn, that there might be some serious question as to whether the legislature either presently has that power and authority, because of the power and authority of the Public Service Commission. There would be a serious question as to whether the legislature could exercise such power under the new constitution unless we specifically give it to them because of the powers otherwise granted to the Public Service Commission. I think this would be a modification of the powers of the Public Service Commission in which area the legislature could act.

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Gravel, Senator Rayburn asked the question I was going to ask, but as a corollary to that, I was wondering, doesn't the...and I'm not certain...doesn't the provision on the Public Service Commission say "subject to such other powers and duties that the legislature may give to the commission." Wouldn't that basically be a legislative grant to give the commission certain duties?

MR. GRAVEL

Stan, let me tell you what I believe about this. I believe if we do not have this language in here, if I understand your question correctly, that only the Public Service Commission would be in a position to put rate increases in effect under any circumstances, and that unless this specific grant of authority is given to the legislature, that the legislature would not have the authority to permit even temporary increases into effect.

MR. DUVAL

Well, one thing some people are concerned about, does this change what we've done so as to allow rate increases to come into effect almost immediately, the legislature would so desire. Whereas, under the committee proposal a rate increase could not come into effect until after the commission had failed to decide within a specified time.

MR. GRAVEL

I think that would be a matter that would address itself to the legislature...that the legislature could make the determination and provide with respect to temporary rate increases without final adjudication.

It would have the same effect as the language, I think, that we have in the constitution would have.

MR. CHATELAIN

Delegate Gravel, in your amendment that you are proposing, in Section (D), or the first paragraph of your amendment, would you construe this to be a constitutional direction to the Public Service Commission?

MR. GRAVEL

Yea, I would.

MR. CHATELAIN

In other words, within twelve months they have to make a decision.

MR. GRAVEL

Well, it would be a constitutional mandate. But, of course, if they...it doesn't mean that they...that it's self-executing where a decision is forced. But, this is a directive and a mandate to the commission.

MR. CHATELAIN

Second part of the two part there would be a permissive deal. The legislature could or could not do this.

MR. GRAVEL

Correct.

MR. CHATELAIN

In other words, they can stay where it is now, but the first part would be a constitutional mandate or direction to the Public Service Commission.

MR. GRAVEL

Correct. Yes, sir.

MR. PEREZ

So that we can understand what we're talking about. As I would understand it, what has already been adopted by the convention is that the rate increase could only become effective twelve months after the filing. Whereas, under the proposed amendment which you have, it is possible that the legislature might allow immediate rate increase prior to any hearing. Is that correct?

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Perez, it's my recollection that under the one, what we had adopted, that the commission could authorize a rate increase pending final action by it.

MR. PEREZ

Well, let me read to you what we have adopted. It says, "If no decision is rendered on the application within twelve months after such filing date, the proposed increase may be put into effect, but only as provided by law." So, therefore, it would have to be a twelve month waiting period before the rate could be put into effect. Whereas, under your proposal the rate, if the legislature so determines, the rate could be put into effect immediately upon the filing. Is that correct?

MR. GRAVEL

I believe though, Mr. Perez, that the next section may authorize the Public Service Commission to authorize a rate increase under protective bond and security before it finally decides within the twelve months. I believe that provision is in there.

MR. ARNETTE

Mr. Gravel, you are perfectly correct about the commission being able to put these things into effect under bond, if they so choose to. But, what I'm worried about, under your language, it would allow the legislature to say that the utility company could do it by their own action simply on the filing date if the legislature chose to give them that authority. This is what worries me. At least in the other one, the commission had to O.K. it or there was a twelve month wait. In your amendment, there is neither.

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Arnette, I want to say this as clearly as I can, what this does, and is intended to do, and what I think personally should be done, is to leave to the legislature complete authority to decide if at all, when, and under what circumstances, rate schedules may go into effect, other than by decision of the commission and the courts, subject, however, to protective bond and security.

MR. ARNETTE

So, in other words your amendment seeks to take out these limitations on the automatic rate increase that we already have in the other proposal?

MR. GRAVEL

That's what it would do. But, the purpose is, is to leave the entire matter to the legislature as being a legislative matter.

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Gravel, I'm trying to understand what, exactly, you and the rest of us, the group who are trying to put in some provisions that the governor recommended, just what we're trying to do because my understanding was that the governor said this should not be in the constitution. Isn't that correct?

117th Days Proceedings—January 14, 1974

MR. GRAVEL

Not this particular provision, that there should be no . . . all of the details should not be spelled out in the constitution, but that this was a matter that should be left to the legislature. But, Senator Nunez, let me make this point clear because I think it's important.

Unless we have this provision in here, I don't think that the legislature could act because of the authority that is granted exclusively, otherwise to the Public Service Commission to put rate increases into effect.

MR. NUNEZ

But, it seems like on times that you want to keep what's in there, you make it stronger when you want to take it out, you take it completely out on the other one.

Don't you agree, if this statement I'm going to make here, I'll read to you, refreshes your memory, then we'd know what the governor wants to do--I think--"I have to be practical . . . you're going to want to say something about it in the constitution. I suggest that you delete from the provisions of the constitution that provision related to automatic rate increases for Public Service agencies. Even with assurances, it doesn't belong in the constitution and should be handled on a legislative basis. As a matter of fact, I would be perfectly content, if it isn't in the constitution, I would be perfectly content to suggest to the legislature in May that a companion piece of legislation be adopted by the legislature in May, because there's a great deal of merit for that pass of that kind. But, I say again, it doesn't belong in a constitution, and I ask you to take it out." Unquote, isn't that what he said?

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Nunez, let me make sure you understand clearly. . . .

MR. NUNEZ

I'm trying to make sure you understand.

MR. GRAVEL

. . . wait. I think I want to understand, but I'm not convinced that you do on this point. The governor says that the question of automatic rate increases should be left to the legislature. You can't leave that to the legislature unless you do modify by language of this type, the grant of authority that the proposed new constitution gives to the Public Service Commission. If you don't have this language, in my judgment, the legislature cannot act in this field at all.

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Gravel, I just read you exactly what the governor said. I think I can read the language that was written down here. . . not very good, but I understand it. It specifically says the bonding provisions and the rate increase provisions should not be in the constitution. Isn't that correct?

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. . . . maybe the best answer to you is that I've gone over this proposal specifically with the governor, and asked him if this carried out his intent and purpose, and he said yes.

MR. NUNEZ

Well, that's not what he told us the other day.

MR. GRAVEL

What he said the other day, or what I understood him to say, and what I think that says is that you don't spell out in the constitution, statutory provisions with respect to rate increases. There's a difference between what we have done in the Public Service Commission Article, and what this language purports to do. This language checks it to the legislature. The other language in itself legislates. It's just that simple, Mr. Nunez, to me.

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Gravel, if what he said is not correct in here, I think we're spending a lot of money uselessly in recording and putting these things in this document. I read it out to you what he said. If he's changed his mind and given you additional instruction, I don't know about it. But, I'm going to vote the way I think what he said to do. Take it out of the constitution.

MR. GRAVEL

But, if we take it out of the constitution, you could not do what he specifically said, and that is to help get such legislation passed by the legislature because you wouldn't have the authority to do it, Senator. Now, if you want to be. . . .

[Motion to suspend the rules to allow an additional ten minutes for questions adopted: 95-7.]

MR. BURSON

Mr. Gravel, I agree after rereading what was finally adopted that we did, indeed, leave to the Public Service Commission the power to put these rates into effect immediately if they so desired.

Now, as I read Section 2 of this amendment, it does not mandate the legislature to do this, but simply makes it permissive. Is that correct?

MR. GRAVEL

That's correct.

MR. BURSON

But, it does make it mandatory if they do it, that they've got to provide a protective bond, a refund, and legal interest on whatever refund would be made. Is that correct?

MR. GRAVEL

That's correct.

MR. SINGLETARY

Mr. Gravel, I have a copy here of the committee proposal. Now, your amendment suggests deleting lines. "On page 2, delete lines 8 through 35." That's essentially what Senator Rayburn wanted to do. Now, I want to ask you this, under Paragraph (B) on page 1, Powers and Duties--if we delete lines 8 through 35, why do we need to insert your language? Why will not Paragraph (B), Power and Duties which says, "the commission shall regulate all common carriers and public utilities as provided by law." Why isn't that sufficient? Why do we need to put your language in there if we delete 8 through 35?

MR. GRAVEL

Well, because frankly, I believe, and others, too, Mr. Singletary, believe that all powers with respect to regulation are thereby vested, of course, in the commission.

MR. SINGLETARY

As provided by law.

MR. GRAVEL

But, we're talking, and this is the area of concern, we're talking about really a determination authorized by statute in my proposed amendment which ordinarily would be in the area of adjudication by the commission. Unless there is clearly set forth this particular authority in this area, there is a serious question as to whether or not the legislature can so act with respect to an adjudication or determination on rates even as a temporary measure.

MR. SINGLETARY

Well, I'm not sure that I'm following you. But, is it your opinion that the language, "the commission shall regulate all common carriers and public utilities as provided by law." If we delete lines 8 through 35, is it your opinion that anything else in this constitutional provision would conflict with the power or the authority of the legislature to do what you want to do?

MR. GRAVEL

Well, I don't know that I can say it any differently than to say that I think that when you're talking about a matter that involves a partial adjudication, so to speak, that in view of the language that we've employed, it needs to be made clear in my judgment, that the legislature does have specific authority to provide the mechanism and method if it so determines, whereby rate increases can be put into effect under bond and security. If we don't do it, there is a serious question in my mind as to whether or not, if we just deleted all of this language, that the Public Service Commission, I mean that the legislature could permit it. That's all I can say.

We say in this same section, that the commission shall render a full decision on every application, petition, and proposed rate schedule. That we're not taking out. We think that's important. To some extent, the proposal that I make modifies that section as well as the section involving the powers and duties of the commission. I think this makes it absolutely clear that the legislature can act, whereas there is a serious question as to whether it can act if we don't have this permissive language. That's all that it really is.

117th Days Proceedings—January 14, 1974

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Gravel, I'm on the Natural Resources Committee which had dealt with this problem. Did you know that we thought when we put in there that that automatic increase, that the commission wouldn't do it, but they would just go and do their jobs. So, I notice in Committee Proposal No. 26 where you stated, and you own this amendment, "the legislature shall provide by law for penalties to be imposed on assessors and all other taxing authorities who fail to comply with their duties imposed upon them by this constitution or by law." Now, wouldn't that, couldn't that refer to the Public Service Commission and done away with all the rest of this?

MR. GRAVEL

No, I don't think that particular proposal, the way it's worded would apply to the Public Service Commission. As I recall it applies to assessors and other taxing authorities.

MRS. WARREN

I know it, but they were not doing their job. What we thought that the Public Service Commission wasn't doing that, and that was the reason we were putting the penalty in there. I was just thinking, this would have been a shorter measure, would have been legislative, and they could have set whatever penalties they want on it, our elected Public Service Commission for not doing what they were supposed to do.

MR. GRAVEL

Well, of course, that's not the issue that we're trying to correct. That's not the issue that the governor proposed to this convention, Mrs. Warren. But, I think that there is a possibility that kind of a provision could be put into this constitution.

MR. GAUTHIER

Camille, I have no problems with (D) but like a lot of other people in here, I question the language of (2). In the past when we have said "the legislature may" we have actually used that language to indicate that this convention possibly desire that they do take some action on a certain provision. I don't know if this truly represents the feeling of this convention. In other words, we have implied in the past that we have desired them to take some action in an affirmative matter and what I'm saying is this---I think what we want to do is tell the legislature they can act, but we don't want to encourage them either affirmatively or negatively; is that correct? Do you follow that I'm...

MR. GRAVEL

I follow you. I don't think that the language that I'm proposing does do that; it's permissive language. I think it's essential for two reasons. One is, the general provisions that we have saying that "the Public Service Commission shall regulate all public utilities" and also to make sure that there's no problem that the legislature can so act if it wants to under irrespective of the provisions that mandate the Public Service Commission to act fully within twelve months. So, there is an area in which the legislature can act if it wants to beyond the limitations that I do perceive in the proposal.

MR. GAUTHIER

Well, I think we agree on what we are trying to do. I just... I don't think...I'm not sure that this language does it, put it that way.

MR. GRAVEL

Well, it is, Mr. Gauthier, it is permissive language, there is no mandate here at all. It does make sure that to some extent the legislature can provide for a rate increase under certain circumstances when there hasn't been any final adjudication.

MR. GAUTHIER

You see, that's my problem as to whether or not it's permissive, but permissive in an affirmative way; in other words, we are directing them to put in such provisions because in the past that's what we have done.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Roy, has a question; then, Reverend Alexander; then, Mr. Anzalone.

MR. ROY

Mr. Gravel, the essential difference between this proposition and the committee proposal is that under what we've passed several days ago the Public Service Commission in its discretion, at any time within a year could allow the rate increase to go into effect; isn't that correct?

MR. GRAVEL

That's correct.

MR. ROY

And, we provided, though, but after the year the legislature could authorize the rate increase to go into effect subject to it being refunded in any event, at any time if the courts later reversed; right?

MR. GRAVEL

That is correct and the legislature could either keep those concepts, or modify them, or change them.

MR. ROY

Now, what this does, it essentially takes away our first discretionary grant to the Public Service Commission to make... to allow a rate increase to go into effect within a year. This provides that only the legislature may provide for any type of rate increase to be put into effect at any time within a year or after a year; isn't that true?

MR. GRAVEL

That's correct and prescribe the conditions and the circumstances under which it may be done, but it must be under protective bond and security and it must provide for a refund and must provide for the payment of interest.

MR. ROY

And, the final comment that you are trying to make with respect to the constitutionality of having to put this language in in answer to Senator Rayburn's question, is that in the committee proposal thus far adopted when we grant to the PFC the absolute right of making the rate decision, it could constitutionally be argued that unless we empower the legislature by permissive language to cope with any problems related to that, the court could take the position that only the PFC has the authority to act as constitutionally granted and no law would be constitutional which tried to dictate any terms to it; isn't that true?

MR. GRAVEL

Right.

MR. ALEXANDER

Well, Mr. Gravel, apparently you are authorizing the legislature to grant temporary rate increases instead of the automatic provision as was provided in the original document. Now, it appears to me that the major objection here is the fact or the fear that the legislature may do this within the first twelve months after filing. I'm wondering if you would not be willing to go along with the provision that would read like this: "Notwithstanding any contrary, but not within twelve months of any filing the legislature may allow"?

MR. GRAVEL

Reverend, I think that what this does is to give the authority to the legislature to treat of the whole concept. I don't think that we ought to have any...the limiting language. I just think it's up to the legislature to provide if at all when it will permit rates to go into effect without a final adjudication. I think that is a matter that should be treated legislatively, and I think we ought to leave it that way.

MR. ALEXANDER

Well, what is your opinion about the possibility of the legislature acting to authorize a rate increase within twelve months or before the commission makes its decision?

MR. GRAVEL

Well, the legislature could make a provision in that regard or it could authorize the Public Service Commission to do it as we presently have or it could say that no such increase could go into effect until after twelve months; I still believe that's an area that should be left to the legislature.

[Motion to suspend the rules to allow an additional ten minutes for questions adopted: 76-10.]

MR. ANZALONE

Mr. Camille, if the utility company or whomsoever involved were to file a petition for a rate increase, and we'll just say for the sake of argument that they would be entitled to a five million dollar increase. They file for a proposed rate increase that would grant them fifteen million dollars. Would this entire fifteen million dollars be subject to bond and placed into effect immediately?

117th Days Proceedings—January 14, 1974

MR. GRAVEL

Well, Mr. Anzalone, the entire procedure would be left up to the legislature if this proposed amendment is adopted. The legislature would make provision as to under what circumstances rate increases would be permitted other than by determination of the courts of the Public Service Commission.

MR. ANZALONE

Is there anything in your amendment that constitutionally guarantees that the Public Service Commission is going to have a right of review before this rate increase can be put into effect under bond?

MR. GRAVEL

There's nothing in this proposal that would militate against the efficacy of the final determination made by the Public Service Commission as finally determined by the courts, that would be the final determination.

MR. ANZALONE

No, you didn't answer my question.

MR. GRAVEL

This only would permit the legislature to permit rate increases under certain circumstances pending the proceedings before the Public Service Commission or the courts. But, the final determination, clearly, under this language and under the language of the proposal itself would be that ultimately and finally approved by the courts.

MR. ANZALONE

The final determination but not the initial putting into effect of the rate increase under bond, this would be left entirely to the legislature?

MR. GRAVEL

Under such circumstances if the legislature would prescribe mandating the legislature, however, to provide that full refund with interest can be made if after final adjudication the proposed rate increase was excessive.

MR. ANZALONE

One other question, Mr. Camille. What's the prime rate of interest right now for....

MR. GRAVEL

The prime rate or the legal rate?

MR. ANZALONE

Prime.

MR. GRAVEL

I don't know what the prime rate is right now, it's somewhere between nine and a half and ten and a half percent, but the legal rate of interest, I think, is what we have in here....

MR. ANZALONE

Seven.

MR. GRAVEL

Seven percent.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Gravel, I think it was brought out during Mr. Roy's questions that you agreed that this takes away from the Public Service Commission and gives to the legislature the right to put a rate increase in effect pending a decision of the Public Service Commission. I believe that was agreed; wasn't it?

MR. GRAVEL

That's correct.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Now, I have two questions, the first being this: This says here that "the legislature may by law allow a proposed rate increase to be put into effect," but it does not say that the application must even be filed before the Public Service Commission before that can be done, it does not require that. In fact, there is no requirement as to how long a time a utility would have in order to file such a rate increase. Why is that omitted from your....

MR. GRAVEL

Because, Mr. Hernandez, that these matters that need to be determined and considered by the legislature.

MR. HERNANDEZ

All right. Now, that you have taken this...now, my second question is: Why is this authority taken away from the Public Service Commission where that is their constitutional right and the constitutional duty to determine such rate increases? Why do you take that away from the Public Service Commission and give it to the legislature?

MR. GRAVEL

The whole concept behind it is to allow the legislature to permit a procedure that can be followed so that capital improvements and services can be permitted sooner than would ordinarily be permitted upon final adjudication of the case, that's the whole issue, I think, that was discussed and debated when this was adopted. Let me just make this point clear. I don't know what the disposition of this convention is going to be. We've already adopted provisions that constitutionally authorize the putting into effect of proposed rate increases under certain circumstances without a final determination being made by the Public Service Commission. Most of you know that, perhaps because it was misunderstood, that this convention got a great deal of opposition and reaction to that particular proposal; it's a very, very simple where they are now. The governor feels very much concerned about it and has asked you to reconsider this matter and to permit the legislature to go into this area rather than to mandate it in the constitution. We debated this particular issue on this floor for well over a day as I recall it. I don't think we are going to change anybody's views one way or the other with respect to the philosophy behind this kind of an approach. I suggest that we respond to what I believe is a fair analysis of the public's attitude towards what we did and make the change recommended by the governor and check this entire matter to the legislature.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Gravel, my final question: Do you honestly feel that it is constitutional to take away the constitutional authority of the Public Service Commission and give that to the legislature with absolutely no strings as to the duration of it, whether or not they have filed, or when they expect to file, or anything else; could that possibly be?

MR. GRAVEL

Well, I think whatever we put in the constitution, Mr. Hernandez, is constitutional. If we put this in the constitution and give this authority which I don't think causes anybody any problems insofar as knowing what we are doing. Now, I'm not saying that they will agree or disagree with the philosophy; but all we are doing is saying that increases that are put into effect other than by final determination by the courts and the Public Service Commission shall be authorized by the legislature, subject to protective bond and security, and subject to the right of refund as we set forth here. I don't think that this particular provision is cloudy or unclear at all. I think this is clearly doing exactly what the governor intended to do, what he asked us to do in order to help us present a document to the people that would be more acceptable than the document in its present state.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Gravel, I'm not needing you, I just can't understand why it should be....that authority should be taken away from the Public Service Commission and given to the legislature, that is not a legislative function usually. Thank you very much, sir.

MR. GOLDMAN

Mr. Gravel, I don't know if you can do this but a while ago Judge Tate said that Style and Drafting was proposing to do something that would take care of this, and you said it wasn't exactly. Could you explain it to us the difference between....

MR. GRAVEL

No, I really can't; I honestly don't know. All I'm saying is that Style and Drafting can then treat this as it thinks it must be treated for Style and Drafting purposes. I don't think we need, you know, to consider the Style and Drafting at this time, we haven't done that on other provisions.

MR. DERBES

Mr. Gravel, isn't it a fact that the concept of a proposed... the concept of an automatic rate increase is really a type of derogation from Public Service Commission jurisdiction? In other words, I think what most people here understand an automatic rate increase to be is where the Public Service Commission is putting the rate increase into effect automatically. But, in fact, what it is, it is a legislative automatic rate increase that works around or without the Public Service Commission jurisdiction; isn't that correct?

117th Days Proceedings—January 14, 1974

MR. GRAVEL

That's correct, Mr. Derbes, and that's what I intended to say and think I said when I made the statement that to authorize the legislature to act in this area is, in part, a modification of the authority of the Public Service Commission. Now, I think you are correct. I think that....

MR. DERBES

And, when we say that "the Public Service Commission shall regulate common carriers and public utilities" and when we later say "shall have such other powers and perform such other duties as may be provided by law" that would not necessarily permit the legislature to authorize an automatic rate increase?

MR. GRAVEL

That's correct. Thank you, Mr. Derbes.

MR. BURNS

Mr. Gravel, as I see it, the main opposition that is discussed and being talked around the floor is to Section (2) (D) in that they are afraid that the legislature can provide that the raise will go into effect the day after the application is filed. Would you be satisfied to delete (D) (2) completely? It seems like to me that would meet with the governor's wishes, he wants to take it out of the constitution and by leaving (D) in there it would....that much of it would be in the constitution, it would be mandating the commission to render a decision within twelve months and then.... if they didn't, from then on the legislature could do what they wanted to do.

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Burns, I honestly don't think the legislature could act in this area at all if we don't leave D (2) in there, I honestly don't. I think (D) (2) modifies both (D) (1) and the general grant of authority is called....

MR. BURNS

Well, all right. Then, would you consider an amendment to this effect the way it reads now, "Notwithstanding any contrary provision of this constitution, the legislature may by law allow a proposed rate increase"? Would you agree to this wording instead of "Notwithstanding if the commission does not render a full decision within twelve months, the legislature may by law allow a proposed increase"?

MR. GRAVEL

Well, let me tell you why I would have some problem with that. Actually, as I understood the governor's position and his recommendation very clearly says "We've already authorized the Public Service Commission itself to put an increase into effect, that's what the proposed constitution presently says under protective bond and security. It would take this kind of language to permit the legislature to give to the Public Service Commission that authorization. All that this language does, Mr. Burns, is to permit the legislature to deal with the entire concept of nonfinality, judicially determined automatic increases. I think we ought to leave it this way.

MR. BURNS

Just one more question: But, if we were going to put this in there it would seem like to me that the wording I suggest would give a year leeway there for the commission to act, during which time there would be no automatic raise. I think that's what concerns everybody that the automatic raise would go into effect under this the day after it was passed.

MR. GRAVEL

Well, Mr. Burns, that's not what we have done up to right now. If we adopt the proposed article the way it presently exist, the Public Service Commission itself is authorized to put a proposed rate increase into effect pending its determination, the legislature should have that authority.

[Motion to suspend the rules to allow Committee Proposal No. 37 to be discharged from the Committee on Style and Drafting. Record vote ordered.]

Point of Information

MR. NUNEZ

So, if we want an opportunity to do what the governor said, in fact, what he said and not what Mr. Gravel said he said, we should open it and try to delete this section?

MR. CASEY

Mr. Nunez, we can't argue the merits of it, that's up to the convention and what they want to do.

Therefore, those in favor of a suspension of the rules will vote yes. Those opposed will vote no,....

Why do you rise, Mr. Singletary? Let's get it moving, gentlemen.

Point of Information

MR. SINGLETARY

Is this to open it up just to consider Mr. Gravel's amendment as it is?

MR. CASEY

Mr. Singletary, the only purpose of this immediate motion is to discharge it from the Style and Drafting Committee. We have a bunch of other motions that we have to go through in order just to take it off the table.

Point of Information

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Chairman, if we open it up, can we offer other amendments?

MR. CASEY

We haven't gotten that far, but the motion as I understand will be a motion to suspend the rules only for the purpose of taking up the Gravel amendment, Mrs. Warren, therefore, other amendments would be out of order. Now, that's again up to the convention, Mrs. Warren.

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Acting Chairman, does anyone have any idea as to when Style and Drafting plans to report out this particular proposal?

MR. CASEY

That could only be answered by Judge Tate, Senator Rayburn.

Point of Information

MR. RAYBURN

Well, actually, we don't know whether Style and Drafting has taken any action or made any recommendations or anything at this point; do we?

MR. CASEY

I think Senator Rayburn that Judge Tate has already taken the mike and can explain what they plan, but at this point, as I understand his explanation, they have not done whatever he says yet.

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, to report we have discharged it from committee with a caveat amendment to the effect that I mentioned earlier. I'm not trying to argue the merits and it should be the next order of business after Committee Proposal No. 22, which was just a special or stylization having to do with the Legislative Article; it should be the next order of business should we get back to Style and Drafting, Committee Proposal No. 15.

[Rules Suspended: 81-25.]

Motion

MR. NUNEZ

I move to suspend the rules to return this to the calendar and to take up the provision in Style and Drafting that deals with this subject, which is what Judge Tate says we are ready to do.

MR. CASEY

Senator Nunez, I'm not sure that the process has gone through whatever steps it has to go through....we now have it? We can take it up?

Senator, what you are making a motion on now is that we revert to Morning Hour No. 7, which is Reports of Committees. At that time, Style and Drafting would make its report. Then, at that time it would be appropriate to consider the report of Style and Drafting for the purpose of adopting whatever they propose, whatever amendments. Now, is that the motion that you intend?

MR. NUNEZ

That's the motion that I intend if it does what I intended to do, that is, to get it to the provision on Style and Drafting, that is, Committee Proposal No. 37 that deals with this subject which I believe would clear it up without going back into it and getting into a big debate.

117th Days Proceedings—January 14, 1974

[Motion to revert to Reports of Committees. Record vote ordered. Motion adopted: 71-32.]

Report of the Committee on Style and Drafting

MR. HARDIN

Justice Tate, Chairman of the Committee on behalf of Style and Drafting submits the following report:

Chairman, delegates of the Constitutional Convention:

I am directed by your Committee on Style and Drafting to submit the following report:

Committee Proposal No. 37, introduced by Delegate Lambert, Chairman on behalf of the Committee on Natural Resources and Environment is reported with amendments.

Justice Tate now moves for a suspension of the rules for the purpose of considering the report...the proposal containing the report at this time.

[Motion to suspend the rules to consider the above report at this time adopted without objection.]

Committee Proposal No. 37

Explanation

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, I don't know if Committee Proposal No. 37 has been distributed yet. The staff is distributing Committee Proposal No. 37. When you see it, you are going to see it's one set of green ones, a one page yellow amendment on both sides, you will have to look at that because it's a different format because of the shortage of paper and then the white amendment. The yellow amendment is a caveat is in the form of, I believe, two caveat amendments--we'll see when we get to it. It is held by a paper clip in the middle, not a paper clip, a staple. What you should do is....you now have three sets of things before you.....memory, this is going to be Section 14 of the Natural Resources Article---this was separated in December. What do you have? Committee Proposal No. 37?

All right. To refresh your memory, this was Section 14 of the Natural Resources Article, it was separated just before the Christmas recess to separate the questions and the Public Service Commission was treated separately. Now, to refresh your memory one more time, the amendments in which you are interested will be the last amendment. The first run through are just stylistic changes in the interest of using standard language, shortening sentences, and so on, providing titles for the subsections. Now, with that explanation, Mr. Chairman, I would first introduce Amendment No. 1.

MR. CASEY

Amendment No. 1. Please refer to your Style and Drafting report now, Amendment No. 1.

MR. TATE

The green on the right, of course, as against on the left which passed the floor. As you notice, in general, simplifies the language---as to "the five members, who shall be elected for overlapping terms of six years," it puts together from the end to the middle the retention clause about the commissioners presently serving and then it puts at the end, the provision about the commission shall elect its chairman and the work shall be domiciled and so on.

May I make one comment, Mr. Chairman? There will be one caveat amendment on this which will specify that it's in the Executive Branch, but that comes up later.

[Amendment No. 1 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 2

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 2, Paragraph (B) and it deletes the provision in Paragraph (B) which said "Notwithstanding any provision in this paragraph the legislature shall provide for the regulation of natural gas by such regulatory authority as it may designate" because that similar provision was contained in Committee Proposal No. 34 on Natural Resources and, of course, its repetitive here.

[Amendment No. 2 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 3

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 3 which is to Section 14 (C) on page 3 of your green....simply changes "consent" to "approval" because we have been using approval of the majority of the electors voting on and make other....and specifies that this paragraph shall apply to safety regulations and adds "in which it was surrendered" because ..... was surrendered...was left hanging without the connective "in which".

[Amendment No. 3 adopted without objection.]

Amendments Nos. 4, 5, 6, and 7

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 4 is to 14 (D) (1). It takes the "within twenty days" at the beginning of the clause. . . at the beginning of the sentence in (D) (1)...it leaves out surplus language as you can see and has the same meaning. In other words, it's . . .

MR. CASEY

Do you have a question, Mr. Gravel?
Do you yield to a question? You want the floor?
Okay, let Judge Tate complete his remarks.

MR. TATE

Well, I think I've completed it. It says,"within twenty days after a common carrier files a proposed rate schedule which would result in a change in rates, it shall give notice thereof by publication in the official state journal and in the official journal of each parish within the geographical area." It says the same thing as far as we're concerned.

Motion

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Chairman, first for a question and then, I believe, a motion might be in order. The question is: is that the proposed amendment that I had asked the convention to consider, of course, was not directed toward the section as changed by Style and Drafting. I would like to move that we defer any consideration of Section 14 (D) at least until such time as I can get with Judge Tate and coordinate the proper kind of language so that it will fit into the document that's now before us, that is submitted by Style and Drafting. Now, my amendment, of course, relates to the first enrollment of the proposal and I just think I need to properly get it before the convention.

MR. CASEY

So, your motion is to defer action on Amendments . . . let's get straight on the amendments now, Mr. Gravel.

MR. GRAVEL

On Section 14 (D). Any amendments to Section 14 (D)?

MR. CASEY

Okay. Is that Amendments Nos. 4 and 5?

MR. GRAVEL

Well, it would be on everything that's on pages 4, 5, and 6.

MR. HARDIN

Those are the two subject matters that your amendments refer to, Mr. Gravel.

Point of Information

MR. RAYBURN

I don't really know how to put this, but I'm of the opinion that maybe we should hear the recommendation from Style and Drafting and then vote on Mr. Gravel's motion. We haven't even heard their recommendations yet.

117th Days Proceedings—January 14, 1974

MR. CASEY

Well, Senator, then you'd vote no on the motion . . . you're objecting, I assume; is that correct?

MR. RAYBURN

I'm just wondering if Mr. Cravel would have any objection to letting the Judge explain their suggested proposal and then maybe vote on his motion. But, I think we're at least entitled to hear, Camille, what they suggest and then vote on your motion.

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Chairman, the proposal that I make is a substantive change. I don't think it's right to go into the changes suggested by Style and Drafting when we are in the process of trying to get the substance of the section considered.

Point of Order

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Acting Chairman, this convention just voted by a vote of seventy something to twenty something to take up Style and Drafting, this provision specifically because they wanted to see what Style and Drafting had recommended before they voted on the substantive change, it's my understanding. Now, if we do and take it up now, we're going back to undo exactly what we did to take up Style and Drafting.

MR. CASEY

Now, Mr. Nunez, you are arguing the merits of it.

MR. NUNEZ

I'm not arguing the merits. That's a point of information, or whatever you want to call it.

MR. CASEY

The point is, the convention can do anything it wishes. At this particular time that is in order. The motion is in order, Mr. Nunez.

[Motion to defer action on Amendments Nos. 4, 5, 6, and 7 rejected: 30-74. Amendment No. 4 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 5

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 5 is to 14 (D) (2), at the top of page 5. It just singularized "every" to "each" . . . and "effective date of filing" to "effective filing date."

[Amendment No. 5 adopted without objection.]

MR. CASEY

Amendment No. 6.

MR. TATE

Section 14 (D) (3) is the one to which there will be a caveat amendment offered clarifying the intent. The present language is just to carry out the ordinary styling which is to say "any" for "a", etc. "Any increase in rates" . . . "a rate increase."

MR. CASEY

Any questions?
Any discussion?
Mr. Burns.

MR. BURNS

I asked that the Clerk read Section 3 under Amendment No. 6.

Amendment No. 6

MR. HARDIN

Amendment No. 6. On page 2, delete lines 20 through 31, both inclusive, in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:
"(3) After the effective filing date of any proposed schedule by a public utility which would result in a rate increase, the commission may permit the proposed schedule to be put into effect, in whole or in part, pending its decision on the application for rate increase and subject to protective bond or security approved by the commission. If no decision is rendered on the application within twelve months after such filing date, the proposed increase may be put into effect, but only as provided by law and subject to protective bond or security requirements, until final action by a court of last resort."

Explanation

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, I may explain that the substitute (D) (3) is offered on page 2, the back of your yellow sheet which is going to add . . . when it is offered. But, this is just the floor language clarified right now, "but only if and as provided by law." But, that will come up as the last amendment before you, but this is just stylized.

[Amendment No. 6 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 7

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 7 is to 14 (D) (4), on the right-hand top of page 6. It just changes "any" to "a" in accordance with the stylistic conformity we've been following up to now.

[Amendment No. 7 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 8

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 8 is to 14 (E). On page 7 of your green. As you will see, it simply . . . for instance, it clarified "these rights of appeal" because there was an appeal from the commission to the district court, and an appeal from the district court to the Supreme Court. It clarified those and it used "including, but not limited to action," instead of "including without limitation," and "Subparagraph (3) above" substituted "this paragraph" for "above." In other words, "Subparagraph (3) of this paragraph." They are just ordinarily stylistic changes.

[Amendment No. 8 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 9

MR. TATE

Now, Amendment No. 9 is not the issue before you yet, but this was . . . the Style and Drafting Committee was divided, narrowly divided, but it did vote and the Natural Resources Committee did approve submitting this on the idea to clarify that the Public Service Commission is in the Executive Branch, like the Interstate Commerce Commission of the federal government. Now, this has to do . . . to go way back to the first part of the constitution where there says "there shall be an Executive Branch, a Judicial Branch and a Legislative Branch." It said that all of the various components of the Executive Branch shall be divided into twenty administrative units or departments. To clarify, if it needs clarification, that the Public Service Commission would be in the Executive Branch rather than to leave it up in the air whether or not it's within that reorganization, it was recommended. . . the recommendation really adds "in the Executive Branch" -- "There shall be a Public Service Commission in the Executive Branch" -- on line 6. As I say, the committee was divided on whether this clarification was needed or was proper, but we thought it appropriate to bring it to the floor to avoid lawsuits in the future.

Point of Order

MR. KEAN

Question of the Chair, point of order, Mr. Chairman. As I appreciate this particular amendment it would specifically provide that the Public Service Commission would be in the Executive Branch and as I understand, the specific provision of the Executive Branch dealing with allocation of functions into twenty departments would then be subject to those provisions with respect to reallocations of functions, powers and duties. I question for that reason that this is a Style and Drafting amendment, and ask for the ruling of the Chair as to whether or not it does not constitute a substantive amendment for which sixty-seven votes would be required to take it from the table.

117th Days Proceedings—January 14, 1974

MR. CASEY

Mr. Kean, what we've been doing on the . . . on whether a Style and Drafting amendment is in order is just letting the convention decide. So, what you're doing, you're questioning whether Amendment No. 9 is in order.

MR. KEAN

That's correct.

[Chair declined to rule. Question put to the Convention.]

Point of Information

MR. FLORY

Is Amendment No. 9 the one that they have the caveat on?

MR. CASEY

Amendment No. 9.

MR. TATE

Yes, that's caveat Amendment No. 9. We left it to the judgment of the convention whether it's substantive and whether you wanted to clarify. Some people thought it was not substantive, some thought it was and some thought you needed clarification, and some thought you didn't. We left it to the judgment of the convention. It's Amendment No. 9 on the top side of this 1/12/74 which adds "in the Executive Branch" on line 6 to what you previously adopted.

MR. FLORY

Mr. Chairman, I asked the Chair a question: if Amendment No. 9 is the same as the caveat offered by the Committee on Style and Drafting?

MR. TATE

Yes, Mr. Flory.

MR. FLORY

Then I object to the Chair stating then that the vote is whether or not you want to uphold the Committee on Style and Drafting because they've already said that it's a substantive change by the submission of a caveat.

[Convention declared the Amendment in order: 69-34.]

Further Discussion

MR. TATE

My only remark is, as I understand the constitutional reallocation, you cannot take away from a constitutional department that which was allocated to it by the constitution. That is in the reallocation provisions and it's also in the Transitional Measures about the first reallocation or allocation of duties. So, as I understand the reasoning of the Executive Branch Committee it was for administrative efficiency all these various branches would be in twenty units for purposes of administration, without disturbing any constitutional allocation of duties to them, with regard to their regulation or what not. Perhaps, Mr. Stagg would have a friendly question or would like to take the floor.

Questions

MR. STAGG

Judge Tate, would it not be then your concept that one of the twenty departments in the Executive Branch could be a Department of Regulatory Affairs? Under the Department of Regulatory Affairs for administration purposes you'd find the Public Service Commission and some of these other regulatory commissions and this would not be a department or one of the twenty departments as we had conceived the Executive Branch?

MR. TATE

As I understand the Executive Branch Proposal, that is it. It would be for the purposes of administering traffic regulations and personnel policies and for better management, but it would not affect. . . it would not mean this had to be one of the twenty departments. It would not mean, as I understand it, that it disturbs at all constitutional functions.

MR. STAGG

None of its powers and functions would be thereby deleted. Is that correct?

MR. TATE

As I understand it, yes, sir.

Further Discussion

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I take serious exception to the amendment which would include the Public Service Commission in the Executive Branch and thus make it subject to the reallocation authority that is contained both in the Executive Branch Proposal and in the transitional schedule. Now, it's true that the transition schedule says that it does not affect agencies to which duties and functions are allocated by this constitution. But, I want to call your attention to the provisions of Section 14 (B) and it may well be that . . . the first sentence of Section 14 (B) was not intended to read as it does read and to have the meaning that it does have, but it is nonetheless contained in Section 14 (B) that "the Public Service Commission shall regulate all common carriers and public utilities as provided by law." The Public Service Commission under this constitutional provision has no constitutional allocation of authority. The Public Service Commission has only such authority as may be provided by the legislature in due course by law. Under those circumstances, the Public Service Commission is not protected by the transitional schedule provision relating to the allocation of functions by this constitution. If you read 14 (B), the first sentence of 14 (B), and you put the Public Service Commission in the Executive Branch, then I say to you that under Section 1 of Article XVII which is the transitional schedule, the whole department known as the Public Service Commission could be, in my opinion, allocated to another department, or those functions and powers and duties, as might otherwise be allocated by law to the commission, handed over to someone else. I don't think that was the intention of this convention in the enactment of this particular section. There is nothing in this original Section 14 (A) that talks about the Public Service Commission being in the Executive Branch. I think we judiciously did not provide for it in the Executive Branch because it's a quasi-judicial body, and it ought not to be subject to reallocation by the Executive Branch or by the legislature. For that reason, and particularly in light of the language contained in 14 (B), which makes it clear that no duties are allocated to the Public Service Commission by this constitution, I think we do violence to what we intended to do with the Public Service Commission if we now move it into the Executive Branch. For that reason, I oppose the amendment.

Questions

MR. ARNETTE

Mr. Kean, is it not the case that no matter where we place the Public Service Commission they have absolutely no jurisdiction unless the legislature chooses to give it to them?

MR. KEAN

That's correct, but if they . . .

MR. ARNETTE

In other words, if we leave it right where it is now they still don't have any constitutional jurisdiction, and they won't have unless the legislature gives it to them; correct?

MR. KEAN

That's correct, Mr. Arnette, and that's the reason I'm concerned about this because if we put it over in the Executive Branch, you could reallocate it to somebody else and then give that agency or body the jurisdiction.

MR. ARNETTE

Mr. Kean, cannot the legislature do that right now?

MR. KEAN

No.

MR. ARNETTE

If we leave it where it is?

117th Days Proceedings—January 14, 1974

MR. KEAN

No. They might. . . the legislature might not give them any authority to operate under this particular section, but there'd be a Public Service Commission and they couldn't give it to anybody else.

MR. CONROY

Mr. Kean, in the Article on Distribution of Powers we said the powers of government of this state are divided into three separate branches, Legislative, Executive, and Judicial. Which of those three branches would you think that this entity fell under if it doesn't fall under the Executive Branch?

MR. KEAN

Mr. Conroy, I'm not going to try to decide where it falls; all I'm saying is that if you say that it is in the Executive Branch and spell it out, it then comes under the reallocation provisions that are applicable to the Executive Branch, and for that reason, I'm opposed to the amendment.

MR. ARNETTE

But, Mr. Kean, don't you agree that it has to be in one of those three and that we ought to say where it is?

MR. KEAN

Well, you can say where it is, as long as you don't put it over in the Executive Branch where it's going to be reallocated to somebody else.

Further Discussion

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I too have great reservations with respect to the placing of the Public Service Commission in the Executive Branch of government because of the possibility of its reorganization in the allocation of functions. I think that the great majority of the delegates here want to have a Public Service Commission which will continue to exist and which will continue to have the functions which we now know they exercise. I am very much concerned in a reorganization that the authority and powers of the Public Service Commission might be stripped and placed into some other regulatory agency. Whether, in fact, this agency is in the Executive Branch or the Judicial Branch should make no difference from the standpoint that we are trying to protect the jurisdiction of that particular agency, and if we reject the amendment which would place it in the Executive Branch, technically it might end up in the Judicial Branch because the commission does exercise judicial functions of determining rates. The appeals from their decisions go to the courts so that they are definitely, at least quasi-judicial and could be considered in the Judicial Branch just as well as in the Executive Branch. I would therefore, very strongly urge to you as I did before the Committee on Style and Drafting that those words are very substantive in nature, would completely change the concept of what we have already done by placing the Public Service Commission as a separate constitutional agency which would regulate rates, etc. So, I, therefore, strongly urge you to reject the amendment which would place the Public Service Commission in the Executive Branch so that we can avoid its being stripped of its authorities and jurisdiction by a reorganization plan.

Questions

MR. DERBES

Mr. Perez, isn't the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission truly determined in the phrase "it shall regulate common carriers and public utilities as provided by law?"

MR. PEREZ

Yes.

MR. DERBES

Now, within a reorganization in the Executive Branch of government the very fact of reorganization does not necessarily and, in fact, does not really point at the functions of the commission if the commission is a constitutional commission, does it?

MR. PEREZ

Well, if you'll look at Section 1 (B) on the first allocation it says that "except the office of governor and lieutenant governor all offices, agencies and other instrumentalities of the Executive Branch and their functions, powers, duties and responsibilities shall be allocated according to function, etc." Since there are no specifics set out with respect to their functions, I agree with Mr. Kean that those functions could be allocated to another branch if they so decided.

MR. DERBES

It just seems to me that this is a very essential question which we failed to answer when we were debating the Executive Article.

MR. PEREZ

Yes, it's one of the things that's bothered me greatly with respect to this reorganization.

MR. DERBES

What we really need here is we need some type of amendment which may say that. . . in terms of the jurisdiction and the functions of the agencies within the Executive Branch they cannot be tampered with unless it is so provided in the constitution, but in terms of whom they report to and how their money is budgeted, etc., they can be reorganized within the Executive Branch of government. It seems to me that's what we're really talking about.

MR. PEREZ

The legislature appropriates funds for all branches of government, Legislative, Executive and Judicial, so I don't believe that that is a fair analysis.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Perez, we also dealt with the Forestry Commission and the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission. What disposition do you feel should be made with them?

MR. PEREZ

As far as I'm concerned, we should not make the substantive change of putting any of them in the Executive Branch as such, and leave it on its own bottom, so to speak.

Further Discussion

MR. ASSEFF

Mr. Chairman, delegates, I am not taking a position on this amendment. I just want to be certain that the delegates understand what took place in the Committee on Style and Drafting. I am a member of Style and Drafting and of the Executive Department. There are three things you will have to consider: On the Forestry Commission, the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission and the Public Service Commission the Committee on Style and Drafting was closely divided on two; it was 6-5 and on one 7-4. In other words, we could not decide whether or not--what you wanted to do. We did feel it was a substantive change. I agree with Mr. Kean and Mr. Perez that if you put this in the Executive Department, you have placed it under the limitations and provisions of that article. I do not know what you want to do, but I urge you to think about it because it does not come from the Committee on Style and Drafting with a unanimous report. It was a closely divided question, 6-5, 6-5, 7-4. The decision is yours. I'm not urging you to do anything except think about it. Thank you.

MR. GOLDMAN

Delegate Asseff, you mentioned the Wildlife and Fisheries and the Forestry Commission. In your committee did you discuss at all the Civil Service Commission?

MR. ASSEFF

No. These three came up under Natural Resources, Mr. Goldman, and we voted on a roll call vote 6-5, 6-5, 7-4 to submit them as substantive amendments to this convention. I opposed.

MR. GOLDMAN

But, nothing was done on the Civil Service Commission?

MR. ASSEFF

Well, I don't recall whether we voted or not on that, Mr. Goldman. Most instances there is not a roll call vote; on these three there was, 6-5, 6-5, 7-4. I don't care how you decide except that you do understand that it does not come to you recommended by a unanimous or even a near unanimous vote of Style and Drafting.

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment No. 9 adopted: 56-51.]

117th Days Proceedings—January 14, 1974

Amendment No. 10

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 10. Now, this is the amendment you were waiting for. This amendment, in effect, adds, on line 23 on your yellow--on the back of your yellow--to Section 14 (D) (3); as it passed the floor it said, "but only as provided by law." The floor explanation, which your speaker foolishly offered to give, was to the effect that it meant "but only if and as," only if the legislature so provided and only as provided. Both committees agreed and understand the authors of the amendment had no objection to it for this clarifying amendment which is to say, "if no decision is rendered within twelve months, the proposed increase may be put into effect, but only if--if--and as provided by law." Subject to it, to make it plain that the legislature might provide a general law to provide a method by which, if the commission did not act in the twelve months, a temporary rate increase might be put into effect. As your speaker said at that time, I had visualized and the thing would go to court or do something like that and have to have a strong rule to show cause. But, anyway, this is the clarifying language that both committees recommended for your attention to carry out the original intent of those who explained the floor amendment, "but only if and as."

Questions

MR. ROY

Do you know, Justice Tate, that I was the author of that particular amendment and have no objection, do you not?

MR. TATE

Yes, Mr. . .

MR. ROY

Now, do you think that anybody in this hall or any literate person can read that provision as now, you know, with the word "if" in it and come up with the conclusion that it provides for automatic rate increases? I mean, that includes newsmen too, your Honor. I want you to answer with respect to that.

MR. TATE

Well, I would say almost no one could.

MR. BURSON

Judge, as I read this sentence as you all recommend that it be adopted in this caveat, it would make it plain that you have here, two categories of possibilities. Number one, that it is within the discretion of the elected Public Service Commission, if they so choose, to adopt a procedure whereby they might permit a rate increase to go into effect pending an ultimate decision on final appeal, etc. But, that's within their discretion--the discretion of the Public Service Commission. Is that right?

MR. TATE

Yes, sir. There was not much debate on that, as I recall it, the first time. The main controversy centered on the second sentence. Yes, sir.

MR. BURSON

Then, the second thing which was where we had the big debate was that after twelve months, if there is no decision, some of us . . . some of us were very concerned, at that time, that the language that we adopted was somewhat ambiguous in that it implied that perhaps it might be within the option of the company to put the rate into effect; but that the language you're suggesting, here, makes it crystal clear that no rate can go into effect unless and if the state legislature adopts enabling legislation, as it were, to permit such a procedure.

MR. TATE

That is correct, Mr. Burson.

MR. BURSON

So, there is no question, here, that absent some enabling legislation by the House and by the Senate that nobody could argue that from the constitution you could put a rate into effect automatically. Is that right?

MR. TATE

I don't think. . . almost no one could, Mr. Burson.

MR. RAYBURN

Judge, I guess I fall in that illiterate category, but I'm going to ask you a question, if you don't mind.

MR. TATE

Anytime, Senator. I'm just a little scared, though.

MR. RAYBURN

I might make a statement about them over-smart people before it's over.

If I read this correctly, you say, here, "If no decision is rendered on the application."

MR. TATE

Right.

MR. RAYBURN

"Within a twelve month period."

MR. TATE

Right.

MR. RAYBURN

What if an unfavorable decision is rendered in a two month period?

MR. TATE

There is no way, under this. . . there's no way, under this, for them to allow a temporary rate increase. It's only if no decision is rendered within twelve months and only if the legislature so provides a procedure that may a rate. . . temporary rate increase be given.

MR. RAYBURN

Then, if any decision is rendered, then nothing can happen?

MR. TATE

As I read this amendment, Senator, that is absolutely correct.

MR. NUNEZ

Judge Tate, in the event that this is adopted, I think that you have said that this was the intent of the convention when we passed the "as only provided by the legislature." Is that right?

MR. TATE

Senator Nunez, all I can say is that those who voted for it did so--most of them, I understood--upon the representations of your speaker, who unfortunately thought he was speaking for. . . in a statesman-like way to resolve the difficulty. He said that's just what it meant.

MR. NUNEZ

One further question: as a point of procedure, Judge, if this is adopted, then this is securely as the convention has. . . will. Then, if Mr. Gravel wants to come back in and tries to open it and tries to change it and is unsuccessful, then this language will stand, and we'll have something. . . something in the constitution on this thing. . . on this. . .

MR. TATE

As I understand the legislative procedure, Senator Nunez, I think you are exactly right.

MR. NUNEZ

Judge, would you describe a man illiterate as one who vacillates and changes his mind on such important issues as we have before us, as Mr. Roy has?

MR. TATE

I would. . . I would. . . My good friend, Mr. Roy, I would not. . .

MR. NUNEZ

You don't have to answer that. You don't have to answer that. I think we can. . . up their own minds.

MR. TATE

I would say he's not illiterate; he's not illiterate.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment No. 10 adopted without objection. Motion to suspend the rules to reconsider Committee Proposal No. 37, Section 14, for the limited purpose of considering the Tobias amendment adopted without objection.]

Reconsideration

Amendment

MR. HARDIN

Delegates Tobias sends up what has been styled as a technical amendment to change a paragraph description in one of the amendments offered by the Committee on Style and Drafting.

Amendment No. 1. On page 3, line 2, in Committee Amendment No. 8 proposed by the Committee on Style and Drafting and adopted by the convention on January 14, 1974, on line 9 thereof, after the number and word "(3) of," delete the remainder of the line and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Paragraph (D) of this Section."

Explanation

MR. TOBIAS

Very simply, Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this clarifies the language contained in the last section of Section 14 of Committee Proposal No. 37. There is no Subparagraph (3) in Paragraph (E). It really refers to Paragraph (D). That's what this clarifies, and I move the favorable adoption.

*[Amendment adopted without objection.
Section passed: 109-0. Motion to reconsider tabled.]*

MR. CASEY

Now, Mr. Juneau, I understand you have an amendment that you wanted to offer. Why don't you just hit it a lick and explain what you're going to do, because you're going to move to suspend the rules. Right?

Explanation

MR. JUNEAU

Yes, sir.

You want me to explain what I want to attempt to do by . . . or make the motion first, Mr. Chairman?

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, if you will, look at Committee Proposal No. 37, and more specifically, Paragraph (B) starting at line 25. Part of this problem was referred to in Mr. Kean's remarks regarding whether or not this article was to be put in the Executive Department or the Public Service Commission. I'm not getting into that particular issue, but I would like to discuss part of the problem here raised with regard to the first sentence. More specifically, it says: "The commission shall regulate all common carriers and public utilities as provided by law." I really don't think that that's what we intended to say. More specifically, if we're going to put into the constitution a commission which will regulate common carriers and public utilities, you have, in effect, destroyed the constitutionality of that provision by in turn saying, "as provided by law." It makes sense that by a mere legislative act, you could strip away the authority of the Public Service Commission to regulate common carriers and public utilities. I might further add that if we were to leave this language alone, you are making a drastic change in the current law. In that regard, I refer you to page 67 of your black book, which refers to the present duties, responsibilities and functions of the Public Service Commission. I think you will find, by reading that language, that there is no such restriction. I think the intent was, of this convention, to put the authority to regulate common carriers and public utilities in the exclusive jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission. What I would propose to do would be to offer an amendment, which language would read as follows:

"The commission shall regulate all common carriers and public utilities and have such other regulatory authority as provided by law."

That is in basis what the present law is, and we will have obviated the possible conflict, in the future, of the legislature completely stripping the Public Service Commission of duties that I think we fully intend to give them. That would be the purpose of the amendment.

[Motion to suspend the rules to reconsider Committee Proposal No. 37, Section 14 for the limited purpose of considering the Juneau amendment.]

Point of Information

MR. ANZALONE

Will there be any amendments allowed to Mr. Juneau's proposal?

MR. CASEY

Not under the motion for a suspension of the rules.

MR. ANZALONE

Might I ask him a question before you call for a vote, please?

MR. CASEY

State . . . what is your question if it goes to the merits of it and what not? Honestly, Mr. Anzalone, it's not a debatable type of motion. But, go ahead and ask your question.

Question

MR. ANZALONE

Pat, Paragraph (A) is what you . . . Section 14, Paragraph (A) is what you . . . Wait a minute.

No, Paragraph (B) is what you are concerned with. Now, I am concerned with Paragraph (C). How are you going to say that they are given constitutional authority to regulate all public utilities in Paragraph (B) and not make an exception to Paragraph (C) and still have something that we can all live with? What I'm trying to ask you is: Will you accept an amendment that says, "except as otherwise provided by this constitution and shall have other regulatory powers as provided by law"?

MR. JUNEAU

I have no objection to that at all, Mr. Anzalone. I just don't think that that language is necessary, because you have added a Paragraph (C) which specifically eliminates the regulation that I think you're concerned with. You're talking about the municipalities, districts, and that thing. But, I don't . . . you know, if that bothers you, I don't have any objection to that at all. . .

MR. ANZALONE

I just wanted to get an interpretation on the floor.

MR. CASEY

Now, gentlemen, just a minute. We're getting hands for questions and people to speak. It's a nondebateable motion. I just sort of waived the rules just so one delegate could try to get some information.

[Motion adopted: 75-21. Motion to reconsider adopted without objection.]

Reconsideration

Amendment

MR. HARDIN

Amendment offered by Delegate Juneau to Committee Proposal No. 37 by Delegates Lambert, et al.

To the first enrolled proposal, amend the proposal as follows:

"Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 25, after the word and punctuation "Duties." delete the remainder of line 25, and delete line 26, in its entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"The commission shall regulate all common carriers and public utilities and have such other regulatory authority as provided by law. It"

Point of Order

MR. TOBIAS

This particular section of the proposal has been restyled by the Committee on Style and Drafting, and I think the amendment would probably have to be redrawn.

MR. HARDIN

The amendment is correctly drawn, Mr. Tobias.

Explanation

MR. JUNEAU

Members of the convention, I think if you have any questions I'll be glad to answer the questions. I attempted to explain in as much detail as I could the purpose of this amendment. But, again, just for purposes of clarification, I'm only attempting to leave the authority of the Public Service Commission as it is under the present law. I want to negate the possibility of the legislature being able to completely strip the regulatory authority of the Public Service Commission as it relates to all common carriers and public utilities. I don't think. . . I think if we do not adopt this change, we're going to be in for substantial trouble in the future with the language that we now have in the committee proposal.

117th Days Proceedings—January 14, 1974

Questions

MR. JENKINS

Pat, I'm concerned about your amendment. As I read the language we now have, the legislature can fix, sort of, the limits of the regulatory authority of the Public Service Commission. But, under your amendment, they could not. Is that correct?

MR. JUNEAU

Under my amendment, the regulation of. . . the regulation, per se, of common carriers and public utilities is strictly to be administered by the Public Service Commission. As I read the language that is now in the provision, the regulation of those two activities could be stripped to the point that there would be no regulation at all.

MR. JENKINS

But what I mean is, for example, suppose the legislature found that it would be in the public interest not to have price regulations on buses or on trucks, for example. There's no way that you could prevent the Public Service Commission from so regulating, could you; because you're giving them, here, authority to do whatever they want, even though the legislature does not find it to be in the public interest? Isn't that correct?

MR. JUNEAU

I think that's the present law, Woody. As I read Section 4 of Article VI, it says, "The commission shall have and exercise all necessary power and authority to supervise, govern, regulate and control all common carrier, railroads, etc., which includes utilities.

MR. JENKINS

So, really, what you're saying is we should build into this constitution a guarantee of regulation of all aspects, every aspect, of public utilities and common carriers and that it should never be possible, in any respect, to have a free market in any of those; for instance, if the legislature provided to have a free market with regard to rate for trucking.

MR. JUNEAU

What I'm saying, Woody, is I think that the law ought to be the same as it is today, and that since we have a constitutionally created office with elected officials--people elected by the people of this state--that they should have the authority to regulate all aspects of radio common carriers and public utilities.

MR. JENKINS

But, for instance, the attorney general has authority which, in fact, is provided by law; isn't that correct, and the secretary of state? They have certain designated functions and certain limitations, etc. in the constitution. But, basically, it's as provided by law, is it not?

MR. JUNEAU

Well, I don't think that's a carte blanche authority to the secretary of state. I think there are some things that are within his exclusive providence. I might. . . Let me further clarify it by saying this, Woody: if you put anything in this constitution as the language now stands, "as provided by law," we have in essence said nothing for the Public Service Commission. We might as well throw it out.

MR. JENKINS

No, haven't we said that if there is regulation of a common carrier or a public utility, it will be by the Public Service Commission? Haven't we said that? But, we have not necessarily said in our language we now have that there will necessarily be regulation of every aspect of these businesses, have we?

MR. JUNEAU

Well, I construe that to be. . . to mean, Woody, that it's no use having any regulations of the Public Service Commission by the elected members of this state because, in essence, those regulations have to be provided by the legislature. I don't know what we'd be playing with a constitutionally created office for. I. . .

MR. JENKINS

Well, for example, the legislature passed an act in, I believe it was in 1972, setting up certain fees that can be charged for inspections and licenses issued to common carriers by the Public Service Commission. Now, are you telling me that under your language the legislature could not so provide? They're going to regulate in whatever manner they desire?

MR. JUNEAU

No. What I'm telling you is this: is the intent and the language that is encompassed within the amendment which I proposed is not to make any change whatsoever in the present authority and jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission. Whatever act you may have passed in the legislature relating to the Public Service Commission could be passed in 1975, 1976 or '77. I'm only talking about the regulation per se. If you have authority in the legislature to pass an act relating to the Public Service Commission, whatever those acts are today, I think you would have the same authority under this amendment to pass that type of legislation. I just want to preclude a type of situation where you establish a Public Service Commission and then say, "But it's going. . . their regulations as provided by law." In other words, the legislature is going to run the Public Service Commission. If that's true, I don't see what we're putting it in the constitution for.

MR. JENKINS

One other question, Pat: if you look at the Section 4 of Article VI of the constitution, you will see that the right of the legislature with regard to the powers of the Public Service Commission seems to be unlimited; does it not? In fact, it so states.

MR. JUNEAU

Give me the language, Woody. It's a long paragraph. I'm not sure where you are referring to.

MR. JENKINS

Well, it. . . for instance, the language, "the right of the legislature to place other public utilities under the control of and confer other powers upon the Public Service Commission, respecting common carriers and public utilities is hereby declared to be unlimited by any provision of this constitution."

MR. JUNEAU

I think that's the same language that I have in this amendment. It's certainly intended to be that way.

MR. ARNETTE

Mr. Juneau, in other words, what you seek to do is put some constitutional jurisdiction in the Public Service Commission whereas now, they have none?

MR. JUNEAU

That's absolutely correct, Mr. Arnette.

MR. ARNETTE

Is it your understanding of the proposal that we've passed that the Public Service Commission has absolutely no jurisdiction whatsoever unless the legislature chooses to give it to them?

MR. JUNEAU

It's my understanding of the proposal as now adopted by this convention that the Public Service Commission has no constitutional jurisdiction with any validity at all.

MR. SINGLETARY

Mr. Juneau. . . down in, well, beginning with line 26, "it shall adopt and enforce reasonable rules, regulations and procedures necessary for the discharge of its duties and shall have other powers and perform other duties as provided by law." You've got a duplication of "as provided by law." Is that your intent?

MR. JUNEAU

Your point may be well taken, Mr. Singletary. My answer to that would be: if that is, in fact, a duplication, I think that Style and Drafting can eliminate it as a technical change, if there's a duplication.

MR. ROY

Mr. Juneau, I don't know if Al's question was directly like mine, but when it says under what we have presently passed, "it shall adopt and enforce reasonable rules, regulations and procedures necessary for the discharge of its duties," one of which its duties was stated previously, "to regulate all common carriers and public utilities as provided by law," you don't think that that's giving it jurisdiction?

117th Days Proceedings—January 14, 1974

MR. JUNEAU

No way in the world, Chris. The first sentence is as clear as a bell to me.

MR. ROY

"As provided by law," you say it does not mean that the constitution is law and can grant it?

MR. JUNEAU

I think by a legislative act they can restrict and limit that regulation by legislative act to nothing at all.

MR. ROY

I didn't say that they couldn't, but your statement is that you need implementing legislation to give them jurisdiction. I think you are wrong.

MR. JUNEAU

Well, let me just answer your question this way, Chris: all you've got to do is read Section 4 of the present law. You read the first sentence of Paragraph (B), and it's obvious to me that we've emasculated the true jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission unless we make a substantial change in that language. We might as not even have it. . . well have it in the constitution.

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Juneau, if I understand what you're concerned about, under (B) where it lists powers and duties, it says, "The commission shall regulate all common carriers and public utilities as provided by law." If the legislature does not see fit to provide by law or wants to change the law, then they will be elected officials with no duties. Is that. . .

MR. JUNEAU

I think that's entirely possible, Senator.

MR. RAYBURN

Now, could you tell me briefly what the present constitution. . . the language in the present constitution, is that not the language contained in your amendment where it says, "They shall regulate all common carriers, public utilities and have such other regulatory authority as provided by law"?

MR. JUNEAU

That's Section 4. That's correct, Senator.

MR. RAYBURN

Did you know that recently we placed all records in this state, by an act, under the Public Service Commission to regulate?

MR. JUNEAU

Yes, sir.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Juneau, as a direct representative of the people, and considering the needs from time to time, why shouldn't the legislature determine what powers and authority and jurisdiction the Public Service Commission should have?

MR. JUNEAU

Well, my answer to your question, Senator, would simply be this: if it be the will of this convention that the magnitude and responsibilities of Public Service Commission justifies constitutional status, then I think we ought to vest in that elected body jurisdiction. I think it would be wrong to, by one sentence, per se, as provided by law, completely emasculate the jurisdiction that we gave them. In essence what I'm telling you, if we're going to put it in the constitution, let's give them meaningful jurisdiction.

MR. DE BLIEUX

What is wrong with the legislature determining what jurisdiction the Public Service Commission should have?

MR. JUNEAU

What happens, Senator, if a particular governor together with the legislature does not like the Public Service Commission, and says, "We just want to take them out of the regulation of the fields of common carriers and public utilities"? They can very easily do it by the little, simple language "as provided by law."

MR. DE BLIEUX

If the people that those representatives and the governor represent don't want the Public Service Commission to regulate those, why shouldn't he?

MR. JUNEAU

If that's true, Senator, why do we put into this constitution language saying that they're going to regulate public utilities and common carriers? We're playing with words.

MR. DE BLIEUX

No, we're not playing with words if it's determined by the legislature.

Further Discussion

MR. DERBES

Ladies and gentlemen, I don't often rise unless I think I have something to say, and I want to bring a couple of things to your attention. This is the sum and substance of the Arnette amendment which we defeated by a substantial majority when we were considering the powers and functions of the Public Service Commission. Now, let me explain a couple of things to you. When people rise and tell you that the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission is clearly stated in the present constitution, they are telling you the truth. But, what they fail to tell you is that the powers and functions and jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission is stated in considerable detail. I read to you as follows: "The commission shall have and exercise all necessary power and the authority to supervise, govern, regulate and control all common carrier railroads, street railroads, inter-urban railroads, steamboats, and other watercraft, sleeping car, express telephone, telegraph, gas, electric, light, heat, power, waterworks, common carrier pipelines, canals and other public utilities in the State of Louisiana, etc. The crux of this matter, ladies and gentlemen, is when you use the abbreviated catch phrase "common carriers and public utilities." If you use that phrase and do not say "as provided by law," then, you leave the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission up to the court's interpretation. If the court feels that something is a common carrier, then the Public Service Commission has jurisdiction. If the court feels that something is a public utility, then the Public Service Commission has jurisdiction. It becomes a matter of filling up that accordion phrase, that stoic universal public utility or common carrier. If you do that by judicial interpretation you give the Public Service Commission jurisdiction, and there's no way we can get something that's been given such jurisdiction away from the Public Service Commission even though we might pass a legislative act doing so, it could not modify this constitution once the courts so declared it. The meat of this coconut developed in our committee deliberations--and for your information I was on and participated in the deliberations of the Committee on Natural Resources and Environment--the meat of this coconut is in the direct industrial sale of natural gas. Now, I am no particular friend of industry, but what I want to point out to you is that industry now has a constitutional exemption whereby direct industrial sales of natural gas are exempt from Public Service Commission jurisdiction. If you don't include the phrase "as provided by law" in the constitution, the only way you can get direct industrial sales--and I want you to listen to this, Mr. Jenkins--the only way you can get direct industrial sales of natural gas away from Public Service Commission jurisdiction is by a constitutional amendment because once any industrial sales of natural gas go into any thing that's considered a common carrier pipeline, even if there are only two consumers, then the Public Service Commission had jurisdiction, and you can't get it away from the Public Service Commission, whether everybody in the state wants to get it away from the Public Service Commission, you cannot get it away from the Public Service Commission, even by a legislative act. Now, in all fairness to the proponent of this amendment, I happen to be basically in sympathy with it, but I want to point out to you that when you do this, when you state the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission succinctly and briefly, and in the two catch phrases that we have been considering here without saying that the legislature may further define it, then you run into all the problems that I just mentioned. We considered this long and hard, and determined that the best way to handle the problem was in the present language of the proposal as it sits before you. So, I urge you, in the interest of permitting a certain amount of flexibility in this area, and in the interest of an abbreviated and succinct constitution, I urge you to reject the amendment because otherwise, if we are going to say the Public Service Commission, ipso facto, has jurisdiction, then we're going to have to spell out all the exceptions. If we're going to do that, we might as well incorporate all of the complex language that's in the existing constitution, which in my opinion is rather superfluous, and in some cases, outdated. Yes, I'll yield to a question.

Question

MR. ANZALONE

Jim, you were concerned about the regulation of natural gas. Are you aware that the last sentence of the paragraph with which this amendment deals, provides that notwithstanding any provision in this paragraph the legislature shall provide for the regulation of natural gas?

MR. DERBES

I realize that. Yes, I do.

Further Discussion

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, delegates, this present provision as adopted by Style and Drafting says, "The commission shall regulate all common carriers and public utilities as provided by law." Mr. Juneau's amendment would say "The commission shall regulate all common carriers and public utilities, and have such other regulatory authority as may be provided by law." In other words, he would be giving carte blanche to the Public Service Commission to enact whatever regulations it may choose, subject to no limitation whatsoever by the legislature with regard to common carriers and public utilities. The Public Service Commission would be totally autonomous, it seems like. It's already tremendously powerful. It's attracted demagogues in the past. Think what it would do with this provision. Notice that it has a bias in favor of all-pervasive regulation. Now, the legislature might well believe that some aspect of public utilities or common carriers may not need regulation. Maybe rates don't need regulation in a certain field. If we're talking about wreckers, for example, or ambulances, they may feel that certain qualifications for drivers or certain fees ought to be established by law. There's an infinite number of things that the legislature may require that be done or may require not be done. But, here this five-man commission would have sole authority to enact whatever regulations it might want with regard to common carriers and public utilities with no limitation whatsoever. Notice there is a mandate to regulate. It says "a public service commission shall regulate these." Does this mean they're going to regulate, for example, who can own stock, how much stock they can own? What if a commission decided to impose all sorts of onerous regulations that did not work? The legislature could not temper that? It doesn't make sense to me. Notice that the Public Service Commission is merely an agency of government, a quasi-judicial, quasi-administrative agency. It is not a court. The jurisdiction doesn't have to be spelled out here, even if you took the position that courts' jurisdiction have to be spelled out in constitutions, which I think is tenuous. This is just another state commission, an agency, an important one, but still that. It's got to be subject to general law. Now, we've provided by law for the functions of all sorts of local officials, and state officials, and I don't see why that we shouldn't say that it's going to be as provided by law in the case of the Public Service Commission. So, I'd urge you to reject Mr. Juneau's amendment. I think the committee proposal, as amended, with the Style and Drafting changes completely adequate for this subject. We can't give the Public Service Commission unbridled authority to regulate without limitation. So, I urge the rejection of the amendment.

Questions

MR. ROY

Woody, even so far as the legislature itself is concerned, this convention through this constitution has made certain restrictions on it with respect to like voting taxes. It takes a two-thirds vote, and other types of limitations; have we not?

MR. JENKINS

Well, that's correct. You remember the great discussion we had on telephone rates and utility rates, and some people argued that we don't even need that in the constitution because it can be provided by law. But, notice, if we adopt this language, the legislature could not even provide it by law. Only the commission would have authority to regulate as they saw fit, and the legislature could not provide a procedure with regard to utility rates, as we thought we could do before.

Further Discussion

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen, I'm not going to take much of your time because what I wanted to say has already been made by Mr. Jenkins, and also by Mr. Derbes with reference to this particular amendment. But, I just want to call your attention that what you're doing, you are limiting the power of the legislature to control a regulatory agency. There may be an occasion when it be necessary. Remember this: that legislature's a direct representative of the people of this state. They're supposed to take care of the problems that rise from day to day and year to year, and as many limitations that you put upon that, that means the necessary constitutional amendments you're going to have to have to correct conditions. I ask you, we debated this matter when the Public Service Commission was before this body before. I think we defeated this very same amendment. I haven't had the time to look it up in the Journal but as I recall this very same amendment was presented to this delegation, and it was defeated. So, I ask you now, let's confirm to our original position, and defeat this amendment because it has no place in this constitution. Furthermore I think it might seriously upset the energy bill that was passed in the recent special session of the legislature. I just don't think we ought to take this and tamper with it, and upset that particular bill. So, I ask you to vote down this amendment.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. JUNEAU

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I will make my remarks very brief. The issue to me is very simple. If you leave the language in that we have, you in essence, have created a constitutionally created office, who will have duties as prescribed by the legislature. If they don't give me anything to do, they'll draw twenty thousand dollars and just sit up here in Baton Rouge and have meetings every other month. On the other hand, if you want to leave the law as it is today, then I ask you to adopt the amendment. I think that that's what we ought to do. We said it justifies constitutional status. It is operated under the system in the past, and I'm not willing to subject that to constant legislative act. I ask for its favorable adoption.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES
[II Journal 1251-1254]

Committee Proposal No. 15

MR. POYNTER

Do you want to take 15 next, Judge?

Mr. Tate sends up a further Style and Drafting report at this time.

Chairman, Delegates of the convention, directed by your Committee on Style and Drafting to report that Committee Proposal No. 15 has been reported with amendments.

Respectfully submitted, Judge Tate, Chairman of that committee.

The same gentleman now asks for a suspension of the rules for the purpose of considering the amendments contained in the report at this time.

[Rules Suspended without objection.]

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this is Committee Proposal No. 15, which is dated 1-12-74, Revenue and Finance. It's in two sections and a middle. It is being passed out right now. It's a rather big package with the green in front, and the white in back which you will when you get it...

Explanation

Amendment No. 1

MR. TATE

On Amendment No. 1 which is to Section 1 of Article XI, about the power to tax, there's just two technical amendments made. "Provided in" was changed to "provided by" in accordance with the standard usage. "The power of taxation shall be imposed," the powers are exercised. So, "imposed" was changed to "exercised."

117th Days Proceedings—January 14, 1974

Amendment No. 7

[Amendment No. 1 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 2

MR. TATE

Section 2, "the levy of a new tax, an increase in an existing tax, or a repeal of an existing tax exemption" was again, in line with our standard usage, with exceptions, "require the enactment of a law" instead of just simply saying it "by two-thirds vote" to make it plain that it was by legislation, not by concurrent resolution.

[Amendment No. 2 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 3

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 3 is to Section 3 on page 2 of your green. When it said, "The legislature shall provide against, shall prohibit." The sentence was broken into two because it shall prohibit something and it shall provide a remedy. It was thought this was a little more accurate language as well as it reads better.

[Amendment No. 3 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 4

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 4 is to Section 4 on page 2. This includes the prohibition against raising the federal income tax rates, and the deduct...federal income tax deduction, which I understand may be the subject of an amendment later on, a substantive amendment. But, with regard to the stylistic changes, it was recommended that we clarify the rates presently set forth in Title 47 to do like we did in two other instances, and I believe those are the only three instances. Pick a date now. The intention of those who voted for the thing was to freeze it now, and provide against any change that might happen later on between now and the effective date. So, this, saying January 19, which would have been when we leave here on Saturday, in line with the stylistic suggestions that have met no oppositions, we picked January 1, 1974, instead of January 19 so that twenty or thirty years from now, they'll never know why we did January 19 instead of January 1. Otherwise, the changes, stylistic changes made, I think, are self-explanatory, and require no explanation.

[Amendment No. 4 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 5

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 5 is to Section 4(B). That was on page 3 of your green. The...again in these tax areas, we're somewhat restricted because a lot of the language has a meaning, and the stylistic change is to make it into Englishese instead of taxese, and so the amendments, generally, are just to make a long sentence into two, to add a comma.

[Amendment No. 5 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 6

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 6 is to Subsection 4(C) at the top of page 4 on your green sheets, and as you see, it just singularizes in general, and adds a title.

[Amendment No. 6 adopted without objection.]

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 7, Section 4(D) was divided into two, Sections 4(D) and (E), and Section 8, which was added to Committee Proposal No. 34, Natural Resources, which had to do with the Russell Sage Wildlife and Game Refund, and which defined "state-owned property" to be "state-owned land, lake and river beds and other water bottoms belonging to the state or the title to which is the public for mineral development" was combined with this section, and when we get to Committee Proposal No. 34, we'll recommend its deletion there. It was added there for the specific purpose of clarifying the language in (D) and it was also added at Mrs. Miller's suggestion to be sure that the royalties would not be allocated insofar as the property that is in the state under the Russell Sage Wildlife and Game Refuge, trust or foundation because under the terms of that donation to the state, it could only be used for certain purposes, and we've got the legal opinions to be darn sure that it meant just what it said, that it's only royalties that might be affected by the Russell Sage Wildlife and Game Refuge Agreement that has nothing to do with severance tax allocations which, of course, the state taxing power couldn't be restricted by a private agreement, and so (D) and (E) in the best judgment of those on the committee, of both committees mean exactly what Subsection 4(D) meant as it passed the floor, together with Section 8 of Committee Proposal No. 34.

Question

MR. THOMPSON

Judge, what you're saying is that they'll just get what's allocated to them, but it won't stop the severance tax or any of this on this; is this correct?

MR. TATE

Yes, sir.

[Amendment No. 7 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 8

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 8 is to Section 5 on the top of page 5 in your green, and it is simply stylistic changes to what passed the floor. The three dollar license fee, and also the prohibition against parishes, municipalities taxing motor vehicles.

Questions

MR. FONTENOT

Judge Tate, maybe I should have raised this question when we were debating this section, but as I read it, "the legislature shall impose an annual license tax of three dollars on automobiles for private use." Would that possibly allow the legislature to impose a greater annual license tax than three dollars?

MR. TATE

I was not here during the floor debate on that, Mr. Fontenot, so I'm not familiar with the intent. As the language read, it says "shall impose an annual license tax." An argument could certainly be made when it says "it shall impose it."

MR. FONTENOT

They could impose a greater one, could they not?

MR. TATE

It doesn't necessarily...as you read the language, it does not necessarily restrict them. I don't know what the intent of the legislature was...of the convention floor was. It might have been, "the legislature shall not impose an annual license tax greater than three dollars," but it doesn't say that; that's for sure.

MR. FONTENOT

Suppose language to the effect that "the legislature shall impose an annual tax not to exceed three dollars on automobiles for private use." Wouldn't that be more in line with the intent of the convention?

MR. TATE

It could easily be, Mr. Fontenot. Nobody raised this question as it went through either committee. As you say, had it been raised in the Revenue and Taxation Committee, I suppose we would have submitted a caveat amendment, but it was not.

117th Days Proceedings—January 14, 1974

MR. NUNEZ

Judge, it is my understanding that it was the intention of this convention to limit the imposition of a three dollar license plate at three dollars, and no more than three dollars.

[Amendment No. 9 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 10

MR. TATE

Senator, I happen not to have been here during the floor debate on this, and nobody raised the issue that was just raised before our committee or before Revenue and Taxation. It could well be as you say. I would gather from reading the...Times Picayune is a good paper...from reading other papers, that I could well be, as I gathered from reading those papers that that was the floor intent, but I was not present. I don't know what the floor debates show, and what the floor explanations show.

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 10 is to...6 (B) on the top of page 7, Capital Improvements, the...as you can see, the stylistic enchainement...the stylistic change is simply to eliminate unnecessary language.

[Amendment No. 10 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 11

MR. NUNEZ

Would it be in order to suspend the rules and get an amendment to make it three, or do you have a caveat that would deal with the subject?

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 11 is to 6 (C) on the right-hand page of page 7. The second sentence is added. It is added. It was felt to be necessary to be added in view with this...adding this amendment...adding this amendment avoided what would have been necessary to have been substantial reconsideration of the Subsection 6 (E). Now mind you, here 'a---listen to the explanation--I think the Revenue and Finance and concurred in by the Chairman of Local Government agreed. As it originally passed the floor, 6 (C) said "the full faith and credit of the state shall be pledged to the repayment of all bonds or other evidences of indebtedness issued by the state directly or through any state board, agency, or commission." Now 6 (C) was added as Mr. Perez's amendment to say "nothing in this section shall apply to any levee district, political subdivision, or local public agency unless the full faith and credit is pledged to the payment."

MR. TATE

Senator, I'm sorry that we do not have a caveat. It was not raised before either committee. I'm sorry, Senator, it wasn't raised, and for what clarity it had, we kept exactly what passed the floor, you see.

Now, as it read as it passed the floor, it was possible by circular reasoning to say "the full faith and credit"...because levee boards have been interpreted in many instances to be state agencies and state boards...it was possible to say that 6 (C) pledged the full faith of the state through the state boards, including the levee boards, and that 6 (E), when you say nothing is to apply to any levee district unless the full faith and credit is pledged, it made it meaningless because under the interpretation that being a state agency or board, the full faith and credit was pledged to it, then under 6 (E) it made it meaningless because it didn't apply to levee districts unless the full faith and credit was pledged, but it was applied to it by 6 (C). So, by adding that sentence, the second sentence, "the full faith and credit is not hereby pledged to the repayment of the bonds by a levee district, political subdivision, or local public agency." We carried out the intent of the legislature, and we carried out the intent of the exception in our opinion.

[Amendment No. 11 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 12

Point of Information

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Chairman, I therefore would move, then, at this time that we suspend the rules in order to put "not to exceed three dollars."

MR. CASEY

Mr. Nunez, we were trying to avoid that. I don't say you can't handle it, but I'd suggest you do it by a separate amendment if you want to try to resolve the problems.

MR. NUNEZ

As long as we understand that that's the intentions of what we're trying to do.

Questions

MR. DUVAL

Judge Tate, isn't that the same exact language in the '21 Constitution?

MR. TATE

Mr. Duval, I'm sorry that I did not reread that to the forty---Constitution. I suppose it did, but I did not... the forty amendments to the '21 Constitution. I'm sorry to say that I'm not familiar with the floor debate because I was doing doing injustices in New Orleans on that day.

[Amendment No. 12 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 12

MR. DUVAL

Well, I think it was the intent of this commission, wasn't it, to merely retain the basic provision of the...contained in the present constitution, which I think we did.

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 12 is to 6 (D) on the top of page 8. Very little change was made in the language as it passed the floor except to add the title and to clarify...needs to be "by law, enacted by two-thirds"...at a statewide referendum...may be done.

[Amendment No. 12 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 13

MR. TATE

If this language is in the present constitution, and has been interpreted to mean "shall impose no greater than," then I would suppose under ordinary rules of construction, that means the same thing.

[Amendment No. 8 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 9

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 9 is to Section 6. Again, we clarified this "except by law enacted by two-thirds of the elected members" instead "of an affirmative vote", because that was what was intended in the law. It broke that long sentence into two. We were able to knock out an extra preposition. The last sentence, let me see and be sure. The last sentence was deleted, "legislative approval may be obtained only during open session except as otherwise provided in this constitution", because once you clarify it it can only be "except by law", and laws can only be adopted in open session. Upon recommendation of the revenue and finance committee, we deleted it. It is no longer necessary.

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 13 is to the exception in 6 (E) on page 8 which I previously mentioned. The...you'll note that Mrs. Zervigon had added amendment "nothing in this section shall apply to any levee district, political subdivision, or local public agency" on line 12, but, there is..."local public agency" was not also included on lines 16 and 17, though in context it meant the same thing. "Nothing shall apply to any...unless the full faith and credit is pledged to the payment of the bonds" of the same agencies up above. So, the amendment adds "local public agency" on pages 16 and 17, parallel to parallelism and of the apparent intent of Section 16 to except levee districts, political subdivisions, and local public agencies from the application of the section.

[Amendment No. 13 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 14

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 14 on 7 (A)...Section 7 (A), on page 9, creating the Interim Emergency Board to succeed the board of liquidation. The main changes made are to eliminate the bunch of "the's" in a series as unnecessary.

[Amendment No. 14 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 15

MR. TATE

7 (B)...which is on page 10 of your green copies...changes the "is determined", the passive, to "determines". It attempts to...see "when it is determined by majority vote" is "when the board by majority vote determines". It simplifies the language we thought. It attempted to put in parallel clauses its powers. It made a separate sentence of the second part of the sentence instead of one long sentence. Let's see. Now, on lines 8 and 9, it added "or the indebtedness incurred." Let me see if that was... in order to clarify that it...let's see...that appropriation may be made... In other words, they were authorized to do two things: to make an appropriation on current debt, and we had to add "or the indebtedness incurred" in order to carry out the parallel. See it may either appropriate or borrow money. We had to...we added the words "or the indebtedness incurred" to carry out the parallel construction involved in the first sentence.

[Amendment No. 15 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 16

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 16 is to section 7 (C) on the top of page 11, providing for limits. We just took out the capitals. The general approach is to capitalize a fund the first time as a proper name, and after that just to refer to it without caps as a sort of an entity that doesn't need to be capitalized.

[Amendment No. 16 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 17

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 17 is to 7 (D) on page 11. The...again we uncapitalized "state general fund" and we changed the order of the sentence to say the same thing because instead of saying as a first priority, each fiscal year something allocated...to pay the debts of last year," we just said "an amount sufficient to pay...is allocated under the authority." It seemed to read a little clearer.

Are there any questions, Mr. Chairman?

[Amendment No. 17 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 18

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 18 about the state bond commission, just primarily left out of here....divided the long sentence into two sentences.

[Amendment No. 18 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 19

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 19 is to Section 8 (B) on your green page 13 ....and all it did was uncapitalize "state bond commission." It's a mistake because they are talking about the bond commission up in (A) and we thought it was unnecessary to repeat it.

[Amendment No. 19 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 20

MR. TATE

Section 8 (C), for instance added "because"...shall not be invalid because of any irregularity"...added "because". It added "in the issuance" instead of "or the issuance" to carry out the parallelism "in the proceedings or in the issuance". The changes made, as you will note, are stylistic only and self-explanatory. It's long and detailed, but usually it's adding commas at the end of sentences or clauses, singularizing, using a word like "may" for "shall have the right", using "no" for "such"...such action is not taken", "if no action is taken" and so on, spelling out 30 for "thirty" in line with the style that is being followed in the other styling.

[Amendment No. 20 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 21

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 21 is to Section 9 which is on pages 16 and 17 of your green copies...and Amendment 9 broke into sections that long section 11 as adopted. It broke...it enumerated the exceptions in separate paragraphs there instead of having a long sentence; as you can see on the left-hand side it has them follow one another without separating them. Of course, it added titles to the...it simplified the section title, but added titles to the subsections.

[Amendment No. 21 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 22

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 22 is to section 10 (A) on the top of page 18 of your green...and some of you are probably now in white. It makes no change except to add a title to the subsection and said "provided by" instead of "provided in", in line with the ordinary styling that we've been following.

[Amendment No. 22 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 23

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 23 is to Section 10 (B) on page 18 of your green. Aside from adding a title, it left out the word "made" because "total appropriations made by the legislature" and "total appropriations by the legislature" meant the same thing. Instead of "shall not be greater", "shall not exceed", and the idea that "exceed" refers to...states it a little simpler than "anticipated revenues".

[Amendment No. 23 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 24

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 24 is to Section 10 (C) on page 19 of your green. We just said "the legislature shall provide for the publication". The consensus of the committee was, and as approved by Revenue and Finance, that "the legislature shall have published". It shouldn't vest in the law that somebody else should publish it. It should have it published itself.

[Amendment No. 24 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 25

MR. TATE

Amendment 25 is.....to 10 (D) on page 19. It simply added the title and singularized "public purposes" to "for a public purpose."

[Amendment No. 25 adopted without objection.]

117th Days Proceedings—January 14, 1974

MR. CASEY

O.K. I'm sorry, Judge, let's just make sure that there's no questions on 25, and there's no objection to the adoption. Is that correct?

Then, without objection, 25 is adopted, and 26 is now under discussion.

Amendment No. 26

MR. TATE

26 is to 11 (A) on page 20 of your green material about the operating budget.

Incidentally, later we are going to have to make a policy judgment....same provision that's contained in Executive Branch materials as is here. They duplicate. You may or may not wish to duplicate it. But, we don't have to make that determination now. I just call it to your attention. Now this, in general, as you notice, breaks a long sentence into two sentences, and it says "a bill for proposed ordinary operating...ordinary operating expenditures", instead of "a bill to authorize."

The others are stylistic. There's been a recommendation for "new or additional revenues", to "raise additional revenues."

Questions

MR. DENNERY

Judge, I must have missed your explanation of why you removed the recommendations' language from lines 14 and 15 on the left-hand side.

MR. TATE

"He shall cause to be submitted a general appropriation bill and if necessary, a bill or bills to raise additional revenues". How shall he cause it to be submitted?

MR. DENNERY

In other words, you...the Style and Drafting Committee felt that the language "if necessary, a bill or bills containing recommendations for new or additional revenues" was surplusage and it should just be "a bill or bills to raise additional revenues?"

MR. TATE

Mr. Dennery, the governor, you see, can't introduce a bill. So, when "he shall cause to be submitted", is the verb in that sentence. "Shall cause to be submitted, if necessary, a bill or bills containing recommendations for new or additional revenues". Well, you can't have a bill with a recommendation. .... "He shall cause to be submitted a bill or bills to raise the additional revenues" we thought was a clear expression of what was intended 'cause he can't introduce anything. He can just recommend things. So, how does he...when he causes them to be submitted, it's by his recommendation, so to speak. And the bill can't recommend new additional revenues because the bill has to be say, "there shall be this tax or that tax" and so on.

MR. DENNERY

Well, my idea in asking the question was that I understood that when we adopted this originally that he could submit to the legislature a recommendation for Method A, Method B, or Method C, and then the legislature would determine which method it would use for the additional revenues. The way it reads now, he would have to cause to be introduced A, or B, or C, and he couldn't introduce all three of them.

MR. TATE

Mr. Dennery, I do not read it that way. Because "a bill or bills" would mean..carry out the same concept, Mr. Dennery.

MR. DENNERY

In other words, instead of introducing one bill with three alternative recommendations, he would have to submit three alternate bills.

MR. TATE

It could do that easily. It would not....it wasn't trying to restrict the language. It was just saying "He shall cause to be submitted a bill or bills"...whether they are alternative or supplementary doesn't make a lot of difference.

MR. DENNERY

Well, I appreciate the argument that you make. What occurs to me, though, is that it doesn't give future governors the meaning behind the clause. You and I may understand the meaning, but twenty years from now, unless somebody looked back to see why they...why it was worded this way, they wouldn't understand that the purpose of it was to give a governor the opportunity to submit to the legislature alternate methods of raising these additional revenues. I think we've lost the true meaning of the proposal by doing that. Now, it may be that we have to lose that true meaning.

MR. TATE

Well, I appreciate your position. As it passed the floor "He shall cause to be submitted a bill or bills containing recommendations for new or additional revenues". As we recommend styling, "He shall cause to be submitted, if necessary, a bill or bills to raise additional revenues". I don't think it's a substantial change, but I...

[Amendment No. 26 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 27

MR. TATE

Amendment 27 is to Section 11 (B). We felt that with a... that we're saying the same thing and making it read a little smoother by breaking it into two coordinate clauses instead of having a...with a prepositional phrase following "the capital outlay program."

We added a comma...line 9.

[Amendment No. 27 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 28

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 28 is...provides for Section 12 on page 22 of your green materials. The...it makes "all" unnecessary. When you say "reports and records", that means "all reports and records shall be matters of public record". And we use "pertaining to those returns" instead of "pertaining thereto" on the idea that it's a little more ordinary English.

[Amendment No. 28 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 29

MR. TATE

Amendment 29 is to Section 13, on the top of page 23 of your green materials, Investment of State Funds. It was thought that we're saying the same thing when we say "All money in the custody of the state treasurer which is available for investment" and we thought it was a little clearer than saying "all money available for investment in the custody of the state treasurer shall be invested as provided by law."

[Amendment No. 29 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 30

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 30 is to Section 14, on page 23, to 14 (A) to be exact, on page 23. We...the changes made were to add commas...I mean to...change the "end" to "by"..."provided by this constitution"; to omit "thereof" because it is unnecessary; to add a comma in a series, and to remove a bunch of "ors" in a series, since they were all in a series; to break it into two sentences in the interest of clarity.

[Amendment No. 30 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 31

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 31 is to 14 (B) on page 24 of your green material. What we...when it said "the legislature" at the beginning of (3), "for public purpose"...the legislature from authorizing"...nothing in this section shall prevent the legislature from authorizing". It means the pledge of public funds "as provided by law".

117th Days Proceedings—January 14, 1974

[Amendment No. 31 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 32

MR. TATE

Amendment 32 on cooperative subdivisions. The language as it passed the floor, had to do with "its political corporations". Now, that's a term that was used in the Constitution of '21 and in a few instances has been used here, but very rarely. We did not want to take it out, or recommend to you that it should be taken out, because it has some viability in a few limited areas. However, the intent was "all political subdivisions", including things that might be considered corporations rather than subdivisions. Since the new constitution uses "political subdivisions" intensively, it was thought that it would be clearer if we spelled it out and recommended to you adding "political subdivisions or political corporations". In other words, "for a public purpose, the state and its political subdivisions or political corporations may engage in cooperative endeavors with each other, with the United States", etc.

[Amendment No. 32 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 33

MR. TATE

Amendment 33 is to Section 14 (D) on page 26 of your green... the...we mostly left out "thereon". We had to leave a "heretofore" in. "Granted by prior laws of the state"---"by prior state law" we felt was a little bit shorter way to say the same thing.

[Amendment No. 33 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 34

MR. TATE

Amendment 34, on Section 15 (A) page 27 is the Release of Obligations to State, Parish, or Municipality. One thing that was...we recommend to you is dividing that thing into sections. It's such a long, long, long, sentence. The dividing into paragraphs, and then redividing that long sentence within the paragraph into separate sentences. We made minor stylistic changes like "a system whereby"... "a system under which claims may be compromised" and so on.

[Amendment No. 34 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 35

MR. TATE

Amendment 35 is to Section 16 on pages 29 and 30. The... we had wanted to clarify some of the language; for instance we had wanted to say "license fees" instead of "licensea", but it's found in the present...as "license, fee"... "no state, district, parish, or other tax, license, fee, or assessment", is found in the present constitutional provision in that form as if a license and a fee are separate. From fear of changing some meaning of what we...Revenue and Finance said we shouldn't try to clarify that. The language in general is about the same as in the present constitution, except we have done our best to leave out some of the "whereofs" and so on.

Mr. Chairman, what we did, we took 17 (B) which is old... which is that long, long, long, thing and recommended it be a new Section 16 (A) and (B). If the Chair feels inclined, you may wish to have a record vote on it because some people think it's a new section, because it is called...what used to be 17 (B)...Section 16 (A) and (B). To avoid any doubt that it needs a...that it's a new section, I'd raise no objection to the Chair ordering a record vote...we took 17 (B) and made it 16 (A) and (B).

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment No. 35 adopted without objection. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment No. 36

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 36 is to your Section 17 on page 31. It's the last of the stylistic amendments to Committee Proposal No. 15, and it leaves out a few "its" in the series of "the state, its agencies, boards, commissions"...instead of "its boards, its commissions" and so on and "to secure federal participation" we thought "in funding of capital improvement" was more accurate than "in the cost of capital improvement projects," and recommended that change as stylistic.

Delegate Proposal No. 22

Amendments Nos. 1-4

MR. TATE

Delegate Proposal No. 22 was circulated yesterday. It's the one that has just two pages. It's done a little differently than before because the changes were so nominal, they just marked in ink on the green, the green that should be on your desk, the slight changes of adding a title, and the changes are self-explanatory. A title was added, "any" was changed to "a", "for the relief of" was changed to "relieving"...an extra "r" was left out, and a title was added, and the changes were passed. They are so nominal, but they are obvious stylistic changes. I move the adoption of the amendments 1 through 4 of that on Delegate Proposal No. 22, Mr. Chairman, unless there is any questions.

This is to do with prohibited local and special laws.

Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of Amendments 1 through 4 to Delegate Proposal 22, including minor stylistic changes.

[Amendments Nos. 1-4 adopted without objection.]

Committee Proposal No. 9

Amendment No. 1

MR. TATE

All right. Delegate...Committee Proposal No. 9 is entitled "Article VII. Human Resources, State and City Civil Service." It's a package of two things, green and white, which, of course, to use, you go presto, like that! Thank you, Mr. Thistlethwaite. There are no caveat amendments on it. The changes made were strictly technical. Neither committee found any problems that I can think of at the minute.

The first amendment is Amendment No. 1, is on the first page of your green, and it's a Section 1, (A) and (B), establishing state and city service. As it passed the floor, it said the state civil service includes...the city civil service includes in line with the drafting practice, in both instances, they said, "it established...is established and includes" on the idea that there should be some sort of an establishment clause in the constitution.

The other changes are strictly stylistic, using "regardless" instead of "irrespective," and the main thrust is as drafted it said it includes positions, and later it talks about people. So, to clarify that the city civil service includes people, that...those...instead of saying it includes all offices and positions, of course, it includes all persons holding offices and positions of trust. Those are the main changes, Mr. Chairman.

Subject to question, I move the adoption of Amendment No. 1.

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 2, Mr. Chairman, is to Section 1 (B)...1 (B). It formerly was a Section 1 (A), 1 and 2; Section 1 (B), talking about the classified and unclassified employees. As you can see, it's on page 3 and 4 of your green, and as you can see, just nominal changes are made, like instead of saying "elected officers," it uses the phraseology of this constitution, "elected officials." It, to some extent, singularizes because towards the end, it didn't try to do that for technical reasons that have nothing to do with meaning, but for stylistic reading. It leaves out unnecessary "of's" in a series: of this, of that, of that, and just says "of them" in series. In general, as you can see, those are strictly stylistic changes in the interest of consistency of the other portions of the constitution.

So, Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of Amendment No. 2.

[Amendment No. 2 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 3

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 3 is to 1 (C) on page 5, about the State Civil Service Commission. As I recall...I'm looking to be sure this is so, we alphabetized...oh, it was in the next section. We left out the state name following each college because it's obvious they're all in Louisiana. The other changes, as you can see, are strictly stylistic changes like "should the governor"—we made it "if the governor" in line with the usual styling. We changed the position of "automatically" so as not to separate the verb "shall become", "automatically shall become." The others are the usual stylistic changes, and, Mr. Chairman, with that, I move the adoption of the amendment.

[Amendment No. 3 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 4

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 4 is to Section 1(D) on page 7 of your green material. It...the changes made are to add the titles as in the previous page, to change the positioning of the domicile because it says, "each city service...each city so and so shall have a...there shall be a city civil service commission in each city having a population exceeding four hundred thousand." Then it tells who the commission is. We put the domicile up right following the commission. We, again, as we did in the previous one, we made sure the colleges were in alphabetical order, the same order they were up above for parallelism, and the other changes made are strictly of...the usual stylistic changes that we have been making consistently throughout about singularizing, removing excess prepositions, etc. Mr. Chairman, subject to question, I move the adoption of Amendment No. 4.

[Amendment No. 4 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 5

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 5 is to Section 1(E) on page 10 of your materials. The changes are as you can see, strictly stylistic. We put in "as the case may be" to be exactly...to clarify, say, a member of the state or civil may be removed by the governor. That's the state or the governing authority; that's the city, as the case may be, for cause. In order to clarify that the governor can't remove city and the governing authority of cities can't remove the state. It doesn't need much clarification, but we thought it would be a little plainer. Mr. Chairman, subject to question, I move the adoption of Amendment No. 5.

[Amendment No. 5 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 6

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 6 is to 1(F) on page 11. Now, you notice we did what we did yesterday, and nobody thought this needed a yellow amendment in this instance. The Department of State Civil Service is established. Well, it did say it already in the executive branch of the state government. We had no problem with that. The other amendments are strictly stylistic. Mr. Chairman, with that, I move the adoption of Amendment No. 6.

118th Days Proceedings—January 15, 1974

[Amendment No. 6 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 7

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 7, to 1(G) on page 12 changes "the certification" to "certifying" and changes a "where" to an "if" and otherwise adopts unchanged the floor language. Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of Amendment No. 7, subject to question.

[Amendment No. 7 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 8

MR. TATE

Likewise, Amendment No. 8 to 1(H) on page 13 makes very minor changes. "By reason of" to "because"; "any" to "a". Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of Amendment No. 8.

[Amendment No. 8 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 9

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 9, to 1(I) on page 14, extremely nominal changes, leaving out "or's" in a series because you only need one following the last, and adding a comma, and removing a "such." Mr. Chairman, subject to question, I move the adoption.

[Amendment No. 9 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 10

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 10, likewise, extremely nominal changes because this thing had extremely nominal changes in line with our usual practices. We broke sentences in this long veterans' thing; we broke it into two or three sentences instead of having one long one; but, it's still pretty long, and without changing substance tried to simplify that very long, complex and statutory language that was included. Mr. Chairman, subject to question, I move...

Questions

MR. AVANT

Judge Tate, you remember we had a discussion, and I had requested a caveat in this section, which I believe the committee obviously didn't approve it, I forget, but it ain't here, so I don't guess we voted to have it. But, my question is this: as I read the original language as it was adopted by the convention, on line 16...

On line 16, at the end of the word "transactions," the first sixteen lines up to that point very clearly relate to the rule making power of the Civil Service Commission. My interpretation of that, it seems to me, is that after the word "transactions" you're leaving the rule making power, and you're going into another area because it speaks of the adoption of a uniform pay and classification plan, employments conditions; employment training and safety; compensation and disbursements to employees, etc. Now, the significance of the question is that any regulation that they adopt under the rule making power has the force and effect of law, and they may provide disciplinary rules and penalties and punishment for the violation of such a rule, and I'm particularly concerned with respect to the area of employee training and safety. For that reason, I would request that we pass over this amendment for the moment so that I may prepare an amendment which will separate those two concepts and offer it to the convention.

MR. TATE

Mr. Avant, would you look at the language, and I do not recall if we did not...let's see, it says, "including rule making powers or rules and regulation including the power to adopt rules for regulating employment," so on, and so on, "and other personnel matters and transactions; to adopt a uniform pay and classification plan". It would seem to me that what your objection is without changing the substance was accomplished by setting that up as a parallel.

MR. AVANT

No, sir. I think that just the opposite was done because the phrase "employee training and safety" is before the semi-colon in the stylized version which appears on page 17, clearly makes the area of the employee training and safety within the rule making power of the commission, which has the force and effect of law, which I don't think was the intent of the convention.

MR. TATE

Mr. Avant, I remember the discussion clearly now. The discussion was the adoption of a uniform pay and classification plan was adopted as a floor amendment and it fell in the middle of this rule-making business, and the committee's best judgment was--although I know you disagreed and made a vigorous fight for your point of view--the committee's best judgment was that the floor amendment that adopted a uniform pay and classification plan was something that did not...that in its context, if you took out that adoption of uniform pay and classification plan as it read before it was put in, the employment division, employee training, safety and all that, fell clearly within, as it does now within the rule-making power. Therefore, in order to separate the idea of the adoption of the uniform pay and classification plan, whether or not it was in the rule-making power because it didn't follow dramatically...

MR. AVANT

Well, my only question at this point, Judge Tate, is would you consider passing over this particular amendment until we complete the other amendments and let me consider whether or not I want to offer an alternative amendment? Would you do that?

MR. TATE

No objection at all, Mr. Avant. We're about finished with this section, but no objection, sir.

Motion

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman, I move that we temporarily pass over Amendment No. 10 until we have completed the other amendments.

MR. HENRY

You don't object, Judge Tate?

MR. TATE

No, sir.

[Motion adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 11

MR. TATE

Will Mr. Dennery consult with Mr. Avant?

Amendment No. 11, which is on Section 1(K), on page 22 of your green, made "any person who willfully violates," it put it in the language of this statutory provision in the statutory language "willful violation of any provision shall be a misdemeanor." It has the same intent and it makes it as it is intended to do to make it sort of a self-executing sort of provision.

[Amendment No. 11 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 12

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 12 is to Section 1(L) on page 23. There are--"such" was changed to "the" twice and otherwise no changes, Mr. Chairman.

MR. HENRY

That's the extent of the changes?

MR. TATE

Yes, sir.

118th Days Proceedings—January 15, 1974

[Amendment No. 12 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 13

MR. TATE

Section 1(M) on page 24, we thought it read "to carry out efficiently and effectively"; we just said "to implement this section" rather than to carry out efficiently and effectively the provisions of the section. We thought it read better, and it says exactly the same thing. We recommended separating the first long sentence into two, and again we use "implement" instead of that long, long phrase. Mr. Chairman, if there are no questions, I move the adoption.

[Amendment No. 13 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 14

MR. TATE

I wonder if Mr. Avant and Mr. Denney have been able to discuss the matter. I don't know if it's resolvable without a vote is the thing that...

We have a couple of more amendments, I'm informed. I'm sorry I missed them.

Amendment No. 14, Mr. Chairman. Amendment No. 14 is to 1(N) on pages 25 and 26 of Committee Proposal No. 9. Amendment No. 14 as you will notice, singularizes "any" to "each city, parish" and so on. We thought "the latest official decennial federal census" means exactly the same thing "according to the last preceding decennial federal census," which shall follow "report of population growth as reported to the President of the United States." The remainder of the changes have to do with the usual stylistic changes of omitting, putting "these" for "suches". We divided this long sentence into to three subparagraphs. Otherwise, the changes are the normal stylistic changes. Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of Section 1 and Amendment 15.

[Amendment No. 14 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 15

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, let's see, my copy does not have the last amendment. Number 15 is to Section 1(O) on page 28; again, it takes that long, long, long one sentence paragraph, and breaks it down into three subparagraphs and to some sentences within each paragraph. The other changes are stylistically of the nature you have been approving all along up till now. Mr. Chairman, subject to objection, I move the adoption of Amendment No. 15.

[Amendment No. 15 adopted without objection. Quorum Call: 68 delegates present and a quorum.]

Point of Information

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman, I would have no objection to going ahead and adopting Amendment No. 10 as recommended by the Committee on Style and Drafting with the distinct understanding that I will have the right and the privilege to later request for a suspension of the rules so that I may offer my amendment as an alternative and let the convention decide whether they want the Style and Drafting version or whether they want to adopt what I feel was the intent of the section.

MR. HENRY

Do you withdraw your objection?

MR. AVANT

No, I don't withdraw my objection. I only withdraw it and say that you can...I have no objection to adopting Style and Drafting's amendment at this time if I have that distinct understanding that I have that privilege.

MR. HENRY

Well, you always have the privilege to move to suspend the rules, Mr. Avant, if that...I was doing something else, so I honestly wasn't paying attention. If you're talking about a rules suspension, of course, you can always at any time be recognized for that purpose inasmuch as it is a suspension of the rules. Is that what you're asking?

MR. AVANT

That would be the mechanics by which we had to proceed under the rules that we have, isn't it?

MR. HENRY

Yes, sir. I believe it would be.

Point of Information

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman, I just want to have it understood that while Mr. Avant, of course, has the right to ask for a suspension of the rules, that we are not here agreeing by adopting this amendment that he's going to get a suspension of the rules.

MR. HENRY

I don't think Mr. Avant is asking for that and certainly, I don't believe that...I don't have the authority to grant such a bargain or deal and certainly that's not my intention, but anybody can at any time move to suspend the rules for just about anything.

Point of Information

MR. FLORY

Mr. Chairman, can't we leave this pending and return this proposal to the calendar until we have a chance to try and work it out?

MR. HENRY

Mr. Flory, in my opinion, this is a Style and Drafting problem as opposed to a substantive problem.

MR. FLORY

Well, there is a question in our mind as to whether or not it is a substantive change. We are trying to discuss it with Mr. Denney to find out actually what the Committee on Style and Drafting has done by changing and rearranging....

MR. HENRY

I suppose it could be returned to the calendar for the time being, pending what the body....there would be no reason....

MR. FLORY

I move that it be returned to the calendar temporarily.

[Motion to return Committee Proposal No. 9 temporarily to the calendar adopted without objection.]

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, if I understand the situation, it's all been styled except for Amendment No. 10 and we are waiting for a short time to see if they can't resolve the fact that it's only a stylistic rearrangement. Is that right, Mr. Chairman?

Amendment No. 9 was on state and city.

Amendment No. 10 is on firemen civil service. Now, Committee Proposal No. 10, Firemen Civil Service.

[Motion to call Committee Proposal No. 10 from the calendar adopted without objection.]

Committee Proposal No. 10

Amendment No. 1

MR. TATE

All right. Municipal Fire and Police Civil Service, Proposal No. 10, you will see before you this very, very short....

The next committee proposal we intended to call up is Committee Proposal No. 10 on Firemen's and Police Civil Service. As you can see, it's a short....one amendment revision which breaks that long paragraph up insofar as possible into separate subparagraphs, it makes no change in substance. If you will hurry up and adopt the amendment before Mr. Flory notices what we've done to firemen's and police civil service, we will save a lot of discussion. Mr. Chairman, before Mr. Flory studies it close, I move the adoption of Amendment No. 1.

[Amendment No. 1 adopted without objection. Motion to take up Committee Proposal No. 10 adopted without objection.]

Committee Proposal No. 34

Amendment No. 1

MR. TATE

Now, [Committee Proposal] No. 34, when you see it, looks like this...it's got a little green; it's got a little gold--three pages of gold caveat; and it's got a white; stapled in the middle and you go presto, like that. We'll take up the green amendments first as we did it before and then the caveat yellow amendments. This has to do, of course, with natural resources, Article VIII, Natural Resources. Mr. Chairman, Amendment No. 1 is to Section 1, on the right-hand side of page 1. The changes, as you notice, remove a comma when it says, "The legislature shall implement this policy by appropriate legislation". It just says, "it shall enact laws to implement this policy". Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of Amendment No. 1.

[Amendment No. 1 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 2

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 2, Mr. Chairman, is to Section 2, on page 2 of your green materials. You will remember yesterday we left out the clause about the Public Service Commission's authority that "the legislature may give the Public Service Commission authority to regulate natural gas" because it's contained in this provision right here in Section 2 and that's not a change, but it's to call it to your attention. The changes in this article, as you may notice, are strictly stylistic in nature as are all the others, but they are the standard changes we are making. Mr. Chairman, if there is no question, I would move the adoption of Amendment No. 2.

[Amendment No. 2 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 3

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 3, Mr. Chairman, is to Section 3 on page 3 of your green materials. The changes are fairly nominal, of course, there is a rechange in numbering because...because what....

...because, apparently, when it passed the floor another Section 3 was not passed, so this Section 4 becomes Section 3.... and otherwise, the changes as a nature are strictly the usual stylistic changes that we have been approving up till now, sir. I move the adoption, subject to questions, of Amendment No. 3.

[Amendment No. 3 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 4

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 4 is to Section 4 (A), on page 6 at the top. This is a reservation of mineral rights; it changes the "where" to "when", "Mineral rights on all property;" just "on property"; it means the same thing, "sold by the state", "...may buy or redeem" was changed to "buy or redeem" to the present tense. In other words, the normal stylistic changes, Mr. Chairman. I move the adoption of Amendment No. 4, subject to questions.

[Amendment No. 4 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 5

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 5 on [Section] 4 (B), on page 4, adds an "of" to carry out the series. We could have either left out the "of" after the first one. But, in this case, it read better if we added an "of" to carry out the parallelism and that's about all we did; we changed "any" to "a" in each instance. Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of Amendment No. 5.

[Amendment No. 5 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 6

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 6 is to Section 5, on page 5, of your materials; it was a former Section 6 (1) that was added. All we did there was to say "the state" instead of repeating the "State of Louisiana". Mr. Chairman, subject to questions, I move the adoption of that amendment.

[Amendment No. 6 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 7

MR. TATE

All right. Mr. Chairman, let me explain the next one. On Amendment No. 7 deletes lines 30 to 35 on page 2 and lines 1 through 5 on page 3 as it passed the floor. This had to do with definition as used in Article XI, Section 4 (D) what state-owned property means and it exempted the provisions of this section or the provisions of Article XVI, "it shall apply to property comprising the Russell Sage Wildlife and Game Refuge." Yesterday, you approved removing this language and placing it in the proposal yesterday adopted in Committee Proposal No. 15 of Revenue, Finance and Taxation, which is about the allocation of service taxes, but, particularly of royalties to the local parishes; it's already been included, so it may be deleted at this point. Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of Amendment No. 7.

[Amendment No. 7 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 8

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 8 simply changes title numbers on the original enrollment; let me be absolutely sure that's what it is. It simply changes section numbers in the Section 7 which now becomes Section 6, Tidelands Ownership. That's the only effect of those changes which is at the top of page 7 on your green materials. Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of that amendment.

[Amendment No. 8 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 9

MR. TATE

All right. Amendment No. 9 is on page 7 to Section 7, that long section about funds from offshore mineral leases held in escrow pending settlement of the tidelands dispute. The stylistic changes made are obviously in line with the standard practice. I move the adoption of Amendment No. 9. I want to note, Mr. Chairman, that this is one of those provisions we may be able to remove from the body of the constitution and put in the transitional portions upon the final styling which will eventually accomplish a shorter constitution as this transitional matter expires. Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of Amendment No. 9.

[Amendment No. 9 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 10

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 10 is to Section 8, the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission. You will see that after this...shortly after this, we will have some yellow amendments on this section. But, these amendments strictly stylize as it came off the floor. The yellow amendments, as will the yellow amendment that is proposed to offshore minerals, are intended to clarify the intent. But, we are calling it to your attention because you may or may not wish to add them. But, these amendments to Section 8 provided by Amendment No. 10 is strictly stylistic, it breaks the long sentence up into several sentences and made without any change of substance; it slightly rearranges it. Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of Amendment No. 10.

[Amendment No. 10 adopted without objection.]

118th Days Proceedings—January 15, 1974

Amendment No. 11

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 11 is to Section 9 (A), on page 10 of your green materials. This is simply a stylistic rearrangement with very minor changes; for instance, it doesn't repeat "the legislature" but it would say "enact laws" instead of "enact provisions" to make sure that we know that they are talking about laws being made. We will come back to this later on but right now it's a stylistic arrangement of Section 9 (A).

Question

MR. HERNANDEZ

Judge, when are you going to take up your caveat amendment?

MR. TATE

Right away, right when we finish these technical amendments. I think the ones you are interested in are [Amendment No.] 16 and 17, and we are now on [Amendment No.] 11 and the others should go fast at the last.

Is there any objection to Amendment....excuse me, Mr. Chairman. Are there any questions? Subject to questions, I move the adoption of Amendment No. 11.

[Amendment No. 11 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 12

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 12 is to Section 9 (B) strictly stylistic changes about the Louisiana Forestry Commission. After this, we will come to the caveat amendments in a short time, but these are strictly stylistic amendments. Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of Amendment No. 12.

[Amendment No. 12 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 13

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 13, to State Forestry [Section] 9 (C) on page 11, very minor stylistic changes, "he must be", "he shall be" a graduate from "a graduate of" believing that to be preferable grammar. Mr. Chairman, I move....subject to any questions, I move the adoption of Amendment No. 13.

[Amendment No. 13 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 14

MR. TATE

All right. Now, Amendment No. 14 deletes on page 4, lines 33 through 35 and on page 5, lines 1 through 4. These amendments provided that -- the Department of Wildlife and Fisheries Commission Enforcement Officers -- nothing relating to civil service shall prevent the legislature from enacting laws supplementing civil service plan with regard to them. We recommended deletion at this point because they were inserted in Section 1 (A) of CP 9. If you will look, we just approved that, where we said "nothing herein shall prevent the legislature from enacting laws" so and so "uniform pay plans for sworn" so on and so and "regularly commissioned officers of the enforcement division of the Department of Wildlife and Fisheries." In other words, we put it in one [Section] 1 (A) of the civil service proposal and is unnecessary here. So, I recommend...I move, Mr. Chairman, subject to questions, the adoption of Amendment No. 14 deleting the language in question from the original proposal.

[Amendment No. 14 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 15

MR. TATE

Now, the first caveat amendment we do not regard...there is no objection to it; some people thought we shouldn't even make it a caveat amendment that is purely stylistic but because it does add a couple of words, we thought we better do it in a yellow manner...I mean yellow paper, not yellow, yellow. Now, the amendment, in effect, if you will go to...on your green...on your yellow one here it adds "upon such settlement" on line 9 on your right-hand side. On your green copy, it would add "upon such settlement" at the end of line 14 as an introductory phrase to the sentence now beginning on page 15; the reason being that at first reading, it really does not need this language to clarify it. But, at first reading it says "the funds derived from offshore mineral leases and held in escrow shall be deposited in the state treasury when received." Now, it's held pending settlement shall be deposited when received. Well, obviously, the funds held in escrow pending the settlement of the dispute between the United States and our state can't be deposited in our state treasury; they are in escrow. But, as you read it fast, it seems to mean as soon as you get them, you are supposed to deposit them in the state treasury which you can't do. So, to clarify so that, just so it reads better, it doesn't need this in the legal sense, to clarify it when it's settled there are to be...when the dispute is settled, they are to be deposited in the state treasury and applied to debts and all of that. We recommended adding the words "upon such settlement" and that is the effect of Amendment No. 15 which is pending before you. Mr. Chairman, I yield to questions. If there are none, move for its adoption.

[Amendment No. 15 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 16

MR. TATE

Now, Mr. Chairman, the next yellow amendment--I understand there is some opposition to it, there was some on our committee, there was...I believe it was a narrow division on our committee, I don't remember right now--but the effect of this next amendment, Amendment No. 16, which is proposed as a caveat amendment for your consideration. You can consider whether this clarification should be needed or whether if, in your view, it is substantive. We are not recommending it. We are calling it to your attention. Now, you see, as this amendment...as we talked about the...this is Amendment No. 16. We, in Section 8 as you restyled it, we talked... we said "there shall--the control" of so and so "is vested in the Louisiana Wildlife and Fisheries Commission consisting of seven members", etc. Now, in view of the dispute that arose as to clarification of other offices we have tried to clarify the circumstance that in the view of at least those who recommended this amendment to you, for your consideration, that the Department of Wildlife and Fisheries we should say "The commission shall be," in effect, we are adding the language on pages 9 and 10...up to 11, "The committee shall be in the executive branch", in effect, that's what we are adding to specify that this is one of the... that is an executive branch and because in view of those who recommended it, it could not be in the legislature branch; it couldn't be in the judicial branch; it had to be in the executive branch. In the view of those who recommended it, we better save a lawsuit right now, that although its constitutional powers could not be reallocated under the constitution it could be subject to the administrative organization of the government provided by the Executive Branch Article. In other words, there could be one master Department of Natural Resources which has three or four of these departments in it. But, we know there is disagreement on our committee as a closely divided vote. Mr. Chairman, I will yield to either questions or to other speakers, of course.

Questions

MR. AVANT

Judge Tate, the policy or the position of the Committee on Style and Drafting has been that when we recommended a change or when we submitted a change for the consideration of the convention, we don't recommend anything, that we did it in this form because we felt that it probably was a substantive change. Is that not a correct statement?

MR. TATE

No, Mr. Avant. I would say because...if there is any substantial view in either committee that it is substantive change or that it changes the sense, because we can recommend substantive changes, as I view the rules, if they are inconsistent. But, if there is any substantial view either that some think it might be a substantive change, or some think it's a policy clarification, or some think that for any other reason there is any question about our doing it, we do submit it in the yellow form to let the members decide what they want, what their views are. We don't take any stand on the merits of the change.

118th Days Proceedings—January 15, 1974

MR. AVANT

All right, that's right. Well, there was a substantive view on the Committee on Style and Drafting that this was a definite substantive change and the amendment itself was submitted only by a very close vote, I think, maybe one or two votes; is that not correct?

MR. TATE

That is correct, Mr. Avant.

MR. AVANT

I believe it was one vote.

MR. TATE

That is correct. I don't remember whether this one was the six to five or the seven to four, but there is no question that it was a substantial division.

Point of Order

MR. AVANT

Well, Mr. Chairman, I had already been recognized and I asked my question. At this time, I would like to raise a point of order and suggest that the amendment suggested by the Committee on Style and Drafting makes a substantive change in the document and, therefore, is out of order. I would like to have the privilege of speaking on that objection.

Explanation

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, the section in this committee proposal which relates to the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission makes no mention whatsoever that it shall be in the executive branch of government as various other articles-- particularly, I'm thinking of the Civil Service Commission. There was a specific statement that "there shall be a Civil Service Commission within the executive branch." Now, what this amendment does is to suggest to you that you should adopt a specific statement in this section, and I will read it to you, "The commission shall be in the executive branch." Now, if you will remember the discussion when this section was on the floor before, this convention voted overwhelmingly to create an independent, constitutional Wildlife and Fisheries Commission to control and supervise the wildlife of this state and the aquatic life of this state. If you will recall, it was pointed out in the discussions that the people of this state have on not one but four or five occasions overwhelmingly voted against constitutional amendments which would tamper with the constitutional status of the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission. Now, if you put this commission in the executive branch, you know what that does; it will become subject to the reorganization plan and it will be up to the legislature to consolidate it with any other agency they may want to or to interfere with, or take away from its powers and independence in any manner that best suits their judgment at the moment which is something that I respectfully submit to you that the people of this state have shown time and time again that they do not want, and for that reason, I would ask that you reject this amendment. That you would leave it as it was adopted by this convention; namely, an independent, constitutional Wildlife and Fisheries Commission which is the way the people of this state want it.

Questions

MR. ROY

Mr. Avant, under the present creation of the present Wildlife and Fisheries Commission it is subject to reorganization by the legislature; is it not?

MR. AVANT

I don't believe it is, Mr. Roy. I would like for you to point out to me how it is.

MR. ROY

Under Article IV, Section 32 of the present constitution it is.

MR. AVANT

Well, the people of this state have demonstrated time and time again they don't want it tampered with.

MR. ROY

Well, we're not talking about tampering....

MR. AVANT

...and, the legislature has not seen fit to tamper with it.

MR. ROY

Did you know that I don't even think that we should have had it constitutionalized much less now not being able to be reorganized?

MR. AVANT

Well, Mr. Roy, you are certainly entitled to your opinion.

MR. NEWTON

Mr. Avant, if we don't say anything about it, don't you think it would be in the Executive Department?

MR. AVANT

No, sir, I don't.

MR. NEWTON

Well, if we don't put it in the Executive Department, are we going to put it in the Judicial or the Legislative?

MR. AVANT

It would be an independent constitutional commission.

MR. CONROY

Mr. Avant, the proposed amendment here that the Style and Drafting Committee has presented to the convention is the same thing that was adopted by this convention yesterday with regard to the Public Service Commission; isn't it?

MR. AVANT

Yes, sir. It is.

MR. ASSEFF

Mr. Avant, aren't we both members of the Committee on Style and Drafting?

MR. AVANT

We are, sir.

MR. ASSEFF

Isn't it a fact that on the vote, the original vote was five to five with one abstaining?

MR. AVANT

That's correct, sir.

MR. ASSEFF

Didn't that person originally feel that it was substantive and should be referred to the substantive committee, and at the last minute changed his vote to make it six to five; isn't that a fact?

MR. AVANT

That is correct.

MR. ASSEFF

Isn't it also true that if we took no action that the two commissions would be within the Executive Branch, but as regulatory commissions, and not subject to the provisions of Article IV? If we vote to put them specifically, then--I'm asking this for the record--in my opinion, and I'm asking if you agree, we are making them subject to the provisions of Article IV?

MR. AVANT

There's no question about it. If you put that amendment...if you adopt this amendment, there's no question about that, Dr. Asseff.

MR. ASSEFF

As this now stands, they would still be within the Executive Branch, but independent commissions.

MR. AVANT

That's correct.

I urge that you vote this amendment out of order.

Further Discussion

MR. STAGG

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this amendment. There are only three branches of government. Mr. Avant would have us elect another branch of government called wildlife, and I don't think that that's required under these circumstances. The opportunity yesterday was presented to adopt a fifth branch of government, that is the Public Service Commission. This convention wisely put the Public Service Commission under the Executive Branch where it belongs. You're either going to have three departments of government: Executive, Legislative and Judicial; or you're not. Now, properly, the Commission on Wildlife and Fisheries belongs in the Executive Department, and it belongs under a department head concerned with wildlife and fisheries, and recreation and parks, and the other similarly allied facets of our state government in a proper scheme of reorganization. I think the amendment is in order. This is where a Wildlife and Fisheries Commission belongs--that's in the Executive Department. I doubt there could be much question about it except those raised by Mr. Avant.

118th Days Proceedings—January 15, 1974

Questions

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Stagg, is it whether it belongs in the Executive Branch or is this amendment adding substance to our proposal?

MR. STAGG

Mrs. Warren, I simply believe it states the obvious, and by stating the obvious it is that this commission must be in one of the three coordinate branches of state government.

MRS. WARREN

Yes, but couldn't we move that it was a substantive change, and then turn around and adopt it because it is a substantive change, and I'm not speaking for or against it because I feel kind of like you, but I know it is a substantive change.

MR. STAGG

Well, Mrs. Warren, I think that it belongs where they have put it. For that reason in ...

MRS. WARREN

I understand, but what I'm trying to say, is it a change?

MR. STAGG

I think it's a change only in the form of the sentence, Ma'am. Everybody should know that this commission has got to be put somewhere. It is not...

Further Discussion

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I wish you would give me your attention for just a moment to point out what the present constitution says with respect to all of these issues that are being raised by Mr. Avant and others that we're making a substantive change. Now, I asked him specifically, "doesn't the present constitution provide that the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission and all other constitutional boards and commissions may be consolidated and changed by the legislature?" He said, he didn't think so; in his opinion, he didn't know. If you'll get page twenty-one of your constitutional material, you'll see under Article III, Section 32; Merger or Consolidation of Similar Executive and Administrative Offices. "The legislature is authorized to provide for the merger or consolidation into one department of all executive and administrative offices, boards, or commissions, whether created in this constitution or otherwise, whose duties or functions are of a similar nature or character, and in the event of any such consolidation or merger, to reduce the number of offices at the end of that current term." Nothing could be more explicit. I don't know why we think now we've got to sanctify the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission, which I don't think should have been in the constitution in the first place, but because of the politics of it, because of the past, we have reconstitutionalized. I don't have any hang-up about that, but I do have a hang-up when we start saying that a board or a commission that we put in this present constitution is going to be immunized from any type of consolidation, reorganization, or what have you, on the part of the legislature when historically they have always been subject to that. So, I ask that you cut through the technical arguments and just vote to make the change that is suggested by Style and Drafting. I think it's in order. I don't think it's a substantive change, and I think that it's something we absolutely need. Thank you.

Question

MR. GOLDMAN

Mr. Roy, I tried to get to ask this question of Mr. Stagg, but I think you can answer it just as well. If we don't adopt this amendment, wouldn't it be possible then to negate the idea of twenty departments in the Executive Department and have twenty-one or twenty-two departments, or twenty-three?

MR. ROY

We'd have them strung out all over. Let me tell you that this particular section has been decided and interpreted by the Louisiana Supreme Court on two occasions, one of which was Higginbotham v. City of Baton Rouge. I don't have that before me, and there was a more recent decision. The way that the legislature's tried to consolidate L.S.U. and other state board of educations under Act 712 was pursuant to Article 3, Section 32 of the constitution.

Further Discussion

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, speaking for the majority, however narrow, of the Committee on Style and Drafting, as well as I understood, for the Natural Resource Committee, we do not regard this as at all substantive. Whether or not we say it's in the Executive Branch, it is in the Executive Branch. Whether or not we say so, it's one of those divisions of government that is subject to be rearranged without disturbing its constitutional allocation of duties. Now, we adopted yesterday on the Public Service Commission the clarifying amendment, not to change the substance, but to save a lawsuit later on. I suggest to you, I suggest to you that it would be more appropriate, now, once you've made the decision on the Public Service Commission to go ahead and be consistent than to leave it out. I think whether it's adopted or not, it's a part of the Executive Branch. There's no way out of it in my opinion. It cannot be disturbed within its constitutional allocation of duty. So, therefore, Mr. Chairman, not in the interest of any substantive interest, but in the interest of consistency, I ask for your favorable consideration of the yellow amendment in question.

Questions

MR. AVANT

Mr. Tate, when you start off in the Executive Article and you say that the following offices are in the Executive Branch... when you start off and you name some, and then you say others, and then you get over in other parts of the constitution, and you're dealing with other instrumentalities, I'm going to call them, and you say specifically some are in the Executive Branch, and you say nothing about the others, wouldn't you think that a reasonable interpretation of that would be that when you name some and you didn't name others that those that you didn't name weren't in the contemplation of the Executive Branch?

MR. TATE

It would certainly create a possible... construction. In my opinion, though, when it says "Executive Branch shall consist of the governor," etc., etc., "and all other executive officers, agencies, and instrumentalities of the state," I can see no way in the world that the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission could be a part of the Legislative Branch, or part of the Judicial Branch. It seems to me after the lawsuit is over and the debt is settled, it would have to be settled that it is in that branch.

MR. AVANT

Well, Judge Tate, if the issue was presented squarely to this convention on this amendment, and the convention says, "We're not going to say it's in the Executive Branch"; don't you think that's of some significance?

MR. TATE

Frankly, Mr. Avant, as I see it, no court could say that it's in the Judicial Branch or the Legislative Branch. I mean I hate to... I won't prejudge a question. If it ever comes up, I'll study it first and come to the same conclusion, I'm sure, because it's the only logical conclusion. I'm just joking... I'm not going to joke about it here, anymore.

MR. GOLDMAN

Judge Tate, if we don't put it in one branch, and then it came up in court, couldn't you say it's in a broken branch somewhere on the ground?

MR. TATE

I think that's a funny, Mr. Goldman. But, they don't laugh at my funnies; and I'm not going to laugh at yours.

118th Days Proceedings—January 15, 1974

MR. DREW

Judge, if we adopted this amendment that has been proposed here, then the legislature under their mandate would have to put in the twenty departments, wouldn't they?

MR. TATE

Yes, Mr. Drew, but as I read the Executive Department, they have to anyway. I think it's a member of the Executive Branch whether we say it or not, and all we're trying to do in my opinion is to avoid the possible lawsuit that someone might raise because its constitutional allocation of duties could not be affected but it might for administrative purposes be in a department of Natural Resources include a bunch of these things.

MR. DREW

If it is not put in the Executive Department, and the legislature does not reallocate, what is the lawsuit going to be; to mandamus the legislature?

MR. TATE

To reallocate them, yea, sir.

MR. DREW

To mandamus the legislature?

MR. TATE

I see what you mean. Someone might not bring the lawsuit. I just anticipate the legislature to perform its duty, put it in one of the branches, and then somebody will file a lawsuit to get it out from under administrative control on...and all those sort of things.

MR. DREW

Well, Judge, the point I'm trying to make, the only lawsuit that could be brought if it's not put in the Executive Department, there is no absolute, unqualified mandate to the legislature to consolidate into the twenty; is it?

MR. TATE

Yes, sir. You're quite right.

MR. DREW

Well, I say, you take this under the agencies. But, as Mr. Avant said, where we have designated those in the Executive Department, and have not designated others, don't you think our intent is very clear there, although it may be a broken branch?

MR. TATE

Well, no, Mr. Drew, honestly, I don't see how, when we told them that all these things were in the Executive Branch, and have to...

Further Discussion

MR. ASSEFF

Mr. Chairman, delegates, it seems to me that we are discussing what is immaterial. What the Constitution of 1921 says is immaterial. It is what we place in this constitution. It is not quite as simple as Judge Tate presented it. Our committee was closely divided. I repeat: five for; five against; one abstained because he really felt it was substantive, and should be returned to the Substantive Committee. He did not vote, but when we revoted he did vote, 6 to 5. So, I don't think you should say that the learned committee has spoken because the learned committee is very divided. It is my opinion that if we leave it as it is that it still will be in the Executive Department, and that is not before you. But, if we place it as we are doing, and that may be what this convention wants, we are subjecting it to the provisions of Article IV, the including reorganization. Now, if that is what you want, vote for it. But, in my opinion, it is a substantive change. The decision is yours. Do you want it in the Executive Branch, subject to all of the provisions of Article IV, or don't you? It's just that simple. I voted with the five because I felt the convention wanted it as an independent commission. If you don't, well, then, vote the way you prefer it. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, delegates.

Further Discussion

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the commission, I rise in support of Mr. Avant's plea for you to reject this amendment for the reason that it places it under the Executive Department. I feel that the convention has voted to establish the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission as an independent constitutionallycreated commission, independent as possible from the Executive Branch. This, as I pointed out when we discussed this before, when it was passed by the convention, the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission is extremely popular with the...those men who hunt and fish in the State of Louisiana. There is a lot of hunters and fishermen in this state. They want an independent Wildlife and Fisheries Commission, and I urge you to consider this large segment of our population that wants it this way, and at least consider their desires and oppose this caveat amendment proposed by the committee. I urge your rejection of this amendment.

Questions

MR. STAGG

Pete, when you made your original pitch for the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission to be in the constitution, and you will recall that it, like a lot of other boards, by the Executive Branch, was left out of the constitution to be statutory. All you pleaded with us at that time was that it be in the constitution. Now, you come back today, and you want it to be a fully independent commission, which is a change in your view from before. How do you explain to us that you've now changed your position from that held when you argued for it simply to be in the constitution?

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Stagg, my position is not changed. I, frankly, never anticipated Style and Drafting would propose a caveat change like they have propose here to put it under the Executive Department. I didn't think that...

MR. STAGG

Do you also, Pete, believe that the Forestry Commission should be an independent free standing commission?

MR. HERNANDEZ

Well, I would like to see it that way, but that's a hopeless case. In the present constitution, it is under the Executive Department, and I think there's no way to get away from that. But, it's not subject to the same reorganization changes that could take place with the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission.

MR. STAGG

Did you vote yesterday that the Public Service Commission be a part of the Executive Branch?

MR. HERNANDEZ

No, sir; I did not.

MR. STAGG

I'll accede that you did not. But, should it have been left a free standing commission so that the government is composed of an Executive and a Legislative and a Judicial branch, and then this commission and that commission and that commission to where reorganization of state government becomes an absolute hodgepodge; is that what you propose to this convention?

MR. HERNANDEZ

No, sir, not enough of them, but I don't think that this constitution is going to be damaged in any way by leaving this .....

MR. STAGG

What you want, then, is Wildlife and Fisheries Commission to be unlike anything else in the state; is that what you propose?

MR. HERNANDEZ

Well, yes, sir. It is different.

MR. ROY

Mr. Hernandez, how can you say that your purpose is to take the Wildlife and Fisheries out of politics, or out of politics of the Executive Branch, when it's the Executive Branch that nominates the people who serve on it?

MR. HERNANDEZ

Well, that is the...like so many other commissions. They are appointed by the governor, and should be appointed by the governor, but they should feel a certain responsibility to the people of the State of Louisiana, especially those that hunt and fish; and there is a large segment of our population that does hunt and fish, and another large segment is sympathetic to the preservation of our wildlife.

MR. ROY

Are you really of the opinion that what we have written here

118th Days Proceedings—January 15, 1974

will permit the Executive Branch to reorganize it, or don't you realize that we're leaving the reorganization to the Legislative Branch; therefore, we do remove them from the politics of the Executive?

MR. HERNANDEZ

No, sir, I do not fully agree with that.

MR. ROY

Well, how can you not when we just passed it the other day that the legislature shall make the reorganization, and only in the absence of any stand taken by the legislature, the Executive Branch could do certain things?

MR. HERNANDEZ

Well, that's in there now, and there's no effort made to take that out of this provision.

MR. GOLDMAN

Doesn't the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission have to get money from the legislature to operate?

MR. HERNANDEZ

Well, certainly, they do.

MR. GOLDMAN

And they are appointed by the governor? How can you call them independent, then? No one's independent.

MR. HERNANDEZ

I said "independently created" in the constitution.

MR. GOLDMAN

Thank you very much.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. AVANT

I just want to say this: you've heard all the arguments. But to be practical about it, if you think that you're going to help this constitution when the people of this state have five times in the last twenty years said that they do not want this commission to be the subject of tampering and meddling, then you go ahead and say that this amendment's in order. But, if you do, I respectfully tell you that you're going right in the teeth of what the people of this state have said time and time again they want to do, and I ask you to vote that this amendment is out of order.

[Convention declared Amendment in order: 60-40. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

MR. TATE

Well, Mr. Chairman, I think the debate is self-explanatory. I move for the adoption of the clarifying amendment.

[Amendment No. 16 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 17

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, the next amendment, in view of Mr. Hernandez's concession, and in view of your next vote, I suppose is relatively noncontroversial. It does the same thing as the Louisiana Forestry Commission. It just says, "the commission shall be in the Executive Branch." That's the effect of the amendment, Amendment No. 17 is effective in that it just specifies that it's in the Executive Branch in order—for the same reasons we mentioned. Mr. Chairman, if there are no questions, and if there's no objection, I move the adoption of that clarifying amendment.

[Amendment No. 17 adopted without objection.]

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, right now we have pending Committee Proposal... the styling on Committee Proposal No. 9 on that one Section I-J; I don't know if Mr. Avant and Mr. Dennis have worked it out.

We have pending the section on the attorney general on Executive Committee Proposal No. 4. I know that the amendments that have come this morning may clarify that. We have only two more things and I've asked Mr. Tobias, the Vice-Chairman, to present these because he's got something sneaky that we're going to try to put over on you now.

[Motion to call Committee Proposal No. 30 from the calendar and to suspend the rules to consider the report at this time adopted without objection.]

Committee Proposal No. 30

Amendment No. 1

MR. TOBIAS

Committee Proposal No. 30 is on pink paper, which at the top is labeled "green copy," which I'll never be able to figure out. The stylistic changes are basically technical in nature. These are schedule provisions. Amendment No. 1 deals with the Board of Regents. It simply clarifies and shortens the language. I'll yield to any questions.

[Amendment No. 1 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 2

MR. TOBIAS

Amendment No. 2 deals with Section 3, affecting the Board of Supervisors of L.S.U. It conforms basically to the same stylistic changes that we made on the Board of Regents. I'll yield to any questions, and move the favorable adoption of the amendment.

[Amendment No. 2 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 3

MR. TOBIAS

Amendment No. 3 deals with Section 4 on the State Board of Elementary and Secondary Education, and the Board of Trustees for state colleges and universities. It conforms to the language that we have styled in Sections 2 and 3, and I'll move the adoption of the amendment, and yield to any questions.

[Amendment No. 3 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 4

MR. TOBIAS

Amendment No. 4 is on the rear--on the back of the amendment page-- it just concerns and changes Sections 7, 8, and 9 to Sections 5, 6, and 7 to conform to the Education Article. I move. . . it adds a comma after No. 6. I move the favorable adoption of the amendment.

[Amendment No. 4 adopted without objection. Motion to call Committee Proposal No. 36 from the calendar and to suspend the rules to consider the report at this time adopted without objection.]

Committee Proposal No. 36

Amendment No. 1

MR. TOBIAS

C. P. No. 36 is on the blue paper labeled green copy. We have people that are color-blind in two different ways. There is a set of caveat amendments, which we will explain in a few minutes, but we shall take up the substantive ones first. Amendment No. 1 just conforms the language to clarify it conforming to the Style and Drafting Manual and I move the adoption of Amendment No. 1, and yield to any questions.

[Amendment No. 1 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 2

MR. TOBIAS

Amendment No. 2 moves . . . changes Paragraph (B) in the original committee proposal and moves it down to Paragraph (C) and vice versa. It also moves the last sentence in the language adopted on the floor first, the first sentence last, the sentence to last sentence is split into two sentences. The last sentence is moved down and it just clarifies the language as adopted on the floor. I move the favorable adoption of Amendment No. 2 and yield to any questions.

[Amendment No. 2 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 3

MR. TOBIAS

Amendment No. 3 is on the rear of the amendment page. It was originally Paragraph (B). It clarifies the language as adopted by the floor of the convention. I move its favorable adoption and yield to any questions.

[Amendment No. 3 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 4

MR. TOBIAS

Amendment No. 4 changes the title from "the convention called by the legislation" to "constitutional convention." It clarifies the language as adopted by the floor. It's been approved by the Committee on Bill of Rights as containing no changes. I move favorable adoption and yield to any questions.

[Amendment No. 4 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 5

MR. TOBIAS

Amendment No. 5 deals with Section 3. There are no changes, except to change the section number from 4 to 3. I move the adoption of the amendment and yield to any questions.

[Amendment No. 5 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 6

MR. TOBIAS

The next amendment, Amendment No. 6 is a caveat amendment. It clarifies language as adopted by the floor of the convention dealing with the rules of the House of the Legislature. As originally introduced on the floor of the convention, there was some ambiguity as to what the phrase "in accordance with the rules of the Houses of the Legislature" meant. This particular amendment clarifies the question whether an amendment . . . a resolution introduced in one house must conform to the rules of the other house. This clarifies it so as to make it that it would conform in each house to the rules of that house. I move the favorable adoption of the amendment and yield to any questions.

[Amendment No. 6 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 7

MR. TOBIAS

Amendment No. 7 deals with the question of whether the governor must promulgate and declare an amendment to be adopted. As adopted on the floor of the convention there was no way that . . . there was no mandatory language that the governor had to proclaim the adoption of the amendment.

A caveat Amendment No. 7 would say that the governor must proclaim the adoption of the amendment which would allow a person to mandamus the governor. . . a citizen to mandamus the governor to promulgate it. In other words, it's just making it mandatory on one state agent that he . . . the governor that he declare the adoption of this proposal. I move the favorable adoption of the amendment; yield to any questions.

[Amendment No. 7 adopted without objection.]

Delegate Proposal No. 32

Amendment No. 1

MR. TATE

All right. Mr. Chairman, the Drew Proposal No. 32, since it was incorporated in Committee Proposal No. 10, we reported a recommendation to delete it in Committee Proposal No. 32. The amendment--which should or should not be on your desk--just says amend . . . page 1, delete lines 12 through 18 in entirety, and the note says because it has previously been inserted in the Judicial Branch. Mr. Chairman, I move the favorable adoption of this Amendment No. 1 to Committee Proposal No. 32.

Questions

MR. DREW

Judge, as I understand it, my amendment has been incorporated in the Judiciary Article, and what you're doing is just disposing of the delegate proposal now?

MR. TATE

Yes, Mr. Drew, we had without formally reporting it, we had incorporated the substance. . . recommended to the convention to incorporate the substance as a caveat amendment. It's in the Judiciary Article, mechanically that to clear away what happened to Delegate Proposal No. 22 and for that reason, we recommend its deletion since we have already incorporated its substance in the Judiciary Article.

MR. DREW

There's no change in what we've done, it's just deleting it from the Delegate Proposal?

MR. TATE

Absolutely no change, Mr. Drew.

[Amendment No. 1 adopted without objection.]

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, I understand that the Committee Proposal No. 9 that we held over on Civil Service, Mr. Avant and Mr. Denny have worked out clarifying amendments to our Committee Amendment No. 10.

[Motion to call Committee Proposal No. 9 from the calendar adopted without objection.]

Motion

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman, I would like at this time to move and if it requires a suspension of the rules to do so, I request a suspension of the rules. I wish to offer an amendment to the Amendment No. 10 which was offered by the Committee on Style and Drafting. Now, that amendment of the Committee on Style and Drafting has not yet been adopted, but I would like to amend it before it's adopted if that's possible; if not, go on and adopt it and then I'll move for a suspension of the rules.

MR. HENRY

I think we're going to proceed with some sort of semblance of organization; we're going to have to adopt the amendment.

MR. AVANT

Well, that will be satisfactory.

Point of Information

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman, in consideration of this matter would it be asking too much for somebody to tell us what the problem is and what we're trying to do, so that we can intelligently act on this?

MR. HENRY

I think that Judge Tate might be able to explain that when he talks about the amendment to Section 10 which is going to be to which, if it's adopted, an amendment by Mr. Avant will be offered. So, Judge Tate, if you will, explain the nature of the problem here?

Amendment No. 10

MR. TATE

All right, Mr. Chairman, Amendment No. 10 is the restylization of Section 1 (J) of the Civil Service Article. In 1 (A) . . . (J) (1) (a) a floor amendment was inserted which, as inserted, changed the flow and the consecutive nature of the ideas expressed. We styled it in accordance with the floor passage to reflect the seeming intent reflected by the floor passage. We would therefore recommend adoption of Amendment No. 10. But, Mr. Dennery and Mr. Avant have worked out the clarifying language that would more accurately carry out the real intent of the entire provision. I would prefer for one of them to explain it, but I would first move the adoption of Amendment No. 10, Mr. Chairman, and then have their amendment submitted to this.

Explanation

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this amendment relates to the rule-making power of the Civil Service Commission. Now, the proposal that was adopted says that the commission is vested with broad and general rule-making power and it then proceeds to mention various areas in which it has rule-making power. If you will look at the original version as it was adopted, on line . . . on page 16 of the green material that has been furnished you by the Style and Drafting Committee, the word "transactions" you will see that the language at that point -- you have some difficulty in following it-- it doesn't flow very easily. Now, the substance of the thing is simply this: it was never the intention of Mr. Dennery nor, I believe of this convention in light of the questions that were asked of Mr. Dennery when this was under consideration, that the Civil Service Commission would be able by rule to provide specifics as to employee training and safety programs. Let me tell you the significance of the word "rule". If you will look on further in this article-- I forget just where it is-- but you'll find a specific provision as to the effect of rules adopted by the Civil Service Commission. If you will look on page 20, in Subparagraph (D) you have the statement that "rules adopted pursuant hereto shall have the effect of law and be published and made available to the public. Each commission may impose penalties for violation of its rules by demotion in or suspension or discharge from position, with attendant loss of pay." The intent of the article, as I understood it, and as I believe Mr. Dennery will tell you that he understood it, was that the commission by its rule-making authority would have the power to require an appointing authority to institute an employee training and safety program that they would have to have one, but insofar as the basic content of that program or what the specific rules with respect to training or with respect to safety would be, the commission would only be able to recommend what should be in that program. Now, if you will recall at that time, it was brought out in the discussion that the commission did not want the authority, for instance, to tell the Division of State Police that you can only send out a patrol car if you have two officers in that car under the guise of safety. They wanted to leave those particular details such as how many hours a week a state police officer may have to spend on a firing range and all of those particular detailed matters up to the appointing authority feeling that they were the people who were best qualified to make the specific rules. But, they did want and there was no objection to the commission having the authority by rule which would have the effect of law to make the authority institute a program. The difference being that it would be up to the authority to establish the specific content of that program. Well, when it came out of Style and Drafting this Amendment No. 10, it didn't do that. It would have vested in the commission the sole authority to make rules which would have the effect of law with respect to employee training and safety, and that would mean that neither the appointing authority nor the legislature could act in that area, that the sole and exclusive such authority would be vested in the Civil Service Commission which is something that nobody wanted as I understood it and that nobody intended. So, Mr. Dennery and I together, have worked out this amendment which bears my name which will accomplish what was the intent at the time, and that is that the Civil Service Commission could require an appointing authority to institute an employee training and safety program and could make general recommendations as to what that program should consist of as to details, but could not dictate the specific safety rules or the specific training measures that would be implemented, and that would be left up to the appointing authority or to the legislature in the event they felt some legislation was needed in a particular area of employee training or safety.

MR. KEAN

Mr. Avant, how would the commission require an appointing authority to institute employee training and safety programs if they can't adopt any regulations with respect to that kind of activity?

MR. AVANT

Well, Mr. Kean, if they don't have a program and the commission has adopted a rule saying you shall have a safety program or you shall have a training program and they just don't have one, then they would be in violation of the rule and the appointing authority is always some individual-- he's some department head-- and if . . . and he could be punished accordingly.

MR. KEAN

Well, as I understand your amendment you would delete any reference to training and safety programs under the regulatory authority of the commission.

MR. AVANT

No. You're wrong; you misinterpret the amendment. The way the amendment would read, Mr. Kean, and I'll read the whole section as it would read with the amendment. It would say: "(J) Rules, Investigations; Wages and Hours". Under that (1) would be "Rules". Under that would be "(a) Powers. Each commission is vested with broad and general rule-making and subpoena powers for the administration and regulation of the classified service, including the power to adopt rules for regulating employment, promotion, demotion, suspension, reduction in pay, removal, certification, qualifications, political activities, employment conditions, compensation and disbursements of employees, and other personnel matters and transactions; to adopt a uniform pay and classification plan--and in the sentence--to require an appointing authority to institute an employee training and safety program and generally to accomplish the objectives and purposes of the merit system of civil service as herein established--now, that would be the end of that sentence--and then we come to the sentence--it may make recommendations with respect to employee training and safety, then you go on with the language--nothing herein shall prevent, etc."

MR. KEAN

I understand that. My point is though you have deleted the regulatory authority of the commission with respect to safety and training programs and you've said they can require him to do it, but they've got no regulatory authority by which they accomplish that.

MR. AVANT

Well, they have the rule-making power to require them to do it and violation of the rules can be punished.

[Amendment No. 10 adopted without objection.]

Motion

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman, I move for a suspension of the rules in order to now amend Amendment No. 10 of the Style and Drafting Committee to this Proposal No. 9, which amendment should be on the tables of delegates at this time.

MR. HENRY

You move for a suspension of the rules for the purpose of reconsidering the vote?

You moved for a suspension of the rules for the purpose of calling from the table the motion to reconsider the vote by which this section was adopted; is that what you're doing, Mr. Avant?

MR. AVANT

Yes, sir.

MR. HENRY

You want to get back into the substance of the section, right?

MR. AVANT

For the limited purpose of offering the amendment to Style and Drafting Committee Amendment No. 10.

[Motion to suspend the rules to reconsider Committee Proposal No. 9,

118th Days Proceedings—January 15, 1974

Section 1 for the limited purpose of offering the Avant amendments adopted without objection.]

Reconsideration

Amendments

MR. HARDIN

Amendments sent up by Delegate Avant to Committee Proposal No. 9.

Amendment No. 1. On page 7, line 7, in Committee Amendment No. 10 proposed by the Committee on Style and Drafting and adopted by the convention on January 15, on line 9 of said amendment, immediately after the words and punctuation "conditions," delete the remainder of the line and delete line 10 . . . on line 10 delete the word and punctuation "safety,"

Amendment No. 2. On page 7, line 7, in Committee Amendment No. 10 proposed by the Committee on Style and Drafting and adopted by the convention on today, on line 12 of said amendment, immediately after the word and punctuation "plan;" and before the word "and" insert the following: "to require an appointing authority to institute an employee training and safety program;"

Amendment No. 3. On page 7, line 7, in Committee Amendment No. 10 proposed by the Committee on Style and Drafting and adopted by the convention on January 15, 1974, on line 14 of the text of the amendment, immediately after the word and punctuation "established."and before the word "Nothing" insert the following: "It may make recommendations with respect to employee training and safety."

Explanation

MR. AVANT

I say that, Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, that I've already explained the amendment, though it bears my name it was actually drafted by Mr. Dennery. So, I ask your adoption of the amendment.

Questions

MR. BOLLINGER

Jack, do you really think that the language provided in Amendment No. 2--I know you didn't draft it--but do you really think: number 1, that it is necessary in a constitution, and number 2, that it could present problems for smaller appointing authorities?

MR. AVANT

Well, Mr. Bollinger, this is something that is not in the present constitution. As far as I am personally concerned, I'd just as soon leave it all out, but Mr. Dennery incorporated it in that proposal, at least that committee did; they wanted to add something in the area of employee training and safety. The point is that there's no objection from my point of view for the commission to have the authority to require an appointing authority to institute a program of training and safety. But, there was objection and I think that everybody more or less agreed that this was the meaning of it during the floor debate on it, what we're doing right here, that they would not be able to dictate to a particular appointing authority that you've got to have thus and such a rule. Such as telling the state police that we make a rule that you've got to have two police officers in every vehicle.... every patrol car that is out on the highways; you can't have one, you've got to have two at all times because those go to the details of the management of that department that has to be left up to the people who are entrusted with running that department. The same as to say, to take another example, telling the department or division of the state police that you have to require, you have to have a training program that will require every officer to spend X number of hours on the range every week when that may not be practical. They may feel that he ought to have more or maybe less time; those are things that go to the day to day operation of the department. It was the consensus, as I understand it, is reflected exactly in this amendment that they can require that there be a program, but the details of that program will be left up to the people running the department and the commission will only recommend as to what they think should be in it.

MR. ABRAHAM

Jack, if the Civil Service Commission simply requires the particular appointing authority to establish a program, then who will set the standards for these different programs, the appointing authority?

MR. AVANT

That's a just exactly what I've been explaining up here I thought, Mack, that the commission would say, "we think you ought to have a training program, we make....we require you to have a training program, you have to have one; that's a rule." It has the effect of law. We think that these things ought to be in it, but they could only recommend as to what would actually be in it.

MR. ABRAHAM

But, the appointing authority could establish it any way it wants? Now, would not this become then a subject for negotiations between the employee and the employer?

MR. AVANT

It would be a matter between the Civil Service Commission and the appointing authority.

MR. ABRAHAM

No. I mean if the Civil Service Commission has no authority to regulate the programs or to oversee them or anything like that, then would not then this become a subject matter for negotiation between the employee, say the patrolman and the Public Safety?

MR. AVANT

It might, Mr. Abraham, and I don't know who would be more concerned with employee training and safety than the state policemen and the other people who are actually out on the firing line. I don't know who has more interest in seeing that a safety program is instituted than the people who are going to be killed, and maimed and injured if it's not a good one.

Further Discussion

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Chairman and delegates to the convention, I rise merely to confirm what Mr. Avant said. This was a suggestion made by Mr. Avant--the actual drafting of the amendment was performed by me. I am very much in favor of this amendment because I think it expresses what we discussed on the floor at the time we adopted this particular section of the civil service proposal. I believe it to be a very fine amendment, and I urge its adoption.

Reconsideration

Amendment

MR. HARDIN

Amendment sent up by Delegates Heary, Pugh, Conroy, and others.

On page 3, line 34 of the final enrolled copy, delete the language inserted by Committee Amendment No. 11 proposed by the Committee on Style and Drafting, and adopted by the convention on January 14, 1974, and insert the following:

"(C) Full Faith and Credit. The full faith and credit of the state shall be pledged to the repayment of all bonds or other evidences of indebtedness issued by the state directly or through any state board, agency or commission, pursuant to the provisions of Paragraphs (A) and (B) hereof. The full faith and credit of the state is not hereby pledged to the repayment of bonds of a levee district, political subdivision, or local public agency.

118th Days Proceedings—January 15, 1974

In addition, any state board, agency, or commission authorized by law to issue bonds in the manner so authorized and with the approval of the state bond commission, or its successor, may issue bonds which are payable from fees, rates, rentals, tolls, charges, grants, or other receipts or income derived by or in connection with an undertaking, facility, project, or any combination thereof, without a pledge of the full faith and credit of the state. Such revenue bonds may, but are not required to be issued in accordance with the provisions of Paragraphs (A) and (B) hereof. If issued other than as provided in Paragraphs (A) and (B), such revenue bonds shall not carry the pledge of the full faith and credit of the state, and the issuance of the bonds shall not constitute the incurring of state debt under this constitution. The rights granted to deep-water port commissions, or deep-water port, harbor, and terminal districts under this constitution shall not be impaired by the provisions of this section."

Explanation

MR. PUGH

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this amendment addresses itself to Section (C), Subparagraph (C) of Section 6 relating to full faith and credit. It provides as follows:

First of all, if you want the full faith and credit of this state, in connection with any of these bond issuances, you must do three things. You must get the permission of the State Bond Commission, you must have a two-thirds vote of the legislature, in addition to that, you must comply with the capital improvement requirements....

as I stated, if you want the full faith and credit of this state, you must meet three criteria. You must meet those set forth by the state bond commission, you must obtain a two-thirds vote of the legislature, and you must also meet the capital improvement requirements as specified yesterday in the constitution. If you do not want the full faith and credit of this state, you may still issue bonds providing you obtain permission of the State Bond Commission. To obtain the permission of the State Bond Commission, you must have a satisfactory feasibility study reflecting that your proposed income will take care of these revenue bonds. That is to say if between sessions of the legislature you want to issue bonds on account of a favorable market, but you do not care to have the full faith and credit of the state behind you, you may do so. But in doing so, you must still comply with all the requirements of the State Bond Commission, and specifically those relating to feasibility studies.

This amendment also excludes the deep-water ports in view of the fact that when we were in local government, we agreed that the state insofar as the deep-water ports were concerned, they would continue to have the same powers and conditions and rights and duties and obligations as previously imposed upon them. For your information, it is my understanding from the staff that there are five such ports, that is the one in New Orleans, the Greater Baton Rouge Port, the South Louisiana Port, the Concordia Port, and the Lake Charles Harbor and Terminal District.

I yield to any questions.

Questions

MR. BROWN

Mr. Pugh, what did you say about a feasibility study would have to be made? Run through that again. You talked about a feasibility study made to the bonding commission. I don't see anything in here about a feasibility study. What were you referring to?

MR. PUGH

It is my understanding that that is a requirement of the State Bond Commission before bonds would be approved by them. Having nothing to do with the full faith and credit of the state, there must be a feasibility study submitted to them reflecting to the best of their judgement, that income will, in fact, pay for the bonds they propose to put out.

MR. BROWN

What was your comment about issuing the bonds when the legislature is not meeting, the problems involved in better interest rates? Isn't it true that revenue bonds are historically...never get as good an interest rate without the full faith and credit pledged behind them, as they would with the full faith and credit pledged behind them?

MR. PUGH

Well, I don't think there's any question. If you have the full faith and credit, you might have a better interest factor on your bonds. However, the bond market may be greater during the times when the legislature is not in session, and they may, as a matter of judgment, elect to go forward without the full faith and credit of the state, in which event they can, but they must comply....

MR. BROWN

They...you're talking about the commission involved, or who are you speaking....?

MR. PUGH

Whoever wants to issue the bond. Whatever agency proposes to issue the bonds may do so without the full faith and credit of the state, but they must have the permission of the State Bond Commission, including the requirements for the feasibility study.

MR. BROWN

Well, then, the protections we have to stop the proliferation of tremendous numbers of revenue bonds would be the bonding commission?

MR. PUGH

Well, that has always been one of the protections and one of the better protections. In addition to that, you now have a protection relating to the two-thirds....
...the State Bond Commission has a responsibility under the law, and when fulfilled--that responsibility--then, you will, in fact, cut down some of these bond issues you have reference to. One of the requirements, as I understand it, is that there must be a feasibility study. May be a matter of opinion as to whether or not that feasibility study reflects factually correct that income will be there. That will be the responsibility of the State Bond Commission to see.

The important thing is, we don't have the full faith and credit of this state behind any of these unless, or until, they get two-thirds vote of the legislature, and also comply with the capital improvement requirements.

MR. HENRY

Will you yield to a question from Mr....Senator Nunez?
The gentleman yields.

MR. NUNEZ

Well, Mr. Pugh, I'm...let me preface my remarks by saying I'll probably vote for your amendment. But, it's still got me sort of confused as to why the revenue producing agencies of our state, those that collect fees, rates, rentals, tolls, charges, grants or etc.; they are still state agencies, but they produce their own revenues. They are still taxpayers' revenues, would not want to take advantage of a concept that we adopted several years ago whereby the general obligation bonds of this state have first call on the revenues of this state, general fund of this state; thereby, this recommendation, I believe, wouldn't you agree, was from the Public Affairs Research Council whereby these agencies would get a first-class rating on their bonds, and thereby sell their bonds for a cheaper rate than they normally would.

Would you tell me, so I can, I'm asking for the record, why would these agencies that were successful in getting us to amend this provision, the agencies such and HEAL and the others, Mr. Fenner and the others, that have stormed upon this group to get us to amend this to take out the full faith and credit of the state behind these type of bonds that would actually give them a better rating? Why are they so insistent on this provision, the bonding attorneys and the people that run these revenue-producing agencies? I can't conceive of why they would not want better rates on those bonds.

MR. PUGH

Well, you are asking me two subjective questions. If they were objective in nature, perhaps I could answer them. Why an agency did something, I can't answer that. Why "Affinity," or whoever you mentioned did something, I can't answer that. All I can say is that this purports to be the best judgment of the knowledgeable people in the subject.

MR. NUNEZ

Those are the bonding attorneys?

MR. PUGH

Well, insofar as this convention is concerned.

MR. NUNEZ

Those are the people who want to sell bonds?

118th Days Proceedings—January 15, 1974

MR. PUGH

Well....I regret an inability to answer....

MR. NUNEZ

I preface my remarks. I'm just trying to get some answers so I'd be more conscientiously voting for it rather than just doing something to be doing it. That's what I'm saying.

MR. PUGH

Well, I admire you for that, Senator. I just regret that I can't answer a subjective question of why does a board feel a certain way, or why does a lawyer whom I've never met feel a certain way. I could answer an objective question.

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Pugh, I'll share Senator Nunez's view and I hope I can vote for this amendment. But, I would like for the record, to submit a couple of questions to you.

If I understand this amendment right, any state agency, board, or commission that wants to have a bond issue, if they want the full faith and credit of the state behind it, they have to subject themselves to what is now in Paragraph (A) and (B), which is a two-thirds vote of the legislature. Am I correct?

MR. PUGH

That's absolutely correct, Senator.

MR. RAYBURN

Now, supposing that some board who now, under the present law, has to get approval of the legislature, is this amendment broad enough, if they don't want the full faith and credit of the state behind it, they can come and do it themselves, if they can get the bond commission to approve it, and by-pass the legislature even though now, under the present law and present constitution, they have to get the approval of the legislature? But, if they decide we don't want the full faith and credit of the state behind it, we'll just go on our own with it and can get the bond commission to approve it. Can they circumvent the legislature?

MR. PUGH

It is my appreciation that they do not have to have the permission of the legislature in that event.

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Pugh, I'm now talking about the regular state agencies that can only issue bonds by a two-thirds vote of the legislature. We have a lot of state agencies that now have to meet those requirements. We have some agencies and commissions that don't have to meet those requirements. Under this amendment, could every state agency in the future issue bonds and circumvent the legislature if they so desired, and said, "We don't want the full faith and credit of the state behind it; all we have to do is get the bond commission to approve it." Could that happen?

MR. PUGH

It's my....it's my appreciation of this amendment that they do not have to have the vote of the legislature if they elect not to obtain the full faith and credit, and if they comply with the requirements of the State Bond Commission, including the feasibility study.

MR. RAYBURN

Well, then, Mr. Pugh--and I'm trying to understand this where I can vote for it, believe me--but, I'm deeply concerned over the language, as you well know. If a state agency that today has to have the approval of the legislature before they can issue bonds--I'll say the highway department, the highway board--I'll just use them--they cannot issue bonds without prior approval of a two-thirds vote of the legislature. That is the law today.

MR. PUGH

Yea, sir.

MR. RAYBURN

Do you follow me?

MR. PUGH

I follow you.

MR. RAYBURN

If we are--and any bonds they issue, the full faith and credit of the state are behind them.

MR. PUGH

All right.

MR. RAYBURN

If this language in this amendment is adopted, could the highway board at a later date say we are going to issue some bonds, we are not going to have to go by the legislature, we are not worried about the full faith and credit of the state behind them, but directly, they would be behind them? Could that happen?

MR. PUGH

Yea, they may. They issue bonds.

MR. RAYBURN

All they'd have to do is get the approval of the bond commission?

MR. PUGH

Well, you say "All they'd have to do," the answer is yea.

[Motion to allow an additional five minutes adopted without objection.]

MR. CANNON

I'd like to ask these questions to sort of set aside what fears that Senator Rayburn and Senator Nunez have.

If you'll look down there about almost half-way down, the sentence beginning, "In addition, any state board, agency, or commission authorized by law." That means the legislature must first give them the authorization to issue such revenue bonds. They have this power to issue bonds in the manner so authorized. Again, the legislature has the control as to how this....they are authorized to issue revenue bonds. Again, they must have the approval of the State Bond Commission or its successor. I think that will....I think that adequately satisfies whatever fears that Senator Rayburn and Senator Nunez has. They first...the legislature themselves must authorize this agency to have the power to issue revenue bonds, and whatever conditions they wish to impose.

Further on down there, the sentence below this, which is about two-thirds of the way down, beginning, "Such revenue bonds may, but are not required to be issued in accordance with the provisions of Paragraph (A) and (B) hereof." That, in itself, dictates back to the legislature that they may or may not require these state boards and agencies to comply in such a way. Am I correct in this, Mr. Pugh?

MR. PUGH

You are correct. I think what the Senator had in mind was the legislature creates a commission. As a matter of course, authorizes it to issue bonds under certain circumstances and conditions. Now, the legislature, at that point in time, may make those just as stringent as they want to. I think the Senator's question, though, Senator Rayburn, was directed to an instance where once all that's been done, do they still have to come back to the legislature to issue particular bonds. Obviously, if they are secured by taxes, they've got to come back to the....they've got to get the permission of the legislature anyway. But, I did not think his question was directed in that score. I thought his question was, once the commission has been created, predetermining the question that as they create these commissions, they can make it just as tough as they want to going in. But, once they are created, do they have to come back for a particular issue? Now, if this question was directed at anything other than that, I beg that he ask me and advise me so.

MR. CANNON

Well, then, it's been my general appreciation that the legislature, if they wanted to put a ceiling on the amount of revenue bonds an agency could issue, could do so by law.

MR. PUGH

No question about it. Even after they create the agency, they can come back and make that requirement.

MR. CANNON

Right. This gives the legislature the ultimate control over these agencies.

MR. PUGH

One hundred percent. Now, I think his question, though, and I may be wrong, but, his question was, "O.K. Here's a set of facts where we're looking at all the acts up till now."

Now, do they still have to come back to the legislature? They don't have to meet any more than the last requirement of the last session of the legislature prior to the time they elect to do it. But, getting up to that point, the legislature can make them do anything.

118th Days Proceedings—January 15, 1974

MR. CANNON

In continuation of this idea, if the legislature should find some agency which it had granted a blanket authority to issue bonds, it might deem it advisable on their part to restrict it. They could, at some future time after the constitution is adopted, come back and place the limitation, "by law," on these....

MR. PUGH

They could make it worse. They could make it that they had to have three-fourths vote of the legislature instead of two-thirds.

MR. CANNON

That's correct. That's my understanding.

MR. PUGH

They could restrict them to that...

MR. CANNON

I think....

MR. PUGH

...but, we are talking about a constitutional concept here.

MR. CANNON

...and legislative control.

MR. PUGH

That's correct.

MR. CANNON

I thank you, sir.

MR. PUGH

I certainly didn't mean to leave the impression that there is no control by the legislature.

MR. SCHMITT

Does every bond issued by any state agency have to be approved by the State Bond Commission under this proposal?

MR. PUGH

All of them have to be except those already authorized for the deep-water ports that we agreed, right or wrongly, we agreed earlier that they wouldn't have to do it.

MR. SCHMITT

The deep-water ports are not presently being authorized by the State Bonding Commission?

MR. PUGH

Whether they are presently, I couldn't answer that. All I know is that they are being exempted here because it's already been the wishes of this convention....

MR. SCHMITT

I thought that the wishes of the convention were that the ...because they had emergency situations, that they'd have to expend money, therefore, it would be no restrictions. I don't think we ever enter into any kind of agreement with reference to bonds, 'cause capital bonds are long-term expenditures. Isn't that correct?

MR. PUGH

I can merely tell you what you did in local government. In local government, you left them where you found them. You let them have all the powers that ....

MR. SCHMITT

That they had up to the present time. But, no more than they had before.

MR. PUGH

You're not creating any new powers for them. No, sir.

MR. SCHMITT

By not allowing...by assuming that they did not have to go to the State Bond Commission in the past, I mean that they did have to go in the past, and that they don't have to go in the future. Don't you think that's giving them any greater powers?

MR. PUGH

All I'm saying this amendment does, this amendment ratifies and confirms what you are elected to do under local government. Under local government, you left them with the same powers that they previously had. This neither extends those powers nor restricts them.

MR. SCHMITT

Maybe one....do you think maybe one of the reasons for that was because they were elected bodies, and perhaps there's a difference because these are appointed?

MR. PUGH

You again are asking me a subjective question. I can't tell you what the thinking of everybody was here at the time that they passed the provision in local government. All I know is that it was overwhelmingly passed.

MR. SCHMITT

O.K. Assuming that this would be adopted, your proposal, would these various state agencies have to report their income to the legislature of the State of Louisiana? Would they have to report their expenditures to the State of Louisiana as we have put under our proposal, under the committee's adopted proposal?

MR. PUGH

It's my appreciation that they do. Yes.

MR. SCHMITT

I don't see it required in here.

MR. PUGH

Well, as I understand from somebody more knowledgeable over here about reporting, the law presently requires that.

MR. SCHMITT

The statutory law presently requires that.

MR. PUGH

That's correct.

MR. SCHMITT

But, you don't think by this last section here where you are exempting them, they say that they are exempted, "if issued other than as provided in Paragraphs (A) and (B), such revenue bonds shall not carry the full faith and credit of the state." It goes further, that this doesn't exempt them from those provisions?

MR. PUGH

No, sir. It merely grants you....it merely leaves them where we found them. We've already given them certain rights and we're not trying to take them away now.

MR. SCHMITT

Does this allow a state agency to issue a bond issue, maybe of a hundred million dollars, or fifty million dollars if it's a revenue bond issue, without the approval of the legislature?

MR. PUGH

If there is such a provision.

MR. SCHMITT

If it is adopted, is this possible, if your proposal is adopted?

MR. PUGH

If, under the present law, one of the deep-water ports has the authority to....

MR. SCHMITT

Not a deep-water port. Let's go to any. As an example, a new building....

MR. HENRY

Mr. Schmitt, there's some other people, now, that want to ask questions. So, sort of wind it up, if you will.

MR. SCHMITT

Would you answer that question, then, please?

MR. PUGH

I'll be glad to.

Rephrase the question so I'll understand it. Will you?

MR. SCHMITT

Is it possible, under this provision, for a large bond issue to be issued by a state agency without the approval of the legislature, providing it's a revenue bond issue?

MR. PUGH

Yes, so long....

118th Days Proceedings—January 15, 1974

MR. SCHMITT

Isn't that the problem that we had throughout the entire time with our committee, and didn't we try and solve it by this particular proposal?

MR. PUGH

Can I answer...do you want me to answer the question? I want to. Let me answer the first, then I'll go to the second one.

The first question is, if that agency complies with all of the requirements...statutory requirements on the books at the time they want to do it, they don't have to go back to the legislature again. Between sessions, if they want to issue it without the full faith and credit, but comply with all the then requirements of the legislature, they may do so. Now, the legislature next May or April, or whenever they meet, if they want to, can say, "All of these things--all of these agencies must have a three-fourths vote." Then, they'd have to have it.

MR. SCHMITT

Three-fourths vote of what?

MR. PUGH

Huh?

MR. SCHMITT

You said all of these agencies have to have a three-fourths vote. A three-fourths vote of what?

MR. PUGH

The legislature may enact into law a provision that an agency has to have a three-fourths vote of the legislature before they may issue bonds without the full faith and credit of the state, and if that's the law, then they've got to comply with it because this provision says they must comply with the provisions of the law.

MR. JONES

Mr. Pugh, isn't the basic problem we have here that revenue bonds are not required to have the full faith and credit of the state because we must be very careful when we put the full faith and credit of the state behind bonds, that it's for all the people, and not some particular private state agency that may have a project like we're talking about--the superport?

MR. PUGH

There's no question, but you are right, Mr. Jones.

MR. JONES

Also, that when you issue revenue bonds, or start out on a project, it's difficult, other than the enabling authority, to be able to say exactly how the matter is going to come out. You've got to have either term bonds, and not serial bonds, as you do in full faith and credit obligations?

MR. PUGH

That is correct.

MR. JONES

It's not for all the people. Also, if you don't put the full faith and credit of the state behind it, the feasibility study made by the bond commission provides that it has to stand on its own feet; that the revenue will support the bonds that are issued. Therefore, you don't have to pledge the full faith and credit of the state. Is that correct?

MR. PUGH

As a practical matter, if...the feasibility study reflects the fact that they will be self-supporting, then not only would the commission approve them, but intelligent buyers would buy them.

MR. JONES

That's correct.

MR. PUGH

Regardless of the fact it doesn't have the full faith and credit because it stands on its own.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Mr. Pugh, I should say, do you know that the objections raised a couple of days ago when this was first submitted was because there was a feeling that these boards or commissions might secure the full faith and credit of the state, without submitting to the provisions of (A) and (B)?

MR. PUGH

That is correct.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

All right. Then, one of those provisions, as you know, is the two-thirds vote.

MR. PUGH

That is correct.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

But, it became aware at the time, that there might be some quasi public-type of commission created which the...would be reluctant to give the two-thirds vote, or reluctant to say that all the state is going to be responsible for these debts, but then this provides that these could be created. I think that most of the members of the committee are in agreement that this does no harm. Are you aware of that, sir?

MR. PUGH

Well, I'm not aware of the fact that the committee is all in agreement. I'm aware of what everybody's told me on the floor. Who's on that committee by name, I can't tell you... but getting back to what you said, last Saturday there was a proposal that some objections were made to. I was of the opinion that the objections were satisfied in the proposal. Be that as it may, we redrafted it--if you want to--to clarify any question about those factors. That redrafted, clarified version is before you. It has the approval of the person who made the objections in the first place.

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Chairman, I hate to be so quick on a matter of so much importance. If every question Mr. Jones has asked you, Mr. Pugh, is correct, and you indicated they were, well, how come that the Public Affairs Research Council and all the good government groups and all the people who buy and sell bonds wanted us to put into the statutes, several years ago, that the first call of all bond obligations would be under the general fund of this state? In so doing, we'd give better rates to bonds--better rates. That's what we're all aiming for, to save the taxpayers money. How come if that's true, then, we have to go around the door and say, well, these agencies which are state agencies--by the way, isn't it true--which are state agencies and which are public funds--taxpayer's money: dormitory funds, toll road funds; it's all public funds. We now say, "We don't need that good rate. Let them sell all the bonds they want." How come that's true; and that's a fact?

MR. PUGH

Well, let me say again, and I apologize for an inability to answer a subjective question. You asked me why PAR wanted. . . I don't even belong to PAR. I don't know why. . . what their policies are. All I can tell you is that in my personal experience that bank interest, for instance, went from six to ten percent in less than a year--six to ten percent in less than a year. If bank interest can do that, somebody is probably right when they say that there can be a favorable market for the sale of bonds at a time other than when the legislature is meeting; and that even though ordinarily common sense dictates that a bond has a greater marketability if it has the full faith and credit of the state behind it, be that as it may, it may have a better marketability at a given time even though it doesn't have the full faith and credit behind it. I think that's the purpose that they're talking about.

MR. NUNEZ

You absolutely said nothing. . .

MR. HENRY

The gentleman has exceeded his time.

Further Discussion

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, on behalf of our committee, I feel like I need to make a brief explanation about what we were attempting to do. It is possible that we might have gone too far; it certainly wasn't intentional. I serve on the Bond Commission; however, a subcommittee of Revenue, Finance and Taxation handled this proposal. They went into it in depth. The whole committee went into it briefly. What has been happening in this state in the past is this: if the college at Hammond, Southeastern College wanted to build a dormitory out of revenue bonds or revenue financing out of fees, the State Board authorized that. The Bond Commission advertised and sold the bonds. You can check the record; those bonds ran about one percent plus, every time more than a bond with the full faith and credit of the state did. The records are there for you to go look at. Now, if anyone can tell me that a dormitory located on state land adjacent to other college buildings or university buildings is not an obligation of the state, I'd like to know why. I don't think it's going to be moved; I don't think it's going to be seized and sold. That's what the committee was trying to do. We, as far as I know, had no intentions of going beyond bonds that were authorized for buildings on state property controlled and financed by the state. We were trying to see that we could get a better interest rate. It was not my intentions to go to little port commissions where the state had nothing to do with them and to say that they had to get a two-thirds vote of the legislature. What I was trying to do with Mr. Pugh, and I went over this several times with him, was to be sure that it was still going to do what the committee wanted it to do. I hope it will do that. I can't compete with these sharpies when you come to these bond attorneys. I'm not that familiar with them. But, the only safeguard I see here now is it says that they can only be sold "as provided by law," which means that if there's an agency in the state today that don't have the legal authority to issue bonds, they can't do it in the future unless they come to the legislature and get the authority. Well, then when the legislature gives them the authority, they can set forth how they will sell them, if they want them to come get a two-thirds vote. So, I think that's fairly well covered. As far as the Bond Commission, the Bond Commission has nothing to do with authorizing bond issues. There's roughly seven hundred million dollars worth of bonds today in this state that has been authorized by the state or its agencies--the legislature or the state agencies that has not been sold. The Bond Commission merely figures out when the bond market is best, how many bonds this state can afford to sell in any given year without flooding the market, and they do advertise and sell the bonds. They either reject or accept the bids when they've advertised, and that's what the Bond Commission does. But, I do think, after reading this amendment, that in the future if there is a state agency that has to come to the legislature, now, to get a bond issue passed, they will still have to come. They will still have to meet the requirements as outlined in Paragraph (A) and (B). However, if there are some agencies that the law says today they don't have to come to the legislature, it's my opinion that they won't have to come, under this language. I hope I'm right in the way I have interpreted the amendment, because I know what the committee was trying to do. We had some bond people that met our committee, and I don't know why this come up at the last moment, but it looks like we're doing a lot of things that we're finding out really what they mean at the last moment. So, I hope this amendment will do what I . . . what the committee wants it to do.

Further Discussion

MR. BROWN

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I'd like to echo what Senator Rayburn said in terms of the work of the committee and in terms of what we were trying to do when this particular proposal was brought forth. It's interesting to me as to what brought about any major change. Now, we've heard about the bond attorneys. Our subcommittee met down in New Orleans; we met with the firm of Beck-Juddell; we met with the state treasurer's office; we met with the Division of Administration; and no one had any objection to this particular section. In fact, they highly praised what we were trying to do. Now, I don't know what's . . . quite fully understand what's brought about the switch. As Senator Rayburn says, this was gone over in great detail in the committee in trying to find some way to get a better interest rate. I got a letter from one of the largest bonding attorney . . . bonding firms in the state, a New Orleans law firm. I want to read you this one paragraph as to what was brought to my attention. The letter says . . . talks about the fact that we might be making a mistake. It goes into detail about: "I'm sure that your committee would not want to handicap agencies in the construction of toll roads, toll bridges, water terminals, ports, deep-water ports," and goes on and on and on. Now, the question in my mind is: Do we want large things like this built without being presented to the legislature? It gets back to the overall checks and balances. The same thing like we were talking about here a few weeks ago about the dome stadium. As I mentioned to you, right now the legislature is being asked to vote for some eight million dollars additionally for the dome stadium, and it wasn't even brought before a public hearing, under our old constitution. That's just not right. These are major, major projects that we are being asked to allow state agencies to bring forth in terms of bonds--even though they don't have the full faith and credit of the state behind them--without a vote of the legislature. It raises some serious questions in my mind. This was brought up awfully fast. I'm surprised; Mr. Pugh and I talked briefly about it. But, our committee involving Senator Rayburn, Mr. Roemer and myself really haven't had any rapport on this thing. I got the amendment this morning.

Mr. Chairman, if I'm in order, I'd like to move right now--since it's 12:15--I'd like to move that we adjourn for lunch with the hopes that over the two hour lunch period maybe we can find some particular ground, here. Otherwise, as it stands right now, an awful lot of us are going to have to oppose it. We'd like to work something out on it. So, I'd like to move right now that we adjourn until two o'clock or some other time that the Chairman might suggest, if that's not agreeable.

[Motion to recess for one and one-half hours rejected: 45-49. Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. PUGH

I shall not take the five. I will merely tell you that under the terms of the amendment, the legislature--in which Mr. Brown belongs, Mr. Rayburn belongs, and so many other delegates here--may establish any procedures they want to establish. It's fully open under the amendment for them to do whatever they want to do. They can make it just as difficult to build dormitories or build anything else as they want to do, under the terms of this amendment. Anything they want to do, they may do. There's no prohibition against the legislature passing laws to make it difficult to sell or provide for bonds in Louisiana. Thank you.

Questions

MR. LANIER

Mr. Pugh, with reference to the situation described by Senator Rayburn, wouldn't we have a problem with this language after the effective date of the new constitution with reference to limitations on agencies that presently have the authority to do this, acting in the interim period before the legislature puts subsequent restrictions on them?

MR. PUGH

Yes. In my opinion, you're going to have many problems between the passage of this constitution and the next session of the legislature. This may be one of them. We're going to have a lot of problems in that regard. We can't resolve them all. All I can tell you, that if the legislature wants to, they can provide where a state institution is concerned. You can't build dormitories without getting a two-thirds, or a three-fourths, or a five-sixths, or any percentage you want permission of the legislature. This provides for that. You may certainly do that. The only . . . any place that an instrumentality of this state, an agency feels that even if they are built that the state is going to have to bail them out of their problems, then obviously the legislature can provide that anywhere it's to be built on state owned property, it must have a certain percentage vote of the legislature before it's allowed. There's no problem there.

MR. LANIER

The point I'm getting at, Mr. Pugh, is that if we have some time, don't you think we can design some language to cover this loophole, this hiatus that would be in the law if this proposal is adopted as drafted with reference to the situation that I have just described?

MR. PUGH

I suggest to you that the Committee on Legislative Liaison can make such an arrangement, if you want to. The difficulty is that there are many statutory provisions that are going to be affected by what we did in this constitution. The purpose of the Legislative Liaison Committee is to take care of those problems. If they say they can't, then we'll worry about it at that point. I believe they can.

Recess

MR. POYNTER

There's been . . . in that light, Mr. O'Neill, in fact, had a resolution that went to committee today, but I know a lot of interest expressed in each delegate to the convention having a copy signed of the proposed constitution. Informally, through our printer, etc., we've worked out a procedure by which the printer will print and you will get, I hope within a week or so after the convention is over, a signed--originally signed--copy, hot-lead set of what the ultimate document looks like. Now, to make this possible, what it will amount to is: first of all, that each of you are going to have to sign your names about a hundred and thirty-five times, approximately, so that each of you can have a copy--an original copy--signed by all the delegates, of what the document will look like. Now, to facilitate that, we have already sent to the printer and have gotten proof back--and we'll return it to the printer for final printing this evening--signature sheets with all of your names on it; your district number; and if you happen to be an appointive delegate, that fact, and whether you were appointed to represent the public at large or otherwise, together with their offices and so forth. These should be back to us by some time tomorrow, probably tomorrow morning. Now, there will be no way, physically, for all of you to come and sign your name that many times Saturday, since, oh, roughly twenty-five of you are on the same sheet of paper. As a result, tomorrow--beginning tomorrow--we will set up--I think there are six separate sheets, perhaps seven--that many tables. There will be available at those tables the hundred-and-thirty-odd copies of the signature sheets for your name. So, sometime between tomorrow, Thursday and Friday, if you would, when you find a moment--and it will take more than a moment, I presume--go and sign your name to all of those signature sheets.

MR. HENRY

You've almost exceeded your time, Mr. Poynter.

MR. POYNTER

That's what I was afraid of. Then, they will become a part of the document which will be mailed to you. We've made arrangements for a nice . . . relatively nice cover for it and that sort of thing. But, if we don't get your signatures on it, then the result will be that you just simply will not get a copy of the document with all of your signatures on it. I think it's probably going to take that long a period of time for all of you to be able to do that.

MR. HENRY

Mr. Graham, now, is going to move to . . . for a suspension of the rules for the purpose of calling from the table the motion to reconsider the vote by which Section 9 of Committee Proposal No. 15 was adopted, for the limited purpose of offering his amendment, which is just some wording that needs to be done to implement the bond language that we adopted before lunch.

[Motion to suspend the rules to reconsider Committee Proposal No. 15, Section 9, for the limited purpose of considering an amendment adopted without objection.]

Reconsideration

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendment sent up by Mr. Henry, Pugh, Conroy, Kean, Graham, et al. Reads as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 6 line 6, in Convention Floor Amendment No. 21 proposed by the Committee on Style and Drafting and adopted yesterday, at the end of line 14 of the text of the amendment, delete the word "and" and at the end of line 18 of the text of the amendment delete the period "." and insert the punctuation and word "; and" and insert between lines 18 and 19 of the amendment the following:

"(6) by a state board, agency, or commission, but pledged by it in connection with the issuance of revenue bonds as provided in Paragraph (C) of Section 6 of this Article, other than any surplus as may be defined in the law authorizing such revenue bonds."

Now, by way of explanation, I might say that if any of you have your final enrollment still with you that was passed out on Committee Proposal No. 15, this will appear again on page 6, line 6 of that, affecting Section 9 dealing with state funds and their deposit in the state treasury. That was formerly Section 11, and by Style and Drafting changes, it became Section 9. There is contained in that section, enumeration presently of five different types of funds received which do not go to the state treasury.

This amendment, then, would propose immediately after that fifth item to add a sixth item as set forth in the text of the proposed amendment Mr. Graham has before you.

Explanation

MR. GRAHAM

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I believe that Mr. Poynter just explained it for me. Thank you, Mr. Poynter.

This is simply to provide the mechanism for the change in the authorization for revenue bonds that was just passed prior to lunch. It's simply a matter that the funds derived in connection with the issuance of revenue bonds will be maintained by the agency issuing the bonds so that they can use those funds in payment of the project for which the bonds were issued. It will prevent them from having to go to the legislature for this authorization. I might mention that this is already provided for in the act creating the Bond Security and Redemption Fund, and this is to complement that and so that that act will not be in conflict with the constitutional provisions.

I would appreciate your adoption of the amendment.

Questions

MR. BROWN

Mr. Graham, tell me why this is necessary. In other words, what I'm concerned about is I understand that the income from the revenues go to pay off the bonds. Do you know if there is any delay at all? In other words, if the money is collected and if it sits in an account for thirty days or so, the purpose of what we did before was to keep it from just lying around, to see that all idle funds were immediately invested the very moment they were obtained. My question to you is: Why is this necessary? Do the . . . does the money that is collected off a revenue bond, like say, a toll road--let's take a toll road, for instance. Once the tolls are collected and they are deposited in a particular account, do they go directly from that account to pay off the bonds, or do they go into an account that the commission holds and at the end of the month go to pay off the bonds? I know it's a complicated question, but it deserves answering to see why this is even necessary. It looks to me like it's kind of a bookkeeping procedure to let it go into the state treasury and say, "Well, now look, we've got this much money coming in from revenues. Therefore, it should be," you know, "sent when we normally write checks to pay off the bond payment that's due this month." But, I'm worried about the two weeks or the three weeks it may sit there. Why is it necessary to do this?

MR. GRAHAM

All right. To begin with, this is . . . this pertains to the funds that are derived in connection with the issuance of the bonds, the funds that are obtained from that person or group of persons or corporation that buys the bonds, and are used to pay the cost of constructing a project--whether it's a toll road, a bridge, or whatever it might be. Those funds that are used to pay for that project, those are the funds that we are talking about. If so, then let's assume that an agency issues six hundred thousand dollars in bonds. Those . . . that six hundred thousand dollars would go to the agency so that they may pay on the estimate on the project during the course of its construction, as required of them. If so, then those funds will not go to the state treasury, and then the agency would have to go to the legislature and get an appropriation to pay for the project they are issuing. It doesn't affect the funds in the manner in which you are concerned, Senator Brown.

MR. BROWN

Well, this amendment would not . . . we still have the same provisions in terms of the protections that the agency has to undertake when it gets the money. If it gets the six hundred thousand dollars and it's sitting there with it for six months or a year, this doesn't affect the investment or idle cash flow or anything like that that we've done before?

MR. GRAHAM

No, it doesn't affect that at all. Now, one thing it does do that I think is tightening this provision up some, as it is at the present time, it's providing that any surplus that remains as a result of the project would go to the state treasury and would not remain with the agency. That is not provided for under our present law. So, in my opinion, this is tightening the existing law up some from that standpoint.

MR. BROWN

Do you realize that ninety percent of the delegates don't have the faintest idea what you're talking about right now?

MR. FLORY

Mr. Graham, the reason I rise is that last statement you made, and that's what bothers me, where you say, "other than any surplus as may be defined by law." Let me give you the prime example that I happen to know of. Let's take in an assistance budget for the state colleges and universities who use that to issue bonds and pay those bonds off for the dormitories. They're allowed to keep those surplus funds as reserved to pay off the bonds in case they have a bad year as far as receipts on the dormitories; plus the fact that if the civil service raises the pay plan in the state, then they have to make up the difference from that system's budget. But, here you come along and you want to turn back that surplus to the general fund. Is that what I understand you're doing?

MR. GRAHAM

Mr. Flory, at this particular point, without the amendment, they wouldn't keep the funds to begin with. It does say that; that they would refund the surplus, assuming, let's say, that they earn some interest or the project costs a little less than they had anticipated, and they have fifty thousand or a hundred thousand dollars left over. They would return that to the state in a manner provided and defined by law. But, under what we have right now, they would have to return it. In fact, they wouldn't have it to return. It would go directly to the state treasury.

MR. FLORY

In other words, what you're saying is the legislature could define that surplus to be whatever they, in their judgment, thought it ought to be to allow for certain reserves to be certain. . .

MR. GRAHAM

I would say, under the provisions of this, the legislature could provide that they could have some reserves.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Graham, now, let me see if I understand this situation right. This particular section of the constitution we have requires a deposit into the state treasury of all funds held by all state agencies, etc. Is that correct?

MR. GRAHAM

Except as excluded in Section 6 of Committee Proposal No. 15. There are presently five exclusions, and we're adding a sixth exclusion, Senator De Blieux.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Now, this particular provision, here, since we have added to the proposal revenue bonds, which was not in the original proposal, now it's necessary to add this in to take care of those agencies that might have money from revenue bonds that are issued so that we can get the benefit of the investment of those funds from those agencies. Is that right?

MR. GRAHAM

Yes, sir.

MR. ABRAHAM

Buzzy, both in answer to Mr. Brown and Mr. Flory, you made the statement that this surplus you were talking about was money that was received, say, from a bond issue, and it was being used to pay off for. . . pay the construction project off, and this would apply to any surplus. Well, I interpret this to mean this is the money that is received during the year that is used to pay off the bonds, and this is what this applies to is the recurring revenues that are received from year to year to year to pay off those bonds; isn't it?

MR. GRAHAM

No, sir. This applies to the money derived through the. . . in connection with the issuance of the bonds, not in connection with the receipts of fees or tolls or whatever it might be as a result of the project that was constructed. . .

MR. ABRAHAM

Well, if you read it correct, it says, "all money received by a state board, agency, or commission, but pledged by it in connection with the issuance of revenue bonds." Now, that, to me, means that it's the revenue that is received and is pledged to pay off the bond; isn't it?

MR. GRAHAM

No, sir. It's pledged for the project for which the bonds were issued.

PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

Delegate Proposal No. 43

Reading of the Proposal

MR. POYNTER

Delegate Proposal No. 43 was introduced by Delegate Johnny Jackson, Gauthier, and others.

A proposal providing for juvenile courts having exclusive original jurisdiction except in certain offenses.

Now, that proposal has been amended and includes, in fact, an amendment which deleted lines 5 through 23 thereof, as printed.

MR. HENRY

Mr. Derbes offers up amendments. The Clerk will read the amendment.

Proceed, Mr. Clerk.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The gentleman sends up amendments, read as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 5, add the following: "Providing for special juvenile procedures.

Be it adopted by the convention:

Article _____, Section _____, Special Juvenile Procedures.

Section _____. Except for a person fifteen years of age or older who is alleged to have committed a capital offense or attempted aggravated rape, the determination of guilt or innocence, the detention, and the custody of a person who is alleged to have committed a crime prior to his seventeenth birthday shall be exclusively pursuant to special juvenile procedures which shall be provided by law. However, by law enacted by a two-thirds vote of the elected members of each house, the legislature may (1) lower the maximum ages of persons to whom juvenile procedures would apply and (2) establish a procedure by which the court of original jurisdiction may waive such special juvenile procedures in order that adult procedures would apply in individual cases."

Explanation

MR. DERBES

Ladies and gentlemen, I respectfully request your attention for a brief explanation or for an explanation of this amendment. I would like to call further to your attention the fact that accompanying each copy of the amendment is a short explanation drafted by me which explains the scope of the amendment. This is the subject matter on which there has been considerable debate back and forth with respect to the effect that such an amendment would have on the jurisdiction of juvenile courts and on the ability of the legislature to merge and abolish juvenile courts. The amendment that is currently before you has nothing whatsoever to do with the jurisdiction of juvenile court as such. It does not bear upon or affect in any way the ability of the legislature under the Judiciary Article as we have adopted it to merge juvenile courts into other courts or to abolish juvenile courts. In other words, it represents no impediment to a unified court system. What it does do, it forces the legislature to consider separately, juvenile procedures from adult procedures, that is to say when the legislature decides by what procedures a child is to be tried, the legislature must designate those procedures as special juvenile procedures. It prevents a child from arbitrarily being tried under adult procedures, and preserves what has come to be an important part of our judicial history: namely, the concept of separate and specialized treatment for juveniles. Furthermore, this particular amendment permits the legislature by two-thirds vote to change the juvenile ages, and of course, it does not represent any hindrance or impediment to the legislature in making juvenile laws applicable to people of older ages. It does, however, require that the legislature have a two-thirds vote in order to make juvenile procedures applicable to anyone...in order to make adult procedures applicable to anyone under the current juvenile ages. The amendment has been drafted in the spirit of compromise, and we have worked long and hard over it. I would like to state for the record now, and I would request that the clerk add the following names as coauthors to the amendment. In addition to myself, to Judge Dennis, to Mr. Johnny Jackson, Mr. Pugh, Mr. Vesich, and Mr. Tobias who appear on the copy of the amendment before you, the following people have consented to have their names included as coauthors as well; they are: Alphonse Jackson, Mr. Henry, Mr. Gravel, Mr. Graham, Justice Tate, Mr. Kelly, Mrs. Warren, Sheriff Edwards, Mr. Gauthier, Mr. Casey, and Mr. Ginn. I would request that the Clerk insert their names as coauthors of the amendment in the record. This amendment creates an atmosphere of flexibility while requiring the legislature to deal especially with matters relating to juvenile procedures. It does not affect juvenile court jurisdiction. I urge its adoption, and I yield to any questions.

118th Days Proceedings—January 15, 1974

Questions

MR. ABRAHAM

Jim, why did you limit the legislature to being able only to lower the maximum age for persons whom general procedures would apply? If you wanted it to be flexible, why didn't you just say "revised"?

MR. DERBES

Because, this is a very, very specific point, Mack. The legislature may increase the juvenile age by majority vote. This would prohibit the legislature from lowering the juvenile age by anything but a two-thirds vote. This will allow the legislature to increase the juvenile age by a majority vote. That is already committed under the Judiciary Article as we have adopted it. The legislature may increase the juvenile age by a majority vote. In other words, it's not specifically prohibited in the Judiciary Article, and therefore, the legislature may do it. This will not prohibit the legislature from increasing the juvenile age by a majority vote. This will prohibit the legislature from making juvenile procedures...from making adult procedures applicable to persons who are now juveniles except by two-thirds vote. In other words, the legislature must have a two-thirds vote in order to make adult procedures applicable to persons who are now governed by juvenile procedures.

MR. JACK

Mr. Derbes, by the term "juvenile procedures" what are you talking about?

MR. DERBES

I'm talking about the juvenile procedures and the methods for treatment of juveniles which are currently spelled out in the revised statutes, Mr. Jack.

MR. JACK

All right. Now, that's what I'm getting at. We passed, already, jurisdiction of juvenile courts shall be set by the legislature.

MR. DERBES

May I interrupt you? What we've said is that the current...the existing jurisdiction of juvenile court is retained subject to change by a majority vote of the legislature.

MR. JACK

That's right. Now, on this, couldn't all this be done very simply by legislative acts instead of nailing this down in the constitution?

MR. DERBES

Many of us think, Mr. Jack, that it is necessary to preserve the distinction between adults and juveniles so that the legislature will be hopefully governed by that distinction by stating it in the constitution. This says that wherever a child is tried—he can be tried in a district court; he can be tried in an adult court; he can be tried in a civil court; you can call it whatever you want—you can try him in any manner that you want to, as provided by law, but he must be tried under special juvenile procedures.

MR. JACK

But, before you introduce this amendment, the legislature by majority vote could set whatever the juvenile age they want. Isn't that correct?

MR. DERBES

If you're talking about what this convention has done, that's correct.

MR. JACK

That is correct. Now, what you, in effect, are doing is changing that so that unless it's a capital offense, then all the juveniles are those under seventeen; isn't that correct?

MR. DERBES

Yes, let me try to explain because I think it's a very important distinction. As...what we have done so far, we have left juvenile court jurisdiction up to the legislature, and we've said nothing about procedures. What we are saying here is that we are not in any way disturbing the concept of a unified court system. In other words, we're permitting merger; we're permitting abolition under the rules as adopted by the convention. We are saying that wherever a person of this particular age is tried, he should be tried only pursuant to special juvenile laws.

MR. JACK

But, what I am getting at, isn't it a fact, Mr. Derbes—and if I'm correct, go on and admit it—this is a way of setting the juvenile age at a boy or girl that hasn't reached their seventeenth birthday, except if that boy or girl is charged with a capital offense, or attempted aggravated rape, then it applies to those fifteen and up to the seventeen? I mean...

MR. DERBES

Yes, Mr. Jack, it has the effect of setting a juvenile age, but it permits the legislature to lower the age by a two-thirds vote. It does not require a constitutional amendment, and it permits the legislature to increase the age by a majority vote, and furthermore, it permits the legislature to provide by law for the juvenile procedures. So, the legislature by implementing this provision, may make the juvenile procedures as juvenile or as adult as the legislature pleases. But, they are nevertheless required to consider a separate distinction between adults and juveniles, which I think is a distinction worthy of being in this constitution.

MR. BURNS

Mr. Derbes, just exactly what did you mean by when you said that this amendment was being offered in a spirit of compromise? Compromise what?

MR. DERBES

Well, Mr. Burns, when I said "spirit of compromise" I meant that I had worked for many hours literally with Judge Dennis, and Judge Tate, and Mr. Tobias, and Mr. Jackson over trying to resolve a problem where many of us felt that it was necessary to preserve some special distinction for juveniles. Now, on the one hand there are people who want to spell out all juvenile court jurisdiction in the constitution, and only change juvenile court jurisdiction by a constitutional amendment. On the other hand, there are those of us who felt that nothing should be said about juvenile court at all, but everything should be left up to the legislature, and in the midst of those two alternatives, I happen to feel that by saying that the legislature should consider separate juvenile procedures when they say how a person should be tried, I felt that that was an adequate middle ground to satisfy both people. It didn't prevent a unified court system. It didn't have anything to do with jurisdiction, and it permitted the legislature by various ratios of votes to make appropriate changes. This is no constitutional dedication of jurisdiction. It is a constitutional distinction of procedures, but changeable by a two-thirds vote. That to me is the definition of a compromise. I hope it fits your definition.

MR. BURNS

I thought you meant you were going to compromise as the other three or four times this same thing has been voted on. I mean, practically, it's the same subject matter, not the same...

MR. DERBES

Well, it is a completely different approach to the problem. It has only to do with procedure, and it has nothing to do with jurisdiction. It's, I think, a different approach, and one that is not nearly so obstructive to the same problem.

Further Discussion

MR. DENNIS

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise in support of Mr. Derbes' amendment, and if his amendment is adopted, then I urge the support of the delegate proposal. Now, ladies and gentlemen, as you will certainly recall, I have several times asked you to vote down Mr. Johnny Jackson's delegate proposal, and each time you have done so. The reason that I have opposed Mr. Jackson's proposal in the past is because it would have frozen into the constitution the structure of juvenile courts, and the age limits by which we determine who is a juvenile and who is not a juvenile. Mr. Derbes' amendment does not do either one of these things. All Mr. Derbes' amendment does is afford two juveniles a measure of protection by requiring that the legislature vote by a two-thirds vote before reducing the age limit at which a person becomes a juvenile, or becomes an adult, and that the legislature must likewise by two-thirds vote get such a super majority before it can transfer or provide how someone is transferred from the juvenile court to the adult court. Now, personally, I would be in favor of taking out of this constitution all super majority votes of the legislature because I think the legislature is responsible enough, and would be even more responsible if everything that it determined would be determined by a majority of those voting. However, as you know, this convention has not followed that approach. We have in many instances put into this constitution a requirement that the legislature reach its conclusions by a super majority vote. For example, in this Judiciary Article we have said that before the legislature may change Supreme Court or court of appeal districts, it must do so by a two-thirds vote of the legislature. We have said that before a district court district may be changed that the legislature must act, and then there must be a referendum of the people in all of the parishes affected. For this reason, I think, there is ample precedence for giving some issues which have a great deal of sensitivity, some cloak of protection so that the legislature will not act overly hastily. I think the juvenile...the definition of who is a juvenile, the definition of who will be transferred from a juvenile court to an adult court is worthy of this same type of protection. So, I am asking you to approve Mr. Derbes' amendment because if it is approved, it will simply set up a special procedure for juveniles. It will simply require that the legislature must get a two-thirds vote before it changes the age limit of juveniles; likewise, the same vote before transferring a juvenile to an adult court. I think that this protection is justified, and I ask you to adopt his amendment, and if his amendment is adopted, I will support the delegate proposal as amended.

Further Discussion

MR. JACK

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this is a slick way of undoing what we've done. Now, we have set up about the jurisdiction of the juvenile court in the constitution shall be set by the legislature. The present law by statute--and this should be by statute--we've got a fluctuating thing. People get grown quicker. We've seen fit all over the country to say you're grown when you're eighteen. You're grown, just same as your father. Now, I want you to listen to this: there is today... you're a juvenile until you reach your seventeenth birthday. It used to be you wasn't grown till you're twenty-one. So, you were juvenile then till you were seventeen. Then there was three, four years before you were twenty-one. People are more knowledgeable, more educated; they move faster; they get in trouble, too. That's why I'm standing here defending what I'm saying. Therefore, today you may find the legislature want to change this age to sixteen because the way it is now, a person jumps in one second from a juvenile to a grown person--one second. One second before a boy, or girl, is seventeen, he is a little juvenile, as so many people say. As soon as that second is up, he's eighteen instead...I mean, he's gone on to the seventeenth birthday, and he gets tried in district court. Now, I say, you are setting a dangerous thing. Now, where this is slick, they are calling this "juvenile procedures." Procedures are not substantive. This is substantive. This applies to setting the age limit for what's a juvenile. Number one, "juvenile procedures shall apply to all children under fifteen and, except those charged with capital offense or attempted aggravated rape, to all children under seventeen." They might as well instead of saying "procedures" should have said "a juvenile is a child under fifteen, and except those charged with capital offenses, attempted aggravated rape, a juvenile is one under seventeen." Procedure is like a matter of what's legal evidence, or how you start, like by an information, indictments, and criminal matters, or a petition and exceptions. Those are procedural. This is not.

This is doing just exactly what we defeated several times. Now, you go on. I know Judge Dennis says he voted against the others, and he did, and I can't see how he can turn right around and vote for this. This is no more procedural than anything. I'm against it.

Further Discussion

MR. PUGH

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise in favor of this proposed amendment for your consideration. I shall not speak at length to you of my warm personal feelings relative to juveniles of this state and the procedures by which they have been considered in the past in relation to the juvenile court. I regret sincerely that we did not see fit to provide for the jurisdiction in these courts. I bow, however, to your overwhelming defeat of that proposal. I ask that you give consideration to this amendment. It serves a very good purpose. Perhaps, it's not so important where the issues related to these children are heard. Perhaps I'm in error and perhaps you're right. It's not the form so much, as the manner in which the matters are to be considered. This relates solely to one of procedures. It provides a method by which we may continue the philosophy of the past as it relates to the treatment of the youth of this, our noble state. I ask that you give serious consideration to this amendment, that you study it carefully, and that upon its presentation for your vote, that you cast your favorable vote therefor. Thank you.

Questions

MR. ROEMER

Mr. Pugh, we can sum up your feelings by saying that in your opinion, this provision would be a protection for the juveniles of our state; isn't that true?

MR. PUGH

Yes.

MR. ROEMER

Well, don't you think that that's really the basic point that we're trying to make here; it would be a protection to the juveniles of Louisiana?

MR. PUGH

Well, yes, that goes without saying. If I support a provision because I think it relates to the best interest of the juveniles, then in turn it refers to the protective measures that should be made for those children.

MR. KEAN

Mr. Pugh, if I understand this proposal correctly, it would be necessary for some type of special juvenile procedures to be adopted by the legislature; would it not?

MR. PUGH

In my opinion, they may take the very same procedures that have been available for years and also provide for their use. I think that the transitional provisions can take the ones that we presently have relating to juveniles, and as they will have to do in so many other matters, provide for their transition to the legislature.

MR. KEAN

In other words, you would assume that we would also have to have some transitional provisions with respect to present juvenile statutes in order to make this workable?

MR. PUGH

Not juvenile statutes, but juvenile jurisdictional provisions as they are now in the constitution.

Further Discussion

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, it's unfortunate that we have to deal with this issue again because we've disposed of it before on many occasions. If I may, I'd like to review why this issue is so important to the people of this state. We face a most serious juvenile crime problem, particularly in the urban areas. Many of our rural delegates are not as aware of it. But, in East Baton Rouge Parish, for example, a majority of all the serious crimes committed here are committed by juveniles, and it's quite obvious that the time has long passed when it's safe to walk the streets of our major urban areas. One of the main reasons has been that our juvenile justice system has not permitted anything to be done with the juveniles who commit offenses, primarily because of the provisions of the 1921 Constitution. This is an attempt to continue to some degree, and in some form, the restrictions in that 1921 Constitution on what can be done to juveniles. You may remember that in 1973, May session, the legislature passed legislation to try to deal with the juvenile crime problem. The governor vetoed that bill even though it was passed with more than eighty-five votes because he felt that it was unconstitutional because of the restricted nature of the language in the 1921 Constitution. Let me give you some examples of what the problems are: suppose a child, we'll say, sixteen years old, shoots an elderly man, eighty years old; he falls; the child, sixteen years old, goes again and points the weapon right at his head, and shoots him again and leaves him for dead. But, the man lives. The authorities find out who that child is, and so they bring him to juvenile court. He has to be tried in juvenile court under the present law, and under this he would be subject to so-called juvenile procedures. Now, suppose this happened last year, and he were brought to trial in September. Do you know, chances are he would be released from L.T.I. in three months, even though he committed eight or nine or ten or more serious offenses before. I can tell you that not only will happen; it has happened. The case I tell you is just one of hundreds of examples. Standard procedure when a juvenile is found delinquent on the basis of committing aggravated assault, aggravated battery, aggravated arson, attempted murder, armed robbery; no matter how many offenses he had before, he is tried by the juvenile court, and if found delinquent, he is sent to L.T.I. Procedure there is that as soon as he gets thirty merits, regardless of what he committed, offense he committed, he is released, which he can do in three or four months. We have these people on the streets. They're not juvenile delinquents. They are criminals, and there's no reason they should be treated with kid gloves. Now, that's why this provision was deleted originally. It needs to be deleted so that the legislature can deal with this problem.

Now, we're not talking here about kids who are throwing rocks at somebody's house, or commits some minor act of vandalism. The problem has come with these extremely serious offenses, which endanger other people, like armed robbery in particular. Now, notice that this language says that except for persons fifteen years of age or older who are alleged to have committed a capital offense, or attempted aggravated rape, then he has to be tried under juvenile procedures. What are capital crimes in Louisiana? There's only one right now--first degree murder. So, only in the case of first degree murder and attempted aggravated rape can a child under this--so-called child--be treated by anything other than juvenile procedures. Now, it says in the exception number one that the age can be lowered for dealing with people by juvenile procedures. But if the age is lowered under that number one, it has to be lowered for all offenses. There's no need to lower it for all offenses. We don't want to lower the juvenile age from seventeen to sixteen or fifteen. What we want to do is provide that in certain crimes like armed robbery and attempted murder, and things like that, that you can deal with people according to standard criminal justice procedures, not juvenile procedures. This provision does not allow that. Only if you lower it in all instances, can you lower it at all. That second exception deals with waiver of jurisdiction by a juvenile court. We don't want the juvenile court to waive jurisdiction in those cases. We want the district attorney to be able to demand that it be tried in a district court or according to criminal justice procedures. We want to be able to write down in the law that in case of multiple offenses like armed robbery or other things that it will be an automatic thing that it's tried in the district court, not that some juvenile judge will have the discretion to waive jurisdiction if he so chooses. That's the only way that in the legislature we can deal with this problem. So, I urge you to reject this amendment.

MR. DERBES

The legislative act to which Mr. Jenkins refers would not be unconstitutional under this provision. It's purely and simply a matter of truth, and to say anything other than that, is to obfuscate and obstruct this particular issue. If eighty-five votes of the House of Representatives were cast in order to lower the juvenile ages, that would clearly constitute sufficient votes under this particular provision to permit the changes in the law that were contemplated by that particular act.

The flexibility with which--or the flexibility that this particular act provides is quite clear. The legislature may establish a procedure by which the juvenile court would decide on a case by case basis, whether a person should be tried under adult procedures or under juvenile procedures. If the person is a recidivist, if the person has committed a particularly heinous crime, or even for particular categories of crimes, the legislature may authorize waiver, but the waiver must be by the juvenile court, based on the totality of the circumstances. Furthermore, the legislature may lower the juvenile age with respect to certain crimes, as well as with respect to all crimes, by a two-thirds vote. So, if the legislature were to decide, for example, that armed robbery should have a maximum age of fifteen for juvenile court, and the legislature did so by a two-thirds vote, then that would be the law. If the legislature were not able to muster a two-thirds vote, it would not be the law. There is ample flexibility for people who are concerned with the rising crime problem, and I am one of those people. I did not support amendments for juvenile court jurisdiction until those amendments included waiver provisions. This amendment does include a waiver provision that permits me to support it. I suggest to you that there is nothing in this amendment which will prohibit the legislature from adequately dealing with this problem of juvenile crime. But, it will force and require the legislature to consider separately the issue of juvenile crime versus adult crime because as a person who has had more than four years of very specialized experience in this area I can tell you that it is a matter where arbitrary and clear decisions are not very convenient and very possible. The court should be granted, in my opinion, the right to decide on a case by case basis whether a juvenile is to be tried under adult procedures or under juvenile procedures. There should continue to be that distinction between adult and juvenile procedures to protect youthful offenders.

Thank you.

Questions

MR. WILLIS

Mr. Derbes, you are familiar with Charles Dickens', Oliver Twist?

MR. DERBES

Yes.

MR. WILLIS

You know that as soon as young Oliver, who was below seventeen, reached London, he was recruited to thievery by Fagin who was over eighteen years of age...much more...through the artful dodger?

MR. DERBES

I'm not sure where you're leading, Mr. Willis, but....

MR. WILLIS

Well, I'm asking you this final question. Isn't this a vehicle to reward crime or improperly deter it by inappropriate punishment under the guise of procedure, thereby destroying the law and order we need in this state?

MR. DERBES

Absolutely and emphatically not, Mr. Willis.

There is ample flexibility in here for everybody who is concerned with law and order. I say that to you very seriously.

MR. WILLIS

Isn't it a fact that before a juvenile is tried he has to pass through the discretion first of the district attorney and that of the honorable district judges and juvenile judges of this state? Don't you think he receives fair justice?

MR. DERBES

Mr. Willis, as you may be aware, the proceedings brought in the interest of juveniles may be initiated by the judges. If the legislature changes the law they will eventually be initiated by the district attorney or by the judges. This would give the juvenile court--the court, namely, the judge--the right, subject to certain procedures, to say that a child should be tried under adult procedures. Yes.

MR. WILLIS

What is wrong with the legislature providing the procedure to protect our law and order when you consider that all crimes, or most of them, are committed by juveniles between fifteen and sixteen-and-a-half years of age?

MR. DERBES

For this very simple reason, Mr. Willis. Because when one--when a person tries to define on a crime by crime basis who is to go to what court and under what procedures he is to be tried, one eventually does a certain amount of injustice.... because certain particular types of crimes, although they may qualify as such, are relatively minor.

[Record vote ordered. Record Quorum Call: 109 delegates present and a quorum. Amendment adopted: 78-35. Motion to reconsider tabled. Motion to limit debate on the Section to five minutes adopted without objection.]

Further Discussion

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, think back, if you will, to the Bill of Rights... think back if you will, to the Bill of Rights...think about the protections we gave to people accused of crimes. You know, I've voted in favor of every single protection for people accused of crimes included in that Bill of Rights. You know what we are talking about here, though? We're talking about people who we know to be guilty, and what's going to be done with them; whether or not there is going to be adequate safeguards and protections for the public. I don't think that this procedure here grants to the legislature the authority to deal with different crimes differently, or different people differently. For example, look at Exception Number 2. How can that square with the equal protection clause? How could you give one juvenile accused of armed robbery the protection of juvenile procedures, and not give it to another juvenile also charged with armed robbery? You could not. Think about Number 1--Exception Number 1. It does not say exceptions can be made for people accused of specific crimes. It only says you can lower the age for juveniles as to whether or not they are going to be tried under juvenile procedures.

Mr. Derbes said that he did not--I believe it was Mr. Derbes--no, or Mr. Pugh said, that he did not feel the acts passed by the legislature would be unconstitutional under this provision. Was that you, Mr. Derbes? Judge Dennis told me, not fifteen minutes ago, and he is the coauthor of this, that he thought it would be unconstitutional--

This section needs sixty-seven votes to pass. A similar provision in the 1921 Constitution has hampered seriously the prosecution of people who have committed serious offenses against the people of this state. I certainly urge you not to lock into this constitution a similar provision which can do nothing more than hamper the prosecution of such individuals. You can be sure the legislature will provide protection for juvenile delinquents. But we need procedures to deal with people who have engaged in serious offenses. I certainly urge the rejection of this section.

Delegate De Blieux in the Chair

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. DENNIS

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I'll be very brief. The reason I am supporting this, the reason that I think this is different from what I have opposed in the past, is that this does not constitutionalize the age limits. It allows the legislature flexibility. The only thing it does, it requires the legislature to get a two-thirds vote before bringing into adult court, people who are now being treated as juveniles. I think that we are entitled to that. Or the juveniles are entitled to that much pause and reflection before the legislature takes an act in this area. So, I ask you to support this delegate proposal as it has been amended.

Questions

MR. BURSON

Judge Dennis, is it clear to you that under the language of this proposal, in this amendment, that the legislature could classify, let us say, in the example of a multiple juvenile offender, just as they classify in criminal law for a third offender who will get a greater sentence than a first offender for a particular crime?

MR. DENNIS

It's clear to me that under the last part of this amendment, in establishing a procedure by which the court of original jurisdiction could waive juvenile procedures and have adult procedures apply, that the legislature could use that as one of the criteria. The legislature could say when a juvenile has committed X number of offenses of a certain nature, then the juvenile court may use this as one of the criteria by which it can determine that it shall waive its juvenile jurisdiction, and let that person be tried as an adult.

MR. BURSON

So that they could classify both by the gravity and frequency of the offenses then?

MR. DENNIS

I think they could use any reasonable criteria. I think that would be a reasonable criteria.

MR. HENRY

Mr. Burson now would move to reconsider the vote by which Committee Proposal No. 4 on the Executive Article was adopted, to reconsider the vote by which it was adopted.

Is there objection?

For the purpose of...he's going to then move to suspend the rules for the limited purpose of offering an amendment on Section 1 relative to the powers of the attorney general, as I appreciate it.

PROPOSALS ON THE CALENDAR FOR APPROVAL OF FINAL STYLING

Committee Proposal No. 4

Reconsideration

Point of Information

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Chairman, I would like for Mr. Burson to explain to us the change that he purposes to make before we vote on the reconsideration.

MR. HENRY

Well, now, we've already voted on reconsideration. This is a....

MR. RAYBURN

I mean suspension of the rules.

MR. HENRY

All right. Mr. Burson, if you will..this is not debatable... but if you will, you might better hit your reasons for your motion a lick or two there. I mean, explain it.

Explanation

MR. BURSON

Thank you.

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I think Senator Rayburn's request is entirely appropriate. I would ask you to pull from the many papers you have the following material so that you might better understand the explanation I will try to make:

First of all, Section 26 of Committee Proposal No. 21, the Judiciary Article, which deals with the powers of the attorney general; secondly, it would also be helpful if you would have available Article 7, Section 56 of the old constitution, the '21 Constitution in your book; then, of course, the packet of four amendments that have been passed out. The objective here is purely and simply this...to remove from the Judiciary Article and put in the Executive Article the office and powers of the attorney general. This has been a bone of contention throughout this convention. Quite frankly, I was on the team of the people that wanted to keep him in the Judiciary Article when this contention began. One of the reasons I was is because I didn't know what the effect of the reallocation and allocation of powers in the reorganization section of the executive article would be on the attorney general. If you will look at the first amendment, I think that problem is taken care of. The amendment on the first page says that "the powers, functions, and duties allocated by this constitution to any executive office, or commission (which takes care of the Public Service Commission problem raised by some people yesterday) shall not be effected or diminished by the allocation provided herein except as authorized by Section 22 of this article." Section 22 of the Executive Article, of course, is the article which permits the legislature to decide that three of the offices may become appointed rather than elected.

But, other than Section 22, this makes it clear that all of the executive offices that we provide for, all of those that you are interested in, or commissions that you are interested in, that we have provided for in this constitution, cannot be diminished or deleteriously affected by the original allocation provided for into twenty executive departments.

In the second place, if you will look at the Executive Article, and look at Section 1 (C) of the Style and Drafting, you will see that any reorganization or reallocation of powers, excepts all functions, powers, and duties allocated by this constitution. So, I think with the addition of the sentence that we are suggesting here, you can be assured that it will not be possible under the guise of either the original allocation into twenty departments, or, in a subsequent reorganization, to gut one of the constitutional offices that you have created during the course of this constitutional convention. I think for that reason that this amendment may be the most important amendment that is offered here.

[Motion to suspend the rules to reconsider Committee Proposal No. 4, Section 1 for the limited purpose of considering the Burson amendment adopted without objection.]

Reconsideration

Amendment

MR. HARDIN

Amendment No. 1, On page 1, at the end of line 23, after the word and punctuation, "departments", add the following sentence:

"The powers, functions, and duties allocated by this constitution to any executive office or commission shall not be affected or diminished by the allocation provided herein except as authorized by Section 22 of this article."

Explanation

MR. BURSON

I think I have explained this thing as well as I know how to explain it. I will be happy to try and answer any questions that anyone has on the point. I made the point earlier that this affects more than just the attorney general. I think it's a guarantee which extends to all of the executive offices or commissions that we have herein created. We've had some arguments here even today about the allocation, or reallocation of powers that might apply to particular commissions.

Questions

MR. BURNS

Mr. Burson, just for the record, in discussing this matter with you some time today, am I right that you told me that the board of the committee of the District Attorneys' Association had approved or consented to this amendment that you're now getting ready to explain?

MR. BURSON

I think it would be correct to say that even though they have previously and we have, I have previously, argued against giving the attorney general any original criminal jurisdiction that we are satisfied with the compromise which the amendment that's being offered here next would involve. But, that we were concerned that if you put the attorney general in the Executive Article, that you better be sure you were guaranteed that his powers could not be affected by any reorganization which is the purpose of this first amendment.

MR. BURNS

No, but didn't I understand you or one of the other gentlemen to say that the District Attorney Committee, or whatever they have, met on Saturday and agreed this wording was acceptable to them?

MR. BURSON

Yes, sir.

[Amendment adopted without objection. Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 106-0. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Personal Privilege

MR. THOMPSON

Mr. Chairman, I've got a half of a letter addressed to Governor Edwards with no signature on it or none of the rest of it, what is this?

MR. HENRY

If it's addressed to Governor Edwards, I wouldn't know Mr. Thompson, I haven't seen it.

MR. THOMPSON

Well, it's being passed out here in the convention.

MR. HENRY

I haven't seen it unless it's what Senator Rayburn showed me, and I understood it was not being passed out. I have not authorized anything to be passed out. If you will find out who gave it to you, we will chastise him, or her, or them.

MR. THOMPSON

I don't believe you want to jump on the little lady that's passing them out; do you?

MR. HENRY

Well some people like to jump on little ladies and some don't. Mr. Willis.

MR. WILLIS

Mr. Chairman, I have the same grievance as Representative Thompson. It may be unbecoming of me to say so, but I reject, repudiate, refuse, and resent the passage and putting on my desk of a letter signed with two crosses, which most certainly must attest to its authors double illiteracy.

MR. HENRY

I don't know what you meant, Mr. Willis, but I think I agree with you, sir.

Personal Privilege

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I do not know who passed this letter out because I received a copy. If you will look in the first paragraph, this letter is addressed to the governor of this state and it says "Dear Governor Edwards". It goes on to say that "I don't believe the governor understands"--do you believe that?--"The basic concerns about the property tax provision which the constitutional convention seems tentatively to have agreed upon." It further states that "so many motives have been attributed to us by such careless speakers as Mr. Chehardy, Mr. Bussie, and myself. The only way I know how one would define a careless speaker is to have a careless mind; I guess Mr. Steimel has that. I don't know much about that gentleman, but since he seems fit or saw fit to write the governor of this state and tell him that I was a careless speaker, which I know the governor don't believe, because I read in the paper the other day... I went home, when so many of you fell off the log--Mr. Roy, Mr. Gravel, and all of you people that passed all them bad things--and now you are trying to get back on the log; when all of you fell off I left. The next morning I was drinking coffee with my wife--she hadn't seen me in quite a while, and my dogs... I went to feed them and they barked at me and tried to bite me, but I finally made peace with them--and I was reading the Times-Picayune and it outlined, I believe, nine things the governor was against. You know I had been to this mike and opposed every one of them but one? The only reason I didn't oppose that, he had agreed to it earlier--that was the ten and fifteen percent that the tax assessors proposed and passed through this body. I say, "Well, I'm not doing too bad and me and old Edwards are getting along pretty good." I was laughing and she wanted to know what I was laughing about. Well, I told her. I said "I tried to stop all these things before they happened, but I was in the minority." But, low and behold I come back and I get a copy of where Mr. Steimel wrote to the governor and he said people like myself was using careless words--Mr. Bussie,-- putting me in the category with Vick and Lawrence. Well, for a little top-water I'm doing pretty good, ain't I? Well, let me tell you, I just tried to find out a little about Mr. Steimel. I found out he was born in 1922 in a place called Running Lakes in Arkansas. Well, I called a few people up there and they said he had been running ever since. The little town he was born in was called Pocahontas, and he has been hunting ever since. Well, he couldn't find nothing in Arkansas and he came to Louisiana; so, we got him. I don't know what we are going to do with him, but he's here. He was an elementary school teacher. He is a Public Information director. He was at the Arkansas State College and I don't know why they discharged him, but evidently they let him go. Then, he came to Baton Rouge in '49 and he has been here ever since. But, I just want to say this about this letter. I had nothing to do with the passing out of this. I don't know who passed it out. But, I would like to say that I'm glad to be in the midst of some other careless speakers. But, I speak for the people of this state; I always have and if I live out this term, will be thirty-two years I've spoke for them. Maybe I've spoke wrong, but they've sent me back. Maybe they don't know me. But, I didn't hail from Arkansas. I didn't come from the city named Running Lakes. I didn't come from a village called Pocahontas. I haven't been hunting. I've been down here trying to do a job. I don't necessarily agree with Mr. Steimel. I think he's got a right to his views, but for him to write a letter to the chief executive of this state and to say that you people, and you know how many times I've been to this mke--well, McDaniel back there you know that and a lot of other delegates know it--and that I have been doing a little careless talking. Well, maybe I have. But, the only talking I've done before this mke is talking for the people of our great state and I have no apologies. I didn't get a copy of this letter. I don't know whether Mr. Bussie got one, he operates in a lot of circles that I don't. Mr. Chehardy can be everybody's sweetheart and nobody's gal, but he is still my friend and I get along with him. But, I don't know, Mr. Chairman, who passed this out. If they did it in violation of our rules, I'm sorry and I apologize. But, I have no apology to make to this convention or to the people of this state for the careless talking that I have done to this convention. I am among a lot of our delegates who has done some careless talking, in my opinion, and are now trying to correct it. Thank you very much.

MR. HENRY
Gentlemen, we usually don't go along with this question business on personal privilege. I don't know who....I don't think anyone authorized the sending out of that letter because it doesn't have the O.K. with the initials on it. But, if the pages or page who first got it and started passing it out will let me know where you got it, I would appreciate it. I might say that, Senator Rayburn, I heard you accused of having careless hands but never a careless speaker.

Personal Privilege

MR. CHATELAIN
Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask that the Chair direct its staff or someone to try to determine whether or not, in fact, this letter was sent out-- originally in October 31, 1973--was sent out from the offices of PAR.

MR. HENRY
I assure you, we will try to get to the bottom of it.

MR. CHATELAIN
I think that someone is trying to play a joke, and someone is trying to take it seriously here.

Personal Privilege

MR. RAYBURN
There is no doubt in my mind, Mr. Chairman, PAR sent this letter out. Mr. Chatelain, I don't know if Mr. Steimel is here or not, but if he is, let him come down. This is a letter bound by his signature and it is a letter sent out by his office; it is signed, and I have the original....a copy of it, it is a letter signed by him. He's got a right to call me a careless speaker. I can't really call him what I think he is because I don't want to get engaged in that, but he called me that to the governor-- and that's all right with me--but it is a letter that came directly from PAR's office sent to the governor of this state; I can assure you that.

Point of Information

MR. PUGH
Well, Mr. Chairman, we got four days and eight hours to get through here; can we get on with the regular course of some business?

[Motion to suspend the rules to reconsider Committee Proposal No. 4, Section 8.]

Point of Information

MR. AVANT
Is that a debatable motion?

MR. HENRY
No, sir, it's not a debatable motion. We are going to read the amendment here and let Mr. Burson sort of make his quick explanation of it.

Amendment

MR. HARDIN
This amendment is sent up by Delegates Henry, Gravel, Pugh, Graham, and Alphonse Jackson.
Amendment No. 1. On page 5--this is in your first enrollment, Mr. Abraham--delete lines 22, 23, and 24 in their entirety and all amendments thereto and insert in lieu thereof the following:
"Section 8. Department of Justice
Section 8. (A) There shall be a Department of Justice, headed by the attorney general, who shall be the state's chief legal officer. The attorney general shall be elected for a term of four years at the state general election. The assistant attorneys general shall be appointed by the attorney general to serve at his pleasure.
(B) As may be necessary for the assertion or protection of any right or interest of the state, the attorney general shall have the authority to
(1) to institute, prosecute, or intervene in any civil action or proceedings;
(2) upon the written request of a district attorney, to advise and assist in the prosecution of any criminal case;
(3) for cause, when authorized by the court which would have original jurisdiction and subject to judicial review,
(a) to institute, prosecute, or intervene in any criminal action or proceeding, or
(b) to supersede any attorney representing the state in any civil or criminal action.
(C) The attorney general shall exercise such other powers and perform such other duties as may be authorized by this constitution or by law."

Explanation

MR. BURSON
Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I again direct your attention to Article VII, Section 56 of the old constitution and Section 26 of Committee Proposal No. 21, the Judiciary Article. If you will look at these, and first of all looking at Section 26 in this amendment, you will find that the relevant change in this amendment is not in... (B) (1) remains the same, that is, the power to institute, prosecute, or intervene in any civil action or proceeding. (B) (2) remains the same, that is, upon the written request it says "written request", the other one simply said "request of a district attorney to advise and assist in the prosecution of any criminal case." The change comes in Section 3. Now, you will recall that I was very vociferous among other people in opposing any original criminal jurisdiction for the attorney general on the thesis that this was the responsibility of the locally elected district attorney. However, on examination of this issue in the spirit of trying to compromise here and reach a solution--which I frankly confess to you like most compromises will not totally satisfy either the district attorneys or the attorney general because the attorney general would like the discretion to bring a criminal prosecution whenever it's necessary in his judgment, whereas the D.A.'s would probably be just as happy for him not to have any such jurisdiction. The D.A.'s, at least, have agreed that in the spirit of compromise it would be proper "for cause, when authorized by the court which would have original jurisdiction subject to judicial review" as was suggested in the original Judiciary Committee Proposal for the attorney general (a)--and here if you refer to Section 56 of Article VII of the old constitution you will find that (3) (a) of this amendment is...the language is taken from that language "to institute, prosecute, or intervene in any criminal action or proceeding"--that it is clear by this amendment that the attorney general would have, if he went to court and showed cause for doing so, the power to institute a proceeding. But, it is subject to the same necessity of showing for cause as was in the original Judiciary Committee Proposal which was somewhat ambiguous when it talked about a proceeding or affidavit because an affidavit, of course, is how you normally institute a criminal proceeding anyway. But, this language clarifies and makes it clear that under the terms and conditions set out in this amendment the attorney general would, in that instance, be able to exercise original criminal jurisdiction and that is the change.

[Motion to suspend the rules to reconsider Committee Proposal No. 4, Section 8 for the limited purpose of offering an amendment adopted without objection.]

Committee Proposal No. 4

Reconsideration

Explanation

MR. BURSON

Only this: It seems to me at this stage of the convention when we've been through so many battles that it's incumbent on us to try to be reasonable and to compromise our more extreme positions. I took the extreme position that he ought not to have any original criminal jurisdiction. This would permit him if the attorney general can go into court and show cause because the district attorney, for whatever reason, has not done his duty in a particular case and can convince the courts of this; then, in that limited instance, he could come in and exercise original criminal jurisdiction. Otherwise, of course, he cannot and I know this won't satisfy him; that's why it's a compromise. I'll answer any questions.

Point of Information

MR. DENNIS

I would like to ask the Chair or Mr. Burson the specific purpose for which this thing....

MR. HENRY

It's to go ahead and clean up this attorney general's business, just to delete what's already in there and make it conform with the executive.

MR. DENNIS

Limited to that purpose?

MR. HENRY

That's what the final motion is going to be, Judge.

[Motion adopted without objection. Motion to reconsider Committee Proposal No. 21.]

Point of Information

MR. DENNIS

Mr. Chairman, is this the point at which we're going to say exactly why the vote is going to be reconsidered?

MR. HENRY

Well, you know, I've already said why, but it's not the point that the motion is made for the specific purpose and all that business. But, that motion is going to be made. I'm not going to recognize anyone in order to do otherwise, Judge.

MR. DENNIS

All right, sir.

[Motion to reconsider Committee Proposal No. 21 adopted without objection. Motion to suspend the rules to reconsider Section 25 for the limited purpose of offering an amendment.]

Amendment

MR. HARDIN

The amendment to Section 25, Amendment No. 1. On page 8, delete lines 24 through 30, both inclusive in their entirety, which constitutes the entire section, and renumber the succeeding sections in conformity therewith.

Questions

MR. AVANT

The overall effect of what you would have accomplished if you go to this third step, as I understand it, would delete any reference to the attorney general in the Judiciary Article, to put him in the Executive Article and make him subject. . . make that office subject to the reorganization provisions as they have been amended here this afternoon, which in effect says he can be reorganized, but his constitutional powers would not be disturbed. Is that the net result of all of this?

MR. BURSON

Yes, sir. The powers, functions, duties of his office, as allocated by this constitution, cannot be diminished or affected in any way.

MR. AVANT

But, is it not true that if the office of attorney general is subject to reorganization at all, that it would be then subject to pressures, or possible pressures, because of proposed legislation which would affect other aspects of his operation other than simply in the area of his constitutional duties which may in turn have an effect on the performance of his duties and his independent status?

MR. BURSON

Mr. Avant, if I thought that he would be susceptible to any more pressure than he would be now, let's say by cutting his budget, which certainly would be the greatest pressure of all, which could be done under either scheme by the legislature, then I would not have proposed this. That was the reason why that first sentence was put in there. I think we've been specific enough in the grant of power to him, saying that he's the state's chief legal officer, that he has the power to hire his assistants, that as required to assert . . . to protect the right or interest of the state that he can do all these various and sundry things plus whatever else is prescribed by law, and that he's the head of the Department of Justice which we've also said, that we've made it very plain with that first sentence and with the reservation and the reorganization section that he couldn't be gutted or gerrymandered out of power. In fact, I think it would be a lot more difficult to do it since we added this section than it might have been if we hadn't.

MR. SINGLETARY

Mr. Burson, I don't have a copy. I believe your amendment goes to the first enrollment, right?

MR. BURSON

That's correct. Yes, sir.

MR. SINGLETARY

I'm trying to get a copy of the first enrollment, but what you're doing, I believe, is deleting not only Section 25 but also Section 26, is that right?

MR. BURSON

That's correct. In other words, the amendment that we just adopted sets out in much greater detail, I think, the powers of the attorney general than the original proposal did.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Burson, the amendment that we just previously adopted, didn't we put the attorney general in the Executive Department by adopting that amendment?

MR. BURSON

That's correct, sir.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Now, if we don't adopt this amendment won't we have the attorney general in both the Executive and the Department of Justice. . . the Branch of Justice?

Amendment

MR. BURSON
Yes, sir, Senator.

MR. DE BLEIUX
So, then it's necessary that we eliminate one of these, isn't that correct?

MR. BURSON
Yes, sir, that's correct.

MRS. WARREN
Mr. Burson, could you tell me why it's so important to have him in the Executive instead of the Judiciary Branch?

MR. BURSON
Mrs. Warren, I'll be frank to say it wasn't that important to me at all. I'm simply trying at this late stage of the convention to participate in resolving some conflicts that we've had since the beginning. I guess, since I was responsible for creating part of the conflicts maybe that's why I was asked to present this particular measure. I don't mind because I feel that with the safeguard that we've put in here in the first part of the amendment, that the major objection that I personally had to moving the attorney general from the Judiciary Article has been fully taken care of. . . been taken care of as far as I'm concerned and the other people who got up to the mike here and expressed the concern in the original debate that we had on this question.

MRS. WARREN
Mr. Stagg is interrupting me . . . but I would still like to know from whoever that is wanting. . . you know wanted him in one branch or the other so bad, I'd like to know the difference; I really would.

MR. BURSON
Well, Mrs. Warren, this has been going on since the convention began. The Executive Committee said he ought to be part of the Executive Branch because he is part of the Executive Branch in the national government and in all other state governments we know about, and the Judiciary Committee said, "Well, that may be true, but he's always been in the Judiciary Branch in our constitution and we think he ought to stay there because he might be subject to executive influence otherwise." I feel that we have . . . by the caveat that we've put in here, by the specific reservation against affecting or diminishing any of his constitutional powers, we've taken care of that because under the old constitution, if you'll look at Article VII, Section 56, there's very, very little set out in the old constitution about the attorney general's power; the rest is all by statute anyway. So, actually we have set out much more specifically in this constitutional provision the attorney general's power than is done under the old Section 56. I don't think there's any question about that.

[Motion to suspend the rules adopted without objection. Motion to reconsider Committee Proposal No. 21, Section 25 adopted without objection.]

Reconsideration

Explanation

MR. BURSON
I think I've already explained it. Section 25 of the Judiciary Proposal simply said that "there shall be a Department of Justice consisting of an attorney general and his assistants." The amendment we've just adopted says that, also. Section 25 said that "the attorney general shall be elected for a term of four years at the state general election, that he shall appoint assistants to serve at his pleasure," and the amendment we just adopted says all of that. So, the sum and substance of what Section 25 says is in the new Section 8 of the Executive Department Proposal that we have adopted. I, therefore, urge your adoption of this amendment to delete it from the Judiciary Proposal.

[Amendment adopted without objection. Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section deleted: 102-2. Motion to suspend the rules to reconsider Committee Proposal No. 21, Section 26.]

MR. HARDIN
Amendment No. 1. On page 8, delete lines 31 through 34, both inclusive, in their entirety, and on page 9, delete lines 1 through 10 both inclusive, in their entirety, and renumber the succeeding sections in conformity therewith.

[Motion to suspend the rules adopted without objection. Motion to reconsider Section 26 adopted without objection.]

Reconsideration

Explanation

MR. BURSON
I would point out to you again that we are here removing from the Judiciary Article the powers and duties which we have already inserted in the Executive Article. The reason we did it that way is because those of us who felt strongly about it wanted to be sure that before we took him out of Judiciary that the duties, powers, and functions of the attorney general as elaborated herein were fully protected from any allocation or reallocation by the first sentence of the amendment that we adopted. But, if you will look at the powers such as they are set out in Section 26, you will see they say that the attorney general shall be the chief legal officer of the state; we've said that in the amendment that we previously adopted. It goes on to set out what the attorney general may do and we have said each and every one of those things plus more in the amendment that we have adopted. So, for those reasons, I urge your adoption of the amendment to delete the powers from the Judiciary Article.

[Amendment adopted without objection. Previous Question ordered on the Proposal. Proposal passed: 105-2. Motion to reconsider pending.]

Personal Privilege

MR. VICK
Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise not because I am aggrieved necessarily, because the vote was overwhelming to do what you wanted to do, but I rise to remind you that this battle is not over. On tomorrow, my alternate presumably will be debated according to the rules of this convention and that alternate very simply is to leave the question to the people whether they want a strong attorney general or a weak one. The strong attorney general by the Constitution of '21, Article VII, Section 56, as delineated, as opposed to the current proposal or even the updated proposal is set forth in a letter from Dean Francis Sullivan of the L.S.U. School of Law to the attorney general, dated November the 14th, which accompanies a memorandum sent to you by the attorney general himself. Now, ladies and gentlemen, this is perhaps by some standards one of the most critical issues before the convention. This office, as opposed to any other in this constitution on a statewide basis, has had its powers severely diminished. That is the power to initiate original criminal jurisdiction or to initiate original criminal prosecutions. The erosion on the part of the Judiciary Committee and others to move the office, the duties, powers and functions to the Executive is again reflected by your vote. We went through this once before; the vote was so indicative of your mood on that subject there was no need to dispute it. But, I urge you, ladies and gentlemen, I implore you, to read the letter from Dean Sullivan because I am going to be referring to it in detail tomorrow when we debate the alternate, and the issue then will be very simple; let the people decide whether they want a strong attorney general or a weak one. Until tomorrow, thank you.

[Motion to suspend the rules to call Committee Proposal No. 26 from the Committee on Style and Drafting adopted: 85-20. Motion to reconsider Committee Proposal No. 26 adopted: 73-22. Motion to suspend the rules to reconsider Committee Proposal No. 26, Section 4 for the limited purpose of considering the Graham amendment.]

Reconsideration

Committee Proposal No. 26, Section 4

Amendment

MR. HARDIN

Amendment No. 1. On page 5, line 13, after the word and punctuation "contrary," delete the remainder of the line and delete lines 14 through 22, both inclusive, in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"the state board of commerce and industry or its successor, with the approval of the governor, may enter into contracts for the exemption from -- this is an insertion--ad valorem taxes of any manufacturing establishment or an addition to any existing manufacturing establishment on such terms and conditions as the board, with the approval of the governor, may deem to be in the best interest of the state.

No exemption from taxes shall be granted under authority of this Paragraph for a longer initial period than five calendar years. In like manner, the exemption may be renewed for an additional period of five years.

All property exempted shall be listed on the assessment rolls and be submitted to the Louisiana Tax Commission or its successor, but no taxes shall be collected thereon during the period of exemption."

[Substitute motion to allow fifteen minutes to explain the Amendment adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. GRAHAM

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, the purpose of this amendment is to place the industrial tax exemption in the constitution as it has been for the last twelve or fifteen years. As you know, we presently have a provision in Proposal No. 26 that provides that the legislature may authorize this exemption. Whereas, in the same proposal we are providing for constitutional exemptions for public lands, religious properties, fraternal, charitable, health, burial, educational, agricultural products, agricultural machinery, cultural, and Mardi Gras property, ships, towboats, barges. Yet, with the industrial tax exemption that we have had and do have in our present constitution, it was taken out and made permissive. The simple, total, sole purpose of this proposed amendment is to constitutionally provide for that exemption in essentially the same manner that is provided for at the present time, that is, the Board of Commerce and Industry may enter into contract for a period of five years and that at the end of five years, the Board of Commerce and Industry may extend that contract for an additional five years. I might mention in the present constitution we're saying that the Board of Commerce and Industry shall extend the contract for five years if the terms of the contract are met by the industry. In this proposed amendment we're saying that they may extend it for one additional five-year period. That's the total purpose and essentially the whole content of this amendment.

Questions

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Graham, were you a delegate to this convention when this subject matter was debated on the floor?

MR. GRAHAM

Mr. Perez, I was a delegate at a time when it was debated, but I can't say that I necessarily was a delegate the time that you're talking about. I just don't know.

MR. PEREZ

Well, what I'm trying to do is find out whether you're familiar with what happened with respect to this particular proposal. First, do you know that when this proposal came out of the Revenue Committee there was a recommendation that the local government approve the exemptions before they could be granted; were you aware of that?

MR. GRAHAM

I was not aware that that was a committee recommendation, I was aware that at one time the proposal did provide for local government approval and it was changed to provide permissive legislation.

MR. PEREZ

Well, then if I tell you it was a part of the Revenue Committee Proposal, and if I tell you at a later time that there was an amendment on the floor which refused to take out the requirement that local government approve, then my question to you is would you be agreeable to an amendment which would give local government the right to approve any such industrial exemption within that parish?

MR. GRAHAM

To begin with, I don't question it if you say that it was the position of the committee; I don't question that at all, Mr. Perez, but I would not be agreeable to the amendment that you suggest, that it be subject to local government approval. I prefer to keep it the way it presently is in our constitution.

MR. PEREZ

All right. Are you aware of the fact that after long debate, that the present provision was adopted over my objection, I might say and at the request and insistence of the industrial people, so that what we presently have was that which was put in there at their request? Are you aware of that?

MR. GRAHAM

Mr. Perez, I am aware that they preferred the terms that are presently in the proposal as opposed to the provision that it was subject to approval of local governmental agencies.

MR. LANDRUM

Mr. Graham, you stated five years and one additional five-year period. . .

MR. GRAHAM

Yes, sir.

MR. LANDRUM

. . . no more than one additional five-year exemption?

MR. GRAHAM

You're right.

MR. FLORY

Mr. Graham, could you tell me why you left the following language out that's in the '21 Constitution where it defines a manufacturing establishment which says, "as used in this paragraph means a new plant or establishment or an addition or additions to any existing plant or establishment which engages in the business of working raw materials into wares suitable for use or which gives new shapes, new qualities or new combinations to matter which already has gone through some artificial process"? Could you tell me why you left that out?

MR. GRAHAM

Mr. Flory, it was left out in the interest of space and in taking out unnecessary verbiage. I know that you can say that this is necessary; on the other hand, I think that we can leave this up to the Board of Commerce and Industry and let them exercise the discretion over whether the industry is actually a manufacturing industry and does justify this exemption.

MR. FLORY

Are you saying then that the Board of Commerce and Industry would decide that on an application by application or would it be rather to define it by statute?

MR. GRAHAM

I don't see why. . . what would prohibit defining this by statute where we don't provide that it can be done, we surely don't provide that it cannot be done, Mr. Flory.

MR. FLORY

You don't really provide who determines what a manufacturing facility is, do you?

MR. GRAHAM

No, sir, we don't, other than the Commerce and Industry Board with the approval of the governor.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Do you feel that it would be the prerogative of the legislature, in fact their duty, to define manufacturing establishments as to what they are?

MR. GRAHAM

Mr. Champagne, I just said that I don't think that while we have not said that the legislature can do this, we have in no way prohibited the legislature, and I feel under those conditions it would be the prerogative of the legislature.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Another question. Do you know it's my understanding that the people involved in this, in other words the industries, are agreed to taking it out of the constitution because the thing they didn't want was local decisions on whether or not they'd get an exemption?

118th Days Proceedings—January 15, 1974

MR. GRAHAM

Thank you, sir. That was my understanding, also, Mr. Champagne.

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Graham, don't you know that if there's a positive provision in the constitution which says "the State Board of Commerce and Industry can give to new manufacturing establishments", that it would be beyond the reach of the legislature to define a new manufacturing establishment?

MR. GRAHAM

Mr. Perez, I don't know that. Frankly, I don't agree with you. I do respect your legal talent. But, I don't think it would be beyond their prerogative in that we are not saying that the Board of Commerce and Industry has to grant these exemptions. We are saying that they may enter into contract and grant exemptions.

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Graham, don't you further know that the state is no longer engaged in the ad valorem tax field, and probably will not enter into it again? If it does, it can only do it to the extent of five and three-quarter mills.

MR. GRAHAM

Yea, sir, Mr. Perez, I realize that. But, at the same time, I realize the state is engaged in all efforts to attract new industry to this state, especially in light of the fact that our natural resources are depleting. I also recognize the fact that if a local governing authority does not want an industry to locate in their particular area, there is serious doubt that the industry would locate in that area in spite of the fact that they don't want them to.

MR. PEREZ

Well, Mr. Graham, don't you think that it would be fair if the state thought enough that we needed that industry, that they could help make up some of the loss of revenue that the local government should receive from ad valorem taxes?

MR. GRAHAM

Mr. Perez, I feel, frankly, that the state is making up for a lot of lost revenue to the local governments in the way of revenue sharing and other matters that have been provided for in this constitution, or proposed constitution.

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Graham, don't you know that revenue sharing is figured only once every ten years? That in all probability, the local government could not get the effect of increased revenue sharing until that ten year period had expired? So, therefore, you'd be giving a ten year tax exemption on industry, and could not get the effect of your increase in population until ten years, or a large part of that ten years, Mr. Graham?

MR. GRAHAM

Mr. Perez, I know that the revenue sharing provisions that we have already adopted in our proposed constitution already provide for an increase.

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Graham, isn't it true that as far as the revenue sharing fund is concerned, that it is based upon the federal decennial census which is taken once every ten years?

MR. GRAHAM

Yea, sir.

MR. PEREZ

So, I again ask you the question. Isn't it quite possible that no increase in revenue sharing would come about as a result of the increase in population, but the local government would have to bear the additional cost of servicing the new people, plus the new industry, with increased cost for schools, for sewerage, for water, for roads, and so, therefore, probably would have to increase taxes on the other existing industries and the other existing homeowners in order to be able to hopefully make up for the increased cost in services?

MR. GRAHAM

Yea, sir.

MR. ABRAHAM

Mr. Graham, doesn't the article we've adopted state that "the revenue sharing funds shall be distributed annually as provided by the legislature solely on the basis of population and number of homesteads in each parish in proportion to population and number of homesteads throughout the state? Unless the legislature provides otherwise, population statistics of the last federal census, decennial census, shall be utilized for this purpose". So doesn't this allow the legislature to change its formula every year, if it so desires?

MR. GRAHAM

They can change the formula. I think Mr. Perez was referring to the fact that the legislature can't change the population. But, it can change the formula.

MR. ABRAHAM

But, it can revise the population figures if it so desires, because it says, "Unless the legislature provides otherwise", it'll use the decennial census.

MR. GRAHAM

Right.

MR. AVANT

Mr. Graham, as I recall the remarks of the governor when he addressed us, he suggested, or recommended, or whatever you want to call it, that this exemption be put back in the constitution like it was. I just wonder if you would consider withdrawing this amendment and recreating it so that if we do vote for it, which I would like to do, we can put this exemption back in the constitution like it was, and not open it wide open by taking out the present constitutional definition of manufacturing establishments.

MR. GRAHAM

Mr. Avant, I do recall that the governor suggested that we either remove all of the exemptions, or give the exemption back to industry. That's the purpose of this amendment is to give it back to industry.

In answer to your question, I don't believe that the verbiage that we have taken out of the present constitution makes all that much difference if you look at the position that the Board of Commerce and Industry has taken. I believe that even with the present verbiage, they do have a lot of discretion in determining whether an industry is, in fact, a manufacturing industry or not.

MR. AVANT

But, they got a whole lot more if you don't define manufacturing industry, don't they?

MR. GRAHAM

Mr. Avant, I believe that that can be a matter that the legislature can do. As I said a few minutes ago, because this proposed amendment says that "the Board of Commerce and Industry, with the approval of the governor, may enter into contract;" I believe that there will be discretion on the part of the legislature and a prerogative on the part of the legislature to determine what will, in fact, constitute a manufacturing establishment.

MR. AVANT

Well, that's what the present constitution says, "that the Board and the governor may enter into contracts with manufacturing establishments as defined in the constitution." Isn't that what it says?

MR. GRAHAM

I don't know if it says, "As defined in the constitution." I have.....

MR. AVANT

Well, I mean, that's why the authority is given to them, because they operate under a constitutional definition of a manufacturing establishment, don't they?

MR. GRAHAM

However, Mr. Avant, I don't believe the legislature has ever defined what would constitute a manufacturing establishment.

MR. AVANT

Don't have to. It's in the constitution. But now it won't be in the constitution.

MR. GRAHAM

That's right.

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Graham, I'm glad you corrected Mr. Avant and said that the governor gave us a choice. He said either take out...either place the industrial exemption back in, or take out all of the exemptions. Did you know that our committee, and many of us, feel like these exemptions should not be in there? I would prefer an opportunity to vote on a choice between the two, and let's take out all the exemptions in the constitution that don't belong in there...they don't belong there, and let's allow the legislature to grant those exemptions by a two-thirds vote.

MR. GRAHAM

I don't, in answer to your question, Senator Nunez, quarrel with that at all. On the other hand, it was determined that it would be more acceptable to this convention to add the one exemption, the industrial exemption, as it presently is, than it would be to go in and take out a multitude of exemptions that include churches and hospitals; religious, charitable, fraternal institutions; agricultural equipment. I just think that the convention itself would prefer to add one than to take out all of these.

MR. MUNSON

Mr. Graham, did you know that I disagree with Senator Nunez, and so do a lot more of us in this convention hall?

MR. GRAHAM

Representative Munson, I would assume that a lot of people do. Based on my conversations with them, I found that there was a substantial majority of the people that would rather add one than take out the rest.

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Graham, would you explain to me what you mean when you are saying "in like manner the exemption may be renewed for an additional period of five years"? We found out in our committee hearings where if they created one three thousand dollar job, one additional job, they could get a renewal for five years. What is the purpose of this language?

MR. GRAHAM

Because in the preceding paragraph it says that "the Board of Commerce and Industry, with the approval of the governor, may enter into contracts for the exemption of ad valorem taxes". It's saying in a like manner, they may enter into a contract to continue that exemption for five additional years. Senator Rayburn, you might....

MR. RAYBURN

What are the provisions to renew that contract, Mr. Graham? What are the provisions to renew that contract?

MR. GRAHAM

The same provisions as the initial contract that they entered into, Senator Rayburn. The present constitution says the same thing. The provision, as it is, says "the legislature may authorize the same thing." But, the present constitution says that "they shall extend it for an additional five years." The proposed amendment says that "they may extend it for an additional five years."

MR. RAYBURN

I mean under what provisions may they extend it? Give me a definition of how they can extend a five year contract.

I would like, Mr. Graham, to know what provisions where it says "in a like manner the exemption may be renewed for an additional period of five years?" What are the qualifications or the requirements to get that exemption renewed?

MR. GRAHAM

Senator Rayburn, I don't know the exact terms of any contract that the Board of Commerce and Industry may have. I'm not familiar with that. But, what this is saying is that the Board of Commerce and Industry, with the approval of the governor, may enter into a contract with an industry...a new industry...and, at the end of five years it may be extended for an additional five years in a like manner--in the like manner as it initially entered into that contract. I do not have a copy of the contract. I don't know what it says, Senator Rayburn.

MR. RAYBURN

In the like manner to create additional jobs?

MR. GRAHAM

I beg your pardon.

MR. RAYBURN

I say would it be in a like manner to create employment or additional jobs?

MR. GRAHAM

Senator Rayburn, I would say it would be in a like manner as the initial contract. That's all I know, sir.

MR. RAYBURN

Did you know that we found out in the hearings on the committee where some industries had created two three thousand dollar a year jobs and got an additional five year contract? Did you know that?

MR. GRAHAM

I didn't know that. But, if you say that, I accept your comments.

MR. RAYBURN

That was testimony we heard in our committee, Mr. Graham. I just want to know that if this language where it says "in a like manner the exemption may be renewed." I want to know what provisions do you have to have to renew it for five years. I know the initial application says they are going to hire fifty people, forty people, ten people, or two people. Then, I want to know what you've got to do to renew it. Do you know?

MR. GRAHAM

You have to make an application for a continuation or a renewal thereof, Senator Rayburn.

MR. RAYBURN

Thank you.

MR. GRAHAM

Yea, sir.

[Quorum Call: 100 delegates present and a quorum.]

Point of Information

MR. NUNEZ

I rise for a point of information, Mr. Chairman. Are we... has he moved for suspension of the rules for the limited purpose of considering his amendment only?

MR. HENRY

Yea, sir. That's correct.

MR. NUNEZ

Would the gentleman consider moving for suspension of the rules to consider amendments...any amendments that would be applicable to the article, that would take out all exemptions, or either put that one back in?

MR. HENRY

Mr. Graham?

The gentleman says, no, sir. He's made his motion.

[Record vote ordered. Rules Suspended: 71-37.]

Reconsideration

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendment sent up by the gentleman reads as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 5, line 13, after the word and punctuation "contrary", delete the remainder of the line, and delete lines 14 through 22, both inclusive in their entirety, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"The State Board of Commerce and Industry, or its successor, with the approval of the governor, may enter into contracts for the exemption from (and here's the insert previously noted) ad valorem taxes of any new manufacturing establishment or an addition to any existing manufacturing establishment, on such terms and conditions as the board, with the approval of the governor, deem to be in the best interest of the state. No exemption from taxes shall be granted under authority of this paragraph for a longer initial term than five calendar years. In like manner, the exemption may be renewed for an additional period of five years. All property exempted shall be listed on the assessment rolls and be submitted to the Louisiana Tax

118th Days Proceedings—January 15, 1974

Commission or its successor, but no taxes shall be collected thereon during the period of exemption."

[Motion to limit debate on the Amendment to twenty minutes rejected: 40-51.]

Explanation

MR. GRAHAM

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I believe that I explained the proposed amendment to the extent that I am capable of explaining it. If it meets with the approval of the delegates here, I would just as soon let the opponents, or those others who would like to discuss this proposed amendment, carry on rather than stand up here and answer questions for the next hour. I will close on the amendment, and perhaps you'll have a chance to try to shoot me down at that time.

Questions

MR. ROEMER

Buzzy, what changes? Could you explain, now since you've got all of our attention, what changes would your amendment make in what we've already adopted? Could you list those specifically the two or three changes that it would make?

MR. GRAHAM

Actually, Mr. Roemer, it changes one, and this is the most important change. What we've already adopted simply says that the legislature may authorize the State Board of Commerce and Industry, under such conditions and terms, and with such approval as the legislature may specify...this is saying...is granting the exemption as a constitutional exemption, as we have in the proposal for every other exemption other than this one.

MR. ROEMER

I understand that.

What about the local option business? Is that in yours?

MR. GRAHAM

This is not included in the amendment that we are proposing.

MR. ROEMER

Well, don't you think that's a change?

MR. GRAHAM

The present provision does not have the local option provision.

MR. ROEMER

What about any vote? Is there any vote requirement in the legislature for the formulation of the rules?

MR. GRAHAM

That is not provided for. It was covered awhile ago, and I suggested that the legislature would have the prerogative to define a manufacturing establishment.

Further Discussion

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I ask you to defeat this amendment for this specific reason. Article X, Section 4, of the present constitution says that "the State Board of Commerce and Industry, with the approval of the governor, may enter into contract for the exemption of any new manufacturing establishment, or an addition or additions to any manufacturing establishment already existing in the state upon such terms and conditions as the board, with the approval of the governor, may deem to be in the best interest of the state." Now, then they proceed to define what is a manufacturing establishment. The term, manufacturing establishment, and addition or additions, as used in this paragraph, mean a new plant or establishment, or an addition or additions to any existing plant or establishment which engages in the business of working raw materials into wares suitable for use, or which gives new shapes, new qualities, or new combinations to matter which has already gone through some artificial process." Now, if you will recall the debate when this matter was before this convention, it was established during the course of that debate that over fifty percent of the assessed valuation in this state was on the exempt rolls--in excess of seven billion dollars--even under that definition. Now, when you delete that language, that definition, then you throw this thing wide open, absolutely wide open. Though I respect Mr.

Graham and his ability, I think he is seriously in error when he tells you that the legislature can come back and define manufacturing establishments, because under his language, and under this amendment that is offered, it says that "the State Board of Commerce and Industry, etc., etc., to any existing manufacturing establishment, or new...on such times and conditions as the board, with the approval of the governor, deem in the best interest of the state." That language leaves no room--no room--for the legislature to define what shall constitute a manufacturing establishment because it will be on the terms and conditions that the board, with the approval of the governor, deem in the best interest of the state.

So, I ask you to defeat this amendment for that specific reason. Now, if they want to come back and put the exemption back in the constitution like it is, as we were told we should do, that's a horse of another color. I don't think I would even be up here. But, when you take that definition out, then I think you can see that you throw this wide open to where the governor and the board can grant any exemption they want to, under any terms and conditions they may see fit, because there is no definition of what is a manufacturing establishment.

So, unless and until that definition is put back in this proposal, I would respectfully request that you reject this amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. FLORY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I rise to call your attention to the amendment and the position that Mr. Avant has taken. I concur in what he has said. Let me say this as a representative of labor, when this issue was before this convention, I supported leaving the industrial exemption in the constitution, voted with it all the way, and still believe that it is good for the growth of jobs in this state. But, I suggest to you that you ought to realize what you are about to vote on.

Remember, now, that the state is not in the ad valorem tax business. The taxes that you are talking about exempting are local taxes. Now, what the governor said the other day was to either strip this document of all exemptions, or as a compromise, and I quote, "I would suggest that you also include the industrial exemptions." Now, I take that to mean in the same light that they were granted in the 1921 Constitution, later amended. If you take out of the constitution the definition of a manufacturing facility, you're leaving it up to fifteen appointed members to determine what is a manufacturing facility. There is already, now, litigation in the courts as to what is and what is not a manufacturing facility. There's been contentions already for years that the power plants in this state are not per se manufacturing facilities. But, under this amendment, they could put a shirt shop that sells shirts on as a manufacturing facility if they sewed a button on the shirt, if they wanted to. I suggest to you that it's so prone to interpretation, case by case, administration by administration, that if in the constitution you don't define what is a manufacturing facility, we're going to get into some serious financial problems on local governmental levels in this state. I ask you to reject this amendment until such time as they define what is a manufacturing facility, and then I'd be more than happy to support it. But, I can't support it in the posture it is now, because it's just too wide open for interpretation, and makes....creates for a suspicious atmosphere. I'd be happy to yield.

Questions

MR. ROY

Mr. Flory, what about an amendment that would say, you know, with respect to the manufacturing as defined by law, let the legislature define....

MR. FLORY

I see no reason....

MR. ROY

....instead of us defining it here.

MR. FLORY

When I asked the question of Mr. Graham why he didn't include that language in the constitution--this constitution that was in the old constitution--because there is jurisprudence on it, he said in the expediency of shortening the document. I appreciate that, but when you are talking about dollars on the local level, I don't think we ought to be too concerned about words versus dollars to local government.

MR. ROY

Well, if the legislature--my thing is that if we define something in the constitution, and you ever want to change it, you've got to go to the constitution. But, if you let it be as defined by law, don't you agree that the legislature could define what is a manufacturing concern, and whether it would be applicable or not?

MR. FLORY

Mr. Roy, if you would say that the present definition and the present constitution of a manufacturing facility would be transferred in the schedule to the statutes, and it required a two-thirds vote to change it, I would have no objections--no objections--but, I don't want to get into the position every year that the legislature meets.... they can change the definition of a manufacturing facility.

Further Discussion

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I would hope that I could have your attention for a little while so that we could reasonably discuss the posture in which we now find ourselves.

If you will recall, when this matter was being debated when it first came up, the Revenue Committee had recommended and provided almost without opposition, that before an industrial exemption could be granted, that it would also have to have the approval of the governing authority of the local government. If you will recall, Mr. Gravel offered an amendment at which time he alluded to local governmental officials as the lowest form of petty politics. I say to you that local government is responsive and responsible, and that it is becoming even more so all the time. But I say to you that in spite of the fact that I attempted at that time to have a provision which would require the local government approval, that this convention decided that it would be better to leave it up to the legislature so that the way the provision now reads is that the legislature by law may authorize the State Board of Commerce and Industry, or its successor, under such terms and conditions, and with such approval as the legislature specifies, to provide for the exemption from property taxation of a new manufacturing establishment, etc.

I say to you that I think that even though I was not satisfied, and acceptable or agreeable to that particular provision, at least it will give the opportunity to have this matter more thoroughly discussed and thrashed out when it is presented to the legislature because of the fact that it's easy to say we want to induce industry. We all want to induce industry. But, with any new industry there comes problems. We have the problem of where do we find the money to build new schools for the new employees; where do we find the money to pay for all the additional deputies that have to be hired; where do we find the money for the sewerage and for the water; for the streets, and on and on and on and on. The state is out of the property tax business and as far as we know, does not intend to reenter it. I say to you that this is the worst form of violation of local governmental principles to say that without...without any regard whatsoever to the local governmental people, that an appointive board, the State Board of Commerce and Industry, with the approval of the governor, may under certain circumstances virtually bankrupt local government, or on the other hand, possibly require the increase in taxes for those who are already there to accommodate those who may come. Now, let's make it clear that this business of revenue sharing does not cover a situation like this because of the fact that revenue sharing is figured every ten years. It is quite possible that the increase in population will come along with the new industry near, say 1970 or 1980, so that the local governmental officials and the school boards would have to suffer for a period of ten years, hopefully to find the money to continue the governmental functions for those who are already there, plus those who want to come. All that I'm saying to you is that this is a very, very, very serious matter, and I would hope that you would not cut off the possibility of a reasonable settlement to this matter by allowing it to go to the legislature instead of making a fixed, hard determination here at this convention, that this should be an absolute exemption, and local government should have nothing to say about it. I say to you that this is a very dangerous procedure. I do know that the steamroller is rolling. But, for God's sake, let's try to put the brakes on it; get back to reasonableness, and let's reject this amendment, please.

Questions

MR. WILLIS

Mr. Perez, isn't it a fact that the legislature may not define words in the constitution, that that is the work of the courts?

MR. PEREZ

That's correct.

MR. WILLIS

Does not this amendment replace the one hundred and forty-two members of the legislature for a governor and a board, the members of which he appoints?

MR. PEREZ

There is no question about the fact that this is an absolute right for the granting of an exemption without adequate determination of what a manufacturing establishment is. I might say to you that even under the present procedure, they have called things manufacturing establishments where they really had to stretch their imagination to do it. Without any definition, I say to you it would be possible for just about any business establishment to be defined as a manufacturing establishment, and, therefore, be granted an exemption.

MR. WILLIS

One more last question. This is a firm constitutional question. Do you think that exemptions is an executive function?

MR. PEREZ

No, sir. It certainly should not be.

MR. WILLIS

It is either constitutional or legislative function, or both. Isn't that correct?

MR. PEREZ

It should be the legislative function of local government at least to have a say-so.

Further Discussion

MR. LANDRUM

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in opposition to this amendment. In my opinion, I do not believe that the governor, nor the legislature, nor the State Board of Commerce should have the right to exempt property on a local level. I believe that this five and ten year exemption is harmful to the people of the city of New Orleans, and to the rest of the State of Louisiana. I do not believe that industry should have a ten year incentive program in order to come into this state. I do believe that Louisiana...we have enough right here in this state to induce industry from many many different angles. We do not have to give this type of an incentive to industry to locate here in this state. We should give the people some incentives. Everywhere you turn for the past year, industry certainly has had its role here in this convention. But now, as delegates, we are the only hope that the people have represented here. If we fail in representing the people, then there is no need to have elections at all. I do believe this, that industry plays a very vital role in every community. But now, why should industry be exempted--given ten years exemption? Mr. Rayburn mentioned the fact that all industry has to do is to hire a few more people, or to put a wing or something on to renew that exemption. But, what happens to your home when you add--make an addition to your home. Rather than get an exemption, you have to pay more taxes.

Let's think about the people a little bit now. The remainder of these days that we are to be here, let's think about the people. Let's give the people some incentive.

Thank you.

Point of Information

MR. GRAHAM

Mr. Chairman, with the permission of the convention, we'd like to withdraw the amendment for the purpose of adding a provision that is the definition as provided for in the present constitution.

MR. HENRY

Now, Mr. Graham, if you withdraw the amendment, then what we are going to do is vote again on the adoption of the section. We are going to have to go through the reconsideration business again because it was for the limited purpose of this amendment. Just so that you'll understand that.

What's your pleasure?

118th Days Proceedings—January 15, 1974

MR. GRAHAM

Mr. Chairman, I believe this is the only way we can do it. We are adding to the proposed amendment those provisions that are in the present constitution that define a manufacturing establishment, or additions thereto.

MR. HENRY

All right, all right. Don't explain your amendment, please.

[Amendment withdrawn. Previous Question ordered on the Section. Quorum Call: 96 delegates present and a quorum.]

Point of Information

MR. BURNS

I thought you were getting ready to call a vote, Mr. Chairman. I just wanted a point of information.

Now that he's withdrawn that amendment, at least temporarily, what would we be voting on?

MR. HENRY

You are voting on the adoption of Section 4 as it was when we started fooling with this amendment, just as we'd already adopted it once during the deliberations of this convention.

We really have it on reconsideration.

[Section passed: 97-3. Motion to reconsider tabled. Motion to suspend the rules to reconsider Committee Proposal No. 26, Section 4 for the limited purpose of considering the Graham amendment adopted without objection.]

Point of Information

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Chairman, I would ask that Mr. Graham explain the amendment. From the amendment that I've seen that they're going to adopt, it's not the intent of this convention of the objection for not adopting the other one. He's just going to simply define terms, while we were concerned with the legislative section of it.

MR. HENRY

I'll ask the Clerk, number one, to read the amendment. Then we'll let Mr. Graham say a few words on it.

Reconsideration

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The amendment is resubmitted. It would read as follows: First of all, the text of the first partial paragraph and second and third. . . first two full paragraphs are the same. Again, it has been run off without the word, on the third line, "ad valorem" being inserted before the word "taxes," "taxes" being the last word on the third line of the amendment. The words "ad valorem" should appear immediately prior to that, after the word "from."

It, in addition, adds this paragraph, additionally, as a third paragraph:

"The terms 'manufacturing establishment' and 'addition' or 'additions' as used herein mean a new plant or establishment or an addition or additions to any existing plant or establishment which engages in the business of working raw materials into wares suitable for use or which gives new shapes, new qualities, or new combinations to matter which already has gone through some artificial process."

Explanation

MR. GRAHAM

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, briefly, this amendment is identical to the amendment previously offered. We have placed "ad valorem" back in the amendment up at the top where it says "taxes." It adds the definition, as contained in our present constitution, to manufacturing establishments or additions thereto. Other than that, it is identical; but I believe this does resolve the problem that several delegates had, by virtue of the fact that we had not defined "manufacturing establishment."

Questions

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Graham, in your latest sentence you've added, you say, "addition or additions," plural. Where do you use the word "additions," plural, in. . . up above?

MR. GRAHAM

Mr. Perez, I didn't understand you. All I know is that that's what it says in the present constitution.

MR. PEREZ

Well, except that the way you have your provision now drawn, you don't use the word "additions," plural. So, I'm just. . . isn't your amendment kind of messed up is what I'm trying to get to?

MR. GRAHAM

Mr. Perez, I think that's a matter that Style and Drafting can handle. The present constitution says, "addition or additions," and that's what we did. We thought that that was the wishes of this convention.

MR. PEREZ

Don't you know that Style and Drafting has no right to make substantive changes? All you are allowing, as I read it, above, is one addition. But, here, when you get to your definition, you're adding additional "additions." Is that correct?

MR. GRAHAM

Would that be a substantive change in lieu of the fact, or in light of the fact that we have said in the last paragraph "addition" or "additions"?

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Graham, do you realize that even under this definition which we now have that the Board of Commerce and Industry has been granting ten year tax exemptions to grain elevators, and all the grain elevators do is to take grain and mix it and heat it up a little bit to get the wetness out of it, and they get an industrial exemption? Did you realize that?

MR. GRAHAM

Mr. Perez, if you say that they do, I accept your word for it.

MR. PEREZ

Well, don't you realize that it would be a lot better for the legislature to look into this matter and make some meaningful changes instead of cementing this thing as we have it now with the abuses that we now have in the industrial exemption practice in this state?

MR. FLORY

Mr. Graham, I appreciate you adding that definition, but when you talk about "addition" or "additions," really what we're talking about there is where a plant may have more than one addition in process at the same time and more than one application for expansion at the same time.

MR. GRAHAM

Thank you, Mr. Flory.

[Record vote ordered. Substitute motion to suspend the rules to consider any amendments to the Section rejected: 19-75.]

Point of Information

MR. PEREZ

Let me see if I can understand where we are now. This means that if we adopt this amendment, that no other delegate would have the right to come in and offer any additional amendments to try to improve on this thing, and that we'd either have to take it or leave it?

MR. HENRY

No sir, Mr. Perez. It does not mean that at all, and you know that. It means that you can make the same motion and go through the same procedure anyone else here can, as has been done all afternoon, sir.

[Rules Suspended: 78-21. Motion to reconsider Section 4 adopted without objection.]

Further Discussion

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I don't know whether you heard the question which I previously asked Mr. Graham a little bit earlier, but there are in the practice of granting industrial exemptions many, many, many abuses. I don't know whether you heard me ask the question whether or not a grain elevator, a grain elevator which only accepts or receives grain, mixes that grain to change its grade and quality and which may do a little drying--have a little drying process--and the State Board of Commerce and Industry has considered that to be a manufacturing establishment under the provisions of this constitution and therefore, has granted--has granted--industrial exemptions to people like that without any opportunity for anyone else in the state, including the local government, to have a say--so whatsoever in this matter. I say to you, that this matter of industrial exemption is one of the most misused provisions which we have in our constitution. So, again I beg of you, please, let's leave this up to the legislature where this matter can be more thoroughly thrashed out so that we can look into this matter and try to straighten out and to give bona fide exemptions to those who deserve the exemptions, but not to those who do not deserve the exemptions. The purpose of this is to bring new business and new industry into the state. But, I can tell you, in our area, we have those who would come in and would be here without an industrial exemption at the same time the local government has had to bear the tremendous additional expense of taking care of the necessary services for that industry. I say to you, that the provision which we now have, which leaves it up to the legislature to straighten out this business of industrial exemptions is what we should follow, because--again--because of the tremendous abuses that we've had through the State Board of Commerce and Industry in granting exemptions to many, many, many industries who are not entitled to it.

I'll yield to questions.

Further Discussion

MR. E. J. LANDRY

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of this convention, I'm going to ask you to please give me your attention. If there's one thing that has disturbed me in this convention, it's the fact that sometimes you really overlook a very important issue. I'm going to ask you, please, to soundly defeat this amendment, and I'm going to tell you why. I live in an area where grain elevators have been sprouting, one after the other, destroying my community. Two great big elevators came up without the knowledge of our people and destroyed the property and the homes of close to a thousand people. One of them blew up and came near destroying a school. It blew up for the second time; litigation is in process, now, trying to retrieve. It's been very difficult--very difficult--to know that the local people have no protection whatsoever. I have gone over to the Board of Commerce and Industry. I have researched the records, and I've found in those records how these exemptions came about. I read the argument, I read the argument of Bryan Lahmann, a former Representative of this state, who later had very strong difficulties with the affairs of this state. In the argument, it was argued that this grain elevator was a manufacturing concern. Then, later on at this time, ten years later, the same people, the same industry wants exemption because they claim, now, that they are not a manufacturing establishment. That is why, a moment ago, I pleaded with Mr. Flory to please try and have the original definition of a manufacturing establishment put back into this constitution. Rather than that, I'd rather eliminate the whole business, because I cannot approve of the fact that a few people will bypass the representatives of the people and allow this kind of thing to continue to happen. So, I'm imploring you, please, let the representatives of the people have something to say about what's happening. I think they've gotten too enthusiastic about this business of industrial exemptions. I've long believed that we do not need all of these exemptions in order to attract this industry. In my little parish, we are overcrowded with a billion dollars of tax exemptions. The people do not have enough places to live. I'm going to have to move my new home pretty soon, which is close to the river. I'm going to have to make way, and many other people have had to make way for these industries that have come in without the approval of the people. I'm asking you to defeat this thing.

Further Discussion

MR. SCHMITT

It's most amazing to me that the governor would come before us with amendments which he deems to be in the best interest of the entire State of Louisiana and upon which he thinks that this constitution will rise and fall, and two of them are . . . one, the first one is multi-parish banking--which I'm sure couldn't concern very many people except the special interest groups of banks--and the second one, with reference to the industrial tax exemption, one which was fought so hard by many of the delegates here, and particularly by the members of the Revenue, Finance and Taxation Committee.

I'd like to review with you for a couple of minutes some of the facts which were brought out before our committee. As all of you know, the state is not presently in the ad valorem property tax business. In the past, these exemptions were granted for five years and one year at a time, thereon, up to another period of five more years, for a total of ten years. At the end of that time, these corporate properties or partnership properties were put on the tax rolls at the initial tax value. That means if it's twenty million dollars and it happened to be fifteen percent in that district, it would go on at three million dollars at the end of the ten year period of time. Now, let's assume that we would adopt this proposal which came up by Mr. Henry, Pugh, Gravel, etc. At the end of the ten year period of time, this industry would not go on at three million dollars. It would go on as part of the other part of our constitution, at the current fair market value. That means that the depreciated value at the end of ten years. What is this worth? Assuming it's worth ten percent, we've not only lost the taxes over that ten year period of time, we've lost an entire tax base to the future of that locality. This doesn't affect the governor, but this does affect every municipality and every parish in the State of Louisiana. Who pays the bills? The state pays part, surely, but the major part of the bills for capital improvements, etc., are paid by the ad valorem property taxes. Why should the people who enjoy most of the benefits and to a large extent can incur much damage on those around them be free from the burden of taxation? This is a burden which must be shared by all the people if they expect our state to advance into the future. Through the analysis of the property taxes throughout the United States, we have seen that by far, Louisiana taxes are the lowest, or one of the lowest in the United States. I do not think that by the elimination of this industrial tax exemption it would encourage large industries to go to other states. Let me say that I would like to rely upon Mr. Ed Steimel, in his letter, which was . . . the first page was passed out today. He indicated that our prime concern is not for Exxon, or Dow, or Ethyl or the other major oil companies or petrochemical plants, because he further indicates in there that no matter what happens to the business in the State of Louisiana, they're going to stay here. These are the major companies which are receiving the industrial tax exemption at the present time. Gulf Oil Corporation came to the governor and attempted to get approximately a five hundred million dollar tax exemption. They attempted to bypass the local leaders; however, because there was a strong local leader who is also a member of this convention, they were prevented from doing this, and a sliding scale was established so that at least the people could get partial benefits from this, so that part of the burden could be shared by this large corporation. This corporation with approximately five hundred million dollars of plants which went up created less than fifty permanent jobs. Now, I believe that . . .

. . . this is unfair, and what we have already adopted is quite adequate. It allows the legislature enough latitude. If they should decide to establish some type of sliding scale rather than a complete exemption, they have the ability to do so. I don't think that we should open up our purses to these large industrial complexes which come in, allow them to take advantage of the state. This is one of the worst pieces of constitutional material I've ever seen. I'm really ashamed to see that our Chairman is part of this. This is really horrible, and I wish you'd reject this. Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, would you please just give me your attention for a minute, because it looks like we've got four more days, but we wanted to finish yesterday. It just seems to me that some of this stuff is so vitally important, it's taken up a year of our time for us to get this far. In two days, we've undone a lot of what we've done. Maybe justifiably so, maybe not. But, let's . . . if we're going to do it, let's get the facts straight. Let's don't let somebody get up here and give you an amendment and the amendment is wrong after we've worked in committee, after committee, after committee and then heard it on the floor for hours and days and weeks and then they come up here with an amendment. I want to try to do what the governor wants and try to give him some of what he wants. I don't think what they're doing is what he wants. It is not what he said, and I'm glad whoever said "Put this in the record," I want to thank them, because it's been very useful. I want to read you what he said. I want to . . . there's nothing in this article that we've adopted about local government vetoing--vetoing--industry in this state; not a word, not one word. This is what the governor said: "I therefore recommend to you that either you strip the constitution completely of such exemptions, or if you are going to leave them in, as a compromise, I would suggest that you also include the industrial exemptions and that you do so without the effort of . . . to give some local governing veto power on the granting of exemptions." I tell you and I say to you in all sincerity, the governor was misinformed when he said that. He was absolutely misinformed, because if he had read the article like it reads, it doesn't say anything about local government vetoing exemptions in the parish. We had considered that in this convention, but we compromised it, and this is what we said. I think we've got a good article, here.

Let me read you that. Give me your attention one minute, please. "Notwithstanding any provision of this section to the contrary the legislature may authorize the State Board of Commerce and Industry, under such conditions and terms and with such approval as the legislature may specify to provide for the exemptions from property taxation of any new manufacturing establishment or any addition or additions to any manufacturing establishment already within the state." Where is local government going to veto it? We talked about it at length, but we defeated it. So, please get that out of your mind. Mr. Graham has said it, Mr. Gravel said it; they all are saying local government. It has nothing to do with this. It boils down to a question. . . and it's not what the governor said, again. Almost every amendment they've come up here with, "This is what the governor wants." I believe every man and woman sitting here wants to do something that he said he does so he can support it, and I want to do the same thing. But, I don't think we're doing what he wants us to do. I just don't believe . . . somebody is misinformed. I don't think it's this convention; I think it's the people who are bringing these amendments to you. Indicative of that is the fact that they've got to keep . . . go changing them everytime we question it. For God's sakes, it's a good article. The committee article is a good proposal. I would beg you, please don't change it. What they did is went back to the original 1921 Constitution, and all they did is define a manufacturing establishment. It doesn't upgrade the constitution to its modern concept. If you don't trust the legislature, then vote against it. Maybe that's what it's all about. But, it has nothing at all to do with local government. They are not involved in this. It's your legislature, elected by the people. I just could not be strong enough and tell you that you've got one good article here, and I wish that one of the floor leaders would go read this to the governor. I think he would agree with it. If he thinks local government has the veto, then I'm telling you right here and now, it does not. But, evidently he does, because he said it does. What are we trying to do? We just did the same thing, we took the legislature out of the exemptions. . . out of the bond and redemption fund--excuse me--out of the bond thing completely. We took them out completely. Now, we're taking them out the exemptions completely. I don't believe this is what you want to do, but we are moving rather rapidly. There's been a lot of little conditions getting together here, for one and against one. I think it's wrong. I think what we're doing here, we're undoing some hell of a good work that we've done over the past year.

I don't believe you want to do that, so please give the . . . some of the people who are telling you exactly what you're doing up here, give them your attention and just try to vote on what we have voted on without radically changing those principles of what we have. . .

Further Discussion

MR. ROEMER

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I have just a few brief personal remarks in opposition to this amendment. You know, Senator Nunez spoke loud and clear and, I think, very well to the point when he talked about the hours and literally days that we spent in our Committee of Revenue, Finance and Taxation and come up with what we thought was a good article. The same debate, at least not hour for hour, but many hours of it were held on this very floor when we talked about the industrial exemption. I think it's a step forward; I think it's one of the best things we have in the Revenue, Finance and Taxation section, that we could take a major exemption like this out of the constitution, could unfreeze it and turn it over to the legislature that represents all the people in the state to define it, to administrate it, to overview the operation of a particular type of exemption that has been badly, badly, sadly misused in the past. Now, I think we can all point to the examples of industry coming to this state because of the industrial exemption. We want that; we need that. But, I can point out some personal cases of misuse and abuse in my area, and I'm sure you can in yours, where it was just left up to the governor, left up to the Commerce and Industry Board; and we, the people, had no say-so in our local area as to what industry moved in and the tax burden that they carried. Now, the hope, I think, for the industrial tax exemption is that the legislature can work it out where it's both fair to the industry that moves in and fair to the people that have to bear some of the burden in the local areas. If we adopt an amendment like this, we have, in fact, turned over this very important exemption lock, stock and barrel and constitutionally frozen to one man--the governor. Sure, he's got a Board of Commerce and Industry, all of whom he appoints, the rationale of whom he controls. He flies all around the country and literally around the world with this group of men trying to find industry for Louisiana. Fine; I praise him for that. But, this same closely knit group should not have the right to determine who gets the exemption and for how much and when the conditions prevail. I think that we made a step forward, one of the clear steps forward in this article, the way we wrote it, when we left it up to the legislature to determine the mechanics and the particulars of the industrial tax exemption.

Now, some people questioned me. They said, "Well, what have we done for industry in this new constitution?" Well, what have we done for them? We've probably given them more good government than they ever can stomach. But, I think it's about time, when the constitution was written for all the people--the people that work for the industry, the people that get paid by the industry, but the people that are also abused by the industry. That's what I think this constitution has done for industry is to help the people that work for industry, and that's going to directly help the industry itself. So, I urge you, let's defeat this amendment. The governor, I think, was sadly misinformed when he came up and told you that we had written a lot of particulars in the constitution about local option. You heard my question to Mr. Graham when I asked him quite clearly, "Did the original proposal have local option in it?" He said, "No, that's not the way it passed." That's right; that's not the way it passed. The governor was misinformed when he said that's the way it was passed. I urge you, let's defeat this amendment. Let's stick with what we have and let the industrial tax exemption be motivated by, molded by the body that represents us all--the legislature.

Questions

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Roemer, now isn't it true that we took off the limitation on corporate income taxes, but we kept it on personal income taxes? We protected the homeowner constitutionally, and we shifted some of the property taxes to business and industry?

MR. ROEMER

Well, it depends on the area, Mr. Jenkins. It would depend on what rate they are assessed now.

MR. JENKINS

Isn't it true that this is probably the only thing that the State of Louisiana offers as an inducement to industry, is the industrial tax exemption? Is that not true?

MR. ROEMER

Mr. Jenkins, that is a ridiculous argument. What we offer to industry in Louisiana are our streams, our lakes, our natural resource--the most important of which is the people that live here.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. GRAHAM

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I will be very, very brief. There are a couple of statements that I would like to correct. To begin with, the governor did not think that the local option provision was in the proposal. He knew that it was not in the proposal. He did, however, know that at one time when the provision for industrial tax exemption was in the proposal as a constitutional provision--not a legislative authorization--that it did have the local option provision in it. Number two, this purely and simply does one thing: it provides for the industrial tax exemption in the same manner that we have provided for every other exemption in this proposal. Otherwise, we are providing for exemptions for a multitude of classifications. But, on the industrial exemption, we're saying that the legislature may provide for it.

118th Days Proceedings—January 15, 1974

I would sincerely appreciate your adoption of the amendment. Thank you.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted: 71-39. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Motion

MR. NUNEZ

When Mr. Graham made his motion, it was for the specific reason of introducing an amendment. I'd like to suspend the rules again, further, to introduce an amendment.

MR. HENRY

Well, Senator Nunez, the previous question on the section has been ordered.

I guess. . .well, your motion for a suspension of the rules. . . it would be in order. The gentleman. . .

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Henry, you indicated that we could do the same thing after or try. I hope that you would. . .

MR. HENRY

I just got through saying, Senator, that you're in order. Mr. Graham had moved the previous question on the adoption of the section, and there was no objection.

[Motion to suspend the rules to allow additional amendments rejected: 57-53.]

Point of Information

MR. PEREZ

Did you say the previous question has been ordered, because I would have liked to had the opportunity to speak against the section?

MR. HENRY

Well, there was no objection at the time, Mr. Perez, and I did look around.

[Section passed: 78-31. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous Question ordered on the Proposal. Proposal passed: 100-11. Motion to reconsider pending.]

Motion

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Chairman, I move to suspend the rules to reopen the section for the specific reason of one amendment.

MR. HENRY

Is that to Section 4, Senator?

MR. NUNEZ

Yea, sir.

MR. HENRY

The gentleman moves for a suspension of the rules for the purpose of calling from the table the motion to reconsider the vote by which Section 4 was adopted.

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Chairman, I would like to just tell the convention what the amendment is so they will know and not....

MR. HENRY

All right. Read the amendment, Mr. Clerk.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendment would read as follows:

On page 5, line 13, in Floor Amendment No. 1 proposed by Delegate Henry and others and adopted by the convention just now, below the last line of the text of the amendment add the following new paragraph:

"The State Board of Commerce and Industry or its successor, shall exercise the authority herein granted in such manner and under such terms and conditions not inconsistent herewith as the legislature shall provide by law."

MR. HENRY

All right. The gentlemen...Senator Nunez, what you do is insist on the motion for reconsideration at this time since it was left pending.

MR. NUNEZ

Yes, sir, Mr. Chairman. I just wanted the convention to know that the amendment was specifically for one reason and the reason was to be "shall provide by law."

Questions

MR. DUVAL

Senator Nunez, was your amendment to take out all the exemptions?

Motion

MR. PEREZ

I move for a further suspension of the rules to allow Mr. Nunez ten minutes to explain his proposed amendment just as we have done before to others for this.

MR. HENRY

The gentleman moves for a suspension of the rules for the purpose of allowing the gentleman ten minutes to explain his amendment.

Point of Information

MR. MUNSON

Well, he said for a further suspension; we haven't had the first suspension yet.

MR. HENRY

Well, it would be for a suspension of the rules because we are not talking about a suspension, we are talking about right now a motion to reconsider the vote by which the proposal was adopted but it would require a suspension of the rules to allow the gentleman ten minutes to explain his amendment.

Point of Information

MR. AVANT

I just want to understand one thing. As I understand the amendment, it doesn't delete anything, it just adds some language?

MR. POYNTER

I believe that's right, Mr. Avant.

Point of Information

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Chairman, would you please explain what the suspension is for? Is it an explanation of the amendment?

MR. HENRY

After you get through explaining your amendment, then we will take a vote, Senator, on reconsidering the adoption of the committee proposal, that takes a majority of those present and voting. Now, if you are successful there, then we will make the motion to suspend the rules for the purpose of calling from the table the motion to reconsider the vote by which this section was adopted, which takes you sixty-seven votes there. So, we've got to get through the reconsideration first, which is a lesser number.

Explanation

MR. NUNEZ

Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Ladies and gentlemen, I certainly hate to be one that takes the valuable time at this convention at such a late hour. But, I consider it important enough that in the rapid rate that we are moving if we would just slow down maybe for a few minutes, we would get maybe more meaningful legislation or more meaningful constitution out of what we are doing. I explained to you what the original committee proposal did and it just left it to the legislature. I also explained to you what the proposal did that Mr. Graham and Gravel and others had offered. At this time, all I'm doing is adding, not deleting and not going into the exemptions that we have already granted. None of those terrible things, none of those things that I've been accused of and put this language in there, which I think is absolutely necessary, if you want your legislative body to have anything at all to do with exemptions granted to industry in this state over the next hundreds of years. "The State Board of Commerce and Industry or its successors, shall exercise the authority granted herein in such manner and under such terms and conditions not inconsistent herewith as the legislature shall provide for law"; I think it's a good amendment. I think it's one we should adopt, ladies and gentlemen. I think it's one we probably should have had in there. I think it's one had the authors of the other one had a little more time and would have thought it out a little clearer that they very possibly would have put this in there. I don't see where it's that harmful of an amendment but it does give the legislature some say-so as to what the exemptions will be; it does correct some of the inequities that we have been hearing about on this floor. Let me assure you there are a lot of them. There are a lot of inequities. I think Mr. E. J. Landry admitted very apropos, I'm from a very highly industrialized area myself where industry is granted that ten year exemption and you have absolutely no say-so about it. We are not trying to take it away from them, by the way, we are just trying to put some guidelines basically that the people can live with. I think it's a good amendment. I think we should adopt the amendment. I would ask that you give me the opportunity. Again, it's a long procedure and I tried to get it twice but was denied that right, but ask that you give me the opportunity to insert this amendment into what we have already adopted.

Questions

MR. ROY
Mr. Nunez, if I understand your amendment, does it apply to all the exemptions that we have given to churches and all or just to industrial exemptions that the commerce and industry would give?

MR. NUNEZ
Just to commerce and industry.

MR. ROY
Then, what you have done, we've passed something that's redundant with yours because that would make it so that industry would have to parade by the legislature maybe every year to get certain authorization that we are trying to put in the constitution and put them on the same footing as everybody else; wouldn't it?

MR. NUNEZ
No, sir, Mr. Roy, and the way you say parade by the legislature, if they did have to parade by the legislature, I think the state would be better off than having them parade by appointed State Board of Commerce and Industry.

MR. ROY
Well, let me see if I understand the chronology of all of this. Presently, in the constitution, commerce and industries handles industrial exemptions; does it not, in the present constitution of the state, 1921?

MR. NUNEZ
This convention has just adopted essentially what the present constitution says.

MR. ROY
But, with respect to....

MR. NUNEZ
...and, it always worked, by the way.

MR. ROY
I understand. With respect to only one area of what we have done, that is, we have granted exemptions for churches and everything else that are constitutionalized that may not be dealt with by the legislature, you are now going to turn around and say that but with respect to industry, commerce and industry, we, the legislature, are going to tell you what to do whenever we want to; isn't that true?

MR. NUNEZ
Mr. Roy, do you have the figures on what the exemptions for churches, and the very few nursing homes, and the few charitable exemptions we have granted? Do you know what they amount to?

MR. ROY
I don't know, but I know that....

MR. NUNEZ
Let me answer your question; they amount to very little. But, do you know the granting of the exemptions to the billions and billions of dollar worth of industry in this state amounts to, it's billions of dollars, exactly what it is.

MR. ROY
I understand that the portfolio of the Roman Catholic Church is in the billions of dollars too and we grant them exemptions and so many other churches, also.

MR. WOMACK
Senator Nunez, the question I have and I wondered if it ever dawned on you that the industrial people, the industrial jobs that's spending the money coming in that maybe they have a right to say, "We want just a little protection out of Louisiana in the constitution before we are ready to spend our money in Louisiana." Had you considered that in this amendment?

MR. NUNEZ
Mr. Womack, I've considered and I'm sure over the past twenty-four or twenty-five years you have been around here you must have considered it because they seem to be happy.

PROPOSALS ON THE CALENDAR FOR APPROVAL OF FINAL STYLING

Committee Proposal No. 4

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

Amendments Nos. 46 and 47

MR. POYNTER
Gentlemen, at this time there were two pending amendments, all the others have been adopted or otherwise disposed of. The gentleman at this time moves to withdraw Amendments Nos. 46 and 47 which had dealt with the location of the attorney general.

[Amendments withdrawn without objection. Proposal returned to the Committee on Style and Drafting under the rules. Motion to revert to Introduction of Proposals adopted without objection.]

INTRODUCTION OF PROPOSALS
[II Journal 1293-1294]

[Motion to suspend the rules to permit introduction of a proposal adopted without objection.]

MR. POYNTER
Now, at this time, Mrs. Zervigon is going to ask for a suspension of the rules for the purpose of introducing a committee proposal. This committee proposal is a proposal from the committee by Mrs. Zervigon on behalf of Legislative Liaison and Transitional Measures and sets forth the proposed transitional measures provision for your consideration. It would be my appreciation under the rules, since this is not an alternative, that Mrs. Zervigon will need a suspension to introduce this measure on transitional measures since the deadline has now passed. The lady would ask for a suspension of the rules for the purpose of introducing this delegate proposal on behalf of the Committee concerning Transitional Measures.

Reading of the Proposal

MR. POYNTER
A proposal then sent up by Mrs. Zervigon and others makes provisions relating to transitional provisions. Becomes Committee Proposal No. 38. Lies over under the normal rules of the convention.

Personal Privilege

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Acting Chairman and fellow delegates, I tried to get recognized about five minutes before now because I just wanted to state that Mr. Chehardy and I was behind the rail talking to Mr. Stelmel, who is back there now, trying to get our business straight with him. We got called out of order when we were out of this Chamber. But, I reagent the fact that I could not be recognized by the presiding officer or even by the temporary presiding officer and if I'm wrong, I'm wrong. But, I came to this convention by a choice of my people and as long as I'm here I'm going to try to do what I think is right. You can not recognize me or pass me by, and I don't care. I'll take my chances with the people of this state in the final analysis. You denied me, you denied me, he denied me, and just keep on denying me, but old Rayburn will be there.

Point of Information

MR. O'NEILL

Mr. Chairman, a point of information. Are these alternatives coming up in any special order?

MR. CASEY

Maybe the Clerk could best answer that in what order they would come up, Mr. O'Neill.

MR. POYNTER

Well, it would be my opinion that the convention would be sort of free to do what it wants to; presumably, you would go in the order of introduced unless someone wanted to make a motion that you otherwise handle them, Mr. O'Neill. I don't know any reason why on tomorrow a motion couldn't lie to do otherwise.

119th Days Proceedings—January 16, 1974

Wednesday, January 16, 1974

ROLL CALL

[91 delegates present and a quorum.]

PRAYER

MRS. BRIEN

First, I would like to relate a few thoughts to you for 1974. You cannot bring about prosperity by discouraging thrift. You cannot strengthen the weak by weakening the strong. You cannot help small men by tearing down big men. You cannot help the poor by destroying the rich. You cannot lift the wage earner by pulling down the wage payer. You cannot keep out of trouble by spending more than your income.

You cannot further the brotherhood of man by inciting class hatred.

You cannot establish sound security on borrowed money.

You cannot build character and courage by taking away a man's initiative and independence.

You cannot help men permanently by doing for them what they could and should do for themselves.

Now, let us pray: Dear God, our Heavenly Father, let the light of Thy divine wisdom direct the completion of this convention and shine forth in all our proceedings and laws framed for our rule and government. Protect all our state officials. Give the people of this state security to accept what not can be changed, courage to accept what they think should be changed, and wisdom to distinguish the one from the other. Protect our loved ones at home. Give all the people the wisdom to understand and let love, through honesty and integrity, flourish throughout this state. We ask You all this in Thy most beloved Son, Jesus Christ. Amen.

PROPOSALS ON THE CALENDAR FOR APPROVAL OF FINAL STYLING

Delegate Proposal No. 43

Amendment No. 1

MR. TATE

All right. While we are waiting for that, I would first bring up the stylistic changes recommended to Delegate Proposal No. 43, by Mr. Jackson, about juvenile procedures. It is a two page thing. Your green copy is blue, as you notice, and it reads from top to bottom instead of from side to side like the other ones. So, you do presto and. . .that's a joke. Thanks, Boysie.

The only amendment suggested is Amendment No. 1. It's shown on the blue copy, which is your green copy, on line 19 to delete "a" and to delete the word "vote," in line with the usual way we say "enacted by a. . ." "a law enacted by two-thirds of the elected members."

Mr. Chairman, if there is no discussion, I move for the adoption of that amendment.

[Amendment No. 1 adopted without objection.]

Committee Proposal No. 15

Amendment No. 1

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, the CP 15 amendments, the Henry-Pugh amendments, is what I'd like to call up next.

Those are those amendments that are parallel. The parallel columns are sideways. What passed the floor on this side, and what was done on this side. Now, unfortunately, we didn't notice it was done. The amendment on the next page is going to show it. There is a hyphen added between "deep" and "water" on the third line from the bottom to make it: "deep-water port commissions," like we talk about in the rest of the constitution. There's a hyphen added between "deep" and "water" on the next to the last line to do the same. There is a comma added after "harbor" in line with the usage in the rest of the constitution. Those are the three amendments that are shown by repeating the last three lines.

Mr. Chairman, subject to any discussion, I move for the adoption of that amendment.

[Amendment No. 1 adopted without objection.]

Committee Proposal No. 4

Amendment No. 48

MR. TATE

All right. Mr. Chairman, has everybody got their information copies on the Executive Proposal?

Mr. Chairman, with regard to Committee Proposal No. 15, Amendment No. 1. . . Committee Proposal No. 4—I'm sorry—the Executive Branch. Amendment No. 1 simply adds to. . . Amendment No. 48 simply adds to Amendment No. 1, the attorney general in the Executive Department, in line with your decision yesterday that he is in the Executive Branch.

Subject to any discussion, Mr. Chairman, I move for the adoption of Amendment No. 48.

Question

MR. TOBIAS

Judge Tate, I have two copies of amendments to Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 4. One does not have the attorney general and one does. Which is the correct one, because I have a xeroxed copy of something that they just passed out?

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 1 does not have the attorney general. That was the stylized as passed the floor. Amendment No. 48, which is that piece of paper behind these parallel columns on attorney general, Amendment No. 48 is to insert on Amendment No. 1, line 5 of that amendment, before the word. . . after the word and punctuation "state," and before the word "treasurer" the word "attorney general." It's Amendment No. 48 that is before you at the moment.

Do you all understand it? Amendment No. 1 you adopted the other day. We just reproduced it right now for your ready convenience and understanding of what Amendment No. 48 is all about.

[Amendment No. 48 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 49

MR. TATE

Amendment No. 49 was a stylistic amendment that was lost. It is to Amendment No. 5. Amendment No. 49 is Committee Proposal. . . Committee Amendment No. 5. You see that on your. . . the other sheet of white paper. We adopted that the other day. On line 10, after the word "each"—you see that, "of each official shall begin at noon—and before the word "official" insert the word "such," so that it says: "The term of each such official shall begin at noon on the second Monday of March." This is regarded as a good "such," at least the Executive Branch recommended it to us as a good "such."

Subject to any discussion, Mr. Chairman. . .

[Amendment No. 49 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 50

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, the next. . . Amendment No. 50 is to the amendment that passed yesterday. The instructions are a little wrong on it. It was to. . . the amendment that passed yesterday about the attorney general had already deleted Committee Amendment No. 21 and substituted the language which is shown on your left hand side of this green page—the blue page, of course—here. On the right hand side is our stylizing. Now, normally we would have put that in paragraphs. However, this is the only place in the Executive Branch Article where there would be subparagraphs. So, we departed from the usual rule in this instance, but we did consolidate into one paragraph what is shown as (B) without indentation. We made it one paragraph, but an unlettered subparagraph. I do not believe any other changes were made except a "such" was left out on the next to the last line. It says, "The attorney general shall exercise other powers and perform other duties." I believe those are the only changes made.

119th Days Proceedings—January 16, 1974

Question

MR. ABRAHAM

Judge Tate, I would simply like to point out for the record that in this particular amendment where the words, "The attorney general shall be elected for a term of four years at the state general election. The assistant attorney general shall be appointed by the attorney general to serve at his pleasure," that those. . . that particular language does not need to be in under the powers and duties because it is covered elsewhere in the Executive Article under different sections. I would recommend that the Committee on Style and Drafting correct this.

MR. TATE

Mr. Abraham, I appreciate your calling our attention to it as you did before the convention. On the final styling, which we are going to start on at noon today, the rearrangement and try to catch duplications like that and come back to the floor with stylistic amendments to eliminate duplication. We will try to do our best to do that, time permitting. Thank you very much, Mr. Abraham. We do appreciate your help in all the committee deliberations over the last months.

Subject to any further discussion, Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of Amendment No. 50.

[Amendment No. 50 adopted without objection.]

Personal Privilege

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, Style and Drafting is moving into the concluding stages of whatever assistance it may be to the convention. We certainly appreciate the collaboration of all the delegates in the work that we have tried to do. Now, the next stage is. . . the time is drawing close where we have to get on the address a final, complete copy numbered in consecutive order, eliminating as far as we can any duplication. We were going to meet. . . the Style and Drafting is going to meet at twelve noon today. If anyone has any suggestions—like Mr. Abraham just gave us an excellent suggestion about duplication that we may somehow have missed, and about the rearrangement of the article—just talk to some member of Style and Drafting. If the members of Style and Drafting will. . . you know who they are, I guess.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

PROPOSALS ON SECOND READING AND REFERRAL [II Journal 1312]

[Motion to suspend the rules to engross Committee Proposal No. 38 and pass it to its third reading adopted without objection.]

PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

[Motion to withdraw Delegate Proposal No. 99 adopted without objection. Motion to allow five minutes of explanation on each alternative proposal adopted without objection.]

Point of information

MR. THOMPSON

Mr. Chairman, I know we. . . when we opened it up, we allowed six alternates. Can this be reduced to possibly one?

MR. HENRY

We have made no provision for any number of alternates under the rules, Mr. Thompson.

MR. THOMPSON

Well, what I'm asking, then, is---we're going to hear five minutes from each one of them, which I'm perfectly in agreement with. Then, after this, would it be in order for somebody to make a motion that maybe we limit it to one, or two, or three, or would this be out of order?

MR. HENRY

It would take a suspension of the rules to accomplish that, Mr. Thompson, because we have adopted the rule that alternative provisions would be introduced and would be considered if they were introduced by today.

MR. THOMPSON

In other words, when we vote for alternates, then, we're going to vote for six or none, huh?

MR. HENRY

No, sir. You're going to take one of them at a time. You'll vote. . . we'll probably start with. . . as they are introduced, Alternate No. 77, consider that. You'll vote for or against that. Then, we'll take 98, etc.

Point of Information

MR. STOVALL

Mr. Chairman, what's the objection to taking them in numerical order and save that thirty minutes?

MR. HENRY

We haven't even. . . well, because, Reverend Stovall, somebody is going to be last on this thing. I just think in the interest of fair play that we ought to allow everybody an even break out of the chute at least to explain--five minutes--what they have.

Point of Information

MR. LANDRUM

Can these proposals be amended?

MR. HENRY

Yes. If this body decides to, there's nothing to prevent the proposal from being amended. There was--that's right--a specific provision in the rules.

We'll hear from Delegate Asseff for five minutes on his proposal.

Delegate Proposal No. 97

Explanation

MR. ASSEFF

Mr. Chairman, delegates, I assume you want me to explain what the proposal will do. I urge the delegates to listen very carefully not only to what I say, but to what the other delegates say with respect to their alternates, for in my personal opinion, only alternates can save this constitution. The decision is yours as to which alternates will appear on the ballot.

My alternate, which is Delegate Proposal No. 97, will simply do this: as you will recall, we adopted Section 22 of Article IV which provides that after a certain period of time the legislature, by a two-thirds vote of the elected members of each house, may make four offices appointive rather than elective. Those four offices are the commissioner of insurance, commissioner of agriculture, custodian of voting machines, the superintendent of education. The purpose of this proposal is to give the people a choice of approving that or defeating it. If they defeat it, then it will mean that the offices will remain elective and the legislature may not change them. That is the sole purpose, and I feel that regardless of your personal opinion that it is a crucial issue insofar as the people of Louisiana are concerned, or so the polls indicate.

Are there any questions, Mr. Chairman?

MR. HENRY

Are there any questions of the gentleman? Any questions? Does that complete your remarks, Dr. Asseff?

MR. ASSEFF

Yes, sir, if that's all you wanted me to do. I will argue it when my proposal comes up, Mr. Chairman.

Delegate Proposal No. 98

Explanation

MR. JUNEAU

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, the delegate proposal which you have before you regarding to education--that is, Delegate

119th Days Proceedings—January 16, 1974

Proposal No. 98--can be simply put in these terms: most of the bulk of the language which is in Committee Report No. 7 has not been changed except for these three modifications. Number one, we have taken the Board of Regents and have changed the composition of the Board of Regents from a fifteen appointed board to an eight - seven board--eight elected, seven appointed. We have removed from Committee Proposal No. 7 the three management boards, thereby leaving it up to the legislature if, in their wisdom, they deem it necessary to have a management board, to establish same. The third change which has been made is that we have put . . . have taken vocational-technical training and have placed that under the Board for Lower and Secondary Education and have removed that from the jurisdiction of the Board of Regents. Those are the three changes that are made in the proposal. That's what will be before you in Delegate Proposal No. 98.

So, basically what you would have would be two boards for education. Number one, one for lower and secondary and vocational training, and number two, a Board of Regents for higher education. That, very simply, is what the delegate proposal will be.

Delegate Proposal No. 100

Explanation

MR. McDANIEL

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, inasmuch as we've set the procedure for alternatives, my proposal is a rather simple one, probably one of the most simple. But, I think it is an issue that needs consideration when we consider alternatives. My proposal would simply submit back to the voters of this state the basic question that after the '76 election and this constitution is ratified, the basic decision of whether you want future governors to serve one elective term or successive elective terms. Why this question? This is essentially the one that was decided several years ago. I think it's important that this one be considered because of the wide interest, the knowledge, and the opinion that people have in this state about the top elective office. I think this is--by way of explanation--I think whether you're a pulpwood cutter in Union Parish, a black person, a white person, a businessman in the hustle and bustle of urban New Orleans, or even a soybean farmer in the Mississippi Delta, you have an opinion. All of us are interested in government and the governor. As the chief elective officer of this state, he sets the political climate, the atmosphere, that determines economic growth and the livelihood of all of us. This is a fair decision; it's simple; it's easy for people to understand; it has broad interests. For this reason I submit it for consideration.

Delegate Proposal No. 101

Explanation

MR. STAGG

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, as some of you already know from the argument on the adoption of the rule on the alternative, I am firmly convinced that some alternatives are going to be necessary to assure passage of our work on the adoption election. Most of the problem areas you've heard about have been concerned with education and with taxes. The purpose of Delegate Proposal No. 101 is to give the convention one last clear chance to make the job of campaigning for adoption of this document a whole lot easier, particularly so in the larger urban areas whose taxing methods are different from those in most of the rural parishes of the state. In the document that we passed up to this point, after fixing the fair market value of the property the assessor is directed to assess homes at ten percent of that amount and subject that to a three thousand dollar homestead exemption. In effect that that does as you have been told so often is to say to everyone who owns a thirty thousand dollar house, "You are out of the ad valorem tax paying business, and your parish school board and your parish police jury simply have to get their money from somewhere else." Where else is there? Many of the people who own those houses also own a business. Most of the people who own those houses work for some other business, and there's where the bulk of the money is supposed to come from--from business and from industry. Insofar as Mr. Chehardy is concerned and the other assessors, all that is reflected is a simple difference of philosophy. There are those who believe that homeowners do have a stake in this government of ours, and having a stake in the government, they ought to share in some of its cost. Mr. Chehardy believes the opposite to be true. I'm worried about the future of this state insofar as its children and their jobs are concerned, so I have formed an alternative which in effect states that all property in this state after the assessor shall have fixed his market value, shall be assessed at fifteen percent of value. But, it is a local option bill because it will allow the parish governing authority to go down from fifteen percent to ten percent, or to go up from fifteen percent to as high as twenty-five percent with legislative approval. But, there is a hooker to it that allows it to be constitutional. If you change from fifteen percent down, your homestead exemption will go down by the same percentage. If you change from fifteen percent up, your homestead exemption in that parish will go up. I have added one thing that the convention failed to add, and that's in Paragraph (H), which has a little bit of a push on the assessor, that if the assessor does not properly value these properties and place these ratios on them, then any revenue sharing fund for that parish will be held in jeopardy until he does. That is the curative thing that many of us felt was necessary to make the assessor do his job, and those are the effects of Delegate Proposal 101.

Delegate Proposal No. 102

Explanation

MR. VICK

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, first I want to clarify that DP 99 was withdrawn because DP 99 directed itself to the Judiciary Article where the attorney general was until yesterday afternoon, and DP 102 is the updated version to address itself to the Executive Article where the attorney general is now. This convention for good or for ill has stripped the attorney general and his assistants of the power to institute and prosecute or to intervene in any criminal proceedings as they deem necessary for the assertion or protection of the rights and interests of this state. Further, they have stripped the attorney general and his assistants of the power to exercise supervision over the several district attorneys throughout this state. Proposal 102 will submit to the people the very simple question of whether the attorney general shall retain the powers he's had since 1913 intact, verbatim, without one word changed, or whether this proposal as adopted by this convention yesterday for authorizing the attorney general to institute, prosecute, and intervene only in civil suits to protect the interests of the state, shall prevail. Now, I urged you; I implored you yesterday to read Dean Sullivan's letter, and I want to tell you briefly how that letter came to pass. There were numerous discussions--some of which I was a party to--between the attorney general and Mr. Ed Ware, the President of the District Attorneys' Association. There was not a meeting of the minds as to what the words meant in Article VII, Section 56 of the Constitution of 1921, primarily supervision, supersession, etc. The attorney general suggested to Mr. Ware that this matter be submitted to an impartial third party. I believe there was agreement to submit it to the Dean of the LSU Law School, Dean Hebert. It was then in turn given to Dean Sullivan, an expert in the field of criminal law, to give the attorney general and Mr. Ware his analysis of the Constitution of 1921, Article VII, Section 56, at least, as compared with the current proposal before the convention at that time, which was the article passed, section passed by the Judiciary. Now, yesterday there was some small change, and I'm authorized to say that Dean Sullivan's letter is not changed one iota by the changes that were made by this body yesterday. Dean Sullivan points out--and I'm going to go over this in some detail, and be prepared to answer questions when the time comes--Dean Sullivan points out that the section that was passed on the attorney general clearly reduces the power of the attorney general in criminal cases, removes entirely the authority to initiate criminal prosecution, and reduces the possible participation of the attorney general in the prosecution of criminal cases to that of advising and assisting district attorneys, as you recall yesterday, upon their written request. He states unequivocally that this represents a very significant change in the basic law of this state and the policy which had heretofore been a part of the basic laws of this state, verbatim since 1913. There's one crucial point that Dean Sullivan makes on page 4--and I have additional copies of that letter for anyone that has mislaid his or didn't get one--the crucial point on page 4, which I again urge you to read. It's his concluding paragraph. He suggests that the section as presently written would produce such difficulty in protractive litigation as to make the attorney general's power so ineffective in a practical sense as you would have perhaps a defense raised by any accused that he was denied the right to a speedy trial. I want you to envision, if you can, the two law enforcement officials squabbling in open court about who could conceivably prosecute someone and the defendant, sitting back and taking advantage of this extraordinary proceeding before him, because I would assume the accused would have to be a party or at least an observer. Then through protracted appeals, after the district court had ruled, to the Supreme Court, this could take an unknown amount of time, and when the matter was finally remanded by the Supreme Court, the accused could raise his denial of a speedy trial--and perhaps have it granted--or undue publicity, as well. Ladies and gentlemen, when I come back, I'm going to go over that letter and the points Dean Sullivan has made, as well as some observation the attorney general has. For those of you who do not have the letter, I will have the pages redistribute it. The issue in conclusion is very simple, and I don't know how many times it's been said from this podium that it's been practically said to exhaustion. The attorney general's request to this convention is: Let the people decide whether they want him and his successor in office--and I think we should remember and keep in mind it's the office of the attorney general that's involved and not the incumbent. The question before the convention is to let the people decide to authorize the attorney general to institute, prosecute, and intervene in both civil and criminal suits to protect the interests of the state, or for authorizing him only to institute, prosecute, or intervene in civil suits.

Thank you.

Delegate Proposal No. 103

Explanation

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I'll make a brief explanation of the Proposal No. 103. In the legislative article which has been adopted so far, this convention has provided that the legislature will meet in annual sessions of not more than sixty legislative days within an eighty-five day calendar period. The only limitation on that is that in those sessions which occur in the odd-numbered years no provision increasing taxes would be in order. As you know, under the present constitution the legislature meets biannually in a sixty-day, sixty calendar day, session; then in the odd-numbered years meets for thirty days in a so-called limited or fiscal session. The alternate, which I have suggested along with many other people who have signed it, is simply to provide that the legislature will meet annually for a period of not to exceed sixty calendar days. That is the only change that the alternate would make in the proposal as it is so far adopted. Now, why did I do this? I can only tell you what I believe sincerely and honestly and that is this: I don't know anybody in the general population of this state who's been agitating to increase the length of time within which the legislature may meet, to extend its sessions. I firmly believe this, and the reason for my offering and getting a number of people to sign this alternative is simply this: I have labored down here for a year, as you have. I sincerely and honestly do not want to have been engaged in an exercise in futility. I can only tell you what I believe--what I sincerely believe--not what I know, but what I believe. I believe that if this alternative is submitted to the people that there will be a substantial number of people who will vote for this constitution who will not otherwise vote for it. If they are not given that choice, I sincerely and honestly believe that there will be a substantial effort to defeat this constitution. I for one do not want to have labored in vain.

Reading of the Proposal

MR. HARDIN

Delegate Proposal No. 97, introduced by Delegates Asseff and at least thirty-nine other coauthors.

A proposal to provide with respect to an alternative provision relative to the executive branch.

Be it adopted by the Constitutional Convention of Louisiana of 1973.

Explanation

MR. ASSEFF

Mr. Chairman, delegates, the issue before this convention is not whether you prefer election or appointment of your public officials, but whether or not this is a crucial issue to the people and, by placing it as an alternate, will strengthen the passage of the constitution. That is the sole issue before you. As I indicated to you, the convention adopted Section 22 to the Executive Article giving the legislature the authority by a two-thirds vote of the elected membership of each House to make the commissioner of insurance, the commissioner of agriculture, the commissioner of elections, and the superintendent of education, appointive offices. The purpose of this alternate is to give to the people the choice of approving this section or defeating it. If defeated, these offices couldn't be made appointive by the legislature and would remain elective offices. Do remember this: The purpose of alternates is to gain friends by giving the people a choice on crucial issues. If done properly, it can save the constitution as it has done in other states. I urge you to study that; this is my specialty, not yours. What you put on alternates may save or defeat the constitution. I urge you to consider each alternate, not only this one, in the light not only of what is best for Louisiana but also whether it is a crucial issue and will strengthen the chances of adoption of the constitution. It is my personal opinion that the election of public officials is more important to the people than any other alternate that we will consider. The experts do not agree as to whether appointment or election of public officials is better. Most agree that such matters must be considered in the light of the political history of a state, and what is good in one state may not be in another. The principal arguments for it in Louisiana are that the people want it; every poll has shown that, and the governor is in fact, if not in law, one of the most powerful in the United States. It is argued--and I urge you to listen to this--that it will be impossible to obtain the two-thirds vote required to make these offices appointed. Who's kidding who? I suggest you tell that to your people and see what they'll ask you. If that is so, why include it; just leave it out. It is included because it is known that it can be obtained. Let me give you an example: I prepared address out of office resolutions for the governor in 1956 and in 1960--two on distinguished members of this convention. Very able and reputable men in office at 9 a.m. on one day were out of office on 2 p.m. on the same day. The governor obtained a two-thirds vote of the elected members of each House without any trouble. Do you know the reason the governor gave me for the address resolution? He said, "I have a popular mandate, and they will agree with me. Out they go."

A governor is the most powerful, generally, the first legislative session of his term. Many people are interested only in electing their public officials, three dollar car license plates, gambling, homestead exemptions, aid to parochial schools, and the like. They simply don't care on many alternates that we will consider. If we submit only one alternate, as many say is planned, we will kill this constitution, for we will lose friends, not gain them. I assure you, if you submit only one, you have lost all hope of any support by me. If you submit the alternates, you may gain my support which you now do not have.

In answer to Mr. Stovall's question which he always asks me, I am speaking as the representative of those who elected me and am urging you to adopt this as an alternate, and thus strengthen the chances of the constitution's adoption. All polls indicate that the people want this. This is one of the few times that I am speaking as the representative of my people. In ninety-nine point ninety-nine percent of the times, I have voted my convictions as what I thought was best, or what I thought would get this constitution adopted. In this instance, I am not speaking as an expert. I don't represent a textbook. I am speaking as the representative of the people. This is what they want. This time what I think, personally, is immaterial. Neither I nor you have a mandate to impose our views upon the people. It is their government, and I urge you to give to the people an opportunity to decide for themselves whether they wish to elect their public officials or whether they wish them appointed. I think you will find that they want them elected. In presenting this alternate, you will strengthen the chances of passage. If you want to defeat it, just submit one alternate to the people. I predict, now, for posterity that we will be writing another one in about two years.

That concludes my remarks, Mr. Chairman.

Further Discussion

MR. FULCO

Mr. Chairman, and fellow delegates, first, I'll tell you that I am for this proposal. I am for alternates. I cannot agree that if we do not have alternates, that this constitution will not pass in the coming elections. I believe as to whether or not the constitution will pass will depend on the attitude of the delegates in the presentation of the constitution to the people. If you want to kill the constitution, all you have to do is to use the famous expression, just "bad mouth" the constitution. If you feel, honestly and conscientiously, that the constitution is a good one for the people, then you will speak in favor of the constitution to everyone you meet. But, to say that the constitution cannot pass if we do not have any alternates, in my judgment, is terribly incorrect.

119th Days Proceedings—January 16, 1974

Now, the people want a choice. I agree with that very emphatically. I believe very emphatically that the people should have a choice. I know that the people do want a choice because I have been extremely active throughout this entire year in talking to the people about the diligent, dedicated, unselfish work on the part of every delegate to this constitutional convention. I know that the people do want alternates. How many? I can agree that too many would be too bad. But six, in my judgment, certainly aren't too many.

Now, let's do this. Let's give the people the right to decide whether they want four lesser state offices appointed or elected, or whether or not they want all elected. That is all that this proposal is calling for. But still, let's let the people have the choice. Not only with this alternate, but all the alternates that have been submitted to this constitutional convention. I urge you to vote alternates, to give the people a choice, and it will help the passage of the constitution. It will strengthen the possibility of its passage. But, without, I reiterate, I don't think it will kill the constitution.

Further Discussion

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, regardless of the argument for or against the election of any particular public official, or any of the several public officials that we have provided might be appointed at a later date, this is a critical and crucial issue. It is of primary and paramount importance and interest to the people of this state. As you know, when we made the decisions and put the provision as it now stands in our proposed document, some of these decisions about which officials would be elected, and which would be appointed, these decisions were made overnight, behind closed doors. The decisions--the announcement of the decision the next morning came as a surprise to people. We were under great pressures. We did not have time for cool and calm contemplation and reflection. I think that this is very important to the people of this state. The people of Louisiana are perfectly capable of understanding what the issue will be on the ballot. They are perfectly capable of making this decision. It is not a complicated matter like the tax structure of the state. They can look at that ballot, and they can know whether they want to elect or appoint....

Mr. Chairman, I wish to goodness you'd tell these lobbyists up in the balcony to sit down and take their seat. We've had them with us day after day.

MR. HENRY

We are glad to have the people with us there in the balcony, but would ask that you please hold down on the talking and help us maintain as much order as we can. I ask that you have a seat, if you would, please.

Proceed, Mrs. Miller.

MRS. MILLER

Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Thank you, many of the delegates who are paying attention.

I do feel that this is an issue that the voter can go into the ballot box. They can see this proposal on the ballot. They are....every voter will be able to make this decision whether they want to have appointed or elected delegates. It's not a complicated issue. It is one that addresses attention to the heart of every person, every voter of this state. I don't think that we, as a hundred and thirty-two elected and appointed delegates, should deprive the voters of the opportunity to make this selection for themselves.

I do urge you to support this proposal. I feel that it will be a popular proposal on the ballot with the people. Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. STOVALL

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise to speak in opposition to this alternative provision which has been presented to us by Dr. Asseff. The first point I want to make is that the provision which we presently have in the article for the executive branch is, and was, a compromise between the different points of view. We arrived at that compromise after considerable debate and discussion. It was generally accepted by this group. Since it was accepted, there has been no great effort on the part of the people of this state to change it. I think what we did was a reasonable compromise.

The second point I want to make is that the present procedure is democratic. We do not change the offices from elected to appointed. We simply give the power to the legislature after 1976. This means that the people will still have input if the decision should be changed. We are at a good place. I suggest we leave it there.

The other point I want to make is that we do not want to clutter the constitution with a large number of alternative provisions. I think that this is an unnecessary alternative provision. I think it would be well for us to keep the number to one or two. Therefore, I suggest to you that we reject this alternative provision.

Further Discussion

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Chairman and delegates, this is one of the issues that was talked about in District 102 more than any other issue in this convention. This is the issue that I had more calls on. This is the issue that I had a resolution for before they decided that they would have to get forty votes. The other day, when our governor spoke, he used the expression that "this bitter cup should fall from me." There are two bitter cups. There is a bitter cup that Jesus had to take, not of His own creation. There is a bitter cup that we will have to take, of our own making. I hope that we won't do that today. If we should vote against the alternative, of whether our elected officials will be appointed or elected, I can assure you it will be a bitter cup. I have never stood before this podium and said to you that I would support, or I would be in opposition to a constitution--a new constitution. I say to you today, whether I support it, or whether I don't, I don't belabor whether it will fail or pass. But, I will say to you this: I have not made up my mind. I'm going to look in this package when it's all over, and I'm going to see if any of the important things that the people from my district wanted, and if it's not there, I am not in a popularity contest. It can go up, or it can go down, because what difference does it make if you receive a beautiful package and it's nothing in there for you?

So, I say to you--and I don't want to take up too much of your time. I want to give everybody a chance to say whatever they have to say. I'm going to ask you to support this. Let the people decide what they want. This is a time that we should do it. I wish it were possible that every proposal that we had written, that each person would be able to see it and decide whether they wanted it or not. But, we are going to have to send and give to the people, a piece of material with many flaws. We are going to have to say that you are going to buy it at a high price whether you like it or not. In many instances when you buy material, if there is a flaw in it, you can get a reduction. The going price is high, and we are going to have to pay the full price for it all. So, I say to you, support this, and some other issues that have been crucial to me. I might appear before you again. I ask you to support the Asseff proposal.

Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, with all due respect, I urge that you reject this particular proposal. As many of you know, the proposal as it presently exists in the proposed constitution, was the consequence of a great deal of debate and discussion among the delegates. As it presently exists, it represents a compromise that was reluctantly accepted, I think, by both sides. I'm sure all of you realize the posture that we are in and that is that the statewide officials are all elected, except for those that we completely eliminated from the constitution. We have, I think wisely, left to the legislature after the next statewide elections, a mechanism by a two-thirds vote whereby the appointment of certain officials can be made.

Now, ladies and gentlemen, the governor of the state campaigned, and almost everybody else campaigned, in the last governor's race to reduce the number of elected officials--statewide officials. Now, we haven't done that. I think, perhaps, wisely. But, we have for future generations, afforded the opportunity whereby the legislature in extreme circumstances, and by an extreme vote, could make a change, and could change back by a similar vote if the legislature thought it was necessary. I urge that you leave what we have done in the constitution as a fair compromise, and let that be one of the articles that is submitted to the electorate.

I urge that you defeat the recommendation that this proposal be placed on the ballot as an alternate proposal.

Thank you very much.

Questions

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Gravel, do you believe if this went on the ballot as an alternative, whether it would win or lose?

MR. GRAVEL

That it would lose?

I don't really know. I think that we've provided, Mrs. Warren, the mechanism that is necessary for the people in Louisiana. I think that a lot of alternatives, of course, could be submitted to the people. But I don't think this one should be submitted.

MRS. WARREN

I can understand it because you are against it. But, I mean, what is wrong with letting the people decide when this was a well-debated issue. At one time, it was made elective all the way. Now, so you say compromise. The best compromise really would be to let the people decide since this was such a great issue, wouldn't you think?

MR. GRAVEL

Well, I'm just as...content, Mrs. Warren, to stay with the provision that lets the legislature, by a two-thirds vote, you know, make the determination in the future.

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Gravel, did you know, as much as I have debated this issue, if the people decided that they wanted it, that the legislature could provide for the appointment of our elected officials, I would be happy?

MR. DUVAL

Camille, the way we have it now, isn't it so that the article is flexible enough so that the people, through their elected representatives, can have their way one way or the other in the future? Isn't that right?

MR. GRAVEL

That's correct. Absolutely.

MR. DUVAL

Thank you very much.

Further Discussion

MR. ULLO

Mr. Chairman, members of the delegation, it has been quite a lengthy period since I've been before you. I hadn't planned on talking this morning. But, after seeing the various speakers come before you, I felt like the proponents of this were running rather short. So, I thought that it was very important that I come before you.

The governor of this state mentioned to all of us in his speech last week, that he was very, very sensitive to the people of this state. Well, I want all of you to know that I feel I have that complete sensitivity in touch with the people, like the governor. I want all of you to know that I speak in behalf of the greater majority of the people of District 84, which I represent, that they would continue to like to have their officials elected. I never thought, and never will think that it is in the best interest of this body to make the decision to do away with these positions, or put them in the hands of the legislature, that they can be done away with by a two-thirds vote. Certainly, there was a lot of debate. As I can recollect, one day we made a complete--there was an overwhelming vote in favor of continuing the elected position. The following day, there was a complete reversal. I don't feel at the present time, that the two-thirds provision is an adequate compromise as far as the people of this state is concerned. I believe this alternate proposal will greatly enhance the passage of this constitution and take away another albatross that possibly could be dangling around our necks. Please, I hope and pray in behalf of all the people of District 84 that you vote to place this alternate on the ballot and let the people make that final decision.

Further Discussion

MR. STINSON

Fellow delegates, just a minute. This is the main issue that my people are concerned with. They want elected officials. I don't think we are necessarily satisfied with what we have on the two-thirds, because I think that a governor can get in, and especially the first session of his election, can change it with a two-thirds vote. They usually can control it. I think it's too important to leave it up to the legislature. It should be set forth as elective in the constitution. If we are going to have alternates, I'm not necessarily in favor of any, but if we are, this is one that I think certainly should be on the ballot at the time they vote because you know--suppose--an appointee is only as good as the person who makes the appointment. So, if the governor makes the appointment, we'll have some good appointees when we have good governors. When we have bad governors, we're going to have bad. Let's don't take the chance. It's too important. Let's make them all elective. Leave them as they are at the present time. Thank you.

Further Discussion

MRS. BRIEN

Mr. Chairman, delegates, I don't like to come up here because it makes me shaky. But, I have to tell you this. If you say this constitution be not passed if they have no alternative proposals, I think you are wrong. Did you ever try to bring voters to the polls for election? You most have to pull them out of their houses to go and do their duty. Yes, they also have many interested people. They are the ones who elected you, to ask that you write a good constitution. So, please think about alternate proposals, very good, then write a constitution for all the people. When anyone knows we cannot come up with a perfect one, but, we will have a much, much better one than we have now. In comparison with the old constitution, we will have a perfect constitution.

Further Discussion

MR. DREW

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in support of this alternative that has been proposed.

Let me go back to a little bit of the discussion that was had in this convention when these officers...offices were made elective. Then, because of the division of this own convention--our own convention--as I recall that proposal did not receive enough votes to be adopted. Then, the present proposal was brought back later and adopted, in an attempt to get the proposal adopted. Now, during the period of those discussions, you heard from several people on several occasions, that the legislature already had this power insofar as certain offices were concerned.

Now, let me call your attention to Article V, Section 1 of the existing constitution. It does provide that the legislature may consolidate. Ladies and gentlemen, it uses the word consolidate. It says nothing about making appointive certain specified offices in Section 1. But, then, when you move over to Section 18, it names these offices and says "they shall be elected." So, the only reasonable interpretation of those two articles, sections of articles, are that as long as those offices existed, they would remain elected, but that the legislature under Section 1, would have the authority to consolidate, not make appointive, to consolidate which would, in effect, amount to abolishing the office.

You heard the argument that if, since the legislature has had this authority since 1962, I believe, when these amendments were adopted, why hasn't it done it? Because it was a question of abolishing these offices, not making them appointive. This is a very important question to the people at the present time whether they are right, and the fact that they may not fully understand the import of Section 1 of this article, they do feel like that they are guaranteed in their right to elect the state offices that are contained...are covered in this alternative proposal. It is very important because they feel like they have that right now. Well, all we are doing by this proposal is giving those very same people the right to say we are willing to relinquish this right upon certain conditions which you have proposed.

There is one other question that I raised that I have not been able to satisfy myself on. Maybe someone in the convention can fully explain it to me, but as I read the committee proposal as it now stands, it refers to after the 1975 elections. I do not know that whether or not a candidate who has been elected and has not taken office, has any vested interest in that office. We have been told time and time again that this could not take effect until 1980 by virtue of that provision. If they do not have a vested interest in that office prior to qualifying and taking office, there is nothing to prohibit a special session of the legislature between the 1975 elections, and May of 1976 with the date in which the state officers take their office, and possibly make them appointive during that interim period. Maybe that's carrying it far, but

I am not satisfied in my own mind it cannot be done.

I would ask you to support this. The people have enjoyed the privilege of electing offices. I think they have a right to participate in government to the fullest extent. I think whether we do it with limitations or without limitations, when we take that right away from them, we have taken away one of the sacred rights that the people of this country enjoy. I ask your support of the alternative proposal.

Further Discussion

MR. GOLDMAN

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I'm not here to suggest how you vote on these, but I'm here to talk about the philosophy of the alternatives. I think it's very important that we have alternatives on the ballot in order to give the people a chance to participate in the democratic process. It's my feeling that we should allow all of these six alternatives on the ballot. By saying that, I don't mean that I'm for or against the alternative. I may be for what's in the constitution now, and not for the alternative. But, I do believe that we ought to give the people a chance to voice their opinion. Now, the point has been made here that these hundred and thirty-two delegates were elected by the people to come here and make the choice for them. I'd like to point out one thing that I believe. I believe that these people who were elected as constitutional convention delegates, were elected not to make the choice for the people, but were elected to deliberate and present, and promulgate ideas for the best governance of the State of Louisiana. When there might be two different philosophies on the same basic idea, the people have a right to choose between those two. I don't think we were elected to come here as dictators to the people. I don't think that because we give them a choice on alternatives that we're not doing our duty, or we haven't done our duty because we only gave them one way to do it. I think in these particular six alternatives there are two ways. I think the people ought to have a choice of which way they would rather have it done for themselves.

Amendment

MR. HARDIN

The Kean amendment reads as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, delete lines 22 through 27, in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"The proposed constitution will include provisions by which the legislature, by a two-thirds vote, may provide for the appointment of the Commissioner of Agriculture, Commissioner of Insurance, Commissioner of Elections, and the Superintendent of Public Education unless a majority of those voting in this election vote for the following alternative proposal.

[ ] 2A. FOR requiring the election of the Commissioner of Agriculture, Commissioner of Insurance, Commissioner of Elections and the Superintendent of Public Education instead of the provisions in the proposed constitution.

Explanation

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I raised this issue at this time because I think it is one of the serious questions to which we have to address ourselves in connection with these alternative proposals. One of the other serious questions that we have is the manner in which the alternative proposal is going to be considered in relation to the proposed constitution itself. I think it has to be made abundantly clear that the alternative proposal has to receive a majority of those voting in the election, voting on the alternative proposal. I think it should further be abundantly clear that the alternative proposal is "for" some thing and not simply a "for" or "against" situation where it's running against itself in so many words. My amendment would simply provide that in lieu of the proposed language in the proposal, No. 97, by which this alternative proposal will be voted on that we would provide in simple language that if a majority of those voting in that election desired to have these particular public officials elected rather than appointed, as provided in the original document, if under those circumstances they have a right to do so by voting for this particular amendment. I submit to you that this will go far in solving some of the various tricky legal questions which can be raised in the absence of some clear provision such as this. I certainly share Mr. Avant's comments made earlier. We've spent a year in the process of developing a document for submission to the people of this state. I think we would be remiss to place these alternative proposals on the ballot in such a manner as to raise serious legal questions concerning the meaning and effect of those alternative proposals and, in effect, which could, in the long run, create a question concerning the validity of the document itself. This particular proposal is taken in substantive part from the alternative propositions which were offered in the Montsna elections. It seems to me that this proposal clearly reflecting that a majority of those who vote in the election must vote in favor of the alternative proposal and must vote "for" requiring the election, rather than for a confused "for" or "against" proposition would go a long way in clarifying what is being presented to the people by the alternative proposal and more importantly would go a long way in my mind to relieve any legal question that might arise if we try to do it differently.

Questions

MR. WEISS

Delegate Kean, in speaking to Secretary of State Wade Martin, I understand that you may not place on a ballot only a proposition for something; you must also vote "against" or "for;" is that correct?

MR. KEAN

I don't agree with that, Dr. Weiss. As I appreciate Act 2 of '72, it may well be necessary for this convention to prescribe the manner in which the election procedures will be handled. It may well be necessary for us to adopt some resolution to that effect. I think if this convention says that these alternative proposals shall be considered on a fair basis and under those circumstances that would be the procedure that would be followed. You're certainly not going to find anything in the election laws of this state that relate to this question.

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Kean, in relation to your amendment, is it not possible that the secretary of state could place on the ballot "FOR 2A" or "FOR 2B", so that the average voter would have a clear-cut determination of which he was voting for?

MR. KEAN

As I understand your question, Mr. Dennery, you're talking about having a 2A which says "FOR the election of the commissioner" and "2B FOR the appointment of the"....

MR. DENNERY

In effect, yes. I don't care whether which is A or which is B. But, you have written in there that if you adopt the constitution you have adopted....2A, let us say, and if you prefer 2B, you vote here. But, you don't give him a clear-cut choice then between the two is my point.

MR. KEAN

Well it seems to me that here we are saying that what's in the constitution will be the law, will be the body of the constitution unless a majority of those voting in this election vote for this particular alternative and that clearly states the issues, I believe.

MR. DENNERY

Now, that would include anyone who voted primarily against the constitution?

MR. KEAN

That's correct. I don't see how we can deny anyone the right to vote both on the constitution and on the alternative.

MR. ASSEFF

Mr. Chairman, I don't have a question. I simply want to say that I agree with Mr. Kean's amendment; it will clarify the matter and I do accept it. Thank you.

Point of Order

MR. ABRAHAM

For a question of the Chair and a point of order. Of course, this commission has not decided how these various propositions will be placed on the ballot. I would ask the ruling of the Chair if in voting on this particular thing won't we be establishing, in effect, how this proposition will be placed on the ballot?

MR. HENRY

Give us a little time to look at this rule again. All right. Mr. Abraham has raised a point of order as to whether or not the manner in which the amendment is set out is in keeping with the rule that we adopted relative to alternates. It's the opinion of the Chair that the way the amendment is drafted inasmuch as it does not allow a vote "for" or "against" an alternate and inasmuch as the remaining proposals for alternates have been introduced with "for" or "against", that we are going to be setting a precedence that if we adopt this and the others are adopted "for" or "against", we're going to be, in effect,

119th Days Proceedings—January 16, 1974

adopting some alternatives and some inclusions or some exclusions on the basis of the way this amendment is drawn.

Mr. Flory, why do you rise?

Point of Information

MR. FLORY

Are you saying that this section is not amendable?

MR. HENRY

No, sir. I'm not saying it's not amended, I never said that at all, Mr. Flory.

MR. FLORY

Well, you say that....I thought I understood from your remarks that you inferred that the amendment was out of order.

MR. HENRY

I believe that the amendment, in all probability, is out of order, not because it is an amendment but because of the way that it's drawn and because the other proposals; and I think it was the idea of this convention that alternatives would be put on the ballot so that people could "for" or "against" the alternatives and this is not the way that this is drafted, sir.

MR. FLORY

Could you point out to me the rule that says that you have to have "for" or "against" in it?

MR. HENRY

I think that's more or less set out by implications in the rules, Mr. Flory, but if you will give me just a few minutes.... All right. Mr. Avant, why do you rise?

Point of Order

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman, I do not want to lightly argue with the Chair on what you seem to....clearly is a point of order insofar as the rules of this convention are concerned. But, I would like to point out something to the Chair which I consider is a matter of law under the terms of Act 2 which is the act of the legislature that brought us here. If I would be permitted to do so, I would like to point out something to you in Act 2 which I think, in my humble opinion, is directly contrary to what you have just indicated.

If you will refer to the booklet, which we have....in Section 9 of the act and coming down into the second paragraph it says "The election shall be held and the results shall be promulgated under the general election laws of the state." Now, it's the next sentence that I direct your attention to: "All electors duly qualified to vote in this state at the time of the election shall be entitled to vote without regard to party affiliation in their respective party"--now, listen to this--"on the proposition for or against adoption of the constitution and on the question or questions of adoption of such alternative provisions as may be proposed by the convention." Now, if you've got to vote "for" or "against" the alternative, why didn't the act say "for or against the adoption of the alternatives" instead of changing the language and getting away from the "for" or "against" when they talked about the alternatives?

MR. HENRY

Mr. Avant, your point, perhaps, to some extent is well taken. If you will give me just about five minutes....about three minutes to look at this thing....

Point of Order

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Chairman, I would like to raise this point of order. We have not yet adopted the proposal. I do not think that it's orderly to proceed to discuss amendments of the proposal until the convention adopts it. Now, as I recall it the other day, we provided clearly in the rule that when any proposal was accepted by this convention then it would be subject to amendment. My point of order is, is that we cannot and should not be considering amendments to the proposal until a determination is made by the convention that the proposal is accepted.

MR. HENRY

Mr. Gravel, I would have to say that you're incorrect because we provided that "these proposals could clearly be amended." I think we would be locking the hands of the delegates of this convention that they would almost have to take a pig in a poke in certain instances, that's like saying that the proposal on the Executive Branch of state government would have to be adopted before any amendments could be offered. I don't....that's not my intentions. I will have to rule that you are out of order.

MR. GRAVEL

Well, my understanding, Mr. Chairman, I certainly abide by your rules, was that that was the purpose of the rule as amended that we adopted the other day.

MR. HENRY

That's not the appreciation of the Chair.

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman, I'd ask leave of the convention to withdraw the amendment which I previously submitted in order to re-submit a new amendment which will include a "for" and "against" the proposal.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. HARDIN

The new Kean amendment reads as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, delete lines 22 through 27, in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"The proposed constitution will include provisions by which the legislature, by a two-thirds vote, may provide for the appointment of the Commissioner of Agriculture, Commissioner of Insurance, Commissioner of Elections, and the Superintendent of Public Education unless a majority of those voting in the election on the proposed constitution vote for the following alternative proposal.

[ ] 2A. FOR requiring the election of the Commissioner of Agriculture, Commissioner of Insurance, Commissioner of Elections, and the Superintendent of Public Education instead of the provisions in the proposed constitution.

[ ] 2B. AGAINST requiring the election of the Commissioner of Agriculture, Commissioner of Insurance, Commissioner of Elections, and the Superintendent of Public Education and permitting their appointment as provided in the provisions of the proposed constitution.

Explanation

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, the original amendment, as submitted, simply calls for a vote "for." It was my position under those circumstances that you had an alternative by voting for the constitution and not voting for the alternative proposal to thereby say that you were against the alternative proposal. However, it's been pointed out to me that in other instances there have been alternative proposals....or where there have been alternative proposals that they've always had either a "yes" or "no" or "for" or "against" proposition. Now, under the circumstances I have added an "against" so that you would have the opportunity on the alternative proposal of not voting at all or voting "for" or "against" the alternative proposal. I've also corrected the provision in the heading of the language to make it clear that it would require a majority of those voting in the election on the proposed constitution voting on the alternative in order for it to pass. It was quite correctly pointed out that if this constitution was presented in a general election rather than a special election for the sole purpose of considering the constitution, you could have some confusion as to what would be the required majority. Under the circumstances, it seems to me that if we say that we're talking about the election on the proposed constitution it makes it clear that it would take a majority of those who vote in that election voting for the alternative proposal in order for the alternative proposal to be approved. I believe with those corrections that we fill in and adequately state the matter to be presented to the people and afford them an opportunity to clearly decide whether or not they wish to retain what the proposed constitution provides or go to the alternative proposal.

Questions

MR. CONROY

Mr. Kean, I'm trying to be sure I understand what your proposal would do with regard to the number of people it would require to approve this alternative. If you had four hundred thousand people vote for the constitution and three hundred thousand vote against, would those three hundred thousand who voted against the new constitution be allowed to vote for the alternatives under your proposal?

119th Days Proceedings—January 16, 1974

MR. KEAN

Yes.

MR. CONROY

Even though they voted against the constitution? Now, a failure to vote on the question of alternatives under your proposal would be the same as a vote against; is that correct?

MR. KEAN

David, as I read it, yes; that's correct.

MR. ROY

Mr. Kean, just so I fully understand the new constitution, as presented, would have the...what we have already done with respect to the work; right, like the two-thirds vote after '76 that will be in the new constitution and the document itself? So, that if a citizen chose not to vote at all on any alternatives, in essence, he votes for what's in the document; right?

MR. KEAN

That's correct.

MR. ROY

Good.

MR. KEAN

In other words, I...I'm looking at the sample ballot...or the official ballot which was used in Montana and it contained, first of all, for the proposed constitution and against the proposed constitution. Then, it had language substantially the same as the heading on this proposed amendment, then it followed with the alternative proposals "for" or "against." Now, they did in one instance in the Montana proposal use "for" and "for." But, I think "for" and "against" is the preferable approach to it.

MR. BURNS

Mr. Kean, I didn't quite understand a question and your answer just now, so I'll ask mine. In the event that a person voted in favor of the constitution and didn't vote on any alternatives, if they are on the ballot, that wouldn't affect that vote.....

MR. KEAN

I would say that would be an "against" vote because.....

MR. BURNS

Against the constitution?

MR. KEAN

No, against the alternative.

MR. BURNS

Pardon me.

MR. KEAN

Against the alternative. In other words, if he voted for the constitution and did not vote "for" or "against" the alternative, I would say that that would constitute an "against" vote for the alternative....against the alternative.

MR. BURNS

All right, but not the constitution?

MR. KEAN

No, because you would have to have a majority of those voting on the constitution in order to pass the alternative. Therefore, anybody who didn't vote on the alternative was really an "against" vote.

MR. BURNS

...because I think you will agree with me there's going to be a lot of people...voters go in there that are either going to vote "for" or "against" the constitution and walk out, and they aren't going to vote on the alternatives one way or the other.

MR. KEAN

That's correct.

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Kean, I have two questions to ask you, one is: As I understand Act 2 it says "you have the right to vote for an alternative," it doesn't say anything about against. Now, you just are interpreting or interpolating from that that you should have a clear-cut "for" or "against" a particular alternative with just a general description of what's in the constitution which would be replaced by that alternative; is that correct?

MR. KEAN

I lost you on the last part, Moise.

MR. DENNERY

I say you would still have on the ballot a short description of what is contained in the specific article in the constitution so that the voter would have the opportunity to choose between what is in the constitution and an alternative. Now, the second question is really two questions. As I understood it, if you don't vote "for" or "against" the alternative, it would not invalidate your vote; is that correct?

MR. KEAN

That's correct.

MR. DENNERY

Do you think, though, that if you...would you believe that you could vote "for" or "against" the alternative and not vote "for" or "against" the constitution?

MR. KEAN

I think that would be entirely possible. In other words, I don't think we can deny the voter who goes into the voting booth the right to vote either on one proposal or the other. I think if he goes in he can vote, if he wants to on the constitution, and he can vote on the alternative, or he can vote on one or the other.

MR. DENNERY

Now, did you say that in one of those instances in the Montana ballot that there was a "for" and "for"?

MR. KEAN

There were three alternatives on the Montana ballot assuming that what I have here is a copy of the official ballot. The first alternative was a "for", "for;" the second two were "for" and "against."

MR. DENNERY

Now, the "for", "for" really gave you two alternatives to what was in the constitution or what?

MR. KEAN

Apparently, there was an unicameral provision in the constitution. No, apparently, there was not any provision in the constitution with respect to the makeup of the legislature and, therefore, the No. 1 alternative said "for an unicameral one house legislature" "for a bicameral two house legislature" and they.....

MR. DENNERY

So, the voter had a clear choice, then?

MR. KEAN

Then, you had a clear choice, the majority won.

MR. DENNERY

Don't you think that's the best way to do it, to give the voter a clear choice which way he wants?

MR. KEAN

Well, the problem we got here, Moise, is that we've got in the constitution certain provision with respect to some of these... some of the matters that the alternative proposals are dealing with. I'm certainly not in favor of taking those out and making those proposals bend to the item that you are going to vote for in one instance or for something else in another instance.

MR. DENNERY

I understand your point, and I think your.....

MR. HENRY

The gentleman has exceeded his time unless we give him some more minutes to answer questions; you might as well give him five because we've got a lot of people that want to ask questions.

MR. DENNERY

Well, my last question is don't you think it is less confusing as far as the voter is concerned the way you had your amendment drawn originally so that you were given a clear-cut choice between what is in the constitution and to vote for an alternate proposal? Don't you think it will confuse the voter to have that "for" or "against" down there?

MR. KEAN

Well, your question goes to the very reason I drew it the way it was to begin with, there seemed to be a substantial number of the delegates and the comments by the Chair indicating that they preferred a "for" or "against" proposal and that's the reason I changed it.

119th Days Proceedings—January 16, 1974

MR. McDANIEL

Mr. Kean, in the simplest form isn't what you're really trying to assure, that whether the constitution as written or the alternative, whichever is favorable, is that the view of the majority of the people voting is really what we are trying to work for?

MR. KEAN

That's correct, Mr. McDaniel. I'm more interested in the preamble if you want to call it to this particular proposal which would require and make certain that it would take a majority of those voting in the election on the constitution for any alternate to be approved. I would not want us to be in the position because I think it's not the position we want to be in. I think it would probably raise serious legal questions of having a situation where a hundred thousand people just...to use numbers would vote on the constitution and twenty-five thousand would vote on the alternatives. Then, out of that twenty-five thousand, thirteen thousand would vote for the alternative, twelve thousand against and you end up with a plurality of those voting on the alternative or in the election perhaps carrying the alternative and that's the primary objective of my proposal. I don't care how we set it up "for" or "against" or "for", "for" or what you want to do. I think we've got to make it clear that it takes a majority of those voting in that election to carry any alternative proposal.

MR. MUNSON

Mr. Kean, you really got me confused as to how we're going to tabulate the vote. I believe you said in answer to Mr. Burns a few moments ago that a person who voted for the constitution and didn't vote at all on the alternate would be a vote against. . . it would be a vote against the alternate. How are you going to count the vote?

MR. KEAN

Well, my point is, I was talking only in practical terms, Mr. Munson, because if you got to carry the alternate by a majority of those who vote in the election on the constitution, then if somebody votes for them the constitution and doesn't vote on the alternate, it really amounts to an against vote so far as the alternate is concerned because you're reducing the number of people who are voting on the alternate.

MR. MUNSON

What would you do in a case if the constitution failed and alternate passed?

MR. KEAN

Oh, I think if the constitution fails, that everything fails.

MR. MUNSON

Well, it would seem to me that since you've changed yours from for and against that the vote on the alternate should be just tabulated on those ballots not on whether a person voted for or against the constitution.

MR. KEAN

Well, it doesn't matter how they vote on the constitution so far as this ballot is concerned, and you wouldn't calculate the vote on this ballot, Mr. Munson.

MR. MUNSON

Well, that's what I thought, but then you said a moment ago though a vote for the constitution on a person who didn't vote on this at all would be counted as a vote against the alternate.

MR. KEAN

Well, the reason I said that was that if you require that there be a majority of those who vote in the election on the proposed constitution to carry the alternative proposal. . . if a lot of people don't vote on the alternate proposal that in effect reduces the chances of its passage. That's my point.

MR. SINGLETARY

Mr. Kean, I'm looking at Mr. Asseff's a proposal and his (2) (A) permits appointment. Your (2) (A) does not. Your (2) (B) would permit appointment so it seems to me that your amendment. . . your (2) (A) should be (2) (B) and your (2) (B) should be (2) (A).

MR. KEAN

I think that's a good point, Mr. Singletary, and I think it's one that we're going to have to look at as we go through the rest of these because if we're really saying that what we're offering is what the convention has adopted and that is and now we're coming with another alternative that we ought to be for and against as you suggest.

Motion

MR. BURSON

I move that we do whatever is required including, if necessary, a suspension of the rules to pretermite two questions at this time. To pretermite the precise form in which the alternative proposals will be put on the ballot and to pretermite the question of the majority that will be required, because I believe we need to consult with the attorney general and with the secretary of state on these two questions. I believe we know what the issues are involved in these alternatives and I think we can decide whether we want to consider those issues as alternatives separate and apart on the form which they would appear on the ballot.

MR. HENRY

All right. Mr. Burson, you listen to me now to make sure I got your motion. You're just. . . simply stated, are you just moving that we don't determine the majority required to. . . number one, you're moving that we determine first of all what alternates will be placed on the ballot?

MR. BURSON

That's correct. In other words, . . .

MR. HENRY

Then once we do that if there are alternates. . . if this body decides to place alternates on the ballot then that we determine after consultation with the attorney general, secretary of state, etc., the manner in which they should be placed on the ballot and the majority by which they will be adopted?

MR. BURSON

That is correct because each one of these alternates, as I see them, has some variation in the proposed form that would go on the ballot and I don't think this convention should be married to one form or the other until we've checked it out fully and know what we're talking about.

Point of Information

MR. AVANT

I object. . . to voice an objection to Mr. Burson's motion for a suspension of the rules and to ask of the Chair if that is a debatable motion?

MR. HENRY

Well, in my opinion. . .

MR. AVANT

Or his motion to pretermite?

MR. HENRY

I don't think it would require a suspension of the rules. I believe. . .

MR. AVANT

I mean the motion to pretermite.

MR. HENRY

All right, sir. In my opinion the motion would be debatable, Mr. Avant.

Further Discussion

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates. Now, I have always tried from this podium to say exactly what I mean and I'm certainly going to do that here. I think we all know that the proponents of one side or the other primarily on the education question have their own pet ideas of how the thing ought to be placed on the ballot. I'm sure that in the minds of both sides they're being fair to the other side. But, what we've got to try and do is be fair to the people of the state and I don't think that we can reach that determination in the midst here of deciding whether we're going to have the alternatives at all or not on a specific issue because the politicks of the convention, the politicks of the competition that we have over the particular issue may lead us to make a mistake in the form that we submit to the people and thereby I think confuse them and obstruct the chances that we have of getting this constitution, which overall I think is a very fine one, getting passed. I don't think we want to do that. The secretary of state has sent all of us a letter asking for consultation on this matter. I don't think we ought to make a final decision on the form that these things would go on the ballot on until we discuss it with him because he's got to set up the machinery. Secondly, the attorney general should be consulted on the thing. My own personal belief is that you need an overall majority for the thing to become part of the constitution, but I don't know what the law is on it. I think we ought to find that out and we ought to consider that question calmly and soberly all apart from the particular issue that we're discussing here. That is the reason why I made the motion that I've made. I'll answer any questions that anyone has.

119th Days Proceedings—January 16, 1974

Questions

MR. FLORY

Mr. Burson, isn't it true though that you can't do that because you delay the convention making that decision because you don't know what to put in the body of the proposal until that decision is made?

MR. BURSON

No, I don't think that's true. The alternates that we have seen today all involve decisions that have already been made in the body of the proposal and would seek to some extent or the other to undo them. So, I think we're covered there. We have a complete constitution as we stand right now. If we didn't, it would be a different matter.

MR. FLORY

No, my question, Mr. Burson, is, how do you determine the verbiage that goes into the contents of the alternate proposal without knowing how it's going to appear on the ballot under the rules?

MR. BURSON

Well, under our rule that we adopted, you set those two things out separate and apart anyway. So, all I'm asking for here is that we simply pretermitt the determination of how it appears on the ballot. Under the alternate rule that we adopted you had to prepare that separately anyway from the alternate itself.

MR. KEAN

Mr. Burson, as I read Committee Resolution No. 13 which provides for alternate proposals, it sets forth in rather precise language what shall be specifically stated in the proposal. Item No. 4 says the "text of the ballot proposition on the alternative." Now, how can we separate out that particular requirement and decide on what the rest of it is going to be without suspending the rules of the convention?

MR. BURSON

Mr. Kean, I think purely and simply it says that you have to submit the text. I don't disagree with you at all there.

Further Discussion

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in opposition to Mr. Burson's motion for this reason, I think and would respectfully submit to you that what we're talking about now is the most . . . and probably the most important decision that we're going to have to make in this convention insofar as the ultimate fate of this document is concerned. When I say that I'm assuming that perhaps the convention has determined that maybe at least one alternate is going to go on the ballot. Well, I have been for the last week studying his act and trying to come to some definite conclusion as to what the proper manner and procedure and vote required in this particular area is. Now, I submit to you it is now twelve o'clock on the 16th day of January and at twelve midnight on the 19th day of January it's going to all be over with. Now what good is it going to do us to stay here and argue and debate, I believe, six alternative propositions and decide which one we want, which ones we don't want if we can't ever agree on the manner and form in which those propositions are going to be submitted to the people and what vote is going to be required for the adoption of any such proposition. It seems to me that you are strictly getting the cart before the horse because I want to tell you and I ask anybody in here to sit down and read Act No. 2 and I particularly invite the attorneys in here to sit down and read Act No. 2. Whatever you do on this you more or less are going to be engaged in a guessing game and believe you me if you don't guess right, if you don't guess right and you put one of these alternative propositions on this ballot then you have killed the entire document because there's no way it can stand. If you don't comply with Act No. 2, and get it on there in the way that the Supreme Court is ultimately going to say that it had to be put on there and if you don't decide that question and decide it first, then you're wasting your time debating six alternative propositions. It seems to me that Mr. Burson's motion is strictly putting the cart before the horse and the first thing we've got to decide is, can we safely and assuredly place one of these propositions on the ballot and be sure that we have done it in the proper manner and in accordance with Act No. 2 and that we have not by doing so jeopardized one year's work and several million dollars of the taxpayers' money. So, I think that that is the first question that we've got to decide, and for that reason I urge you to vote against Mr. Burson's motion.

Further Discussion

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, I think that we're getting into nothing, but maybe a big filibustering effort. We're going to get to the point where we won't have anything. I move that we limit debate on this particular issue to a half hour.

[Motion to limit debate on the Burson motion to thirty minutes. Substitute motion to limit debate on the motion to fifteen minutes adopted: 68-31.]

Point of Information

MR. FLORY

I want to know if this fifteen minutes is coming out of that two hours Mr. Asseff had for this proposal?

MR. HENRY

I really hadn't thought about it that way Mr. . . . are you suggesting that we do that, Mr. Flory?

No, I'm keeping the time on the thing. None of this other business has come out of Mr. Asseff's time, Mr. Flory.

Point of Order

MR. WILLIS

Well, I was curious in your response to that inquiry by Mr. Flory. It seems to me that was the amendment that precipitated the matter, so that in the interest of time which is most precious, may I suggest to you that you might reconsider your opinion.

MR. HENRY

I'll reconsider it, Mr. Willis; take your seat.

Further Discussion

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I'm going to be brief. I think what we are dealing with here as was previously pointed out is one of the more important aspects of this whole area of alternative proposals. I don't like to say I told you so, but I got up and argued originally for the submission of these alternative proposals to committees in hopes that we could get some of these particular matters ironed out before they came up for floor discussion. I don't have any objection to consulting with the attorney general or the secretary of state or anyone else who can shed some light on this matter, but I vigorously oppose any separation of the manner of presenting the proposal from the proposal itself because I think that the manner in which the proposal is to be presented on the ballot can have a significant bearing upon the vote which I might cast with respect to some or all of these alternative proposals. I'm going to be quite candid with this convention and tell you that the major thrust of my amendment is to make abundantly clear that it takes a majority of those voting in the election on the constitution to carry an alternative proposal, so we run no risk of someone urging that you could have an alternative proposal adopted by a plurality. Now, beyond that point I have no particular feeling about how we present the for or against or two "fors" or one "for" whatever may be the best way of presenting it intelligently to the voters of this state. But, I am concerned, greatly concerned that unless we have a Preamble such as we've set forth in this amendment which prescribes and makes clear without any ambiguity or doubt that it takes a majority of those who vote in that election to pass an alternative proposal; I think we make a serious mistake to consider these alternative proposals. I say to you if we want to recess this convention and send Mr. Burson or Mr. Pugh or a committee or whatever you want to have to go over and confer during the noon recess with the secretary of state and the attorney general and come up with the best stylistic arrangement of these ballot proposals then that's fine. But, I don't see how we can sit here and say that we're going to pretermitt the question of how the matter is put on the ballot and then intelligently vote on the proposal itself because I'll tell you right here and now if there's any question, any question or any suggestion that less than a majority will vote. . . have to vote in order for the passage of an alternative proposal, I think that we do violence to the democratic process and we raise a serious legal question that jeopardizes the whole constitution. Under those circumstances, I object, I oppose Mr. Burson's proposal, not because I don't understand the . . . I understand perfectly his desire to move ahead and his desire to get this matter properly considered by people who ought to consider it, but I think it goes too greatly to the manner in which these proposals will be presented to the voters and the vote that will be required to carry them for us . . . at this time.

For that reason, I object to Mr. Burson's proposal and if someone wants to sit down in the noon recess and try to resolve this matter, I'm available to do it.

Further Discussion

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I support the Burson motion and let me give you some reasons why. The first thing we've got to decide is whether or not we're going to have alternatives, and I hope we do. If we don't have any alternatives, then we're discussing and wasting a lot of time about nothing as to how we're going to submit them. After we determine that we will have alternatives, then we can determine the method by which they will be submitted and I would like to say to you that there are several different methods by which an alternative can be placed upon the ballot. I have been discussing that with a number of the delegates, with the Chairman, and some of the others and I think that after we determine what alternatives will be submitted we can come up with something reasonable so that the people will have a knowledgeable choice of how they are going to determine what alternatives will go into this constitution if it's adopted. As I see the situation, every individual walks into that voting machine and votes on the constitution and other alternatives we have ought to have a choice. He ought to be able to vote on the constitution or against it as he sees fit. He ought to be able to vote on the alternatives the same way. He should not be forced to vote for one or the other in order to make his vote count. We don't do that in elections except when we have multiple people to be elected; I don't see why we should do it now. I think that we can determine that particular issue at the time when it comes up. So, let's first determine whether or not we're going to have alternatives and what alternatives we're going to have and then decide what method that they will be submitted to the voters. I ask you to vote for the Burson amendment. Let's save some time by doing that because we could get into a long argument on each proposal as to how it's going to be submitted, and I don't think we ought to do that at this particular time. I ask you to support the Burson motion. I might say in closing on this particular matter that all Act 2 said, and I believe Mr. Avant said we ought to read it with reference to the proposal on alternatives was to the effect that "at the discretion of the convention it may propose to submit at the same time such alternative provisions as it deemed appropriate. The constitution is drafted by the convention together with any alternative provisions proposed shall be submitted to the people for their adoption or rejection." That's all it says with reference to alternatives so it's up to us to decide how we're going to submit them.

Questions

MR. KEAN

Mr. De Blieux, as I understand your position you want to take up these proposals and decide how we're going to present them later, is that correct?

MR. DE BLIEUX

We ought to decide whether or not we're going to submit them alternatives.

MR. KEAN

Well, would it make some difference . . . wouldn't it make some difference to you in whether or not you voted on some of these alternatives as to what vote would be required for them to pass?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Kean, I don't think that's up to us to decide by what vote. That's going to be to the people on how to decide what votes is going to pass an alternative. Insofar as I can see it, if no more than three people voted for the alternative--two of them voted for one and one voted the other--the one that got that two votes would pass.

MR. KEAN

In other words, it's your position then that if an alternative . . . if only three people voted on the alternative and a hundred thousand voted on the constitution, and the vote was two to one on the alternative that the alternative would pass even though a hundred thousand voted for the constitution?

MR. DE BLIEUX

That's correct. If . . . whichever alternative received the larger vote; that would be my opinion.

Further Discussion

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I support Mr. Burson's motion because I believe that we're talking only about the determination of a method and procedure whereby alternates will be placed on the ballot. One of the principal reasons why I support it is because there are at least eight or ten knowledgeable, competent people, delegates to this convention who have different ideas about how this should be accomplished. It may be that all or some substantial part of the suggestions that they make would be legally acceptable. All we're doing by adopting the motion suggested by Mr. Burson is to leave the method and procedure aspects with respect to an alternate on the ballot to a determination with the secretary of state with the attorney general after we know exactly what alternate or alternates we're going to propose. Therefore; I think, in the interest of proceeding orderly and effectively, that we should pretermitt as suggested by Mr. Burson and that his motion should be adopted.

Questions

MR. BURNS

Mr. Gravel, Senator De Blieux said something just now that kind of disturbed me. In these alternatives that are placed on the ballot, for instance, like Mr. Kean's, that refers to a certain section of the proposed constitution--say that the constitution itself is approved by a hundred thousand majority, but an alternative to the constitution which is contrary and in conflict with that particular section of the constitution only passes by two thousand majority. Does that mean that alternative would be adopted or does it have to receive a majority of the total votes cast?

MR. GRAVEL

I can't answer that on that score at all because I don't know . . .

MR. BURSON

Yes, but don't you see . . .

MR. GRAVEL

. . . Mr. Burson, because I don't know how the ballot will be constituted, and I think that's one of the things that we need to do. But, I think that any attorney or anybody knowledgeable about elections will agree that the best way to fashion an alternative is to decide just exactly what the proposal is and until we've done that I can't. . .

MR. WEISS

Delegate Gravel, aren't we just being expedient in deciding this matter at this time and later can always vote down the proposal on the final vote as decided by the convention and the committee who has neglected to resolve it?

MR. GRAVEL

In other words, I think that after we've determined which alternates we want on the ballot that then we should determine with respect to that alternate, or alternates, how it should be placed on the ballot. I do think we need to consult with the secretary of state and with the attorney general on that.

MR. FLORY

Mr. Gravel, could you explain to me, under Committee Resolution No. 13, how your motion or the motion of Mr. Burson could be applied without suspending the following language: "Such a proposal shall state specifically (1) the text of the alternative, (2) any deletions or presently adopted paragraphs or sections or the like, (3) the effect of the alternative if adopted by the people in terms of additions to and deletions from the body of the proposed constitution and (4) the text of the ballot proposition on the alternative"? Now, you tell me how we can adopt Mr. Burson's motion without a suspension of this rule.

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Flory, I don't want to invade the province of the Chair. I suggest you direct that to the Chairman, who I think has already answered it.

MR. FLORY

Well, my second question to you, Mr. Gravel, is: how can I determine what goes in the body of a proposed alternative, if I don't know how it's going to appear on the ballot?

MR. GRAVEL

All that Mr. Burson's motion does is to leave the method of submission--method of submission--to future determination by this convention. It does not do violence to any concept that would be in any proposal at all.

119th Days Proceedings—January 16, 1974

Point of Order

MR. KEAN

Is not Mr. Burson's motion, in effect, a motion to suspend the rules?

MR. HENRY

In the opinion of the Chair, it is not inasmuch as after having looked and the clerk having looked at the proposal introduced by Delegate Asseff, it is in compliance with the rule which this convention adopted the other day. The question that Mr. Burson has put before this body is that we pretermit the question of final styling and drafting as to the manner in which these propositions--if they are adopted--are going to be placed on the ballot, and the required number of votes for adoption of the same. Therefore, it is not a suspension of the rules.

Point of Order

MR. FLORY

Mr. Chairman, I refer you to page 2 of the Committee Resolution No. 13, item number four, where it says that "the alternative proposal shall contain the text of the ballot proposition on the alternative" and tell me how you can pretermit that issue without making that determination or a suspension of the rules.

MR. HENRY

There are a lot of ways that a proposal can contain the ballot proposal on the proposition. It just appears that perhaps they don't all contain the same style and form, Mr. Flory. It's just as simple as that.

[Motion to defer action on the style, form, and vote required on alternative proposals adopted: 92-17. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Recess

[Quorum Call: 85 delegates present and a quorum.]

MR. HENRY

Mr. Kean. Is Mr. Kean in the. . . Mr. Kean, in view of the Burson motion, it would appear that your amendments, now, are out of order. So, do you desire to withdraw the same?

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman, I just thought it was going to float around up there somewhere until we got back to it. Do I have to withdraw it and then reoffer it? Is that. . .

MR. HENRY

Well, in view of the motion that was made by Mr. Burson and adopted by the delegates, I think your amendments are out of order, Mr. Kean.

MR. KEAN

I was going to suggest they be put on the calendar.

MR. HENRY

Well, you can't put amendments on the calendar. Do you want to withdraw the amendments?

MR. KEAN

I withdraw it with the clear understanding that I. . .

MR. HENRY

What I thought I'd do, Mr. Kean, is if the. . .with leave of the convention delegates, I will appoint a committee to work this afternoon and tomorrow with the secretary of state, the attorney general, the custodian of voting machines with respect to the problems that were to be taken up and we discussed in the Burson motion. I would appoint a committee of Mr. Dennery, Mr. Conroy, Mr. Pugh and you, Mr. Kean, to try to help resolve these problems.

MR. KEAN

Well, that--you know--I'll be happy to serve on the committee. I didn't intend, by worrying about my amendment, to get on it.

MR. HENRY

When you talked with me there before lunch. . .I think in all. . .

MR. KEAN

Well, my point is, Mr. Chairman, is that if we're going to adopt these matters--these proposals--or reject them, whatever may happen to them, I don't want to find myself in a position where we now come back and say you can't offer amendments because the thing has already been adopted. That's all.

MR. HENRY

We're coming back at some point and discuss the way these should be put on the ballot.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Further Discussion

MR. O'NEILL

Mr. Chairman, delegates, I want to rise briefly to speak in favor of the proposal cosponsored by over fifty delegates and is relative to the Executive Article. You know, of the ten constitutions that have been put to the voters over the past fifteen years or so, the only constitutions that have passed have been constitutions that have had an alternative to offer the people in some area of some great interest. We had put on our desk, today, the ballot from the Illinois constitutional convention which was on the ballot at that time. On that ballot, there were questions of great interest insofar as the people were concerned. The death penalty was on the ballot. Those are the kinds of questions that draw voter support, and bring voters to the polls, and make them vote, and make them have the psychology of wanting to adopt the constitution so that the alternative they vote for is included in that constitution.

I ask you to look at the proposal in the light of what it does, but more importantly in the light of the votes that it could probably draw for this constitution. I would say without much hesitation that the overwhelming voter support will be to elect these officials. I think in keeping with that that the people will want this alternative in their constitution, and I think that they'll want to have that choice clearly stated by an overwhelming vote. The governor admitted as much the other day.

There are many other questions on alternatives that we can have before us and decide, but I think this one is one that could help draw votes to this constitution, help sell it over the next few months, and probably not be nearly as splitting up and losing support as any other alternative could be. This one would help gain support. I ask you to please help gain the sixty-seven votes necessary to put it on the ballot.

I'll be happy to answer any questions.

Point of Order

MR. KEAN

A point of order. In voting on this particular proposal, for or against it, what is the status of this Section I that relates to the manner in which it would be placed on the ballot?

MR. HENRY

According to the rule adopted by the convention on last week, or whenever it was, we vote on the whole proposal. If there is some question as to style and drafting or style of. . .the way it should be put on, we're going to determine that, Mr. Kean, as a result of what your committee is going to recommend to us.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Point of Order

MR. LEIGH

Rule 45 of our rules provides that when a proposal is up for third reading and final passage, "it shall be read, debated and acted upon separately by sections and each section shall be considered." I rise to ask: how can we consider Section 2 or adopt the Section 2 or adopt the proposal in the absence of Section 1 which is in abeyance at the present time? I don't follow that.

MR. HENRY

Mr. Leigh, we adopted a rule--I don't know whether you were here the other day--with respect to alternative propositions. I direct your attention to--I don't know what the number of the rule is that we've adopted--it's 37.1 which rule in Paragraph (A) states, and I read as follows: "All proposals setting forth proposed alternatives shall lie over for convention action on January 16, 1974. On that day, there shall be put to the convention the question of the final passage of each such proposal." That's what we're doing. That supersedes the rule of "section by section."

119th Days Proceedings—January 16, 1974

MR. LEIGH

. . .Does that supersede Rule 45?

MR. HENRY

Yes, sir, it does.

MR. LEIGH

Well, then are we voting now on simply the alternative? What are we voting on? What is the vote on now?

MR. HENRY

Right now you are voting yes or no on committee. . .or the Delegate Proposal No. 97 which would propose an alternate with respect to elected statewide officials.

MR. LEIGH

Well, let me ask you one further question?

Section 2 relates to the adoption or nonadoption of proposition 2A which refers back to Section. . .they refer back to the Section 1, as I see it--to the procedure. What I'm getting at is I don't see how we're going to vote these. . .this proposal in the form it's in at the present time in the posture that we're in.

MR. HENRY

Well, Mr. Leigh, I think we are voting right now on the concept. . .Mr. Leigh, I think what we are doing now is voting on the concept as contained in Dr. Asseff's proposal--whether or not we want to place an alternative of this nature on the ballot, or whether we do not want to. If we do, then we've yet got to work out the mechanics by which and in which that alternative or any other alternative will be placed on the ballot. So, what we're voting on now is the concept. We're going to determine, later, the style and the manner in which and the vote required to adopt such alternative proposals.

MR. LEIGH

So, we are not voting on the precise language that's in here, just the concept?

MR. HENRY

You are voting on the precise concept that's in there.

Point of Information

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman, what time did you say that this committee that you appointed to confer with the attorney general and the secretary of state was going to report back to the. . .

MR. HENRY

I'm hoping that they will be able to report back to us tomorrow, Mr. Avant.

MR. AVANT

All right. Now, then after you said that, you said, of course, the rule provides that we're going to finally vote on all these alternatives today?

MR. HENRY

No, sir, it doesn't.

MR. AVANT

It doesn't?

MR. HENRY

No, sir, it doesn't. I think, under the rules, we could. . . if we don't. . .are not able to get to all of them today, we can complete the rest of them tomorrow or Friday.

MR. AVANT

Well, as I recall that--I may be wrong; I don't have it in front of me but you said something about Style and Drafting--and then as I recall that thing, Style and Drafting has got to be back in here by noon, tomorrow finished with all that business.

MR. HENRY

Well, it says that the Committee on Style and Drafting shall report not later than noon tomorrow on anything that's referred to it.

MR. AVANT

Oh! I see.

MR. HENRY

I think we understand one another, Mr. Avant.

MR. AVANT

Yes, I really think we do.

MR. HENRY

Mr. Avant, take your seat, please.

Point of Information

MR. WEISS

Just a point of information. As I appreciate this, there is room for reconsideration, is that right, when we reintroduce the proposal? For example, if this is accepted by the body today, then if the phraseology is not to the liking of the body of the convention, it can be voted out at the final passage. Is that correct?

MR. HENRY

No, sir. No, sir; you are not correct.

MR. WEISS

It is not correct?

MR. HENRY

What we're going to have to determine. . .we may not put any alternates at all on the ballot. If we do put some alternates on the ballot, then this convention is going to have to decide the form, the style, the manner in which these alternates are going to be placed on the ballot, Dr. Weiss.

MR. WEISS

Then, we are not voting on the delegate proposal per se, but rather the concept. Is that correct?

MR. HENRY

That's correct.

MR. WEISS

Would you define. . .

MR. HENRY

We're voting on the proposal, yes. But, this convention may determine to place whatever proposals are adopted in a different form on the ballot, sir.

Point of Information

MR. FLORY

Just a slight point of information, Mr. Chairman. I'd like to know just what rules of the convention we're operating under.

MR. HENRY

Operating under the rules that were adopted by the convention throughout the efforts that we've made here, Mr. Flory.

MR. FLORY

On what day?

MR. HENRY

Well, I would suppose on January 12, 1974.

MR. FLORY

I understand that you. . .in an answer, I think, to a question Mr. Leigh raised where under Rule 45 it says that each proposal shall be considered and voted on section by section, you said that was superseded by the rule adopted last Friday on 37.1. Is that correct?

MR. HENRY

I would rule that it is. Yes, sir.

MR. FLORY

Then you also, then, if that's true, then the only thing that applies to the adoption of an alternate proposal is 37.1?

MR. HENRY

In my opinion, by and large, yes.

MR. FLORY

Well, then would you tell me how you could draft an amendment to one of the alternate proposals? Do you draft it by section or just can you draft it to the whole article, the whole proposal?

MR. HENRY

I'd have to rule, Mr. Flory, as I saw each amendment presented, but I couldn't just give you a blanket rule. No, sir.

119th Days Proceedings—January 16, 1974

MR. FLORY

Well, how do we know what to operate under then, Mr. Chairman.

MR. HENRY

Because I don't know what the amendments are, and we're going to just proceed step by step, Mr. Flory.

Point of Information

MR. HERNANDEZ

Did . . . I understood you to tell Mr. Kean, a few minutes ago, that he could offer an amendment after we got this information from the attorney general and the secretary of state. That being true, if we can offer amendments, we might be for a proposal at this time. It could be so amended we would not be for that.

MR. HENRY

I didn't state. . . I don't believe I did, Mr. Hernandez, that anyone could offer amendments after we have adopted this proposal. What I was trying to get across to Mr. Kean is that we're going to have to determine, number one, whether or not we're going to adopt any of these proposals which would require the placing of alternative propositions on the ballots. If we adopt one or all six of these, then we're going to have to decide the style and the form that these will be placed on the ballot. That's when we're going to discuss that, and that's when it will be discussed. But, as far as once Proposal No. 97 is adopted someone coming in and offering an amendment to it, no sir, that would not be possible without going through the mechanics of reconsideration, suspending the rules, etc.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Thank you, sir.

Point of Information

MR. AVANT

A point of information, Mr. Chairman. I have in my hand a document that I found on my desk, and it purports to be Committee Resolution No. 13 which I think we adopted the other day. Section (C) of that reads in part as follows: this thing that I have here says, "Each proposal"--speaking of these alternate proposals--"receiving a favorable vote of sixty-seven delegates shall be adopted and shall be referred to the Committee on Style and Drafting. Every proposal shall be subject to floor amendment. Not later than twelve noon"--and this is (D)--"January 17, 1974, the Committee on Style and Drafting shall report each proposal referred to it to the convention."

I just want to know: is that a rule that this convention adopted?

MR. HENRY

Certainly it is, Mr. Avant.

Point of Information

MR. KEAN

I am concerned because this proposal contains a Section 2. It seems to me that if we now vote on this proposal with Section 2 reading as it does, and it got sixty-seven votes--and I don't know whether it will or not, but assuming it did--then, how do we get that proposal back up for some reconsideration of Section 2 without suspending the rules? What my motion would be, if I were permitted to make it, would be that for the purpose of considering Delegate Proposal No. 97 we delete Section 2 awaiting further consideration of the question of how you put it on the ballot.

MR. HENRY

I would suggest to you, Mr. Kean, that we'll handle it just like we've handled everything else. That we'll leave the motion to reconsider the adoption of this proposal pending, or hanging, or whatever you will, and if there's overwhelming sentiment of this convention to come in and make such changes, then certainly we'll be able to.

Closing

MR. ASSEFF

Thanks, Mr. Chairman. I'm beginning to wonder if I know what we are going to vote upon. I want to remind the delegates that we are not voting on pretermittting, interdicting or recommitting, but rather on the proposal as to whether or not DP 97 will be placed on the ballot as an alternate proposal. It's always my luck to get stuck with everything. The purpose of alternates is to gain friends by giving to the people a choice on crucial issues. If done properly, it can save the constitution as it has done in other states. It is the one alternate that will gain friends and not make enemies. All polls indicate that the people want to elect their public officials. This proposal lets the people decide whether they want to elect their public officials or whether or not they want to leave it to the legislature to make them appointive. It is said that let the representatives of the people decide. I am going the delegate who said that, one better. I want the sovereign people who are the source of all power to decide. Since this is a democracy, we should let the people decide, since it is their government, and it is crucial to them. This is one of the three times, delegates, that I am speaking as the representative of the people who elected me. Generally, I have voted as I thought best. Regardless of what I think personally, I have no mandate to impose my views upon the people and neither do you. I came to Baton Rouge some forty years ago, and I have spent the entire time writing about, teaching and working in government. I am considered a governmental expert. It isn't often that I feel strongly about anything, but I do about this. If I am willing to violate every governmental principle that I feel important to let the people decide what they want, surely you must realize the importance that I attach to this and the passage of the constitution. It isn't always easy to do your duty, but in this instance, I am doing it. It is my personal opinion that the alternate will strengthen the chances of the passage of the constitution. I am not speaking as a textbook or as a governmental expert, but as the representative of the sovereign people. It is their government and their decision to make. Neither I nor you have a mandate to impose our views upon them. I urge you to let the sovereign people decide. The governor said to do what will sell this constitution. I think this will. I knew the governor as a student and also as a Senator, and I think highly of him. I think he will agree that we ought to place alternates on the ballot which will strengthen the passage of this constitution. Believe me, delegates, it's in grave danger of defeat unless you submit sufficient alternates to satisfy the dissident groups in this convention, and I happen to be one of the dissident groups.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'll be glad to answer any questions.

Question

MR. GRIER

Mr. Chairman, is this an automatic record vote?

MR. HENRY

Yes, sir. It would be an automatic record vote.

MR. GRIER

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Point of Information

MR. MCDANIEL

For some of us that are not constitutional lawyers, tell us what's red and what's green and what's maybe so that we're voting on.

MR. HENRY

Well, if you want to vote for this proposal, you vote green. If you want to vote against the proposal, you vote red. If you don't know how you want to vote, Mr. McDaniel, you just don't vote at all.

[Proposal rejected: 53-52. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Proposal

MR. POYNTER

The next proposal is Delegate Proposal No. 98 introduced by Delegatea Henry, Gravel, et al.

A proposal to provide with respect to an alternative provision relative to education.

Explanation

119th Days Proceedings—January 16, 1974

MR. JUNEAU

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, the alternate proposal which is before you was briefly discussed by me in the opening comments. Let me reiterate what changes this proposal makes in Committee Proposal No. 7 which was adopted by this convention.

The basic two-board concept is retained with these exceptions. No. 1, with...regard to the board of lowering secondary education, we have taken from the Board of Regents those responsibilities relating to vocational and technical training, the thought there being is that those functions are more properly aligned with the lower board; that those functions have been historically administered by the department of education. Under the proposal as you now have it, the head of the department of education is the superintendent of education. To my knowledge, the overwhelming response from the representatives who were involved in heading up these institutions of vocational-technical and training feel that it should be under the lower board other than that one exception, or that one change, there has been no change, and I repeat, no change whatsoever, with regard to the lower board.

Secondarily, we have made a change, and this is, I think, very significant, in the composition...of the Board of Regents. Committee Proposal No. 7 provides that the composition of the board will be by fifteen appointed members. This proposal before you changes the composition of that board to eight elected and seven appointed. The intent here, of course, was to coincide with what I think was a strong feeling on this floor that some representation from elected standpoint is indicated, not only in the lower board, but also in the higher board.

Thirdly, and probably the one that receives the most attention, is that relating to the management boards. The proposal which you have before you has deleted from Committee Proposal No. 7, any and all reference to the establishment, positively, of management boards. I relate thereto to the LSU Board of Supervisors, the Board of Trustees, and to the Southern Board of Supervisors. There is nothing in the latitude as built into this alternate proposal that the legislature can establish management boards.

Ladies and gentlemen, very shortly, very briefly, these are the changes. There are no other changes in the act saving except one thing that someone mentioned to me awhile ago that I neglected to mention. In fairness I'll tell you this. In the Board of Regents as presented in Committee Proposal No. 7, it also referred to career education. In discussing this matter at length in detail over a long period of time with educators throughout this state, I've been advised that career education is not limited to secondary education; it is not limited to higher education, but, it goes through the spectrum of lower education through the doctors' degrees. Therefore, we left that matter, not specifically referred to one or the other, but could be assigned by legislative act as it would be appropriately put to the aspect of education being dealt with at the time.

Very simply, then, the entire proposal that you had adopted by this convention remains intact, save and except for the items I just mentioned to you. I will, of course, yield to any questions.

Questions

MR. KEAN

Mr. Juneau, did I understand you to say that this proposal leaves the legislature in the position of being able to create management boards if it wishes to?

MR. JUNEAU

That's my understanding, yes, sir.

MR. KEAN

Well, then, how do you arrive at that conclusion?

MR. JUNEAU

There's a no...if you'll notice there are provisions in here relating to the Board of Regents which are retained with regard to what mechanism you have to go through, Mr. Kean, to get a management board. That is, it has to go through the Board of Regents. They make their recommendations. Then, it's considered by two-thirds vote of the legislature. I retained... they can vote on it by two-thirds vote of the legislature to establish that...I retained those provisions as they appeared in Committee Proposal No. 7. There is no language in there to preclude the establishment of a management board. Therefore, by the preliminary power of the legislature they can do it. The mechanism by which they do it is provided in this proposal.

MR. KEAN

You are referring, I take it, to Paragraph (D) 3, on page 4. As I appreciate that, the legislature could not act with respect to a management board unless it had a report from the Board of Regents, could it?

MR. JUNEAU

That's absolutely correct, Mr. Kean. That's the same language as you find in Committee Proposal No. 7.

MR. KEAN

But, it talks here about the creation of a new institution or a management board. In the old section, we've got management board, so we were simply talking about a device in the old section by which you create some more management boards. Here, you have no management boards so we now have a prohibition against management boards, unless it comes from the Board of Regents, doesn't it?

MR. JUNEAU

That's right, sir. I'm putting all schools...all schools... I stress, Mr. Kean, on the same level which was not true in Committee Proposal No. 7 because of the two-thirds provision in the mechanism you saw. I merely adopted the philosophy of Committee Proposal No. 7 as to how they wanted management boards established. Apparently, the committee felt that you have to go through the Board of Regents. I accede to that. They said that they ought to have to go to the legislature and get a two-thirds vote, I acceded to that.

MR. KEAN

But, my point is, Mr. Juneau, that the substantial difference between your proposal and Committee Proposal No. 7 is that in Committee Proposal No. 7, there was some management boards. The authority that was in (D) 3 was related to additional management boards.

Now, what you are saying is that in order to have any management board, it has to go through this process. It takes a two-thirds vote of the legislature to accomplish it.

MR. JUNEAU

That's exactly correct, Mr. Kean.

MR. KEAN

Now, what happens under those circumstances to the existing board of supervisors at LSU should this be adopted?

MR. JUNEAU

You would...under this proposal, you would have no management board.

MR. KEAN

Well, in effect, contrary to the provisions of Act II, you would terminate the terms of office with the board of supervisors?

MR. JUNEAU

Well, I think Act II says that you couldn't effect the present terms of those people in office, as I appreciate the terms of that act, Mr. Kean.

MR. KEAN

It refers both to elected and appointed, doesn't it?

MR. JUNEAU

Sir?

MR. KEAN

It refers both to elected and appointed, does it not?

MR. JUNEAU

That's correct, sir.

MR. KEAN

Well, my question is then, under your proposal, what happens to the board of supervisors?

MR. JUNEAU

That board would be phased out pursuant to the provisions of Act II established by the legislature.

MR. KEAN

In other words, if this passed, then the board of supervisors would continue in effect for some period of time until the last member of that board ended his term. It might continue with just one member under those circumstances?

119th Days Proceedings—January 16, 1974

MR. JUNEAU

Those are the provisions of Act II. That's my appreciation. That's right, Mr. Kean.

MR. KEAN

Well, I was just trying to find out what your proposal does. So, we could end up with a one man board of supervisors at LSU until the last fellow served out his term?

MR. JUNEAU

As Act II reads, that is correct.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Mr. Juneau, I just wanted to pose this question to you so that for the record....if we were to pass this deal, you agree with what was done this morning, or what the Chair said, that we are by no manner agreeing that Section 1 as stated, we are voting for that, sir?

MR. JUNEAU

Unquestionably correct. I agree with you.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

We are not voting for it as it is?

MR. JUNEAU

That's right. Absolutely correct.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Abraham, do you have a preference, sir?

All right. The gentleman sends up amendments, the first set affects page 2. Abraham amendments beginning on page 2. The amendment reads as follows:

Amendment 1, on page 2, line 29, after the words and punctuation "schools," delete the words "post secondary, vocational" and a portion of the word "technical." At the beginning of line 30, delete the words and punctuations, the rest of the word "technical schools," and insert in lieu thereof the word "and".

Explanation

MR. ABRAHAM

Ladies and gentlemen, I have two amendments. They are companion amendments. The effect of one is to delete the words "post secondary vocational-technical schools" out of one.... particularly on one page, and reinstate it in another. But, the net effect is to put vocational and technical schools back under the Board of Regents as proposed by Committee Proposal No. 7.

Let me tell you why I feel that vocational-technical training should be under the Board of Regents. My profession originally was as an engineer. I spent twenty years in the refining business. For some twelve or thirteen of those years I was chief engineer, or superintendent of maintenance instruction. I worked all these years with machinists, pipe fitters, electricians, mechanics who worked with their tools. Throughout all these years, I....in talking to these people, many of them would say that, "I don't want my child to have to grow up doing the same thing that I did. I want my boy to go to school to become this or that." My answer always was, what is wrong with the work that you're doing? It's an honorable profession. There is nothing wrong with it. But it seems that we have, through the years, have brainwashed our children that it is a disgrace to work with their hands. They must get a college degree. Whether they are qualified to do anything else or not, they must have a college degree. The results as I have observed, is that we've got a lot of children in college who really do not want to be there; who would much rather be out working with their hands....

....For years, I have been a strong advocate of vocational-technical training. But, I've been an advocate at a higher level than what it has been known as. I don't want them called "trade schools." To me, a person who goes through vocational-technical training should come out just as.... with just as much prestige and status as a person who has a college degree. I think that one of the best means that we can use to give this type of training the status that it should have, is by placing it at the college level. We not only will give it status, but I think, also, we will eliminate a lot of problems we've had with high school drop outs. A person will feel that after he's gotten his high school diploma, then he is able to go into something from there. He will feel like he has gained something.

I think it's only a matter of time that whether we have managing boards, or whatever we may have, there is going to have to be a certain board, or whatever you want to call it, to deal with this particular problem. For years, the trade school concept has been lumped in with other forms of education. It's been a step-child. I think we need to take it out from there. There are many colleges in this country that work on this concept. They have programs where you can go to the college, or the vocational school, you work a period of time, you receive courses which are along the.... at the college level. They may go one semester to school, and they may work in industry for one semester. If I remember correctly, Senator Williamson's study group, I don't know whether they actually recommended this type of thing, but this is one of the things that they found.

The committee that handled the education article, I feel, was strongly convinced of this. That's why they put vocational training under the Board of Regents, and at the higher educational level, because I think the time is coming when we are going to have to get this particular phase of our lives out of the trade school concept, and into a concept where it does have some significance, some status, and where an individual, when he gets out of high school, then, will be able to move on to a vocational school and feel like he is doing the same thing as going to a college. That is the effect of my amendment. I'm simply trying to take it out of one particular position where it's under the superintendent of education, the state board for elementary and secondary education, and the companion amendment will place it under the Board of Regents. I am not quarreling with the delegate proposal as such, as to whether we should accept it or reject it as an alternate on the ballot. I am saying that if it is going to be accepted, this is where vocational training should be.

I will yield to any questions.

Questions

MR. GINN

For my own benefit, does the state board of education favor this, or would they be opposed to it, or just....I don't know. Could you help me out there?

MR. ABRAHAM

I don't know how the state board feels on this particular thing. I'm sure that they have appeared before the Committee on Education that's made a study of this, but I don't have any feeling on their opinion on it.

MR. A. JACKSON

Mr. Abraham, aren't the children you are talking about oftentimes youngsters with deficiencies in the basic tool areas?

MR. ABRAHAM

Not necessarily, Mr. Jackson. Sometimes they may be. I agree with you there.

MR. A. JACKSON

Well, aren't the children you are talking about, youngsters who make up a large percentage of the drop out problem that we have?

MR. ABRAHAM

No, I don't agree with that. It's not a large percentage. There is a percentage.

But let....I know what you are leading up to, but let me say this. This could very well work for those students who did not want to go on and finish high school. Many of these places have provisions for these students to continue and get their high school diploma while they are doing this. But, they are still in an elevated status when they come out.

MR. A. JACKSON

Well, since they aren't interested in finishing high school, don't you think it would be better to have them receive their experiences, and have these experiences coordinated at the secondary level rather than at the post-secondary level?

MR. ABRAHAM

No, because I think this gives them something to work for.

MR. AERTKER

Mr. Abraham, under your proposal, it would represent a substantial decrease in the authority and the power of the present state board of education if you put it in the Board of Regents. Right?

119th Days Proceedings—January 16, 1974

MR. ABRAHAM

Yes, it would. We have changed...completely changed the concept of the present state board of education...on either proposal.

MR. AERTKER

Well...your...wouldn't your knowledge and experience of various state boards of any kind indicate to you that they would be against having something taken away from them that would decrease their power and give it over to another board? Have you ever seen one that wanted to have their power lessened and some other one increased?

MR. ABRAHAM

That's correct. I've never seen one who in any way wanted to have his powers decreased. So, I would assume that that's probably why they are opposed to this.

MR. NEWTON

Mr. Abraham, did you know that all, or most of the vo-tech people were here yesterday and today, and they want to be under the board of supervisors? Did you know that most of the state board of education, and did you know that most of the college presidents have been here, and they are agreeable to that?

MR. ABRAHAM

Well, I don't know if most of them wanted it. But, I do know of one who feels the same as I do that they should be at the...at the level under the Board of Regents.

[Motion to limit debate to fifteen minutes adopted without objection.]

Further Discussion

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Fellow delegates, in accordance with the wishes of the convention, I will be very brief. I speak in opposition to this amendment. I simply think that vo-tech education should be under the department of education as it presently is. I feel that it is not higher education, and as such, should be under the department of education as it presently...the state board of education as it presently is. In fact, I feel that that's probably one of the faults with the committee proposal as submitted. I would hope that we could somehow leave vo-tech education under the people as it now stands. I feel that most of the people in that department want it that way. For that reason, I feel that higher education should deal with higher education, and elementary, secondary, and other schools should be together under the department of education. I urge your rejection of this amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in opposition to the proposed amendment. I certainly feel that vocational training has a place under the state board of education, or under our educational department. It should not be injected into the college and university level. I can see, and I know, and I've always been for vocational education because that's about the only diploma I ever received. I know what it means to my community. I know what a fight we've had in the legislature having to buck the powerful college lobbies and university lobbies to get a little funds for vocational training. For that reason, I believe they need to be under the board of education. In my opinion, they can make more advancements, and prosper better. Certainly, if I'm on the board, a graduate of LSU, Southeastern, Northwestern or some other place, that's my first love. We might as well be honest. If you don't believe that's one's first love, you think back of all the people that's asked you how to vote on these proposals which we now have up for consideration. Every member of...every alumni member of LSU asked me to be for the LSU Board. Smaller colleges asked me to be for another board. But, I do not think that we should get vocational schools mixed up with our colleges. It'll be about like hooking a little donkey in the gates, to break out and run a race with a thoroughbred. There's just about that much difference in them in my opinion. You know who's going to get the best care and the best training--that thoroughbred, because he's going to be running the fastest. We've made a lot of progress in this state in vocational education. There's a lot more to be made. I hope we keep it under a board that will see that it gets its fair share of treatment when the budgets are made, and when the requests are met. For that reason, I'm against the amendment.

Questions

MR. DREW

Senator Rayburn, we have tried to put a little heavier saturation of vo-tech training in high school, have we not?

MR. RAYBURN

Yes, sir. We've just passed recently a fifty million dollar bond issue to really move forward in vocational training in this state.

MR. DREW

If we adopt this amendment and take the continuation of that study away from the board of education, then we've split the program in half, haven't we?

MR. RAYBURN

That's true. I have no quarrel with our universities. I've made that statement before, and I still believe it. Every university in this state is trying to get as big as LSU. LSU is going to make darn sure they don't catch them.

MRS. MILLER

Mr. "Sixty", isn't it true that the vocational schools in this state have no better friend than they've had in you in the legislature?

MR. RAYBURN

I've always been their friend because I feel like I understand their needs more. I'm a graduate of my local school. I was at the school the other day, Mrs. Miller, and looked at thirty students. Twenty-nine of them had never made over a dollar and a half an hour in their life. They finished, and twenty-eight of them were working for six to eight dollars an hour as welders right in this state.

MRS. MILLER

Well, you know, what I want to ask--really and truly don't you feel from the bottom of your heart that this amendment would put in jeopardy some of the things we've worked for very hard for the vocational schools?

MR. RAYBURN

I certainly feel that way, and that's why I oppose it.

Further Discussion

MR. A. JACKSON

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of this convention, I strongly urge you to vote against this amendment because it is not in the interest of the concept of career education that we are trying to implement in this state. If we know anything about the vocational interest of youngsters, we know that it ought to begin very early. It's going to be virtually impossible to coordinate the experiences, and introduce youngsters to the world of work, and strengthen them in the basic tool areas so that they can take advantage of the highly technical areas that are now a part of the vocational enterprise in this country. If we do not have them under the state board of elementary and secondary education. I urge that you will vote against this because it is not consistent with what I know about what educational planning ought to be about. I do not believe that it's going to correct. I know that it will not correct the problem that we have in terms of turning out youngsters who are able to make a living for themselves, and will come out with salable skills.

It's a bad amendment, I would urge you to vote against it.

Further Discussion

MR. LEITHMAN

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I, too, stand before you to ask you to reject this amendment. I wish I would have had an opportunity to speak with Mr. Abraham before he offered this amendment. Briefly, you know Superintendent Michot, and the state legislature, has set as a chief program, career education. We've directed our elementary and secondary children, and our program towards career education as Representative Jackson mentioned.

In career education, we are bringing in those special education children; the exceptional children, handicapped children, and...we will work them into the same program. So, what we have here is just an inconsistency in the millions and millions and millions of dollars that we have allocated and committed to career education and special education. The basic child that is being serviced in vo-tech schools, are maybe, perhaps, those that aren't interested in university work. In fact, I think all of you will agree, every child is not suited for university and post secondary work. He chooses vo-tech studies as an alternative course. We've spent fifty-five million dollars in the construction of vo-tech schools of which we hope to combine our special education. Now what we've, what...if we adopt this amendment, what we are saying here is his fifty-five million dollars of capital outlay, and a matching amount of monies for building up our vo-tech schools. At the same time, we're splitting our plan for the program in half because our handicapped children, and exceptional children, will be under a still separate, entire entity.

So, please, please, vote against this amendment.
Thank you.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected: 2-106. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Dennery sends up amendments at this time.

Amendment No. 1, Page 2, line 11. At the end of the line, delete the word "for", and on line 12, delete the words "public elementary and secondary education."

Amendment No. 2, Page 2, line 16, immediately after the word "education" and before the word "shall", insert the following:

"and the Board of Regents."

Amendment No. 3, Page 2, line 18, after the word "Education," before the word "and," insert the words, "and the Board of Regents," and on line 20 after the word "and," and before the word "the," insert the word "the Board of Regents and". On line 20, after the word "under" and before the partical word, "jurisdiction," delete the word "its," and insert in lieu thereof the word "there".

Explanation

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, all of these amendments apply to Section 2 of Delegate Proposal 98 which is found on page 2. All of them are aimed at putting the state superintendent of education in the same position relatively speaking, as he presently is.

Since this delegate proposal contains two boards, the Board of Regents, and the state board of elementary and secondary education, and since the Board of Regents will cover all of the institutions which the present superintendent covers, plus LSU, now, there is a distinction there, it is felt that the superintendent should be put back in the same relative position that he presently is in. This will obviate the necessity of having a completely separate staff for the Board of Regents. The language which is proposed in the amendment provides that the superintendent will not only be the...well, we'll delete the distinction that is drawn in line 12, of making him the superintendent of education only for public elementary and secondary education, and delete that language so that he shall be a superintendent of education. If the office is appointive, since he's now in charge, or rather the administrator for both boards, he would be appointed by both boards jointly, by the state board of elementary and secondary education, and by the Board of Regents.

Then, after line 17, he will be the administrative head, not only of the department of education, but he shall implement the policies of the state board of elementary and secondary education, and of the Board of Regents. The laws effecting schools under their jurisdiction, so that the purpose of the amendment is to make the state superintendent of education the administrator for both of the educational boards which are set up in this proposal. It is believed that this will reduce the cost of the state of having two boards of this nature. Since the Department of Education and the superintendent presently administer the entire board of education as it presently exists, which covers all secondary...all public, elementary and secondary education, and all colleges with the exception of LSU.

I urge the adoption of the amendment. I'll be pleased to answer any questions, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

MRS. CORNE

Mr. Dennery, aside from the great savings in money that we would have in having one staff and one superintendent for both boards, wouldn't we have also much better coordination of education between elementary, secondary, and post-secondary?

MR. DENNERY

...and vo-tech schools.

MRS. CORNE

...and vo-tech schools.

MR. DENNERY

I'm glad you mentioned that, Mrs. Corne. I think that's very definitely true that you would have a perfect means for coordinating all education within the state which I believe is the aim actually of both the original proposal and of this proposal.

MRS. CORNE

I was going to ask you just exactly that. Is that not the aim?

MR. DENNERY

I think that's definitely the aim.

MRS. CORNE

Thank you, sir.

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Dennery, I think you have a good proposal, but I am concerned about one aspect of it, and that is who would make the appointment for the superintendent if this job were made appointive? As I understand it, under your proposal the appointment would be made by the State Board for Elementary and Secondary Education, and the Board of Regents; is that correct?

MR. DENNERY

Yes, sir.

MR. JENKINS

Well, now, I think the reason that we specifically stated that the appointment would be made by the Board for Elementary and Secondary Education was that this would be primarily an elective board, and that we could justify making the superintendent, perhaps, appointive sometime in the future if he was still under the control of people who are elected. Don't you see some difficulty there, since there would be the large number of appointees on the Board of Regents?

MR. DENNERY

Well, the Board of Regents, of course, has eight elected members under this proposal, and seven appointed, and the Board of Elementary and Secondary Education has eight elected and three appointed. So, you have sixteen to ten. I think you would still have the same basic concept there.

MR. STINSON

Mr. Dennery, this would put the superintendent of education over all the colleges and universities?

MR. DENNERY

Well, he presently is there to the extent of administering the affairs of the Department of Education and the Board of Education with the exception, of course, of LSU. Now, all he would be doing as I appreciate this is the same type of work he's doing now except that he would be the administrative arm and the department would be the administrative arm of these two boards: the Board of Education and the Board of Regents.

MR. STINSON

Well, don't you think that would be more than any one person could really take care of, even if he would be qualified as ably as Mr. Michot?

MR. DENNERY

Well, I think this, Mr. Stinson: it is quite possible that what you say is true, but this office has with it a complete department. It has with it not only the ability to handle this by virtue of the department; it also has the ability that Mrs. Corne pointed out to very easily coordinate all of these activities so that our entire system of education in the state would be coordinated under one administrator, not under one board, but under one administrator.

MR. WILLIS

Mr. Dennery, the thrust of your amendment is to make the superintendent of education as the appellation is superintend education; isn't that correct?

119th Days Proceedings—January 16, 1974

MR. DENNERY

Well, that's correct, sir, but I think what he would be doing would be carrying out duties encumbered upon him as the head of the department and as the administrator of the two boards which actually control education.

MR. WILLIS

...and thereby coordinate the education of all of the people from beginning to end.

MR. DENNERY

From the kindergarten all the way up. That's correct, sir.

MR. A. JACKSON

Delegate Dennery, isn't the thrust of your amendment to make available to the Board of Regents the vast resources technically of the State Board of Education and the state superintendent of education?

MR. DENNERY

Yea, sir. That's one of the thrusts. I think there are many thrusts. That is one of them.

MR. A. JACKSON

But, it makes available to the Board of Regents the vast resources in terms of expertise, in terms of research, in terms of personnel that could be utilized to do all of the things that are charged to the Board of Regents, right?

MR. DENNERY

That's absolutely correct, Delegate Jackson.

MR. A. JACKSON

Thank you.

MR. WEISS

Delegate Dennery, isn't this in keeping with the cabinet form of government that the governor requested in having department heads at the head of each of the twenty departments so that there will not be two heads at the educational department head. Is that correct?

MR. DENNERY

Yes. I think it would fit right in with that.

MR. DENNIS

Mr. Dennery, will this change have to be reflected on the ballot in the alternate, also, along with the other changes that are being made?

MR. DENNERY

Well, I would think, Judge, and of course, the committee which the Chairman recently appointed hasn't met with the state officers yet, but I would think that no matter what type of conclusion is reached, every alternate proposal would have to carry with it an explanation if not the entire article in a schedule of adoption or something to that effect. So, there would have to be an explanation of everything in this article.

MR. DENNIS

One criticism I've heard of the way the present law is that the State Board of Education has not had its own staff and has had to rely upon the superintendent too much. Would your amendment get us back into that sort of thing again?

MR. DENNERY

I don't believe so. I think he is the administrative head of the department and implements the policies of those boards. You have, particularly if he's an appointed officer, you certainly don't have that dichotomy. If he's an elected officer, no matter what you have, you're going to have some dichotomy between elected officials. But, it seems to me that what we're doing here is not putting them back in the same boat to that extent.

Further Discussion

MR. ABRAHAM

Ladies and gentlemen, I am concerned about this amendment. I'm in opposition to it, but I am more concerned about what seems to be going on on this floor where throughout the debate on the Education Article, I don't recall anyone voicing any opposition to the structure. I don't recall anyone coming up with an amendment which would make the superintendent of education—put him in this particular capacity that this amendment pretends to do, and I thought that the only issue that we had here with the Education Article was whether or not we were going to have the Board for Elementary and Secondary Education and the Board of Regents, plus the managing boards, or whether we would not have the managing boards. Even in the amendment that I had proposed, I don't recall anyone getting up in the Education Article ever proposing that vocational training be under the superintendent of education, or the Elementary and Secondary Education. But, be that as it may, I'm not quarreling about my amendment or anything like that, but I'm concerned about what we are trying to do here with this alternate proposal. I thought that the alternate proposal, the intent of it was to keep it as close to the Education Article as we could, and that the only real issue was going to be the managing board, whether we would have the managing boards in the constitution or not. I think that we're going to be defeating our purpose in submitting these alternatives to the people; if we make too great a change in these alternate proposals, I don't think that we're going to do any good at all. We're simply going to confuse the people more. I think that it should be a simple issue on all the alternative proposal, whether we're going to have the article as presented in the body of the constitution, or whether it will simply be some minor changes in it. I would ask the rejection of this amendment.

Questions

MR. WEISS

Delegate Abraham, on your committee, did you envision one or two heads at the head of the Department of Education in the Executive Department setup for the governor?

MR. ABRAHAM

We had planned one elected superintendent...rather, one superintendent of education who would be concerned with Elementary and Secondary Education. There was never any discussion whatsoever of the superintendent of education having charge of all education, including higher education.

MR. STINSON

Mr. Abraham, don't you think that giving the superintendent all these additional powers and all, that maybe we shouldn't amend it, and say that the superintendent of education shall appoint the governor of the State of Louisiana in the future?

MR. ABRAHAM

Well, it's getting just about that close.

Further Discussion

MR. GOLDMAN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, can I point out one thing to you? In our Executive Article we called for the election, and later on possibly by two-thirds vote of the legislature unless the voters change that, that being made an appointive position, of a state superintendent of education. It doesn't say "state superintendent of elementary and secondary education;" it says, "state superintendent of education." In this article, unless Mr. Dennery's amendment is passed, we will then have as an alternative, and also in the article that's passed on education, if that becomes part of the constitution, a state superintendent of elementary and secondary education. Now, what are we going to do about that state superintendent of education who shall be elected as a state officer in the Executive Article? We're going to have to elect two of them it seems to me, unless we make it the same, in addition to the fact that I think Mr. Dennery's arguments and the idea of having one man to coordinate all of that, with one board which has the expertise for both systems of education, is a good one.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Kean sends up amendments that read as follows:
Add "Amendment No. 1" up there at the top. There's just one amendment.

On page 5, between lines 14 and 15, insert the following:
"(6) Powers of management over higher education are vested in

119th Days Proceedings—January 16, 1974

management boards for the Louisiana State University and A & M College, and the Southern University A & M College, and the State University and College Commission, subject to the authority of the Board of Regents."

Explanation

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, if you'll give me your attention for just a moment, I'd like to make a few comments by way of background to this proposed amendment. I think we're dealing here with some other important areas of this constitution, and perhaps, questions which may decide the fate of the document. I would like to say at the outset that it's rather difficult for me to understand how the issue of higher education could have caused such a division in this convention, a division which will be perpetuated, in my opinion, statewide, if this alternative proposal is adopted as it now stands. No matter who wins as a result of an election under these circumstances, I think that the projection of this issue under the election process could cause deep and long lasting divisions among our citizens which is not in the best interest of this state in higher education as a whole. Despite my feelings in this regard, I've heard the whistles on the floor and seen the votes, and I accept the inevitable. I recognize that a fight to prevent this alternative cannot but further divide it. While I, at the same time, believe we are here on a divisive issue, I think all of us have the same goal, that of bringing about a new constitution for this state which will achieve quality higher education. I doubt seriously that a single Board of Regents, which in my opinion, will ultimately become bogged down in the minutia of management, constitutes the best possible solution to the problem of higher education. I believe that the provision previously adopted by this convention, and now enrolled in the Education Article, gives us the flexibility by which we can achieve that goal. I am certain that those provisions have been so misunderstood and misrepresented, and erroneously portrayed to the people of this state. In my view, those provisions provide the only two meaningful boards, and if you read the provisions, I think you see it, with management boards where necessary to handle the detail at the local university or college level. This makes sense to me. On the other hand, if we attempt to put too much in the hands of one board, I think we will ultimately work to the detriment of higher education rather than for its benefit. However, as I pointed out a moment ago, and by the attention which I have from the floor, I see it's evident, I think we're going to submit an alternative proposal. For that reason, I suggest to you first that the alternative proposal must be fairly presented. Secondly, it must be in a manner which would not raise legal questions concerning its validity, or that of the document as a whole. Thirdly, we must insure that any alternative receives a majority of the votes cast in the election for the constitution in order to be valid. Even if we satisfy these requirements, we would profit more in my opinion, in the remaining hours of this convention to work out a compromise so that we could present a united front on this important issue to the people of this state. It is for this reason that I have offered this amendment. It seems to me that we provide for management boards for the Louisiana State University, Southern University, and the remaining colleges and universities of this state, that we give the flexibility for management, leaving in the hands of the Board of Regents control over finances and budgets and for the coordination of higher education to which they can direct their full attention. I'll point out one significant difference between this proposal and that adopted by the convention as the Educational Article, one that Mr. Juneau did not mention, as I recall it, and that is that under the present proposal, funds allocated by the legislature go to the management board. Under this proposal, they go to the state board. I make no effort to change that. I simply have provided in this amendment for powers of local management to be vested in these boards subject to the authority of the Board of Regents which means control over finance and budget. I think with this type of coordination, with this type of structure with respect to higher education, that we could, perhaps, achieve a balance that we need. I would suggest to you under the circumstances that with such a provision, it might well be possible to take another look at what we've done and come up with a consensus that would permit us to present a united front on this issue.

Questions

MR. GINN

Mr. Kean, for my own benefit, I don't know what the commission is--the State University and College Commission; what is that?

MR. KEAN

That would be a commission that would have to be created under the authority of the Board of Regents for that purpose. It would take it out from under the provision which is presently in the proposal that would require two-thirds vote and approval of the Board of Regents before you created it. This would simply mean that it would be created by the Board of Regents.

MR. GINN

Well, would that have anything to do with the other colleges like Tech, Northeast, USL and all?

MR. KEAN

It would follow the same management provisions that we have at the present time. It would retain the provision that's in the proposal which would permit the Board of Regents and the two-thirds vote of the legislature to grant a separate management board for any other college that wanted to do so.

MR. GINN

I see LSU here and I see Southern here. I was just concerned about the other colleges, Tech, Northeast and all of those.

MR. KEAN

Well, they are in no different position under this than they are at the present time under the proposal because the proposal would require that they could only have it upon recommendation of the Board of Regents and two-thirds vote of the legislature.

MR. BURNS

Mr. Kean, did I understand you to say that your amendment would, or you hoped it would satisfy both factions or sides?

MR. KEAN

Mr. Burns, I can only speak for myself personally. I said I hoped it would.

MR. BURNS

I hope so, too.

MR. BERGERON

Mr. Kean, I'm trying to follow up on Mr. Ginn's question, and he mentioned the universities or colleges of Louisiana Tech and Northeast. You said they would more or less be under the same status as they are under Committee Proposal No. 7.

MR. KEAN

No, the same status that they're in under either proposal, Philip, because they don't have separate management boards at the present time, under either proposal. The proposal in both instances, the Education Article adopted by the convention and the alternative proposal would permit additional management boards upon a recommendation of the Board of Regents and a two-thirds vote of the legislature. My answer to Mr. Ginn's question was that Louisiana Tech does not have a separate board now under this alternative proposal; it doesn't have one under the present Education Article, the device by which they would get that board would be a recommendation by the Board of Regents and a two-thirds vote of the legislature, and that's the case in either situation and regardless of whether you accept this one or the other one.

Further Discussion

MR. KELLY

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in opposition to this amendment. I think this is what this entire battle is about right here within this one amendment. You can call it anything you want to. You can talk about commissions. You can talk about certain management boards. You can phrase them all into one paragraph. You can do anything you want to. But, if this amendment passes, then, in effect, you've gutted the alternate provision. There would be no alternate because this amendment does nothing more than put it back just like it is conceptually in the original proposal that was passed. All we are asking in this alternate is to be able to give the people of this state a choice. We've got serious problems involved in education apparently. When the experts can't agree, the delegates can't agree; the original proposal passed, what, 71 votes, approximately four or five votes more than was necessary for the entire passage of it. We've been that far apart. Now, the only way as I see it, that we can come out of this thing with our heads held high is to give the voters a true alternate on the ballot. To add this amendment back into the alternate destroys it as an alternate. Think about this. Let's give them a real alternate, and I ask that you vote the amendment down.

Questions

MR. BERGERON

Don, in effect, if this amendment were adopted, you feel that we would not really be giving the people of the state an alternative. We'd have two proposals, but really no matter which way they voted, they'd end up with more or less the same thing. Am I correct?

MR. KELLY

As I see it, in other words, you would be putting back into the constitution, and naming within the constitution three management boards here.

MR. ANZALONE

Don, what is the function of the LSU Board as it now stands? What powers do they have?

MR. KELLY

Under the present constitution it's my understanding that they have complete control over that entire system. In other words, they have budgetary control, curricular control and everything. That's my understanding of it.

MR. ANZALONE

Do they not have the authority to present directly to the legislature their budget for the LSU system?

MR. KELLY

It's my understanding that they do.

MR. ANZALONE

Now, under this proposal, is it not stated with some degree of particularity that they are going to be subject to the authority of the Board of Regents?

MR. KELLY

Well, it says particularly there, that they would be...

MR. ANZALONE

Subject to the authority of the Board of Regents. So, they have no budgetary control anymore, and the only thing that they're talking about is management of one university in the state. Is that correct?

MR. KELLY

That's correct.

MR. ANZALONE

Now, how is that going to gut your alternative? Would you answer the question?

MR. KELLY

Because under the original proposal you've got the same setup. The LSU Board of Supervisors, as it's called in Committee Proposal No. 7, as I understand it, is nothing but a management board. The Board of Regents under that particular proposal has entirely the budgetary and curricular control over all higher education, and therefore, really what we're talking about, Joe, this whole thing is whether or not you're going to mention five boards or whether you're going to mention two boards within the constitution.

MR. ANZALONE

Are you not talking about the fight for the education dollar in this state?

MR. KELLY

I don't think we're talking about the fight for the educational dollar in this state. I'll tell you what I'm concerned with. I'm concerned with going home with something that we can take home to the people in Lafayette and every one of these towns where there's a state college located and possibly try and muster up some votes for this new constitution. That's what this whole thing is about.

MR. FLORY

Mr. Kelly, I'm not sure I understood you, but what I understood was you said that if you're for LSU and Southern and them having a board, you vote for this amendment. If you're against them having a management board, then you vote against the amendment?

MR. KELLY

No, Gordon, that's not it at all. In other words, this does not determine whether or not you're for or against LSU or any other university having a management board. The vote here is to determine whether or not you're going to make constitutional such management boards. My position is that I don't want to see management boards made constitutional. The provisions are set forth in the alternates and in the committee proposal that was passed that in the future the legislature through the Board of Regents, and so forth, can create management boards. I'm not against management boards.

Further Discussion

MR. JUNEAU

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I'll make the remarks very brief because I think Mr. Kelly covered most of the things I wanted to say. I just wanted to tell you this: if we're talking about alternates, let's put an alternate to the people. If you want to talk about window dressing and things of that nature, then you'd vote for this amendment because this amendment is doing nothing more than putting us in the same posture, basically, as we are in Committee Proposal No. 7. I just don't think it's right to present to the people an alternate that's really a farce or a sham on the face of the record. So, I tell you, if you are really sincere and you think as a lot of us think, and apparently a lot of public officials throughout this state think, that this is probably the biggest, most crucial, emotional issue in this convention. If you believe that, then vote against this alternate and... I mean, against this amendment and vote for this alternate so that we can give to the people the chance and let them, themselves, decide how they want the structure of higher education to be in the state.

I ask your rejection of this amendment.

Questions

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Juneau, this convention voted by a pretty wide margin to put alternatives on the ballot, didn't we?

MR. JUNEAU

Absolutely.

MRS. ZERVIGON

So, if we are in good faith, it would be your opinion that we should make the alternatives so-called real alternatives and give the people a choice. Isn't that correct?

MR. JUNEAU

It's my impression if we're going to put something on the ballot, let it be a true alternative.

MR. AERTKER

Mr. Juneau, don't you think it's going to be just as difficult for those of who, say, live in Baton Rouge and areas like that to go back and sell to the people a constitution that guts L.S.U. out of the constitution that they're presently in as it is for you to have to go back to Lafayette and sell something that includes L.S.U. with reduced powers in it? Don't you think it's going to be just as difficult?

MR. JUNEAU

I think, Mr. Aertker, that both of us have a problem. I think the way to solve the problem and to solve and salvage the future of this state, so far as the new constitution, is to put an alternate on the ballot and allow me and others who advocate one position to advocate that to the people and say, "Please vote for this provision and vote for the basic document," and give the same right to you or anyone else to say vote for the basic document and vote for your alternative. Because if we do it any other way, Mr. Aertker, we're running too big of a risk, in my opinion.

MR. AERTKER

Did you know, Mr. Juneau, that if we adopted this amendment it would solve my problem?

MR. JUNEAU

Well, I think... it solves your problem as Committee Proposal No. 7 did, but you're not giving the people an alternative.

MR. JENKINS

Following Mr. Aertker's line, but in somewhat contradiction to it, Pat, don't you think that the supporters of an L.S.U. board will have to be for the new constitution because under the old constitution, they have nothing; they have the Superboard? Whereas by putting an alternative on the ballot, they will be in a position where, if they want the L.S.U. System, they will vote for the new constitution and for their alternative on the five board plan.

119th Days Proceedings—January 16, 1974

MR. JUNEAU

I agree with that one hundred percent, Mr. Jenkins.

MR. WILLIS

Mr. Juneau, L.S.U. doesn't vote, does it? I thought this was a constitution of "we, the people."

MR. JUNEAU

Well, I'd like the people to decide that issue as opposed to one university as opposed to another. I think there's a lot of people in this state who didn't even go to a university that would like to vote on that issue.

MR. WILLIS

Well, now, you would think that L.S.U. is the only pebble on the beach, but isn't it a fact that because there is so little difference between this amendment and what we already have that there is very little choice in rotten apples, now, for the people?

MR. JUNEAU

I think that's correct, sir.

[Motion to limit debate to ten minutes adopted without objection.]

Further Discussion

MR. GAUTHIER

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I rise very briefly to again point out something that I tried to point out when we first brought up rules dealing with alternates. I told you then, to allow a substantive amendment, you could possibly put us in a position to where we would not come up with an alternate, but rather two proposals. But, there wouldn't be an alternate, because they would, in essence, contain the same thing. That is the intent of this amendment. This is the yellow sheet and this is the blue-green. There's a difference. Merge them together and hold up a white one, though, and you don't offer an alternate. With this amendment we would not be offering the people of this state an alternate. We would be, in essence, preserving the present situation.

What is our problem in education? Why is there a problem in education? For some strange reason, I always thought that possibly it was caused because we had too many constitutionalized boards. I don't know where I got this from, but for some strange reason some of the people that are now fighting on each side relayed this to me that part of the problem was that we were dealing with too many constitutionalized boards. Then, to carry it a step further: Mr. Kean, Mr. Aertker, Jimmy Morris, Ralph Cowan--all very, very fine people--Ford Stinson---the dedication, the loyalty, the sincerity they feel for their university, they want to promote it; but, gentlemen, please try to understand I too feel that loyalty, that sincerity, and that dedication, but it so happens that I graduated from a little town in Lafayette, from Southwestern Louisiana, and I don't feel that you're giving us a fair alternative. You beat us on the floor; the proposal is your way; and, yet, it was a close vote each and every time. If you will remember when that proposal was finally adopted, we had a range of speakers coming up to this mike and saying, "You have done me an injustice." There was no compromise reached; there was no compromise at all. You ramrodded it through, and now you have it, live with it. It came back at you, and the people of this state said, "We don't want what you devise. We're not satisfied; take another direction; give us a choice." Again, I reiterate what I said a few days ago: I'm disappointed that the professional educators were not able to reach a compromise; I'm disappointed that the burden has been put on us. I say to you, let's not shoulder it completely. Let's give the people of this state two, clear alternatives. I beg of you to please act reasonably. The other side, please try to understand we're not out to gut L. S. U. That's not my intention. I don't believe any delegate in here wishes. . . We just want to be put on an equal basis. We want to allow education in the state to progress. Don't tie its hands constitutionally. I urge you to please defeat this amendment.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I realize, of course, that I have a vast majority of you delegates with me and that my remarks are unnecessary, but I thought I'd like to make a few just to. . .

just for the fun of it. I'm not. . . I want to say to my friend Burt Willis and Wendell Gauthier that I'm not talking about L.S.U. as an institution; I'm talking about people, a lot of people who feel very strongly that there is merit in a management board for L.S.U. I'm sure there are a lot of graduates of Southern University who feel equally strongly in that direction.

My main point in bringing this amendment to your attention was that I do not think that it's physically possible for one Board of Regents to manage the entire higher education system of this state. As long as you were able to restrict the management boards with respect to finance and budget and leave that solely in the hands of the Board of Regents and then have the Management Boards for the day to day local problems of the universities and colleges that this made a sensible solution and offered a sensible alternative, if not a possible compromise. I see here, however, that those who want to go forward with the two board proposal are determined to do so. Now, it's been suggested that this alternative of two boards, or that which we now have in the Education Article, will assist in passing this constitution. I disagree with that. I think this convention has a duty and an obligation, if at all possible within the means of our intelligence and our capacities, to come up with a consensus proposal which would permit us to say to the people of this state, "This is what we think is the best system for higher education in this state down through the years." When we simply throw it out to the people of this state to vote on an alternative proposal that clearly divides the state between the two board system and that which is in the present proposal of the Education Article, I say to you, we're going to have this same debate, the same division between the people of our state that we had in this convention. When we get that kind of division--when we get that kind of division--between the people of the state on this issue, I think we seriously jeopardize this constitution. That's the reason I offered my amendment, in order to try to come up with something that would enable us, together, to present something to the people of this state which says, "This is what we think is the best. . . in the best interest of higher education of this state," and not just throw it out there for them to pass on it subject to all the political factors that are going to come into play in connection with that issue before the people of this state. I think we do a disservice to the people of the state under those circumstances. I offered my amendment in order to avoid that possibility.

Questions

MR. GOLDMAN

Mr. Kean, if we had only one state university in this state, L.S.U., and it had branches of four-year colleges or universities in all the cities and towns where we have other universities--state universities--would you agree, then, that one state superintendent and one Board of Regents could manage them?

MR. KEAN

No.

MR. GOLDMAN

You wouldn't?

MR. KEAN

No. I think we're talking about management on one hand and coordination of higher education on the other. The coordination and development of the higher education system of this state has got nothing to do with the local management of those universities and colleges.

[Record vote ordered. Quorum Call: 114 delegates present and a quorum. Amendment rejected: 36-77. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Aertker is going to handle the other set of Kean amendments which read: (Should add "Amendment No. 1 up at the top.") On page 5, line 8, after the word "institution" and before the word "of" insert the following: "or existing systems".

Explanation

MR. AERTKER

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this is a relatively simple amendment. What the purpose of it is: is that we just feel that we would like to have clearly understood that the L.S.U. system will come in with its budget and that they will not be dissected by the Board of Regents and told--the branch in Shreveport, or the branch in Eunice, or Alexandria or wherever you have different branches throughout the state--to come in with their budget. All we're doing is consolidating this, and so we are requesting that the university system be recognized as a system and that the budget be submitted on that basis. I think all of us recognize the fact that in order for L.S.U. to prepare its budget, it's got to be cognizant of all of the different facets of its operation, and all of its programs, and all of the curriculum that it has, in order to come in with a comprehensive proposal. So, I recommend to you your favorable consideration of this amendment.

119th Days Proceedings—January 16, 1974

Further Discussion

MR. LEITHMAN

Mr. Chairman, members of the delegation, fellow delegates, we just don't see where this is necessary at all. Right now, the proposal states that "to require that every institution of higher education submit." I just, and the other members here, feel that adding the terminology "existing systems" has no bearing at all on what the institutions do. We just don't feel that it's necessary. We feel that the system, as it is now, will be taken care of. Certainly, we're not going to put anything in any jeopardy. So, we feel that this amendment is unnecessary, and we ask that you reject it.

Questions

MR. AERTKER

Mr. Leithman, I'm just a little curious. You say, "we feel." Who is "we"?

MR. LEITHMAN

The people I've spoken to from interested. . . in this proposal. Authors of the. . . You see, Mr. Aertker, we have a proposal here by a lot of coauthors.

MR. AERTKER

Yes, I've read it. I was just interested in who "we" were.

MR. BOLLINGER

Kenny, could you see this amendment in any way to construe that the existing boards now would be ratified by this, if this alternate was adopted?

MR. LEITHMAN

It's a strong possibility. The real impact is hard to determine on an instant notice. But, just. . . as we have it, we merely state that to require that every institution of higher education submit a budget. We certainly feel that is adequate to take care of the budgetary problem facing the legislature. We ask that you reject the amendment.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment rejected: 36-74. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Haynes and Mr. Velazquez send up amendments at this time. Amendment No. 1. On page 3, line 8, after the words "law and" and before the word "members" delete the word "three" and insert in lieu thereof the word "seven".

Explanation

MR. HAYNES

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, our amendment is a very simple amendment, and I've talked with many of the delegates who see it as not objectionable. It makes for consistency. The only thing we are asking for is that in the Elementary-Secondary Board, or the board governing elementary-secondary education, that it would be consistent with the Board of Regents. We have, in the article, the Board of Regents calling for eight elected members from single-member districts and seven appointed by the governor. As I said a minute ago, the only thing that we are asking for is that you make these two boards consistent; that the board governing elementary-secondary education would parallel the board governing higher education: that is, that there would be eight elected from single-member districts and that there would be seven appointed. The large portion of the children and youth of this state are in elementary-secondary schools of Louisiana. I would submit to you that we have come a long ways in the last half century, since 1921. I wouldn't suggest to you that we've come far enough.

The next point I'd like to make is that with a board having eight elected members from single-member districts, or any kind of districts, and three appointive. . . appointed, political reality would suggest to us that this board could not represent the population of this state. I would suggest further, that had the governor having the discretion of appointing seven members of the board, it would permit the governor to look out into the wide ranges of the state and appoint a board representative of the state. Then, I would suggest further, that the people from all parts of the country are looking at us with great scrutiny now. In higher education we are called on to integrate every phase of our education structure. We cannot do this with a large segment of our population having no representation at all. I would therefore ask you to support this simple amendment, because it does give the opportunity for people whose children are attending these schools to have. . . to render service in governing education in the state. Somebody has suggested that it would give the governor a larger opportunity for control or influence in such board. I've had the privilege of serving on several boards and commissions. Not in a single instance has any governor come to me to influence my vote or to influence my action on any issue coming before either of the boards or commissions. I would ask the 132 delegates at this historic convention that we would look ahead rather than looking backward, and in the name of justice and equity, we would approve this amendment. The passage of this constitution is going to depend upon all of the people--all of the people--black and white alike, coming from all segments. I would want that we would make this constitution such that it would be in the advantage of all of the people.

So, Mr. Chairman and members of this delegation, I would humbly ask--and I would apologize for consuming your time at this time; I have not done this during the more than a year's stay in this convention--I would humbly ask you to support this simple amendment simply changing one word from "three" to "seven" in the board governing elementary-secondary education. I should be glad to submit to any questions that anyone would like to ask.

Questions

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Haynes, that would change the membership of the board from an eleven member board to a fifteen member board. Is that correct?

MR. HAYNES

That's correct. That's correct.

Further Discussion

MR. J. JACKSON

Mr. Chairman, delegates to the convention, I rise in support of Mr. Haynes and Mr. Velazquez's amendment. The speaker prior to me says that there were a couple of issues we ought to consider in proposing an alternative. One was that of the management board. I suggest to you that the other one is appointment, and election, and representation--is the other issue involved in a successful cross-range of the people of this state, supporting in my estimation, what an alternate ought to do. For those reasons, and the reasons that Mr. Haynes mentioned, I would suggest to you that the only issue involved in the alternate is not management boards. There are some delegates who feel that these ought to be elected positions. The other delegates feel that we ought to broaden the opportunity for a broad representation of people in education. I ask your favorable support.

Further Discussion

MR. JUNEAU

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I again will make these remarks very brief. I ask you to reject this amendment. The reason again is very simply this: I don't want to do anything whatsoever to jeopardize affording the people of this state with a viable alternative. If you fool with this amendment, and any other amendments like it, and don't like the amendment we're just through, you've done that. So, I say, leave it alone. The flak has not been in the area with the board of lower and secondary education. So, I respectfully submit that you reject this amendment, and the amendment similar to it, and let's get on about this business of adopting a viable alternative.

Questions

MR. J. JACKSON

Yeah. Under the present...constitution that we have adopted, proposed constitution, it calls for what is the procedure, what is the makeup under the proposed, the one that we are proposing?

MR. JUNEAU

For the lower board?

MR. J. JACKSON

For the lower board.

MR. JUNEAU

Eight elected and three appointed.

MR. J. JACKSON

Eight elected and three appointed.

MR. JUNEAU

Yes, sir.

MR. J. JACKSON

Do you feel that this amendment is not a viable alternative to the eight and three?

MR. JUNEAU

I'm telling you, Mr. Jackson, I'm going to lay it on the line with you. If we start tampering with that--you start with the eight/three provision in this convention, at this stage of where we are---I think we are running the risk, conceivably, of knocking out an alternative. I'm speaking very practically to you.

Further Discussion

MR. LANDRUM

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in support of the Haynes amendment. I rise further to state that it is my opinion, the very idea of alternate proposals, I believe is not in the best interest of the final passage of this document. I believe further that our governor did a disservice to this convention when he laid it on the line by stating that unless this particular area would be changed, the people would reject this constitution. Last night, before there was a change made, two of the delegates, in my opinion, did a very good job of selling the document to the people---Mr. Jenkins and Mr. "Monday" Lowe. I believe that if the officials, and when I say the governor, I have great respect for the governor because I believe he is a very fine and sincere man, as I believe about other officials. But now, what you are doing, everything in this document, something about it, every delegate in here, I believe, likes and dislike; we all have our likes and our dislikes. But, we should not just turn away because we don't like one particular area. Because I don't like my arm, I don't want to destroy my whole body; because I lose an eye, I'm not ready to die. I think what you are doing now, and what you've been doing most of the morning, with all of these last minute changes, are not in the best interest of the passage of this document. Let it be stated now, there are some other people who can defeat this constitution. Unless we do some things that will help everybody in this state, I will be one of those trying my best to defeat it. But, as long as I feel that we are doing something together, nobody will be any more a champion of selling it than I will.

Thank you.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. HAYNES

Mr. Chairman, and members of this delegation, the only significance that the amendment has is that provided the alternate is included on the ballot.

The other, the only point I would like to make, is that we do have political realities facing us for the next half century. Perhaps we won't have another constitutional convention for another half century. I cannot see us writing into the constitution something that will circumscribe so large a segment of our population for a half century. I have spoken to Mr. Juneau, and others of this delegation, about the amendment. I cannot see at this time any reason that there could be a single objection for the simple proposal that we have submitted to you in this amendment.

I would ask you again, in the name of justice and fair play and honor for years and years to come. Like Mr. Willis, I'd like to quote from one of my favorite writers. I'd like to quote from Shakespeare when he had Mark Anthony to say "that the evil that men do lives after them; the good is often interred with their bones." I've heard people talk about the good Bill of Rights that we've written. I've heard them talking about the many other things. These aren't necessarily the things that people are going to write about. This won't be our epitaph. But our epitaph will be the evil that we put in this constitution to circumscribe any members of our population in the years ahead.

Humbly, I would like to ask your favorable support on this amendment.

Let me practical. Let me realistic. If we put three appointees in this constitution, there's no way a governor in the foreseeable future could appoint more than one black to a board. I think any one black would be stupid to serve on a board such as this governing elementary and secondary education in the state. If we put seven in there, it would give the governor--governors of this state in years to come--some leeway to make whatever we have governing education, representative of the people of this state. No longer can we deny any segment of our population the opportunity for representation and a voice in government.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

MR. BURNS

Mr. Haynes, I try to live an honorable life and everything. What has honor got to do with whether you believe in three appointments by the governor or seven appointments by the governor?

MR. HAYNES

Mr. Burns, I think the...I didn't mean any aspersion on any delegate here. But, I think whether we write a constitution that will be representative of all of the people, it to me, represents my honor. I certainly don't mean to cast any aspersion on any delegate, on any vote that he's cast in this constitution.

MR. J. JACKSON

Mr. Haynes, is it not a fact in the proposed constitution, the superintendent has one status, but to provide a viable alternate, we changed his status? Right?

MR. HAYNES

That's correct.

MR. J. JACKSON

Is it not a fact that one constitution has one proposed draft, has management boards? The alternate, as a variable, has no management board. Is that correct? Is it not a fact that the constitution is laid out in one way and if you want to provide a viable alternate it ought to be different in the alternate? Right?

MR. HAYNES

I think you must have, you must have, a difference there. I appreciate that suggestion.

MR. STOVALL

Mr. Haynes, do you feel that fifteen members of an elementary and secondary education board is too many people to manage the affairs of millions of young people and children in the state?

MR. HAYNES

I think it would be more representative, Reverend Stovall, than an eleven member board....

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected: 46-65. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Reverend Alexander, did you still wish your amendments? Reverend Alexander sends up amendments which read as follows: Amendment No. 1. On page 4, line 6, after the word and punctuation "law.", add the following: "The composition of the board shall reflect as nearly as practical, the racial composition of the state."

Explanation

MR. ALEXANDER

Mr. Chairman, delegates, ladies and gentlemen, I think by now I have sensed your mood....

It appears to me at this time that you have concluded that you are going to oppose all amendments, especially along these lines. It just so happens that I'm a disciple of a God who walked this earth at one time, and who didn't even have a place to be born or to lay his weary head. He said to His disciples once, after noticing the desertion of all His friends, "Will ye also go away?" I don't know, having gone through these kinds of trials and tribulations all of my life, I have concluded that possibly one more defeat will not kill me. So, I come to you asking you to adopt this amendment. I come to you asking you to forget the traditions of the past. I come to you asking you to forget everything that has happened to leave in your mind the idea that there are different races in this state, and possibly one should be dominated by the other. Even though this amendment mentions the word "race," it simply states that the board should reflect the ethnic or the racial composition of the people of this state...no matter who they are. Indians, Chinese, Rhodesians, Ethiopians, anybody. So, I say to you that I make no threats at this time. The position I will take on the finished product of this convention will not be determined by your vote on this amendment. But, I do ask you in all sincerity to vote for this amendment because the position of many people will be based on what happens here, and with this amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I'll answer any questions.

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected: 37-68. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Point of Information

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman, I had a proposed amendment with respect to the style of the ballot. I assume the ruling of the chair on the previous amendment...proposal...is applicable....

MR. HENRY

Yes, sir. It would be.

Further Discussion

MR. A. JACKSON

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in support of this proposal knowing full well that this is a very vital issue that is causing emotions to run very high in this deliberative body and across the state. But I do so because I believe that a new document for this state is in the interest of all of the people. I believe that a new document for this state will insure that we can have creative and informed government. I believe that a new document will enable us to bring efficiency to state government in a manner that we have not been able to do so. I believe that in the long run, education is going to make the difference. I believe that this proposal, as an alternate on the ballot, will insure that this constitution that will be presented to the people for ratification will receive the full attention of all of the people of this state. Now, I know there are those in this hall that are close to me who will have reservations about the proposal. They do so because it does not contain some of the provisions that they would like to see in it. I share their concern, and I share their feelings. But I say to you, that it is the overriding consideration...
....I believe the overriding consideration is how do we prepare, how do we ratify this new document?

Now, let me talk for a minute or two about the question of education. Twenty years from today, this state and this nation is going to be a vastly different place. None of us will be able to visualize what education is going to be like twenty years from now in our vivid...in our most vivid dreams or imagination. So, I believe that it is necessary that we are able to coordinate education in this state; that we are able to provide for long-range planning for education in this state. I believe that we will have to have flexibility to insure education with excellence for all of the children of all of the people. Therefore, I believe that it is necessary for us to have the kind of educational governance structure that will allow us to do this.

Finally, I believe that this will...that this proposal, placed on the ballot, will enable us to remove the jeopardy from the proposed constitution that is now present by way of the education article that is claiming the attention of so many people.

Rightly, or wrongly, I know many people fail to understand the country. But the fact is that there is confusion; there is concern. I believe that this alternate will satisfy the kind of concern, and the kind of need that we have, and will insure that this document will be passed. So, I would urge that you will vote for the alternate proposal.

Further Discussion

Mr. J. Jackson

Mr. Chairman, delegates to the convention, I do not intend to sway you one way or the other because I think the decision has been made. Let me say that I agree basically in principle with Representative Alphonse Jackson, in terms of the possibilities of insuring this document passes. However, I just would like to make it very clear to the delegates here that when we talk about an alternate, we talk about alternate provisions other than the ones that we're adopting. I will definitely, as a delegate, with whatever energies that I can muster, will support very strongly this constitutional document. I think that I have won some, and I think that I've lost some. I suggest, and I would encourage that no matter what you do on this final proposal, that you do go out, in fact, and hustle, whether you hustle for the alternate or hustle for what we've got. But, I did not at any point want the convention to leave on a note, under no circumstances, other than the political considerations that are involved, that, in fact, there were many issues that deserved alternate consideration. Unlike we accommodated those issues like the superintendent of education, like the management board that we made alternates in this proposal, but when it came to what I declare now, and suggest to you very seriously was the need for another provision containing an alternate, we did not give that consideration. So, in fact, although I do believe that this is an alternate proposal, by no stretch of the imagination do I think it possesses the true ingredients of an alternate.

Further Discussion

MR. LEITHMAN

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I'll just take just a couple of minutes of the remaining time. I certainly didn't anticipate back in 1972, when we began gathering information to draft our single board concept which was fifty-three, that it would carry so much emotion as it has. I...if I've caused any...I certainly apologize to each and everyone of you. The alternative being presented to the people is basically the fifty-three that we considered. We didn't feel that it should be brought to the convention floor. But, I feel when you return to your locale, you'll find the educators there behind you one hundred percent with this alternative. I think they've exemplified this fact to you all within the last week or so. Perhaps if the effort would have been exerted long in advance of...prior to this late hour, it may not have been so emotional. But, that is past history. But, what you're doing now is offering the people something that the university campuses have endorsed...the university people, your governor, your state superintendent of education, and virtually everyone in government involved in education.

So, in closing, I apologize for all the turmoil that perhaps myself and the other people that worked along with us on this... what we felt that was right and just. This is why we continue to pursue it.

If there are no other speakers, I move the previous question.

Further Discussion

MR. STOVALL

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I have felt from the very beginning of our work as a convention that the greatest need in education is for us to have a unified, coordinated approach. Too long we have had provisions which fracture, divide, separate, and estrange the forces of education. Our great scandal of the past has not been the appropriation...misappropriation of monies at one of the institutions, but rather, it has been the proliferation of institutions and programs without coordination. I think this alternative provision will give a clear direction to coordinating and having a unified approach to education in our state. It means that there will be a clear line of administration from top to bottom, and responsibility from bottom to top, and I think this is what we need. If we have constitutional boards for all of the different institutions, the great qualification for being a member would be one's ability at infighting. But, if you have one Board of Regents for higher education, the qualification becomes one's ability to cooperate and provide quality education for all the young people of our state. This is not an alternative provision which is for LSU or against LSU. It means that we are for LSU, and we are for all of the colleges and institutions of the state. I'm interested in LSU maintaining its distinctive position in higher education in this state. But, the way this will be done, if the people adopt this alternative provision, will come not because of constitutional preference, but rather it will maintain its distinctive position because of its academic program and professional schools, and because of the service of its alumni to the state.

119th Days Proceedings—January 16, 1974

LSU will find its fulfillment by being in a family. It's true that LSU will be the big daddy. But, its fulfillment will be in being a part of this family. Therefore, I encourage your adoption and your approval of this alternative provision to be presented to the people of our state. Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I've been up here too often already, except I want to make one final comment, to say that I share the view that Representative Johnny Jackson just stated from this podium. That is that we have made in this alternative proposal, so called, a significant new proposal. I don't know how much discussion and thought went into the change that has occurred in this proposal by which the superintendent of education now becomes the administrative head of the entire educational system of this state. But, under this provision, we have done away with the management boards on a local level and placed that authority of management, as I see it, in the hands of the superintendent of education. Now, that's a vastly different proposal than the one which was originally presented here as the alternative proposal to the educational article. As it started out, we were talking about whether or not we'd have two boards, and whether or not we'd have what the educational article provided in the way of two boards and management boards. We have ended up with an alternative proposal which now injects the superintendent of education in the management of our colleges, in the management of higher education to an extent never before possible in this state. I say to you, and I join with Johnny Jackson in suggesting to you, that we no longer have an alternative proposal to be considered by this convention. We've got a new proposal, and in a period of almost two hours, we've completely changed the entire higher educational system of this state, and I say to you, to the detriment of that system.

Further Discussion

MR. HAYES

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, we have one minute, and that's a plenty time. I'm sorry to see that Education Article caught the blunt end of the entire constitution and, in effect, we don't have an alternative. We say we have two boards, now, as an alternative. We only had two boards to start with. The problem was we misnamed the boards. We only had two: the Board of Regents and the Board of Secondary Education. The other boards, probably, should have been called quarterback clubs or P.T.A. organization. They were named on an equal basis, and that confused the people. That was the problem with the Education Article. It never had but two in the beginning; it don't have but two now. But, we confused the people with it. Thank you.

MR. HENRY

The two hours are up.

[Record Quorum Call: 112 delegates present and a quorum.]

Point of Information

MR. BOLLINGER

Mr. Chairman, is there a possibility that something's wrong with the machine? This is the second or third time Mr. Riecke's light has been lit, and he's been missing the last few days. I was wondering if something was wrong with the machine--why his machine was automatically voting.

MR. HENRY

How is it voting?

MR. BOLLINGER

It voted no now, and it's been voting no when it does vote.

MR. HENRY

There's nothing wrong with it. No, I don't know. Mr. Clerk, look at his machine there.

The roll call shows him not voting at all.

[Proposal passed: 80-35. Motion to reconsider pending.]

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

Motion

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Acting Chairman, I rise for the purpose of making a motion. My motion is to ask for a suspension of the rules to go back into C. P. No. 7--the article on education--for the sole and only purpose of considering and adopting this set of amendments that you now have, by myself and others, which will remove vocational-technical training and career education from under the control or the supervision of the Board of Regents, and place them under the control of the Board of Elementary and Secondary Education. I make that motion for that purpose, and that sole purpose only.

Point of Information

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Acting Chairman, I rise for a question. The rules under which we are operating now for alternative proposals--does it mean that we have to complete our consideration of all alternative proposals today, or that we have today and tomorrow for them?

MR. CASEY

Ms. Zervigon, I think the Chairman, who just left the witness stand, so to speak, indicated to the convention that we would have to go into tomorrow in order to handle all the alternatives under consideration.

Point of Information

MR. CHATELAIN

Mr. Acting Chairman, the purpose of this is to go into only, specifically, the purpose that he stated. Is that right?

MR. CASEY

That's the purpose of it, Mr. Chatelain.

[Motion to suspend the rules to discharge Committee Proposal No. 7 from the Committee on Style and Drafting adopted: 102-5. Motion to reconsider Committee Proposal No. 7.]

Point of Information

MR. SCHMITT

It was my understanding that we're supposed to go through each individual delegate proposal first; and I'm sure this is fine, if they want to suspend the rules, but we should file our original procedure that we had established. Then, at the end of this time, we could come back and accomplish Senator Rayburn's purpose.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Schmitt, the rules are already suspended. The committee proposal is before us. Right now, at this time, we're in that order of business.

Point of Information

MR. ABRAHAM

Is the motion debatable?

MR. CASEY

The motion to reconsider is debatable, sir.

Questions

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman, I'd just like to pose this question to Senator Rayburn. I think it might save us a little time if he would consent to it. What he wants to do is in this alternate proposal, and I would say this: that, if the alternate proposal is adopted, then you would have what you want to do with reference to the other proposal. It's only in the event the other proposal is not adopted where that would fail.

MR. RAYBURN

Senator De Blieux, in the event the alternate proposal is not adopted, I want to make sure that we get the vocational-technical training schools in this state out from under the Board of Regents. If we don't pass my amendments, they will be under the Board of Regents. That's my sole purpose. I've talked to the people of LSU and all the people interested in the Board of Regents,

119th Days Proceedings—January 16, 1974

and they have no objection to this amendment and think, maybe, it might be a good amendment.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Personally, I'm not opposed to your amendment, because I voted for reconsideration on it, but I just thought that, possibly, we could accomplish that by the alternate proposal.

MR. RAYBURN

No, sir. I can't, and that's the purpose of this amendment, Senator De Blieux.

Further Discussion

MR. ABRAHAM

Ladies and gentlemen, the reason I rise in opposition to the motion to reconsider is that--I'm not in disfavor with what the Senator is trying to do--the only thing I'm saying is that let's finish our alternate proposals first; then, we can come back and do the thing that he's asking to do. So, I'm not arguing against his amendment or anything like that, but I think we ought to finish what we've started. Let's not just jump from one thing to the other because we're going to make a lot of mistakes when we start jumping hither and yon.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Acting Chairman and fellow delegates, I'm not trying to railroad anything, Mr. Abraham. We have our vocational people that's been here about two days; some of them are a long ways from home. I feel like that, while we are on this subject--although we have just completed the alternate--that now is the proper time to go ahead and act on this; and I think, by the recent vote--it was a hundred and something to two to place this same language in the alternate--I feel sure that a majority of these delegates want this same language in the educational proposal. That's why I ask you to go along, at this time, and consider it.

MR. AVANT

Senator Rayburn, I just want to make absolutely sure I understand the purpose of your amendment, because I don't have the proposal, you know, to check it. But, as the proposal now stands, vocational education--career education--is under the Board of Regents.

MR. RAYBURN

That is correct, Mr. Avant. I've checked the amendment. I even went so far as to submit this to Style and Drafting and have even made the suggested changes in the amendment that they suggested.

MR. AVANT

And, this will simply place it under the State Board for Elementary and Secondary Education?

MR. RAYBURN

That's exactly what it will do, Mr. Avant--other than one other thing, now. Under the present language, it does say "career education," and I'm leaving career education silent. I'm not putting it under any board, and the reason for that is something that's in its infancy in this state. I don't think anyone knows very much about it at this time. I think, at a later date, the legislature can assign it where it thinks it best needs to be.

Questions

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, I'm just wondering if we could recess for, maybe, about three minutes to make sure we check this language, because it's been very difficult to find a copy that's being amended.

MR. CASEY

Check the language on the amendments--is that what you're requesting?

Mr. Jenkins, look, we have a lot of steps to go through before we even get to a discussion on the amendment. Let's just go through the mechanics, and then we can check it out.

[Motion to reconsider adopted without objection.]

MR. POYNTER

Now, Senator Rayburn's amendment to affect, as I understand it, Senator, just that one single purpose that you have explained on the mike goes to three different sections. It affects Section 3--if my initial checking is correct--Section 5, Section 12. In that light, the gentleman now asks for a suspension of the rules for the purpose of calling from the table the motion to reconsider the vote by which these three sections were adopted and, further, with the view of being able to offer as this one set of amendments to three different sections and, then, subsequently, readopting all three of those sections--all in one global motion and vote. Is that correct, Senator?

MR. RAYBURN

That is correct.

[Motion to suspend the rules to reconsider Committee Proposal No. 7. Sections 3, 5, and 12 adopted without objection.]

Reconsideration Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Now, the amendments go to the so-called final enrollment--that is, the enrollment after the Style and Drafting amendments--which copies of have been distributed. I know that you've got tons of paper on your desk, but copies of it may be there if you've had them with you.

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, line 10, after the word "schools" and before the words "and special" insert the words and punctuation ", vocational-technical training,"

Amendment No. 2. On page 3, line 20, after the word "education" change the comma "," to a colon ":" and delete the remainder of the line and delete line 21 in its entirety.

Amendments Nos. 2 through 6, I believe, all affect on page 4, which is Section 5.

Amendment No. 3. On page 4, line 4, after the word "education" add a period ".".....

[Motion to waive reading of the Amendments adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Acting Chairman and fellow delegates, these amendments do exactly what I said a few moments ago. They do place vocational education back under the State Board of Elementary and Secondary Education. I personally feel that's where vocational education belongs, and I think a majority of the delegates feel that. I want to apologize for not catching this earlier and not trying to correct it before we got along in this late stage. I want to thank you for allowing me the opportunity to suspend the rules where this body can consider these amendments at this time. I'll be happy to yield to any questions, if there is any questions.

Mr. Chairman, as soon as that question is over, I'd like to be recognized to ask that you open the machine for coauthors. Several of them have asked me to do that, and I was about to forget it.

Question

MR. ABRAHAM

Sixty, I'm not speaking for or against the amendment. There's one thing that puzzles me. You know, we had the original draft of the proposal from the Education Committee way back in last July. They held hearings and everything for six months. We had this committee proposal on the floor, and we deliberated it at length. Throughout all of this, the vocational-technical training was under the Board of Regents. Why have not these people come up before now with this request that it be moved back to Elementary and Secondary Education? Why, all of a sudden, have we had a change in our thinking on it?

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Abraham, I guess I'm partially guilty for not notifying my vocational people, which I did not. When they found out about it, they discussed it with me, and they were upset about it. That's why I'm here trying to correct it. I do not know why they waited this long to come. I've asked some of them, and they told me they really didn't understand where they were at; they didn't know what board they were under, because we have discussed it pro and con, as you know, for many, many weeks. The fact of the business, I wasn't here the day it was finally adopted, and I had to come back and check the bill to see where they finally put them. I didn't know myself that we'd had so many proposals and discussions on this particular proposal; so I was not familiar with the entire contents of it, and I guess it's my fault as much as it is anyone else's that I was not well enough aware on the final contents of the proposal to tell my vocational people exactly what board they were under. When I came back and checked it, I found out they were under the Board of Regents.

119th Days Proceedings—January 16, 1974

[Coauthors added.]

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Acting Chairman, I think the vote is evident. If there's no more questions, I now move the adoption of the amendment.

PROPOSALS ON THE CALENDAR FOR APPROVAL OF FINAL STYLING

Committee Proposal No. 26, Section 4

Amendment No. 1

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, it's on your desks--the Henry, Pugh, et al, amendment to C. P. No. 26, Section 4 (F), about the State Board of Commerce and the exemption from ad valorem taxes of manufacturing establishments. This is your amendment, and your green copy and blue is here. The amendment is here. As you can see, it capitalized State Board of Industry because this is the first time it was mentioned. It states: "The exemption shall be for an initial term of no more" instead of "no exemption for a longer initial term than five years." The chief change which I should note to you, aside from the stylistic changes--Mr. Conroy was supposed to explain it, but he's over with the secretary of state--is that we say the terms "manufacturing establishment" and "addition." As it passed the floor it said "and addition or additions." Since we had not referred to "additions" up above, "additions" was omitted... was deleted. Otherwise, the language is the same; in the views of tax men it's exactly the same except for stylistic changes noted. Mr. Chairman, I respectfully move, subject to discussion, the adoption of this amendment.

[Amendment No. 1 adopted without objection.]

Report of the Secretary
[II Journal 1J22-1J29]

[Motion to revert to Reading of the Journal adopted without objection.]

READING AND ADOPTION OF THE JOURNAL

MR. POYNTER

By the way, a number of people have talked to me about getting one copy of a Journal that they're missing or this and that. I want you to know that under the specifications of the printing, you will all receive a copy of the final Journal and calendar as it comes out. Of course, you know that under your instructions that the secretary, and myself, and the Chairman have been correcting the Journals and whatnot. But, in similar fashion to the Legislative Journals and Calendar, you'll get one; and there is under consideration, in fact, requested by several delegates, and I think will eventually be brought up to the Executive Committee that those copies for the delegates would be hardbound in fact. But, at any rate, you will certainly get a copy of the final Journal and the final calendar which will reflect all those corrections that we from time to time noted in here.

For those of you who've been requesting copies of the blotters, we've ordered a few more copies of the blotters, and they'll probably be enough of them that everybody at least can have one, maybe two, new, clean blotters here because I know a lot of you enjoyed having those for signature purposes, and whatnot.

Point of Information

MR. GOLDMAN

A question for Mr. Poynter.

You mentioned something about us signing our name a hundred and thirty-five times. What's happened to that? I thought we were supposed to do that.

MR. POYNTER

We did not get the final copy back, Mr. Goldman, as yet from the printer, and the reason is that I've been trying to check, and I still lack talking to about one or two people to confirm how they want their name to appear, and it particularly has reference to those people who commonly use a nickname, and whether they do or do not want it in there; and I certainly wanted everyone's name insofar as humanly possible to be styled on the final document in the way that they would consider most appropriate. I would hope to have those, Mr. Goldman, not later than sometime tomorrow so we can begin the signatures...the signing of your signatures.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Pugh in a minute...we don't have the distribution. He's going to ask you in a second to reconsider the adoption called from the committee in the usual motion No. 4, Committee Proposal No. 4, which is the Executive Branch with the view of offering an amendment there that deals with seeing that the governor faithfully executes the laws of the state. The amendment that he will be speaking about reads as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, at the end of line 27, change the period "." to a comma "," and insert the following: "and shall see that the laws are faithfully executed."

That's the amendment. The distribution copies are not here, but that is the amendment that his motion will relate to.

[Quorum Call: 78 delegates present and a quorum.]

Explanation

MR. PUGH

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, the purpose for opening the Executive Section is to provide as the present constitution provides relative to the faithful execution of the laws of this state. The present 1921 Constitution places the responsibility on the governor to see that the laws are faithfully executed. The way the article presently reads, it says that he shall support the laws and the constitution. As you all know, that language is contained in his oath. This will also provide for the 1921 language and shall see that the laws are faithfully executed, and I ask for your favorable consideration of this amendment.

[Motion to suspend the rules to discharge Committee Proposal No. 4 from the Committee on Style and Drafting adopted without objection. Motion to reconsider Committee Proposal No. 4 adopted without objection.]

MR. PUGH

Yes, but I have the authority to announce that the Executive Committee is one hundred percent in accordance with this provision.

[Rules suspend without objection. Motion to reconsider Section 5 for the limited purpose of offering the Pugh amendment adopted without objection. Amendment reread.]

119th Days Proceedings—January 16, 1974

Explanation

MR. PUGH

Mr. Chairman, I have already indicated to the delegates the purpose of the amendment, and I ask your favorable consideration.

Questions

MR. SINGLETARY

Mr. Pugh, just as a technical amendment, shouldn't you state that "the laws of the state will be faithfully executed"?

MR. PUGH

I suggested that to the committee, but the committee felt that they wanted to use the very same language that was in the 1921 Constitution.

MR. SINGLETARY

Does the present constitution have the language about the laws of the state and the United States?

MR. PUGH

Yes, it does.

ROLL CALL

[69 delegates present and a quorum.]

PRAYER

MR. STOVALL

Let us pray.

Eternal God, Father of us all, we give thanks to You this morning that You have set our feet in this good state, for its soil that produces grain and fruits for our sustenance, for the cattle on a thousand hills, for the manifold gifts of the seas and the rivers and streams, and for the minerals and oil beneath the good earth, for all of these things we give thanks to You. But, more than this, we give thanks to You for the great peoples of this state, peoples of different religions and races and nationalities, and our prayer today is that we might better use our great resources for the fulfillment of life for all people. As we come to the conclusion of this convention we give thanks to You for the deep concern and faithfulness of the delegates, for the patience, skill and good humor of our Chairman, and for the efficiency and dedication of all members of the staff and helpers. Be with us in these concluding days that we might make wise decisions for the future of our state for we offer our prayer in Your name, as the One who was and is and ever shall be. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

READING AND ADDPTION OF THE JOURNAL

Personal Privilege

MR. ASSEFF

Mr. Chairman, delegates, I think it is an experience in futility to speak to this convention because they do not pay you the courtesy of listening when all they do is talk. The delegates simply will not listen to anything. Later, they will blame someone else for why they voted as they did. Strange as it may seem, the chief criticisms that I have heard are the failure of the delegates to listen and their behavior on the floor and the fact that some are present who do not vote. Delegates, our poor public image and personalities and voting on the basis of whether we like or dislike a delegate, and whether he voted for our proposal, will defeat this constitution. I have not misled you at any time, and you know it. I have been perfectly honest with you. I will not support this constitution as it now stands, and I have made no bones about it. Several delegates were present when we voted on my proposal, DP97, but they did not vote. Had they voted, they would have had to vote yes, and they know it. So, they voted no by abstaining. Others told me that they would change their vote. For that reason, I will call it for reconsideration at the proper time. If you want to vote against the proposal, do so. But, it is your duty to vote so that your constituents can judge your voting record. When I call it up, I shall ask the Chairman to give three minutes for you to leave the floor of the convention because if you're here and do not vote, I shall read your name into the record so that your constituents will know that you did not do your duty. If you think I'm not going to do it, try me. We have been called the pawns of labor, the pawns of education, the pawns of LSU, and the pawns of the utility. Aren't we now being the pawns of the governor? One of the governor's leaders told some of the delegates this about my proposal: "Don't you know the governor just wants one alternate?" Well, ain't that fine. I think very highly of the governor, and I agree with him in many instances, as my statement in the Journal this morning proves. But, I urge you to be independent and to vote your convictions. I am checking your voting record, and there is a close coalition. I may not be smart in many areas, but I am a researcher with a national reputation, and I do know how to check. Again, delegates, I urge you to listen carefully, and select the four alternates which will give this constitution a fighting chance. The purpose of alternates is to make friends and we can with four. If we present only one as is the intention of some, it is my personal opinion that the constitution is dead and no one, I repeat, can save it. If we present four, we can breathe life into what is now dead, and remove the constitution from the coffin in which it now lies. I urge you, consider and hear the arguments. I don't care how you vote, but do vote for those alternates which you feel will save the constitution. I think four will. One, in my humble opinion, will not.

You could probably convert me if you put four on the ballot so that we would let the people decide. I am going to vote for some of the alternates, which, when they're on the ballot, I will vote against because I think they are crucial issues, and the people of this state should have the opportunity of deciding them. Remember, it's not a legislative act. We are freezing it into the constitution. So, before you freeze, please give the people a chance to make the decision. If you want to vote against DP97, do so, but at least vote no. I won't hold that against you. Nonvoting, I will. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Judge Tate sends up a further report at this time.

Directed by your Committee on Style and Drafting, send up the following supplemental report with respect to Committee Proposal No. 4, introduced by Delegate Stagg, and that particular proposal is returned with amendments.

Respectfully submitted by Judge Tate, Chairman of the committee.

At this time, Judge Tate asks for a suspension of the rules for the purpose of considering the single amendment contained in the report at this time.

PROPOSALS ON THE CALENDAR FOR APPROVAL OF FINAL STYLING

Committee Proposal No. 4

MR. POYNTER

All right. This is Committee Proposal No. 4, the Executive Committee proposal. I think it's a single amendment attached with a blue sheet; isn't that right, Judge Tate?

Amendment No. 1

MR. TATE

The amendment simply removes the comma as unnecessary. It's a coordinate clause with the same sentence as the beginning of the first coordinate clause, and our usual styling practice is that there's no comma. Subject to objection, Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of the amendment. We delete a comma after the word "United States" and before the word "and." Paragraph 5(A), the amendment yesterday, the Pugh amendment added about four words and a comma; and the comma was what we didn't need. Now, Mr. Chairman, subject to any further debate, I move the adoption of that amendment.

[Amendment No. 1 adopted without objection.]

Delegate Proposal No. 98

MR. POYNTER

Judge Tate, Chairman on behalf of the Committee of Style and Drafting, sends up the third report at this time.

Directed by your Committee on Style and Drafting to report that Delegate Proposal No. 98, proposed by Delegate Henry and others and adopted on yesterday is returned with amendment.

Judge Tate would ask for a suspension of the rules at this time for the purpose of considering the adoption of that amendment.

[Rules Suspended to consider the amendment contained in the report at this time.]

Explanation

MR. TATE

Now, Mr. Chairman, in brief preliminary and while they're being distributed, I want to say, fellow delegates, the staff is doing a stupendous job trying to collate everything that's passed, recommending for your substantive consideration after the Style and Drafting consisted a rearrangement, a very minor, but a logical rearrangement of the content; and we are hopeful, we are hopeful that if we don't have too many amendments that go back to final enrolled copy and have to start re-reenrolling it day after day after day, we're hopeful we can get you a clean copy to look at tomorrow. But, that's your business, of course, because it's more important that we have a constitution that we like than that we have a clean copy. But, it may be more important to have a constitution than still be putting amendments in at twelve noon next Saturday, but that's neither here nor there. Mr. Chairman, we're simply at this time, reporting on the Delegate Proposal No. 98 on the alternate. We are on the stylistic content. We are not at this time, pending the decision of the convention, reporting on the way it's going to be presented to the people. That's a matter for future study. The sole stylistic amendment is to Paragraph 5(B) which created the alternative Board of Regents, as you see on the left. It was inconsistent in arrangement with the Board of Elementary Education on the same page in Paragraph 3(B) because...which spoke about eight members first, elected members first, elected members first, and so on. So, it was just simply rearranged to be completely consistent with the boards created three paragraphs above it. Subject to objection or interrogation, Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of this stylistic amendment.

[Amendment No. 1 adopted without objection.]

RECONSIDERATION

UNFINISHED BUSINESS

PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

Delegate Proposal No. 100

MR. POYNTER

On Unfinished Business are the four delegate proposals all dealing with alternatives, which time expired before the convention was able to consider them on yesterday.

So, Mr. McDaniel, the first resolution is Delegate Proposal No. 100, introduced by Delegate McDaniel, Elkins and many others.

A proposal to provide with respect to an alternative provision relative to the Executive Branch prohibiting a person elected as governor from being his own immediate successor.

Explanation

MR. McDANIEL

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I fully realize that the rules that we operate under for the inclusion of alternates on the ballot, with a short house this morning, I know that my plea here is one of futility in terms of getting sixty-seven votes, barring the emergence of a lot of our fellow delegates. But, I do feel strongly that now that we do have a viable alternative on education to submit to the electorate, that there are other areas of broad, general, public concern that with the mechanism that we have should be offered to the electorate of this state for their consideration. I submit that there is not a more important issue, or one that more people have an opinion on than this matter of the highest executive office of this state, and how long it should be there. Why should we impose our opinion or our ideas when we have the mechanism in this constitution to let the people themselves decide one more time at very little or no additional cost just what they want when it comes to how long a governor can serve in elective office? I submit that this question does have wide interest. It does concern every one of us because the man that occupies this high office does set the tone, the political climate, that affects the economic climate, that affects every one of us. There are those that say that they support two terms. There are others that say they'd like to have one, and you'd be surprised at the comments, because I did get every one of those signatures the other day myself, that you got the reaction I had. It was some of the more interesting that I've contacted here. But, I do think here you are talking about whether we're going to impose our opinion of what this office should be, or give those several hundred thousands and millions out there a right to express their opinion. I think we do have credibility among the electorate. I think this is a choice that's not backed up by pages and pages and pages of technical, complicated machinery, such as the alternative that we are submitting. You look at the alternative that's on the ballot, on the previous one, and this is hardly indicative of all the supporting material. Here is a simple, direct question that each of us has a knowledge of, and it's in operation. I think it, as I keep referring to, that people do have an opinion. I think it would be ridiculous to say to the people of this state that out of a year's work here that there is only one area, and only one segment of one particular article of this, that is of sufficient importance to require an affirmative vote of a majority of the people. This provision does not affect the present governor, and, certainly, a man that only has eighty-four percent of the people back of him, he might not have a lot to worry about anyway. But, this is basically what it is that's the same question that was submitted to the voters several years ago. We have the machinery, and I ask your favorable consideration for this alternative.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The amendment is Senator De Blieux's amendment, Mr. Chairman. Amendment No. 1. On page 2, delete lines 10 through 17, both inclusive, in their entirety.

Explanation

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I think that Mr. McDaniel has a very good proposal except one provision of it. If we'll take that provision out of it, I think we ought to let it go on the ballot. The provision as he has it presently drawn with limits to govern it to one term, one term rather than two terms. That is the only statewide elected official which we have that we're limiting the terms of office which he can hold. If you will just recall—and I think that most of us here at least can remember a few governors that we have had—that usually when a governor cannot succeed himself, he goes out of office being very unpopular, and the reason for that is that he loses control of his administration. His department heads and others who support him in getting elected start shifting around trying to find out who's going to be the next governor so they can get with the next governor. As long as a governor has the ability to succeed himself, he has control of the situation. He can exercise his function, the administration of government, and therefore, he makes a much better governor. I think we've seen that in presidential elections in the past eight years. We had this situation in several of the states, and I might say this: at the present time, the only states in our United States that do not permit the governor to succeed himself after one term in office are located in the southern part of the United States. The more progressive states of our union don't have this situation. They don't have this provision in their constitution, and I certainly think that we ought to get into the main stream of government, and let a man, if he has the ability to govern and the popularity, we certainly ought not to cut him off from being able to succeed himself if he wants to do that. We ought to leave the control of who's going to be our governor in the hands of the electorate, and not in the hands of the constitution to determine when we're going to have a new officer and when we're not going to have one. At the time that this provision was placed in our constitution, of only one term for a governor, and it was before 1966, we didn't have civil service at that particular time, that is, prior to the time that that was placed into the constitution. We didn't have the investment of idle funds. We didn't have a lot of other restraints that we have to protect the powers of the office from being a political power. Therefore, we don't have to worry about that at it stands right now. The governor cannot have a political force behind him of all civil service workers, I mean those who are employed in government, by the fact that they are subject to his whims and fancies, if he should get elected or not get elected to office. We don't have that situation anymore, and I certainly feel like that if we're going to make any real progress in government, we certainly should allow a governor to succeed himself if he has the ability to do so. I might say this: in my opinion, when you have a two-term governor as we have it in our constitution, at this particular time, you've got four good years...four, or a little less, bad years of government for the same reason I indicated because just as soon as the governor's elected to his second term, everybody, knowing that he can't succeed himself, they start doing the same thing that they would do ordinarily if he only served one term. That is, they start looking around, who's going to be the next candidate. As the electorate would look at it, if he's up for reelection to the second term, if he's been a mediocre governor, they say, well, he can only serve four more years, so we'll let him be elected. While, on the other hand, if he's not a good governor, if he's a bad governor, they say let's get him out now and get somebody else while we can because we don't want to let him get set in office, or something of that sort. I certainly feel like that this is a good proposal, if you'll just strip from that the limitation of one year and let the voters decide whether or not they want a governor for one term or for unlimited two terms or unlimited terms. That's what it would amount to because then we would have a good provision in our constitution, and if we got a good man, we could keep him, and we wouldn't have to turn him out just because the constitution said he couldn't run again. I ask you to approve the amendment.

120th Days Proceedings—January 17, 1974

Questions

MR. STAGG

Senator De Blieux, would you look on page 2 at line 14, "However, this provision shall not apply to the governor in office, or something of that sort. I certainly feel like that this is a good proposal, if you'll just strip from that the limitation of one year and let the voters decide whether or not they want a governor for one term or for unlimited two terms or unlimited terms. That's what it would amount to because then we would have a good provision in our constitution, and if we got a good man, we could keep him, and we wouldn't have to turn him out just because the constitution said he couldn't run again. I ask you to approve the amendment."

MR. DE BLIEUX

Yes, he'd have to stay out for a full term before he could be a candidate for reelection.

MR. STAGG

But, he could come back for two additional terms later.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Yes. That's under the proposal as he is elected now. What I want to do is take out that language so that he or anybody else who is elected governor could run as many times as the people wanted them to serve.

MR. McDANIEL

Senator, actually what you're doing here would take any limitation off the governor, wouldn't it?

MR. DE BLIEUX

That's right. That's what I want to do. That's what I've been arguing for, Mr. McDaniel.

MR. McDANIEL

Isn't part of your argument actually arguing for the two-term deal instead of the merits of whether we ought to offer this and let the people decide what they want?

MR. DE BLIEUX

That's what I want, take it off and let the people decide whether or not they want a two-term, or they want an unlimited term.

MR. SCHMITT

Senator, how many governors in the State of Louisiana who have attempted to run for the second term have not been successful?

MR. DE BLIEUX

That attempted to run for the second term and have not been successful?

MR. SCHMITT

Yes, sir.

MR. DE BLIEUX

That is, after they've laid out one term?

MR. SCHMITT

No. How many governors who have attempted to run for a second consecutive term...

MR. DE BLIEUX

We've only had that provision in our law since 1966, and at that particular time...

MR. SCHMITT

Prior to that time, how many governors who attempted to run for a second term have ever been defeated?

MR. DE BLIEUX

That have been defeated for the second term?

MR. SCHMITT

Yes.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Only one. They have not been defeated because we've only had it in our law for one term--that he could succeed himself for an additional four years.

MR. SCHMITT

Going back in our history, even from the 1930's forward, how many governors who have attempted--I'm not saying whether the law was in effect at that time or not--how many governors who have attempted to run for a second term have not been successful in their attempt? Were there five? Two?

MR. DE BLIEUX

You mean after they've been out of office?

MR. SCHMITT

No. I mean the second time. They're in one term, and they attempt to run a second term.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Schmitt, the amendment allowing a governor to succeed himself was adopted in 1966.

MR. SCHMITT

I'm not asking you that question, Senator. I'm asking you how many--Huey Long. Was Huey Long in there for more than one term?

MR. DE BLIEUX

He could not succeed himself. There's no governor could succeed himself since 1921 Constitution up until Governor McKeithen was elected, and we passed a constitutional amendment in 1966.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Senator De Blieux, would you mind telling me in a few words just what kind of alternate the people would have if you take this out?

MR. DE BLIEUX

What kind of alternate they would have, with reference to the governor?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

No. If you take this out like you want, just what kind of alternate would they have?

MR. DE BLIEUX

They'd have this alternate, Mr. Champagne: They'd either be able to limit the governor to two terms, or else they'd have an alternate of not limiting him to any number of terms. He could be elected as many times as he could get enough votes.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

In other words from here on out, if he could do it and entrench himself enough, well, he could go ahead and run forever. Right?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Yes. If he was popular enough, that's right. It'd be clearly up to the people as to whether or not that they wanted him or they didn't want him.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Yes, sir. Well, do you know, sir, that I think, maybe, that the majority of the people--they wouldn't care for that kind of alternate.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, all they'd have to do is vote it down. That's what we're trying to determine now: what they want and what they don't want.

Further Discussion

MR. McDANIEL

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I reluctantly rise to oppose this amendment. I think my alternative, for whatever merit it may or may not have in your mind, is altogether a different question than what the Senator has posed. We have had in the past, before we amended our constitution, two governors who have come back after being out of office--that I can think of in my memory. I don't think that, here, we're arguing the merits of either a four- or an eight-year term. I tried to avoid, very carefully, in getting into that. Everyone of us has got an opinion. This is essentially the thrust of the approach that I was trying to get here. The electorate back home has an opinion. Let's let them decide this basic issue. I would like for my proposal to be accepted or rejected on the merit that it was; and, for that reason, I ask that you oppose this amendment.

120th Days Proceedings—January 17, 1974

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I ask you to give serious consideration to this amendment. We have had the four-year provision in our constitution for a long time, and we have seen that it did not work properly, because you've seen the results of it. I think, as you well know, there's not a single governor that's served one term that, at that particular time, if he could have succeeded himself, could have been reelected. We have tried the two-term deal. Now, I ask you: Let's try the unlimited term. I certainly feel like if we can get this through, if it doesn't work, we can certainly go back with a new amendment and change it as we did in 1966 when we tried the two-term. I ask you: Let's try this and put the alternate on the ballot to see if the people want to try the unlimited term or they want to stick to the two-term. I ask you to do that: approve the amendment.

Questions

MR. GOLDMAN

Senator De Blieux, I'm not asking the question pertaining to your amendment; I'm asking this question. In the way this proposal is written, on lines 17, 18, 19, and 20, on page 1, I don't see how your amendment would, unless this other..... How would your amendment, unless this other language was changed, permit the voters to vote for unlimited terms? The way this reads, it says: (A) FOR permitting the governor to serve two consecutive terms--AGAINST permitting the governor to serve two consecutive terms.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Goldman, the amendment that it applies to is on page 2. That's actually which will be submitted to the voters. What's on page 1 is just a manner of submitting it to the voters, and that's going to be left up to Style and Drafting whenever we get ready to make the proposal. The language that will be submitted is on page 2. What's on page 1 has nothing to do with the provision that would go into the constitution.

MR. GOLDMAN

Senator De Blieux, if I were voting for one of these alternatives and I voted against permitting the governor to serve two consecutive terms, it would mean to me that I was voting that he could only serve one term.

MR. DE BLIEUX

That will not go on the ballot if this proposal is placed. What's on page 2 is merely style and drafting....page 1, rather. Page 2 is the amendment that would go before the voters.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected: 10-85. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Since distribution copies haven't been run, Mr. Alario sends up an amendment deleting his name as coauthor.

[Amendment adopted without objection. Previous Question ordered. Proposal failed: 44-50. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Reading of the Proposal

MR. POYNTER

Under Rule 37.1, automatically withdrawn from the files of the convention.

Next proposal is Delegate Proposal No. 101, introduced by Delegate Stagg, Roemer, and others:

A proposal to provide with respect to an alternative provision relating to or relative to revenue and finance.

Explanation

MR. STAGG

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, from now until two hours from now, or whatever time is consumed in this argument, you have it within your power to bring our year of labor to a successful conclusion. This delegate proposal is offered as an alternative so that there will be on the ballot, the mechanism by which the voters in parishes now having high valuation tax procedures can find the means of supporting the constitution without serious jeopardy to their parish tax base. I believe in the effectiveness of such alternatives as we have been considering today. In order to vote for Delegate Proposal No. 101, you do not have to violate your conscience or your previously held position; you merely have to be of the opinion that you need to be able to offer some of the voters in parts of this state an alternative means of taxation of ad valorem...property. Since 1966, nine states have held constitutional conventions that had no restrictions on their ability to rewrite their constitutions. In five of those conventions, no alternatives were offered; they were given as a single voting package. All five were rejected. The other four states offered their constitutional voters a package of different types of votes to be cast; and of those four, three of them were adopted by the citizens of those states. The Chairman of Illinois told us that, in his opinion, the four alternatives on their ballot were of crucial importance to the adoption of their constitution. Most of what I'm going to talk about while I'm here this morning is about jobs and about being honest with people. This is not a Republican campaign speech; it could be. But, there are some thoughts I want to share with you. If you don't wish to listen and want to tune me out, that's your prerogative, but let me try to convince you that we need to do something other than what we have done in Article IX. In his speech last week, the governor suggested that our tax article ought to be changed from ten and fifteen percent to twelve and a half. He gave some excellent reasons. But, in my opinion, he didn't go far enough to make any significant difference in the ad valorem tax problems created in Article IX. These taxes are, and have been, a critical, sticky, controversial problem from the date of the first hearings before Senator Rayburn's committee. We spent many hours in debate, and you already know how strong the feelings are on this subject. It is, to say the least, controversial. But, in addition to being controversial, we have made the new constitution a sitting duck for those opponents who don't want any new constitution because we've given a take-it-or-leave-it on the ad valorem taxes. If you'd listen to me one minute, I'd like to tell you about a problem in a single parish that may be mirrored in other parishes. The ad valorem tax result in your parish is largely unknown by the voters in your parish. Some of the delegates in ours spent three hours with our tax assessor, the Monday after Christmas, explaining the effects of C. C. /'73 on Caddo Parish. It was his conclusion that our parish would lose forty-two percent of its taxable base and that to yield the same funds out of the properties left on the roll even after their re-evaluation was done, would make those remaining properties subject to a seventy-three percent increase in the millage rate. What is the result in your parish? Do you know? When Mrs. Warren and the delegates from Orleans go to the meetings in that parish and they're asked the question "What is the new constitution going to cost me?" how will you answer that question? Let's be honest with people. Let's call them taxes and have the sheriff send out a bill for it at the end of each year. As C. C. /'73 is now written, only a few rich people will get a tax bill at the end of the year. The folks Senator Rayburn says he is worried about will pay their ad valorem taxes in a number of ways and on a number of different days all during the year. They're going to pay them with the gas bill; they're going to pay them with the electric bill; they're going to pay them at the gas station and at the discount house; and some will be able to see their ad valorem taxes from C. C. /'73 each week when the rent man comes around, because their taxes are going to be reflected in the rent they pay. We have not helped these people. As a matter of fact, we have hurt them. You're going to have to give an honest answer to these people-- "How much is the new constitution going to cost me?" --and those people deserve your thoughtful answer. Are we going to turn over to the courts the problems presented by these ad valorem tax articles? We have done it by our default in other areas. We've turned over to the courts problems of education; we've turned over to the courts problems of reapportionment by our default. Are we now going to continue to turn them over to the courts by having defaulted in the field of ad valorem taxation? Under the 1921 Constitution, we did; and Judge Doherty has ruled on it, and the court of appeal has ruled on it. In the 1921 Constitution, there wasn't any way of ever forcing that an assessor would do his job. He has an unpopular job. If he does it right, he must tax the people who must then reelect him. I don't believe he ought to be elected at all. Maybe he ought to be appointed for the same reasons that we appoint the legislative auditor—who has a tough job to do and, if he does it right, he's going to make a lot of people mad. I contend that it is within the realm of your interests that, if this constitution should fail to pass, then we're going to have Judge Doherty full-blown and the tax assessors are going to have to do the job for which they were elected. In my opinion, ladies and gentlemen, we're going to have some very, very tough problems to answer, and we need to start talking about them this morning, and we need to talk about them rather seriously. What are you going to tell the people in your parish that we did to them on taxes? You're going to tell them we let every thirty-thousand-dollar house in the state out from under taxes. And, if you happen to be a veteran or over sixty-five, we've let fifty-thousand-dollar houses out from under the payment for streets and for schools and for parish services. I think that's too much. I think that's more than the people have asked for. You have, by your passage of C. C./'73 Article IX, turned ninety-seven percent of the values of the homes in this state out of the tax-paying business, and you've put that much more tax-paying business on industry, who now bears seventy-seven percent of all of our property taxes.

The proposal that we have adopted, I think, shows a tremendous disregard for the problems of the younger people of this state and for the unemployed in this state because I think we're jeopardizing their future employment by saying to industry: You pay seventy-seven percent of the property taxes in our state now; and, when and if this constitution is adopted, you people in industry and business are going to be paying ninety-five to ninety-nine percent of the property taxes. I think that's an unhealthy situation for which there is no cure under C. C./'73's Article IX, as presently written. I suggest that we change that assessment ratio to fifteen percent on all forms of property taxation so that you don't discriminate against those taxpayers who vote and who live in these houses, and against those who don't vote—the corporations and the businesses. But, I would remind you that the same man you've let off from paying taxes at his house is going to find the taxes on his business to be doubled, or perhaps tripled, and he's going to turn you down. He knows what he's paying under the 1921 Constitution; he doesn't know what he's going to pay under the 1974 Constitution. I think we have, in this Article IX, helped the wrong people, and we have penalized the wrong people. The renters in this state—and that's forty percent of the population—will not be helped. The small homeowners whose homes are already exempt—and that's another thirty percent of the homeowners—will not be helped. They're already off the tax rolls. They would, in fact, be given the additional burden of paying higher prices for the stuff they buy from the businesses who are forced by C. C./'73 to pay all in all of the higher property taxes. Only the middle and upper class homeowners are those who will be helped by the proposal as it presently stands; and that is wrong, and you know it. I don't like the provision that we've adopted. It says a thirty-thousand-dollar house will be exempt. I think perhaps, if we adopt and put on the ballot the alternative that is in D. P. No. 101, we will be exempting a twenty-thousand-dollar house, and I think that strikes a fair balance between what was asked, on the one hand, and what is needed in this state, on the other hand.

I submit to you, fellow delegates, that there is a clear philosophical difference between Delegate Proposal No. 101 and Article IX that we have adopted. I think the voters ought to have the opportunity to consider these differences, other than on a take-it-or-leave-it basis. Let the people decide what the level of property taxation ought to be. On a more personal note, Mr. Chairman and delegates, I want very badly to hit the bricks, or—as Johnny Jackson said yesterday—to get out and hustle this document. In my home area, this will be quite difficult for me to do without an alternative to our property taxation proposal.

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

Questions

MR. BOLLINGER

Tom, during your remarks, two questions came to my mind, the first being this: When you proposed your alternative, a question arose as to the functionality and equalization of the property tax statewide, and you said that the floating homestead exemption would correct this; is this not true?

MR. STAGG

Yes, sir.

MR. BOLLINGER

My question, first, is this: In the Revenue, Finance, and Taxation Article, we adopted a provision where revenue sharing would be reimbursed, first, upon that amount of homestead exemption lost by the local governing authorities. When you fluctuate homestead exemption and fluctuate the percentages, do you not again create an unequal balance across the state and, thus, get back to the same situation we are in now?

MR. STAGG

I think what the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution demands, Boysis, is that property taxpayers be treated equally. That's what's the matter with our present system of taxation in Louisiana. That's what the courts have found to be wrong with it. If you give a local option for property taxation in parishes where high valuations have been traditionally used and give the same or opposite ability to parishes which have used a low valuation, something has to change to make it continue to be the equal enforcement of the laws commanded by the United States Constitution. The thing that is available to make it equal and the thing that, in the past, have made it unequal have been the homestead exemption and the old property tax relief fund. If you're going to vary one end of this equation, Boysis, you're going to have to vary the other end; and when you do, it is, in my opinion, the constitutional way to have a local option property taxation system.

MR. BOLLINGER

I agree with you on that fact, but I don't see how you accomplished it. In essence, we still have the property tax relief fund, but it is equal being we had established a uniform percentage of assessment and a uniform homestead exemption. With a local option, you might not call it a property tax relief fund, but we still have a reimbursement from the revenue sharing.

MR. STAGG

The distribution formula, under Article IX, simply says that the distribution will be based in each parish, in proportion to the population and the number of homesteads—nothing to do with the amount yielded or not yielded by any homestead exemption.

MR. BOLLINGER

That's the answer I wanted to get of you. My second question is this: In your explanation of the benefits of your alternate, you mentioned the percentage of tax as now being on industry. Could you explain to the convention how your alternative would change the burden of taxation, when you're going to fluctuate the homestead exemption with the percentage of assessment?

MR. STAGG

What, basically, it does is to begin with a twenty thousand dollar house being exempted from taxation because, under the homestead exemption that we have adopted of three thousand dollars, if you have a house that is valued at twenty thousand dollars—and it's subjected to being assessed at twenty percent—then that twenty thousand dollar house, assessed at fifteen percent, is assessed at three thousand dollars. The three thousand dollar homestead exemption would shield that house from property taxation. If you go above the fifteen percent set in D. P. No. 101—say you went to twenty percent—then, you have the right and the need, under this alternative, to raise the homestead exemption in that parish to four thousand dollars. If, in Jefferson Parish, they wanted to lower it from fifteen percent down to ten percent, then in Jefferson Parish the homestead exemption would not be worth three thousand dollars; it would become worth only two thousand dollars. That's what makes this a constitutional method of local option property taxation.

MR. ROEMER

Tom, on this matter of homestead exemption, you keep in the provision—don't you, in your proposal—that the legislature may raise that homestead exemption to five thousand dollars. Isn't that true?

MR. STAGG

That's still there, sir.

MR. ROEMER

So, if the need is for an increase in the homestead exemption, we have a provision to call for that; isn't that right?

MR. STAGG

That is correct.

MR. ROEMER

In addition, doesn't your proposal give the flexibility in the local taxing districts if what we pass: that is, either fifteen percent or the ten and fifteen percent is harmful, then they, by the local ordinance and in their own area, they can change that percentage to meet their historical needs. Is that not right?

120th Days Proceedings—January 17, 1974

MR. STAGG

That was the purpose of the alternative.

MR. BURNS

Mr. Stagg, I think we all agree there has to be uniformity in assessments. Will you explain this to me? Under your alternate giving the different governing bodies, if they see fit, the option of going to--if they happen to go to the legislature and get an act of the legislature passed increasing the maximum to twenty-five percent, and say Jefferson Parish did it--I'd get in my car in St. Tammany Parish and get over across the middle of the causeway to Lake Pontchartrain, and the minute I got in Jefferson Parish, I'd get out of the ten percent assessment and get into the twenty-five percent assessment. Now, where is the uniformity in that?

MR. STAGG

The same way you do when you drive from, say, De Soto Parish into Caddo Parish. If De Soto kept the fifteen percent and Caddo moved to the twenty-five percent, then De Soto Parish would have a homestead exemption of three thousand dollars to shield their property from taxes, and the Caddo taxpayer would have a five thousand dollar exemption.

MR. BURNS

I'm not talking about homestead exemption. Let's leave homestead exemption out of it. I'm talking about on open land that's not subject to homestead.

Amendment

MR. HARDIN

Delegate Stagg sends up a technical amendment.

Amendment No. 1. On page 4 at the end of line 26, delete the word "the", and at the beginning of 27, delete the words "full stead" and insert in lieu thereof "one homestead".

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Further Discussion

MR. CHEHARDY

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I believe that there's very little that I can say in opposition to this alternate proposal that you are not already aware of. I believe we could sum it up by saying that this particular proposal, suggested as an alternate, does absolute violence to our entire year of work. It offers a proposal as an alternate, which, if adopted.....would absolutely bring financial ruin to every citizen in this state. If all you have to do is apply the simple arithmetic of a plan, which starts off at fifteen percent, gives right to go up to twenty-five percent, fixes this right in the spending arm of government, and all you have to do is keep in mind that over, I'd say seventy-five to eighty percent of the parishes affected in this state, would absolutely be unable to collect the taxes that would result on a man's home. I have seen the cases where through error a man has failed to file a homestead exemption and has to come up with maybe two hundred dollars extra at the end of a year. They cannot find this two hundred dollars, when they talk so loosely about increasing the percentage of taxes on a man's home, which is his main investment in life. Ninety-five percent of our citizens, the one thing they can work to strive to own is their home. This is aimed at passing more of the burden to the home and removing it from those best able to pay. I would merely be repeating everything that I have told you over the past year, and that you yourselves have found wrong with those systems throughout the United States that have imposed reckless and high percentage rates all in the hope of raising more and more revenue. All of these schemes being promoted by the element contained, or the same type element that supports Public Affairs Research Council. All of this type of proposal is aimed by big industry who today already enjoys their industrial exemptions and have just again had it placed in our constitution for perpetuity, or at least until the next constitutional convention. Again, they want to still put more on the backs of the average man in this state. I'm not going to go into detail because I don't feel it's necessary. I only sincerely urge that all of you do all that you can to defeat this reoundingly, defeat any suggestion of an alternative on property tax, so that we could go out and sell this constitution without creating confusion among the people of this state. If there is anything that will cause the destruction of our ability to sell the constitution, it would be the adoption of such an alternative. I sincerely urge that you reject it.

Further Discussion

MR. SLAY

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, we had a man in Rapides Parish once who ran for representative, and his number was 101. He said that you could take the 101, and any way you turned it, it was always the same. I took this Proposition 101 and every way I have turned it, it has been the same. That is bad. If our constitution is what we have said it is, and that it does something for everybody in the State of Louisiana, then this proposition does something to everybody in the State of Louisiana. I want you to look real carefully at this document, the reason I read it so carefully was because there are twenty lawyers who signed this. I wonder if they read carefully what they have signed. Let's start on page 2, on line 12. I believe all of you have a copy of this. It says that "the percentages shall be set at fifteen percent," but then, the governing authority and the legislature can change that down to ten or raise it to twenty-five percent. Now, you know what brought all of this about? This is what brought all of the court suits that we have. This was the Bussie versus the tax commission suit because we have percentages just like that. That is what we have worked on all year long with the change that to a uniform perform percentage for the whole state. We are going right back to what we had before we started, or before the Bussie suit. We haven't solved anything.

But, let's go on down a little further and see what this really does to the taxpayers. On line 22 of page 2, I'm going to read starting with line 21, "the correctness of the assessment by the assessor shall be subject to change". Now, in our original proposition, we say that this shall be subject to review by the governing authority, which is the police jury in most cases, or the man on the council in New Orleans. But now here. It says that this is subject to change by your police jury member. I'm going to ask you who in this group wants his police jury member to assess his property? I do not want my police jury member to assess my property. He is a mechanic. He is a good man. He runs a little body shop. But, he is not an assessor. He is not trained in the work.

We have another man up there who is a beautician. I certainly don't want him looking at the assessments of Rapides Parish. But that's what this act says. I want you to know, now, the lawyers that signed this, what you have put in here. But, let's go on a little further. Let's go down to line 28.

It said bona fide agriculture land and all of this shall be assessed at a percentage. It doesn't say at ten percent like we'd say. It doesn't say in fifteen, or it doesn't say at twenty-five. It can be set at any percentage in that. Not necessarily at the same. It says "According to Paragraph (B)." But it don't say it has to be assessed at the same percentage that other properties have to be assessed for. I'm telling you people who are farmers, or landowners, that it is doing something to you, also.

But, now, let's read on a little further to paragraph 2 where we get down to page 3, line 3. It says, "where you have a multiparish district." Now, let's look at that. We have the Red River Valley District which covers seven parishes from Rapides Parish to Caddo Parish. It says that the assessors in all seven parishes shall set the assessments. That means that I, as the assessor in Rapides, am going to be able to go up and assess Mr. Stagg's property in Caddo Parish, which is not what he wants. But, it's going to give me the privilege, along with the assessor in Grant Parish and a couple of more, of outvoting the man in Caddo. Do you think we're going to put it at twenty-five like he wants it? No. Not on my vote you're not. We're going to keep it down to ten percent. But, that's not what he wants. But, it says right here that that's what we can do.

Then, it goes on down to line twelve and what does it say? It says that these assessors, this board of assessors, can set the percentage. That's something that you don't let the police jury do by itself. The legislature must do it. But, here you are going to let this seven-member assessors' board set the percentage. As I read this saying, it is not too clear, I believe that the percentages that this governing authority of the Red River Valley District, can set the percentages of the school board and the police jury has to read. It doesn't say in here that they can't. You read that thing carefully, and you tell me where it says that.

Now, let's go on a little further. It says on page 3, on line 14, "The state treasurer shall disburse funds out of the state revenue sharing fund to the several local agencies." Now, what are they doing there? They are bypassing the sheriff. The sheriff is not going to get his commission out of this. So, we are going to have to have to go back and find some way to get a commission for the sheriffs in all sixty-four parishes. I'm telling you again that this does something to everybody. It has taken the percentage away from the sheriff. I don't believe you all meant to do that. But, that is what it is doing. In Rapides Parish, whenever you take this percentage away from the sheriff, you are going to wreck his office. Now, you better believe that. So, you look carefully at what he has put in here.

Now, we go on down to page 4.

Let's look on page 4, line 18. Now, here's where we get down to what he's done. It's telling about how the percentage of fair market value is changed, as for Section 1 of this Article, the value of the homestead exemption for all eligible home owners shall be adjusted to compensate for the change. Now, what is he saying here? He is saying that in Rapides Parish, if we use fifteen percent, we are going to get a three thousand dollar homestead exemption. But, if in Caddo they go to twenty-five percent, they are going to get a five thousand dollar exemption. The very people who hollered and said let's have a two thousand dollar exemption all the way through, are not going to change this so that in effect they are getting a five thousand dollar exemption, and they are going to pass more of the load on the business because there's going to be a given thousand dollar exemption on the homes under this article, and the businesses are going to be assessed at the flow of twenty-five percent.

Ladies and gentlemen, I had one other thing I was going to say, but it's been changed by an amendment. But, it was a sneaky little thing to set in there that in the case of a widow, that she was only to get the exemption to the full stead owned by the husband or the wife. You know what that could have easily meant? If the man had passed away and left a widow, that she was only going to get a half of a homestead exemption. But, thank goodness, they caught that and they changed it.

Mr. Chairman, that winds up my remarks. But, I want to take just a half a minute more to say, because I doubt that I will be back to this mike again, that this has been a wonderful year working with you people. I am going to support the document that we put out here. I don't think I could spend a whole year of my time, and then go back home and not work for it. We've got a good document. If this is put on as an alternate, I'm going to try every way in the world that I can to beat it. I urge you to defeat it right here because it is so bad. But again, let me say that this has been a good year working with you. I will remember it for a long, long time, and I will be out working to pass this constitution in District No. 27. Mr. Chairman I will now....

Questions

MR. WINCHESTER

Mr. Slay, do you know that I've been a good assessor in St. Mary Parish for a number of years, and my political parish is on the line right now? If we don't defeat this.....

MR. SLAY

I sure do, Mr. Winchester. I want you to know, and you know, too, that all of these provisions are now in the statutes against an assessor who doesn't do his job. The governor can remove him from office just like that. Is that not right?

MR. WINCHESTER

That's correct. Please don't do violence to my past.

MR. SLAY

We will treat you right, Mr.....

Further Discussion

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Acting Chairman, and delegates, Mr. Staggs came around and asked me if I would sign in order for him to be able to get his proposal brought before the audience. I said to him then, I will sign it to give you the opportunity to present it to the people. Personally, I was not in favor, just as an individual, I was not in favor of an alternative at all. I felt that many things in the constitution, to one person or the other, would be considered as an alternate. As much as some of the things in the constitution that I don't approve of, and probably some of the people in my district won't approve of, I put my name on that amendment to give him the opportunity to bring it before you. He has forty signatures on it, and mine is one. I'm not going to have my name taken off of the proposal because that would only leave thirty-nine. But I told him that would have no bearing on the way in which I voted. I'm going to vote the way that I feel that the people from District 102 would want me to vote. I have personally given some of them the identical language in our constitution concerning the property tax and other things. I've given it to them for their consideration. I've said to them, this is a package, you look in it, and you make your decisions as to whether you like it or not. I'm not going to force it on you because I was a part of the writing. So, I say to you, that if you see my name on there, it is not an endorsement for it or against. But, I am going to vote the way the people in my district have said that they liked it.

Thank you.

Further Discussion

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Acting Chairman, and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, not too many days ago, after long discussion, we decided by an overwhelming majority to give the people some alternatives, some options, so that the people could decide on things that they may be concerned about which are very controversial in this constitution. One of those things, insofar as many of the people in my city are concerned, is our treatment of the property tax. It seems to me that if we don't put this on the ballot as an alternative, we are very much underrating the people of the State of Louisiana. Don't forget that in recent years, most constitutional amendments have gone down to defeat, except those affecting the property tax. The people well understand those things that affect their pocketbooks. They study, they read, they put their time and attention to them; let us not assume that they won't understand. On what other assumption could you base a no-vote on this article? I think that perhaps Assessor Chehardy is correct; given the choice, the people will choose the language in Committee Proposal 26. But ladies and gentlemen, we don't really know unless we give the people the choice; unless we let them vote. There have been negative editorials in various papers on our treatment of the property tax. I submit to you that it will be very difficult--very difficult indeed, to pass this constitution with only our own voices and with the support of no papers, or very few.

Education is a complex area. The effect of two constitutional boards as opposed to five constitutional boards is complex and hard to understand. But, we trusted the people to the extent that we put that as an alternative on the ballot because we knew that they cared about the subject matter and would put the time and study into it that it needed. The same is true of the property tax, and it's more true of the property tax because that affects the pocketbooks of every voter in every municipality and parish in Louisiana. Ladies and gentlemen, that's everybody. Stump the state. Explain to the people the effects of these things, and let the people decide. Don't underrate them. They'll make wise decisions for themselves as they have in the past. If they can understand the constitution as a whole, as compared to the Constitution of 1921, they can surely understand this option and this one limited area.

Thank you very much.

Further Discussion

MR. MIRE

Thank you, Mr. Acting Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise, of course, in opposition of Delegate Proposal 101. I'd like just to point out two or three pertinent facts concerning this proposal. I don't--I hope that I'm not going to be repetitious. However, this is certainly most confusing; one of the main points is that it would be very near impossible to manage if it were constitutional. I have talked to numerous attorneys right here on the floor, possibly some that have signed this, that believe that it has serious constitutional problems. There was something mentioned about the 1921 Constitution. Let's just remember that the future of ad valorem taxes in the State of Louisiana does not rest with the 1921 Constitution, but with a court order that tells us specifically what we'll do if we don't have something in this document that will be accepted by the people. Now, also, alludes that industry is very much so disturbed about the proposal as we do have it presently in our document. Let me say that I come from the leading parish, or very near the leading parish in industrial development in the State of Louisiana. It is continually growing--growing today. I have a very good rapport with the people in industry. I have not had one--not one--come in and tell me that the proposal, as adopted by this constitution, says that represented an industry in my parish, said that they felt it was that unfair, or, in fact, asked me to change it in any respect. Therefore, I don't feel that it is that important, or just important as it was alluded to be.

One more thing that I'd like to point out to you. They speak of measuring the assessors' creditability with his voters. The reason he is elected is because nobody pays taxes. Ladies and gentlemen, then every municipality, every tax--every man has to pay taxes, with the exception of Orleans Parish, every assessor is gaged, and there are these municipalities as to how he, in fact, treats the taxpayers in these municipalities. Now, don't you think that they don't compare. They do compare. If you don't have an equitable tax system, you are going to fall by the wayside. But I think the fact that the assessors have been reelected time after time, many of them by no opposition at all, certainly tends to show that they are honorable, conscientious, public officials doing their duty, and responsive to the people. I urge you, I beg you, to not confuse the people of this state; not put a document that would not let them know at all what they may have to pay in the future; not let them know at all who will, in fact, actually have any authority over their assessments. It's at the whims--not whims--but it's at the wishes of the legislature, along with the wishes of the local taxing authority, based on this proposal that we have in front of us. Ladies and gentlemen, I think this is one area that the people want to know where they are going. They want to know what they are going to have to pay. We are going to be able to tell them what they are going to have to pay under our proposal. I urge you and beg you that you defeat this proposal.

Questions

MR. BURNS

Mr. Mire, do you believe, or do you think that any law that would permit twenty-five percent assessed in one parish, and ten percent in the adjoining parish represents uniform assessment practice?

MR. MIRE

No, sir, it doesn't. In parishes where you have multi-taxing districts, it would be a considerable problem, I can assure you.

MR. FULCO

Mr. Mire, with the fluctuation of the homestead exemption, along with the percentages, what effect would that have on city taxes? On your homes?

MR. MIRE

Thank you, very much, Mr. Fulco, for that question. I'd like to-- for a city tax, with the mandatory millage rollback, and adjustments as we have it, and they don't disturb that, that would remain--that would be a mute question because it would go up and down. But, I believe that the fluctuation of the percentages in various parishes would be the first blow to the death of homestead exemption. You could never have a meaningful reimbursement program on a statewide level based on various taxing percentages throughout the states, and throughout taxing districts. This, would be, of course, the first step in killing homestead exemption, which, in my personal opinion, is exactly what the people that are behind this proposal want to do--kill it, completely.

MR. FULCO

Just one more...question.
You say that you have an automatic adjusted millage for the city rates, too?

MR. MIRE

Yes, sir. We have an automatic....

MR. FULCO

I mean in Tom's proposal.

MR. MIRE

Yes, sir. But this won't disturb that in our proposal. If this is adopted, that portion of our proposal is not disturbed.
Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Further Discussion

MR. SCHMITT

I served during the last year with the other members of the Revenue, Finance and Taxation Committee, and we listened to voluminous testimony with reference to problems which existed in the past in the area of ad valorem taxation. Apparently, one of the worst problems was that of getting uniformity throughout the State of Louisiana and to have just and equitable treatment at least within each taxing district. The reason that we had so many of these problems was that the 1921 Constitution required one hundred percent assessment. Later, the situations changed. At the time when the two thousand dollar exemption went into effect, the average value of a home in the State of Louisiana was six hundred and fifty dollars. Therefore, just about every home in the state was exempt, and this kept them...people from losing their property during a time when the depression so hurt our country and the homeowners throughout the United States. I don't know how it will be possible in order to mandate some type of enforcement. At the present time there are many or some statutory requirements. The problem with enforcement of these statutory requirements was that if an assessor ever attempted to enact them in the past, the political future of that man would have been ended because this thing was a gradual problem. They gradually progressed to the point where there was nothing that the assessors could do about it. However, I do feel that in the future it will be necessary for some type of an enforcement procedure. Whether or not the enforcement procedure recommended by Mr. Stagg is the proper one, I do not know. That enforcement procedure is on page 3. It has a lot of teeth in it, and it's probably one of the strongest enforcement procedures which could be adopted. This one requires the cutoff of reimbursements for the homestead exemptions to the different parishes or taxing districts if there is a variation of more than ten percent in the assessment value. As an example, if in one parish the assessment should be one hundred million dollars and the assessor, through using the improper procedures, would put it on the rolls at fifty million dollars, unless the assessor brought this to within ten percent of the value within a three month period of time, that taxing district would lose the reimbursed funds. However, it would also apply in the situation where the assessor decides to make the assessment higher than what it should be. I think this is something, too, that we must take into consideration. Some parts of your state, at the present time, have a much higher ratio than other parts, and these assessors might have a tendency to keep the assessments high even though the constitution mandates that they be lowered. Therefore, this enforcement procedure would give justification for the assessors throughout the State of Louisiana either to raise or to lower the assessments in their individual districts and would remove the political cloud from being placed upon them by the enactment of these different procedures.

Now, whether or not this is the particular enforcement procedure which should be adopted, I do not know. However, I remember the words of the governor, and the governor indicated that some type of penalty should be issued against the assessor if he does not follow the new property tax regulations which we adopt. As of yet, I have not seen the administration's floor leaders come forth with the amendment to do this. I don't know whether they would want to co-endorse Mr. Stagg's enforcement procedures here, or they will come up with some alternative. However, I have not seen them as of the present time, and I am anxiously awaiting them. Thank you.

Amendments

MR. HARDIN

Delegate Landrum sends up an amendment, Mr. Chairman.
This is to amend the printed proposal.

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, delete lines 7 through 13, both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"(B) Classification. The classifications of property subject to ad valorem taxation and the percentage of fair market value applicable to each classification for the purpose of determining assessed valuation are as follows:

Classifications	Percentages
1. Land	15%
2. Improvements for residential purposes	15%
3. Other property	20%

However, upon adoption of an ordinance by the governing authority of any parish and with subsequent approval by the legislature, the percentage in any parish may be increased to twenty-five percent or decreased to ten percent of fair market value."

Amendment No. 2. On page 2, line 28, after the words "taxation at" and before the words "of use" delete the words "a percentage" and insert in lieu thereof the words "fifteen percent".

Explanation

MR. LANDRUM

Mr. Acting Chairman and fellow delegates, I wish to withdraw the amendment. It's not drawn to my liking, and therefore I wish to withdraw it.

I also wish to state this: that the proposal that was presented by Mr. Stagg, in my opinion, is not in the best interest of the people. I do believe that in...that the homeowners' taxation should be increased. I would like to see an increase, but I also would like to see a separation from that of homeowners and commercial properties. Mr. Stagg mentioned the fact that how much taxes the business people are paying in the communities in this state. But, they have so many ways--many ways--of getting part of it back, where the homeowners, whatever you put on them as taxation, they must pay without any course of recourse. They must pay their tax, now, even to the point of losing properties. I wish that he would change his proposal and make a distinction between the two. Thank you.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Further Discussion

MR. ABRAHAM

Ladies and gentlemen, I rise in support of this alternate proposal because I think we do need an alternate on the ballot, and I don't know of any better thing that we could place as an alternate than this because in here we are giving the people a choice of saying just what assessment value they want to be placed on their property. The thing I like about this is that there is some flexibility in here.

Now, in the proposal that we have that's been adopted by this convention, we fixed these assessment ratios. No one, no one in this state knows exactly what the ultimate effect of this is going to be. We don't know how it's going to affect the cities; we don't know how it's going to affect the rural areas. There is a possibility, a very strong possibility, that we could be doing great damage to the taxing base of the rural areas. This particular alternate will give some relief. It gives some flexibility so that if we find out that one assessment ratio cannot work for the entire state, then the local governing authorities are in a position to change it. I don't think there's a local governing authority in this state that's going to change this ratio unless it pretty well feels that the people in that particular parish want it that way. So, I'm not concerned about anyone exceeding his authority there. But, this does build some flexibility into it. This is what I think we need to have. I think this. . . this is what I am after.

I can't see anything that objectionable to this. Here, we are putting it to the people; we're giving them a choice. Throughout this convention I've heard this time and time again: "Let the people decide." This is an issue I think they can decide on. I feel like Mrs. Zervigon, when you hit them in the pocketbook, they're really going to look real close at what they're going to decide upon. I've studied this proposal. I've studied the proposal that we've already adopted. There's one thing that stands out in my mind, and that is the first sentence reads that "the power of taxation shall be vested in the legislature." Then, we've come in and put all kinds of legislative material into the article that we've adopted to restrict the power of taxation of the legislature. I think this eases it off a little bit--this backs us off. If the local governing authority, subject to approval by the legislature, feels that it needs to change its assessment ratio, then I think we ought to give them that flexibility. Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. BURNS

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I'm not going to take up any more time, and I hope I don't repeat anything that anybody else said. But there's one point that hasn't been discussed or hasn't been brought to the attention of this convention which I think is very important in connection with discussing these alternatives, because as I understand it, the sole purpose of an alternative is to give the voter and in this instance the taxpayer an opportunity to vote one way or the other. Now, this alternative is four and a half pages of very confusing and complicated wording and verbiage. But, you know what the people are going to be called on to vote if this would pass as to what is going to be on the ballot? On page 1, it's 2(A): "For permitting local option property taxation assessment and homestead exemption," and 2 (B) against it. There would be no voter that went to the polls that would know as to what he was voting on. He would have no idea that he was increasing the rate of assessment from ten percent to fifteen percent or up to twenty-five percent. He would naturally think when you use the word "local option" that it was going to be left to the police juries of his parish in whom he's, in most instances, familiar with each member, or the city council and the mayor of the town or the city where he would happen to live. Now, when we speak of local option in connection with this, local option means to me the local governing agency of the parish or of the city. This is not real local option with reference to fixing the rate of assessments in the state for this reason: the governing authority doesn't have the right to fix these rates. They would have to go to the legislature and take their chances on getting an act of the legislature passed. They might be successful and they might not, all depending on the attitude and the whim of the legislature. So, this is not what I call "local option." But, to the average voter and taxpayer who would be called on to go vote on this particular alternate, he would naturally think that it meant that his police jury or his city was going to have that authority. So, I ask you, let's vote against this and get on with the convention.

Question

MR. SLAY

Mr. Burns, you raised something there that I hadn't even thought about before. You're saying that on the ballot, now, that it would just be whether or not we was for local option. So, then whenever it comes out to putting the publicity on this thing, it would be Mr. Steimel with PAR on one side, and the chairman of our committee, Mr. Rayburn, on the other. Now, who do you think would control the news media--Mr. Rayburn or Mr. Steimel?

MR. CASEY

Senator De Blieux has a question, Mr. Burns.
You refuse to yield.
Senator De Blieux is now recognized for the floor.

Further Discussion

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen, first I want to make this statement with reference to the alternates. I think it is absolutely necessary, which has been said by Mr. Stagg and others from this microphone, that we have to have some alternates on the ballot. I'd like to tell you this: we've done a lot of things in this convention which I've had questions asked to me. But, I haven't had near as many questions asked about any matter as I have about education and taxes-- the five board deal and the tax assessment. Of course, the tax is the most complicated and the least understood of what we have done up here. I might tell you this with reference to the statement that was made by Mr. Burns: the voters are going to be given a copy of this constitution, according to what I saw that the Public Relations Committee has adopted. They are going to be able to see it, and just as any constitutional amendment or anything else appears on the ballot, you're not going to have the whole thing. You're not going to have what we have in the present constitution on the ballot. You are going to have something with reference thereto. By the same token, you won't know any more about the alternate from looking at the ballot than you will about what's contained in the constitution by looking at the ballot. So, you've got to trust the knowledge and explanation which we delegates, which the news media and which other people who are interested in giving to the people so that they can understand what we are talking about. I would venture to say that Mr. Chehardy and the rest of the people will certainly be telling them what the differences are in these two proposals if we put them on the ballot.

Now, we ought to give the people an alternative as whether or not they're going to select what we've presently adopted or whether or not they're going to select something else. I trust the voters in being able to make up their mind and their decision of what they think is best. I have no fear from that. Now, some people have made remarks to the extent that maybe they don't trust the voters by saying that they wouldn't know what they are voting on. I believe they will before they vote on this particular constitution. Mr. Slay, let me say this: at the present time, the police juries must set the taxes. They do it every year. By a resolution, they have to adopt the millages, etc. Otherwise, it would not be legal for the collector of taxes to collect those taxes. They set it by resolution each year--each year. That's the law, and at the present time, in the law, the assessors. . . the tax millage percentage is supposed to be set by the governing body, but they don't do it according to the law. They just do it by what's been recommended to them by the assessors, that it be. I call your attention to Title 47, Section 1989 in the paragraph there which says, "The lawful authorities of each parish which is a police jury or other governing body shall fix valuations at less than actual cash value as they deem fit, provided that the local purposes and the percentage shall operate equally upon all property within the parish." That's your present law. This proposal that we have before us at the present time conforms as close to the present law as anything that we've had put before us. There's nothing wrong with the law; the courts have said there's nothing wrong with the law. The only thing wrong is that we haven't been following it. We are charting a new course here, and if we utilize what's already adopted and don't give the voters to take the chance, no telling what kind of a chaotic we are going to get into if we try to put into effect what we have already adopted.

At the present time, there's no percentages in the constitution, and actually, there shouldn't be. I would go for that. But, yet we are trying to put into this new constitution percentages, and I think we ought to have some local option and let the local governments determine what percentage that they want to operate upon. That's. . . presently, they have that right and privilege, but they just haven't been exercising it.

Further Discussion

MR. CASEY

Mr. Acting Chairman and delegates, I rise to urge your support and your vote for the local option plan submitted by Mr. Stagg, in Delegate Proposal No. 101. As you know, during the debate on the committee proposal affecting ad valorem taxes, you know very well that I staunchly opposed that proposal and left no doubt in your mind where I stood on it and urged at the time when we discussed the possibility of local option that you adopt some form of local option in an effort, with the possibility, in the hope that we may better be able to solve the ad valorem tax problem on a local level rather than with a fixed inflexible type of percentage that is established in the constitution allowing, therefore, to local authority through Delegate Proposal No. 101 the flexibility that is necessary for local government to collect its taxes, to run its business and not the business of the state, as such, for which we raise revenues through taxation imposed by the legislature—but, to run local government. This is the basis that . . . this is the basis for the operation of local government—the ad valorem tax system. We have no state ad valorem taxes anymore under the new constitution, although they may be authorized in the future. At the time of the adoption of this constitution, we will not have state real estate taxes. Real estate taxes only will be used to conduct the operation, and the business, and the administration of government on the local level. So, local government should be able to have some flexibility to obtain the revenues that are necessary to conduct its own business. In the city of New Orleans, for instance, at this time a homeowner that owns a forty thousand dollar home is paying two hundred and forty dollars, average, in real estate taxes. A homeowner that owns a fifty thousand dollar home is paying annual taxes of two hundred and eighty dollars. If he owns a sixty thousand dollar home, he's paying annual taxes of four hundred dollars. Do you know what's going to happen under this new proposal? Those very people will have their taxes reduced, and today, those are the very people that are going to be against the real estate committee tax proposal that we have already adopted, because those people are the ones that want good services. They want a functional, efficient local government, and they want to pay their fair share of the taxes. Those are the ones that are complaining about the mystery proposal—and that's what I call it, the mystery proposal—that you have already adopted in the new constitution with the committee proposal because you really don't know the impact of it. You know very well that it isn't flexible, and you don't know what's going to happen in Shreveport, except you know pretty sure that the tax burden is going to shift from the homeowner to the owner of the small business and the renters. Do you know what's going to happen in the city of New Orleans? For instance, Number One Shell Square—a ridiculous situation—Number One Shell Square where the land value at this time is assessed at thirty-three and a third percent, the taxes are going to be reduced. The taxes are going to be reduced on the land under Number One Shell Square. Now, that's an absurd, ridiculous situation that we are causing through the committee proposal which we have already adopted. I can tell you right now that the people in New Orleans who are interested in their government, who are interested in obtaining services are extremely upset with the committee proposal. There are many of those very same people that may vote against the new constitution.

I think we ought to offer them this alternative, this possibility that they have some out, that they have something palatable that they can accept if we want them to vote for the new constitution. I can't urge you enough to adopt this delegate proposal to offer our people in the State of Louisiana the alternative. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Further Discussion

MR. ROEMER

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise also to support the alternative as proposed by Delegate Stagg. I wonder if in our consideration the last two days, of alternatives, if we'd really thought what an alternative is supposed to be and what it is trying to do to the benefit of our new constitution. You know, there's some things we've done in this convention that are untried and perhaps will be proved not to be workable, not to be feasible. I can tell you, after sitting for one year with Senator Rayburn and the other members of our committee, that there's not a member of our committee that can get up and say flatly and positively that what we've passed already in this constitution is truly to the benefit either to the state or to the local governments of our state. The issue is that confused. If there is any issue in the constitution that needs alternatives, that needs to have both sides told, it's the question of property taxes. You have been literally barraged in the last twelve months with little people speeches, with speeches about the homeowner. Well, we all care about those elements in our population. But, the same people that barrage you with that propaganda failed to point out to you that the very things we've passed in this convention might very well work to the detriment of the little people, because who are the little people? Well, some forty percent of them in this state rent their apartments or their homes. They don't own them at all, and the homestead exemption won't help them one iota. As a matter of fact, the homestead exemption, by being so high and in effect shifting the burden to the businessman in the state, and to the people with lots of property in this state, and the people that pay their fair share of taxes in this state are going to mean that the increase in the tax burden on these people is going to inevitably have to be passed to the renter—has to be, can't be any other thing.

So, I'm suggesting to you on the big question of alternatives that the place where we need alternatives are those places where there are two sides to the argument. There is no question, either if a tax assessor gets before you or a person like myself, there is no question from any party who studied this problem that there are at least two sides to this question. I'd like to congratulate Mr. Stagg for giving us a chance to present to the people an alternative which does present to them both sides of the issue, because what Mr. Stagg's alternative will do will say that, yes, we want a reasonable homestead exemption. Twenty thousand dollars seems to be a more reasonable figure than thirty. I'll tell you why: the average home in this state is less than twenty thousand. If we put it at the twenty thousand mark, we will have exempted more than half of the homes in this state. More than half of the homes in this state will be exempt under his plan. What will not be exempt? It will be the twenty-five, thirty, thirty-five, forty, fifty thousand dollar homes. Who lives in these kind of homes? People that can afford to pay property taxes because the property taxes in Louisiana are the lowest in the nation. But, what do those taxes go for? They go to support your local governments, schools, police jury, roads, sidewalks, fire protection, police protection, water, sewerage—the very things that the home costs in this state. Is it not right that a man in a thirty or a forty or a fifty thousand dollar home should pay a small percentage of the cost of that home to our society? I think that's what this alternative does for us. It puts clearly before us and before the people—and that's more important—the choice. Do they want to pay their fair share of taxes? Do they want to pay those few dollars in ad valorem taxes to support the institutions that make this state great? I hope that you consider carefully this alternative. It's got some problems. I think one of them would be corrected by the Bollinger amendment which puts to a vote of the people rather than to ratification of the legislature a change in these assessment practices.

You know, the final point I want to make is the very people who fight this alternative are the people that assure you carte blanche that the people want higher homestead exemptions. Well, if they're that dadgum sure about it, what's wrong with putting an alternative on the ballot, because surely the alternative will be beaten if what they tell you is true? I submit to you, however, just the contrary. That is that in many elements of this state the renter, the poor people, the people that live in parishes where the assessor has been utilizing a high assessment ratio, the people of New Orleans, the people of Shreveport, these are the people who are concerned about the constitution as we have presently written.

I suggest to you that this alternative will give them a choice and more important . . . will put their interest behind the constitution. I urge your adoption of the alternative.

Delegate Reeves in the Chair

Questions

MR. MIRE

Mr. Roemer, you said, and very rightly so, that nobody could definitively tell you the exact effect that Proposal No. 26 would have on the taxpayers of the state. But, you alluded that this particular proposal was an alternate to this and that you could definitively say what effect this would have on the people of the state. Can you in good conscience tell me kindly what this proposal is going to do to the people? I'm talking about the taxpayers of the state.

MR. ROEMER

No, I understand your point. I did not mean to convey that impression. The point I was trying to make, Peg, is that in an issue this complex perhaps the presentation of both sides will give the people affected a chance to make their own choice, knowing full well that the choice they make may or may not work either way they go, but at least they will understand what they've done to themselves and not what we've imposed on them. I want to further say that the proposal as we wrote it in our committee, and if we wrote it in this constitution proposed, in good conscience I think is a decent proposal; I do think that. All I'm suggesting to you is that the decency of the proposal can perhaps be best brought out in debate, debate that will stem from an alternative presentation on the constitution.

120th Days Proceedings—January 17, 1974

MR. FULCO

Buddy, I had asked you earlier what the proposal was by the group opposing the assessor's plan that might have affected....that brought about the compromise. May I ask you again that same question?

MR. ROEMER

Sure, Frank. Well, there were three or four original proposals, Frank—one from the assessor's prior committee called for a one hundred thousand homestead exemption and called for various rates. I forget what those rates were. We came down to probably a fifty thousand dollar homestead exemption with rates on the one hand of ten percent across the board and on the other hand of fifteen and twenty percent. The compromise was reached on this floor of ten and fifteen with an effect of a thirty thousand dollar homestead exemption. I thought at the time, and I think now, that it was a decent compromise. However, a compromise by its very nature leaves a lot of.....from both sides.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

We have a Bollinger amendment now; it has been distributed. Amendment No. 1. On page 2, line 10, after the word "parish" delete the remainder of the line and at the beginning of line 11, delete the words and punctuation "by the legislature," and insert in lieu thereof the following: "and with approval by a majority of the electors of the parish voting on the question at an election held for that purpose,"

Explanation

MR. BOLLINGER

Mr. Acting Chairman and fellow delegates, I think regardless of all the other sections of Mr. Stagg's alternatives, when you look on page 2, Section 1, Paragraph (B) and read it in comparison to everything else we have talked about with regards to property taxes, you see that there is a tremendous change in the article on Local and Parochial Government, Committee Proposal No. 17, Section 27 which deals with finance says, and I quote, "Millage rates may be increased in any parish when approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon in an election held for that purpose." We are saying in Local and Parochial Government, that for the local governing authorities to raise local taxes, the people have to agree that it is necessary, and they have to agree that they want to back themselves. In Paragraph (B) of Section 1 it says, "however, upon adoption of an ordinance by the governing authority of any parish, and with subsequent approval by the legislature, the percentage in any parish may be increased to twenty-five percent or decreased to ten percent." In essence, what he is saying here is that with the local ordinance and a majority of votes of the legislature your local property taxes can be raised because by raising your percentage of assessment and not lowering your mills, in essence, you are raising your property tax. My amendment only deals with this part of the alternative. It deletes the approval of the legislature because there is really no reason for the legislature to approve a local tax. If the local people want to approve it, it is their prerogative and they should approve it. However, what it does require is the referendum of the people to say that if we are going to change the percentage of assessments, we are going to change it only with the approval of the people. I move the adoption of the amendment and will answer any questions.

Questions

MR. STINSON

Mr. Bollinger, but you're also letting people that may not be property owners vote to tax on....increase the tax on the property owners; aren't you?

MR. BOLLINGER

Mr. Stinson, I agree with you, of course, that is not my....if I had my druthers, I wouldn't have nonproperty owners voting. But, the Supreme Court has ruled that all people, all electors can vote in property tax elections and that is not my wishes but it is the court's ruling.

MR. STINSON

Well, we still don't have to agree with the Supreme Court; do we?

MR. LANIER

Mr. Bollinger, as much as we would like, unfortunately this convention does not have the authority to overrule the United States Supreme Court, does it?

MR. BOLLINGER

That's correct, Judge Lanier.

MR. LANIER

Let me ask you this: don't you think, in view of the fact that the people have the right to vote on increases in millages, that it is only consistent if we provide that the people also have the right to select their own assessment ratio?

MR. BOLLINGER

That is definitely right and that is the purpose of the amendment.

MR. LANIER

And, this business about the legislature having the right to veto, particularly, in a home rule municipality or a home rule parish, this idea of the legislature having the right to veto would not be consistent with the policy of home rule would it?

MR. BOLLINGER

No, it wouldn't. Also, Mr. Lanier, I think it's just window-dressing because if the local governing authority passed an ordinance then that you could increase or decrease assessments, I think the legislature would automatically, as a formality, go along with them just like they do on most local bills that are offered. I think it's more of a formality in this thing. I don't think they should have the right to veto, as you say.

MR. LANIER

Wouldn't you agree, however, that the greatest danger in giving the legislature the veto power in this situation would be that the legislature, if it wished, could refuse to agree to any changes and that way, in effect, you would have no local option at all; isn't that correct?

MR. BOLLINGER

That is true.

Mr. Acting Chairman, so that the people of this state will know if their delegates wished them to be voting on increases in taxes, I request a record vote on this amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. CHATELAIN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in support of this amendment. I think the amendment is good. I think that Delegate Proposal No. 101 of which we are speaking to, at the same time, is a very good deal for the people of this state. I think very definitely that an alternate is needed on the ballot. I think this amendment to this proposal is a very good amendment. I would certainly urge your support. If you do decide to go along with this amendment, I would like to, Mr. Chairman, speak later to the reason why we should have a proposal. I urge your support of the Bollinger amendment.

[Previous Question ordered. Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted: 86-22. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Further Discussion

MR. HAYES

Mr. Acting Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I guess you could count this against the proposal because: (1) I think we need an incentive to clear up the slums. I have been in the building business for a little while and I've found that the biggest problem we have to clearing up the slums is to get people to build new homes. You'll find people living in homes that are exempt making twenty-five, and thirty thousand dollars, and forty thousand dollars. You can't stop a person from living in a home exempt based on his salary. If you don't leave an incentive for a person to want to build a home, you will then force them to crowd up in the slums and this will add to crime. This would also force that nonprofit cooperations, the churches that you give the tax exempt status to to get the tax exemption on their apartments and the people were very low in the apartments and will not build a home. The young couples are the ones who get caught with the tax scuffle. A young couple now building a home, what you're thinking about building when I was out there for fifteen thousand dollars and sixteen costing forty-five thousand dollars, will even pay taxes now. My main objection is here, like automobiles, I found that in building homes they all had about the same thing in them--three bedrooms, two bathrooms, lot, and etc., etc.; they all have about the same things in them, they are a little larger. Now, you go out and you check your car; you can go from a Volkswagon to a Cadillac; they are basically the same. Then, I can't see why a person should suffer such high penalty because his house is just a little bigger. Now, remember this, everyone must live in some type of shelter. If he can't provide it for himself, then the government or some special agency will have to provide it for him. So, I'm asking you then to leave some type of incentive for him to do it for himself; they are already taxed to the hilt. It's the young people like you are putting this tax on, it's not the people already established; they are not going to be taxed. Again, you cannot tax the big man with all of the money; you're not going to ever get him. You are always going to get that person who is just starting out with a four hundred dollar note, forty-five thousand dollar house and they are just scuffling trying to clear up what I call a scuffle. Now, some people would rather do this through urban renewal and federal legislation. You can do it by simply giving a homestead exemption; what's the difference? Thank you.

120th Days Proceedings—January 17, 1974

Questions

MR. TOCA

Delegate Hayes, would you agree we are trying to sell a new constitution in this state?

MR. HAYES

Yes, sir. I agree with you, Mr. Toca, and I have....go ahead.

MR. TOCA

Would you also agree if we go around this state and tell the people we're going to raise their property taxes, what chances do we have of selling this constitution?

MR. HAYES

This is not telling anybody that you are going to raise any property taxes; I don't gather this at all as saying you're going to raise the property taxes. I've heard a lot of people get up to this podium and say....

MR. CHATELAIN

Delegate Hayes, aren't we discussing at this moment whether or not we are going to have an alternate on the ballot, sir? Isn't that what we are discussing?

MR. HAYES

Yes, sir.

MR. CHATELAIN

Well, it has nothing to do with raising the people's taxes; is that right?

MR. HAYES

I don't see where it would raise any taxes. The only thing I could see, Mr. Chatelain, usually when a person comes up or if they have an issue, they always decide what is going to.... I have heard more about what will pass and what will defeat the constitution up here than any other place---everybody who comes up here seems to know the answer; I have heard it so much. It looks like if we know that, somebody ought to just write it down and give it to somebody. I have never said what will pass or defeat this constitution, because I don't know.

Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. CHATELAIN

Mr. Acting Chairman and fellow delegates, I just wish you would give me your attention for just a few minutes; I'll try not to take the five minutes. But, I urge you to stop and think a while. Think about what we are speaking about this morning. What is the topic of discussion this morning? We are discussing whether or not we are going to put another alternate on the ballot for the people of this state to have a choice. Since we came here on July 5 you, as well as I, have heard many, many discussions on the vital issue of taxation as it relates to people's property in this state. You have heard many people come here. You in the committee meetings have heard people up here before the committee meetings and discuss the problem of taxation. You heard the governor saying before you last week and discuss a very serious problem as it relates to taxation on our homes and property in this state. We are here today to do what I think is justice in the final hours of drafting a constitution for all the people of this state. I would urge you to think a while before you cast your vote. I say that today, that this very hour, will reflect the labors of our work here for the last six months and a year--six months in this convention hall and for one year in committee meetings. We are discussing whether or not the people in Caddo Parish, Orleans Parish, and other parts of this state would have an option to raise their own taxes. They would have to go to the polls and do this. But, they wouldn't be limited to a certain percentage as set forth in the committee proposal. This is what we are discussing here this morning is an alternate on the ballot. We had a fight here for the last two or three days on whether or not there should be an alternate on the ballot as it relates to education in this state---a very vital issue, a very vital concern to many people in this state. This is no less serious than the idea of education or business of education. This deals with the very life blood, the political life blood and the economic life blood of the citizens of this state. It has to do with whether or not they can have better schools or better communities if they want that; this is what we are discussing, an alternate, whether to have an opportunity to vote for Mr. Stagg's idea or what we have already adopted in this convention. This is what we are talking about. I say to you, Mr. Chehardy and others, I say to you: Give those people a chance to vote as they wish, as we have given the people an opportunity to vote in the area of education. Let's give them this opportunity; this is not too much; it's not asking too much. This is what the people are entitled to. I urge that you would give them an opportunity to vote. I would urge that you support Delegate Proposal No. 101 as amended by the Bollinger amendment. I think it's good for the people. I think it's good for everyone in this state. I urge your support.

Question

MR. LANDRUM

Mr. Chatelain, do you know that I believe the committee proposal is harmful to New Orleans and to other cities? But, tell me, do you believe industry and residential property should be assessed at the same evaluation?

MR. CHATELAIN

No comment, sir.

MR. LANDRUM

No comment?

Further Discussion

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Mr. Acting Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I feel compelled to come before you at this moment because some of you requested of me, "Was I in favor of this proposal?" When Mr. Stagg contacted me, I felt that I would sign it because, possibly, he had some difficulty getting sufficient names to bring it forth. But, at that time I advised him that, at this late hour, I was not in favor of this delegate proposal. As many of you are well aware that in committee I was at odds with Mr. Chehardy and the various other assessors for many, many months. I stood for what I thought was right. They stood for what they thought was right. But, in the end I feel what we came up with in this proposal and what the committee adopted in the committee proposal as presented and amended on this floor is the best proposal for all of the people of this State of Louisiana. I think that it provides adequate rollbacks and roll forwards, that it provides a real and substantial way that local government can get their homestead exemptions returned to them from the state treasurer. I think that it is one of the best proposals in this constitution. I suggest to you delegates, that now is not the time to come before these people and say, "Take this or take that", that I say it's time for us to get out and explain what we did. When we hear people referring in the newspaper or in the news media to falsifications about what we did, it's time for us to stand up and explain what we did--this convention. I think that we must take the positive approach because there are those who say, "Give them a choice." We gave them a choice. We submitted ourselves to the people and they chose us as what they thought was the best people to represent their wishes. Now, I tell you, ladies and gentlemen, that the only problem is that if you submit this as an alternate in my area there's going to be a lot of people vote "for" and "against" the constitution. They are going to walk out of that polling places and that's the end of their hopes. I wouldn't want to take a possibility that ten percent of the people of this state might alter the wishes of what ninety percent of those voting want to do.

Questions

Question

MR. WEISS

Delegate Champagne, the proposal before us lists particularly permitting local option property taxation. Doesn't the present constitutional article allow just that by allowing the local people to vote a millage change? The millage change would do the same thing as this article, and it seems quite confusing to present to the public when, really, they have this option at local level at this time; is that not correct?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

That's correct.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

Further Discussion

MR. D'GEROLAMO

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise in opposition to Delegate Proposal No. 101. I believe that contrary to a very, very few people in the State of Louisiana--and when I say a few, you can count them on one hand--we do have a salable constitution. Do you know why we have a salable constitution...because the delegates here, over the past year, have worked hard for what we believe in and for what we know the people back home want. In the various meetings we have had, we have satisfied the municipalities, the local officials in the home rule charters and protecting home rule government. In local and parochial government we have also satisfied these local officials and police jurors throughout the state. We have satisfied the assessors, district attorneys, sheriffs, clerks of court and many, many other elected officials who are elected and represent all of the people of the State of Louisiana and their thinking. We have now, at this time, just about satisfied the governor of Louisiana that we do have a good, good, good project here, and a salable document. But, I think it's about time that we do not forget to satisfy and protect the most important element of this state--the people of Louisiana and how we are going to protect the people of Louisiana... by their most cherished possessions--their homes. How do you protect their homes to assure a man who has worked from one day to thirty years for the purpose of paying for his home the protection that he will have his home and his home will not be taxed out of reach? I believe the men and ladies who worked on revenue and taxation and the proposal that was finally compromised by the ten, ten, and fifteen is an equitable program and it is salable to the people of Louisiana. The people of Louisiana want to know how much their taxes are going to be. Before they vote for this constitution, they want to know the percentage; they want to know what is their homestead exemption going to be, and how much their yearly taxes is going to be. How much that note that they owe to the bank or the homestead is going to be raised by what we do here in this convention. That is what the people in my district want to know and the people in your district want to know before they vote for or against this constitution. Mr. Bollinger's amendment is a good amendment. But, let me tell you this: This is like attaching a pirote to the Titanic as its life preserver. This is a bad, bad proposal because the people of the State of Louisiana, should they want to raise their taxes, they have a very, very good vehicle either in municipalities or parish government. All they have to do is go to their local governing authorities and put before the people bond issues for specific purposes and let the people vote on whether they want these specific purposes or not. The people do not want to give politicians, elected officials, a blank check and say "Raise my taxes or lower my taxes as you see fit and use the money as you see fit." They want to know where their money is going; how it's going to be spent, and they want to know whether the proposition that they are going to vote for is what they want. Now, I wonder, ladies and gentlemen, and I hope this is not true, my feeling is wrong, I hope my feeling is wrong. But, sometimes you get a little skeptical and you wonder maybe the proponents of a proposal such as this are trying to kill the entire portion of the constitution dealing with property taxes because I am sure, with the lawsuits that we now have, and certainly the ones that will come up later on, there is no way in the world of equalizing taxes statewide by local option. We're certainly going to have differences of percentages statewide. Now, if this is the case, well, I am sorry of the thinking of some of the people of this convention.

I urge the defeat of this proposal.

MR. STINSON

On this, isn't it automatically a raise or increase to fifteen percent whether your parish would vote against it or not, the rest of the state would automatically raise Bossier Parish, we'd say, by the passage of this alternate?

MR. D'GEROLAMO

Mr. Stinson, this would raise throughout the state from ten percent to fifteen percent. You're going back home and tell the people, "I changed my mind, instead of ten percent I'm going to raise you now five percent."

MR. STINSON

Also, then I would have to get the police jury to call an election . . . my people would, but on the . . . they say a majority vote of the taxpayers, but it doesn't set up the machinery for that election. Don't you think that's defective?

MR. D'GEROLAMO

That is exactly right.

MR. STINSON

Next thing is, it says that any parish may increase to twenty-five percent. Now, it doesn't say to twenty percent, or it doesn't say not over twenty-five. It has to go either from fifteen to twenty-five, the way it's drawn, isn't it?

MR. D'GEROLAMO

At the will of the local governing authority.

MR. STINSON

Also, it has to be reduced from fifteen to ten, not from fifteen to twelve or anything. They've got it tied in; it doesn't say not more or not less. Don't you think that's plainly defective?

MR. D'GEROLAMO

I interpret it exactly like that, Mr. Stinson.

Mr. Speaker, if there's no further speakers, I call for the previous question.

Further Discussion

MR. LOWE

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I really hadn't planned to speak on any alternatives, and I wouldn't be speaking on this alternative except that I really believe I have something to tell you. This particular provision says that "by approval of the local governing authority and by the voters." You can't hear? I can speak louder or else they can turn up the mike; I don't know which we prefer. You all make out like I'm Gordon Flory up here and see if you can let me be heard. Is that better, do I sound like Gordon Flory now? No. Make out like I'm Vic Bussie and see if you can help me out a little. Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, what I'm saying is that I didn't plan to speak on any of these alternates but I think that I have something I can let you think about and see if you agree with. We've just amended the proposal that said that we can raise from fifteen percent of fair market value up to twenty-five percent by a vote of the local governing authority and with approval of the voters in that district. Now, another section says that once we do that, that we will adjust homestead exemptions proportionately to take care of that adjustment. Now, let's take a hypothetical example. At fifteen percent we would be exempting a twenty thousand dollar home. Fifteen percent of twenty thousand is three thousand. Let's assume we raise the millage by fifty percent, from fifteen to twenty-two and half percent. Then that exempts a twenty thousand dollar . . . a forty-five thousand dollar homestead exemption would be in effect. We would have to provide twenty-two percent of twenty thousand . . . I mean fifty percent of twenty thousand and we would come up again and make the adjustment. So, we would end up with a forty-five hundred dollar homestead exemption. I see some people shaking their heads, they say and you read what we say in here and what it says is, "however, if the percentage of fair market value or use value is changed in any parish as authorized by Paragraph (B) of Section I of this article. The value of the homestead exemption for all eligible homeowners shall be adjusted to compensate for the change." How do you compensate for the change? The rates go up fifty percent, so the homestead exemption goes up fifty percent. So that raises the three thousand dollar homestead exemption to forty-five hundred dollars. Okay, so that offsets that increase for the homeowner, as I appreciate it. Now, but what happens for the business? I have heard it said that, "Well, you can't collect any more in that district than you did before because you have the rollup and the rollback provisions." Well, I'm not sure that's true because in the rollup and the rollback provisions, if I remember correctly, it says that you can't collect any more the first year after this is placed into effect. But, suppose we go five or ten years down the line and decide to raise it from fifteen percent to twenty-two and a half percent. Is the rollup and rollback applicable? I'd say that here I've had a concern in the past about shifting some taxes from industry to the homeowner. I have some fear here that we could very well shift all of this increase from the homeowner to industry. I don't think that's fair. I think that if you read this, you could tend to agree with me. Now, I haven't had much chance to look at it, but if anyone can tell me it doesn't say that, well, I would stand corrected, but at this moment I think it says just that. I ask you to defeat this proposal because of that.

120th Days Proceedings—January 17, 1974

Questions

MR. FLORY

Mr. Lowe, as I appreciate what you're saying, that figure of ten thousand angels we heard the other day, you'd have to raise it to twenty thousand angels to pass this if this proposal is adopted, right?

MR. LOWE

Well, Gordon, I think if this is a proposal that wants to accomplish one thing, I think it's doing something else and I think we would have to get us a better vanguard, yes, sir, of angels. I think we have one at the mike over here now.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Lowe, do you think . . . well, you know that revenue sharing is really the reimbursement to local government for what they lose with reference to homestead exemption; you know that?

MR. LOWE

Yes, sir. You've explained that to me.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Now, do you think that one political subdivision or one parish ought to be able to get more on a homestead exemption than another parish gets on it?

MR. LOWE

No, sir. I don't believe that. I think it ought to support . . .

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, don't you think that if there is a variance in the local option for percentages that they ought to adjust their homestead accordingly?

MR. LOWE

I agree with that a thousand percent, Senator De Blieux, and I didn't . . . you're making a point that I have no quarrel with. The quarrel I had . . .

All right. The point that I made was that we're going to be shifting from the homeowner to industry with this proposal, if we do, in fact, raise it. That's the point I made, not about the point you questioned me, Senator.

Closing

MR. STAGG

Mr. Chairman, I have listened with great interest to the speakers who have been to the microphone this morning, who for reasons of their own have concluded that they don't believe that we need an alternative in the ad valorem tax field. That is their privilege. On yesterday, the convention decided that there shall be an alternative in another controversial area of this constitution-- that of the governance of education. I think the convention acted wisely in furnishing an alternative; whether I agree with the content of that alternative is not the question. As a matter of fact, I thought it missed the mark a bit, but there will be an alternative for education. It is my feeling that we need an alternative in the property tax field. Mr. Toca, I'm trying to talk to you and the other delegates. I listened to you when you talked, now would you listen to me while I talk because I'm not going to be here very long and this convention is about to be over. I want to leave you with one small message. When the election is over and the result is known, and should our work be rejected, please consider whether or not your vote on this delegate proposal, however much you may disagree with it, whether your vote on this proposal may have contributed to that doleful result. This is the hundred and twentieth day of our deliberations and I've enjoyed them all. I've won some, and I've lost some, but I have enjoyed them. But, did we, on January the 17th, make the wrong decision about an alternative on property taxes? When you consider that prospect, I should hope that you would urge and vote that there shall be an alternative to the Property Tax Proposal. Mr. Chairman, I have no other remarks to say except that I have enjoyed the association with each and every one of you.

[Proposal failed to pass: 31-83.
Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Point of Information

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman, just a question as to where we stand under the rules as to scheduling. There was some question back in this part of the room as to whether the other alternative proposals may be submitted. May they?

MR. HENRY

They have already been submitted. I think they can be considered, and we will consider them after lunch. Yes, ma'am.

MS. ZERVIGON

They may be considered. Thank you.

Recess

[Quorum Call: 67 delegates present
and a quorum.]

MR. POYNTER

I'd like to at this time. . . we're getting ready here in just a minute to set up on my left and your right a table containing the copy-- the signature pages for you to sign for the eventual document. Again, the purpose of it will be so that eventually each of you will have an original copy individually signed--not reproduced--that will be transmitted to you. Now, we're going to have chairs there available for you. It's going to take a lot of cooperation. First of all, please, so that other copies can be made, it's essential that all copies be signed in black ink. The printer has encouraged me about five different times to please make sure that you do sign it in black ink. I realize it's going to take some time for you to do it, but that's the only way everyone will have an individual copy, as you just sit there and go through the process. The pages will be there and try to turn pages for you and help. It's six pages; six of you can do it at a time.

Reading of the Proposal

MR. POYNTER

Next proposal is Delegate Proposal No. 102 introduced by Delegate Vick, Abraham and others.

A proposal to provide with respect to an alternative provision relative to the Judicial Branch.

Explanation

MR. VICK

Mr. Chairman, there are some technical amendments that are coming, I believe. During the course of this convention some months ago, in heated debate, my good friend-- or I should say, our good friend-- Camille Gravel, said from this microphone that "I've tried logic and that has failed, and perhaps this afternoon I'll attempt sympathy." Well, I can't believe that this body has rejected logic, the tenor of the times (including Watergate and all of its ramifications), and history -- primarily legal history-- but the history of this state as well. Mind you, I'm not rejecting any sympathy votes, and with only sixty-seven delegates in the house, I'll take any kind I can get. The power of the attorney general to initiate criminal prosecutions has been in either the constitution of this state or the statutes since 1813, which was its inception as a state in this Union. Forty-four states in this Union allow the attorney general, their respective attorneys general to initiate local prosecutions and this would make, if this convention rejects this alternate and goes with the proposal that's currently in the constitution, we would drop from the list of states and that would make only forty-three. So, Louisiana would again be taking a step backward. Now, the American Law Institute and the American Bar Association and the President's Commission on Law Enforcement have said in study after study that the trend to increase the power of the attorney general on a state basis is absolutely essential in order to further the ends of good law enforcement, and the reasons for that are numerous. But, remember ladies and gentlemen, if you will, remember, because I'm going to repeat this over and over again, the attorney general of this state is not asking that his powers be increased, but remain the same. The President's Commission on Law Enforcement and the Administration of Justice, which was in a book entitled The Challenge of Crime in a Free Society, in 1967 said, and I quote, "at common law the attorney general had full authority over local prosecutions. The office of county or district attorney represented a division of the attorney general's powers. In those states where the local prosecutor is independently selected the attorney general should retain power to initiate prosecutions when, in his opinion, the interests of the state so require." That's exactly what we have in the Constitution of '21. The President's Commission went on to say, "experience demonstrates, that such authority when granted is used only infrequently." That is also the history of this state, ladies and gentlemen, that he has had the power and it has been used very infrequently. Further, the President's Commission said, and I quote, "in those rare instances where local prosecutors are unable or unwilling to prosecute, the attorney general should be able to enter the case and assist or direct the prosecutor. When such power exists, it is rarely exercised. But, it should be available to the attorney general and we have that power now." Again, ladies and gentlemen, these are the recommendations of the President's Commission on Law Enforcement. Louisiana fits that mold. This convention by its vote has seen fit, as the attorney general said in his memorandum to you the other day, to strip him of those two important functions. Where are we now? What do we have? Again, I refer to Dean Sullivan's letter to the attorney general of December 14th, wherein he says,--insofar as the power we're concerned with today, the power over criminal prosecutions, in commenting on his present powers in Section 56, of Article VII of the Constitution of '21--and I quote, "This can only be interpreted as a plain and clear grant of authority to the attorney general to institute, prosecute and intervene in any criminal prosecution brought in the name of the state in a court of criminal jurisdiction." Further, Article 62, of the Code of Criminal Procedure reinforces this grant in the following language: "The attorney general has authority to institute and prosecute or to intervene in any proceedings as he may deem necessary for the assertion or the protection of the rights and interests of the state." Now, on page 2, ladies and gentlemen, Dean Sullivan deals with a case that you have heard discussed from this microphone. It was decided in 1943 and dealt with a super-session by the then Attorney General Stanley, in a case involving Tangipahoa Parish and we have today, two of the descendants of the participants in that case. We have here, Chalin Perez, who represented the D.A. in Tangipahoa, and we have Sheriff Edwards, whose father was involved in that litigation. Ladies and gentlemen, the holding in this case has been so misstated, so confused, so obfuscated, and Dean Sullivan lays it to rest I think in some respects, but let me tell you what the attorney general considers to be the holding in Kemp v. Stanley. It's very simple, that if a district attorney is doing his job, the attorney general cannot intervene or supersede. There are those who agree with the attorney general. It may not be the District Attorneys' Association, but Dean Sullivan goes further, and I won't bother to read it all to you. But, he says, and I quote, "it should be pointed out that the power of the attorney general is a discretionary one, which he may exercise or not in the constitutional language quote, 'as he may deem necessary for the assertion or protection of the rights and interests of the state'." Certain language in Kemp would indicate that this discretionary power may be reviewed by the courts. Well, of course, ladies and gentlemen, there isn't a thing that we do that's not subject to judicial review. The work of this convention is subject to judicial review. Now, another point that the district attorneys find unacceptable, insofar as vagueness I believe, or perhaps it's just the concept, is the power of supervision. For example, Mr. Ware said to the attorney general, in my presence on at least two occasions, "What does that mean? What does the power to supervise mean?" Well, Dean Sullivan says and I quote--at the bottom of page 2, Section 56 of Article VII of the Constitution specifically empowers the attorney general to--quote, "exercise supervision over the several district attorneys throughout the state." This authority is restated in almost identical language in Article 62 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, "subject to the supervision of the attorney general, the district attorney has entire charge and control of every criminal prosecution instituted or pending in his district and determines whom, when, and how he shall prosecute." Now, ladies and gentlemen, that is the broadest grant of power that the legislature has probably ever given to any single officeholder in the history of the state. Further, Dean Sullivan says, "It seems evident that the legislature has implemented the constitutional provision by making every act of the district attorney in a criminal case from decision to prosecution and the final disposition only vaguely subject to the supervision of the attorney general." He concedes to Mr. Ware and the others. This is obviously an area of potential difficulty since the term "supervision" is not subject to ready or easy interpretation, and it must also be kept in mind that the Supreme Court in Kemp stated, "we refrain from attempting to state generally in this opinion, the extent of the attorney general's powers. Each case must be decided as it is arising and is presented to us." Now, ladies and gentlemen, we get to the current proposal before you--and Dean Sullivan concludes in his opening statement by saying, and I quote, "clearly this reduces"--this proposal that's currently before us and I told you yesterday that Dean Sullivan has not changed one word of his letter to the attorney general even with the small changes that were made--"clearly this proposal reduces the power of the attorney general in criminal cases, removes entirely the authority to initiate criminal prosecutions, and reduces the possible participation of the attorney general in the prosecution of criminal cases to that of advising and assisting." Remember as today, we adopted the amendment to make it "written"....on written request from the district attorney." He concludes, "this represents a very significant change in the policy which has heretofore been the basic law of this state"--I might add, "Amen"--since 1913 in its present form and since 1813 when this state became a part of the Union. Now, the power of supervision, of course, in this current proposal before the convention has been removed entirely, and Dean Sullivan says of that, "The power of the attorney general to supervise the district attorneys is eliminated completely from the proposed constitutional revision." This again represents a very significant change in the policy which was expressed in the '21 Constitution. Should the revision become effective the district attorneys would have complete control over all criminal prosecutions and would be completely free of any control or direction by the attorney general. In my opinion, this would also require the repeal of Article 62 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and the elimination of the supervisory power of the attorney general from Article 61. Finally, the bete noire of this section, for cause--for cause. What does that mean? Dean Sullivan says as follows: "A new power is granted to the attorney general to supersede a district attorney in any criminal action of the proposed constitutional revision. Apparently, in keeping with the implication of Kemp v. Stanley, this authority has been limited to those situations where the supersession 'for cause' is further limited to those cases in which the supersession is authorized by a court of original jurisdiction in which the case is pending. The entire process is specifically made subject to judicial review. The very difficult task of defining 'for cause' is left either to the legislature or the Supreme Court acting on a case by case basis. In view of the limitations created it is my opinion that any attempted exercise of this power would produce such difficulty and such protracted litigation as to make it ineffective in any practical sense." Although outside the scope of this opinion, Dean Sullivan concludes, "It should be noted that any dispute arising over the attempted exercise of this power which would require protracted judicial review might well have an adverse affect on the right of a speedy trial of the defendant in a particular criminal proceeding, and thus be in violation of the rights guaranteed by the United States Constitution." Ladies and gentlemen, fellow delegates, I'll conclude on this note, by quoting from the governor's admonition of this convention, "The constitution--he said--must give the attorney general of our state subject to court approval, the independent right to institute and prosecute criminal proceedings. District attorneys who are violently opposed to this proposition in my judgment have no real basis for opposing it. They do, I understand, and I do not challenge their position. I merely say that I think it is in the interest of what is good for government, and the attorney general of our state should have that authority." Ladies and gentlemen, everything we do is subject to judicial review. The Constitution of '21 and the powers given to the attorney general were subject to judicial review: to wit, Kemp v. Stanley. The attorney general of this state is satisfied with the decision in Kemp v. Stanley because remember, if a district attorney is doing his job, the attorney general has no business there. That's what he has said repeatedly. In conclusion, I remind you that the attorney general is not asking that his powers be increased, but really remain the same, and let the people decide. I don't think that's a great deal to ask. Mr. Chairman, I'll attempt to answer any questions.

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

Questions

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Vick, what you have is exactly what's in the 1921 Constitution?

MR. VICK

Verbatim.

MR. DUVAL

It's not your intent to legislatively overrule Kemp v. Stanley, but let the courts decide in the future what this language means. Is that correct?

MR. VICK

On a case by case basis, Mr. Duval.

Further Discussion

MR. JONES

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I am for alternatives. The call of this convention was people-oriented. There was no qualifying fee. There were candidates galore. Some of us ran in a primary with as many as from twenty-five to fifty opponents. There is no question that the legislature in establishing this convention wanted the people to participate in making the tough decisions. They so provided in the act for alternatives. I am for Alternative 102, which defines the powers of the attorney general of this state to include both civil and criminal jurisdiction. You know up to this point in the convention that I have been the delegate for industry. I replaced Mr. Lennox in the middle of December and have diligently tried to represent my appointment. As a lawyer, this was not difficult. In fact, it has been a lot of fun. I have represented industry positions in banking. Industry was against the concept of limiting multi-parish banking, and I represented the great big banks against the poor little rich banks. Public utilities--industry wanted a better break from the Public Service Commission, and I ate steak with the telephone company and crow on this convention floor, and poor Rev. Landrum, he missed his steak dinner. He wasn't feeling very well and only had a cup of beef soup and coffee. I just put that in there so Senator Rayburn would know that I got my steak. Revenue bonds--industry wanted the state to have the right to issue them, and I participated in this portion of the Revenue and Taxation Article. Tax exemption--industry wanted to keep its right to tax exemption, and I worked for this exemption. At this late stage in the convention, I have completed most of the work of industry. Now, I assume a different posture. Most of you know that I've been associated with the Department of Justice of this state since last September. But, in case any delegates do not know this fact, I wish to call this to their attention. I am associated with the attorney general in the Civil Division. It has been my appreciation and impression from the outset of the short time I've been in this convention that those delegates not associated with the district attorneys and the local sheriffs do not fully understand what is now provided in the proposed constitution in defining the duties and responsibilities of the attorney general. I will try to explain them and reason with you to the best of my ability in simple, plain language. Under the proposed constitution, the attorney general becomes for all practical purposes only the civil legal officer of this state. The district attorneys will have full control of the criminal work. The attorney general can only participate in criminal prosecution to assist the district attorney, and then only when he is so invited in writing. As you know, there are approximately thirty-four judicial districts, one district attorney for each judicial district. Now, the 1921 Constitution and the law of this state since 1813, which is over a hundred and sixty years ago, has provided that the attorney general shall have not only civil legal responsibility, but criminal responsibility. Further, he shall have supervision over the district attorneys of this state. The proposed constitution removes the supervisory powers of the attorney general over the district attorneys, thus resulting in making each one of the district attorneys autonomous in his own judicial district. Now, think of this, the attorney general is elected statewide. He is one of the four leading executive officials of this state. The D.A.'s are elected individually from their respective judicial district. Each of the elected delegates to this convention represents approximately 1/105 of the total population of this state. Now, this convention has, by a majority vote, cut in half the powers of the attorney general. You have eliminated his control over criminal prosecution and his supervisory powers over the thirty-four district attorneys. It is only fair and just that you place an alternative on the ballot of this people-oriented convention that will grant to the voters of this state the opportunity to make this important decision for themselves, and that decision is: do they want an attorney general who is only a civil legal officer, or do they want an attorney general who has supervisory power over the thirty-four district attorneys and has primary responsibility to initiate criminal proceedings? This is the issue in plain and simple language: not to give to the citizens of this great state the alternative to choose their own fate is to disfranchise them without a vote. Let's don't have this happen. Let's don't have the attorney general campaigning in this state to defeat our constitution that we've worked so hard to complete. Now, let's consider the facts. First, I must congratulate the representatives of the district attorneys and the local sheriffs. They've done a good job of "belling the cat." Now, they're out from under the supervision of the attorney general and will have sole primary responsibility for criminal prosecution. Delegates, search your hearts. Is this good for the people of Louisiana? I know your hearts agree with me that we are wording a constitution, not only for ourselves, but for our children and for generations yet unborn. We should not change a basic legal concept that has existed for over a hundred and sixty years in this state without giving the people a chance to vote their choice. Now, under the proposed constitution, let's turn and see how it would work.

You have thirty-four D.A.'s that are solely autonomous in their own district, each with his own ideas, free of supervision by the attorney general, and you know what that means--"What Lola wants, Lola gets." We've already had a case, I'm told, recently where a D.A. is refusing to recognize the Sunday closing laws. The merchants in a large urban area are insisting that the D.A. close his shops in the rural adjoining area. This is only the beginning. Under the rule of law, what does the governor do? Who does he turn to to enforce the law? He won't be able to call upon the attorney general.

I'd like to conclude with this on your mind: Let's don't take away from the people of this state a hundred and sixty years of basic legal concept. I ask that you vote favorably to place this alternative on the ballot for the people to make the decision. I thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this is a matter which we have debated, I suppose, four or five different times in this convention, and this convention has spoken overwhelmingly each time in favor of the general policy position, at first, that the attorney general should have no criminal jurisdiction at all. Then, secondly, as a result of a compromise suggested by the governor of this state, and which is the final article on the attorney general, that he should have the power to institute criminal cases, but should do so only for cause when authorized by the court which would have original jurisdiction, subject to full judicial review, so that if the district court didn't think that cause existed, then the attorney general could take his case directly to the Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana where such cases go. I would point out to you, I don't blame the attorney general's two assistants for trying to increase his power. But, the attorney general, contrary to their apparent belief has always been, and will still be a party to all criminal matters once they're on appeal. This has always been our law. This is not affected by what we do here. So, we're not talking about the appellate phase of criminal law; what we're talking about is the power to institute criminal prosecution. We're concerned, or should be concerned, not with what the district attorneys want, which is no criminal jurisdiction at all for the attorney general; or what the attorney general wants which is the power to come in and institute criminal prosecutions anytime he decides that he ought to; but, to protect the people, I think we've hit a good and a workable middle ground. I might point out to you that we have added here the power to supercede local district attorneys, which under no possible interpretation of the old constitution, did the attorney general have. But, again, he's got to show cause. He's got to show a reason. So, really I think we're taking basically the same position because Mr. Vick said again and again that if the local district attorney is doing his job, the attorney general has got no business going into the parish to attempt to prosecute crime. Well, we're saying the same thing. The only thing that we've done in this constitutional provision that we've adopted is we've set up a procedure and a mechanism whereby we have a mutual third party--the judiciary--the people that are supposed to decide such matters, to decide when the attorney general should come in and when and if the local district attorney is not doing his job. If you will recall, Mr. Duval asked Mr. Vick, "Well, how would you have this decided on the basis of Kemp v. Stanley?" Kemp v. Stanley, by the way--with all due respects to the good Dean Sullivan, whom I do not know;

I'm sure he's a good law professor--but I don't know a practicing criminal attorney in this state that wouldn't tell you that Kemp v. Stanley said that the second sentence of the old constitutional provision on the attorney general's power, which provided for supervision over district attorneys meant and qualified the first sentence which gave him the power to institute, meant they had to be read together and meant he couldn't institute anything unless the local D.A. was not doing his job. Well, if this is what Kemp v. Stanley says, then we are agreed. He said, "Let's decide it on a case by case basis." That's exactly how it will be decided under the provision that we've adopted here. In the proper case the court can provide in the benefit and for the welfare of the people of the State of Louisiana for the attorney general to act. I would remind you in closing that power is neutral. We've heard a lot here about the attorney general's power to come in and act in the interest of the state. But, if he's got the power to institute criminal proceedings, I submit to you, he can also act if that power is not subject to some control in the worst interest of the people of the state. I can suggest to you that there are certain times in our very recent past, very recent past, involving such things as voter registration, particularly in my parish, where the state attempted to come in and purge our voter registration rolls of about a third of the citizens of our parish where our local district attorney had to go into federal court and get an order to prevent them from doing it. So, think about that. Power is neutral. It can be used for good purposes, or it can be used for bad purposes, and I submit to you that what we've done here is insured the people of this state that they've got a remedy available if and when the local criminal prosecution breaks down. But, we've also protected them from an overambitious attorney general who may be exercising power when he shouldn't be exercising it. I submit to you, we should reject this alternative and maintain the viability of the very good provision we have adopted.

Questions

MR. GIARRUSSO

Jack, do you anticipate any infringement on the authority of locally elected officials, if this alternative is adopted?

MR. BURSON

Yes, I could definitely foresee such infringement because if you just say that the...and I might point out, that this alternative purports to include the language of the old constitution. But, the form that's suggested for the ballot suggests that it means much more because it would say that the attorney general would have the power to institute civil and criminal suits without limitation. It certainly implies that. I think that this power would be subject to abuse, and the best example I can use is, think in recent history in Louisiana. Who have been the people who have been prone to abuse the power of prosecution? Has it been the elected local district attorneys, or has it been some appointed prosecutors that we have operating in our state? I think if we'll ask that question, then we come up with the answer that applies here.

MR. GIARRUSSO

Jack, how often in the past has the attorney general invoked this authority, and if he has, you know, if you can think of a case, under what circumstances?

MR. BURSON

The only case that I know about in the books--and I looked at the annotations under this section--and Kemp v. Stanley and a couple of others seem to be the only ones that I can find. It hasn't been, to my knowledge, invoked in a very, very long time, or even attempted to be invoked. So, either the attorney general must have thought 1) that the local prosecutors were doing a good job or 2) he must have realized he didn't have that power at all under the holding of Kemp v. Stanley which I would think is the law.

MR. GIARRUSSO

Last question, Jack: Do you believe that the people's interests are best protected on what we've adopted, or if we submit this alternative to the people as well?

MR. BURSON

No, I don't. I think the best interests of the people are protected in the section that we have adopted, and I think we ought not to leave it susceptible to change because we provided there the ultimate safeguard. The courts are the ultimate residuum of individual liberties in this country anyway. That's what we provide.

MR. J. JACKSON

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in support of Mr. Vick's proposal, not because I'm against the local D.A. or I'm against the attorney general, but it seems to me, very clearly, that we may not-- and not being familiar with that process--that we may not recognize the depths of what we're doing and what we may not be doing. I've heard some of the concerns about making the A.G. so autonomous, and so all-extensive in terms of his power. But, I can very well see that that could be the same on a local level, and at what point besides the judicial interpretation do you have the kinds of--for lack of better words--let me say, check and balance. I agree with you, Sheriff, that I don't think that if the mores of a parish says that chicken fights are in order that the A.G. ought to be coming up in there stirring up the people. But, at the same time, when there is corruption as such in government, as such, and because they are all elected officials, that it would seem to me that you might have a political problem there where a D.A. may be just not forced to prosecute. I think if we look at the history of the invocation of the A.G.'s power, it's not readily made clear to me that he has abused in any form nor manner. Secondly, I'm just sorry--and I know that there is some sentiments against the present A.G. personality--but I can't do anything about that. I'm just trying to talk on the substance of whether the A.G. ought to have some sorts of option when there is some breakdown--it may not be intentional on the part of local D.A.'s--but because of maybe political pressures that he may not be able to perform his duty. I say that particularly--again I rise in support--because I personally felt that some people had the various image that I was one, particularly in my debate about the juvenile proposal, one who favored protection of those who commit criminal offenses. From the arguments I've heard so far, in that we are providing an alternative, in that that questions there is ramifications on both ends of the spectrum, that we ought to allow such an alternative to be posed to the people. With the kinds of political muscles that I think D.A.'s have back home, if they seriously feel that this would jeopardize their position, I think that they could defeat the alternative. In addition, I just wonder very seriously, what if a certain segment of a local parish may want certain reforms and the powers that may not be, and the powers in the political structure says, "Well, no. You're treading on dangerous territory. You're not only affecting the mores; you're affecting, really, the political structure." If you're not in the "in crowd", I can very well see that some may very well have been used in argument against A.G. Some may very well be persecuted and prosecuted on the local level. I think that the question raised by Mr. Vick's proposal is the question of great concern to all the people of the state, great concern on the part of the D.A.'s on the local level, great concern to attorney general, and particularly, great concern of those people who feel that there ought to be a greater enforcement--and I repeat--a great enforcement without discretion of the law. I think that we ought to at least leave this question open for consideration, and hopefully after we're over, they'll be some discussion and moving for the adoption of this document; there will be some discussion and more time brought out whether I, as a voter, would vote for what we have in the present constitution, or vote for the alternative. I think it's that critical, and I just hope that we attempt to listen and attempt to understand that that is a two-edged sword, and that those of us who may be concerned about law enforcement and concerned about what's going on in government and going on and understand the political ramifications of it--the serious political ramifications of it--then I think that we would be very wise to offer this as an alternative as we did with some other very highly controversial issues. So, for that reason, I would ask that you would support the alternative proposal.

Further Discussion

MR. GUARISCO

Mr. Acting Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in support of the Vick alternate for several reasons. One reason is that I, myself--and I don't think many persons in this convention ran on a platform that the attorney general of this state had too much power, and that they were going to go up to Baton Rouge and see that we reduce some of this power. This all happened since you've gotten here, and since you've probably been lobbied by the district attorneys. Now, Mr. Burson stood up here and said during the debate on the Bill of Rights--when we were talking about the rights of the accused; we were talking about the rights of the poor and the blacks and the women as opposed to prosecution and the district attorneys--that we must trust our public officials. But, he was only speaking about the public officials that he was directly connected with: that is, the local district attorney's office. But, when it comes to the attorney general, we forget all about this public trust, and the district attorneys don't want to trust the attorney general. That's odd to me. They want to be trusted with far, far more power--the power to put people in jail, to put them away for good, and so forth, and to prosecute--but they don't want to be superceded or supervised by any other superior. I urge that you support this amendment.

120th Days Proceedings—January 17, 1974

Further Discussion

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I hate to rise against my friend Kendall Vick, but I feel that I rise in favor, for one time, of the district attorneys and the farmers of this state; and I'm going to tell you why. Right now, I'm defending a lawsuit brought by the attorney general's office to stop soybean farmers in Avoyelles Parish from growing soybeans because, allegedly, in Rapides Parish, it's affecting the bass fishing in a particular lake. Now, that, to me, is the worst thing that can happen when the attorney general has the broadest authority to take sides in a case that is between two groups: bass fishermen versus farmers. I don't know where you stand on it, but I know where I stand. But, that's not the point. The point is that under the present constitution, and as Mr. Vick would have it in the attorney general, the attorney general has unlimited power to intervene in any type suit that he wishes and to supersede a district attorney. Now, you know that I've had my quarrels with the D. A.'s here, but I'd much rather have the D. A. in a parish, subject to the vote of that parish, to determine whether a particular case will be brought to trial or not. The present provision, which we have passed, still allows the court--if it sees fit--to allow the attorney general to intervene in a criminal case. So, I urge you to vote against this particular proposal. Let's keep what we've got, and let's make it so that the attorney general has got to have a public necessity to come on in a case, and not allow some environmentalist attorney he's got with him to, at the whim of whoever he chooses, run around and try to file lawsuits to stop people from farming, and other things of that nature, in this state. Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. STOVALL

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this is a very serious matter that is before us at this time. You will recall that yesterday Mr. Pugh presented an amendment. Where, previously, we had said the governor will support the laws of the state, it was necessary to change that to say the governor will execute the laws and enforce the laws of the state. The reason is quite evident: The people of our state want a system of government that will guarantee the enforcement of our laws. This question that is before us at the present time is not one as to whether or not we favor the attorney general or the district attorney; it is a question of whether or not we want law and order, of whether or not we want a system to provide justice. It is a question of whether or not we want a system that will correct injustices and abuses. It is a question of whether or not we want to maintain the historic American system of checks and balances. I submit to you that to present this alternative to our people is a means of guaranteeing this. The district attorneys have overplayed their hand. They're asking for too much power. Our historic system calls for a system of checks and balances, and I think it is a false fear that the district attorneys have. Mr. Burson said, a moment ago, that this provision has not been invoked. Why, then, would they have a fear of this provision? We have heard it said, on other occasions, that power corrupts and absolute power corrupts absolutely. I think this is a case where the district attorneys are seeking too much power and, therefore, they need this check and balance that is provided by this alternative provision. What we would be doing, in voting favorably for Mr. Vick's alternate provision, is not to make the final decision, but it is to leave it to the people. Therefore, I suggest and encourage you to give favorable support to this alternative provision that has been presented to us at this time.

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Vick, at this time, sends up a set of amendments which are basically technical amendments. They're rather lengthy--be passed out right now. The basic purpose, I can tell you, of the amendments is to make the style of the proposal conform to the other proposals, relative to alternatives--and, in particular, Section 3 (A) and the language of [Section] 3 (B). Rather than reciting in full the text of what's in the extant draft of the constitution, just substitute a simple paragraph, be in conformity with the others, and redo the other provisions consistent therewith.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. VICK

Thank you, Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates; this is the last hurrah and--as Judge Tate said some time ago--this will be my last time, I hope, before this convention. I just want you to remember that the attorney general is not asking that his powers be increased, but that they remain the same and only to let the people decide. With that, Mr. Chairman, I will attempt to answer any questions, if there are any.

Questions

MR. BURSON

Mr. Vick, would you agree that the United States Attorney General, or any of his deputies, cannot intervene in any parish in the State of Louisiana in a criminal matter until they have previously obtained an indictment from a federal grand jury?

MR. VICK

The United States. Yes.

MR. BURSON

In other words, they have to go through not just the judicial proceeding, but a grand jury proceeding, before they can move on a criminal matter in any parish in this state. Isn't that correct?

MR. VICK

I don't see the analogy, Mr. Burson, but I would concede your point.

[Quorum Call: 98 delegates present and a quorum. Proposal failed:
36-67.]

Reading of the Proposal

MR. POYNTER

The next proposal is Delegate Proposal No. 103, introduced by Delegates Elkins, Grier, Toca, Flory, Asseff, and others:

A proposal to provide with respect to an alternative provision relative to the legislative branch.

Again, I might say, in light of some prior discussion in this convention, the printed copy does not have the requisite number of signatures on it due to the fact that the printer could not read many of the signatures. As introduced, there were more than sufficient number of persons, delegates, who did sign the proposal for it to be validly introduced under the rules.

A proposal to provide with respect to an alternative provision relative to the legislative branch.

Explanation

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman--Mr. Acting Chairman, I believe--and fellow delegates, I'm going to try to be as brief as possible because this is really a simple issue. It's not very complicated. The present constitution, as you know, provides that the legislature shall meet biannually, in the even number years, for sixty calendar days in a regular session--an open session--in which any and all types of legislation may be introduced. It then provides that, in the odd-numbered years, it will meet thirty days in a so-called fiscal session, in which there are certain restrictions on what the legislature can consider. It only can consider fiscal matters. Under the document, the Legislative Article that has been approved by this convention so far--and as it now stands--the legislature will meet annually for not more than sixty legislative days, but within an eighty-five day calendar period. As I explained to you the other day, there are many, many people who don't like that provision, who are very unhappy with it. I said, also, that I knew of no one who was out beating the bushes and really clamoring to increase the time during which the legislature would meet. The alternative proposal, which we are asking you to place on the ballot so that the people of the state may make this decision for themselves, would permit the legislature to meet annually, in a regular session, for not more than sixty calendar days. For those who feel that the present system is insufficient and that the legislature does not have sufficient time, within a sixty-calendar-day period every other year, to attend to the general legislation other than fiscal matters which they consider in these fiscal sessions--to those people, this would increase, substantially, the time during which the legislature would meet; but it would decrease, to some extent, the almost three-month period of time, every year, which the legislature would be permitted to meet in a general session under the proposal. I told you the other day, and I tell you again, in words of one syllable--and I hope not too many--that it's my belief that the present provision as it now stands, as you have adopted it, will generate substantial--substantial--opposition to this document. That's what I believe. I feel that, if this alternative is placed on the ballot, that it will materially reduce--or, possibly, maybe eliminate--some of that opposition. Those are things which I believe, which I can't prove to you. That's just a feeling that I have. For that reason, since I for one, as I said--day before yesterday, I believe--do not wish to see a year of my life, not to say millions of dollars of the state's money, and a year of your lives go down the drain, I ask you--I implore you--to give the people an opportunity to consider this question which, I think, is a reasonable attempt to reconcile these points of view.

120th Days Proceedings—January 17, 1974

Questions

MR. STAGG

Jack, were you not generally--before today--were you not against any alternatives on the ballot at all?

MR. AVANT

I was, but you have opened the door. Certain powers that we have seen fit to put alternatives on the ballot and see that the votes were there to get them on there; and I say that it's only fair, if you're going to do that, then some of the other people in this convention who are not satisfied--violently not satisfied--with some of the provisions of this document, to give them an alternative too.

MR. STAGG

Do you think that the length of the legislative session was a controversial decision by this convention?

MR. AVANT

I most certainly do.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Avant, in your remarks, you indicated that, if we don't put this alternative, we will generate substantial opposition. I've heard no hue and cry in my district. I was wondering if you could tell us who this substantial opposition is or from whence it might come.

MR. AVANT

It's people that I have discussed the matter with, Mr. Lanier.

MR. FAYARD

Mr. Avant, what are you actually talking about as an alternative here? Fifteen days leeway--is that your objection to the committee proposal?

MR. AVANT

Twenty-five days, Mr. Fayard. The difference between sixty and eighty-five is twenty-five.

MR. FAYARD

But, we're talking about twenty-five of what kind of days?

MR. AVANT

We're talking about twenty-five calendar days--or one month, for all practical purposes--out of the year that people who want to know what the legislature is doing and want to keep up with it on a rather detailed and intimate basis are going to be tied down to that specific project every year. That's what we're talking about.

MR. FAYARD

Well, then, it's your opinion that the people that you're talking about are of the opinion that the legislature does not need additional time for procedural mechanisms to do their job thoroughly, then. Is that correct?

MR. AVANT

They would get additional time, Mr. Fayard, under the alternative proposition. As you well know, they meet now annually for sixty calendar days--I mean biannually. Then every other year, they can only meet for thirty calendar days in a limited session. This would provide an annual sixty-day general session.

MR. FAYARD

But, your proposal would provide that the legislature would have to meet this actual sixty days; is that correct?

MR. AVANT

No. It says for not more than sixty calendar days.

MR. FAYARD

One other question, Mr. Avant. Did you know that our committee heard much testimony regarding the sessions of the legislature and that it was the general consensus of that testimony that the proposal that we finally came up with should be adopted by the new constitution--or put in the new constitution to be adopted by the people.

MR. AVANT

Well, Mr. Fayard, I assumed that your committee did that because you all submitted the proposal, and I wouldn't think you'd have submitted it if you didn't believe that. But, I just happen to think that you're wrong, and I know that many, many committee reports have come into this convention hall and been literally dissected and that very little, if anything, remained of them when the convention got through with it. That didn't happen in this particular instance; but all I am asking, and all we're asking, is an opportunity for the people to make a choice.

MR. JUNEAU

Jack, what I don't understand: I think, within the past three weeks, we adopted a delegate proposal by Representative Casey which mandated the legislature to provide for split sessions, which made Mr. Riecke very happy. Under the provision which you have, we couldn't do that. Is that right?

MR. AVANT

Why, sure, they could do that.

MR. JUNEAU

Within the sixty days?

MR. AVANT

Why, I don't see why not.

MR. JUNEAU

You're restricting the period in which they can do a split session, are you not?

MR. AVANT

They only got to do it for two years, and they can certainly do it. If it don't work, well, they can quit doing it.

Further Discussion

MR. WEISS

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I know we're all busy signing our name. In fact, my nurse called me a moment ago for a semi-emergency, and the message was left with her that I had to sign my name a hundred and fifty times. When I went to the phone, she said: What did you do wrong? I hope that's not a bad omen for this constitution, but I do consider that these alternates will help a great deal, psychologically, to pass this document. The Education Article has now been passed on, in a Solomon's decision, to the people. I think we've made a very, very serious mistake, and I would like to reason with you in an attempt to correct this mistake, by placing another alternate on this ballot. First of all, I have not been persuaded, nor do I care to be labeled as a labor front in this situation. I think labeling is bad, but I do think it's necessary that we understand what this means. It's very important, and I'm sure the governor--had he felt that it was safe--would have asked you to reduce these sessions. At one time, the governor of Louisiana, Governor Long, said: "Louisiana has the finest legislature money can buy." To paraphrase it today, I think we can say: "Louisiana will have the most expensive legislature money can buy." The last legislative session cost 1.7 million dollars. At the present time, we can save the people of Louisiana--if twenty-five days are to be saved--three quarters of a million dollars. This is good government, and I'd like to reason with you a little more as to what these eighty-five extended days mean. From people who sit in the legislature, they tell me they hardly get warmed up before two weeks go by. We have seen in this body, frequently, procrastination and, only at this last moment, are we beginning to work real hard to get the super-legislative document completed as we would like to have it completed. If we do not change this, we will have a country club legislature--one who will be wined, who will be dined, and who will be padded on the weekends between work. This is the type of alternate proposal I suggest we give the people of Louisiana to show them that we delegates are interested in good government. The more laws--the more corruption; the more time--the more laws. It's just that simple. If we give the legislature all this time, there will be more and more legislation, more and more laws. I implore you to consider this seriously, and I ask you to vote in favor of this amendment. This is not a labor amendment, be sure; but, believe me, labor is interested; and you and delegates here have commended labor for their lobbying. I would rather see lobbying than cash exchanged in hands and minds of the future legislature of Louisiana. It's time we educate our legislators, and we will allow this by a continuous body operating at all times. This continuous body can educate itself in committee hearings. There is no excuse for the committees not bringing before the legislature sound proposals. They have time--they will have time to deliberate. It has been said by some of the congressional people that the legislative action itself is a facade; the real work goes on in committees. I think you can bear this out in this constitutional convention. The hard work, the sweat, the real thinking went into committee action, and this will be done in our new legislature, if the Constitutional Convention of '73 passes. But, please allow the people of Louisiana to vote upon reducing the time that will be spent in a country club atmosphere for a legislature that, I believe, can only do more harm than good if we pass this bad legislation, which we now have the time to correct by voting in favor of this alternate.

120th Days Proceedings—January 17, 1974

Questions

MR. RAYBURN

Doctor, I heard you make a statement that we was going to get paid for eighty-five days.

MR. WEISS

No, sir, I did not make that statement.

MR. RAYBURN

Well, I misunderstood you then, and I'm sorry. I mean you were saying so much about us so fast, I could have misunderstood you.

MR. WEISS

I said: Between sessions, you will enjoy the weekends--being wined, dined, and padded.

MR. RAYBURN

Doctor, then, would we enjoy it any more than you have enjoyed it since you've been here?

MR. WEISS

Believe me, sir, I have not enjoyed it. Every moment I had a chance, I had to go back to work.

MR. RAYBURN

Yes, sir. Well, about the best way I know for us to really enjoy it is to get another chiropractor bill in, and you doctors will be here.

MR. WEISS

You can't threaten me with that, sir. I think good legislation is in the hands of good legislators, and I appreciate the previous legislators.

You're included in those good legislators, Senator. I don't want to lose any friends.

MR. SHANNON

Dr. Weiss, you made the statement: more laws--more corruption. Will you explain that?

MR. WEISS

Would you repeat that please? I didn't understand the question.

MR. SHANNON

I said you made the statement: more laws--more corruption.

MR. WEISS

That was made by a famous Roman orator in the forum in Rome about two thousand years ago, sir....

MR. SHANNON

Well, this is 1973....

MR. WEISS

I don't think it's changed in two thousand years.

MR. SHANNON

....Four now. You got me off; I don't know where I am.

Further Discussion

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Acting Chairman, fellow delegates, I realize that talk now is generally in vain with the coefficient of attention here and the desire to get the convention over with. I might point out to those delegates who are signing their name that perhaps they ought to know what they are signing their name to, but that's neither here nor there. I rise here because I feel so strongly about this particular alternate, so strongly against it. What is so bad with having twenty-five days in order to intelligently deliberate? What are some of us so afraid of that in twenty-five days, perhaps, some bad legislature will be caught; perhaps some analytical process will be utilized; perhaps somebody will scrutinize what they have done; also, the public may have a voice, if we do have a split session. I think this very much negates the possibility of a split session. I think it's a bad alternate. I think it only pleases people who are specifically interested in lobbying legislation and don't wish to be up here the entire time. I certainly understand their point of view and I think in the best interest of the citizens of Louisiana. We have an opportunity for a split session, enough time to deliberate over legislation to analyze it, to hear from the public. Our system is only going to be as good as the people we elect, there is no doubt about that. But, please, let's set the framework so the good people can deliberate intelligently. I ask that you vote against this alternate.

Questions

MR. WEISS

Do you ever have any political aspirations for legislative office?

MR. DUVAL

Do I?

MR. WEISS

Yes, sir.

MR. DUVAL

No, no, sir.

Further Discussion

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I want to explain my feelings about this particular proposal. As I spoke to you earlier when the first alternate came up, I thought it was a very bad alternate and, therefore, I voted against that particular proposal. But, the other alternates that have been before us I supported because I thought that they were alternates that should have gone on the ballot, and we needed a chance to make a choice; even though I might not have favored those particular alternates, I think it was very evident that I did not favor the proposal as submitted by Mr. McDaniel. But, nevertheless, it was an alternate, it was something that I thought that the people ought to have a chance to pass upon. We've only passed one alternate. I feel like our chances of passing the constitution are better with each alternate that we add to it. I really think it is a very, very bad proposal. I certainly feel like that we would have little difficulty in defeating it if it was placed upon the ballot. But, in view of the fact that we only have one alternate, I'm going to vote for it to go on the ballot. I tell you right now, that if it should pass and get on the ballot, it's going to be one of those I'm going to campaign against because I really feel like that the provisions we have at the present time are much, much better than this particular proposal and I speak from my vast experience in the legislature. That's the only reason I'm supporting it, so the people can have a choice.

Further Discussion

MR. FAYARD

Mr. Acting Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in opposition to Delegate Proposal No. 103. I'll try to be brief in stating my reasons for this opposition. We have two issues to consider: One is whether or not this matter before us right now deserves to be given the consideration of an alternative on the ballot. I say it does not. I say that I haven't heard from my constituents, the hue and cry that I heard on the educational proposal which determined in my own mind that we needed an alternative on that particular provision. I have heard no one oppose the proposal that our committee and this convention adopted finally after many days of debate and compromise, which I think is a true compromise and a true, valid, realistic approach to take in regard to the legislative sessions of this state. Let's look at what Delegate Proposal No. 103 says; it says that "The legislature shall meet in annual regular sessions for not more than sixty calendar days." The Committee Proposal No. 3 says "The legislature shall meet in annual regular sessions at the State Capital for not more than sixty legislative days." The only difference is that it says these legislative days must be held within a period of eighty-five calendar days. Now, we are not talking about fewer legislative days in this delegate proposal. The delegate proposal would only mean that the legislature would not have the additional twenty-five days which it needs to consider procedural matters to get its house in order, say, after every four years when the legislature is elected. It needs to meet maybe for one day to get sworn in, to take its office, and then adjourn for maybe ten days to get the committees appointed, the rules distributed, and the legislators familiar with the legislative process and then come back into session for an introduction of bills for maybe another five days; then, adjourn again for another ten or fifteen days; the committee proposal allows this. The delegate proposal before you is given to you in the form of an alternative is really no alternative at all; it limits the legislature within the time that it would have to meet. Now, I propose to you that a true alternate on the ballot would be to give the legislature an unlimited amount of time to meet. Let it meet every year for any time that it wants to meet, for any purpose, and let it continue as a continuous body. Now, if you want to place that as an alternative on the ballot, I could say to you that that would be a true alternative and you would overcome my first objection to this proposal. But, that is not what this proposal does. This proposal merely eliminates the twenty-five day leeway that the legislature would have to organize, to go home and talk to its constituents, to hold committee meetings, or to recess for the holidays. Looking at the merits of the delegate proposal, actually since I contend it is no alternate at all, no alternative, we would have to get into the merits of it. What does it do? It severely limits the legislature and it severely curtails and actually reinjects the problems that our committee tried to solve in giving the legislature more latitude in which to meet. The committee studied this long and hard. We heard testimony from pros and cons. We heard testimony from the Legislative Committee, from the Speaker of the House, from the President of the Senate. I would say almost every person that we heard told us that we needed more time, the legislature needs more time in which to do its job. They say we have a good legislature. We come down here for thirty days every other year and we have to cram in billions of dollars worth of appropriations and many, many technical statutes and laws and we just can't do it; we don't have enough time for committee meetings. Under our proposal, the Committee Proposal No. 3, we have eliminated that objection.

Also, another thing that this alternate proposal would do is eliminate even the possibility of having a split session which this convention adopted not more than two days ago.

So, I urge you to defeat this Delegate Proposal No. 103.

Treasurer Lowe in the Chair

Further Discussion

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Acting Chairman and fellow delegates, I'm not going to take but just a moment....Dr. Weiss, I'm sorry I interrupted you so quickly a while ago that you forgot what you had heard when I mentioned the word chiropractor, I just done that to kind of let you know that there's a lot of people would like to keep us down here on the weekends and entertain us. I think we have a good proposal. I want to disagree with my good friend, Mr. Avant. I have not heard one of my constituents criticize that particular proposal that we adopted in reference to when and how the legislature would meet, maybe you have; you know; I have not heard the first one. Now, I stood here and agreed to have a split session, to vote for one. I intend to fulfill and carry that agreement out if I'm in the legislature when the time arises. I personally know that I can represent my people better if I have an opportunity to go home on a Saturday afternoon and spend Sunday and maybe come back here on Monday and talk to them about what we are doing, talk to them a little about what's been going on and keep them a little better informed. With the tremendous growth we have in this state, with the extra duties we have to do, it's going to be hard in the near future for us to have much time off if we've got to meet sixty consecutive days and believe me, I know of what I am talking about. Just like you know here in this convention, maybe we could have shortened our time a lot but we didn't because we passed bills; we passed amendments; we reconsidered them. Certainly, we found out problems, we are finding out problems as time goes on that we didn't find out about last week. I think we've got a good schedule to meet. I think a lot of us are committed to try it and try a split session to see if it works. I hope you do not upset it. We argued for three or four weeks on the proposal before we adopted it. It finally was adopted by a good majority vote of these delegates, and I hope you don't upset it. Dr. Weiss, I just talked to Dr. Stephenson and he asked me to invite you for ham after dinner tonight.

Question

MR. WEISS

Delegate Rayburn, first, I want you to know I need all the friends I can get and that was the purpose of speaking before the group on this particular issue. Sometimes, we don't see eye to eye. If you recall, and don't you recall, that we did at least reduce it to sixty days in eighty-five when we worked originally on this article. But, my question primarily directs itself at: Do you think Louisiana needs full-time legislators, which you apparently represent, or can we continue to have the part-time legislators such as in my area?

MR. RAYBURN

Well, I think at this particular time we are getting along pretty good with part-time legislators. I think a lot of them are assigned to committees; and I think most of them serve. Some of them can't be there at every meeting, just like some delegates can't be here, Doctor, but most of the legislators I know are honest and sincere. Contrary to what you said about how you could buy them, and how you could get them, and how you could wine and dine them. Some of them wines a lot and dines a lot, but they come unwound a lot, you know. I don't mind telling you the telephone people, they wine me a little bit, but when it come time to vote, I unwound. They've done approached me since it was all over; they are ready to wine me again. I'll probably go with them, but I'm going to vote what I want to vote for when the time comes. I just don't think it's right to stand up here and say that a body, like your legislature of this state, just to keep them over here on weekends and wine them and dine them. I just hate for people to think that way about the legislature because after all is said and done, they are human beings; they are elected officials. There are people back home that know them best has placed their trust and confidence in them just like they have placed it in every delegate that ran and got elected that's serving here today.

MR. LEITHMAN

Mr. Acting Chairman and members of the convention, I'll ask you to reject this amendment. Perhaps, if Bubba were here, he could probably express this better than I can but as the assistant speaker I see some things--and the pace that is kept at the desk--that the legislator out front may or may not have the advantages of seeing and reviewing. With the opportunity for us to take a break and spread these sixty days over eighty-five it's a tremendous advantage. Your bad bills are passed, and this has been said many, many times, your bad legislation and your bad bills are passed in haste; they are passed in confusion and they oftentimes are held to the ninth hour where they have a better shot at being passed. I feel that if we have an opportunity to spread this over eighty-five days, I think you will find those bad bills being dropped rather than being passed. Another, on a personal viewpoint, many times on Friday afternoon if I do have an opportunity to get home, on education matters, I routinely visit my superintendent; I routinely visit with members of my board and discuss some of these bills that are being considered in the line of education. I'm sure the other legislators that are interested and serve on other committees do likewise in those areas of interest. So, I think just by forcing sixty consecutive days, I don't think this is in the best interest of the people of the State of Louisiana. If there is an alternative, I would suggest it be considered for rather than the sixty in eighty-five days' period, I would think it would be better, as Mr. Fayard said, to go with an unlimited session. I'm certainly not, at this point, totally in favor of that. So, I do ask--the other legislators here may not have an opportunity to come before this mike because of time, but I feel certain that I can speak on nine out of ten of their opinions and speak on their behalf---so, I ask you to reject this amendment. Thank you.

Further Discussion

MR. CASEY

Mr. Acting Chairman and delegates, to me this is certainly a very important issue because as a member of the legislature I'm annually confronted with the problem of serving as a legislator and trying to, during that limited period of time that we have under the present law, to devote as much time as possible to a proper consideration and deliberation of the magnitude of bills and proposals that we have that are introduced in the regular legislative session. Now, during a regular sixty day annual session, Dr. Weiss, we have over--last time in 1972-- had three thousand five hundred pieces of legislation in the form of bills, constitutional amendments, resolutions, etc., that were introduced into the legislature that we only had sixty days within which to properly consider. That is really the heart of the problem. I think you might have been in error to some extent in thinking that in the legislature it's really the committee that does all of the work; that is not quite accurate. The problem is the time is so limited that the committees cannot properly do their work. Dr. Weiss, if we adopt this alternate measure and it's approved by the people, what you're doing through this alternate measure is taking away from the committee system that we have in the legislature those twenty-five valuable days when, as legislators, we cannot meet in general session; allowing, therefore, that valuable time to the committees to properly function. I might mention this, that in the last six years that I've been in the legislature and particularly the last two years, we have made more progress in legislative reform with...for our own housekeeping than I know of in the past thirty years because we have limited the number of our legislative committees. We will now have legislative, full-time staff year around with secretarial assistants so that our legislative committees can properly function. This will be even a more valuable asset when the legislature goes into regular session and for these eighty-five days we can give proper consideration and deliberations to the magnitude of bills that we have. Doctor Weiss, during the last thirty days of a regular legislative session the typical legislative session is spent by going into committee session around 8:00 or 8:30 in the morning, going into general session at 10:00, breaking for lunch between 12:00 to 1:00, going into general session again between 1:00 and 4:00, having committee meetings between 4:00 and 6:00, and then going into general session between 6:00 and 9:00; and we just barely finish. You can imagine that we cannot properly give proper consideration and deliberation to the magnitude of bills that we have and these are good legislators; they are not what you think; these are good legislators. I think they are pretty typical of the delegates that we have here. I think we have good delegates. We have some delegates that have expertise in certain areas and others that have expertise in other areas. There is a lot I don't know about on matters that we have touched here. But, I think I know what I'm doing in certain areas. I hope I have made my contribution and that's typical of the legislators. They are not out for gain for their own benefit at all. They are honest people doing an honest day's work and making their contribution to our state and our society. I cannot urge you enough. I highly recommend that you defeat this alternate proposal. I think the committee and this convention has come up with an excellent proposal. I think it is a real step toward legislative reform so that we can come away from the ranking that we have among the states now. We are ranked about thirty-third as a legislature among the states prior to many of the reforms that we just recently adopted. I think this is one of the steps which will raise the legislature of Louisiana to one of the finest in the nation. I urge the rejection of this alternative proposal.

Question

MR. WEISS

Delegate Casey, you said that if this proposal were to be accepted that the number of days of legislative action would be reduced. Do you mean that if this proposal is accepted the people of Louisiana will vote to see that the number of legislative days are reduced?

MR. CASEY

The end result of adopting the alternative measure, if adopted by the people, will have the effect of diminishing, of eliminating the effective number of legislative days that we have, Dr. Weiss, because so much of our time must be spent on committee hearings. If we are going to limit the number of actual days to calendar days only and not eighty-five legislative days, we are seriously limiting and hampering our legislative activities.

[Motion to limit debate to five minutes adopted without objection.]

Further Discussion

MR. FLORY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I hope you'll give me just a few minutes of your time to...if you would listen to a couple of remarks I have to make in regard to this delegate proposal. I share the view of many of the speakers that have come to this platform today on this particular issue, in that we are talking about a very serious issue. Some of the statements that have been made from this microphone I hope were in the heat of passion or whatever. I recognize that the legislature has to have adequate time in order to complete its labors and take care of the business of this state. Mr. Avant made a statement earlier that it was of a serious nature to a great number of people of this state. I say to you that I share that view. I call to your attention just a couple of years ago when several hundred thousand people of this state rejected extending the session of the legislature from the sixty day biannual and the thirty day special session to regular sixty day sessions. They said emphatically they were opposed to the extension of the legislative session. I say that one of the statements made that the committee that considered this matter, if my memory serves me correctly, their recommendation to the floor of the convention was for an annual forty-five day session and this convention, in its wisdom, changed that to what is now in the proposed new constitution. I know some of the rumors that have been floated on the floor of this convention as to what was the real purpose behind this delegate proposal. I think that I could safely represent to you the majority view of those people that signed this proposal that they were in good faith, sincerely felt that this was of such magnitude that it ought to be an alternative on the ballot. I think it's of serious nature. I know what is required, I think, in the legislature even though I've never been a member of the legislature. I have not missed a session of the legislature in over the last twenty years except two special sessions--one when I was out of the country, the other when I was in the hospital. So, I know a little bit about the mechanism of the legislature and what is required. I can only say to you that this proposal was put upon this floor in good faith. But, I must, in good conscience, tell you that I do not want to be any part of casting any aspersions toward the integrity of the members of the legislature; I know them too well; I know them individually. Regardless of what position they take on legislation, I don't want to be any party to casting anything toward the integrity or reflect upon the membership of the legislature of this state. Mr. Chairman, if I'm in order at this time, I now move that this proposal be withdrawn from the files of the convention.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

[Amendment withdrawn.]

[Quorum Call: 82 delegates present and a quorum.]

Personal Privilege

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I was going to ask for a suspension of the rules for the purpose of asking the convention to adopt the amendment which is before you. But, in an effort to save the time of the convention, I do not propose to introduce this amendment, but I would like to get into the record my intention as the author of the amendments which were adopted yesterday in connection with the duties and powers of the superintendent of education. The purpose of the amendment yesterday was to set up the superintendent of education as the executive officer of the Department of Education and of the Board of Regents for the purpose of implementing the policies of those two boards. The state superintendent of education is not, himself, a policy maker, and the intention of this amendment was not to make him such. Furthermore, the intention was never to make him the administrative head of any of the institutions under the control of these two policymaking boards, but to serve merely in the same capacity that he presently serves with the Board of Education as its administrative or executive officer and its ex officio secretary.

The authors of the amendment which is before you now have authorized me to say that their intention in preparing this amendment was to make that crystal clear. But, we are satisfied that the intention is clear enough so that it is not necessary to offer the amendment.

For the purpose of the record, Mr. Chairman, I would like to dictate into the tape the amendment, because it will not be introduced.

120th Days Proceedings—January 17, 1974

On page 2, line 17, in Delegate Proposal No. 98, first enrollment, after the words "education and" and before the word "the" there would have been inserted the following:

"ex officio secretary of".

So that the sentence would have read: "He shall be the administrative head of the Department of Education and the ex officio secretary of the Board of Regents."

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Point of Information

MR. FONTENOT

I don't know if what you can do was just done by a point of personal privilege, but I think that the intent of what was passed yesterday should not be debated on a subsequent day. I don't want to raise any questions as to what Mr. Dennery's intent was yesterday, but if what he just said was his intent, that was not my intent when I voted for his amendment yesterday.

MR. HENRY

All right, sir.

MR. FONTENOT

We're going to open up this whole section for debate, or are we going to just leave it as it was? I don't know. . .

MR. HENRY

The gentleman is not offering an amendment. If you would like the floor after I recognize Mr. Kean on personal privilege, then I'd recognize you to say what you want to say, Mr. Fontenot.
Mr. Kean.

Further Discussion

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, with all due respect to the authors of this amendment and the explanation by my good friend, Mr. Dennery, I rise to say that I do not share their view of this particular amendment adopted on yesterday which made the superintendent of education the administrative head of the Board of Regents. I made it plain in my closing remarks to the convention, with respect to the alternative proposal that was being considered, how I understood that amendment to apply, and the authority and jurisdiction that it vested in the superintendent of education with respect to higher education. I repeat again that that was my understanding of the amendment. I voted for the amendment because I understood it to be and to read as I understood it in the context that I explained it yesterday to the convention. I simply rise to say that I do not agree with the substantive or subjective intention that Mr. Dennery expresses today as being the meaning of the amendment adopted by the convention yesterday. As far as I'm concerned, it makes the superintendent of education the administrative head of the Board of Regents with whatever authority and jurisdiction that that would ordinarily connote.

[Motion to suspend the rules to allow Delegate Jenkins ten minutes to explain a proposed amendment to Committee Proposal No. 26.]

Amendment

MR. HARDIN

This amendment is offered by Delegates Pugh, Jenkins, Gravel, Kilbourne, Stinson, O'Neill, Cannon and Chatelain to Committee Proposal No. 26 by Delegates Rayburn, et al.

It's to amend the final enrollment as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 4, delete Subparagraph (10) of Paragraph (C) of Section 4 in its entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"(10) Irrevocably dedicated places of burial held and used for no other purposes."

Point of Information

MR. ROEMER

Has he made his motion to suspend? Has that been made?

MR. HENRY

Well, he's going to ask for, I suppose, a suspension of the rules to allow himself ten minutes to explain why he wants the suspension to get into it. So, that will be his first motion.

MR. ROEMER

Well, if I'm in order, if it makes any difference, I object to his suspending the rules for that purpose.

[Motion to suspend the rules rejected:
53-36.]

MR. HENRY

Ladies and gentlemen, if you will give me your attention just a minute, the committee that was appointed yesterday composed of Mr. Dennery, Kean, Conroy and Pugh to discuss with the secretary of state and the attorney general the proposition of how these alternates should be placed on the ballots, etc., has a report that will be passed out right now. I think Mr. Dennery is going to briefly explain the report, not for the purpose of our taking any action because the appropriate resolution has not been drawn, but will be drawn and submitted to the delegates tomorrow together with other resolutions or a resolution necessary to the instruction of the secretary of state about the placing of the document before the people for the referendum vote. We have left for the consideration of the convention the proposal on transitional matters, which it is apparent that most people have not read. It is of the utmost of importance. I'm going to suggest that we don't get into the transitional proposition today, but we wait and allow you all to have some time this afternoon and evening to please look at that proposal because, as I say, it is very important to look at that. We will take it up, perhaps, the first thing in the morning. We have just about gotten to the point that we've worked ourselves out of work. . . . So, if there is . . . with the exception of Delegate Proposal No. 102, No. 173, No. 116 and some other matters which probably will allow us to get out of here by about seven tonight. No, seriously, we are in a position right now where we can't go too much further today. We will take up the transitional report tomorrow together with the other necessary resolutions directing the secretary of state as to the ballot and the final style and drafting, hopefully. We will probably have a long day tomorrow. We will meet in the House chamber, but hopefully we'll be in such a posture once we get through tomorrow that we can have a rather short day on Saturday.
Mr. Goldman.

Point of Information

MR. GOLDMAN

Is that Transitional Committee Proposal No. 38? Is that the one?

MR. HENRY

That's correct. It's CP No. 38 by Mrs. Zervigon's committee. Mr. Dennery, if you will, give us your remarks relative to the report of the committee appointed yesterday.

Explanation

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, the committee which the Chairman appointed yesterday in connection with the language governing and the ballot provisions applicable to alternate proposals met with Mr. Martin, Mr. Fowler and two of the assistant attorneys general and spoke to the attorney general. I spoke to the attorney general yesterday and this morning. We have now received an opinion from the attorney general which is appended to this report.

The recommendation, basically, is that the delegate proposals or the only one we have adopted--there's only one, of course, alternate proposal--that the original language in the draft which we previously adopted be theoretically removed from the constitution and put on the ballot with the alternate proposal so that you may vote for and against the Constitution of 1974, except for that specific provision on education. Then, you can vote for either of the alternatives on that particular proposal. Now, anyone who votes for or against the constitution would have the right to vote for either alternate proposal. If the constitution is adopted by a majority of the total votes cast for and against, then that proposal, that alternate proposal which gets the greater number of votes will become a part of the body of the constitution. The committee report sets out what we recommend to place into the delegate proposal itself, which we didn't take up yesterday, and also recommends the configuration of the ballot itself. You will notice that appended to the report--Mr. Kean concurred but set out other ideas and Mr. Conroy also concurred and set out a slightly different idea for the configuration on the ballot. The report, I believe, otherwise is self-explanatory. It is now before you so you have an opportunity to read it. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

MR. HENRY

Thank you, Mr. Dennery.

Further Discussion

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I concur in the report of the committee in that the format that the committee recommends for purposes of considering an alternative does represent a means by which, in my opinion, an alternative proposal can be validly and legally and understandably presented to the people of this state. There are some questions that come up in connection with the implementation of the committee recommendations that I think we need to understand. I invite your attention so that you will understand what will be involved if we go forward with the committee recommendation. We discussed with the secretary of state and Mr. Fowler, various ways in which the alternative proposals could be placed on the ballot. One of the concerns expressed in that meeting was that since we had a requirement in Act 2 of 1972 for . . .

If Mr. Thompson and Mr. Tocs don't want to listen to this explanation, I would appreciate it, Mr. Chairman, if you'd ask them to go off to the side somewhere and have their shouting match.

We're dealing with something that is not only important so far as the proper presentation of these alternatives, or this alternative proposal, but a matter which could have a bearing upon the validity of not only the alternative proposal but the constitution itself. I think you ought to be vitally interested in what is being proposed here and the manner in which it can be resolved. As I pointed out, there was some concern expressed at the meeting that because Act 2 of 1972 makes reference to a for or against vote in dealing with the constitution itself, that it could be considered that a for or against vote was required in connection with any alternative. It becomes very difficult in presenting the alternative on a for or against basis. You almost have to do it in two parts. You could end up with a situation where both lose and the question arises as to what is the condition of the document under those circumstances. It was the general view of those in attendance at the meeting that if the attorney general held it to be valid that you could have an alternative proposal presented on what we would call a "for - for" vote, in which case the two opposite or opposing proposals would be, in a sense, running against each other. A voter would then be called upon to vote for the one that he wished to vote for. Under those circumstances, the one which received the most votes of those voting on the alternative would be the provision that would go into the constitution. Now, in order to accomplish that, we've got to pull out of the constitution, out of our proposed constitution, Article VII of the Education Article of the constitution. Now, I personally oppose taking out of the constitution those provisions which we have already placed in the constitution. I have suggested in light of the opinion of the attorney general that if you can have a "for - for" vote that then you can leave in the Education Article VII and simply have a "for" vote for the particular alternative that's being presented. Under those circumstances, it would require, in my opinion, a majority of those who vote in the election to approve the alternative because otherwise you would have a majority voting on the constitution with the proposal in it and less than a majority being able to approve the alternative under those particular circumstances. Now, Mr. Conroy and Mr. Pugh expressed some preference for not having any "for" at all on the ballot and simply doing what had been done in Illinois where you would have one item or another, and it would leave it up to the voters to pull the lever for which one they preferred. It was my feeling, I think shared by Mr. Dennery, that this would cause considerable confusion, might be construed as not offering an opportunity for the voters to vote for or to reject a particular proposal. Under the circumstances, as far as Mr. Dennery and myself were concerned, we felt if we had to eliminate the one "for" and go with the opposite opposing proposals running against each other, it was preferable for the "for - for" arrangement. I simply want to make that explanation so that you will understand that when we get to the question of how to posture this proposition on the ballot, the issue is going to arise as to whether or not you wish to take out of the present proposed constitution Article VII, which is now in that constitution, in order that it can run on the "for - for" basis. I didn't want my position to be misunderstood because when that effort is made I will oppose it and will reurge to you the amendment which I offered, first, yesterday, which would merely provide for a "for" vote on the alternative.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The amendment would read as follows. It would add a section.

On page 11, line 7, add the following new section: "Section 11. Enforcement.

Section 11. The legislature shall provide by law for the enforcement procedures for the implementation of this (There's a mistake on your copy. It shouldn't be "section"; it should be "article.") article and the penalties which result from their breach."

[Motion to suspend the rules rejected: 22-63.]

Personal Privilege

MR. MIRE

Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Fellow delegates, I'd appreciate very much if you would pay attention to me for just a little while. I'm not going to speak very long, but last Tuesday evening there was a program on Channel 9. This program was, I think, sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Louisiana. It was a four-man panel. We had two people from the universities here: one, Dr. Perkins from Southern University from the Political Science Department, and Dr. Carleton from the LSU Political Science Department. We had two of our delegates, Herman "Monday" Lowe and Louis "Woody" Jenkins. This was an audience participation program. It was a very excellent program. The panelists certainly outdid themselves in explaining the works of this convention. I had any number of people who saw it, and of course, being local and "9" being a station that's looked at plenty in my vicinity, that said, "Well, now, I really didn't understand it, but these people really explained different phases of it to me." The questions came from the audience. The explanations from both Monday and from Woody were excellent. They had done their homework very, very well, and I understand that the League of Women Voters of Louisiana are going to conduct such programs throughout the state, and I'll guarantee you that the attitude of the people towards the constitution is going to absolutely reverse and will certainly be in favor of this constitution if any of the other programs are anything like this, and I want to publicly congratulate both the League of Women Voters, the panelists and in particular, our two delegates. Thank you very much.

MR. WILLIS

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, as we approach the end of our convention, I regard myself highly honored and extremely grateful to be permitted to trespass on your precious time and tax a small percentage of your usual patience and politeness to proclaim an accolade to one of our members and appropriate the privilege to assess his bountiful and immeasurable personal assets. He enriches all with a constant smile, the greatest countersign of friendship, and will bid you good morning even if it is raining. He has a golden heart. His diligent employ is to mitigate misfortune with good counsel and a helping hand. He always has the antidote for trouble with saturating sincerity and can reconcile differences with clarity and alacrity. He would rather busy himself with the smallest things than to treat a minute as worthless because he has the joie de vivre. His fiber has the sensitive zeal and exuberance to pluck the joys of life. He is energetic and defatigable in the ordeal of sharp debate and neither recalls from it nor asks for greater advantage or more quarter than he will give, or his opponent will claim for himself. He has warm friends. He is a tender husband and a fond parent. He loves his enemies because he made them himself by being open and honest and taking pains to unmask the frivolous faults and hypocritical contention, and by boldly censoring the rogue or rascal without regard to station. He will exchange love for hatred which will be his lasting monument of affection of our people for whose love alone he joined this delegation, because he applies his innate knowledge that the best way to rid yourself of a foe is to make him a friend. By his uncommon cheerfulness, constancy, courage, charity, he pivots the hatred of a foe to affectionate and respectful friendship because he is as true when he professes friendship as when he professes enmity to a cause or question. He is firm in his final opinions. He believes that when government takes care of our pennies, our dollars will take care of themselves. He believes that there are two halves to the tax dollar: one half being how to levy it logically and the other half being how to disburse it discreetly. He believes that austerity is the best guardian of governmental virtue and consists as much in selection as in saving. He believes that if our government loses its ability to logically levy taxes and wishes more, it should tax the sun, the stars, and the season, and that if agents of government say in retort to this that there is not enough taxing area, these agents should make room for others who need less area. He believes that if our state does not have...he believes that our state should live within its means, and not, even if it has to borrow money, to do so. He believes that, while it is political fun to be prodigal with the public trust, it is more politics to be prudent and parsimonious. He believes that the constitution is the place to put impervious barricades to taxation of homesteads, just as you fence them in for physical protection, and further believes that there should be constitutional barricades to prevent the destruction of initiative in the production of income, and that to do otherwise would add another brick in the devil's workshop called idleness and discourage the taking of advantage of all idle hours for creative and productive labor. Above all, he believes in the fullest protection of the home which quarters the family, the best group, the crucible, and the last bastion of society, for which he has the highest respect and loyalty. So, Mr. Chairman and my fellow delegates, not because he is incapable of reading our honorable assessment of him, but because it is worthy of declaration, with your generous and gracious consent to that privilege, I read our tribute to a delegate who answered our state's hopeful expectations and has seen and does see and has the vision to foresee what makes not only for good government or better government, but also for the best government to foster domestic tranquility and the pursuit of happiness, and who hails from the parish named for the greatest constitutional scientist of them all. Finally, I assure you, Mr. Chairman, and all of you, my fellow delegates, that only prudent use may be and will be made of what we spontaneously say of our esteemed colleague in these cordial words.

120th Days Proceedings—January 17, 1974

We, the undersigned delegates to the Louisiana Constitutional Convention of 1973, do hereby declare and acknowledge our profound gratitude to the Honorable Lawrence A. Chehardy for his superlative contribution to our deliberations, particularly on revenue, finance and taxation. His guidance transferred the aspirations of our people to constitutional reality. His untiring efforts retained and increased the guardian angel of homestead exemption and barricade against higher income taxes in our document, and delineated the distinction between mine and thine pertaining to our government and our people. By this exquisite form of courtesy and with profound thanks, we pronounce him the constant guardian of the poor, the homeowner, the breadwinner, the family, and our entire taxpaying citizenry. With this whereof we hereunto subscribe these presence in full convention on this seventeenth day of January, 1974.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

MR. HENRY

Mr. Willis, I'd have to say that your excellent vocabulary is exceeded only by your vast imagination.

Questions

MR. ANZALONE

Mr. Willis, does not this most sanctimonious among the sanctimonious have any faults at all?

MR. WILLIS

Indeed. Your tone and your visage do not indicate to me that your question is frivolous. I thought you were the most noble Roman of them all. If you are serious, however, my answer is in the words of Shakespeare about pagans who lived a third of a century before Christ, and I answer you in a series: "Et tu, Brute? This was the most unkindest cut of all. If he has grievous faults, grievously did he answer them." Lastly, "a friend should bear his friend's infirmities." Now, my dear sir, leaving Shakespeare, I answer you in my own way. The vices of my friends I write on ice and am deaf and mute about them. Their virtues I write in the best parchment of my mind, and I am as attentive and as loquacious about them as I have been here.

PROPOSALS ON THIRD READING AND FINAL PASSAGE

Committee Proposal No. 38

Reading of the Proposal

MR. POYNTER

Committee Proposal No. 38, introduced by Delegate Zervigon, Chairperson, on behalf of the Committee of Legislative Liaison and Transitional Measures, and other delegates, members of that committee, a proposal making provisions relative to transitional provisions.

Now, that proposal has been engrossed and passed to its third reading as introduced so the correct copy before you is the original white printed copy--the white printed copy.

Explanation

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I don't know how many of you all have had a chance to read this proposal, but I really wish you'd sit there and try and wade through it if you can, because we are going to have some important policy decisions to make at certain points during the day. It's very difficult when you are transposing former long constitution like the 1921 Constitution to a briefer document such as we have written already. To make sure that you've covered everything that needs to be covered, even in the constitution itself, or in the materials to be transposed into the statutes. So, some of the language in here is more flexible than some of the delegates would like, in order to allow us to cover situations in which we've lost sections, forgotten to consider them, forgotten to transpose them, or something of that nature. This article deals with a transition of government from the old government under the 1921 Constitution, to the new government which we will have established. You will find in here certain sections that are reiterated from the main body of the constitution, but they are in here in order to make people feel more comfortable that their concerns have been addressed. Having given those brief introductory remarks, I'm going to go into Section 1 unless there are questions in general.

Questions

MR. BURNS

I just wanted to ask Mrs. Zervigon in the transition of these different articles out of the old constitution, did the committee make any changes? Are we going to get them just like they were?

MRS. ZERVIGON

You are speaking just like they were in the reports from the substantive committees?

MR. BURNS

Yea.

MRS. ZERVIGON

There is a typographical error or two. But, aside from that, we are a procedural committee, so we transposed them just as they came from the committees. It's the feeling of the staff and the committee, as I understand it, that that means that they are still liable to amendment on the floor. But, we transposed them just as we received them.

A couple of more things, Mr. Chairman, that I'd like to say in order to explain one thing to my committee members in particular, there are four transitional measures that have been passed by the convention, finally styled, the styling has been passed, and they are in the stance of being in final enrollment. We originally reported those out because, of course, we intended to make no changes in it, and could make no changes. We didn't include them in this particular committee proposal because it was the opinion of the Clerk that that would leave them open to amendment. We figured that those battles had been fought already.

In addition to that, I'd like to say that many of the committee chairmen have gotten up here and said this has been under study for six months. We've heard all kinds of witnesses. We hope you won't fool with our document. That's not the case with my committee. There is very little literature on the subject, very few people that consider themselves experts, although many people have opinions, so that, by and large, most all amendments, as far as I'm concerned, I can't speak for the committee as a whole, are considered to be friendly amendments. What we are trying to do is set up mechanics, not protect anybody's sacred cow or jab somebody else's. So, I really hope that you...the number of amendments, of course, take up a whole lot of time, but I hope that you will realize that the committee knows that this is a difficult job to do, and that all the help that we can get will be welcome.

MR. O'NEILL

Mary, I have some questions on several different articles in this...proposal....

MRS. ZERVIGON

Excuse me, Mr. O'Neill. May I interrupt? Mr. Chairman, do you think it would be a good procedure to have specific questions on sections offered while we are considering those particular sections, rather than....

MR. HENRY

I think we should...restrict the questions to...as we go through section by section, to the specific sections, rather than as I understand it. I think I've been up here talking. I would... appreciate your opening remarks are general in nature as to the entire proposal.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Yes, sir.

MR. HENRY

When we get into Section 1, I would suggest that those who have questions on Section 1 begin the interrogation there rather than a blanket interrogation at this point. I think we are going to find ourselves going over the same material twice.

MR. O'NEILL

I'll ask my question then, Mr. Chairman.

MR. AVANT

Mrs. Zervigon, I have a general question, related generally to the entire article, but specifically, also, to Section 1. Now, this constitution, or this proposed constitution up to this point, and before anything in this article dealing with transitional provisions is inserted therein, has a certain meaning--each word, each section, each article, and the document as a whole has a meaning. We all have our ideas as to what it means. Someday, perhaps, the courts will tell us with finality what it means. But, my question is this, whatever that meaning is, any word, any sentence, any section, any paragraph, any article, or the whole thing put together, nothing in this article is intended to change that meaning, is it?

MRS. ZERVIGON

Yes, sir. I agree with you entirely. That's why we put the first section in there to make that perfectly clear. I don't know if this is the proper legal term, but this is an inferior article. You read the others first, and this is to help implement them.

MR. ABRAHAM

Mary, you may have already planned on doing this, but I might suggest, particularly when we get to Section 9 where there is going to have to be transitional articles and things like that, I assume the staff is going to be here so that if a question does come up as to what happened to a particular section or article in the old constitution, they'll be able to tell us where that particular thing goes. Will they not?

MRS. ZERVIGON

Yes, in addition to that, we've had a memo prepared outlining those sections specifically continued in Section 9 so that you can see what it was the committee did. Also, I've given a copy of the report several days before any of the rest of you got it to the chairman of substantive committees and asked them to hold themselves available, or one of the members of the committee available to answer just exactly that kind of question. Because, while we can look on the charts and see the what....the substantive committee....people would have to answer the why.

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

MR. DUVAL

Mary, I realize the monumental task that your committee had. I am wondering, the approach you took is to attempt to specifically itemize those provisions of the '21 Constitution which were deleted by this group, and it transposes items into statute. That's the approach you took. Is that not correct, basically?

MRS. ZERVIGON

In a limited number of instances. Everything else is repealed.

MR. DUVAL

I see.

Now, is this...the '21 Constitution as I understand it, didn't precisely handle it this way. It didn't mention statutory....that is, provisions of the old constitution that were deleted from it in its schedule. Now, can you tell me the thinking of your committee as to why you wanted to do it in this way, specifically? Because, I think that is the major po....one of the major policy decisions we will have to make here.

MRS. ZERVIGON

That's quite true. This was an argument that went over a long period of time as to whether the old constitution should be totally repealed, or whether it should be totally continued insofar as not in conflict, or whether we should try and combine the approaches. The problem that we ran into, and bear in mind that we are a procedural committee, was that certain of the substantive committees had meant to leave the status quo as far as the operations of government are concerned. But just to put processes in the constitution, as opposed to details. Other substantive committees had intended to substantially change the processes of government. Therefore, some committees wanted certain things continued in the statutes insofar as they weren't in there already, in order to say, "You'll just keep on doing what you've been doing until somebody stops you."

Others, the Judiciary Committee, for example, wanted certain sections repealed--didn't want them to exist anymore--wanted operations to change--we couldn't very well comment on that and say, "You'll are all wet. We're going to repeal everything," or "We're going to continue everything," since they, as the substantive committee had made that judgment. So, we tried to take this way of combining the approaches of two different sorts of committees, two different attitudes of committees, to try to make it work the best way we could together. It has happened in other states where the previous constitution is long, that there have been specific continuations into the statutes. It's not true when you're going from a short constitution to a short constitution, then you just repeal and supercede everything.

Reading of the Section

MR. HARDIN

"Section 1. Limitation of Transitional Provisions

Section 1. Nothing in this article shall be construed or applied in such a manner as to invalidate the foregoing articles of this constitution, but only to supplement and to provide for an orderly transition from the Constitution of 1921."

Explanation

MRS. ZERVIGON

This section was put first, and was put in specifically to clarify the sort of question Mr. Avant asked. This is only to implement the new constitution. As far as my committee was concerned, we had no intention of reopening questions already settled by this body. That's why this is in here. I am proposing two amendments to clarify the language, Mr. Chairman. I don't know whether you want to introduce those amendments first?

MR. HENRY

Yes, we'll....well, I think we have another amendment, I'm advised by the Clerk, just as a deletion of the whole section, Mr. Clerk? Then perhaps we should take that one first, Mrs. Zervigon, as we customarily do take the....

MRS. ZERVIGON

That's fine.

Amendment

MR. HARDIN

Delegate Conroy sends up this amendment. Amendment No. 1. On Page 1, delete lines 12 through 17, both inclusive, in their entirety. It has the effect of deleting the entire section.

Explanation

MR. CONROY

The purpose of this amendment, as explained by the Clerk, is to delete Section 1. In my opinion, Section 1 is totally inconsistent with the concept of what a schedule of transitional provision should be. By their very nature, transitional provisions conflict with the balance of the constitution; that is, there are certain parts, or certain functions which have to remain in effect even though inconsistent with the basic concepts of the constitution. The purpose of the transitional provision schedule is to allow those things to continue even though they are inconsistent with the present constitution. If you read the balance of this proposal, for example, Section 6 which says that "all taxes, penalties, fines, forfeitures, etc., shall continue in existence;" Section 7 which says, "no impairment of bonds and contracts", and so forth; Section 10 which continues certain governmental functions; all those things are continued in this schedule even though they conflict with the basic part of the constitution, so that it seems to me that you have an essential conflict in this schedule provision when you try to read Section 1 with Section 6, 7, 10, and some other parts. I think the way to handle the problem that's presented by Section 1, is in each section of this schedule as you come to them to be satisfied that there is nothing in it that conflicts with or disturbs the balance of what you may be interested in the basic part of the constitution. But I think to try to say that nothing in this schedule will interfere with the basic part of the constitution, is simply an inconsistency in terms and concepts about what a transitional provision is. I think that you will not find any provision comparable to this first sentence in any other state constitution. I don't believe that there is one in existence which would have a statement of that kind. I think it would virtually render meaningless the rest of the schedule.

I yield to any questions.

Question

MR. FLORY

Mr. Conroy, do I understand you, I haven't seen your amendment, but do I understand you correctly to say that the substance of the language in Section 1 ought to be applied or added to Sections 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10, also, rather....

MR. CONROY

What I say is that Section 1 is inconsistent with Sections 6, 7, and 10, because it renders Sections 6, 7, and 10 meaningless the way Section 1 is written.

Further Discussion

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I strenuously urge you to reject Mr. Conroy's amendment because there are certain things in this article that, in my humble opinion, after studying them for many, many hours, and going back to the basic source of material that is referred to in the Constitution of 1921, that would change the need and completely undo many of the substantive provisions that you've adopted and placed in this constitution. Now, Mrs. Zervigon, if you will recall, stated, in response to my question, that nothing in this article dealing with transitional provisions was intended to in any way affect the substantive meaning of any single word, or clause, or sentence, or section, or paragraph, or article, of the constitution up to this point, either taken by itself or altogether. Whatever it means, it means. Nothing in this transitional provision is intended to change or disturb that in any way. Well, I respectfully submit to you, then, that you have to say that--you have to say that--because there are several places in this article, and we will get into more specific reference to that later on in connection with some amendments that I intend to offer, that would change the meaning and undo what you have done up to this point. I don't say that it was done by the committee designedly. I don't think it was. I think that they meant what they said in this first section, that this is intended only to supplement and provide for an orderly transition from the Constitution of 1921. But, we are all human beings. We do not always....

....I say that I don't mean to imply that any of those, what are rather obvious substantive changes to me, I don't say that any of those were done by the committee deliberately. But, I say that we are all human beings, and we are sitting here doing the best we can to deal with words and phrases and sentences in the English language, and we just don't always agree on what those things mean. We don't always actually get down the words that we...that adequately express what we intend to mean. So, unless...unless you have a provision in this transitional article, that nothing in it is intended to change the meaning of any of the work that you've done before, you're going to be in serious trouble. Because some of the specific provisions in this transitional schedule, in my humble opinion, and I've spent a good bit of time studying them and going back to the source of material it was referred to, definitely operate a substantive change if you don't make the specific statement that they are not intended to effect a substantive change. For that reason, I most strenuously urge that you reject Mr. Conroy's amendment.

Questions

MR. O'NEILL

Mr. Avant, if there were some language added to the first section which would say in a manner as to invalidate, limit, restrict, do you think that would change or alter? Do you think that would help clear up your problem?

MR. AVANT

Mr. O'Neill, I have an amendment which I intend to offer which will make this section read, "Nothing in this article shall be construed or apply in such a manner as to invalidate, limit, or change the meaning of the foregoing articles of this constitution, but only to supplement and to provide for an orderly transition from the Constitution of 1921." I have an amendment that will insert that language after the word "invalidate," the words, "limit, or change the meaning of".

MR. O'NEILL

If the committee is sincere in not wanting to change anything, then they should be happy with that language.

MR. AVANT

Well, I won't express what's going on in somebody else's mind, Mr. O'Neill, other than to say that I believe that the members of that committee are honorable people. They are not trying to sandbag us, or trick us in any way; that they did the best job that they could in a rather difficult area. I don't think that they accomplished their purpose, completely. But, whether or not they will agree to that amendment or not is something that they are going to have to decide.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Avant, with reference to Mr. Conroy's feeling that perhaps where we have interim continuance of present provisions until the legislature has an opportunity to act, so that there would not be an hiatus in the law, do you think that perhaps the best way to solve his problem would be to put the qualifying language on the interim measures rather than to strike out the general proposition stating the purpose of the transitional schedule?

MR. AVANT

I most certainly do, Walter.

MR. CONROY

In order that we can better understand which sections are which, Mr. Avant, I've mentioned some of the sections that would concern me--not all of them--cause Section 5 would fall in the same category, I believe. These are areas which are necessarily inconsistent with the rest of the constitution by their very nature. What we're doing is making exception for those. Could you tell us what parts of this schedule you feel might invalidate or become more consistent with the other provisions?

MR. AVANT

Mr. Conroy, we might as well just throw it out on the table. If you read Section 17, when you stick that in there, then you might as well, we might as well not have been here. I might as well have stayed home. For whatever good, or whatever purpose that I thought I might have been accomplishing here, you have stricken it all out of the constitution, and you've put the articles in the Constitution of 1921 back into this constitution by reference. That's exactly what you've done.

Further Discussion

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman, I rise just briefly to urge you to defeat the amendment. I think that there are sections here that could be read as to be in conflict with previous articles, perhaps. That was not our intention, and I could argue the question section by section with some of the delegates, but I just say to Mr. Conroy's objections because he was the one that offered the amendment, that Section 7, for example, that he thinks invalidates or supercedes previous articles, came word for word out of his article, or report of the Revenue, Finance and Taxation. It's one of the sections I referred to earlier that was reiterated just to make people feel better. I think bond holders need to know that we're not after invalidating their bonds. That's the main thing. But, if you'll look in Committee Proposal No. 15, those words are there. The same is true, for example, of the second sentence of Section 6, which ratifies present taxes, presently levied or authorized. That also comes out of Committee Proposal No. 15 as it passed the floor and was then finally styled. How it could be construed or applied to be in conflict with the other articles of this constitution when it was taken word by word out of one of those articles, completely escapes me. So, I urge your rejection. I have no objection although I can't speak for the members of my committee to clarifying the language in Section 1. But, I do think it's an important section to retain.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. CONROY

I think that whichever way the vote goes on this amendment or on the section we have pointed out the problem that would be facing us throughout the consideration of Committee Proposal No. 38. There are, I think admittedly, some parts of this which are transitional in nature, and to that extent are inconsistent, by nature with the basic provisions of the constitution. There are other provisions such as Mr. Avant has pointed to only one that concerns him, Section 17, which probably should say, or be followed in with some remark about them not being inconsistent with anything else in the constitution. Perhaps, the problem is that we ought to have two schedules instead of one, in which you could specify some sections which are transitional, truly transitional in nature, and others which are not so transitional, but are a permanent retention of some parts of the constitution which will remain in effect. Perhaps that division is the better thing to do. I say that if that division is the thing to do, the way to accomplish that division is to eliminate this section at this time, and deal with those sections in which there's supposed to be a recitation that they do not invalidate any other part of the constitution. The basic problem I see is that we're dealing with an article that's entitled "Transitional Provisions." "Transitional Provisions" necessarily means going from one thing to another. Here, the purpose of this transition... is to retain, in effect, some of those things which may be inconsistent with the basic constitution to retain them in effect for the time that may be needed to retain them in effect. You cannot do that in the face of this Section 1. I repeat again, several sections in this article are simply unworkable and meaningless if you start off with Section 1 applicable to this entire proposal, and I therefore urge the adoption of the amendment. I'll answer any questions if there are any.

Questions

MR. ALEXANDER

Mr. Conroy, since Article I, since Section 1 provides for the orderly transition of government between the adoption of the constitution and the adjournment of this convention, I'm wondering, how do you, or how would we share in the state; for example, suppose after the constitution shall have been adopted by the people of the state, and then litigation develops, which by injunctive proceedings would temporarily prevented it from going into effect. Under the provisions of Article XXXVIII, everything would remain orderly, we would continue under the 1921 Constitution until that litigation possibly would have been adjudicated. But, how do you provide for that? What would happen?

MR. CONROY

No, I disagree with you. I think that in order for that to be accomplished we'd look at Section 10, but I don't believe that Section 10 can be validly applied in the face of...the language in Section 1 because Section 10 itself says that any provision which is inconsistent with this constitution, which is a necessary procedure of government, shall remain in effect. Well, that provision stating that "any provision which is inconsistent with this constitution which is a necessary procedure of government shall remain in effect" is completely at odds with this provision in Section 1 that says "nothing in this article shall be construed in such a manner as to invalidate the foregoing articles of the constitution" because Section 10 by its very terminology invalidates anything that's... a part of the constitution.

MR. ALEXANDER

But, all you do is delete...

MR. CONROY

All I'm doing is...That's correct. If you look at the 1954 Project of the constitution for this state, when they looked at this same problem, they recommended that there be no lead-in of this kind, that this is in effect, a preamble, or part of it should be considered as a preamble when it says that it's to supplement and provide for an orderly transition, and that that sort of language is simply unnecessary. That is the function of a transitional schedule, and that's all it's supposed to do, is to provide for the transition from the Constitution of 1921. The part of this section that I object to, that I object to is the invalidate sentence; the part that I feel is unnecessary is the second part. In other words, the reason I move to delete the whole thing instead of just the first part was that I thought the second part was unnecessary. I find the first part objectionable; the second part, unnecessary.

MR. ALEXANDER

Thank you.

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Conroy, as I understand your point, and as I read it, apparently, as I read the other sections following Section 1, a good deal many of them are in essence literally inconsistent with the provisions of the proposed constitution.

MR. CONROY

Precisely.

MR. DUVAL

Therefore, we'll have to say "notwithstanding any other provision herein" to make...or else we're not really accomplishing it; is that...

MR. CONROY

That's correct.

MR. DUVAL

You're saying we should deal with each one--any one that is in essence inconsistent, we should deal with it in the specific section.

MR. CONROY

I think we're going to have to face up to that problem. There may be some that present the problem Mr. Avant said, and in any event, we're going to have to deal with each one of these, as I said, whether this passes or not, we still are going to be faced with that problem on each one of these sections.

[Quorum Call: 91 delegates present and a quorum.]

Point of Information

MR. JENKINS

As I understand it, the Committee on Legislative Liaison and Transitional Measures is a procedural committee, not a substantive committee. I'm wondering how a procedural committee can propose a substantive part of the constitution.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Jenkins, they were assigned the matter of the problems of legislative liaison and transition, and some of their material and information is bound to have some substantive effect. The material contained in the schedule may have some temporary substantive effect, and maybe even some permanent substantive effect. It's based on the rules of the convention, Mr. Jenkins.

[Amendment rejected: 17-79. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mrs. Zervigon at this time aends up amendments.

Amendments read as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 14, after the words "as to" delete the remainder of the line and insert in lieu thereof the following: "supersede or invalidate any provision of the foregoing".

Explanation

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I am submitting this amendment in the same spirit as Mr. Avant's amendment, although I had it typed before he asked his question. More or less, at the request of Mr. Jenkins, who just wanted to tighten up the language and make sure it said exactly what I was trying to say. It makes two changes. Before the word "invalidate" on line 14, it inserts the word "supersede or" and before the phrase "the foregoing articles" would insert the phrase "any provision of" because it was Mr. Jenkins's concern that that could be construed by a court to say if you don't validate a whole article then this section doesn't count. It's just clarifying language in order to tighten it up and make it do exactly what I think you all wanted to do as shown by the vote in the defeat of the Conroy amendment. I urge your adoption of this amendment.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

MR. CASEY

Mr. Avant is now recognized for his amendment, to explain his amendment.

Would you please give Mr. Avant the courtesy of your attention, please.

The Clerk will read the amendment first.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The amendment reads as follows:

We had to make a few changes in it to accommodate the adoption a moment ago of the Zervigon amendment.

It would read as follows:

On page 1, line 14, after the word "invalidate" you need to insert "contained in the text of Floor Amendment No. 1 proposed by Mrs. Zervigon and just adopted " insert a comma "," and add the following: "or limit or change the meaning" you need to add the word "of"; "or limit or change the meaning of". It would make that first sentence read as follows: "Nothing contained in this article shall be construed or applied in such a manner as to supersede or invalidate or limit or change the meaning of any provision of the foregoing articles of this constitution,"etc.

Explanation

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I think the amendment, the meaning of the amendment is rather obvious. I'm authorized by Mrs. Zervigon to state that she has no objection to the amendment. She didn't speak for the committee, but she tells me that she has no objection to it. It's simply to make it abundantly clear that none of the meaning of any of the work that we have done up to this point, no matter what it means, whatever the courts of this state ultimately say it means, if it has to go to court to find out what it means, whatever it is, it is; and it stays that way, and nothing that we put in this article is going to change it, invalidate it, supersede it, limit it, or affect it in any way. I ask your favorable adoption of the amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, the reason that I asked to get your attention a little earlier--and I know all of us are anxious to have something to bring home with us as a memento of this convention--but the reason I did so is because of the fact that we do have some very, very serious problems facing us today. I want to explain to you in connection with Section 1, one of the big problems we have. As a member of the Committee on Style and Drafting, it has been suggested that certain provisions of the new constitution which we have adopted, be taken out of the main body of the document, and put into the transition provision because of the fact that they will have a limited period of time in which it would be anticipated that they would be in effect; for instance, provisions on tideland settlements and so forth, and the provisions in that particular section which talk about how the funds would be distributed and so forth. Now, if we put provisions which we have adopted into the transitional section and adopt something such as we now have here which would make that subservient to the remainder of the constitution, it could be violence to what we have already adopted. Now, I've been assured by Judge Tate that he would propose to have a Part I, which would come before this Part II, so that we would be sure to protect those parts of the constitution which we have adopted in its main body, but would remove back to the transitional provision. So, what I'm saying to you now is I don't object to the Avant amendment as it is presently...that is, provided that what Judge Tate proposes is adopted. But, if it is not adopted, then we're going to be in a mess; and I only want to call all of this to your attention because of the fact that we're all proceeding along, and I don't think we are paying enough attention to what we're doing, and I do hope that on the last deliberative day that we have that we don't undo an awful lot of the good that we have done all year long.

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

Questions

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Perez, this particular provision, if it is inserted above the articles which we are transferring out of the constitution, that we have adopted, if it's inserted above that, wouldn't it have some of the effect of possibly invalidating or superseding some of those particular provisions? While, on the other hand, if it's inserted, you might say, between those articles which are transferred and the articles which we are taking out of the 1921 Constitution, that it would not have that effect?

MR. PEREZ

It depends naturally upon how it's worded. For instance, I have been shown by the Judge the fact that there are twelve different provisions which the Committee on Style and Drafting has proposed going into a transitional material: the Board of Regents, the Board of Supervisors of LSU, the State Board of Elementary and Secondary Education, other boards; is that correct, Judge? Are these things that I'm reading off mandatory: reorganization of state government, legislative sessions, civil service commissions, state and city civil service officers, offshore mineral revenues, tideland settlement, forfeitures prior to 1880, and effective date of property tax provisions?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Certainly, now those are provisions which we have adopted in the present constitution that we have no intentions of invalidating or superseding or anything else like that. So, certainly we don't want to do anything that would affect those particular provisions except just transfer them to a different article of the constitution.

MR. PEREZ

But, again, that's why I say that we have to be very careful about what we are doing here. That's the reason I had attempted to get the attention of the delegates to see to it that we knew what we were doing and didn't make any serious mistake. I'm not...if I may ask from the Chair, on line 13, has the word "article" been changed to "part"?

MR. POYNTER

On line 13, Mr. Perez? That has not been changed.

MR. PEREZ

Well, there again, if we don't do that, well, then we're in trouble. You see, we have to change. Apparently, you need an amendment which would say that "nothing in this part," and then have a Part I and a Part II.

MR. TATE

Mr. Perez, thank you so much for explaining. Style and Drafting considered the fact that we may have this problem, and if the convention so sees fit to order us, we will plan to handle it as Mr. Perez indicated by putting in a Part I, the transitional provisions we've already passed that should not necessarily be limited by the language in the present Section 1. Now, if this passes as...say it passed just as you wrote it, then we made this proposal and we recommend to you that this proposal be a Part II. Then, as a Style and Drafting amendment we would change this article to this part in order to clarify it with these provisions, only refer to the parts that are going to become a new part.

MR. PEREZ

No sir, Judge. That is strictly one hundred percent substantive and not procedural. If we're going to do it, we're going to do it on the floor here and now or I'm going to seriously oppose this provision.

MR. TATE

Mr. Perez, if this passed as an article...of course, the floor has to approve anything we do, but the tentative plan was to recommend to the floor, when this comes back, we would recommend that instead of saying...this would be a Part II. This would be transposing the Part II of transitional provisions. There'd be a Style amendment to put a Part I. There'd be a Part II ahead of this, and there'd be the appropriate stylistic changes to indicate that as it pass the floor it only referred to these particular sections.

MR. PEREZ

Judge, I sure don't want to take those chances. I would much prefer let's see if we can't straighten this thing out now while we...we know what we want to do, let's do it.

MR. TATE

In other words, you would prefer, right now, that we have an amendment to this Part II to head this list and to amend "article" to "part"?

MR. PEREZ

Yes sir, I would.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Perez, you are speaking about amending the title of this article to read: "Article XIV. Transitional Provisions," and then insert there "Part II"?

MR. PEREZ

Yes. This is according to Judge Tate's suggestion, not mine. What Judge Tate has advised us is that he would take certain provisions out of what we have already adopted as the proposed constitution, put it in transitional provisions and make that Part I and make it clear that the Section 1 which we are now considering would not apply to Part I, but would only apply to Part II so that you would have to, on line 13, change "article" to "part." So, you'd say "nothing in this part shall be construed," etc.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Well, Mr. Perez, consider a situation in which the recommendations are made by Style and Drafting as to what sections of the constitution that we've already ratified should be in Part I, we don't like the concept, we vote it down and have a section saying "nothing in this part," but there is no Part I. Where... .

MR. PEREZ

Well, it's very difficult. That's one of the problems with the haste in which we are dealing, Mrs. Zervigon. But, there are twelve different subject matters which are suggested to be put in Part I. I'm reasonably sure at least one or two of those will end up in transitional measures.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Perez, perhaps I've hung around with you too much this year, but aren't you asking us to buy a "pig in a poke"?

MR. PEREZ

Easy now.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Aren't you asking us to buy a "pig in a poke"?

MR. PEREZ

No. I think the best thing for us to do is if some of us would sit down and see if we can't work this thing out. But, unfortunately I don't think we are...I think that we are moving in such a way that we really don't know where we are headed.

MR. FLORY

Mr. Perez, probably I don't understand what you're talking about, but are you saying that in maybe Part II we're going to do something to undo what we've done in this convention in the constitution?

MR. PEREZ

No, Mr. Flory. What I'm saying to you is that Judge Tate and the Committee on Style and Drafting are suggesting that twelve different sections of the proposed constitution which we have adopted be put in the transition section. When you do that and say that "nothing in the transitional provisions shall be construed to apply in such a manner as to invalidate," etc., what we are doing is putting what we have already adopted in a secondary position, possibly, to other provisions which would be in the main body of the constitution. In other words, what we would be doing if we follow Judge Tate's plan is to take certain provisions out of the main body of the constitution and put them into the transitional section. When we do that, then it's limited. Then, it would be subjected to the provisions of Section 1, which would mean that that which we take out of the main body, put in the transition body then would be in a secondary position to what we have in the main body and therefore maybe change the meaning of something which we have already done in our deliberations. Do I make myself clear?

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

MR. FLORY

Part I, as I appreciate what you're talking about, would be on those articles we've adopted in the new constitution.

MR. PEREZ

That's correct.

MR. FLORY

All right. Part II, then, would be on those matters that would be transferred primarily to the statutes?

MR. PEREZ

That's correct; and repealed, etc.

MR. FLORY

Wouldn't this same principle apply that you couldn't or wouldn't want to do anything in transferring something to the statutes that would be in violation of what we have adopted in this constitution?

MR. PEREZ

You'd better repeat your question, I didn't understand it.

MR. FLORY

All right. If those matters transferred to the statutes are contained in Part II, wouldn't this same section have to apply there in order not to have something transmitted to the statutes that would be in conflict with the provisions of the twelve articles that we've adopted?

MR. PEREZ

We would not be transferring anything to the statutes as far as those provisions of the new constitution are concerned, because they are, in fact, a part of the constitution. We will be transferring many of the constitutional provisions of the '21 Constitution to statutory material, according to this proposal. So, I do not at all disagree with Section 1, provided that we have a separate part which deals with those provisions which are in the presently adopted, that is, our new proposed constitution, and have them in a different category and not subjected to the language of Section 1 because what we would transfer from the work that we have done to the transition provision would not be in a secondary position to what we've adopted otherwise. Do I make myself clear or not?

Further Discussion

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I think that--and I stand to be corrected if I misunderstood what has taken place up here--but, I don't believe there is now any objection to adopting this amendment with the understanding that between lines 11 and 12 in this article we're going to immediately come back and break the article into Part I and Part II. Then, we're going to have the problem of deciding what's going to go in Part I and what's going to go in Part II. But, I think with that explanation we are now prepared to adopt the amendment. I've already explained it.

Questions

MR. KEAN

Mr. Avant, as I understand what you are saying, we would adopt Section 1 with the language of the Zervigon amendment and your amendment. . .

MR. AVANT

And not lay it on the table.

MR. KEAN

Then, somebody is then going to sit down and try and decide what sections that follow that right now are going to be lifted out of this--whether it'd be Part II, as I understand it--and put over into Part I. Is that correct?

MR. AVANT

The convention is going to decide that.

MR. KEAN

Well, on what kind of a basis are we going to make that decision?

MR. AVANT

Mr. Kean, I imagine we're going to make it by a vote of the delegates to this convention, and whoever prevails, that's what's going to go.

MR. KEAN

Well, I understand that, Mr. Avant, and I'm trying to find out is: what's going to determine whether you put it in Part I or Part II?

MR. AVANT

Well, as I understand it, Mr. Kean, it will be based upon whether it is a more or less permanent provision that's intended to be in the constitution and be given rank equal to the provisions in the constitution, or it's some merely temporary and strictly transitional provision that's going to fall of its own weight when certain things have occurred.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman, I have no objection to the concept behind moving some of the things we've passed already. I've been talking to Judge Tate about it for several months. I understand that there is a list of suggested provisions to be moved. If that could be Xeroxed and handed around to us, I think maybe a lot of us would calm down when we see what the intentions are and see which ones we want to strike and put in Part II rather than in Part I, or which ones we want to leave in the main body of the constitution. Do you think that's a possibility?

MR. AVANT

Mary, are you talking about just kind of stopping until all that's Xeroxed, or are you talking about getting that, but proceeding right now on the amendment that's before the convention?

MRS. ZERVIGON

I have no objection to proceeding with your amendment, if that's what you are saying.

MR. ABRAHAM

Jack, I was going to suggest to you that you might want to do this: would not we be better off passing over this first section and going on with the rest of this thing to give us. . . all of you people time to work out this Section 1?

MR. AVANT

I do not think so, Mr. Abraham. If I thought so, I wouldn't have ever got up here in the first place.

MR. POYNTER

As I appreciate what Judge Tate and the Committee on Style and Drafting are going to do is to recommend to you to be included ahead of the provisions contained as presently set forth in this article a Part I that would contain twelve sections which would have constitutional status, but for one reason or another, perhaps, would have, if you will, somewhat limited in terms of time application. For example, mandatory reorganization of state government, particular provisions dealing with implementation of legislative sessions for the first few sessions following the adoption of this constitution, prescription dealing with the tidelands settlement, forfeitures of taxes prior to 1880 and the effective date of property tax provisions and similar provisions such as these that would have constitutional status, but their efficacy would be limited by, inevitably, some time frame. These would be Part I, a part of the constitution, but just be included in transitional measures in the view that ultimately they would have no real constitutional efficacy and their time limit of their efficacy would have expired. Then, he will propose to and will in fact offer an amendment momentarily that will make the transitional measures as it appears before you a Part II--a Part II--dealing strictly with transitional questions as opposed to permanent constitutional provisions that have a more limited time frame.

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

Judge Tate, is that a thorough statement of. . . I can at Mrs. Zervigon's request will run off a list of all twelve of those proposed sections which are sections which you have already adopted--already adopted--and that that committee will propose to you later this evening, hopefully, that would go into this Part I.

Point of Information

MR. FLORY

Mr. Poynter, as I appreciate what you're talking about reading from that list, you're talking about physically taking from what we have adopted, the specific, identical language from those articles or sections and putting it in Part I. Is that correct?

MR. POYNTER

That's my understanding exactly, Mr. Flory.

Further Discussion

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates I quite well understand what Judge Tate and the Style and Drafting Committee is proposing as a part of what would be Part I, because we considered those items in Style and Drafting, and they are specifically listed. They would specifically provide, with respect to the items that they cover, language that this convention adopted. I don't have any problem with that, but if I understood Mr. Avant in his explanation of his amendment, that we were then going to come along and try to decide whether or not there are some items--which would then be in what we would call Part II--which ought to also be lifted and put over into Part I or put someplace else, because it's obvious, that if you look at some of the particular provisions in what would be then Part II, that if we say that in Section 1 that nothing in this article would be construed, etc., to supersede or invalidate or limit or change the meaning of any provision of the foregoing or what comes afterwards. It seems to me that what we then would have in Part II could just as well be left out, because no one would ever be able to interpret what the meaning of Section 10, for example, would be in light of that language. Section 10 of the committee proposal talks about something remaining in effect for three years after the effective date of this constitution. It's obvious that it relates back to something that's in the present constitution or in the proposed constitution. When you talk about nothing is going to supersede, or invalidate, or limit, or change the meaning of any of those provisions, then you might as well take Section 10 out of this transitional schedule; because I don't believe you could have the language in Section 1 and the language in Section 10 and have it any meaning. What we're being asked, again, to do here, in the interest of time, in my opinion, is to buy "a pig in a poke." We're going to add Mr. Avant's language, and then we're going to come along and try to figure out what sections are to come out of this Part II because with Mr. Avant's language, they're going to be meaningless. I think we're right back where we were with respect to what kind of a proposition we're going to put on an alternative ballot when we were being asked to vote on the alternative without knowing how it would be presented to the voters. Here, again, we're being asked to put some language in that has, in my opinion, substantive effect upon the remaining provisions of the transitional proposal. If we do that, we've then got to come along later and start deciding which ones we're going to take out and which ones we're going to leave in. For that reason, I oppose Mr. Avant's amendment until we know, in particularity, what's going to be in the Part I and what's going to be in Part II, or whatever else we're going to call it.

Questions

MR. FLORY

Gordon, I don't understand what you're saying, really, because as I appreciate what the committee said in the beginning explanation of this measure, that there was no intention, regardless of what is in this thing, to change or alter the meaning of what this convention has adopted in the way of the new constitution.

MR. KEAN

I think that's correct, Mr. Flory, but my point is--and I think I'm really making the same point that, in a way, that Mr. Conroy was trying to make with his amendment--there's simply an inconsistency with this language in Section 1 between some of the provisions in the transitional section. Now, that's not true with respect to all of the parts of the transitional proposal. For example, Section 9 which continues certain items in force as a statute, I think they clearly remain in Part II subject to whatever kind of language you want to put in there, inconsistent with the constitution, subject to it, whatever you want to say--Mr. Avant's language or anybody else's. But, when you get to some of the other provisions, we talk about the items being in effect for three years, items with respect to all retroactive suits, etc. It raises a serious question in my mind--and I'm talking now about Section 5--that when you put Mr. Avant's language in, applicable to Section 5 and Section 10, what do you have, and what questions have you raised in the process? It seems to me if you put Mr. Avant's language in, you've got to raise out of this Part II some of these items which can't be consistent with that language.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Kean, I'd just like to ask this question: in what way would the language that Mr. Avant wants to insert in this Section 1 would hurt the provisional language that's in Section 5?

MR. KEAN

Well, Mr. De Blieux, we talk about all writs, etc., "existing on the effective date of this constitution shall continue unaffected." Now, we go over here and say in the first part that "nothing herein would be construed to change the meaning or supersede, invalidate," etc., something that's in the present proposed constitution. It seems to me, under those circumstances, you may have some provisions in the present constitution which would have a bearing on that section and the question then comes up: what happens under Section 5 in light of that language?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, you think that this language here is going to invalidate something?

MR. KEAN

In my opinion, a section such as Section 5 and Section 10 are truly transitional provisions and they ought not to be limited and have somebody trying to decide what they mean.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, does this provision. . . is this. . . Section 1 in any way limit them?

MR. KEAN

Senator De Blieux, I voted for Mr. Conroy's amendment because I felt they perhaps did.

MR. DENNIS

Well, Gordon, don't you agree that Mr. Avant's amendment would not hurt most of what's in this?

MR. KEAN

I think that's probably correct, Jim.

MR. DENNIS

Well, then why don't you go along and accept it and then when we get to those items that it's inconsistent with, let's take them out and put them somewhere else? Don't you think that would be more logical?

MR. KEAN

Well, all I'm suggesting, Judge Dennis, is we ought to find out what ones we're going to take out now.

MR. DENNIS

Well, we've got to do something, don't you agree, before we do the next thing?

MR. KEAN

I agree with that. I think we would have been better off to have adopted the suggestion that was made here about fifteen or twenty minutes ago to have a recess and let it go off to some. . . to one side and get this thing put down in writing so that we'd see what we were doing.

MR. BURNS

Mr. Kean, I didn't hear this last question, you know. . . the answer to it. But, anyway, isn't there some device or some procedure that we can adopt--this group--whereby we're not going to have to take up every one of these sections individually and specifically? I counted fifty-two and then had to stop to ask you this question. We'll never in the world finish.

MR. KEAN

I think the parts that Judge Tate is suggesting as being a Part I can clearly be brought over. They are transitional, really, in a technical sense, because you're giving them the same effect as if you would have left them in the constitution, and we might have been better off to have done that rather than to have to gotten into this argument. My own feeling is that outside of those, that we'd be better off coming up with a broad general provision which says that everything that's in conflict with this constitution terminates, in whatever language you want to say it, and everything that's not in conflict with it continues in full force and effect. Then, let the Law Institute or somebody else sit down and try to figure out what's obsolete and what needs to be revised or changed, and in the course of time, working with the legislature.

MR. BURNS

Do you agree that if we have to take up each one of these articles or sections, rather, individually in this Section 9 that there's no way that we could finish by tomorrow night?

MR. KEAN

If you want. . .if everybody in this convention asked one question as to what Article V, Section 2 is that's going to be put over into the statutes, we'll be here a long time, Mr. Burns.

Further Discussion

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I'm rising here primarily as a technician representing the Style and Drafting Committee which has attempted to serve you purely in a stylistic and non-substantive manner to help us organize a readable constitution as short and coherent as is possible within the limits of what we adopted from the floor. Now, I rise in support of the Avant amendment because it will clearly show--together with the next amendment which I understand there is no objection to among those who are most concerned--it will clearly show that that section limits only those sections that follow it--that follow it. One or two. . .there may be some thought that you don't need them in that section. When we get to those one or two, you could, at that time, delete them. I think that the language is necessary because remember our problem, gentlemen and ladies--remember our problem. We started with a nine hundred page constitution. There were, in that constitution, many sections that protected particular interests. Those interests were kind enough and decent enough, and you were generous enough and farsseeing enough to take them out of the constitution and to put them in the statutes--to put them in the statutes. Now, we need--when we do take those old things and put some of them in the statutes--we need that language Mr. Avant proposes here and that Mrs. Zervigon proposed simply to say you took those old statutes and you're putting them over to the technicians, but they are not to conflict with the decisions reached on this floor. Now, I say to you that. . .my friends, that if you will, right after this, adopt an amendment that clearly says this is a Part II and that these things refer only to this part, I suggest to you that the problems we are envisioning are going to disappear because, very plainly, you do not mean, in this procedural committee, to change anything that you adopted previously on the floor. This is going to clarify that intent. If there's any sort of objection to any particular section, you can raise it at the time. Now, just for example, I think the Zervigon committee had a far-reaching and far-visited and sensible approach. Instead of turning over nine hundred pages most of which is gobbledygook and garbage and obsolete--a lot of which, six hundred pages was--to technicians to weed out, we weeded it out. We took a judgment. Each substantive committee took a judgment on the general assumption that we can do more good by weeding out some of the ancient language and antiquated provisions, and perhaps overlook one or two that the legislature can put in, than to put in six hundred pages of gobbledygook into our statutes that we'll have to get out later. I think all of us now agree that had we worked instead of from the framework of the detailed '21 Constitution with all of those specific provisions, had we worked from a general outline and ideal outline, perhaps we could have done even better than we have. I think, gentlemen and ladies, ladies and gentlemen, persons, I think that we have done, in my own opinion, a tremendously fine job under the circumstances that we had. But, I say to you, for what it's worth, let's adopt the Avant amendment; let's have the Part II. Let's sensibly. . .so that this evening you will see, and in a very short time on your desks will be the proposals of Style and Drafting to reorganize what we've passed without changing the substance.

Questions

MR. LOWE

The only question I have, we keep talking about Part II, and I may have lost track, but we are on the amendment that says "or limit or change the meaning" and the Part II amendment comes up next; is that correct?

MR. TATE

Yes, and it will change 'articld' to 'part'...it will say Part II and then the first....

MR. LOWE

No, but the question is, we're not on the Part II amendment now, we are on the....all right, good, thank you.

MR. TATE

Yes, sir. But, it should be read, I think, in conjunction with the Part II amendment which I think the leading question, as agreed to, should be placed there.

MR. ABRAHAM

One question, Judge. We keep referring to Part II---Part II; what's going to be Part I?

MR. TATE

All right, there are twelve transitional provisions that have already passed; you remember the transitional on the Board of Regents--the transitional on the L. S. U. Board and the transitional on the school board; transitional on civil service. There are other provisions believed to be transitional, but you took out the substantive things---a page and a half about the tidelands settlement. Some day the tidelands settlement will be reached and then you will have, say, a page and a half they will read in 1991 that will say, "What in the world did those fellows put it up there in the body?" The transitory provisions we sort of regard as written in semi-disappearing ink; after a while nobody is going to look at them because they commend their existence like the tideland settlement that erases them.

Further Discussion

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Acting Chairman, I can see where we are dealing with something here that if we don't do it right we can have a cause, in my opinion, of a tremendous amount of litigation in the future. I'm wondering if we could take a brief recess and maybe have a meeting of minds and work out something here that the majority of these delegates or the majority of us delegates could agree upon. I'm not an attorney but I can see that if this thing is not handled with every precaution that you could create litigation on top of litigation. I would just like to suggest that maybe we recess until 1:00, or 1:15, or 1:30, or any time that the staff thinks we need to come back and maybe have, say, a thirty minute meeting now of the people that are better qualified to put the proper language in here than I am and see if we could come up with something we could agree upon that would really do what we want to do.

MR. CASEY

Senator Rayburn, that was the purpose of the approximately half hour recess that we had. I think most of the people that participated in that up at the rostrum there was pretty much of a consensus with, of course, a couple of exceptions. I would suggest that we go ahead and vote on this. There is general agreement that we will not lay on the table, I think, Section 1 first of all. I was hoping to suggest to Mrs. Zervigon, the Chairman of the Legislative Liaison Committee, that during the lunch hour those who are interested in this particular measure I would hope that we could have a meeting or a get-together, Mrs. Zervigon, during the lunch hour to try to resolve some of the problems in advance if you are willing. But, you and I can discuss that before we recess for lunch.

MR. ROY

I said, I think that we've heard about as much discussion as we can on this subject without getting totally confused; that is, those who don't understand it. I think Justice Tate had a good suggestion, and we ought to move forward, adopt the amendment, and then proceed on as he suggested. With that, if there are no other speakers, I move the previous question on it.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment rejected: 95-6. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

Yes. Judge Tate at this time sends up amendments which read as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, between lines 11 and 12, insert the following:
"PART II."

Amendment No. 2. On page 1, line 13, after the word "this" and before the word "shall" delete the word "Article" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Part".

Explanation

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, before you have the amendment. Article XIV on this page, Part I, are the twelve transitional provisions you previously passed which we are going to recommend to you that you take them out of the body and put them in this Part I section of the transitional provisions because they are limited in duration and time. Later generations will not have to read about something that happened a long time ago and passed out of existence. This amendment is simply--in order to carry out the intention that we have previously noted--to put a Part II in front of the Zervigon transitional provisions so that you'll know from now on that these we are talking about are subject to the Section 1. We amend Section 1 to say, as you know, that it just...this part shall not limit what we previously adopted in the substantive portions of the constitution. Mr. Chairman, I'll yield to questions.

Questions

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman, I don't know what that sound was but I thought it was supposed to be a train the other day.

Justice Tate, you substituted the word "Part", you're not saying "this Part of this article," but stricken the word "article" and substituted the word "Part"? This is a rude question, but does that make any sense?

MR. TATE

Yes.

MRS. ZERVIGON

So long as you capitalize the "P" it makes sense?

MR. TATE

Yes, ma'am.

MRS. ZERVIGON

What will happen in the unlikely possibility that this convention decides that all of the things we have already passed in the way of transition--the Board of Regents transition and the alternatives thereto, the civil service transition, and that sort of thing--ought to be subject to the provisions of the rest of the constitution and, therefore, there is no necessity for a Part I?

MR. TATE

Well, if that should happen, then, Mrs. Zervigon, we can reach that if that should happen as a, first of all, a policy decision of this convention; second of all, as a stylistic matter if everything above is put underneath here and everything disappears above the line, then we won't need that.

MRS. ZERVIGON

So, what you're trying to say is that to stick in Part II would have been a substantive change but to take it out, won't?

MR. TATE

I'm saying that to put Part II in clarifies that these are procedural changes only. Mrs. Zervigon, I do not believe, for instance, most of what's above the line...some of...at least above the line could possibly be made subject to this provision; for instance, the constitution provides that taxes claimed by the state shall be prescribed in three years. There is a special provision that says, however, in the tidelands settlement area we're not going to make them pay their taxes until we find out if they owe them, so prescription suspends until the settlement, that we have three years after the settlement to collect them. So, I know there are some provisions that have to stay in Part I.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Justice, do I understand what you are proposing that the Part I transitional provisions will be of equal status with the constitution and the Part II provisions will be subservient to the Part I provisions in the rest of the constitution?

MR. TATE

Well, I would say that roughly speaking, that's correct. Part I, transitional provisions are provisions that were already passed in the substantive articles. In line with the intent to produce a shorter, more coherent constitution and in line with the function of Style and Drafting to recommend an orderly re-arrangement, we thought in the interest of the long range coherence of the constitution that some of the provisions that are of constitutional dignity and not procedural or substantive should be put in Part I of the transitional provisions, thinking that in thirty years from now, fifteen years from now, whatever it is they will be written in disappearing ink, so to speak, because the condition that we asked...conditions that existed has passed, for instance, the reevaluation of taxes...assessments and so on. So, generally speaking in an incoherent way, Judge Lanier, my answer is yes.

MR. LANIER

But, what I'm getting to is like on this thing about ceasing to have effect, we may have things in both schedules that may ultimately cease to have effect; isn't that true?

MR. TATE

Yes, sure, sure.

MR. LANIER

And, isn't the ordinary theory of a transitional schedule that the entire schedule is subservient to the constitution? Isn't that the ordinary procedure?

MR. TATE

Well, I would say, of course, it is. But, I would say, for instance, the transitional measures we are talking about...we have an unusual constitution, as you know. There are a lot of provisions in there that wouldn't have to be in there if we didn't have the major provision in the constitution, you know, when taxes prescribe, for example. Then, you need a page and a half to explain that tidelands people between this and there don't prescribe until after the settlement and that's the sort of thing that we think...we hope and we think you will agree with this, should not clutter the body of the constitution but needs constitutional protection as an exception until the tidelands settlement is over.

MR. LANIER

Accordingly, it would be your opinion that because of our situation with the tremendous amount of transitional measures we need to improvise here rather than follow traditional lines in order to properly do the job?

MR. TATE

Yes, sir, Walt. We have a unique constitution; we have unique problems; I think we are handling them uniquely and future generations may be thankful to us should they approve our work, the present generation, that we have eliminated so much detail from the constitution.

MR. J. JACKSON

Judge, I have prepared an amendment to the transitional provision which dealt with--and it was an oversight, it's really a technical amendment saying within certain times the Board for Southern would be appointed as the same provision that we have as it relates to the Board of Trustees and the Board of Regents. I'm just trying to determine practically. I understand that we are talking about provisions that have been adopted already. Is there some way in terms of cutting down time and not really circumventing the process because it is, in effect, a technical amendment? Would you care to suggest how I should proceed in light of what is being proposed to do with this article?

MR. TATE

All right. Representative Jackson, we are aware that a transitional thing about how to appoint a Board of Governors to the Southern system has not been provided for. So, we have just called...there would be between...should that pass, should the convention adopt that, we are reserving a place for it up in the Section 3 as a Section 4 between the L.S.U. and the State Board of Elementary Education, Board of Trustees, a place to put that and it would, of course, be a transitional measure of the nature we are talking about. You need to put it in to direct the present appointment; it could be either place actually. But, in line with the organization we've made, we would probably recommend it be placed up in Section 4 along with the other provisions, and that's the sort of thing, once they are appointed, it passes out; there is no use putting it up above in the main constitution.

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

MR. J. JACKSON

Justice, my point is I'm asking is will you give a clue as to when you feel that that ought to come up?

MR. TATE

The sooner the better, Representative Jackson, the sooner the better. As you say, it's of a technical nature; I hope they have styled and drafted it already; I think it was an oversight; the sooner the better so they can put it on the MTST, whatever they call it, if the convention approves it.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Duval, you do wish this amendment; don't you, sir?
Amendment sent up by Mr. Duval reads as follows:
Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 15, after the words "only to" and before the word "and" delete the word "supplement" and insert in lieu thereof the word "implement".

Explanation

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Acting Chairman and fellow delegates, first I would like to say that the task of this committee is quite immense. I know the Chairperson did a very excellent job in attempting to formulate all of these provisions and to transpose them properly. I think my understanding of what a schedule is is that a schedule is to implement the provisions of the proposed new constitution. I merely suggest in this amendment that we change the word "supplement" to "implement" as I think that is really what a schedule is supposed to do. I might read you the definitions of the two words as contained in Webster's Dictionary. Supplement is defined--if I can find it--is something that completes or makes an addition; supplementary is additional. I don't think we intend to add additional provisions to the constitution. I think we intend to implement the constitution. Implement is defined as to give practical effect and to ensure actual fulfillment by concrete measures. I think that's what this schedule is supposed to do; that's how transitional matters should be dealt with. We don't want to give the effect of adding to the constitution, merely implementing the constitution. I think that best sets forth the intent of what a schedule should be and what this schedule is designed to do and would succinctly provide to the intent of this convention as to what we are intending to do in this schedule; therefore, I move the adoption of the amendment.

Questions

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Duval, have you read the memo that I handed you that will be distributed to all the delegates later outlining the provisions of the '21 Constitution meant to be transposed into statute?

MR. DUVAL

I have looked at it, I don't want to say that I have digested it completely.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Well, for sure because you can't have read every section. The reason I asked this; do you think that those implement sections of this constitution?

MR. DUVAL

However we ultimately end up handling this matter, whether we specifically designate these things or not, I think certainly it's implementing... what we intend to do is to implement the intent of this convention and by deleting these from the '21 Constitution, certainly, we did not intend to abolish them from statute, and I think we would be implementing the committee report. I do not think we would be supplementing the proposed new constitution by doing it.

MR. WILLIS

Stan, I don't have the benefit of the fountain of wisdom, the dictionary. But, I understand that your argument is that by so implementing the constitution it is necessary to do so to compliment it.

MR. DUVAL

Yes.

MR. WILLIS

And, that to supplement it would not be the complimenting of it as is contemplated by the schedule, the transition.

MR. DUVAL

I wish I would have said that.

Further Discussion

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Acting Chairman and delegates, I rise in opposition to this amendment. I think there is a considerable difference between supplement and implement. I am losing my grasp on the English language. I think I would have no objection to the word "compliment", as being stuck in as Mr. Willis suggests, but there is a considerable difference between compliment and implement, as I understand it. Some of the measures in this section, especially those transposed into statutes, implement the will of the committees but do not implement the constitution. As I read these English words, "to implement the constitution" would mean that anything within the schedule that would not be considered invalid because this is an inferior article would have to be something to which you could refer to a constitutional authority for it in the form of "the legislature shall." If I can try to put that a little bit better, we are not trying to add additional subject matter to the constitution. We can supplement the constitution by law, ordinance, regulation, or just actions of citizens. But, to implement the constitution means to act pursuant to a specific mandate within that constitution and not everything contained in this article is an implementation. Perhaps, we should seriously consider using Mr. Willis' suggestion of the word "compliment." But, this is a change, fellow delegates, and I hope if you haven't read the succeeding section, that you will read them because some of them are implementations, but some of them supplement; not on the same plane; not an incorporation by reference and that's the whole point of this Section 1 to make them inferior to other articles, but they supplement rather than implement.

Questions

MR. LEIGH

Mrs. Zervigon, I'm wondering if the words "to supplement and" are necessary at all--either "supplement, implement, or compliment"? Wouldn't it be desirable to simply delete those three words "to supplement and" and leave it that it provides an orderly transition?

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Leigh, I would have no objection to that; just off the top of my head, I can see no objection to it personally.

MR. LEIGH

Because, actually here we are not implementing anything, supplementing anything, or complimenting, so...

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Leigh, I wish I had had your help earlier.

MR. LEIGH

I would like to, if I had time to prepare an amendment, to delete the three words altogether.

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Acting Chairman, I've been advised that an amendment will be introduced deleting the words completely, which is fine with me. So, therefore, in lieu, I will withdraw it on the condition that that amendment will be offered.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

All right. Delegate Perez sends up amendments, which I think have been mentioned previously.

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 15, delete the words "to supplement and" after the word "only". Again,

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

on page 1, line 15, delete the words "to supplement and" those three words appear after the word "only" on line 15.

Explanation

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen, in order to avoid the problem as to whether we should use the word "supplement," "implement," or whatever. If you will read the language after the deletion of the words "to supplement and" it would read "but, only to provide for an orderly transition from the Constitution of '21," and I believe that that's sufficient. If there are no questions, I move the adoption of the amendment.

[Amendment adopted without objection.
Previous Question ordered on the Section.]

Closing

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman, I just want to reiterate that as I understand it, it's our agreement that we will pass this, but not lay it on the table.

[Section passed: 109-2. Motion to reconsider pending.]

Personal Privilege

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Acting Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, it had been my intention in connection with this proposal to offer some amendments-- I think there needs to be at least two-- to provide, if adopted by this convention, that the effective date of the proposed new constitution would be January 1, 1976, in lieu January 1, 1975, as recommended by the committee. I've asked for the opportunity on personal privilege to make this statement to you because I intend after the noon recess to ask for a suspension of the rules so that we can consider Section 25 out of order which fixes a January 1, 1975 effective date. I believe it would be appropriate for us to give consideration to the proposed change, because if instead of January 1, '75, the effective date of the constitution is going to be January 1, '76, a number of the problems that seem to be surfacing may either be resolved or can be pretermitted. Now, I want to say that this idea was not mine although since it came to me--a number of delegates have discussed this with me --had one or two that were opposed to it and one or two that are for it-- and I think it needs to be considered very carefully. Governor Edwards has authorized me to state in his behalf that he strongly recommends for many reasons--some of which I'll state to you immediately after lunch-- that we give consideration to making the effective date one year later than as provided in this committee proposal. I don't know whether it would be appropriate at this time to do it because there might be a great deal of discussion on it. But, I do believe that we should consider, regardless of what the result may be, the effective date of the proposed new constitution as the very next order of business, so to speak, with respect to this proposal because that determination can make a lot of difference as to what we do with respect to other sections of the proposal. I wanted to make that statement to you now and tell you that I do intend to make that request to the convention. I'm again saying to you, I'm doing so at the special and particular request of the governor. Thank you very much.

Motion

MR. GRAVEL

I move for a suspension of the rules so that immediately upon reconvening after the luncheon recess that we consider Section 25 of the proposal before you, in order to determine the sense of this convention with respect to the effective date of the proposed new constitution and at that time, I would have before the convention a proposed amendment which would make the effective date 12:01 a.m., January 1, 1976.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Gravel, it's my understanding all you need is really a motion to pass over rather than a suspension of the rules.

Mr. Drew, you have a question?

MR. GRAVEL

Well, I'm willing to present it that way. I thought it might require a suspension of the rules that we pass over everything except Section 25 for the purpose of considering the proposed amendment that I wish to offer in regard to the effective date of the constitution.

Questions

MR. DREW

Mr. Gravel, you stated that this may resolve some of the other problems, but in effect, wouldn't by moving this effective date a year later be indicative of the fact that we would want an election next November rather than an earlier election to adopt this constitution?

MR. GRAVEL

No, sir, it would not.

MR. DREW

It would certainly allow it though, wouldn't it?

MR. GRAVEL

It would allow it, yes, sir. I think the election, as I recall, the statute says that unless the governor calls a special election prior thereto, then the election on the proposed new constitution will be held in November of this year.

MR. DREW

But, you don't agree that if we move the date back a year or a year forward that there would be an indication that there would be no necessity for an earlier election to vote on this constitution?

MR. GRAVEL

No, sir. It's my belief and understanding, Mr. Drew, that as of this time the governor probably intends to call the election for some time in April, irrespective of whether this change is made or not.

Point of Order

MR. DENNIS

Mr. Chairman, it sounds to me as if we're discussing the merits of the amendment Mr. Gravel plans to offer. As I understand, all he's moving for now is to make this special order of business immediately after the noon recess.

MR. CASEY

That's correct, Judge Dennis. You're absolutely correct. Mr. Schmitt.

MR. SCHMITT

With that reference to the Revenue, Finance and Taxation Section, in order to comply with that federal court ruling for equalization we put a section in there that stated that this new procedure of the ten percent and the fifteen percent would not go in effect for three years after the effective date of this constitution. Do you mean that this would not go into effect until 1979? Then, if that is the case, would we be mandated to have the hundred percent assessment in the meantime?

MR. CASEY

Gentlemen, let's . . . the motion is to pass over and go to Section 25. Let's restrict your questions to that.

MR. PEREZ

I move to recess for lunch, but if you want to dispose of this motion first, then I'll be glad to wait until when it's disposed of.

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Gravel, some of the questions that are being raised to you will be taken up in the sections that apply to them, for example, the one on assessment practices. The reason for taking up the final section first will be because the answers to those questions would be different depending on the effective date of the constitution; isn't that correct?

MR. GRAVEL

That's correct.

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

MS. ZERVIGON

But, it's an entirely different question than what's going to happen in the interim because of these delayed effective dates that we've atuck in various places in the constitution, as apply to other articles; isn't that correct?

MR. GRAVEL

I think that's correct too, Ms. Zervigon. All I'm saying is that if this convention decides that the effective date will be January 1, 1976, they would. . . the convention may well have reason to evaluate this proposal and other matters in a different light. I think it is important for us to make that determination before we go into other matters.

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Gravel, are you outlining the specific dates? Suppose we wanted to cut it six months; in the place of January we wanted it to go in effect in August. Then the only thing we can discuss is the January 1st?

MR. GRAVEL

No.

MR. RAYBURN

Any date, or we can discuss any date--the effective date, period.

MR. GRAVEL

Sure, the effective date of the constitution, yes sir. I just mentioned. . . I'm glad you mentioned that. I just mentioned what my proposed amendment would do.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Gravel, as I understand part of the reason that you're requesting this is to give the legislature an appropriate period of time within which to prepare implementing legislation to cure up, as I understand it, some of the transitional problems that we have. Is that part of the thought behind this?

MR. GRAVEL

That would be part of it, yes sir. Although there is some provision in this article for a seventy-five day legislative session, as I recall it, but that's only part of the reason. There're several reasons that I think the convention should consider; that's one of them.

MR. LANIER

With reference to that particular part, has any research been done to your knowledge as to whether or not the legislature can prospectively pass legislation which would be unconstitutional at the time that it's adopted, but would be constitutional under the new constitution?

MR. GRAVEL

Well, I don't know whether research has been done along that line or not, sir. I haven't done any, but it's certainly an area in which some research could be conducted depending upon what we do here with the whole proposal.

Point of Information

MR. ALEXANDER

The question is to the Chairman. How did you rule on the suggestion of Judge Dennis relative to discussing the merits of the anticipated amendment? We don't know exactly. . .

MR. CASEY

Reverend Alexander, what I suggested is that some of the questions were out of order. People began discussing the merits of it and really the discussion or the question should hinge on whether we're going to go with Section 25 or not. That's the whole question. . .

MR. ALEXANDER

How do you rule? Are you ruling anyone out of order who discussaea the merits?

MR. CASEY

Well, let's hear the merits and then we'll rule. Okay, Reverend Alexander.

Mr. Jack, did you have a question?

MR. JACK

Mr. Gravel, what I wanted to ask: in that little booklet I handed you --someone handed to me-- is that Act of 1972, I believe its Act 2 that sets up the convention that has the clause, reading it quickly, that states the effective date of the convention. . . of the new constitution would be thirty days after the promulgation of the election results?

MR. GRAVEL

That's correct.

MR. JACK

Well, then how are we going to choose another effective date?

MR. GRAVEL

Because we can fix the official date of promulgation.

MR. JACK

Oh, we can?

MR. GRAVEL

Yes, sir.

[Motion adopted without objection.]

Point of Information

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman, I know the staff has much work to do. But, in view of the very important nature of the material that we're working on at this time, if it is possible without disrupting what they have to do, could we have an enrollment or engrossment or whatever you want to call it of these provisions incorporating therein such amendments as we have put on them up to this point when we come back here after lunch?

MR. CASEY

Mr. Avant, you're requesting on the transitional proposal, whatever amendments we have adopted?

MR. AVANT

Yes.

MR. CASEY

All it is is on Section 1, you want to. . .

MR. AVANT

I think I'm reasonably sure I know what it says, but I want. . .

MR. CASEY

I want to be reasonably sure that I know what. . .

MR. AVANT

I want to make sure that everybody knows what it says.

MR. POYNTER

You're just asking for a typed copy of Section 1?

MR. AVANT

That's right and for every delegate to have one if we. . .

MR. POYNTER

That's no problem.

Recess

Chairman Henry in the Chair

[Quorum Call: 100 delegates present and a quorum.]

Personal Privilege

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, over the noon recess, I found out that there was some misunderstanding and a lot of downright opposition to the idea of an amendment that would make the proposed constitution effective on January 1, 1976; so I want to relinquish the right, of course, that you were kind enough to accord me to go forward with an amendment, and I'm going to withdraw the amendment at this time. Thank you.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Delegate Perez sends up an amendment, the purpose of which we explained.

Amendment No. 1. (The copies of this, well, have just arrived up here; but this is a pretty self-explanatory amendment.)

On page 1, between lines 17 and 18, insert the following: "Part III".

Explanation

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, during the lunch hour break, there was a meeting among several of the delegates and, hopefully, we have arrived at a tentative solution to the problems as to how to handle these transitional provisions. As you know, earlier, we agreed that we would have Part I, which would be those provisions which would be bodily lifted from what we have already adopted as part of the constitution and placed into Transitional Provisions because of the fact that these provisions have only an expected limited life and will go out of existence, so to speak, in a few years. So, Part I would be those provisions which we bodily lift out of the constitution, which we have already adopted. Part II would be those provisions which would be subjected to the limitations contained in Section 1 which we have already adopted. Part III would be those provisions which would not be subjected to the limiting language of Section 1 and would be truly transitional in nature, so that the amendment that I am offering now would make, as part of Part III--that is, material which is not subjected to the limiting language of Section 1--would make it the first section of Part III. We would propose that Sections 2, Sections 3, Sections 5, Sections 6, and Sections 7, at least, would be contained in this Part III and, possibly, other sections. So, I'd be glad to answer any questions and move for the adoption of the amendment.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

"Section 2. References to 1921 Constitution
Section 2. Whenever reference is made in this constitution to the Constitution of 1921, it shall mean the Louisiana Constitution of 1921, as amended."

Explanation

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this will be a Part III section. That is to say it will not be subject to Section 1, which we've passed already. It's really only a grammatical thing so that we don't have to proofread the whole document and make sure that, every place we said Constitution of 1921, we also said as amended. It's just to clarify it for the courts. Most people believe that this will be the case, whether we set it in the constitution or not. The committee felt that it's always better to put things down in writing so that everybody knows exactly what you're trying to do. I yield to any questions, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

MR. LEIGH

Ms. Zervigon, would that become, then, Section 1 of Part III?

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Leigh, as I understand, what they're going to do is number the sections consecutively through 1, through 2, and through 3. So, I'm not sure what the section number will be, but it will be the first section in Part III, yes.

MR. LEIGH

I see. It will be numbered separately from those in Part II or in Part I.

MS. ZERVIGON

Well, that's a Style and Drafting matter, Mr. Leigh. I'm not exactly certain how that will be handled. But, since that doesn't have any great effect on the interpretation of the document as I understand it, it's not one of those things I found out about before I got up here, to tell you the truth.

[Previous Question ordered. Section passed: 107-0. Motion to reconsider pending.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

The next section, Mr. Chairman, is:
"Section 3. Effect of Titles

Section 3. No title or sub-title, heading or sub-heading, marginal note, index, or table printed in or with this constitution shall be considered or construed to be a part of this constitution, but to be inserted only for convenience in reference."

Explanation

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman and delegates, this will also be a Part III section, which means it will not be subject to the limitations that we passed in Section 1 this morning. You may well have had discussions in your committee, when you thought titles were inaccurate, about whether or not titles had the effect of law. We've said over and over again, in committees and on the floor, that titles don't have the effect of law. We're now putting it in the constitution in the same manner as the section we just passed--a kind of put-your-cards-on-the-table-and-say-exactly-what-you-mean section. I'll yield to any questions.

Let me add one additional remark. This is also going to apply, in the future, to any annotations put in by the West Publishing Co. or whoever.

Questions

MR. DUVAL

Mary, I notice you had...one question: The word "table" in here--what tables are in the proposed constitution?

MS. ZERVIGON

That's the whole point, Stan; there aren't any. So, if someone inserts one for convenience--as to we've set up the revenue sharing fund where the monies went or something like that--it wouldn't have the effect of law, but would just be to illustrate something. There are no tables in there.

MR. DUVAL

Now, this certainly doesn't refer to the, for instance, the percentages on property tax or anything like that?

MS. ZERVIGON

By no means.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. O'Neill has sent up an amendment at this time.

On page 1, line 24, immediately after the word "or" and before the word "table" insert the word "reference".

Explanation

MR. O'NEILL

Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I regard this as a very technical amendment. In the Revenue, Finance, and Taxation Article, in the area of property taxation, there are some percentage tables that are in that section. If you'll remember, we used numerical notations of five percent, ten percent, fifteen percent, what have you. I don't want this section to be interpreted in any way as meaning that those sections do not apply. Therefore, by suggestion of the research staff, we decided to insert "reference tables" so that there would be no way to misinterpret that those numbers are in any way not going to be part of the constitution. I simply regard this as a technical amendment. I'd appreciate your adoption.

Questions

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. O'Neill, I don't know whether you're acquainted with style and drafting, but I believe this would be a word that, ordinarily, they would delete, if you inserted it, because it would really have no particular significance insofar as the words. Since Ms. Zervigon said there are no tables, it would only be a table as compiled by somebody as a matter of convenience, or reference, to the constitution anyway. I think it would be something that, if we put it in now, they'd probably delete it if they got to it.

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

MR. O'NEILL

If the committee is willing to stipulate that this in no way affects those percentage tables in Revenue, Finance, and Taxation, I'd be very happy to withdraw the amendment; but there was some concern on that point.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. O'Neill, Ms. Zervigon clearly stated--and I think you can recognize the fact--that this has no reference to that whatsoever. For the matter of record, there aren't any tables in the constitution.

MR. O'NEILL

Well, Senator, then I will withdraw the amendment if Ms. Zervigon said that. I didn't hear her, and I ask that the amendment be withdrawn with the stipulation that this in no way is interpreted to mean those percentage figures used in Revenue, Finance, and Taxation.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

MR. JACK

Ms. Zervigon, I don't know whether its correct--something Senator De Blieux, as I understood, said there were no tables in the constitution. So, if there are not, why do we even have the word "or table"?

MS. ZERVIGON

That's the point, Mr. Jack. If someone chooses to insert one later on, to help you in reference with your constitution, it won't have the effect of law, but will just be considered as a convenience. The same is true of an index. We haven't really compiled an index yet. There'll probably be an index one of these days, but the index won't have the force of law. That's the point.

MR. WINCHESTER

Ms. Zervigon, in your explanation, you report to laying your cards on the table. Does that cover the sixth floor of the Jefferson Parish delegation?

MS. ZERVIGON

The sixth floor? The only time I laid my cards on the table up there, I won eleven dollars; so I can't complain about that.

[Previous question ordered. Section passed: 102-0. Motion to reconsider pending.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

Next section:

"Section 4. Inherent Power of Legislature

Section 4. The legislature shall have all powers not prohibited or denied by this constitution or by or under the constitution and laws of the United States and the absence in this constitution of a grant of power contained in the constitution hereby superseded shall not be construed as a limitation of the powers of state government."

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Yes. I have an amendment offered by Mr. Kean, Perez, Ms. Zervigon, Mr. Conroy, and others.

The amendment reads: On page 1, delete lines 28 through 32, both inclusive, in their entirety and on page 2, delete lines 1 and 2 in their entirety.

Explanation

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman, this section was intended to ratify the Tenth Amendment to the federal constitution--which it doesn't really need doing--because it would stand, whether we did it or not, and to say that, in the absence of a grant of power to the legislature, the legislature had the lawmaking power. But, Article III, as we adopted it, said that lawmaking power is vested in the legislature, and there was some question as to what this did to the unenumerated rights of the people; so we're going to delete it. We don't think it will change the status quo at all, but rather leave things, more or less, as we've all understood them to be up to now. I yield to any questions.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

Next section:

"Section 5. Continuation of Actions and Rights

Section 5. All writs, actions, suits, proceedings, civil or criminal liabilities, prosecutions, judgments, sentences, orders, decrees, appeals, rights or causes of action, contracts, obligations, claims, demands, titles, and rights existing on the effective date of this constitution shall continue unaffected except as modified in accordance with this constitution. All sentences as punishment for crime shall be executed according to their terms."

Explanation

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this section is taken out of the Florida Constitution and is standard transitional material. It will go in the Part III section and will not be subject to the limitations of Section 1. I'll yield to any questions, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

MR. DUVAL

Mary, I just want to understand your intent. I assume this is to preserve rights that are vested at the time the new constitution is adopted. Is that basically right?

MS. ZERVIGON

That's correct. "Except as modified in accordance with this constitution."

MR. DUVAL

Now, that's what I mean. That's the little phrase that I'm asking you about: "except as modified in accordance with this constitution." Does that mean that we, by this constitution, can, in your opinion, take away vested rights that were vested before the adoption of the constitution?

MS. ZERVIGON

No, sir, and the reason those words are in there is some of these are vested rights; some of them are not. For example, as I understand it, we couldn't abrogate contracts, but that we'd change certain other things that could easily not be vested rights, be rights that are not yet vested.

MR. DUVAL

So, to express your committee's intent, then, the "except as modified" only applies to those things which would not be vested rights, then?

MS. ZERVIGON

Well, we didn't intend to, nor do we think we are able to, overturn the federal constitution, no--or the jurisprudence thereunder.

MR. DUVAL

I'm talking about rights vested in under the '21 Constitution that are modified by the new constitution. If those rights are vested rights, the new constitution would not prevail, would it?

MS. ZERVIGON

You're going to have to give me an example, Stan.

MR. DUVAL

I hate to belabor the point. I'm merely wondering: if someone was granted a certain right under the '21 Constitution, and this right is now vested in that individual, and under the new constitution they would not have this right, would the right be taken away or would it remain in effect? Retirement, for example.

MS. ZERVIGON

There's an amendment coming to knock those words out, Stan.

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

MR. DUVAL

Thank you. Thank you.

MR. PUGH

May I ask you whether or not, in your opinion, lines 10 and 11 of this section would mean that one could not be either be pardoned or paroled for a crime which occurred during the time of the '21 Constitution?

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Pugh, you're the attorney; I'm not. But, I assumed, when I read this in the Florida Constitution, that it was the term of all sentences for punishment of a crime that they were subject to the laws under which the guy was sentenced, and those laws include the laws on pardon and parole.

MR. PUGH

I'll fix an amendment.

MR. RAYBURN

Thank you, Mary. Mary, where you say there that "rights existing on the effective date of this constitution shall continue unaffected except as modified in accordance with this constitution," did the committee elaborate any on just how far-reaching that could be? In other words, if you have some rights today, and then the new constitution language modifies them, would that supersede the new constitution?

MS. ZERVIGON

No, it's not intended to.

MR. RAYBURN

Well, do you follow what I mean...

MS. ZERVIGON

I understand that there is an amendment drawn to knock it out in any case, Senator.

MR. RAYBURN

You're going to knock all of it out?

MS. ZERVIGON

No, sir. "Except as modified in accordance with this constitution" will be...there's an amendment to be offered to knock it out. In addition to that, Mr. Pugh informs me that he has an amendment drawn to lines 10 and 11. I'm not certain what his amendment does.

MR. SCHMITT

Under the new constitution, the International Trade Mart Building, specifically, will be placed upon the tax rolls. There's no specific provision for this. In the 1921 Constitution, there was a specific provision which exempted it, so they paid no ad valorem property taxes for that building or the parking garage. On your transitional matters, would this building remain ~~not~~ taxed?

MS. ZERVIGON

Jay, I think you have to read this section in concert with all the other sections. The section that continues that exemption is repealed by the first sentence of Section 10, so I don't believe that that's one of the vested rights that we're worried about protecting here. As I understand it, this mostly has to do with your rights to action in court.

MR. SCHMITT

So, you're saying it would not apply, and they would not get the exemption in the future, in your opinion?

MS. ZERVIGON

In my opinion--you're the attorney--but, in my opinion, when you read the two things together, and all other sections of the constitution are repealed, that's repealed. It's no longer the law, so you no longer have that right.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

An amendment sent up by Delegate Conroy, joined by Delegate Duval. The amendment reads as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, line 9, after the partial word "fected" delete the remainder of the line and on line 10, delete the partial word "tion".

Explanation

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I just think this clarifies... By deleting this language, it makes the provision a lot clearer, I think. By having this phrase in there could cause a lot of problems. I think, deleting it, the purpose of the section could be accomplished with a lot more clarity. I move for the adoption of the amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I want to call your attention to a few things. We might be taking something out of here we don't want to take out. We have made a number of changes in this constitution. Do not forget that. Every-one of them modifies somebody's right, somebody's action. For instance, we've made some tax changes in this constitution that didn't exist prior to that time. We've made some changes insofar as prescriptions are concerned--for and against the state. We have waived the immunity of the state insofar as tort actions are concerned. Local government has a number of changes in it, and I'm just wondering if we might not be treading upon serious territory and have somebody stating that they still have the rights that they had under the old constitution, rather than under this new constitution, as a result of our having taken that out and inserting this particular clause as it has here now. If you're not going to delete the whole section, I certainly do not feel that you ought to delete this particular phrase out of that section. I'll just tell you that right now because that's the whole purpose of this constitution is to make some changes. You might not be making the change where you think you made them, if you delete this particular phrase. That's to tell you to check it over; then, think it over very carefully before you delete that particular phrase.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. DUVAL

Let me explain, briefly, what the purpose of this amendment is. Anyone having rights which the courts would declare to be vested rights, under the '21 Constitution, their rights would not be taken away--if these rights vest prior to the adoption of this constitution--is all it's saying. I don't think you'll have any problem in taxes or anything like that. I think that's handled further on here. I think it'll just protect those people who relied on the '21 Constitution and their rights that are vested prior to that time. After the new constitution, other changes, in my opinion, will come into play.

Questions

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Duval, if this constitution did not change any of those rights, how could they be affected?

MR. DUVAL

It changes all vested rights, Senator De Blieux, which accrue after the adoption of this constitution--would be governed by the new constitution. I'm merely saying those rights which are determined as vested rights--such as rights of contract--would not be abrogated if they accrue prior to the adoption of the new constitution.

MR. DE BLIEUX

I just think you're getting on serious territory there.

MR. DUVAL

Well, I think it's real serious territory if you leave this in there.

MR. AVANT

Stanwood, this thing refers to suits and proceedings and prosecutions and judgments and sentences and all those type of things. If you leave this language in here that you want to take out, isn't it a fact that any kind of judicial proceeding or an appeal or a suit or a criminal prosecution that was in effect and going on at the time the constitution became effective--the new constitution became effective--you have to go back and start all over again with all of those procedures? Isn't that right?

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

MR. DUVAL
That's the whole point of the amendment.

[Amendment adopted viva voce.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER
The amendment sent up reads as follows:
On page 2, at the end of line 11 delete the period and add a comma and the following: "Subject, however, to the provisions relative to pardon, parole, and commutation of sentence existing at the time this section becomes effective."

Explanation

MR. PUGH
Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this is in response to the inquiry I made of the author of this section of this committee proposal earlier. I'm of the opinion that unless we are going to adopt an amendment of this nature, that it would be impossible for one to get a pardon, a parole, or a commutation of sentence after the effective date of this constitution. I ask your consideration and that you vote favorably on the amendment.

Questions

MR. DENNIS
My question was directed to the Clerk. Did I understand you to put a semicolon in there somewhere; it didn't sound like it ought to be one?

MR. POYNTER
I think you're right. My last grammar course would put me... instead it seemed like to me that the semicolon probably should go after "terms", and it should be semicolon "subject" comma "however". I think that's probably.... Do you want me to make that change, Mr. Pugh?

MR. PUGH
Yes, may I withdraw it and have you make the change, and then refile it?

MR. POYNTER
All right. I believe that Style and Drafting, I know, is looking over all of this anyway so--this, I guess, is what Judge Tate is going to mention--so if we miss a few of these, they can pick them up.

MR. ABRAHAM
If I remember the language correctly, it says "subject to the provisions of this section?" Would you explain to me what you mean by saying "section", or do you mean subject to the provisions of this new constitution?

MR. PUGH
It should say "constitution." I'm sorry, Mack, you're absolutely correct.

MR. TATE
Mr. Chairman, if Mr. Pugh--who missed the discussion early this morning--Section 1...this shall no longer be limited, I guess, by Section 1 which says in effect "subject to the preceding portions of the constitution." But I was there when the transitional people were discussing this, and the thing is it's automatically subject to the new provisions that have to do with pardon and parole. That was why they did not think you needed a clarifying amendment, for what it's worth.

MR. AVANT
Bob, I'm going to tell you something, and then I'm going to ask you a question. My question is going to be: Point out to me where I'm wrong. I think that your amendment is doing just exactly what we don't want to do and what you don't want to do and the reason you said you offered the amendment. I'll tell you why. You say "subject, however, to the provisions relating to commutation, pardon, and parole in effect at the time this constitution becomes effective." That's the way your amendment reads.

MR. PUGH
My amendment was when this proposal becomes effective.

MR. AVANT
Well, this proposal or whatever you want to call it. We've got a man that's sitting in the penitentiary serving a life sentence for murder. When this constitution becomes effective, he hasn't been up there but just two days; he just started serving his sentence. He won't become eligible for parole until the new parole procedures and the new board has been appointed and all of that. There's not going to be any machinery to give him a pardon or parole in accordance with the procedures that were in effect at the time this constitution became effective, so you're really going to be fixing him where he can never be pardoned or paroled. Now, tell me why I'm wrong.

MR. PUGH
Well, I don't know how he would not be entitled to the rights relative to pardon, parole, and commutation of sentence, which were in existence at the time that he was sentenced. I don't know how you can avoid that now.

MR. AVANT
Well, I really hate to get up here and talk about something when I haven't seen it, but I thought your amendment said "subject to the procedures..."

MR. PUGH
Provisions is what I said.

MR. AVANT
Provisions, well, the provisions are, to me, mean: how is the Parole Board constituted? Who sits on it? And all of that. The ones that were in effect at the time this constitution becomes effective is going to be dead and gone and forgot about by the time he becomes eligible for pardon, parole, commutation of sentence; so how's he ever going to get one?

MR. PUGH
How is he going to be deprived of any greater right he may have had in existence at the time he was sentenced? Are you telling me all his rights are going to be greater under the new constitution than they would have been...

MR. AVANT
Well, I'm telling you this that I don't think your amendment is necessary. I think that anybody with ordinary common sense would interpret this to mean that if a man's in the penitentiary and he went there before these provisions in the new constitution became effective and he became eligible for parole at a later date after the new Parole Board was in, that the new Parole Board could pardon him in accordance with the procedures that exist at the time he becomes eligible. That's what I think.

MR. PUGH
Well, I protest to falling in whatever category you just put me in because to me it's explicitly clear that he must serve in accordance with his time--period, and that the new laws won't be applicable to him because he's got to serve based on what he was given. But, in the interest of saving time for the convention, I withdraw the amendment.

[Amendment withdrawn. Previous Question ordered. Section passed: 104-2. Motion to reconsider pending.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER
"Section 6. Protection of Existing Taxes
Section 6. All taxes, penalties, fines, and forfeitures owing to the state or any political subdivision levied and collectible under the Constitution of 1921 and valid laws enacted thereunder shall inure to the entity entitled thereto. The provisions of this constitution shall not be construed or applied in such a manner as to invalidate taxes levied or authorized under the Constitution of 1921."

Explanation

MRS. ZERVIGON
The first sentence of this Section 6 which will be in Part III was taken from the Florida Constitution and says in essence if there is a lien on your property or you have back taxes due, just because we have a new constitution, don't think you're forgiven that debt. The second sentence came...are combined wordings of similar sections in the local government provision and in the revenue, finance and taxation provision just to make certain that everyone knew that validly authorized or levied taxes will continue to be authorized under this constitution. If you'll recall what we've done in the way of taxes in this constitution, as far as levying or authorizing them, if you'll think over them in your mind, we really haven't made any changes. The problem is that there are some scholars who think that under a new constitution you really have a new government, and everything under the prior constitution, which is the prior government, lapses. This just makes it clear to bond attorneys, bondholders that would be serviced by certain taxes, local governmental authorities that used to be able to levy certain taxes, and to the state that they are entitled to levy the taxes they are now entitled to levy. You'll notice we put "levied or authorized" because in certain other sections we continued authority to levy taxes not yet levied. There are certain blanket authorities to levy up to a certain number of mills, for example. Some subdivisions have taken advantage of it all the way up to the hilt, and others--partly because of the difference in assessment practices from locality to locality--have not. We intended to continue a valid levy as well as a valid authorization. Let me say one more thing to quiet a fear that someone raised to me. Maintenance millages, for example, that are levied under certain terms, for ten years, and to serve as a certain particular plant or property would be continued to be levied under those terms. It says so in prior articles of the constitution, and this does not contradict that. I yield to any questions, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

MR. ROEMER

Are you referring to the type of taxes--whether it be ad valorem or whatever--levied in the local manner? Is that what that sentence addresses itself to? I really don't understand the sentence, and I'm trying to find a meaning for it in your explanation. What happens if we didn't have the sentence there, for example?

MRS. ZERVIGON

What happens if we didn't have the sentence there, for example, is the millages such as the three mills that is constitutionally authorized to be levied in New Orleans to pay special bonuses at the end of the year to fire and police would not have a constitutional authority, while we've continued all special taxes earlier on. What this does is to reiterate that so that anyone who's worried about how those taxes are going to be levied in the interim may look here and find it here as well. In my personal opinion, if you withdrew it, it wouldn't have a whole lot of legal effect but the problem is it might have some psychological effect on the people who want to be reassured that they have the same rights that they used to have to levy and collect taxes.

MR. ROEMER

Well, I'm worried about its legal effect, however. What about some of these taxes that we might not have ratified in this new constitution specifically? This sentence to my mind takes all of the tax authorization and levying powers under the old 1921 Constitution and just continues them.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Roemer, I can't think of one that we have reduced. So, what's the need for this. To say that they haven't been reduced, to say that that isn't what we meant, to say that what we meant to do is not to cut anybody's financial base in any way, shape, or form, that they may continue to have the same operating and capital funds as they have had up to now. Every time we specifically continued a tax, we specifically continued the authorizations for its levy and imposition in case there was not one that we continued specifically. This is a general authorization for their continuance. If you can think of a case in which we really meant to cut the tax base some place, in which we really meant to discontinue a levy or an authorization for a tax, I would accept an amendment for that particular tax. What I'm concerned about is the reverse case. If we really meant to continue them as they are, which is what I understood from the floor debate on revenue, finance and taxation, and local and parochial government and the Educational Article, then I think we ought to say so, so that those people don't get all uptight and excited about what the new constitution will do to their finances.

MR. ROEMER

Well, I don't know how much research your committee did on this problem. It seems to be a very important problem, and you can't give me any examples, nor I you, of what you're trying to correct here. But, what about the case where the authorization might be in the '21 Constitution and the authorization in this constitution, and the authorization might be for different amounts. You say that nothing done here is going to invalidate the authorization in 1921. I mean, I can just see all kinds of problems with that sort of thing where you don't know any specifics.

MRS. ZERVIGON

I'm talking about the authority to levy, not specific amounts, but the authority to levy a particular kind of tax. For example, school boards all over the state are authorized to levy sales taxes. Some of them have levied them and some of them have not. We're not trying to tell the school boards that they must now go to a vote of the people for that sales tax because they're already authorized to levy them. We want to continue the authority for those school boards to levy those taxes. This does that.

MR. ROEMER

What about the alimony tax situation? Did we change that at all?

MRS. ZERVIGON

What we did is in our article mention the four and seven mills and five for Jackson Parish, and in your article say that you may roll it up to take care of the amount of money you used to receive, plus you may roll up your authorization. It was an amendment by you, as I understand it, in order to continue the same authorization... authority but unlevied as you had had in the past--the same proportionment.

MR. ROEMER

Mary, just for the record on this debate, the thing that bothers me in particular are the alimony taxes wherein they have specific millages mentioned in the 1921 Constitution. You know we mentioned specific millages in our proposed constitution but we made them subject to the roll forward and rollback provisions of the amendment that I drew and the convention adopted. What bothers me is that where you have a specific millage in 1921 and a rollback in, say, 1976 and the rollback puts the millage below the 1921 alimony amount, then these bodies might point to the 1921 Constitution in this sentence and claim they still have the right to levy all of those mills, and that's what bothers me.

MRS. ZERVIGON

This was not intended to increase or decrease revenues, but to keep things stable so that it wasn't intended that that four mills be stuck in there in such a way that they would get either less or more in the way of revenue. When the committee adopted this section, remember it was all subject to Section 1. We are now setting up a new Part III, and it will be in that Part III to make sure that the taxes, penalties, fines, owing, and all that sort of thing is a continuation of the past and is not subject to everything else because those penalties, fines, forfeitures, and all that sort of thing could be in conflict to a certain extent in that they're not mentioned earlier in the constitution. This was Mr. Conroy's, I believe...

MR. ROEMER

Well, are you telling me that my fears are unfounded here?

MRS. ZERVIGON

I'm telling you that the intention... your fears are unfounded because the intention of the committee was for this to be read in concert with your report. In fact it was my recollection that it was taken directly out of Committee Proposal No. 26. If the words have been changed, then that's my error, but I thought I had taken it directly out of Committee Proposal No. 26. I meant it to carry on exactly your intention in your committee--in your report as adopted by the floor.

MR. JENKINS

Mary, if you look at Section 11, I think you'll see the general rule with regard to laws which are in effect now and which we think may or may not be in effect after the effective date of this constitution. The rule is that laws which were constitutional when enacted and are not inconsistent with this constitution remain in effect. But, isn't what the second sentence in Section 6 says is: that a law levying a tax which was constitutional when enacted and which is unconstitutional now stays in effect. Isn't that what that says?

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Jenkins, I think you're misreading it entirely.

MR. JENKINS

Doesn't it say that this constitution shall not be construed in such a manner to invalidate taxes which were levied validly under the 1921 Constitution? Isn't the only way that could be held...

MRS. ZERVIGON

The word "validly" is not in there. It was my understanding that either you or Mr. Avant was going to draw an amendment to stick the word "validly" in there just to cover a case in which something was unconstitutionally levied.

MR. JENKINS

Well, forget I said that word, but what I'm saying is the only way that a tax could be ruled invalid, which was in effect before the effective date of this constitution, is if it was inconsistent with this new constitution; isn't it?

MRS. ZERVIGON

No. That's not so because what we're doing is continuing certain sections, if you'll remember, in Section 9 of this Article, repealing everything else. It is not our intention to repeal certain levies which may be the sources of revenue for certain districts, localities for the state, for its political subdivisions, for its agencies; that was not our intention when we went to repeal everything else. One of the reasons that not every single one of those sections is continued in Section 9 in the committee reports, is that those taxes are being ratified here.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Jenkins sends up amendments. We don't have distribution copies but it's similar to the one that Mr. Avant had which copies were passed out but just phrased a little bit differently--same effect.

On page 2, at the end of line 16, delete the words "The provi-" and delete lines 17 through 19, both inclusive, in their entirety. Take out the last sentence.

Explanation

MR. JENKINS

Delegates, as the Clerk just said, this simply deletes the second sentence in Section 6. That's the only thing that it does. The general rule with regard to the effectiveness of laws, which are now valid, is that they continue in effect and continue to be valid if they're not inconsistent with the new constitution. Now, that view is expressed in Section 11--11 (A)--where it says "laws in force on the effective date of this constitution which were constitutional when enacted and are not inconsistent with this constitution shall remain in effect." However, that's not what the second sentence in Section 6 says. That sentence says that a law levying a tax which was constitutional when levied, when enacted, but which is now unconstitutional under the new constitution would continue in effect anyway. Well, that's clearly inconsistent with Section 11. Certainly, any tax levied ought to be consistent with the new constitution so that's why I ask that this sentence be deleted.

Questions

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Jenkins, it's not your idea to repeal any taxes or cut the tax base; it's just your idea that this particular problem is taken care of in other places in the constitution; is that correct?

MR. JENKINS

That's correct.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Thank you very much.

MR. AVANT

Mr. Jenkins, I guess this is more or less just for the record. I agree with you, generally speaking, only one exception that disturbs me--and this is for the record. I'm thinking of a tax that was validly levied under the Constitution of 1921 and has been pledged or whatever you want to call it as security for some specific obligation or bond of a local governmental subdivision or somebody else. I wouldn't want to do anything that would come along and, if for some reason that we're not even aware of right now, maybe that tax wouldn't be a valid tax under this new document. Now, I wouldn't want to do anything that would jeopardize those bonds because those people bought those bonds based upon the promise that they would be secured by that particular tax. Now, if you take that out that we're fixing to take out, wouldn't it still be the intent of the whole document that under Section 7 nevertheless if that tax had been pledged to secure some specific obligation, it would have to stay in effect until that obligation had been discharged?

MR. JENKINS

Well, first I don't know of any such case, and I don't think we have any taxes that are valid now that will be invalid under the new constitution. I think that under Section 7 clearly any bondholder would be entitled to compensation for those bonds, but I can't tell you unequivocally that some court might not find that some tax now in effect is not unconstitutional under the new constitution. I don't know of any; I can't contemplate any, but I can't unequivocally tell you that. I think that if there is such a tax unconstitutional under the new constitution just as any other law which is unconstitutional under the new constitution, it has got to be declared unconstitutional.

MR. AVANT

Even though it had been pledged to secure a specific obligation?

MR. JENKINS

I don't think that would be relevant to the constitutionality of it.

MR. ROEMER

Woody, I agree with the amendment. I think it's particularly apropos if one were to study the provisions of the roll forward and rollback section of this new constitution wherein even constitutionally dedicated or set millages are going to have to be changed at some time in the future as a result of reappraisal. I think this sentence would really tie us up in litigation for a long time so I support this amendment.

MR. JENKINS

I think it could lead to tax increases because of that rollback and roll forward...

MR. ROEMER

Exactly. I can see the local government sticking with the high millage and not want to roll it back at all.

MR. SCHMITT

Mr. Jenkins, would this take care of the problem with reference to a parish which has a fifteen mill tax and because of the rollback it would only be necessary to have a five mill tax to take care of the same or to create the same amount of revenues, and that the parish subsequent to that time would not have the automatic right to increase it to fifteen mills without a vote of the people? Would your amendment take care of that problem?

MR. JENKINS

Well, Jay, frankly I don't know that it would take care of every aspect of it, but I feel that this sentence...if we don't take this sentence out, it could certainly contribute to that injustice that you're talking about; so I want to be sure that we take that out. We still may have left the door open somewhere else, I don't know, but I think that by taking it out will help alleviate the chances of that.

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Jenkins, under the question that Mr. Avant asked you, wouldn't that be covered in Section 5 where it says..."civil or criminal liability, prosecutions, judgments, sentence... obligations, claims or existing contracts"? Wouldn't that take care of any prior bond obligation? I'm a little concerned like Mr. Avant is, but I think that language is plain enough to take care of any obligations or contracts.

MR. JENKINS

I think that under 5 and 7 also that clearly any person that was due a debt by the state would not in any way have his rights divested or harmed.

MR. RAYBURN

Now, let me ask you one more question. Under...we have a lot of taxes that are today levied under the 1921 Constitution. In the event that the assessments would go up and you would want to roll back some, with this particular language in here, could you roll back the millage? I guess you could roll the millage back, but the existing tax would remain in effect whether you needed all that amount or not.

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

[Motion adopted without objection.]

MR. JENKINS

Well, that's what we fear and that's why we need to take it out.

MR. RAYBURN

Well, what about where some bond issues are passed and you levy additional millages to service the bonds and sometimes you have to increase it or decrease it; could you do that with this provision left in here?

MR. JENKINS

I just don't know, Senator. I'm not sure what effect that would have in that circumstance.

Further Discussion

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, because of all of the questions that have been raised with regard to the second sentence of this particular section, I would concur in the amendment by Mr. Jenkins. I believe that what we've done in our Local Government Article and also our Revenue Article was to ratify those various taxes. I think that this is just unnecessary verbiage and makes real problems in people's minds. So, therefore, if there are no other questions, I'd move the question on the amendment and urge your adoption.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Perez, for primarily the sake of the record, if this language were deleted, what effect, if any, would be had upon taxes which are authorized, but not imposed, i.e.-- suppose a district had authorized a five mill maintenance tax but was only using three or say the police jury was authorized to levy two mills inside of a municipality for road maintenance but was only utilizing one?

MR. PEREZ

Well, it's my appreciation in the Local Government Article that we ratified all taxes, not those just being imposed. Unfortunately, I don't have it with me, but I'm reasonably well satisfied that what we did in Local Government would give you the authority to impose those additional taxes if you had that authority.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted without objection. Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 111-0. Motion to reconsider pending.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

"Section 7. Impairment of Debt Obligations Prohibited Section 7. Nothing in this constitution shall be construed or applied in such a manner as to impair the obligation, validity, or security of any bonds or other debt obligations authorized under the Constitution of 1921."

Explanation

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman, it says clearly in Act 2 which created us that we may not impair debts. This just says constitutionally that we have not intended to impair any debts, . . . have not impaired any debts and nothing may be construed or applied in that manner. Since I understand Mr. Duval has no questions, I urge your adoption of this section.

[Previous Question ordered. Section passed: 111-0. Motion to reconsider pending.]

Motion

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman, at this point I'd like to move that we pass over all sections until Section 12 . . . and consider Section 12 next.

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

"Section 12. Constitution Not Retroactive
Section 12. Except as otherwise specifically provided in this constitution, this constitution shall not be retroactive and shall not create any right or liability which did not exist under the Constitution of 1921 based upon actions or matters occurring prior to the effective date of this constitution."
There is an amendment to go in immediately prior to line 8, between lines 7 and 8 which would make this a portion of Part III.

Explanation

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman and delegates, this is a standard provision from all transition schedules that I've read except for one provision and that is, the first line "except as otherwise specifically provided in this constitution." We put that in to cover the case, if you'll remember, we've authorized survivors' benefits to the widows of certain people who had not been authorized to receive them before. It covered about seventeen people as I understand from the author of the amendment, Mr. Velazquez. One of them was the widow of the cadet shot by the Howard Johnson's sniper who had not been eligible for benefits because her husband had not been a policeman at the time, but a cadet. Other than that, it's absolutely standard language and we intend for this to go in Part III of the schedule.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

I have an amendment sent up by Mr. Casey, Lanier, Tate, Flory, Avant, and many others.

On page 5, between lines 7 and 8 insert the language: "PART III".

I asked them not to run the distribution copies. What it does is between lines 7 and 8 insert the language, "PART III," which would then have the effect, of course, of putting that said Section 12 in Part III as Mr. Perez has previously explained.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Questions

MR. DENNERY

Mary, what happens to the waiver of immunity provision? Suppose the cause of action . . . suppose somebody had a right of action against the State of Louisiana that occurred before the effective date of the constitution; could they then file a suit without getting a special waiver from the legislature since you say there's nothing retroactive here?

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Dennery, I'm not sure I fully understand your question, but I believe we've taken care of it in two other places. If Section 5 doesn't cover it, we've specifically said later on in Section 23 of this, Mr. Dennery . . . in Section 23 of this we've specifically said that those procedures that you operated under before for suits against the state remain active.

MR. DENNERY

In other words, it's clear that it is not retroactive then?

MR. HENRY

Any other questions?

MR. DENNERY

Because it shall apply only to a cause of action arising after the effective date of this constitution. Now, is that the intention?

MS. ZERVIGON

Maybe, I'm not understanding your question.

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

MR. DENNERY

Well, my question is, suppose you have a contract with the state that's in effect on the date on which the constitution becomes effective?

MS. ZERVIGON

A contract.

MR. DENNERY

Either a contract or the state's run into your automobile. Now, at the present time you have to get permission to sue. You're not going to have to get permission to sue after the constitution becomes effective. Now, apparently, or based upon this present section plus Section 23, it's the committee's idea that that right to sue does not change by virtue of the adoption of the constitution for anything that occurred before the constitution was adopted. I just want to be sure what it means.

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Dennery, may I tell you what we did intend to do and perhaps our inference you can figure out what it doesn't do because I believe you're getting over my head on this. What we intended is that we have a rather more extensive Bill of Rights for example than we had in the '21 Constitution. We have an equal protection clause, for example. What we intended was that you may not say someone violated equal protection of the laws section to the '73 Constitution as it applied for me in 1955, and I may therefore sue. We're saying things like that begin again, that the Bill of Rights becomes effective when it becomes effective and only for acts occurring after it becomes effective. Does that answer your question, Mr. Dennery?

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

"Section 13. Legislative Provisions

Section 13. (A) President of the Senate. The lieutenant governor in office on the effective date of this constitution shall continue to serve as president of the Senate until his term expires in 1976.

(B) First Session. The provisions of Article III of this constitution shall become effective for the first session of the legislature to be held in 1975. However, in 1976, the legislature shall convene in regular session at twelve o'clock noon on the second Monday in May, at which time the members elected at the statewide election in 1976 shall take office; otherwise the legislature shall conduct that session as provided in Article III of this constitution."

[Motion to waive reading of the Section adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MS. ZERVIGON

Now, can I explain it?

This was to effectuate the provisions of Article III, the Legislative Section. By in large it was reported out of the Committee on Legislative Powers and Functions to the Committee on which I am Chairman, and we stuck it in here as reported out although we did a little bit of styling. So, if there are questions to be answered or defenses to be made, I've asked each substantive committee chairman to either speak on the section or appoint someone to speak in his place. I haven't asked Senator Blair who that person is, but I yield to that person whoever it is.

Questions

MR. ABRAHAM

Mary, if I understood, now we put this Part III, I believe, above Section 12; is that right? Now, is Section 13 going to still be in Part III?

MS. ZERVIGON

Yes, it is.

MR. ABRAHAM

. . . or does that go back in one of the other parts?

MS. ZERVIGON

No. It's going to be in Section 3--- Part III, excuse me.

MR. ABRAHAM

You say that the Committee on the Legislative Branch--- that these various dates and things like that are as recommended by that committee, is that right?

MS. ZERVIGON

That's correct.

MR. DENNERY

Mary, merely in order to let the Style and Drafting people get at this, is there any reason why you did not say the Constitution of '21 as amended?

MS. ZERVIGON

No, Mr. Dennery, we stuck that as amended section in Section 2 of this article if you'll remember, just so we didn't have to proofread everything; we were getting kind of tired. One further note to the Style and Drafting Committee, I had an amendment, but apparently it hasn't been drawn yet. The Section (8) was intended to apply to the first session of the legislature to be held in 1975 and each session thereafter. The exception for the '76 session of the legislature was only on date of convening, so as not to show it in the terms of the legislators in that session.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Amendment reads as follows: On page 5, line 22, delete the period "." and add the following: "and each session thereafter."

Explanation

MS. ZERVIGON

Just to do what I just told you.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Questions

MR. CASEY

Mary, just for the record and to clarify the reason for Paragraph (D) on the bottom of page 5, Legislative Reapportionment, that paragraph was included merely to indicate that the legislature has already been reapportioned subsequent to the decennial census taken in 1970, that no further reapportionment is necessary until after the returns are promulgated resulting from the 1980 census. Is that correct?

MS. ZERVIGON

That's correct, Mr. Casey.

MR. CASEY

That's the intention of that paragraph?

MS. ZERVIGON

Just to clarify that point.

MR. CANNON

Ms. Zervigon, the question I have would be related to a power which would be granted under the constitution if approved by the voters. Let's assume the election is held in April, as was alluded to this morning, and the legislature should meet in its May session of 1974 and pass a law granting a power to become effective at this future date coinciding with the effective date of this Constitution, January 1, 1975. Was this taken into consideration as being legal and proper that they could do this in the granting of a power, particularly one which they may not have the power to do under the Constitution of 1921, that they could possibly do this in the May, '74 legislature?

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

MS. ZERVIGON

It's always hard to answer an "iffy" question like that, Mr. Cannon, but let me put it to you this way. As I understand it, we'll be operating under the 1921 Constitution until the minute the 1973 Constitution takes effect.

MR. POYNTER

One minute after midnight.

MS. ZERVIGON

So that if the legislature wanted to grant a power that they're not now empowered to grant, I can't understand exactly what that power would be, but supposing there were such an animal, it seems to me that they would have to put a delayed effective date in that law . . .

MR. CANNON

. . . in the law . . .

MS. ZERVIGON

. . . to coincide with the delayed effective date in this constitution. Or, they could put off acting and not do it until the constitution was in effect. That's what, if I were a legislator I'd do, because it sure is easier to understand that way.

MR. CANNON

Right. But, they could do this with legal effect, put it postdated effect -- to the law.

MS. ZERVIGON

As I understand it in the same way that they can pass laws contingent on a constitutional amendment-- then put that constitutional amendment on the ballot, and if that constitutional amendment is ratified, that enabling legislation goes into effect. They could do it in the same way because after all a new constitution is the biggest constitutional amendment of them all.

MR. CANNON

Right. Thank you.

MS. ZERVIGON

Okay.

MR. CANNON

Bless you, Mary Z.

MR. DENNERY

Mary, how does that answer gee with Section 11, which says laws enforced on the effective date which were constitutional when enacted and are not inconsistent shall remain valid? In other words, it would seem to me that the two theories are inconsistent; are they not?

MS. ZERVIGON

I think not, Mr. Dennery, because I think that law with the delayed effective date in it would not be enforced at that time, and would become enforced on ratification by the people, and then the going into effect of this constitution. But, aside from that, Mr. Dennery, I can't conceive of a case in which the legislature has the power to grant something that they don't have the power to grant now.

MR. POYNTER

Next section:
"Section 14. Deletion of Obsolete Schedule Items Section 14. The legislature by law may delete . . ."

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Kean, Jenkins, Casey, Lanier, Tate, Flory and others send an amendment which reads as follows:
Amendment No. 1. On page 6, delete lines 5 through 11, both inclusive, in their entirety.

Explanation

MS. ZERVIGON

Yes. There was some concern about this sort of judgment being exercised by the legislature over this document. I think it has no particular effect that these things remain in the printed constitution even after they have been implemented, so I have no objection to the amendment; as you can see, I'm a co-author.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

Next section:
"Section 15. Judiciary Commission

Section 15. The members of the judiciary commission in office on the effective date of this constitution shall serve until the expiration of their terms. Within thirty days after the effective date of this constitution, the additional two citizen members shall be selected as required by Article V, Section 24. A lawyer member, as thereby required, shall be selected to succeed the judge of a court of record other than a court of appeal whose term as a member of the commission first expires. Thereafter, when a vacancy occurs, the successor to the position shall be selected in accordance with Article V, Section 24."

Explanation

MS. ZERVIGON

Yea. This was inserted at the request of the Judiciary Committee in order to provide an orderly transition between the Judiciary Commission, as composed in the past, and as it would be composed in the future after the effective date of this constitution. I'll yield to Judge Dennis, if he'd like to explain it further. It will be a Part III Section. I move the adoption of the section, Mr. Chairman.

[Previous Question ordered. Section passed: 109-0. Motion to reconsider pending. Motion to take Section 19 out of its regular order adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

The next section is Section 19 on Statewide Elected Officials.
"Section 19. Officials elected statewide in 1976 under terms of the new constitution shall take office in May of that year. Thereafter, statewide elected officials shall take office in March as provided in the new constitution."

Explanation

MRS. ZERVIGON

We've passed over Sections 16, 17 and 18 because hopefully it will go in the Part II section that will be subject to the Section 1 we passed earlier today. This Section 19 is to provide for the orderly transition in such a manner as not to cut short the terms of any statewide elected incumbent, but to provide that the people elected for the following terms will be sworn in at the old date of the swearing in, and then from then on the new date in March that we have provided earlier in the constitution we'll obtain.

Questions

MR. ABRAHAM

Mary, I know the intent is to take office on the same date that they have been taking office, but here we only say "in May." Do we need to be a little bit more specific there?

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

MRS. ZERVIGON

I have an amendment prepared for that, I understand.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The first one's sent up by Delegates Lanier, Tate, Flory, Avant, Conroy, Perez and others.

On page 17, lines 12 and 13, insert the following:

"PART III"

Add "PART III" immediately before this section.

Explanation

MR. LANIER

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, the purpose of this amendment is to show that this section is designed to be in the Part III that we previously discussed, and unless there are any questions about this, I'd move the adoption of the amendment.

Questions

MR. DE BLIEUX

Yes, I thought we had inserted "PART III" previously, to go ahead of those other sections that we had on page 1.

MR. LANIER

We've got some potential PART II's in between the other PART III, so this is to specifically designate that this is going to be a PART III section, so that Style and Drafting will consolidate them all under one heading later on.

MR. DE BLIEUX

The reason I asked that question, Mr. Lanier, I just thought it might be better that if we leave the exact placing of these parts to Style and Drafting when they give this back to us.

MR. LANIER

Well, they'll have to consolidate them under one heading. I think we've already got two PART III's already, and this is to show that this is intended to go in PART III because we've had three other sections that we've passed over that will probably be PART II sections. So, this is to make that absolutely clear.

Further Discussion

MRS. ZERVIGON

In amplification of that answer, Senator De Blieux, the distinction between the PART II sections and the PART III sections is the PART II sections are subject to Section 1 that says "nothing is construed or applied to invalidate earlier sections of the constitution." This date of swearing in clearly invalidates an earlier section of the constitution which says "all statewide elected officials will be sworn in in March." We're saying for this one particular set the date is May, and then, we go to March.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Questions

MR. RAYBURN

Mary, I know this was brought out as a part legislative. I'm just, for the record, was anything mentioned about the retirement for statewide elected officials? I think we can take care of that with an act. But, under these provisions, our present retirement systems are set up on twelve, sixteen, and twenty years. Well, a person with twelve years service... I mean with eight years service, when he got... if he stayed there long enough and got sixteen, he'd have fifteen years and ten months service under this because he's going in March in the place of May, which would cut the existing fellow's time two months, for statewide officers.

MRS. ZERVIGON

This was discussed at length in the committee. We felt we had to have this section in because Act 2 forbids us from shortening anyone's term, and the legislators who were on the committee felt certain that they could pass an act that would say that for only for these officials that would be sworn in on that particular day and would be lacking a couple of months of investing in a retirement system or something like that, they've got a ten-month year that was the first year of their term, could be considered as a full year for the purposes of a retirement system. The legislators could see nothing in conflict with the constitution and no political problems involved in such an act.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

I don't have distribution copies, but I do have the amendment.

It's sent up by Mrs. Zervigon, Avant, Conroy, Perez, Kean, and others.

The amendment reads as follows:

On page 7, delete lines 13 through 17, both inclusive in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Section 19. Statewide Elected Officials

Section 19. Officials elected statewide in 1976 under the provisions of this constitution shall take office on the second Monday in May of that year. Thereafter, statewide elected officials shall take office on the second Monday in March as provided in this constitution."

Explanation

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman, this just clarifies the language as I assured Mr. Abraham we would. It changes the word "terms" in line 14 to "provisions" and specified exactly when in May they're going to take office. I move its adoption.

[Amendment adopted without objection. Previous Question ordered. Section passed: 113-0. Motion to reconsider pending. Motion to pass over Section 20 adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

"Section 21. Pardon Board

Section 21. Until a pardon board is appointed under the terms of this constitution, the lieutenant governor, attorney general, and presiding judge of the sentencing court shall continue to serve as a board of pardons."

Vice Chairman Roy in the Chair

Explanation

MRS. ZERVIGON

If you'll remember in the Executive Department Article, we established a pardon board of five citizens, not members of the Pardon Board by virtue of their office. Until that is set up, and those people are appointed by the governor, this continues the present Pardon Board in office so that their work can continue to be done. I'll yield to any questions, Mr. Chairman.

[Previous Question ordered. Section passed: 109-0. Motion to reconsider pending.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

"Section 22. Levee Districts; Compensation for Property

Section 22. The provisions of Article XVI, Section 6 of the Constitution of 1921 shall be continued as a statute, subject to change by the legislature, and the amount of compensation therein required to be paid for property used or destroyed for levee or levee drainage purposes shall be paid as provided in Section 6 of Article XVI of the Constitution of 1921 until the legislature enacts a law to effectuate Article VI, Section 43 of this constitution."

Delegate Reeves in the Chair

Explanation

MR. LANIER

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, if you refer to Section 43 as adopted by local government, you will see that we made a major change in the law with reference to the compensation paid for the exercise of the riparian servitude. The present law is that you're paid the assessed value for the last preceding year. What we have done is provided that in the future, after the effective date of this constitution, that the legislature shall have the right to determine what compensation should be paid. Because of the fact that the present provisions for compensation are constitutional rather than statutory, the Committee on Local and Parochial Government felt that a special transitional schedule provision was necessary to insure and make certain that we did not have an hiatus in our law during the period of time between the effective date of the new constitution and such time as the legislature in its wisdom may act in fixing the amount of compensation. So, we provided this provision that says that the present law as stated in the 1921 Constitution, that is, that the landowner would be paid the assessed evaluation for the last preceding year, will remain in effect until such time as the legislature acts. Now, if we did not have such a provision, it is the feeling of the Committee on Local and Parochial Government that an argument could be made that since the constitution provides that the compensation will be as provided by the legislature, and that since here in this convention we are physically lifting the provisions of Article XVI, Section 6 out and transporting them to the statutes, that this is not in fact a legislature fixing the compensation and therefore, such a provision would not be valid without a special schedule provision showing our intention to do this. This is the reason to do this so that no one will be unnecessarily hurt during the transitional period between such time as the constitution goes into effect and the legislature acts. Now, if there is a special session of the legislature that does enact such a law prior to the time that we had the effective date, then, of course, that law will take effect on the effective date, and there would be no necessity for such a transitional provision as this. But, in the absence of such action if we do not provide this, it is the feeling of many of us that we will have an hiatus in the law, and persons whose property is exercised by the riparian servitude, if the servitude is used on their property, may be in a position where they cannot get anything for the use of their land; and this is a situation we thought should be avoided. If there are any questions, Mr. Chairman, I'd be glad to try and answer them.

Questions

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Lanier, Article XVI, Section 6 of the 1921 Constitution provides, does it not, that land appropriated for levee or levee drainage purposes shall be paid for at the assessed value?

MR. LANIER

"Lands actually used or destroyed for levees or levee drainage purposes" I believe, are about the words.

MR. JENKINS

So, in other words, if a person has a tract of land and it's assessed under the new constitution properly he would be paid about ten percent of its fair market value; is that not correct?

MR. LANIER

I'm told from the floor by one of the members of Revenue, Finance and Taxation that that will not go into effect for three years, that the present law...of course, as you know, Mr. Jenkins, the riparian servitude is a servitude in favor of the state and its political subdivisions that attaches at the time that the land is separated from the sovereign, and without a constitutional provision providing for some type of compensation, then no compensation would be due because the compensation has been interpreted by both the United States and state Supreme Courts as being a gratuity and unless there was constitutional authority, you would be in violation of the present Article IV, Section 12.

MR. JENKINS

But, did we not provide in Article VI, Section 43 of this constitution that the legislature could provide for...

MR. LANIER

They could have full compensation if they wish, and I think your point is well taken on that since the taxation thing will go in, in three years it will behoove the legislature to act within that period of time if they feel that additional compensation is due to these people under the circumstances. As you will recall in the debate, one of the reasons we left it up to the legislature is because there are very serious problems with reference to the ability that some of these levee districts could pay, and they may need some type of state funding which only the legislature could provide in order to take care of this type of a thing.

MR. JENKINS

Did we not provide at that time, though, that the persons whose property would be appropriated would be paid at least the amount presently provided in the old constitution?

MR. LANIER

I do not believe so. It says this, Mr. Jenkins.

The present provision...I had the first enrollment. This isn't the way it came out of Style and Drafting, but it says, "Notwithstanding any other provision of this constitution," which of course was to negate the Article IV, Section 12 "lands and improvements thereon and hereafter actually used or destroyed for levees, for levee drainage purposes, shall be paid for as provided by law," and provided clearly nothing contained in this paragraph with respect to compensation for lands and improvements shall apply to bature or to property the control of which is vested in the state or any political subdivision thereof for the purpose of commerce. Now, I don't have it as it was styled. This is the first enrolled version but it's in substance, that provision.

If there are no further questions, Mr. Chairman, I would move the adoption of the section.

[Previous Question ordered on the Section. Section passed: 116-0. Motion to reconsider pending. Motion to consider Section 20 previously passed over adopted without objection.]

Chairman Henry in the Chair

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

"Section 20. Commissioner of Elections

Section 20. The commissioner of elections, as provided by Article IV, first elected under this constitution shall be elected to take office in 1976. The custodian of voting machines in office on the effective date of this constitution shall continue to exercise the functions of that office, without change, until the expiration of his term."

Explanation

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman and delegates, if you'll remember, in the immediately preceding section, Section 19, we took care of the problem that we couldn't shorten the term of any incumbents. But, with the custodian of voting machines, we had a dual problem. We couldn't shorten his term, but we had abolished the office in favor of the commissioner of elections. Section 20 makes certain that the present custodian of voting machines serves the full extent of his term, and that the commissioner of elections is then sworn in with the new duties assigned to him by the article on the Executive Department. I'll yield to any questions.

Questions

MR. ABRAHAM

Mary, would this let the custodian of voting machines take on the additional duties that have been assigned to the commissioner of elections, or would his duties remain essentially as they are now?

MRS. ZERVIGON

They will remain as they are now, as I understand it. The reason for that being that when the people elected a custodian of voting machines, they elected him for the duties of the office of custodian of voting machines. The people will then have a field of candidates who are running for the office of commissioner of elections with the additional duties, and may judge the candidates on that basis. We don't have to do it that way, as I understand it, pursuant to Act 2, this was a policy decision by the committee. But, it was decided to continue to offer it as is because the people voted on the candidates on that basis.

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

MR. ABRAHAM

On line 23, when we refer to the function of that office, that office means the officer of custodian of voting machines and not commissioner of elections. Is that correct?

MRS. ZERVIGON

That's correct. Out of all this, it accomplishes this purpose without change.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mrs. Zervigon, didn't the commissioner of elections have a duty and responsibility as given to him under the Election Code which we mandate the legislature to enact?

MRS. ZERVIGON

If memory serves me correctly, he does to some extent, but he has one additional function. I don't know what it is. Oh, that's right. It's to administer that code which hasn't yet been enacted. But, that wasn't the reason we did it that way. The reason we did it that way was because the people had judged the candidates for a certain office on the basis of the duties of the office as described at that time.

MR. HENRY

Any other questions?
Mr. Clerk, do we have amendments?

MR. POYNTER

I don't have any at the desk, but...Mr. Kelly...
Mr. Kelly, do you have more amendments?
I just wanted to make sure.

[Previous Question ordered. Section passed: 112-1. Motion to reconsider pending. Motion to take Section 24 out of its regular order adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

"Section 23. Suits Against the State; Effective Date
Section 23. Provisions of Article III, Section 14. . .
I'm sorry. You want to skip and go to Section 24.
"Section 24. Tax Schedule.
Section 24. (A) Property Taxes. The provisions of Article X of the Constitution of 1921 relating to ad valorem property taxes shall remain in effect until the provisions on that subject contained in Article XI of this constitution take effect as provided in said Article XI.
(B) The provisions of Article XI of the Constitution of 1921 shall be continued as a statute until the legislature enacts the law required by Article XI, Section 1 (contained in Delegate Proposal No. 16) of this constitution, but the amount of the exemption shall be fifteen thousand dollars in value until otherwise fixed by law."

Explanation

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman and delegates, Section (A) is to tell us what to do between the here and the there because of the delayed effective date contained in Committee Proposal No. 26 with regard to implementation of the property tax provisions. If we don't say what happens between the effective date of the constitution and the effective date of the new provisions of that article, we don't really know what sort of rules we're operating under. This is to tell us as the '21 Constitution obtains in the interim.
Section (B) relates to Mr. Alario's proposal of the other day on the homestead exemptions from seizure. With other statutes that we wanted to remain in effect, we just said this statute shall continue. The present statute on the subject of homestead exemptions from seizure contains the figure of four thousand dollars in it. It was the feeling of the committee that it was the clear consensus of the convention that the figure be at least fifteen thousand dollars. So, this continues the procedures, but makes the amount at least fifteen thousand dollars, pursuant to the will of the convention.

I yield to any questions, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

MR. STAGG

. . .do with article. . .Section (B) has to do with Article IX, Section 1, which is. . .has to do with the ad valorem taxes, not the exemptions from seizure.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Stagg, if you will look, you've got two Article IX, Section 1's, because there was an entirely separate delegate proposal in there. Style and Drafting, I imagine, will renumber those sections after awhile, and at that time we'll delete the reference to the Delegate Proposal No. 16.

MR. DUVAL

Mary, first off, I've got a Roman numeral XI, Article XI, in mine. Is that what you're referring to?

MRS. ZERVIGON

You're right; I just don't read pretty good.

MR. DUVAL

Now, the other question: lines 23 and 24 of Section 24, "the exemption shall be fifteen thousand dollars in value unless otherwise provided by law," that, of course, means at least fifteen thousand dollars, does it not?

MRS. ZERVIGON

That's a right.

MR. DUVAL

Thank you.

MRS. ZERVIGON

In further explanation, Mr. Duval, let me say that they couldn't set another figure, except by law, and they would have to go up.

[Previous Question ordered. Section passed: 110-1. Motion to reconsider pending.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

"Section 25. Effective Date
Section 25. This constitution shall become effective at twelve o'clock midnight on January 1, 1975. The secretary of state shall promulgate the results of the election on the thirtieth day prior thereto; however, he shall announce the results of the election within thirty days after the date of election at which the constitution is submitted to the people."

Explanation

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman and delegates, this is the delayed effective date of which Mr. Gravel spoke earlier. It was the feeling of the committee that it might take several months for the people, once they had passed this constitution, to get accustomed to what the provisions are and what the effects would be on them, especially elected or appointed officials and public bodies. So, we put this delayed effective date in here. There is, in Act 2, an effective date of a sort saying that the constitution will become effective thirty days after the secretary of state promulgates the returns. The secretary of state wanted some sort of direction as to when he should promulgate the returns. That's a difficult date to set, exactly, because we don't know when the governor is going to call the election. So, what we have asked in this section is that he announce the results early and promulgate the returns before thirty days before midnight, January 1, 1975. But, the main purpose of this section is to have a delayed effective date. If you will recall, we have delayed effective dates throughout the constitution-- the property tax is the one that immediately comes to mind--for certain sections, and therefore, we were certain that we could do it for the whole constitution. What would happen is that this section would come into effect, first, setting the date at which the rest of the constitution would come into effect.

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

Questions

MR. AVANT

Mrs. Zervigon, to me the phrase "twelve o'clock midnight on January 1, 1975" means that all of January 1, 1975 has elapsed and you are now moving into the second of January, 1975.

MRS. ZERVIGON

That's correct.

MR. AVANT

Is that the intent that all of New Year's Day will not be covered by this constitution, but beginning with the first moment on the second of January it will be covered? Is that the intent?

MRS. ZERVIGON

Yes sir, that's the intent. It was our feeling that there isn't a whole lot of business of government that's conducted on that day, in any case. But, Mr. Gravel, I understand, is going to introduce an amendment that will give the delegates a choice between New Year's Eve and New Year's Night.

MR. AVANT

I just wanted to know what it meant. I really don't care what it means other than wanting to know what it means.

MR. O'NEILL

Mary, we've provided that there are going to be five public service commissioners when this constitution takes effect. If it takes effect on December 31 or January 1, 1975, then the election will only be for three public service commissioners. It will remain as three until probably what--1980? Have you dealt with that or thought about that?

MRS. ZERVIGON

Well, those commissioners have overlapping terms so that you're really only going to have one election this fall. It was our feeling that there was no way that an election could be called, the results promulgated, the districts drawn and then the election for a public service commissioner called all in the same summer. If you will remember, the last time we were in this chamber Mr. Jenkins computed the very first date at which the constitution could possibly come into effect, and it was the middle of the legislative session of '74 which made it confusing in the extreme. So, if we have a section in here--I can't find it right now, Mr. O'Neill, but I'm certain that you can--that deals with the legislature setting up the up to two districts and saying how the election shall be called and when and what will be the length of the first two terms since that board is made up of members with overlapping terms--Section 18, I'm informed.

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, Mrs. Zervigon, as I understand your Section 18 in the transitional measures, it provides that in the next session right after the effective date, be it extraordinary or regular, the legislature will divide the state into five single-member districts. I guess you mean "by law," as a Style and Drafting problem. But, anyway, and that in other words, the five-man Public Service Commission will come in right after the effective date of the new constitution, but that the three members elected under the old constitution will just serve for their terms. But, that won't prevent the immediate creation of the new five-man Public Service Commission as required by this constitution. Is that right, if that's a question?

MRS. ZERVIGON

That's correct, as I understand you. The only thing I'll point out is that we haven't passed that section yet, so that if Mr. O'Neill feels strongly enough that it's out of kilter with what he wants, he could draw an amendment at this time.

MR. DUVAL

Mrs. Zervigon, I'm just trying to get something straight, here. Do you think that in any way the delayed time for the constitution coming into effect could be in violation of Act 2?

MRS. ZERVIGON

I think not, Mr. Duval. The act sets out in Section 4 three specific prohibitions. The other parts of the act, as I understand it, are not prohibitions, but just a suggestion for mechanics for us. Mr. Tobias has drawn an amendment to the entire article, which I assume he still intends to submit, which says, "Nothing shall be construed to be in violation of Act 2 except for that Section 4 of Act 2 with its specific prohibitions." Those would still stand. His concern was that our working in committee in the six months when recess as a full body was mandated in Act 2 might be considered much farther on as an abrogation of Act 2. So, it's been done in other states. Ordinarily the way the section reads is to say: "Nothing in this constitution may be read as an abrogation of anything in the act." We decided to keep in the prohibitions against us just so that the elected officials incumbent in office right now would know we're not out to get them.

MR. DUVAL

Well, the point I bring out is that the election, or Act 2 provides--I'm looking on page 10 of the printed copy--"the election shall be held and the results shall be promulgated under the general election laws of the state." What I'm wondering is: that isn't it so that under the general election laws of the state a law becomes effective so many days after promulgation? Isn't that right?

MRS. ZERVIGON

I'm really not certain. We drew this up at the secretary of state's request and more or less in his language. To tell you the truth, being a trusting person, it never occurred to me to go and read the election code to find out if the secretary of state knew what was in it or not.

MR. DUVAL

But, in essence, though, you're telling me that these things have been checked out and the officials have rendered opinions to you that this would be in conformance with the election laws and Act 2?

MRS. ZERVIGON

Yes sir. Yes.

MR. TATE

Mrs. Zervigon, I thought I understood the Secretary of State, Wade Martin's, law saying that the general election law doesn't require a particular time in which this type of election would be promulgated--the returns--and therefore, I think I understand it to say that what this convention decides when the secretary of state shall promulgate the election returns will be governing. You don't have to. . . Is that correct, Mrs. Zervigon, and don't be too honest?

MRS. ZERVIGON

Judge Tate, all I can tell you is that we put this in at the request of the secretary of state. I've never heard a word of criticism of his knowing his job, and we assumed that he knew what he was talking about.

MR. TATE

Did you know that on everybody's desk is a letter of January 18, 1974 from the secretary of state to the attorney general that tells his opinion?

MRS. ZERVIGON

I think most everybody in this chamber knows that I don't know what's on my desk, and I can't understand your question. If it invalidates this section, I suggest you draw an amendment to it.

MR. TATE

No, Mrs. Zervigon, those were two friendly questions.

MRS. ZERVIGON

I couldn't understand you.

MR. SCHMITT

Would it be possible for us to pass over this, based upon the letter which we've just received, I guess within the last hour or so, from the secretary of state and see whether or not what we're doing right now is in conformity with his request?

Have you read the letter?

MRS. ZERVIGON

I think the most efficacious thing to do will be to pass this section and leave it pending as we have the others. If we find that we've done violence to the secretary of state's wishes--it was our intention to carry out the secretary of state's wishes-- we will redraw it so that we carry out the secretary of state's wishes and pass it again.

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

MR. SCHMITT

It's not so much a question of wishes as what is legal. I think he raises the question, the same question that was raised back here, that perhaps it does have to go into effect thirty days after the date of the election or promulgation. . .

MRS. ZERVIGON

As I've said before, I don't think the secretary of state has any illegal wishes.

MR. FONTENOT

I have just one question, Mr. Chairman.

Mary, as I read this section, this "twelve o'clock midnight on January 1, 1975," that would have the effect, if we adopt this, of stretching a previous section that we had adopted in the Revenue, Finance and Taxation Article concerning the reassessment of property. We have the effective date of this reassessment procedure effective January 1 of the year following the end of three years after the effective date of this constitution. Well, that one day we're playing with right now has the effect of shifting this reassessment procedure a whole year. Now, was that the intent of this Section 25?

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Fontenot, I imagine that's the reason Mr. Gravel has drawn his amendment to change it to December 31, 1974.

MR. FONTENOT

Okay. I just wanted that clarified.

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

Yes. Mr. Gravel sends up amendments.

Amendment No. 1. On page 8, line 27, after the word "on" and before the period "." delete "January 1, 1975" and insert in lieu thereof "December 31, 1974".

Amendment No. 2. On page 8, line 28, after the word "election" and before the word "on" insert "by publication in the official state journal".

Explanation

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, Act 2, under which we've been operating, specifically provides in Section 9 (C) that the constitution shall become effective at "twelve o'clock midnight on the thirtieth day after the date on which the secretary of state promulgates the results of the election." I think this poses two problems, one of which should be easy, I think, to resolve, and the other one might be attended by some difficulty. I think not only in view of this statute, but also because of what the secretary of state, himself, has indicated, it's going to be up to us to make sure that we provide for an effective date of the constitution by designating when and how the promulgation shall be officially made with respect to the results of the election. I don't know if the proposed amendment that I have--there are two amendments--has yet reached your desk, but Amendment No. 2, in effect, would say that the secretary of state shall publish in the official state journal thirty days before midnight, December 31, 1974, the result of the elections. By the adoption of Amendment No. 2, then, you would be providing for promulgation. If the first amendment that I propose is also adopted, you would make the effective date of the constitution at midnight, December 31, 1974. Now, I realize that some problem exists as to whether or not we make the effective date midnight, December 31, 1974, or midnight, January 1, 1975. If we exercise the latter. . .

Mr. Chairman, that's all I have to say except that the governor has authorized me to say that the administration block can vote its conscience on Amendment No. 1.

Questions

MR. CONROY

Mr. Gravel, earlier, a question was raised about the effect of the effective date on the provision on ad valorem taxes. Presently, that provides that the change in ad valorem taxes would take effect January 1 of the year following the end of three years after the effective date of this constitution." Now, as I understand it, one of the purposes and effects of your amendment would be to insure that the changeover in ad valorem tax procedures would become effective January 1, 1978. Is that correct?

MR. GRAVEL

That's correct; yes sir.

MR. TOBIAS

Mr. Gravel--take a look over this direction--what I want to know is: what is the definition of midnight? In other words, is midnight tonight on January 18 or January 19?

MR. GRAVEL

I'm not sure that I know, but I think midnight is the last moment of one day and the first moment of the other, if he can. . . I'm just not sure. I can't give you that definition.

MR. TOBIAS

Well, if that's the. . . assuming that it was, if midnight tonight is January 18, then why is it most airplanes leave at either 11:59 or 12:01 a.m.?

MR. GRAVEL

I really don't know, Mr. Tobias.

MR. BOLLINGER

I don't necessarily understand the purpose of your second amendment. Why, or is it normal, that the secretary of state promulgate the returns of an election in the official journal?

MR. GRAVEL

No, not necessarily, but I think it is important that we designate when and how the official promulgation takes place because it's the only way that I believe we can establish an effective date, under the language of Act 2. Unfortunately, that language says that the effective date of the constitution shall be "at midnight on the thirtieth day after promulgation." So, I think we have to do it this way in order to insure a certainty as to the effective date. That's the purpose of it.

MR. GOLDMAN

Mr. Chairman, I hope you don't bowl me out for wasting time, but you know, we could resolve this midnight thing very easily by acceding to the Jewish way of determining the next day. It's after sundown, the day before becomes the next day.

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Goldman should have been around when we wrote the statute. We might could have handled it at that time, but we can't do it now--that's the problem--at least without being contrary to the provisions of the statute, Mr. Schmitt.

MR. CASEY

We're over here, Mr. Gravel.

I guess this question is more or less for the record. I have some difficulty with Amendment No. 1 in that certain elective offices--which you and I know we've already discussed--I have some hesitation about voting for Amendment No. 1 because certain elective offices, I think, take effect and people will run for election prior to, let's say, January 1, 1975. They'll go through the democratic primaries and the final election and what not, and will take office on that particular day. The problem that I see that can arise and probably will cause some litigation is: do they take office under the new constitution or statutes--if they are removed from the constitution to the statute--or is that office recognized and acknowledged or still in effect under the old constitution? Do they take office under the old constitution? You see the problem that we have.

MR. GRAVEL

Well, I think it's the purpose and intent and the hope of this amendment--and I realize that there are some problems--to make sure that the new constitution goes into effect at the very, very first moment of January 1, 1975. I think we are responding, here, to the mandate of the statute, and I think it would be clear that if Amendment No. 1 was so adopted with that statement that the effective date would then be so interpreted. I realize, Mr. Casey, whichever way we go we have some problem. But the purpose of this amendment is to make this constitution go into effect at the very first moment of January 1, 1975.

MR. CASEY

Don't you agree, Mr. Gravel, that if people run for office, are elected, and then must take office on January 1, that legally, under a legal interpretation, I think there would be no question that they would take office on January 1. If Amendment No. 1 was not adopted, under the old constitution there'd be no legal question about it. What would happen, though, if your Amendment No. 1 is adopted, what do they take office under--the new constitution or the old constitution?

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

MR. GRAVEL

Well, the only way I can answer that is that the purpose and intent of this amendment is to make this document effective at the very first moment of January 1, 1975 and would depend upon, you know, the wording of the old constitution as to whether or not that date was significant or not. I just don't know.

MR. CASEY

Well, is it more important that the document go into effect at midnight on the thirty-first, or midnight on the first?

MR. GRAVEL

Well, I think it's more important to me, and I think it would be more correct to make it midnight on the thirty-first.

Mr. Chairman, I think that the amendment is divisible--that is, the proposal is divisible--and that we should vote on the amendments separately because I do think that we're talking about two different things there. Some people do have a problem with Amendment No. 1, and I don't think too many people have any objection to the idea of . . .

MR. HENRY

All right. The amendment is divisible.

Further Discussion

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman, and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in support of Mr. Gravel's amendment, and I'm sure that when you go back home and you start talking to your business people, other people who make tax returns, ad valorem taxes and so forth, you're going to find out that there's one day--adding one day on to a year, because that's what you're doing, and taking off a day--that's going to make a tremendous amount of difference. Usually, we conduct our affairs on a fiscal year basis or a calendar year basis. The calendar year begins at midnight on January 1...that is, it begins midnight of December 31, right after that of 12:01. That's when it begins. So, I just would like to suggest to you that you adopt this amendment because I think, otherwise, you're going to create some mighty chaotic conditions for a while until we get this straightened out for that particular year in which this constitution goes into effect. I think we'll have a whole lot less advantage; and if there's a some problem that we ought to correct, let's put an exception for that particular problem. Let's don't mess up everybody else by trying to protect that one particular problem.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. GRAVEL

I'll just take one moment to say that it's very heartening to come to this stage of the convention and find out that the administration bloc has stuck together. Both of us are going to vote for Amendment No. 1. Thank you.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Flory, Avant, Conroy and others.

Amendment No. 1. On page 9, delete lines 1 through 6, both inclusive in their entirety.

Explanation

MRS. ZERVIGON

It deletes the section. The only purpose for the section was to allow the extraordinary session of the legislature to last for a longer period than extraordinary sessions may ordinarily last. What we've decided is to allow the governor to call the legislature into session more than once if it's necessary, but not to mandate a special session should they be able to dispose of their business at a regular session or in one ordinary...extraordinary session of ordinary length.

[Amendment adopted without objection.
Motion to revert to Section 8 adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

"Section 8. Existing Officials " I might say there is an amendment to provide on page 2, between lines 24 and 25, to insert "PART II"; there'll be an amendment to do that just before this section.

"Section 8. Existing Officials.

A person holding an office by election shall continue to exercise his powers and duties until his office is abolished, his successor takes office, or the office is vacated, as provided by law. A person holding an office by appointment shall continue to exercise his powers and duties until his office is abolished, his term ends, or he is removed or replaced under the provisions of this constitution or by law. Each public body shall continue to exercise its powers and duties until changed as provided by this constitution or by law."

Explanation

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman and delegates, we've finished the easy, quick part of our work for today, and now we're starting to get into the tough stuff. I urge you to read 8, 9, and 10 together, although we have a very substantive amendment coming to 10, it's very important that you read 8 and 9 together. The committee had a rather difficult problem to approach, and several different ways it could go. We could either say that everything not specifically retained in the old constitution was repealed. We could say that everything not specifically repealed in the old constitution was continued. We could say that certain ones were continued or certain ones were repealed. We chose the approach of continuing as statutes certain sections as recommended by the substantive committees that appear in Section 9, repealing everything else. But, in order to assure continuity, and in order to conform with that part of Act 2 that says we may not shorten the terms of any elected or appointed officials, we drew Section 8 from the Michigan Transitional Schedule. In essence, what it says is, "you all keep on doing what you've been doing till somebody stops you." This is not meant to contravene anything in the other articles. We are now beginning the consideration of the Section 2 sections...excuse me, PART II, that will all be subservient to the articles that we've debated so long on the floor. So, if an elected official, appointive official, or public body springs into your mind whose duties we've changed in the main body of the constitution, that change will remain in effect. It's not our intention to affect that in any way, but only to continue those duties not mentioned in the constitution. There's quite a bit of detail on the duties of various public bodies that's been repealed, and therefore, we took this section from the Michigan Constitution to make clear that these people could continue to act as they had been acting pursuant to present law if it wasn't specifically changed by the old constitution. I'll yield to any question, Mr. Chairman.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

I have that amendment I mentioned sent up by Judge Tate, Flory and others.

On page 2 between line 24 and 25 insert the following:

"PART II"

It comes just before 8.

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

Explanation

MRS. ZERVIGON

This is, as I mentioned, to make Section 8 follow the limitations of Section 1, which we passed earlier in the day, to make certain that we're not reopening substantive issues in this schedule provision. I'll yield to any questions.

[Amendment adopted without objection. Previous Question ordered. Section passed: 112-0. Motion to reconsider pending.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

"Section 9. Provisions of 1921 Constitution Made Statutory Section 9. (A) Provisions Continued as Statutes. Subject to change by law or as otherwise provided in this constitution, and except as any of them conflicts with this constitution, the following provisions of the Constitution of 1921 are continued as statutes, but restricted to the same effect as on the effective date of this constitution:

Now, it begins to enumerate in a series here ...

MR. HENRY

Mr. Flory moves to dispense with the further reading of the section because of all the numbers.

What we'll do if it meets with your approval, we'll take these things sort of item by item and let the Clerk read Item No. 1 and give you an idea of what's in there. We'll discuss, after, any amendments and so forth. I think it'd be more orderly to approach it in that manner. So, if you will, proceed, Mr. Clerk.

MR. POYNTER

First item under (A) is Article V, Sections 2, 7, 18, 20, and 21. As you can tell if you've got your sheet there before you from the staff memorandum, this affects Section 2, governor, lieutenant governor, executive power, terms of elections; the salary of the acting governor; constitutional officers, election terms, vacancy, etc.; salaries of constitutional officers, fees and expenses; and commissions and formalities.

The next one affects..the next item is Item No. 2, affecting various sections in present Article VI, including the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission, the Forestry Commission, Department of Conservation, etc.; 11.1, Mosquito Abatement District; 19, State Highways and Bridges Construction and Maintenance; 19.2, Board of Highways, Director, Powers, Duties, and Functions; 19.3, Beautification of Highways; 19.4, Board of Highways; 26, Department of Revenue, the Auditor and State Printing Board; 27, Lake Pontchartrain; 28, Liquefied Petroleum Gas Commission; 31, Ouachita Port Commission. Also, 32, both, Caddo, Bossier Parishes Port Commission; 33, Lake Providence Port Commission; a series of other port commissions, Avoyelle, Rapides; and finally, 39, Authority of the Governor to Obtain Reports and Information. All of that contained in Item No. 2.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

...Sent up by Miss Perkins and Mr. Conroy. We have one, I believe; only Mr. Conroy on 2; none on 3, so far.

At this time, Mr. Conroy is going to move to revert back to Item No. 1 of this enumeration. He does have an amendment that's been passed out.

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

[Motion to revert to Item No. 1 adopted without objection.]

MR. POYNTER

Yes. Now, we're back to Item No. 1.

Amendment No. 1. On page 3, delete line 11 and insert in lieu thereof the following:--I'm sorry. This is the Conroy-Perez-Zervigon-Kean, etc. Amendment--page 3, delete line 11 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"1. Article V, Sections 2, 7, 9, 18, 20, and 21."

[Amendment reread.]

Explanation

MR. CONROY

This is probably not the best one to start off with in an area that's bound to be confusing. But, during the lunch recess there were a number of us who got together and, working with the staff, have tried to get the numbers coordinated. I've worked with Mrs. Zervigon also to try to get...to be sure that we got all of the numbers in here that anyone suggested was important to continue in effect as a statute. In that process, there was one committee---I think it was the Executive Committee---which at some point or another had suggested that Article V, Section 9 should be continued in effect as a statute. In looking at Article V, Section 9, I must confess that I'm not quite sure why, but that was picked up from the tabulations we ran. The only effect of this amendment is to add Article V, Section 9 in the list.

Questions

MR. D'GEROLAMO

David, what is Section 9? What does it cover?

MR. CONROY

Well, as a matter of fact, what it says in full, Mr. D'Gerolamo--and that's why I said I don't know why it was picked up and suggested that it be carried forward---it says, "in the event of a vacancy in the office of the lieutenant governor for any cause, the president pro tem of the Senate shall discharge the duties of the lieutenant governor and receive the emoluments of that office." Now, I assume that the Executive Branch Committee recommended this, but if they didn't, I wish that they would say so, one way or another on this point.

MR. ABRAHAM

I'm just trying to check, but if I remember correctly, Section 9 is, in effect, superseded by the new Article IV, Section 15. I'm looking at my reference chart here. But, it is not intended that this be continued as a statute.

MR. CONROY

If that is the case, then I would ask leave to withdraw this amendment, because that's the only ...

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Questions

MR. BOLLINGER

Mary, it would seem to me that Article V, Sections 18 and 20 are rather obsolete in that Section 18 refers to the comptroller and the register of state lands which was deleted. Section 20 refers to the compensation which as in that section says "it shall be five thousand dollars per annum," which I think everyone agrees is obsolete. What was the intention of including this from the scheduled provisions?

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Bollinger, as you know, we were a procedural committee and didn't change the recommendations as they came from the Substantive Committee. Mr. Abraham, as I understand, was the Chairman of the Subcommittee on Transition of the Executive Department Committee, and I yield to him for an explanation. Mack, you want to explain why you stuck all of those in?

MR. ABRAHAM

.....contains the office of the register of the land office, we felt that that had to be continued by statute. Section 18 also refers to the register of the state land office. If I remember correctly, that was the primary reason why we had to keep these in effect as statutes.

MR. BOLLINGER

Mack, if we are going to adopt this as a scheduled provision, then the legislature is going to have to go back and reword these articles to bring them up-to-date; is that correct, as far as the state comptroller, for instance?

MR. ABRAHAM

That's right, the statutes will have to be amended.

MRS. ZERVIGON

May I amplify and answer that's only partially true because if you will look at lines 9 and 10 on page 3, they are continued as statutes but restricted to the same effect as on the effective date of this constitution. So, insofar as they have salaries which have been subject to change by the legislature and the legislature has changed those salaries, the new salaries are in effect. But, insofar as they contain an office which would not exist if they weren't transposed into the statutes and that is not in conflict with the new constitution, then that part of the statute would stand.

MR. AVANT

But, that's the question I was going to ask, because it would appear to me that if you reenacted this thing as a statute and the people voted and approved the constitution with this schedule in it and said that this provision here is a statute that then you could cut them back to five thousand dollars because their salary has been changed under other provisions of the '21 Constitution. My specific question is: It was the intent of the language when you say "but restricted to the same effect as on the effective date of this constitution," that that not happen and if there is any other statutory or other material that varied this language in any way in the present law that then that's what it will be; is that right?

MRS. ZERVIGON

That's correct; it was worded very carefully just to take care of that case because we had a problem in that we didn't feel we could pick sections... sentences from sections and say we are going to continue the first sentence but not the second sentence or something like that, we had to do the whole section but only insofar as it is in effect on the effective date of the constitution.

MR. JENKINS

Mary, I know I've asked you this a number of times in private before and I just want to ask you one more time for the record. Can't we leave all of this to the legislature and allow the legislature to come back in the upcoming session and enact the same materials so that time can be devoted and study can be devoted to making sure that what we are doing is up-to-date and correct other than trying to enact literally scores of statutes in a matter of a couple of hours.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Well, Mr. Jenkins, to some extent you are saying that we are trying to enact scores of statutes in a matter of hours as if we are going to change the status quo to some extent is inaccurate. What we are trying to do is continue agencies that need to be continued that are not authorized presently in the statutes or only partially described in the statutes. The legislature can then, at its leisure, comb through, delete, amend, change, repeal. But, with these particular statutes, we thought we needed to continue them, in effect, in the same extent to which they are in effect on the effective date of the constitution. We've repealed by Section 10 a heck of a lot more than we have continued in Section 9, asked the committees to select what was to be continued as statutory material. But, for example, there should be an office of register of state lands; it used to be provided in the constitution; not going to be provided any more. We are carrying over that office, that's no revolutionary change. If the legislature wants to change the title of it or abolish or merge the office, or something like that, then the legislature may do that. But, in the meantime, what we are doing is trying to preserve the status quo as it was described to us on the floor of the convention. In addition to that, we could shorten their terms so we must carry over at least until '76, otherwise our actions of repealing in Section 10 would shorten their term.

MR. JENKINS

Let me ask you this question. If we put these provisions, these constitutional matters that are to be retained as statutes in the new constitution, doesn't that mean that if the legislature later this year comes in and attempts to act to clarify and correct these same provisions that all they do will be for naught because when the new constitution is adopted, the language in the old constitution will automatically become statute, superseding anything the 1974 legislature would have done during its regular session; isn't that true?

MRS. ZERVIGON

There are two ways to...if that troubles you greatly, there are two ways to move on that. One, is to put a delayed effective date in the act that you pass in the legislature and make it contingent on passage of the constitution or make it come into effect on the effective date of the constitution. We specify that the effective date...the way I remember Legislative Powers and Functions Committee report where the legislative act shall come into effect within a certain number of days unless specifically provided otherwise therein. You could do it that way in the section of the legislature that you prescribe or perhaps you could change the effective date in line 10 to date of adoption. So, this language was pretty carefully drawn to make for an orderly transition to allow that there be no disruption. I hope that it would stay that way because we are all kind of tired and I would really hate to change that language in lines 9 and 10.

Further Discussion

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I thought that this might be a good time to clear the air a little bit on what it is that we are doing, and particularly with respect to local government. What we must realize is that we have taken from the constitution scores, and scores, and scores of very, very important governmental agencies. If we do not continue their existence, then they would automatically go out of existence and hope that the legislature would put them back into existence again. For instance, let me just run down a few of these. What happens to the Port Commission of Baton Rouge and the New Orleans Dock Board? What happens to the Pontchartrain Levee District and the Orleans Levee District? What happens to the East Baton Rouge Park and Recreation Commission? What happens to all of these various other port commissions which are constitutionally organized and created? I just want to impress upon you the importance that we must have a provision which continues all of these various agencies in existence until the legislature deals with them in the future. But, if we don't do that, they just automatically go out of existence, cease to exist and you can imagine how many votes you would get for this constitution under those circumstances and also the details with respect to their operations. That's why we so badly need this provision. I just hope we can move as rapidly as possible because remember that we are putting this; and let's call it a Part II, where we will have these very restrictive terms that "nothing in this Part shall be construed or applied in such a manner so as to supersede, or invalidate, or limit a change in any other provision of the foregoing articles in the constitution" and so forth. So, we've wrapped this up with all sort of limitations realizing that we would have some duplication but that what's in the new constitution completely controls, that there is so much other material which is not in the new constitution which must be carried on as statutes that it's necessary for us to list all of these various details.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

We're going to Item No. 2 then, Mr. Vice Chairman, which I had previously enumerated, and kind of go through the list that the staff has there before you.

Mr. Conroy sends up an amendment at this time; Conroy, Perez, Zervigon, Kean, Jenkins, and others.

Amendment No. 1. On page 3, delete lines 12 and 13 in their entirety, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"2. Article VI, Section 1,"--and here's a correction to the Conroy amendment and after Section 1 insert--"1(A-1), 11.1, 19, 19.2, 19.3, 19.4, 22(4), 23 except any dedications contained therein, 23.1, 26, 28, 31, 32, 33, 35, 36.1, and 39."

Explanation

MR. CONROY

This amendment does three or four things. The first two things it does is it changes the reference that presently appears on line 12 as 1(A), it changes it to Section 1 and to Section 1(A-1) which are two separate sections in the present constitution. Section 1 consists of provisions which were regarded as statutory affecting the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission, the Forestry Commission, the Department of Conservation and general provision. Section 1(A-1) deals with certain jurisdiction of the district courts that are on the Gulf of Mexico also related to Wildlife and other matters arising in those jurisdictions. The next thing which this amendment does is to delete Section 27, Section 27 related to the power of the governor to sell certain property, and islands, or make islands in Lake Pontchartrain to the extent that that had any significance, it's been done with the building of the causeway and, otherwise, it would be inconsistent with the rest of the constitution; so, that was taken out. The other additions in there are Section 22 (L), Section 23, and Section 23.1 involve moving up from Paragraph 15 which appears on page 4, certain other references contained there.

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

The reason this was done is that Paragraph 15 as it presently appears in this proposal or the two-thirds vote provisions, we felt that it was actually unnecessary and confusing to isolate those provisions in a separate paragraph. Part of these series of amendments will be to delete lines 2 through 9 on page 4, inasmuch as the provisions of Section 1 of this proposal now prohibit any change from the basic constitution when we say on line 6 that "these statutes can be changed by law" necessarily, that means subject to the restrictions contained in the constitution regarding two-thirds votes on certain items. So, I think it will simplify the handling of this and limit more clearly the two-thirds vote requirements to those parts of these statutes which are listed in Paragraph 15 which contain the two-thirds vote restrictions, that is, specifically in most cases, taxes and exemptions from taxes. I'll yield to any questions.

Questions

MR. AVANT

Mr. Conroy, I have an amendment that would delete on lines 5 and 6 of this section any reference to Article XIV, Section 15.1 except Paragraph 34, that language. Now, are you telling me that this amendment that you have now is deleting all of this Paragraph 15?

MR. CONROY

This present amendment does. One of the amendments in this series of amendments will delete all of Paragraph 15. There are certain of the provisions in [Paragraph] 15 that will be moved up above but the particular one that you referred to will not be inserted in any of the other paragraphs; so, it would just ultimately be deleted under these series of amendments.

MR. AVANT

All right. Then, I wanted to just make this point for the record and ask you if this isn't correct. You talked about a two-thirds vote but actually when you go back to the Substantive Article it said that Article XIV, Section 15.1 was continued. There are certain aspects of that that the legislature can't change even by a two-thirds vote. So, this representation here is actually inaccurate, is it not?

MR. CONROY

Well, we found a lot of problems in Paragraph 15; that's why we decided to rearrange it altogether and do away with the way it was set up.

MR. AVANT

But, you are not doing that right now? You are going to come back....

MR. CONROY

That's not in this amendment, that will be in a subsequent amendment.

MR. BOLLINGER

David, apparently the drafters of this amendment did a lot of research into all of the sections affected in Article VI. My question is this: Article VI, Section 34 deals with the Concordia Parish Port Commission, why did you all—I guess I'll ask you all because you all did the research on it—leave it out? I said the committee had left it out or the substantive committee had left it out and your amendment also leaves it out.

MR. CONROY

I will yield to anybody that can answer it....anything that deals with the original proposal; I'm not that familiar with it.

MR. REEVES

Mr. Bollinger, I was Chairman of that subcommittee. The Concordia Parish Port Commission comes under the realm of a deep-water port and it is included in our present proposal as a deep-water port; so, consequently, it didn't need to be transitionalized.

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Conroy, with regard to the sections of this item that deal with property rights and expropriations and so forth, in particular with regard to those sections, but in general with regard to all of these points, is it not true that there has been little or no examination of the constitutionality under the new constitution of these proposed statutes?

MR. CONROY

You're speaking of the parts of the constitution? The parts of the 1921 Constitution that are being continued as statutes?

MR. JENKINS

Yea.

MR. CONROY

Are you asking about those?

MR. JENKINS

The constitutionality under the new constitution.

MR. CONROY

Mr. Jenkins, I wouldn't be in a position to answer that question. I, personally, have not done that research, but I have gone over a great deal of material that the chairman of this committee put together. I think that a great deal more time could have been spent on the project. But, I think considering the time limitations and everything else, they have assembled a great deal of data. If you have any specific questions about it, I'll yield to Mrs. Zervigon to answer those questions.

MR. JENKINS

My point is that the listing of these sections here is not to be interpreted by the courts; it is not our intent to vouch for their constitutionality under the new constitution whatsoever.

MR. CONROY

No, no. As a matter of fact, the Section 1 that's been adopted I think clarifies the intent with regard to these sections. I think, Mr. Jenkins, in further response to that question I would have to refer to another one of the amendments in this series which is designed to delete Paragraphs (B) and (C) on the next page and more or less make it clear that a great deal may still have to be done with regard to straightening out the statutes, straightening these parts of the constitution that are carried into the statutes and reviewing them for possible deletions, and additions, and so forth. These are the ones that stood out based on the reports back from the substantive committees. All that this committee, as I would understand it from talking to the chairman of the committee, the only function of this committee was to get data fed into it from the substantive committees and then to compile this chart; then, we compile it and review it as we've done today.

MR. JENKINS

One more point for the record and particularly with regard to property rights. The Bill of Rights Committee did not examine these sections with regard to property rights even though it was assigned these provisions in the old constitution.

MR. CONROY

I see.

MR. JENKINS

So, I do want to further ask you, for the record, no court should interpret the inclusion in this document of these old provisions of the constitution as any statement on our behalf that we believe these to be consistent with the new constitution.

MR. CONROY

I think that's correct. As a matter of fact, I think that anybody examining these would have to take them with the full understanding that we have put them in a section where we've said to the extent they are not consistent, they won't be effective. I think that's the whole purpose of the format that this committee has used.

MR. FLORY

Mr. Conroy, let me see if I'm following you correctly. When you mentioned earlier about deleting on page 4, lines 2 through 9, and that those things that are required a two-thirds vote of the legislature to change, etc. Now, when you add, for example, in this amendment [Section] 23 and 23.1, I believe which is contained in that on lines 2 through 9...

MR. CONROY

Yea.

MR. FLORY

All right. By what vehicle do you then intend to require the two-thirds vote, by a later amendment?

MR. CONROY

No, to the extent that the body of this constitution requires a two-thirds vote to change any provisions of a statute that would be applicable to these statutes as well by virtue of Section 1 of this part as we have adopted it so that it would operate automatically insofar as the body of the constitution requires a two-thirds vote, it would apply to those parts of these statutes.

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

MR. FLORY

I don't apologize; but, I don't follow your statement there, Mr. Conroy, in regards to Section 1. I don't find where we have provided for the required vote of the legislature.

MR. CONROY

We've provided that in the main part of the constitution that we have adopted here, the Constitution of '74.

MR. AVANT

Mr. Conroy, you have also, in fact, required it in this very section; have you not when you say "subject to change by law or as otherwise provided in this constitution"? Then, it says the provision somewhere else in the constitution says it can be only by a two-thirds vote; that's what that "as otherwise provided in this constitution"?

MR. CONROY

Well, both would have that effect because "as by law" would have to be read in conjunction with the earlier part of the constitution which says certain things can only be by law enacted by a two-thirds vote.

MR. AVANT

And, then--just for the record--in line with what Mr. Jenkins was asking you, the language "and except as any of them conflict with this constitution" is intended to mean and does mean that if any of these provisions that we are making into statutes are contrary to any provision in the first thirteen articles of this constitution, then they are void; isn't that right?

MR. CONROY

Positively, Mr. Avant, and we've recited it as clearly as we felt we could.

MR. TATE

My question is along the same lines, a kind of friendly clarifying question. In other words, Mr. Conroy, when these things are transposed to the statutes then to amend them will require the constitutional two-thirds where appropriate just as the present, for instance, the taxes that just appear in the statutes of the taxes so much, but it takes a two-thirds vote to change it. So, it will be no problem to administer; is that right, Mr. Conroy?

MR. CONROY

I would hope not; that's right, no, that's correct; that's the intent.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted without objection.]

MR. POYNTER

Item No. 3 applies to Article VI-A and as you can tell on page 2 of your enumeration prepared for you by the staff, deals with Section 1, Paragraph 8, [Section] 1, Paragraph 9....I'm sorry, Sections 1 through 14, except any dedications therein contained, Sections 1 through 14--that's additional motor fuel tax; dealer's liability; importer's payment of tax; disposition of collections, purpose and intent; supervisor of public accounts and his powers and duties; penalties for delinquency; failure to report; falsification; cost and receipts; enforcement expenses; self-operative provision; exemptions; retirement.

I don't have any amendments to Item No. 3.

Item No. 4 contains various sections contained in Article VII and particularly those enumerated sections there. Unless someone wants me to run through these, these are enumerated on pages 3 and 4 and the beginning of 5 of the staff report.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The Dennis amendment has had to be altered. It has the effect of our adding Sections 7 and 9.

On page 3, line 16,--it's been revised since it's been passed out--strike out the number and punctuation "8," and insert in lieu thereof: "7, 8, 9".

[3478]

Explanation

MR. DENNIS

Mr. Acting Chairman, fellow delegates, this amendment places in this section and continues as statutes two provisions of the present constitution, Section 7 of Article VII which spells out the expiration dates of the justices of the Supreme Courts terms and Section 9 which spells out the districts of the Supreme Court justices. This...The Judiciary Committee recommended that these be continued in statute and the Transitional Committee in its first draft, I believe, did place it in there. But, for some reason I think there was some mix-up, I think at one point they were going to place some material in a two-thirds vote category instead of plain statutory and some way or another these two sections got left out; so, we are asking that you put these back in because they would be a hiatus; there would not be any law saying when these justices' terms expired or what their districts were. The legislature could, of course, repair that, but we feel that this should be continued as statute until it is changed by the legislature.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Questions

MR. BOLLINGER

Judge Dennis, I was wondering why you all had included Section 21, the courts of appeal and then decided the number of judges when we took care of that in the constitution and enumerated how many districts and terms of represented judges; yet, you adopted a provision in the 1921 statute which will be in conflict with the proposed constitution. Why was this recommended that we carry it over?

MR. DENNIS

Section 21? Well, Section 21 spells out the districts within the courts of appeal and says what parishes are covered; it says what parishes are in each circuit, which parishes are in each district from which a judge is elected, etc., etc. Now, this can be changed by a two-thirds vote of the legislature under the new constitution. But, in order to avoid a gap, we want to continue this in statutory law so that the legislature will not have to act in haste to fill in this gap.

MR. TATE

Well, in other words, Judge Dennis, we continued the existing districts but didn't specify them in the constitution so as to avoid having a constitutional amendment every time or to avoid having in the constitution parishes that could be taken out by a two-thirds vote. So, in other words, however, on repealing the former districts since they were nowhere else in the statute, this will provide the vehicle to transfer into the statutes those districts which from now on could be changed by the legislature by a two-thirds vote; is that right, Judge Dennis?

MR. DENNIS

Yes. In short, Judge, we are continuing the districts in statute and not in the constitution.

MR. POYNTER

Item No. 5 deals with Article IX, contains a single section--being Section 4 of said Article IX--which deals with the Judiciary Commission, would remove the involuntary retirement of judges and justices.

MR. AVANT

Judge Dennis, we've got a provision in the proposed constitution about the Judiciary Commission....I don't know if he's listening.

MR. DENNIS

Mr. Avant, I believe the answer to your question is that...

MR. AVANT

How're you going to answer my question, Jim, when I ain't asked it yet?

MR. DENNIS

Go ahead and ask it.

MR. AVANT

I say we've got a provision in the proposed constitution about the Judiciary Commission; we've got a provision in this thing about how you're going to get the extra people on there; so what is there in the old constitution to continue the statute?

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

MR. DENNIS

Mr. Avant, there are some sections in old Article IX, Section 4, which spell out the procedure under which the commission operates, that we did not put in the new constitution; so we're continuing this whole thing as statutory material. Of course, the part of it that's inconsistent will be ruled out by the new constitution, but there will be left a little piece of it as procedural.

MR. POYNTER

Item No. 6 deals with various provisions of Article X of the 1921 Constitution, particularly Section 1(8), 1(9), 2; Section 2 (1), 2(2), 6, 10(A), 15, and 23.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Conroy, Perez, Zervigon, Kean, and many others send up amendments. These amendments have been distributed. Conroy amendments affecting Item No. 6 would simply read:

"Article X, Sections 1, 2, 6, 7, 9, 10(A), 15, 16, and 23; except any dedications contained therein."

Explanation

MR. CONROY

In line with what has been done previously, this amendment does two things. The first thing it does is with regard to Sections 1 and 2. Instead of referring to nonexistent subparagraphs, it just refers to the whole sections. In other words, there is no Paragraph 8. There are a number of paragraphs in Section 1. There are no Paragraphs 1 and 2 in Section 2, although it is in fact in two paragraphs. Again, in line with the theory that anything that's adopted here that's inconsistent with this constitution would be inoperative, it was felt that it'd be clearer, again--rather than making references to paragraphs which didn't exist--simply to refer to Sections 1 and 2. The other change is to bring up, from Paragraph 15, references to Sections 7, 9, and 16. Those are the only changes in this paragraph other than correcting the punctuation on Section 10(A). I'd be happy to yield to any questions.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

MR. POYNTER

Item No. 7 deals with present constitutional Article X-A and, in particular, Section 3 and Section 4, the first of which is paying the confederate pensions from the general fund; Section 4--annual payment to L.S.U.

Questions

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman, if I'm not mistaken, those were the dedications of the five and three-quarter mill tax. Since that has been repealed, I'm just wondering why it is necessary to transfer that over to the...

MS. ZERVIGON

Senator De Blieux, if you can wait for just a second, we're going to see who recommended that.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Ms. Zervigon, did you know I have an old lady in my district who told me that she was one of the few remaining people who still gets a pension under the Confederate Widows Act?

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Velazquez, I knew you had an old lady in your district.

MR. CASEY

Do you all want to pass over that, Ms. Zervigon? Is that it? Do you want to go to Item No. 8?

MS. ZERVIGON

Senator De Blieux, have you strong objection?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Ms. Zervigon, I don't have any objection to it. I have checked into it. So, that just means that those funds previously paid out of that five and three-quarter mill tax are paid out of the general fund. That's all it provided for. That's the only purpose. I just asked the question: Why continue it when we no longer have that? Of course, I guess it's necessary in the sense we made a dedication from the general fund for those two until the legislature takes care of it.

MR. POYNTER

Item No. 8 deals with provisions of present constitutional Article XII, which, of course, deals with education. In particular, it retains Sections 18, 19 through 22, 25, and 26--those dealing respective of Sixteenth Section lands, free school funds. There is a seminary fund, an agricultural and mechanical college fund. Section 22 deals with separation or segregation of funds; [Section] 25, with the metropolitan branch of L.S.U.; [Section] 26, with the New Orleans' branch of Southern University and Agricultural and Mechanical College.

Item No. 9 deals with constitutional provisions relating to Article XIV. Of course, [Article] XIV is the Local Government Article. They're very lengthy. They contain, in your sheet from the staff, pages 6, 7, and 8--mostly, of 8. Set forth various things--io particular, commissions, special taxes that have been established, presently, under that article.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Yes, there is one amendment---copies have been distributed---which is sent up by Delegates Conroy, Perez, Zervigon, Kean, Jenkins, Casey, Lanier, and others.

Amendment No. 1. On page 3, line 25, after the number and punctuation "21," and before "23" delete the number and punctuation "22(A)"--which, as you can see on page 6, deals with the Vieux Carre Commission.

Explanation

MR. CONROY

It was felt, in view of the wording of the body of the constitution, it would be inappropriate to continue this forward as a statute; therefore, it was considered best...Mr. Derbes was consulted about this, and he thought it was more appropriate simply to delete reference to it at this point.

Questions

MR. TOBIAS

David, I'm reading the amendment, and it says: delete the number and punctuation "22(A)". You forgot to put the comma inside the quotation marks.

MR. CONROY

I hope you'll watch that in Style and Drafting, Mr. Tobias.

MR. POYNTER

We'll just kind of withdraw and put it back so we won't have to make a style and drafting amendment, if that's all right, Mr. Conroy.

MR. CONROY

O. K. You want to take out a comma; is that it?

[Amendment withdrawn and resubmitted with correction. Amendment adopted without objection.]

MR. POYNTER

Next item is Item No. 10, which deals with the provisions of the present Article XV, and that's set out on your memo--on page 8 of that memo. In particular, it deals with Sections 1, 3, and 4: drainage district authorizations, the Bayou Lafourche Fresh-Water District, and the Lake Water Conservation District.

Item No. 11 deals with present constitutional Article XVI; would retain Sections 1, 4, 6, 7, 8, and 8(A), which deal with levee system, general maintenance, state tax; 4, interstate districts; 6, compensation, property used or destroyed; 7, the Orleans Levee District; 8, Pontchartrain Levee District; 8(A), Pontchartrain Levee District additional bond issue.

Item No. 11 deals...We're on Item... You're correct, Mr. Vice-Chairman; we're on Article XVI, dealing with levee districts. Again, we have no amendments on that item, being Item No. 11 dealing with.....

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

MR. POYNTER

Next item is Item No. 12, which deals with provisions of Article XVIII--in particular, Sections 3 and 4, dealing with the adjutant general and preservation of records, banners, and relics respectively.

No amendments, Mr. Vice-Chairman.

The next item is Item No. 13, dealing with two provisions of present Article XVIII of the constitution, dealing with [Section] 4--civil war; memorial hall for relics; battlefield markers; and the like--and [Section] 8, with the Confederate Memorial Medical Center; correctional and charitable and penal institutions; bonds and taxes.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The amendment is sent up by Mr. Conroy, Perez, Zervigon, Kean, Jenkins, Casey, and others. Amendment reads as follows: "Item No. 13. Article XVIII, Sections 4, 8, and 13".

Explanation

MR. CONROY

The only purpose of this amendment is to add Section 13 of Article XVIII to the list. This section deals with Viet Nam bonus bonds, and it was felt that there was some statutory material in there that had to be retained until all those bonuses that are provided by that section could be paid.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

MR. POYNTER

Item No. 14 deals with present Article XIX and retains Provisions 6, 18, 19, 19(A), 20, and 27. These deal: 6, performance of duties until successor elected; the police power under 18; 19 dealing with immovable property, recordation of mortgages, and the like; 19(A)--I'm not sure what that is. Is that a paragraph, Mr. Conroy, or is that another section?

MR. CONROY

It's a separate section. There is a 19(A) in my copy.

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Conroy says that deals with prescription on the tidelands area; and then 20, dealing with the New Basin Canal, Shell Road, and New Orleans Union Railroad passenger facility.

Questions

MR. AVANT

Mr. Conroy, I see that the committee recommends transferring Article XIX, Section 18, of the present constitution into the statutes.

MR. CONROY

It's pretty tough to answer his question because there are some of us up here who had exactly the same question with regard to whether Article XIX, Section 18, belonged in here. However, it was recommended, as I understand it, by the Executive Branch Committee. If they don't have any reason why they want this continued in there, I think that it would be appropriate to submit an amendment to delete 18.

MR. AVANT

I just wanted to know what the reason was.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Delegate Perez has sent up amendment:

On page 4, line 1, immediately after "Section 6," strike out "18,"

Explanation

MR. PEREZ

In line with the suggestion, the police power's been deleted quietly taken care of in Bill of Rights and should have been deleted and, apparently, was recommended by some committee that it stay in; but I now move that it be deleted and move the question.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

Item No. 15 is set out on pages 9 and 10. These are two-thirds provisions, and Mr. Conroy will explain it. Item No. 15--it's set out in the memo on 9 and 10.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Conroy sends up an amendment which reads as follows:

On page 4, delete lines 2 through 9, both inclusive, in their entirety.

Explanation

MR. CONROY

As previously explained, the purpose of this amendment is to delete those things which have been moved up above, and have been moved up above by amendment, into the other listing. It also deletes--as Mr. Avant had an amendment to delete the reference to Article XIV, Section 15.1. In other cases, they were just duplications down below, as I recall.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

That completes the amendment and items in Paragraph A; however, Miss Perkins was nice enough--she withdrew her previous amendment, which would have inserted new items, earlier and has an amendment... Has this been passed out? This amendment was passed out earlier--Miss Perkins' amendment passed out earlier. Now, we're going to change the instructions; and, rather than coming in at various places in here, she'd just now make them Items Nos. 16 and 17. It was contained in her Amendments Nos. 1 and 3 of her previous amendment. If you'll look at the Perkins amendments--old Amendments Nos. 1 and 3--that's what she'll be presenting, save for the fact that we're making them now Items Nos. 16 and 17 as opposed to whatever they were where she had previously inserted them. I'll read it.

Amendment No. 1....

Now, I believe the retyped version of the Perkins amendments has been passed out. Mr. Bollinger, you got a copy of it? O. K. Good. Amendments will read as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 4, between lines 9 and 10, insert the following: --and since we deleted 15, let's make that 15-- "Item No. 15. Article IV, Sections 2(C), 12(B), and 12(C)."

Amendment No. 2. On page 4, between lines 9 and 10, insert the following: "Item No. 16. Article XIII, Section 6."

Explanation

MISS PERKINS

Basically, these amendments are additional transitional measures of the Natural Resources Committee. Section 2(C) refers to mineral revenues: that is, the payment into the general fund--highway fund--after deductions for dedications, as well as expenses of the Mineral Board. [Section] 12(B) refers to the State Market Commission's power to guarantee loans. [Section] 12(C) refers to the commissioner of agriculture's authority to guarantee loans of youth. Some of this material is contained in the statutes; but, since it was deleted from the constitution and we weren't sure everything currently in the statutes was covered, we went on and suggested and we recommend that these be handled through transitional measures. Section 17, Article VIII, Section 6, refers to canal and hydroelectric development and use of waters and state ownership in the coastal areas. This, again, we weren't sure was covered; therefore, suggested it be handled through transitional measures. I'll answer any questions.

Question

MR. JENKINS

I have several questions. Lynn, one: your Article IV, Section 2(C), deals with the dedication of twelve and a half million dollars to the highway fund. Now, we tried to do away with dedications in general. Shouldn't we leave this to the legislature and let them act on it, without going ahead and putting it into the law and making them come back and repeal it?

MISS PERKINS

Not necessarily. First of all, the legislature can come back and change this. This is strictly a transitional measure between now and the effective date of the constitution. Since we had deleted it, we felt that it should be covered in transitional measures. In other words, I don't think that would be a limitation. You can go back with reference to the amount specified.

Further Discussion

MR. BOLLINGER

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise in favor of Amendment No. 1, but opposed to Amendment No. 2. Article XIII, Section 6, deals with canal and hydroelectric developments, use of state waters, and state ownership. The provision mainly deals with a provision saying that, if canals are dug for hydroelectric plants, that after seventy years the waterways will become the property of the state, as well as the plants. My main reason for opposing this is that it's obsolete. Louisiana's terrain doesn't provide for any hydroelectric plants, and I don't think it ever will. If it ever did, I don't see why we should have a statute saying that after seventy years the plant ownership, reverts to the state. I opposed this in committee, but was overridden; and I think it should not be a schedule provision; it should not be a statute. Nothing in this constitution would prevent a statute from being reenacted if all the proper committee hearings were had and the legislature felt the need to do so. So, I move the adoption of Amendment No. 1 and the rejection of Amendment No. 2.

Motion

MISS PERKINS

Mr. Chairman, I'd like to move to suspend the rules in order to withdraw Amendment No. 2.

[Motion to suspend the rules adopted without objection. Amendment No. 2 withdrawn. Amendment No. 1 adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Just read the amendment? Mr. Conroy, Perez, Zervigon, Kean, Jenkins, and others send up amendments which read as follows: Amendment No. 1. On page 4, delete lines 10 through 16, both inclusive, in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "(B) Arrangement. The provisions made statutory in this Article shall be arranged in proper statutory form and recommendations made for additional laws and modifications as provided in R.S.24:201 through 256, or as otherwise provided by law."

Explanation

MR. CONROY

This amendment does two basic things: one, it removes the Paragraph (B) --the former Paragraph (B) regarding judicial review because it was felt that it was really unnecessary and perhaps somewhat confusing to refer to judicial review. Obviously, that is the last source on which problems can be resolved, and it was unnecessary to say that. As far as (C), we felt (C) was a little bit restricting because there are presently statutory provisions regarding how statutes can be arranged by the Louisiana State Law Institute. Those statutes also ask the Louisiana Law Institute to make recommendations regarding new statutes that are needed, so it was felt that it was appropriate in this regard to suggest that those provisions be implemented. Obviously, if they are not, the legislature would have to carry out the intent of this convention as far as arrangement of these constitutional provisions which would now be statutes appropriately in the revised statutes.

Questions

MR. TOBIAS

I'm trying to save us time in Style and Drafting tonight, so we won't be here until all hours. We don't have a title for this paragraph. Would you add a title to it and withdraw the amendment?

MR. BOLLINGER

David, I hate to keep asking you questions like this, but you deviate from the committee proposal in that you refer to Revised Statutes 24:201-256, and the committee proposal does not. My question is this, if the Revised Statutes were added to and changed substantively some way the procedure for titling statutes, then this provision would rather be obsolete. What is the point in referring to the numbers in the Revised Statutes so that, if additional statutes were passed and affected this, they would not in my opinion concur with the language used in your Paragraph (B) ordinarily?

MS. ZERVIGON

Well, I'd like to answer that at least partially. What the committee had always intended to do was to make the Law Institute responsible for this numbering, not make it all take legislative act. When you read the sentence the way we wrote it, it sounds like the legislature has to do it all by act, but we didn't want to make the Law Institute a constitutional agency. So, this rewords it so that it refers to the statute that refers to the Law Institute without making the Law Institute a constitutional agency. It would only be enforced for the duration of the time that it took them to insert all of this junk in the statutes in any case, so I don't think that your objection... I don't think you'll find any objection to it when you think about it.

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Conroy does need to withdraw it, so he can reoffer it and put the paragraph title in as Mr. Tobias . . .

[Amendment withdrawn and resubmitted with correction. Amendment adopted without objection. Previous Question ordered. Section passed: 106-1. Motion to reconsider pending.]

Point of Information

MR. AVANT

Mr. Casey, to make a request that I made earlier. But, before we vote on the adoption of this proposal, finally and irrevocably, and lay it on the table, are we going to be able to see it as it is amended and as it stands? That's one thing I want to be sure of.

MR. POYNTER

You mean the entire proposal?

MR. AVANT

The entire proposal.

MR. POYNTER

There just wouldn't be any possible way to -- you know, unless you want to stay here real late to get it to you before you take the final vote. But, of course, heretofore you all haven't tabled any -- you're talking about tabling-- you all have not. . . It's got to go to Style and Drafting and come back to you and that sort of thing, and I presume you would use your usual procedure and would not table the vote by which a proposal was adopted.

MR. AVANT

Okay.

Point of Information

MR. J. JACKSON

Mr. Chairman, we still have another Part to add to the proposal, right--Part 1?

MR. POYNTER

Oh, yes, sir, Style and Drafting, that's correct. You're absolutely right.

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

Point of Information

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, I happen to know the background of Representative Jackson's question, so I want to ask this in the form of a parliamentary inquiry. If he wants to add something to this provision that would go in the Part I we outlined, he has to submit the amendment before we leave today. We'll put it back into Part I in Style and Drafting, but all the other provisions of Part I have already been adopted. Is that correct, Mr. . .

MR. CASEY

That's correct, Judge Tate. Any additions will have to be made before this proposal leaves the floor.

[Motion to waive reading of Section 10 adopted without objection.]

Chairman Henry in the Chair

MR. HENRY

Proceed, Ms. Zervigon, explain this section.

Take your seats, please, gentlemen. I'll ask that you folks in the back -- I ask that you people have your seats. Several of you have asked about what the schedule was going to be-- or the work schedule-- we have a lot of work to do and we're probably going to be here late tonight unless you all just revolt. I hate to, but this is the last day we've got with the exception of tomorrow, and I've got a feeling that everybody is going to be wanting to get home as soon as we can tomorrow. Since this is just the last night let's lay with it and don't let the attendance fall off too severely, please. We'll go ahead and try to wrap up everything that we possibly can tonight.

All right, Ms. Zervigon, if you will.

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman, did you say we're going to stay here until the delegates are revolting?

MR. HENRY

No ma'am, I've never called these delegates revolting. That was just something that somebody else said. Proceed.

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman, we've waived the reading of Section 10 because we have an amendment that changes it considerably. I would request that that amendment be read and explain that.

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

All right. The amendment will read as follows-- there are a set of three amendments sent up by Delegates Perez, Zervigon, Kean and others-- set of three amendments -- beginning:

Amendment No. 1. On page 4, line 18, after the word "as" and before the word "retained" insert the following: "provided in this Article and except as".

Amendment No. 2. On page 4, line 19, after the word and punctuation, "constitution," and before the word "provisions" delete the words "all other" and insert in lieu thereof the word "the".

Amendment No. 3. On page 4, line 20 immediately after the word "repealed" change the comma "," to a period "." and delete the remainder of the line and delete lines 21 through 25, both inclusive, in their entirety.

Explanation

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman, this explains what happens to everything else. In Section 9, which we've just finished, we've continued a lot of sections as statutes. It's apparent that there's a lot of other stuff that's not covered in the revision that we've made of the constitution that we haven't transposed into the statutes. What happens to that? We are repealing it. The "except as otherwise provided" in this article-- I believe that it's phrased-- refers to the things retained as statutes in the paragraph immediately above in Section 9. We have to make sure that those are exceptions. So, Mr. Clerk, would you read the section as it would now stand?

[Reading of the Section with proposed Amendment.]

MR. POYNTER

Yes. If your amendment was adopted--if the Zervigon-Perez amendment is adopted--Section 10 would read as follows: "Section 10. Except as provided in this Article and except as retained in Articles I through XIII of this constitution, the provisions of the Constitution of 1921 are repealed."

MS. ZERVIGON

I'll yield to any questions, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

MR. JENKINS

Ms. Zervigon, when we discussed this matter in the meeting we had at noon, I don't believe there was any discussion of that exception for the provisions of this article, was there?

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Jenkins, I really don't remember. Mr. Perez and I discussed it quite a number of days ago. The purpose of it is to retain as statutes those things we just said were retained as statutes in Section 9.

MR. JENKINS

My understanding was that except as provided in Articles I through III all other provisions of this constitution were to be repealed so that they were no longer a part of the constitution of the state. Now, where we have expressly otherwise provided that they'll be continued as statutes they are, nevertheless, repealed insofar as this constitution is concerned, was that not our understanding?

MS. ZERVIGON

Well, Mr. Jenkins, they repealed this section of the constitution, but not repealed and gone bye bye you might say-- they're continued in effect. So we had to make provisions for the effect of them. Now, the question is on the definition of the word "repeal"? What we wanted to make certain was that it was perfectly clear that while they were repealed as constitutional provisions, they did not go out of effect.

MR. JENKINS

So, then your intention is that unless a provision has been particularly retained from the 1921 Constitution then it is repealed as a part of the constitution of this state although it may be retained as a statute. That is your intention, is that correct?

MS. ZERVIGON

Well, except for the other exceptions, those retained in Articles I through XIII of this Constitution.

MR. JENKINS

But, those have been specifically referred to in those articles, have they not?

MS. ZERVIGON

That's right, I wasn't sure you had made that exception. I thought you were speaking only of Section 9 above. Yes, that's the intention of the committee.

MR. TOBIAS

Mary, in the first amendment you do mean "Article" and not "Part"?

MS. ZERVIGON

Yes, we do, because if you'll remember there's the split session of the legislature. There are certain mentions of boards, agencies and things like that.

MR. FLORY

Ms. Zervigon, could you really tell me what the necessity of Amendments No. 1 and 2 are, inasmuch as . . . in light of the discussion in the committee at noon? I really don't see any need for it. What worries me is the division of this article in Parts I, II and III.

MS. ZERVIGON

This was at the suggestion of Mr. Perez much earlier, and I'm going to yield to Mr. Perez to answer your question.

MR. PEREZ

The very obvious reason for putting "except as provided" in this article, the provisions of this constitution are repealed. When you repeal something it is "doid", dead, dead and you've got, when you continue it as statutory material, you have to put the exception in. So what we mean by the words "except as provided in this article" we are referring back to Section 9 which says we're continuing these things in effect as statutes. If you don't say that then you have an inconsistency between Section 9 and other sections which say these things continue in effect, and Section 10 which would say that all of this is repealed, and the other sections as well.

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

MR. FLORY

Mr. Perez, that's exactly what bothers me because it was my understanding that what you were talking about here being repealed was constitutional provisions, not things that we're talking about transferring to the statutes, and when you say-- let me finish-- it was my understanding at noon that what we were talking about Parts I and III would be in effect-- parts of the new constitution--whereas Part II would be subject to Section 1, and would be transitional measures.

MR. PEREZ

The word "repeal" means that it is completely, entirely, and totally done away with, and to the extent that these are continued in Section 9 and in other sections of the constitution we do not repeal them. That's why all you have is "as except as provided in this article," and then you go back to the other part of the articles and it tells you what you do with them. But, if you do not put the exception, then you totally, completely do away with those sections.

MR. FLORY

Well, I thought that was what we wanted to do is to do away with them as constitutional provisions, but by the Part II lift them and carry them to the statutes and make them statutory material, but what you're doing here is continuing them as constitutional provisions.

MR. PEREZ

No, we're not. All we're saying is "except as provided in this article." Then, when you go into the various parts of the article it says, for instance, in Section 9 that "these are continued as statutes;" it says with regard to the property tax that it continues for a certain . . . for a three year period. So that if you had a . . . it's just a flat statement just saying "except as retained in Article I through XIII of this Constitution, all other provisions of the Constitution of '21 are repealed." Then what you're saying is that everything else we've said here means nothing, so what you're saying is that when you use the word "repeal" --repeal means that you're absolutely, totally, completely, doing away with these provisions. That's the whole purpose of the schedule is to retain these provisions in some form.

MR. FLORY

Wouldn't it be better though to say that "except as provided in Parts I and III of this Article?"

MR. PEREZ

No, because in Part II you are retaining as statutory material all of these varied details we have gone through. If you don't say "except as provided" throughout the entire article, then what you're doing is saying that all of these provisions are dead; and we've just gone through the lengthy process of saying that these things shall continue in effect as statutory material. If you say they're repealed, they're repealed; they're dead; they're finished; they're gone; and we've got to make an exception for that.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Yes, sir.

The only amendment that's been changed is Amendment No. 1, which reads, as corrected.

On page 4, line 18, after the word "Except" and before the word "as" insert the following: " to the extent provided in this Article and except", so it would read: "Except to the extent provided in this Article and except as retained in Article I through XIII of this Constitution the provisions of the Constitution of 1921 are repealed."

Explanation

MR. PEREZ

I just hope now that we've straightened the language out to satisfy just about everybody. I would move the adoption of the amendment.

[Amendment adopted without objection. Previous Question ordered. Section passed: 91-1. Motion to reconsider pending.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

"Section 11. Existing Laws
Section 11. (A) . . .

[Motion to waive reading of the Section adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman and delegates, as above in Section 10, we have amendments which change this considerably. The result of which will be that with some drafting changes Section (A) stands relatively unchanged, but, the major change will be that in Section (B) the final sentence will be deleted. In every schedule provision . . . in every constitution that I've read the schedule provisions-- there is a provision for what happens to existing law because of the question that's been raised earlier in discussion as to whether the government under the new constitution is an entirely new government. What we've done is retain the old law to the extent that it is not in conflict with this constitution. We've retained it so that it can be repealed or altered or it can expire by its own limitation. In other words, it's not our intention to incorporate it by reference into the constitution and provided that inconsistent laws shall cease upon the effective date of this constitution.

Questions

MR. JENKINS

I'd just like for you to take my name off this amendment because these amendments keep coming up not in the form that we agreed to in our discussions earlier.

MR. HENRY

Scratch Jenkins on the amendment.
Are there any further questions?

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman, as a point of clarification because I don't think there's any evil intent involved, we didn't really agree to a precise form; we agree to concepts and if . . . when you go to put a concept in words, of course, you always run into trouble as whether the words mean the same thing to me as they mean to you. So, I have no objection to Mr. Jenkins removing his name. It's just that we really didn't agree to a precise form and, therefore, I don't think that we're renegeing on any agreement, as such.

[Section read with proposed amendment.]

MR. POYNTER

Okay. It would read with the four sets of amendments-- Ms. Zervigon you might follow me, I think I've got them all-- as follows:

"Section 11. (A) Retention. Laws in force on the effective date of this constitution, which were constitutional when enacted and are not in conflict with this constitution, shall remain in effect until altered or repealed or--pick up on line 31-- until altered or repealed or until they expire by their own limitation.

(B) Expiration of Inconsistent Laws. Laws which are in conflict with this constitution shall cease upon its effective date."

MS. ZERVIGON

By way of explanation, let me say that I had no idea what an unclear word "inconsistent" was until we began to discuss it. We decided that "in conflict" was a much clearer, more crystalized way of saying what it was we wanted to say. In addition to that, because of changes we've made in the constitution, the laws that are in effect may be repealed in some way other than by the authority which enacted them. Then, in addition to that, you see we've changed "inconsistent" and deleted the last sentence as I pointed out before. This language was taken from the project and there is similar language in most schedules.

Questions

MR. ABRAHAM

Mary, I understand that the purpose of the last sentence in Paragraph (B) was sort of a grace period, so that if a law is in conflict, it would give the legislature time to repeal it, or amend it, or whatever may need to be done. You don't foresee any problem here if you do not have a grace period?

MS. ZERVIGON

We have a delayed effective date. We feel certain that there will be legislative sessions in between now and then. The point of it in the project was that if there needed to be enabling legislation for any section of the new constitution and there was already a law on the books but it was in conflict with the new constitution, this would continue them. Mack, as you think about it, you can see that that's a very confusing thing as to how they could be proper enabling legislation for the new constitution and at the same time in conflict. We just decided that rather than try and have the courts figure out exactly what it meant we would delete it. I think I would venture to guess that the scheduled provisions of the project weren't written with the same care as the rest of the project. It's when you are starting an effective date in the face and begin to think exactly what's going to happen to each and every section of the old constitution and each and every old law that you begin to be very, very careful with your words in this area.

MR. FLORY

Ms. Zervigon, would you be kind enough to give me the definition of the word "inconsistent" and then tell me what difference there is in the words "in conflict with"?

MS. ZERVIGON

I'm not. . . it's not the intention of the authors of this amendment to make any real change. It's just that I think, what "in conflict" does as opposed to "inconsistent" makes it in direct conflict with something that's stated, rather than just generally inconsistent with something that might be implied. For example, as we came to sections of the old constitution that says, "the legislature shall enact the following laws," if we retained laws that were old laws that had been enacted in the past tense where "shall" is a future tense verb, that might be considered inconsistent with that segment in the constitution, but it's certainly not in conflict with it in that it's not the intention of the law on the books to overturn that provision of the constitution.

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Chairman, I believe they are going to want to withdraw it. They overlooked changing the title of Paragraph (B), and I think the lady and gentleman would like to withdraw this amendment and offer another one so that they could correct that at this time.

MR. PEREZ

Only for the purpose of deleting the word "inconsistent" and inserting in lieu thereof, the word, "conflicting," so the title would read "Expiration of Conflicting Law."

[Amendment withdrawn and resubmitted with correction.]

[Amendment adopted without objection. Previous Question ordered. Section passed: 96-1. Motion to reconsider pending.]

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER

"Section 16. Ports; Transition to Statutes
Section 16. All provisions of Article VI, Sections 16, 16.1, 16.2, 16.3, 16.4, 16.5, 16.6, 17, 29, 29.1, 29.2, 29.3, 29.4, 33.1, 34 and Article XIV. . .

[Motion to waive reading of the Section adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. LANIER

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, if you refer to Section 50 of Local Government as originally enrolled, I think it's now Section 44 on the final enrollment--I'm not positive about that number--you'll notice that with reference to the deep-water ports we provided that they were ratified and confirmed, that the legislature could change their powers and jurisdiction and things like that with a two-thirds vote. However, as part of a compromise on this article, in Sub-section (C), we provided as follows: "The legislature shall make provisions with respect to the membership of the herein provided commissions." Once the membership is established, it may be changed only upon a two-thirds vote of the elected members of each house of the legislature. So, in other words, with reference to these deep-water ports, you have two ways of modifying them after they are transposed into the statutes. With reference to the initial change of the membership, it's by a majority vote; thereafter, with reference to membership and all other aspects of ports, it's by a two-thirds vote. For this reason, we felt that we needed a special transitional provision to key somebody into this position that we have taken with reference to the deep-water ports. So, we have specifically provided in here that they are subject to amendment or repeal only as provided in this specific article which requires a two-thirds vote on everything except the initial reorganization of the board. That way, somebody going through this transitional schedule would know that this is not the ordinary type of statute that you have to look to this particular provision to determine the manner in which it can be changed by the legislature. We felt that this was necessary for this particular section because we did have a combination procedure here where two different types of votes of the legislature were required.

If there are any questions, I'll be happy to try and answer them, Mr. Chairman. If there are none, Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of the section.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

We have an amendment coming in sent up by Mr. Jenkins, Casey, et al, to add between lines 15 and 16 immediately prior to this period of time, "Part II". . . between lines 23 and 24.

On page 6, between lines 23 and 24, insert "Part II".

Explanation

MRS. ZERVIGON

This is as we have been doing before, sticking in the reference to what part of the schedule it will be in. This keeps these sections--this section and the couple succeeding it--subject to the other articles of the constitution pursuant to Section 1, which was the first thing that we adopted today.

Yield to any questions, Mr. Chairman.

[Amendment adopted without objection. Previous Question ordered. Section passed: 100-0. Motion to reconsider pending. Motion to waive reading of Section 17 adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Chairman, the Local Government Committee had recommended that this section be in here in an abundance of caution. We've now, in conference with other delegates, decided that it's really unnecessary, as the charters being ratified in the Local Government Article implies, certainly, that the communities that have those home rule charters have the authority to have those home rule charters. Therefore, we have no objection to the amendment to delete.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Avant and Gravel send up the following amendment:
Amendment No. 1. On page 6, delete lines 31 and 32 in their entirety and on page 7, delete lines 1 through 4, both inclusive, in their entirety.

Explanation

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this amendment, as Mrs.

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

Zervigon stated, simply deletes Section 17 from this proposal, completely and in its entirety. There is no objection to it, as I understand it. So, I ask your favorable vote on the amendment.
Move the previous question.

passed: 98-0. Motion to reconsider pending.]

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted without objection.]

MR. POYNTER
That deletes the section, Mr. Chairman.
We can go on, I believe.

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER
Section 18. I might point out at this time there will be an amendment coming up--Mr. Perez, I guess will handle it--to make this "Part III."

"Section 18. Public Service Commission
Section 18. At its next extraordinary or regular session, the legislature shall divide the state into five single-member districts as required by Article VIII, Section 14 (A) and shall provide for a special election at which the two additional members of the commission shall be elected, the initial term to be served by each, and other matters necessary to effectuate said Section 14 (A)."

Explanation

MRS. ZERVIGON
Mr. Chairman and delegates, as you will recall, we've expanded the membership of the Public Service Commission from three members to five members. This just specifies how you get there from here, which is that the legislature shall provide it in its next extraordinary or regular session."
I yield to any questions.

Questions

MR. ABRAHAM
Since the style and drafting and since the vote of the convention where the Public Service Commission will be in the Executive Branch, I just wanted to point out, is that going to stay in--that particular article--or is it going to have a different article number? Will it stay in Article VIII or it will go back to Article IV, or where?

MRS. ZERVIGON
This has nothing to do with that, as I understand it, Mr. Abraham.
Excuse me; in answer to Mr. Abraham's question, Style and Drafting will change the article number if the reference is wrong. But, I think that it's clear that our intention is to refer to the Public Service Commission. Thank you.

MR. FLORY
Mrs. Zervigon, it's been called to my attention, perhaps it. . . On line 9 where we say, "provide for a special election," could a regular election. . . could they. . . if there was a regular election after the effective date of this which would coincide with the reapportionment of the public service district, could it be held at that time, or should we say "shall provide for the election at which"?

MRS. ZERVIGON
Well, Mr. Flory, the reason that word was used was because for these two members it will be a special election in that they won't serve--more than likely won't serve--the full terms, in order to keep the membership of the board with overlapping terms. But, the special election could be called at the same time, on the same date, in the same polling places that a regular election is held.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER
We have an amendment which makes this "Part III."
On page 17, between lines 12 and 13, insert the following:
"PART III".

[Amendment adopted without objection.
Previous Question ordered. Section

Reading of the Section

MR. POYNTER
Section 23, sent up, reads as follows:
"Section 23. Suits Against the State; Effective Date
Section 23. The provisions of Article III, Section 14 waiving the immunity of the state, its agencies, or political subdivisions from suit and liability in contract or for injury to person or property only shall apply to a cause of action arising after the effective date of this constitution."

[Motion to waive reading of the Section adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MRS. ZERVIGON
You will remember that after the considerable discussion over the several days when we were on the Legislative Article, we changed the procedure for suit against the state to the extent that we said the legislature shall provide for an act that would provide a uniform method for suit against the state rather than each person having to come and get. . .

This is just to make clear that the actions that the convention took shall apply only to cause of action arising after the effective date of this constitution so that we will know exactly when the provisions of Article III, Section 14 come into effect.
Mr. Lanier will yield to any questions on this section.

[Previous Question ordered. Section passed: 96-0. Motion to reconsider pending.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER
Mr. Jackson, are you ready to go?
All right. The Johnny Jackson amendment.
On page 1, in Part 1, between lines 11 and 12, insert a new section as follows: (Mrs. Zervigon, isn't Section 26 a Part III amendment? Section 26, isn't it Part III? It's the last one. It's been deleted. What about 25? All right. I need to add that in, then. Need to add, just for clarity to Style and Drafting, Part I, here.)

"Section 27. Board of Supervisors of Southern University Section 27. At the next session of the legislature following the effective date of this constitution, the governor shall submit to the Senate for its consent the names of his appointees to the Board of Supervisors of Southern University and Agricultural and Mechanical College in accordance with and to effectuate Article IX, Section 7."

Explanation

MR. J. JACKSON
Mr. Chairman, delegates to the convention, there exists in the present constitution as it relates to other colleges, the board and the manner and the time by which the governor will appoint it is spelled out in our proposed constitution. What we are attempting to do right here is to try to kill two birds with one stone. We want to apply, and we forgot when we were amending the Education Article to provide for the transition to set the same time limits of the same provision that we had done for the Board of Supervisors for L.S.U. and the time line for the appointment to the Board of Trustees. Basically, this is a technical amendment. I talked with the Transition Committee and I've talked to the Committee on Style and Drafting, and they have no objection whatsoever.

Question

MR. NEWTON
Mr. Jackson, I just got this and I'm not familiar with it, but what would be the effect if. . . will there be a conflict if we adopt this, depending on which article of the Education Article was adopted?

MR. J. JACKSON
No. There is no conflict whatsoever, Mr. Newton. In fact, there is a similar provision in the proposed constitution that's being transferred to the transitional proposal which has basically the same language for the appointment to the L.S.U. Board of Supervisors.

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: 89-2. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous Question ordered. Section passed: 91-1. Motion to reconsider pending.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Tobias, Mr. Pugh, Derbes, Zervigon and Denny send up amendments adding a proposed new section. In this case, Mr. Tobias, we're going to have to change it to 28.

....reads as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 9,---forget the rest of the instructions---after Convention Floor Amendment No. 1 proposed by Mr. Jackson and just adopted by the convention, insert the following:

"PART III

Section 28. Effect of Adoption

Section 28. Notwithstanding any contrary provisions of law or the prior constitution, this constitution when approved in accordance with Delegate Resolution Number 52 of the Constitutional Convention established by Act 2 of 1972 of the Louisiana Legislature, as amended....."

[Motion to waive reading of the Section adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. TOBIAS

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, the purpose of this amendment is to guarantee that, first of all, the three prohibitions contained in Act 2 of 1972 which restrict us....to insure that there is nothing in the constitution that we would affect by our actions; that's the first part. Now, there's been a lot of problems.... lot of question about how the constitution would be submitted to the voters and that will be Delegate Resolution Number 52. Now, we will eventually adopt something on this matter. We don't know exactly what it contains, but this is to guarantee that anything we do in accordance with that resolution and in accordance with those prohibitions contained in Act 2, in other words, to guarantee that the constitution when ratified by the people is the Constitution of the State of Louisiana.

Questions

MR. ALEXANDER

Mr. Clerk, I'm looking at Subsection 2, line 4, is that a misprint where you say, let me see, the terms of office of the members of the legislature....or elected, or any of the appointed officials of the state, or any political subdivisions thereof shall be reduced or shortened prior to the expiration of the term; do you mean shall not be reduced or....

MR. TOBIAS

As I appreciate it, Reverend Alexander, the first sentence that says, "Nothing in this constitution shall be construed as containing any provision whereby the terms of office" etc., so it would mean not, but I want to get a copy of it. This language contained in Paragraphs 1, 2, and 3 is verbatim....should be, the prohibitions contained in Section 4 of Act 2 of 1972; we'll check that.

MR. ALEXANDER

It should be negative.

MR. TOBIAS

I believe it is, but we are going to check it right now.

MR. ALEXANDER

Well, it's not written here.

MR. TOBIAS

I believe you are correct.

It's verbatim the language of the act.

MR. O'NEILL

Max, is there any doubt that this constitution would be the constitution we have without this language?

MR. TOBIAS

I want to guarantee that it is. I also want to guarantee that the election procedures which we follow would be ratified by our actions.

MR. RAYBURN

Max, I just hurriedly read this. You just get these things, and about two minutes later, you got to vote on them. What does this do that we haven't already done; would you just tell me that? I mean we've done it; we've took care of the bonded indebtedness the way I see it; we've said you could remove no man from the office he had--even appointed, elected, or otherwise-- unless his office was abolished. I'm just trying to find out what this does that we haven't already done.

MR. TOBIAS

Well, first of all, Paragraph 3, I don't know how....although they could never remove the....it would be very difficult to move this building outside of Baton Rouge, that is one prohibition, but that's really minor. As far as Paragraph 2 is concerned, I am going to offer an amendment to this that would take care of a problem that involves what happens when an individual is, say, elected in the general election of 1974 for a four year term and he was supposed to take office on January 1, 1975. The question is, what happens to that individual? Does he take....say, we increase that office term to six years; would he take office for a six year term on January 1, 1975 or would he take office on a....for the four year term as provided under the 1921 Constitution? What I would do in the next amendment which I....to this amendment is say that he would take office for the term allowed in the 1921 Constitution, and that's the reason for this. The other reasons for putting this provision in the constitution is to guarantee that the ratification process, the submission of the constitution to the voters as contained in Delegate Resolution Number 52, which we will be considering later tonight, will be the method of ratifying the constitution and to guarantee that once ratified in accordance with Delegate Resolution Number 52 it will be the Constitution of 1974.

MR. RAYBURN

Well, does this just apply to only offices that you qualify and run for, or does it cover appointments....appointed offices? Supposing that you appoint people now for four years and you decide later on you want to make it six or you want to make it three, what's going to happen if we adopt this language?

MR. TOBIAS

This is purely a transitional measure; it would apply to all officers as far as the term; it just applies to those that, in effect, would take office after '75.

MR. RAYBURN

It says....I'm reading "any state or any of its political subdivisions." I think it could apply to a constable or a justice of peace. If the legislature wanted to give him an extra two years or take two away from him, I think it would apply to any political subdivision or state; now, maybe I'm wrong.

MR. TOBIAS

What I'm saying is that nothing in....this is a prohibition contained in Act 2 of 1972; this is verbatim the prohibition. What I am trying to do is prohibit, guarantee, so no one can ever question that we have violated the provisions of Act 2 of 1972.

MR. WILLIS

Max, reading your amendment in context it states that "nothing in this constitution shall be construed of containing any provision whereby the terms of office of any elected official"--stop here-- Now, via-a-vis the terms of district judges which were equalized, what is the effect on that?

MR. TOBIAS

A judge who would be elected...now, as it presently stands, it would be open for interpretation. I have an amendment coming to this amendment to add a short phrase; it reads "or to which elected." I added that on line 18 which would clarify that and this would be for us to decide. The point is that, as it presently stands, it is not clear what happens under which constitution the individual....how long his term would be for if elected prior to January 1, 1975.

MR. WILLIS

Well, now, do you propose that this amendment is on equal footing with the provisions in the Judiciary?

MR. TOBIAS

It is; in the sense that these are prohibitions contained in Act 2 of 1972 which we cannot act upon.

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

MR. WILLIS

Well, we have not acted upon; that was the thrust of Senator Rayburn's questions.

MR. TOBIAS

Correct. I'm just guaranteeing and reinsuring that we haven't. In other words, to make sure that they can never question whether we have; this provision would get around it.

MR. WILLIS

You are guaranteeing a warranty, but one guarantee is sufficient; don't you think?

MR. WEISS

Delegate Tobias, isn't it true that Sections 1 and 3 are already included in our new constitution? Furthermore, how can we act upon a section which is contingent upon a Resolution Number 52 which we have not yet even acted upon?

MR. TOBIAS

We will have acted upon it; otherwise, Style and Drafting could take that out. As far as Section 1, I would hope that when we get back to Style and Drafting later this evening, that we would be able to delete Section 1--Subparagraph 1--in accordance with the...there is an earlier section in the schedule that we've already acted upon. As far as Section 3 is concerned, I don't know what...I believe the legislature meant by "c-a-p-i-t-o-l, c-a-p-i-t-a-l," and there is a slight difference and I don't know what would happen; it's an irrational statement as taken verbatim. But, I'm just continuing and guaranteeing that no one can ever question anything we have done under Act 2 of 1972 as far as those prohibitions contained in the Act.

MR. FLORY

Mr. Tobias, are you saying that no judge can declare anything we've done unconstitutional?

MR. TOBIAS

No.

MR. RAYBURN

Max, I'm noticing here....in my opinion, this does apply to all appointed officials; am I correct?

MR. TOBIAS

Correct.

MR. RAYBURN

Do you mean to tell me that we can't even reduce his salary? If somebody gets appointed at the beginning of a four year term and you think he's making too much and you would want to reduce him a little bit, and you say here you cannot even reduce their salaries?

MR. TOBIAS

I'm not arguing with the reasoning of the legislature in Act 2 of 1972; this is what they enacted. I'm just saying that there is nothing that we can do about it because it's a prohibitive to us in the act that created us.

MR. RAYBURN

If there's a legislative act though, we can go back and change it if we think we've gone too far. I'm on the question, the appointed officials; I'm not talking about elected officials. But, under this language the way I read it, you cannot even reduce an appointed official's salary if you so decide and it will be in the constitution that the legislature can't. If we decide we've made a mistake and we are paying somebody forty thousand dollars a year and later we think they need to make thirty-five or thirty-seven fifty, we can not even reduce it. Now, we can because it's an act. But, if you adopt this amendment, you cannot; it's in the constitution; he's got to stay there and draw it for four years.

MR. TOBIAS

Senator Rayburn, I can't argue with what Act 2 of 1972... If by some chance we have prohibited the legislature from raising a salary or reducing a salary, I think we were prohibited from the start from doing that. I think that we have to continue that act as the restriction contained in that act.

Further Discussion

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I can see where this language could cause the legislature a lot of problems, if I read it right. We've got to do a lot of consolidation. We can't have but twenty departments, and during that time we might reduce some of these appointed officials' duties. We could reduce a lot of them in the future. But, even though we reduce their duties if you adopt this amendment, in my opinion, you cannot reduce their salaries during that time they were appointed for, regardless of whether you reduce their duties by thirty, forty, or fifty percent; their salaries if I read this amendment right will be in the constitution, and they shall remain the same as long as they hold that office or for the expiration of the time they were appointed. I think that could get us in a lot of trouble. I'm not willing to reduce no elected official's salary. But, when you include appointed people with the task that we're going to be faced with if this constitution is adopted, we are going to have to do a lot of consolidating. We might find we've got a lot of officials that we can reduce their duties by combining them and putting them with some other agency. We might want to reduce their salaries likewise, but if you adopt this language you can't do it, and that's why I think it's bad.

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

Questions

MR. WILLIS

Senator, do you realize that this is constitutionalizing an act of the legislature thereby disabling the legislature from undoing that act?

MR. RAYBURN

That's exactly what I'm concerned about, Mr. Willis; it's saying to us, if we made a mistake by establishing a salary, that we can't come back and correct it.

MR. WILLIS

Yes, but this thing covers a multitude of sins; it doesn't stop at salaries; it says "elected officials," too, and it affects terms if you project it between now and the time this constitution is adopted.

MR. RAYBURN

Well, that don't concern me as much, Mr. Willis, as the salary part of appointed officials because you know if you want to reduce a salary because you've reduced their duties, the legislature can't do it; you will have to amend the constitution to do it if I read this particular language right.

MR. WOMACK

Senator Rayburn, I'll go a little further under this. I don't believe you could abolish one of these appointed jobs even if consolidation got to the point that you didn't even have a desk for him; could you?

MR. RAYBURN

I'm doubtful whether you could or not, Representative Womack. I don't know, I think we might get in court if we tried to....if we find out when we consolidate that we've got somebody up here with a big fat job and we've put all the duties somewhere else, I think he might take us to court and draw his salary whether he's done his work or not for the remainder of the time he was appointed. If I read this particular language right--I know it was put in here for some elected officials, but I think they've gone a little too far with it; I have got my own ideas why it's here. I don't care to discuss them. I'm not against any elected officials. But, I just don't think you ought to bring everybody in the state in here, and I see you laughing, Judge, and you keep on laughing. There's some other people kind of looking here, too, you know in this convention.

MR. DERBES

Senator, as I read the amendment, it's a limitation on the constitution rather than a limitation on the legislature? In other words--and I think that's an important distinction--it says that "Nothing in this constitution shall be construed as containing any provision whereby;" it does not say, "No law shall be enacted whereby."

MR. RAYBURN

It goes on to refer to Act 2 of '72, I think, Mr. Derbes, if I read it right. It's pretty hard to analyze these things when you just see them and about two minutes later you have to vote on them.

MR. DERBES

Well, for example, it says....

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

MR. RAYBURN
I'm not that smart.

MR. DERBES
Well, I can see the source of the difference but it does say, I think, rather clearly that "nothing in this constitution shall be construed as containing any provision whereby the terms of office, of the members of the legislature, or of any other elected, or of any appointed official of the state," etc., "shall be reduced or shortened." In other words, it does not purport to be a restriction on the legislature; it is only a restriction on the call and acope of the constitutional convention.

MR. RAYBURN
Maybe I read it wrong; I don't think I did.

Further Discussion

MRS. ZERVIGON
Mr. Chairman, I rise to speak in support of the amendment, as you'll notice, I'm a coauthor. Mr. Duval, Mr. Tobias and several other people were worried that there might be parts of Act 2 other than the parts contained in Section 4 of Act 2 which are stated as prohibitions which could be interpreted as prohibitions. For example, many of us when we were elected or appointed really thought we would be home between January and July of 1973 because the Act reads that way. Now, did we violate a prohibition of that Act by working in committee during that time? If this is ratified by the people, it will be clear that we didn't; up to now it isn't clear. There is a method for determining the effective date in Act 2; it's really only a procedure; it's not a prohibition for setting a delayed effective date on any article or on the entire constitution. This makes it clear that that is not to be read as a prohibition. The only reason these three subparagraphs are in there is to continue the things that were intended by the legislature to be prohibitions not against themselves, but against us saying, the constitution doesn't do these things. If it were a prohibition against the legislature, it would read "no law shall be enacted", or it will read "district, or other political subdivision, or authority of the state may be impaired," not "shall be." So, please keep in mind exactly what we are trying to do. We are trying to avoid lawsuits or in the procedures that we have followed as set up in our rules. Mr. Chairman, I'll yield to any questions?

Questions

MR. SCHMITT
Are you saying that these prohibitions in (1), (2), and (3) were those within the Act 2, in other words, the call for the convention?

MRS. ZERVIGON
Word by word.

MR. SCHMITT
If we would have acted outside of the call from the convention, whatever we would have done would have been unconstitutional any how; isn't that correct?

MRS. ZERVIGON
That's certainly true as it applied to those prohibitions, Mr. Schmitt. The problem is does the rest of the Act constitute a prohibition or only a mechanism and procedure?

MR. SCHMITT
So, nothing that we can do right now. If it's unconstitutional because it goes outside the act, we can't constitutionalize the act subsequent to that time and perfect it.

MRS. ZERVIGON
We aren't constitutionalizing the act, Mr. Schmitt.

MR. SCHMITT
You are constitutionalizing, I believe, that you are constitutionalizing the call which was...if you act outside the call, the rules or the guidelines for having the convention, then aren't you, by doing that, performing unconstitutionally, and nothing we can do now can perfect that; it's too late?

MRS. ZERVIGON
By no means, Mr. Schmitt.

MR. SCHMITT
This is meaningless; this is just a waste of paper and a waste of time.

MRS. ZERVIGON
Are you asking the question?

MR. SCHMITT
I think you're wasting the time of the convention; aren't you? What are you accomplishing by doing this?

MRS. ZERVIGON
Sit down, Mr. Schmitt, and I'll explain it to you slowly one more time.

MR. SCHMITT
I don't think....

MRS. ZERVIGON
Sit down, Mr. Schmitt, and I'll explain it to you slowly one more time.

MR. SCHMITT
What are you doing that was not done in the call; could you answer me that? If the call is a restriction by which we can act, what are you accomplishing outside of that if this only contains what is in a call?

MRS. ZERVIGON
Are you ready?

MR. CASEY
Just a minute. Mrs. Zervigon and Mr. Schmitt, maybe we can solve the problem; I think Mr. Tobias has a motion. So, let me recognize Mr. Tobias at this time, first.

Motion

MR. TOBIAS
Mr. Chairman, to clarify this amendment and to take care of those objections and to guarantee the ratification of the concept... to guarantee that the constitution, if ratified in accordance with Delegate Resolution No. 52 which Mr. Pugh had introduced very shortly, I would move to withdraw the amendment and delete every thing below the part of the paragraph which says, the sentence that begins "nothing in this constitution shall be construed as containing any provision whereby."

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER
The gentleman resubmits it as indicated; constituting deleting everything from line 8 on--everything from line 8 of the text on is deleted--picking up with "Nothing in this constitution" all the way through the end is deleted; leaves just the first sentence.

Explanation

MR. TOBIAS
Mr. Chairman, all this does is say that once the amendment.... once our constitution is presented to the people in accordance with the delegate resolution and approved by the people with the alternatives, it will be the constitution of the State of Louisiana; that's all it says.

Questions

MR. PLANCHARD
I'm in agreement with what you're trying to do here. But, don't you feel that we are a bit premature? You're saying in effect that Delegate Resolution No. 52 will be passed, and it hasn't been presented; I think it's premature.

MR. TOBIAS
Mr. Planchard, there will be...there will have to be a delegate resolution passed, otherwise, there's no method by which we can present this. Now, if there isn't, then Style and Drafting can take this section out, and it would be totally irrelevant.

MR. PLANCHARD
Well, what I'm saying in effect is why don't we get the Delegate Resolution No. 52, and then we will take up these items later?

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

MR. TOBIAS

Because, Mr. Planchard, we are trying to style and draft it...we are running out of time, and as soon as we do this, it will clarify that.

MRS. ZERVIGON

If I may respond to Mr. Schmitt's question because I never got a chance to do it. What we are doing is saying the vote of the people ratifies our actions as saying they are not in conflict with Act 2; that's all.

MR. O'NEILL

Mr. Tobias, do you still intend to offer the other amendment you are supposed to have prior to this?

MR. TOBIAS

No.

MR. WILLIS

I want to be sure, Max, on what I'm voting. It is solely on the first sentence ending with "State of Louisiana;" is that correct?

MR. TOBIAS

Correct.

MR. WILLIS

Of course, Mr. Planchard, preempted my question which was that we are presupposing that Delegate Resolution No. 52 would be adopted or amended because.....

MR. TOBIAS

It will be adopted or amended, I'm pretty sure of that because we need some method to submit this to the voters, and this is the way we planned to do it in accordance with this.

MR. WILLIS

I understand.

MR. WOMACK

Mr. Chairman, I don't know whether I have a question or whether I ought to raise a point of order. We've gone all through this, and I want to raise a question. I think the worst thing I've ever seen come up in this legislature is the last night. We are here with a high-priced research staff of what I call professional people, not one of them have I heard on this. We've got some very brilliant, aged, experienced attorneys; none of them are sanctioning this. What I would like to know now is, let's just stop and take a second look for a minute or two, and let's get one or two professionals in here to look at this without just taking one of these words that it looks to me like it would be so and so.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Womack, this amendment is under debate now, and it's up to the convention to dispose of it one way or the other.

MR. TOBIAS

Mr. Womack, I resent personally....

MR. ALEXANDER

Mr. Tobias, Act 52 does prohibit this convention from reducing any term or salary. Now, will that be automatic if this amendment passes as rearranged?

MR. TOBIAS

If we, under the constitution....if in our constitution we have reduced any terms, salaries, or anything, then that particular provision would be unconstitutional as contained, as we would be exceeding the powers granted to this convention as contained in Act 2 of 1972.

MR. AVANT

Mr. Tobias, I have studied Act 2 for the better part of this week, with one particular thing in mind, and that's trying to ascertain by what vote an alternate proposal to this constitution is required to be adopted. I have certain very definite opinions as to what vote is required to adopt an alternate proposition. If we. . .

Point of Order

MR. VELAZQUEZ

A point of order, Mr. Chairman. This isn't relevant to the point under discussion. We're discussing the amendment of Mr. Tobias. We're not discussing the vote needed for an alternative.

MR. CASEY

I believe Mr. Velazquez is correct, Mr. Avant.

MR. AVANT

. . . finish the question, you would find out that it's relevant.

MR. CASEY

Okay, Mr. Avant, finish your question, sir.

MR. AVANT

Now, Mr. Tobias, if Act 2 does have a provision in it which does require that an alternative proposition be adopted by a certain vote, if we then adopt this resolution, and if we then further adopt a resolution which specifies a vote by which an alternative may be adopted which is different from that which is required by Act 2, then under your resolution whatever we put in there and say is what it takes is what it's going to take. Isn't that right?

MR. TOBIAS

Mr. Avant, first of all, Delegate Resolution No. 52 has to provide a procedure. That's the method that it provides by which the constitution will be ratified by the people. As far as the vote requirement, I don't know what. . . precisely. It's my impression that it doesn't restrict that, but I'm saying that delegate resolution, with respect to procedures under the act, is what is going to have to govern us. In other words, there's no procedure; there's no law on point.

MR. AVANT

Well, my question is, Mr. Tobias, though, we haven't adopted any such delegate resolution. If they put one in here and they say in it that an alternate--this alternate--will be considered the constitution of Louisiana if a majority of the people voting on the alternate, vote favorably for it, and then, if we put this in the constitution, too, then that alternate is going to become part of the constitution, irrespective of how small that number of people may be. Isn't that a fact?

MR. TOBIAS

Mr. Avant, I think we can rely on a little bit of good faith in this constitution and not resort to sorts of. . . feel that we're going to say that if ten percent of the people vote for the alternate and ninety percent vote against it that the alternate will be adopted. That's what it sounds like you are saying. There is going to be a resolution saying what is going to happen to the majority of those voting.

MR. AVANT

That's not what I'm saying at all, Mr. Tobias. But, what I'm saying is if a million people vote on this basic constitution and only fifty thousand happen to vote on this alternate, and we say that twenty-five thousand and one of them will pass the alternate, and we put this in the constitution, then that's what it's going to take to pass the alternate, no matter how many people vote on the basic question of the constitution. Isn't that correct?

MR. TOBIAS

Mr. Avant, it's my appreciation of Act 2 of 1972 that it is silent upon that subject matter. . .

MR. AVANT

But, that's just your appreciation. Suppose it isn't silent. . .

MR. TOBIAS

Won't you read it?

MR. AVANT

I have read it, many, many times.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. TOBIAS

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, we are going to have to decide something, and that is the procedures by which the constitution which we adopt is going to be submitted to the people. We are going to have to set that forth. If we do not set that forth, it would. . . the delegate resolution would have no force and effect of law unless we ratify it in this constitution. It would have no force or effect, I can assure you of that. There's no procedure provided in the

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

Louisiana Statutes. That's the whole purpose of Delegate Resolution No. 52. All this does is just say that we are ratifying the method once the constitution has been approved by the people, and say that the constitution, once approved, is the Constitution of the State of Louisiana thereby superseding the Constitution of 1921.

Questions

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Mr. Tobias, isn't it true that if we ran for this office or we accepted appointment, we either ran or accepted appointment under the stipulations given in Act 2?

MR. TOBIAS

That is correct.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Then, if we said we'd obey the rules when we started the game and when they ended the game they just are asking us. . .we're just saying that we did obey the rules. That's all your amendment is saying that. . .

MR. TOBIAS

That is my appreciation of it.

MR. PUGH

Mr. Tobias, isn't it a fact that the 1913 Constitution had seriously the question raised relative to it on account of the manner of the call?

MR. TOBIAS

Absolutely.

MR. PUGH

Mr. Tobias, isn't it a matter of fact that there must be a resolution adopted by this convention to set forth the form and manner in which this constitution and alternates must be submitted, and that in addition thereto, instructions must be given to the appropriate authorities relative to this election?

MR. TOBIAS

Absolutely.

MR. PUGH

Do you view Delegate Resolution No. 52 as anything other than a vehicle for accomplishing that purpose?

MR. TOBIAS

Act 2 and Delegate Resolution No. 52 will only set forth the procedures.

MR. PUGH

Is it not a matter of fact what you are trying to do is set the stage in that once we do set forth the resolution, in view of the fact to put it in its kindest light, Act 2 leaves something to be desired, that ultimately if there is a contest concerning the validity of the constitution, the provisions that you now suggest may well be the ones on which this will be determined by the courts to be constitutionally adopted? Now, isn't that a matter of fact?

MR. TOBIAS

That is my impression of it. You asked and answered your own question. It's true.

MR. PUGH

Did you and I not discuss these at the time you came over to the other building to ask me about them?

MR. TOBIAS

Yes.

MR. PUGH

I told you that I thought that they should be done?

MR. TOBIAS

Absolutely.

MR. PUGH

Thank you.

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Tobias, we are proposing, here, that everything in Delegate Resolution No. 52 is in order and it's in good shape, because we are ratifying it here by this language prior to the time we act on it. Am I correct?

MR. TOBIAS

There will be a delegate resolution to . . .

MR. RAYBURN

Well, aren't we more or less approving it--anything that's in it or as amended? Then, it shall be the constitution of the State of Louisiana. Is that what we're doing with this language, proposing prior to the time we even have a chance to deliberate Delegate Resolution No. 52?

MR. TOBIAS

Senator Rayburn, since there is no law on submission, I keep repeating this and I can't understand why some people--not you, personally--but some people may not be able to.

MR. RAYBURN

Well, just put me in the crowd with them 'cause we. . .

MR. TOBIAS

All I'm saying is that there's got to be a procedure somewhere in the law. There is no law on submission of this type of document to the people. So, therefore, in order to make sure that there is, I am making sure that Delegate Resolution No. 52 on submission is law. In other words, to say that we have complied with the law.

MR. RAYBURN

Why, Mr. Tobias. . .

MR. CASEY

Mr. Tobias, the gentleman has now exceeded his time.

Point of Information

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Acting Chairman, I was sitting and listening after the debate and I was hearing different things and getting ready to vote on this. This is a long resolution, and it said. . .in this, would we be accepting what is in here? I'm not familiar with how many votes it's going to take on the alternate and how many it's going to take on the other. So, we're going to be saying. . .are we saying if we vote for his amendment that we're going to accept everything in this resolution?

MR. CASEY

Mrs. Warren, the amendment is not long any longer; it's been changed.

MRS. WARREN

This is not what I'm saying. I'm a little bit confused.

MR. POYNTER

Mrs. Warren, if I understand your question, you're talking about Resolution No. 52. Right? All right. It would be my understanding that you are correct to the extent that this would ratify and adopt delegate. . .or give authority to Delegate Resolution No. 52. However, you may ultimately decide to amend or change and adopt that delegate resolution. In other words, Delegate Resolution No. 52 may not be passed like you have it there. I can assure you there are going to be some amendments offered, at any rate. But, however it ultimately comes out, yes ma'am, you would be giving sanction to it.

Point of Information

MR. WEISS

A point of information. If this section is adopted, it will be placed pending, is that correct, and therefore can be rescinded at any later time if the convention so desires?

MR. CASEY

That is true, Dr. Weiss.

[Amendment rejected: 45-53. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Leithman and Mr. Juneau send up an amendment. On page 9, line 7, add the following:

"PART 1

Section. . .

(All right. Let's make this line 11, Mr. Leithman. It needs to be line 11. It really. . .just. . .)

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

On page 9 and following the Johnny Jackson amendment, add the following:

Section _____. Transition to Board of Regents and State Board of Elementary and Secondary Education."

[Motion to waive reading of the amendment adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. LEITHMAN

Mr. Acting Chairman and members of the convention, this is a relatively simple amendment to follow. What it does is this: the Coordinating Council for Higher Education and the L.S.U. Board of Supervisors, those two memberships go to completing the Board of Regents for Higher Education. The State Board of Education which now exists, which is as you know it, the eleven members there who have a choice—either going to the Board of Regents or the Board for Elementary and Secondary Education. Now, basically, that is all that happens. The legislature will and must intervene because of expiring terms. If you're interested in the terms, I have each expiration of each member's term for all of the three boards. In 1974, the State Board loses three people. The Louisiana Coordinating Council, in 1974, will lose four people. The L.S.U. Board of Supervisors, in 1974, will lose two people. So, as these terms expire, these members either run for reelection or just drop out. I think it would be better if I would answer any questions because the amendment, as you see it, is real simple, and there's not a heck of a lot to explain. It's pretty closely parallel to our Act 712 which we passed in the session in '72.

I yield to questions.

Questions

MR. CHAMPAGNE

As I read the first paragraph, "If Alternate Proposition No. 2 (A) concerning". . . Now, what is Alternate Proposition No. 2 (A)?

MR. LEITHMAN

Well, I don't think we really ascertained that. I feel it's the alternative proposition for education relating to the Board of Regents.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Well, I think. . .

MR. LEITHMAN

The Board of Regents for Higher Education--the single board.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Without the management boards or what is that?

MR. LEITHMAN

Yes. That's the single board for higher education.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

In other words, if we adopt this at this time, then we're locking in how this is going to read on the ballot; right?

MR. LEITHMAN

It says no. . . this is a transition. This only takes place if your. . . if it's adopted. This is after the election.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

My next question is: how do we know what 2 (A) is until such time as we establish what 2 (A) is going to be? In other words, you're saying that if Alternate Proposition No. 2 (A) concerning education boards is approved, then the sections are null and void. Why don't you just leave that 2 (A) blank right now, and then we'll talk about the proposal?

MR. LEITHMAN

You know, you bring up a perfectly valid point, and I have no opposition to that at all. But, it is intended, the 2 (A) is intended to reflect the single board, the one board for higher education, regardless how we. . . what terminology we use to identify it.

MR. KEAN

Mr. Leithman, as I appreciate it, there was nothing in the Delegate Proposal No. 98 which contained this particular language, was there?

MR. LEITHMAN

Not. . . I don't think it. . . this parallel language? No sir, I don't think we had anything that provided for the transition.

MR. KEAN

So, when we adopted Delegate Proposal No. 98, we made no provision in Delegate Proposal No. 98 for the make-up of these boards which would include some people from the Louisiana State University Board and other sources?

MR. LEITHMAN

I stand to be corrected, but I don't think we did, Mr. Kean. This is strictly to transition.

MR. KEAN

If you had a number of the L.S.U. Board and members of the Louisiana Coordinating Council that went on to the Board of Regents, you'd start off with a Board of Regents that would have more members than is provided for in the alternative proposal, would you not?

MR. LEITHMAN

Slightly more for a period of less than a year.

MR. KEAN

Would they constitute the appointive, or how would you work from the appointive--the eight appointive--or eight elected and seven appointed? How . . .

MR. LEITHMAN

The legislature shall provide by law the procedure to effect the transition of the board.

MR. KEAN

It's not intended by this that the legislature could provide by law to eliminate the term of office of any of the people that you have here?

MR. LEITHMAN

No sir. What we have--and this may help, and of course, you all don't have the advantage of seeing the dates--for instance, on the Louisiana Coordinating Council you have one, two, three, four, you have roughly six seats that are null and void during the year of '74. So, it's reduced considerably during this calendar year that we are now in.

MR. KEAN

I see.

MR. LEITHMAN

So that reduces that fifteen member board extensively during '74. Then, in '76, you have five people on the Coordinating Council that phase out. On the State Board of Education in '76 we have three.

MR. KEAN

My point is: as I understand Act 2 of 1972, we can do nothing in this convention to shorten the terms of any elected or appointed official.

MR. LEITHMAN

That's correct, sir.

MR. KEAN

My question is: could the legislature by reason of this provision by which it could provide by law for a procedure to effectuate the transition, by that process shorten the terms of any of these officials?

MR. LEITHMAN

No sir. I'd say absolutely no. I don't think any elected official's term can be or is intended to be reduced by anyone, and certainly not by the legislature.

Delegate Reeves in the Chair

MR. LEITHMAN

Yes.

MR. PLANCHARD

Mr. Acting Chairman, my question has been answered, I think. Kenny, did you say that you were going to withdraw it and take out Alternative Proposition No. 2 (A), or the number 2 (A)?

MR. LEITHMAN

Well, I have no objection. I would like to confer with those persons who have drafted . . .

MR. PLANCHARD

Otherwise, I think it's premature.

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

MR. LEITHMAN

But, the 2 (A) relates to the Board of Regents. But, I would like to confer with the staff people who . . . just one moment.

Here, I think this answers the question, Mr. Smith and the staff. The 2 (A) relates to the 2 (A) Paragraph which was passed in the Proposal No. 98. That 2 (A) is for the Education Article creating only a Board of Regents to govern higher education. So, in essence, we have identified 2 (A) relating to the Alternative Proposal No. 98 in which we relate in detail 2 (A) to the single board.

MR. FLORY

Mr. Leithman, first, my question is, as it relates to the Alternative Proposition No. 2 (A), you, in the first two instances you put the 2 (A) in. Then, in the third paragraph you left it blank. Your reasons for that?

MR. LEITHMAN

The staff tells me it's a style and drafting, totally style and drafting situation.

MR. FLORY

There's not much style, but it needs a lot of drafting; is that it?

MR. LEITHMAN

That depends on which street you're going down, Mr. Flory.

MR. FLORY

Okay, two way. The second question: as I appreciate it, there are fifteen men on the . . . fifteen members on the Coordinating Council, some seventeen on the L.S.U. Board of Supervisors; there's eleven members of the State Board of Education?

MR. LEITHMAN

No sir.

You have fifteen members on the Coordinating Council, of which two of these people are . . . serve also on the L.S.U. Board and the State Board. Then, of that same fifteen--now you're down to thirteen--you have four whose term expires in the year 1974. So, you're down to thirteen with those two duplications. You reduce it by another four, so, in essence, you're down to nine people--the figures that we would be dealing with if this proposition passes on the Coordinating Council.

MR. FLORY

But, I look down there where you provide that the members of the State Board can select either direction they want to go in. So, you have to include that eleven, possibly, of going on the Board of Regents, plus the eight that you require that be elected, 'cause if my figures are correct, you've got somewhere above forty members on the Board of Regents for what period of time?

MR. LEITHMAN

No sir. That's not so at all. If you'd jot these figures down, I'll give them to you again. On the State Board of Education you presently have eleven people--eleven people. Three of those people go off in 1974. So, in essence, we're only naming eight people. We're dealing with eight persons, because they're non-existent at the end of 1974 when this constitution goes into effect.

So, you see, we're only fooling with eight people there, Gordon, because their term would have expired before we even considered what we're going to do with them. Then, on your Coordinating Council, you have fifteen persons there, two of which serve; one from the LSU Board, and one from the State Board of Education. So, right off the bat, you're fooling with thirteen persons there, of which four persons expire--the terms expire in your calendar year of 1974. So, we're dealing with nine persons there. On the LSU Board, two of them expire in 1974. So, you're not...you're fooling with just a shade around twenty...

MR. FLORY

I won't argue mathematics with you right now, Mr. Leithman. But, tell me then...

MR. LEITHMAN

Well, you told me you had forty numbers. I'm trying to add two and two.

MR. FLORY

Well, tell me, then, how many people will be on the Board of Regents under your proposal.

MR. LEITHMAN

You know that until we phase out...this is a transitional period.

MR. FLORY

Right.

MR. LEITHMAN

I can't tell you because I can't tell you which way these persons would go. They have an option. They may go to this board; or they may go to that board. I can't ...

MR. FLORY

My last question, then, is: in your last paragraph, or Paragraph 4--I've got two here; I don't know one you're going with--but, the one I have...

MR. LEITHMAN

The one the Clerk read out, Mr. Flory.

MR. FLORY

Higher education, you say that "on the effective date all functions of the State Board," tell me, in that subparagraph where vocational education fits...

MR. LEITHMAN

This has no bearing with vo-tech whatsoever.

MR. WILLIS

Mr. Leithman, irrespective of the composition of the boards, on the Education Article which we have and the alternative which was proposed, is not your amendment a simple corollary to the amendment by Rep. Johnny Jackson to give the mechanics whereby, and transitional mechanism whereby, we can either implement, compliment, supplement, or suggest the provision of the alternative article, if it is adopted?

MR. LEITHMAN

The situation is that simple.

MR. WILLIS

Does not the first word in your amendment commence with a conditional word, "if"?

MR. LEITHMAN

Absolutely.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Leithman, where did you get this 2(A) that you refer to in your proposal?

MR. LEITHMAN

As I mentioned before, Mr. Hernandez, this relates to the Alternative Proposition No. 98, and on 98, there's a paragraph on the Proposition 2(A) relates to the Education Article creating only a Board of Regents to govern higher education, no management boards.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Thank you, sir.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Mr. Leithman, do you know that when Delegate Proposal No. 98 was presented to this convention, that I inquired of the Chair and requested that in no way was I voting on Section 1 or Section 2? Ultimately, I voted for the proposal, but do you know that now you are coming back and, in effect, establishing, if we pass this section, that the provision, the position on the ballot will be determined before we even discuss it, and for that reason, I object to the words "2(A)" being in the proposal in any way, sir, just like you left the others blank, I would object to 2(A), the word being in the proposal?

MR. LEITHMAN

It's not any...I don't see any real problem with the figure 2(A) on it.

MR. HAYES

Mr. Leithman, I understand, I believe you when you answered

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

Mr. Kean's question; we're not supposed to reduce a term. Is that right?

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. LEITHMAN
That's it brother...either.

MR. HAYES
..terms he's in office...
Would you say a term, then—if you abolish a board at LSU, this board doesn't any longer exist; isn't that correct at LSU?

MR. LEITHMAN
That's right.

MR. HAYES
Then, transferring them to another board, you have abolished that. Is transferring them to another board, is that an equal board that you're transferring them to? Isn't it in fact... that's what I'm trying to say. What about this trans...do you get the point?

MR. LEITHMAN
I think I follow your point. If a man has three years remaining in his elected term, and he is transferred by a constitutional act to a board comparable for a period of three years remaining, he will continue to serve for his three years, and his term will not be shortened at all.

MR. HAYES
That wasn't the term that he was appointed to originally. You're transferring him to something different. I'm trying to bear this out and you don't have anything to back that up with in your act, do you? In other words, it looks like it would be something fair to do, but it isn't, in fact, backed up by anything.

Recess

Chairman Henry in the Chair

MR. HENRY
Ladies and gentlemen, I know that you are all tired, and you've worked awfully hard and been most cooperative today. I'd like to...for Mr. Poynter to explain to you why it's sort of necessary that we get every possible lick in tonight that we can; we're up in Style and Drafting and so forth. Mr. Poynter, if you would. Please give the Clerk your attention, ladies and gentlemen.

MR. POYNTER
The ultimate problem is the fact that when Style and Drafting is through, of course, it's going to have to return primarily the alternative proposition, or rather, the transitional proposition to either be appropriately styled in accordance with whatever you determine. But, thereafter, you're going to have to decide on an ultimate organization, and they're going to propose a whole group of amendments they've been working for a while to provide for the ultimate arrangement of all the sections and the articles and whatnot. If you should decide to change very substantially what they do on the floor, there's going to be a long gap between the time you adopt those Style and Drafting amendments and the time we can have a document for you to sign and get to the governor at least by midnight tomorrow night. I think you all would like to go a little bit earlier than that. So, if we can get that far tonight, we can assure ourselves whatever you do or however you resolve the final organization of this thing, we can have it for you to sign it and get it in accordance with the law, present it to the governor tomorrow. Without that safeguard, we could be in trouble, in my opinion.

MR. HENRY
I know that you're real glad to hear that, and I've tried to convince Mr. Poynter otherwise, but he seems determined. So, I want you all to know that while he's not, I'm on your side.
All right, Mr. Clerk. I believe we're going to try to finish up with Mr. Leithman's business here. We're going to have to sort of prune it, I think, before we go. But, if you will, Mr. Clerk, let us know where we are, please.

MR. POYNTER
Mr. Leithman, first of all at this time is going to move to withdraw the present amendment to make certain changes, in particular, the one Mr. Champagne has mentioned on the floor.

MR. POYNTER
Yes, the gentleman resubmits the amendment now.
I just can note the changes.
First of all, the primary change is up in Paragraph (A), where it has "if Alternative Proposition No. 2(A), concerning," and so forth, the gentleman strikes...wishes to strike out of his amendment "No. 2(A)" and just insert a blank, so that it says, "if Alternative Proposition _____, concerning education boards" and so forth. That same change needs to be made in the last sentence of Paragraph (A), so that it would there read "if Alternative Proposition _____ is not approved, this section shall be null, void, and of no effect." Of course, Style and Drafting could put in the appropriate thing depending on what you all do on the next resolution. One other thing which was an omission caused by the deletion of Paragraph 5, after on --- Subparagraph 3 --line 2 of Subparagraph 3 of Paragraph B, "on the effective date of this constitution, the Louisiana Coordinating Council for Higher Education"—need to add "and the Board of Supervisors, Louisiana State University and Agricultural and Mechanical College." With those changes, he resubmits the amendment.

Explanation

MR. LEITHMAN
Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, we have the alternate proposal up with Paragraph 5, Vote of the...we're in the process of compromising, and it's an awkward thing at this stage but you have another amendment by myself and Juneau with Paragraph 5 in it. Now, we've agreed I would like to withdraw...yes, I know it's involved....

MR. POYNTER
All right, you want the one with the Paragraph 5 in it?

MR. LEITHMAN
Yes, sir.

MR. POYNTER
The one Mr. Abraham said that he was going to save in case you changed your mind?

MR. LEITHMAN
That's exactly it.

MR. POYNTER
On that, you're going to make that same change and take out...

MR. LEITHMAN
Make the same change; take out 2(A), all reference to 2(A)...

MR. POYNTER
...and just leave a blank.

MR. LEITHMAN
... and make the same change in Paragraph 3; we've got to make that same change in 3.

MR. POYNTER
No, you don't want to do that.

MR. LEITHMAN
You're right; you're right.

MR. POYNTER
So, the only change then...does anyone have the other Leithman amendment that has Subparagraph 5 of Paragraph (B)? The only change would be up in Paragraph (A) in the two places, line 2 in the second to last line of that would be to delete that "No. 2(A)" and put a blank.

Explanation continued

MR. LEITHMAN
So, what we have done, gentlemen, when we ...
What we have done, ladies and gentlemen, in adding Paragraph 5, in withdrawing that amendment that we discussed--the other amendment is identical to it with one exception--and at the very bottom we have another Section 5, and this does, in fact, provide for a management board of daily operations of the LSU system. This is in a compromised vein of a compromise, and we think it's fair and just. So, that is the only change that we make. So, number 1, you have no reference to "2(A)", which some people balked at. Again, let me mention one thing that was pointed out during the break. This is the same transition that we made in 30, paralleling Article VII. So, there's no real problem. It was done in 30 for VII, and we're doing it here for our proposition, No. 98. So, if there's no other questions...

Questions

MR. J. JACKSON

Mr. Leithman, you mentioned Paragraph 5 as a compromise. Could you go over that again for me, please?

MR. LEITHMAN

All right. This is what has happened: LSU Board of Supervisors now has a board in the constitution, Johnny. There also, if we could provide by a...provide for a management board for Louisiana State, so we're replacing in the constitution the LSU Board of Supervisors with a management board, and I know what's in your mind, and I say this: we have provided in the basic document of the alternative for those...all universities that desire to have a management board, they may do so under the same conditions so that's all. If there's no further questions...

MR. ABRAHAM

Kenny, Article XII, Section 7 contains the Board of Supervisors for LSU, the State Board of Education, and the Coordinating Council. Now, you didn't mean for the entire Section 7 to be continued as a statute, did you?

MR. LEITHMAN

We have to draw it out.

MR. A. JACKSON

Mr. Leithman, how can you transpose a management board for the Board of Regents when there is no such structure now in existence?

MR. LEITHMAN

Alphonse, I didn't hear the beginning of your question. Say it again, please.

MR. A. JACKSON

As I appreciate your amendment, it is a proposition to transpose the existing governor's structures into either the Board of Regents or the Elementary and Secondary Board as prescribed in your alternate; correct?

MR. LEITHMAN

You're referring to the LSU Board, or the coordinating...

MR. A. JACKSON

I'm asking you, is not your transition measure, is designed to place the present people that now occupy either the...now either are on the LSU Board of Supervisors, or on the Coordinating Council, or on the Elementary and Secondary Education Article, on either the Board of Regents or the Elementary Secondary Education Board? Well, now, how is it that you now say to us that you are now including a management board which is now not in existence? I don't understand that. I mean, how can you transpose something that's not in existence?

MR. LEITHMAN

Well, this is going to...the management board would be continued as in statute.

MR. A. JACKSON

What management board, Mr. Leithman?

MR. LEITHMAN

The board that LSU now has at the LSU University.

MR. A. JACKSON

They have an LSU Board of Supervisors.

MR. LEITHMAN

This would be provided for by law with new personnel as a management board at the LSU system. It's not the same personnel.

MR. A. JACKSON

Now, Mr. Leithman, I want to understand what you're saying, so I can vote intelligently. You said that you compromised by adding a Board of Management for LSU to be transposed by way of this vehicle; did you not?

MR. LEITHMAN

No, let me back up and say it again. We would provide in statute for a management board which will handle the daily operations at the Louisiana State University. It has no affiliation or connection with the LSU Board of Supervisors that now exist—none whatsoever.

MR. J. JACKSON

Mr. Chairman, for the legislative record at this convention, I would like for Mr. Leithman or Mr. Juneau, for the legislative record, to indicate the purpose of Subsection 5.

MR. LEITHMAN

Well, I'm going to ask either Mr. Kelly or Mr. Juneau because they were involved in the conversation, Johnny, and I'm not being evasive.

Further Discussion

MR. JUNEAU

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, let me, if I can, put this thing in perspective for you and tell you how this document was drafted. As you will note, there are two amendments for you, and I'll tell you very candidly what has transpired. Number 1; the first amendment that was drafted is the amendment that is now before you which includes Section 5, which has a transition provision retaining as a legislative board, the LSU Board of Supervisors. That was drafted for this reason: We do have, and we can't ignore it; it's there; let's face it; you do have the 1921 Constitution with the amendment which was tacked thereon which created the LSU Board of Supervisors. There are fifteen members of that board. It is a constitutionally-created board; whereby the members who serve on that board serve in a constitutional status. When Act 2 was passed--and I didn't draft it, and I don't know...very few here did--I doubt that many of these problems that we're having now we contemplated at that time. It said that you cannot affect the terms of those people who serve in constitutionally-created boards, or constitutionally-created offices. So, we had the problem, we had the problem of a two-board concept as contrasted with a five-board concept. More specifically, we have fifteen extra people. What do you do with them? Well, number 1, they said transfer them to the Board of Regents. Let's go to a twenty-nine or thirty-nine member board and that that will eventually phase out. Well, the decision was made--I say decision--the proposition was made for the orderly transition of the management of a university and of a board. The proper place would be to retain it as a legislative board, which I say is drastically different, and which has to be the big issue, that what we would do was maintain that board as a legislative board and leave those fifteen members in that position. Then, it could be changed or expired by legislative act. That's what occurred. Now, the next question I imagine in your mind that would arise would be, well, then we were handed another amendment which is substantially the same with this exception: Subparagraph 5 is out, and it merges it into the other boards. I'll be very candid with you. I don't particularly think that that's an orderly transition. But, we're getting ready to get our heads clobbered on a ballot; we're getting ready to tie this convention up; we've got to finish, and we've got a document I think all of us can support. I think we can end up with a ballot provision. I sincerely believe that it's legal, that a ballot that will give to the people a true choice in alternatives, and for that reason that I think that, for orderly transition, that this legislative board would be properly created. Now, the objection was raised when we originally discussed this, well, are you creating a discrepancy or a difference between colleges and universities because they have to go through the Board of Regents and to a two-thirds vote of the legislature under Committee Proposal No. 7 to get it? Well, that's true, but it's a legislative board, and again, I say this coming from a town, I guess, that's fought as hard as anybody in this convention, that I'm willing to take the chances of our university at Lafayette, La...we're willing to take our chances to get a legislative board, but I insist as I have since the institution of this convention, that what I am interested in and what I think a lot of schools are interested in is equality to the extent that we want to be placed on the same level. If it's on a constitutional basis, put us all in the constitution. If it's legislative, put us all in the legislature; the difference being that USL is not now in the constitution, so, we do not have the same problem. That is the reason for why this is proposed, and I think it is a reasonable transitional provision.

Questions

MR. PUGH

I may have gotten my answer already. How does this tie in with 712? Wasn't that 712, or something, of the legislature, of 72; don't that have something to do with what we're talking about?

MR. JUNEAU

My understanding, Mr. Pugh, is that Act 712 was a merger provision, merging all of these boards together as a legislative act under a constitutional provision which allows for merger of boards which has been deleted by this convention. I don't think that 712, though, since it's being a legislative act plays in what we're talking about here today as a transitional measure. No, sir; I don't think so.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Merely for the record, this board that you speak of in Subsection 5, this board limited to the management of daily operations, you envisioned this board as merely having the duties of cutting the grass and making dormitory regulations and this type of stuff?

MR. JUNEAU

I think it's concerned with the day to day policy decisions that are made of management boards in the university. What the intent there, Mr. Velazquez, was to make specifically clear in this transitional provision that the LSU Board of Supervisors which is now in the constitution would be subjected to the authority, control, and supervision of the Board of Regents, and that's why it was phrased like that.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Your definite statement, then, is that this is not a way to hide the LSU Board of Supervisors under another name?

MR. JUNEAU

I'll put it to you this way, Mr. Velazquez: The position I've taken in this convention would be totally inconsistent with that concept. So, the answer is definitely not.

MR. VELAZQUEZ

Thank you.

MR. KELLY

Pat, would you not agree that there are two things that can be done in accordance with--as I read Act 2--in other words, we've got appointed officials here. That's what we're dealing with. It says that we can't shorten their term and there's a number of other things it says. We have two choices-- is this not correct--in the manner in which to handle this? You could have either run fourteen or fifteen more LSU-oriented people onto a fifteen man Board of Regents, and made it, say, a thirty man, and then phased it back down, or else you could have gone on with just the Statutory Management Board and let the legislature, after these people's terms have expired and so forth, if they desire to do away with it, they can. Is that correct?

MR. JUNEAU

That's absolutely correct, and I think the point is well taken. It's a policy decision you have to make, and it seems to me that the authority's vested in a Board of Regents, and I don't think that the other state schools and universities in this state are willing to increase a majority of fifteen people who represent one university to get an overwhelming majority on a board which can change curriculum and so forth. In essence, you could strip the entire university system by that transitional period within a period of two years on a Board of Regents.

Further Discussion

MR. J. JACKSON

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I have no doubt to at last agree that what Mr. Juneau and Mr. Kelly have said is somewhat correct. The problems that I had personally with it is that: (1) When I introduced my amendment, it was the understanding that I needed to introduce it under a section that had at least comparable effects and comparable status as to the constitution...provisions of the constitution. To bring that closer in mind, we took the transitional proposal and we divided up in PART III, PART II, and PART I, and, I think, PART IV and each part...one was just the statute. I think one part had the....

one part had, as I appreciate the explanation, was comparable status to the provisions of the constitution, but need not be in the constitution itself. For my question and my concern is that in light of Act 712, I wonder even though it does say relegated to the statutes, it does have a constitution of dates and depending on what part of this transitional measures that we put it into. My other concern is that and maybe I'm...I don't mean to cast any inference on delegates who got their heads together and then come up with this. But, I am concerned at the point that are we--and the question raised in my mind--are we, in effect, saying that one...that where other colleges may have to go through the process of going to the Boards of Regents for Southern...I mean, Board of Regents and get two-thirds votes to get a management board, that I understand that we won't have...that the L.S.U. Board of Supervisors would automatically under...if we adopt this, would be it and then, at the same time, have the opportunity for representation on the Board of Regents, also; right? Well, those are the kinds of questions, even with my conversation here with the members here discussing it, that were partially answered but to some degree have not been totally clarified. I'm just kind of concerned at this point that--although I recognize the time and I'm here because, you know, I recognized that we got to put in the time--I just don't want to have an alternative that: (1) Constitutionalize one Board of Management and, on the other hand, sends us through the whole process and, at the same time, affords representation on the Board of Regents. At the same time, I don't know what kind of effect it's going to have on Act 712, provided that this is relegated to the statutes and Act 712 is already a statute. What kind of effects does that have and because these questions to my satisfaction---and it's not because I've got a closed mind and it's not because I'm emotional--but because these things haven't been clearly clarified to my benefit, particularly with the effects of Act 712, I've got to seriously oppose it. Now, I don't know what that does here in terms of this convention; you might go ahead on and adopt it. But, I wanted it to be stated for the legislative record so that, if that alternative passed and let's say that Act 712 was initiated or that the court make some decision in the interim, I want to make it very clear that...there apparently seems in my estimation that some kind of conflict--I didn't want to say "conspiracy"--but, some kind of conflict going on here. Those are my concerns because they haven't, in this short period of time, have been answered. So, I would ask delegates who are not very sure about it that we ought to get at least some more discussion on it, other than what's being presented here.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: 84-21. Motion to reconsider tabled. Quorum Call: 107 delegates present and a quorum. Previous Question ordered. Section passed: 82-17. Motion to reconsider pending.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Lanier, Pugh, Roy, and Stovall have an amendment. On page 9, line--this has been distributed--On page 9, line 8, following the amendment adopted this date, proposed by Delegates Leithman, et al., add the following:

"Section 29. Severability Clause

Section 29. If any provision or section of this constitution is found by the United States Department of Justice, acting under the authority granted to it by the United States Congress, to be in violation of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 as amended, and its decision is not successfully challenged in the federal courts provided by law, that provision or section shall be null, void and shall not affect the validity of the entire constitution or any of its other provisions or sections."

Explanation

MR. LANIER

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, it's my understanding of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 that we will be required to submit our new constitution to the attorney general of the United States for his review, since what we have done will affect voting districts, and we also have a provision on registration and voting. While I think it is improbable that any fault will be found with what we have done, should the instance arise that there was some defect that needed remedial action, I don't think we would want to be in the position where the entire new constitution would be jeopardized because of the deficiency of some small part. For this reason, I think out of an abundance of caution we should provide a severability clause so that, should this circumstance arise, we could nevertheless proceed with the new constitution and just declare null and void that portion which was found deficient by the attorney general of the United States. Now, the argument could be made here that, well, perhaps, if the attorney general determines that it's not valid that this would occur anyway. Rather than get into that argument, since this is a transitional schedule, I feel that the most prudent way to proceed here would be to set down specifically the language to cover this particular problem. I might further add that we would have another alternate as a solution to this problem if we adopt a resolution that you have on your desk by Mr. Pugh, which also provides that at some later date, after we adjourn sine die, that we could nevertheless be called into session, without per diem, to take certain actions. It may well be that we could be called back to take action to proceed to delete the improper section from the new constitution and proceed on the ballot that way. But, in any event, to make it clear that this type of a circumstance will not jeopardize our new document, I feel and my coauthors feel that a severability clause of this type is in order. If there are any questions, Mr. Chairman, I'll be glad to try and answer them.

Questions

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Lanier, as you are aware, we considered briefly in committee a section like this. We had fears about it which I would like to explain to you and see if you can lay these fears to rest. Suppose there were sections of the constitution that were found to be invalid through some other means than the actions of the federal attorney general's office. Would that mean that then the whole constitution would go? You limit it to that one circumstance. What I'm asking, by inference, does it all go should any other instance make it invalid?

MR. LANIER

Of course, that would depend on what the defect was. There could be defects that would invalidate the whole document. There may well be some defects that do not do that. I think the circumstance that you are referring to would be the one where the portion of the constitution would be challenged in a court of law, rather than the specific procedure provided for in the Voting Rights Act of 1965. It's my understanding of the Voting Rights Act that we can't even go to the people until this determination has been made by the attorney general. If that is true, I don't think we would want to be in the position where his challenge of one of our provisions would keep us from going forward. I think that this would make it absolutely clear that we can do so. The other way, if the people adopt it and then there is a challenge in the court, then the constitution is adopted and it's on the books.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Well, what I'm asking you, really, is why did you draw it in such a limited way? Why didn't you draw up general severability clause?

MR. LANIER

This is intended to apply in the limited circumstance where we have to have a review by the attorney general of the United States. To me, that's an entirely different problem than the problem of going through a court procedure after the adoption of the constitution. Now, if someone would like to come along with a general severability clause, this is a very common thing in the statutes that a severability clause is attached to a statute. Out of an abundance of caution, I would have no objection to that. I think these are the type of things that can be contained in a transitional schedule.

MRS. ZERVIGON

But, speaking as the author of this amendment, this is the only circumstance in which you can envision having a severability clause really be necessary is what I'm saying.

MR. LANIER

This is the thing that I'm specifically concerned about this particular procedure that is authorized by the 1965 Voting Rights Act. I would not want to see our document jeopardized because of some infirmity that we could cure with a severability clause of this type.

MR. ALEXANDER

Mr. Lanier, my question revolves around the same subject and the same question raised by Mrs. Zervigon. However, I have reference to other acts of Congress, especially in the field of civil rights. The Congress has passed many acts that the courts may find to be in conflict with some section of our constitution. I think I can go a little further and ask you if you would object... or do you think that your amendment should be withdrawn to include a general clause that would possibly remedy the whole situation so we wouldn't have to debate this question twice?

MR. LANIER

I think, Reverend, that what, perhaps, you may wish to do would be to draft a general severability clause because--I'm no expert in this field and I don't claim to be--but, this is the only procedure that I know of where you are required before submission of the proposition to get the clearance of the attorney general. Now, maybe there are some other ones, but this is the only one that I know of.

That's why I drew it this way.

MR. ALEXANDER

Well, you are eminently correct, and I have no quarrel with that. But, I have reference to someone who may institute litigation involved in some other section of the constitution on some general civil rights issue, and that's all I'm concerned with. I wouldn't like to see the whole constitution go down the drain on the basis of a single suit or something of that sort.

MR. LANIER

I think that circumstance was, as you pointed out, the circumstance that I got into with Mrs. Zervigon where we are talking about an attack made on a provision or an article or something after the adoption by the people.

MR. ALEXANDER

Right.

MR. LANIER

What concerns me in this situation is that this is a procedure required prior to the submission to the people, and this could jeopardize the whole going forward of this process. That's why I feel we need some type of a provision in this area to make sure that this doesn't happen or, if it does happen, it will not jeopardize the whole document.

MR. STINSON

Well, in the 1921 Constitution there is no severability clause in there; is there?

MR. LANIER

I really don't know, Mr. Stinson.

MR. STINSON

We're looking it up; I'm almost certain it's not. Next thing, as to getting the approval of the United States Attorney General anyone connected with this convention considered how we are going to get their approval prior to the voting on of the constitution by the people, that you know of?

MR. LANIER

I don't know whether anyone has or not, Mr. Stinson. My general recollection is that he's got sixty days or something like that to act on it.

MR. STINSON

The reason I asked that, I brought it up a number of times in the Bill of Rights Committee and everybody says "Well, somebody is going to do it, but everybody's business is nobody's." I think we should, by resolution or something, see that the Louisiana Attorney General or whoever the proper person is, as soon as possible after we complete our duties tomorrow, do that. Are you in a committee that has anything to do with that?

MR. LANIER

I don't think so, Mr. Stinson.

MR. STINSON

Well, would you recommend it?

MR. LANIER

I would tell you this: I think your concern is certainly well founded because this is the law of our land and we must be in compliance.

MR. STINSON

Being you're going to be a judge, would you tell the Chairman to be sure and do that?

MR. LANIER

I'll do my best, Mr. Stinson.

Further Discussion

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I know we're all tired and I hope my thinking is straight, but the experience that I've had with respect to these matters is that the attorney general's office will not even look at this thing until after it has been adopted. In our particular case, I don't believe that this particular document means anything until after it has been voted on by the people. In other words, like with our local government situation, when we reapportion, we can't go to them and say that we plan to reapportion. We have to actually reapportion, then submit it to them. I'm not quite sure how the Lanier amendment fits into that situation.

Questions

MR. STINSON

It's my understanding and appreciation in the past that, before you can introduce a statutory provision and consider it and deliberate it, that you have to get their permission before you can do it; we are enjoined from introducing it.

MR. PEREZ

No, that is not correct, Mr. Stinson. What you do is you adopt your...you enact your law and, once you enact it, then you go to them and you say to them: Will you approve it or not?

MR. STINSON

Well, we've been advised wrong all in the sessions of the legislature then, Mr. Perez.

MR. PEREZ

That's not correct.

MR. ABRAHAM

Chalin, I would like someone to enlighten me, and maybe you can help me on this. Do you mean to tell me that, if we were to submit this constitution to the attorney general and a one provision was in conflict with the Voting Rights Act, that the attorney general has the authority to invalidate the whole constitution, or would he simply declare this one provision as being.....

MR. PEREZ

No, he would only declare those provisions to be invalid which might violate the Civil Rights Act. The point I'm trying to make is that my impression from the experience that I've had with them--I think we ought to have a good chance to take a look at it--is that I don't believe that they can reappoint anything until such time as it is effective.

MR. ABRAHAM

Well, the point I'm trying to make, also, here: even if this thing did go to court, a suit were filed, the court would not invalidate the whole constitution, would it? It would only invalidate that one provision, so why do we need a severability clause then?

MR. PEREZ

No, of course not. I really don't...I'm very much concerned about whether we need this.

MR. AVANT

Mr. Perez, in that eventuality--say that did happen, and the attorney general ruled that some provision didn't comply with the Voting Rights Act, and we weren't successful in getting it upset in court and so forth, and that provision was stricken--what I'm wondering is what would be the net effect of all of that? Then, that provision simply wouldn't be in the constitution, and the legislature would be able, by appropriate legislation, to provide in that particular area; would they not?

MR. PEREZ

Yes, it's the same as we have had happen in the past where that we have had provisions of our 1921 Constitution which has been declared to be unconstitutional by the courts and then, subsequently, the legislature has enacted with respect thereto--such as reapportionment.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Perez, if this body votes to submit a document in its entirety that includes material that is thereafter determined to be unconstitutional, if in the absence of a severability clause of this type, what authority would anyone have to delete that material prior to the submission to the voters?

MR. PEREZ

They wouldn't have any authority whatsoever to delete it; all it would mean is it just would not have any effect, just as with respect to our existing 1921 Constitution, when the federal courts knock it out. It's just there as far as the writing is concerned, but it's not valid.

If I can just suggest, I just don't think we need these provisions.

Further Discussion

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I just don't understand Mr. Perez's position on this matter. I think that there are two ways to look at this. There is a way to look at it that we are bound by the 1965 Civil Rights Act, which says that "any type of legislation that involves voters of the franchise" and what have you "of any state and municipality" whatever's got to be cleared by the United States Attorney General's office. Now we have got that ahead of us, and all we say is that, for that event and for that specific purpose, we ask that this severability clause be placed in this new constitution. That's a totally different animal from what Mr. Zervigon and Reverend Alexander are talking about. They are talking about a suit brought in a court to declare a portion of this constitution unconstitutional. Now, unless, in my judgment, a suit is brought that dealt with the guts of this constitution, that is, the way that the call was made or that we were operating illegally all along, no judgment of any court would declare our whole document unconstitutional. Although certain sections of it, certain articles, may be declared unconstitutional for specific reasons, the rest of the constitution would stand. But, Mr. Lanier and the rest of us are not talking about that animal. We are talking about complying with the Civil Rights Act. Now, when I was town attorney for the little town of Mansura, when they thought about incorporating another portion of that town, they had to get clearance from the attorney general's office of the United States to make sure that they were not in some way or another disenfranchising and/or changing the worded vote of any citizens. All we are saying is--and it makes no difference one way or the other in a sense--that is, if we are premature with this particular thing, then it's not going to hurt anybody; but, if we are not premature, if it is necessary and if we could obviate some hellacious argument being raised against the new constitution because the Attorney General of the United States would say some portion of it is unconstitutional; I think we are saving time and we are saving some money. It's kind of, you know, the old saying that "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." That's all we are trying to do. If you want to get involved in some type of theoretical argument, you may do so. I just think it's a good thing to do.

Question

MR. PUGH

Mr. Roy, I understood the thrust of Mr. Perez's question, or part of it, was when it might have to be submitted before or after the election. As I appreciate this amendment--and it so reads--it's really not contingent upon when they may do it. They may do it five years from now or five days from now, and it still wouldn't have any bearing on the validity of this amendment; is that not correct?

MR. ROY

That's correct, Mr. Pugh.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment rejected: 59-35.]

Personal Privilege

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise to a point of slight personal privilege to say--to explain--that on your desk, right now, is going to be placed the proposed form of the Constitution of 1974 up through Article XIII, which is the constitutional revision amendments. We have not been able, of course, yet to renumber the transitional provisions that passed this evening. As you notice in the outline today, the first twelve Part I transitional provisions are... It's contemplated we'll recommend that you put them in the Transitional Provisions Article. It's being passed out for your inspection and with the hope that, should you approve our recommendations, this is the way the first thirteen articles will read in final form.

Amendment

MR. HARDIN

Delegates Kean, Conroy, and Pugh send up the following amendment:

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

Amendment No. 1. On page 9, line 7, insert the following:
"Section 28. Effect of Adoption

Section 28. Notwithstanding any contrary provision of any law or the prior constitution, this constitution when approved by the electors of this state shall be the Constitution of the State of Louisiana upon the effective date as provided in Section 25 of this article."

Explanation

MR. PUGH

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this proposed Section 28 relates to the model that Mr. Tobias presented for your consideration earlier. At that time, of course, he had reference to a resolution which, even though we'd all seen, had not been formally acted upon by this body. This amendment deletes any reference to that resolution, but would, in my opinion, have the same effect of the Tobias amendment--just without a reference to a resolution. I'd be glad to answer any questions.

Questions

MR. SCHMITT

This accomplishes our purpose which we attempted to get before, doesn't it?

MR. PUGH

Yes, sir, it does. I might suggest to you I deem it very vital to have this in our constitution.

MR. STINSON

Mr. Pugh, would you explain your thought as what would result if we did not include this?

MR. PUGH

Well, Ford, it's like so many things. In the event that this constitution might be challenged in the court, I think, in my humble opinion, a provision of this nature may well be the saving factor in relation to that challenge, frankly.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: 89-2. Motion to reconsider tabled. Previous Question ordered. Section passed: 95-2. Motion to reconsider pending.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Jenkins has an amendment. Mr. Velazquez is going to ask to go back and reconsider something and add an amendment.

Has the effect of adding a new section after the Pugh amendment just adopted. Becomes:

"Section 30. Severability Clause

Section 30. If any provision of this constitution is declared invalid for any reason, that provision shall not affect the validity of the entire constitution or any other provision thereof."

Explanation

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, really, if this is going to be controversial, I'll just withdraw it because it doesn't make any difference to me; but it's a response to the problem Mr. Lanier raised. It's a very simple and standard severability clause; it doesn't relate to any particular act, like the Voting Rights Act. Let me read it for you one more time: "If any provision of this constitution is declared invalid for any reason, that provision shall not affect the validity of the entire constitution or any other provision thereof." So, I urge the adoption of it.

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: 90-2. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Point of Information

MS. ZERVIGON

Just a point of information, Mr. Chairman. I was wondering if the author of that last amendment could declare what Part of the transitional material he meant to go into. Parts I and III are not subject to the rest of the constitution; Part II is subject to the rest of the constitution. I assume he wants it to go in Part III, but we've identified all the others in that respect.

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Jenkins, don't you think that ought to be in Part III? Mr. Jenkins thinks it ought to be in Part III.

MS. ZERVIGON

Thank you, Mr. Jenkins.

Point of Information

MR. TATE

Now, Mr. Chairman, I assume when we vote on the entire subject matter--meaning the entire article--we're not precluding the inclusion of the alternative proposal in that transition article.

MR. CASEY

That's correct, Judge Tate.

STYLE AND DRAFTING AMENDMENTS PROPOSED TO THE FINAL DOCUMENT
[II Journal 1385-1392]

Amendment No. 1

MR. POYNTER

All right. Judge Tate has before you a set of amendments.

The first amendment constitutes and sets forth a proposed organization. In addition to that, he has before you--which has been done by the enrolling room pursuant to the amendments contained in here-- a draft of what the constitution would look like-- double spaced and printed on one side-- as the Constitution would look, if these amendments are adopted. Now, this does contemplate, of course, the inclusion at the particular time of Article XIV dealing with transitional provisions.

Judge Tate, are there other particular . . . are these the only documents? I think there are another set of green amendments there or something.

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

MR. TATE
Mr. Clerk, may I, in my usual incoherent way, explain . . .

MR. POYNTER
Surely.

Explanation

MR. TATE
What you have before you . . . what you will be technically working from is this set of amendments which says . . . a set of amendments which includes in only two instances these blue copies . . . the green copies where it involved a substantial amount of renumbering for your ready check and for the check of those concerned with Civil Service who have already checked it. That is what we'll be working with. It starts Amendment No. 1. Reordering. This is for your ready reference to where if, should you approve it, the provisions and all of the delegate proposals will end up as thus article and section numbered. You do not have here only the Article XIV, Transitional Provisions, that were taken out. . . that we mentioned occasionally during the day that will be Part I. Presumably, those will come back tomorrow with a final report on the things you adopted today in the Transitional Article only. In other words, at the end of the day, hopefully, we'll reach final approval on Articles I through Articles XIII leaving -- though, tentatively, transfer some things into Article XIV, Transitional Provisions, leaving the final arrangement of that article until tomorrow. All right. As one correction sheet to the amendments that we'll hit as we go along to forty-six, etc. All right. Now, earlier this morning we passed out a table of contents, which . . . yesterday we passed out a table of contents and also a table showing how the committee proposals and the delegate proposals adopted in numerical sequence and where their present provisions are found. That's for your cross-check. Now, the series of amendments we have will do the following: First, we will ask your approval of the reorganization into the fourteen articles listed in Amendment No. 1. Then, we will ask your approval of . . . the first three or four are transferring sections from one article to another. Then, finally we will just ask your approval to the renumbering and rearrangement. We will hope that a quorum remains present because, occasionally, when a Section (B) becomes a new section, under the interpretation of some, it needs sixty-seven votes. Now, with that explanation, should I yield to any questions on the general organization, Mr. Chairman, or . . .

Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of Amendment No. 1, which provides for the organization of the Constitution of 1974 as noted there in the fourteen articles listed. Once that is approved, as from time to time we will go and transfer into each one of those articles the various delegate proposals and committee proposals.

Point of Order

MR. KEAN
Mr. Chairman, would it be possible to suspend the rules and adopt these amendments in globo?

MR. HENRY
Why don't we just proceed without doing it like that-- in globo-- Mr. Kean, for a little bit, if you don't mind? I know everybody is anxious to leave, but let's not proceed too fast.

MR. TATE
All right. Mr. Chairman, the first three may take a little--not much--explanation. We added about three or four words and the staff, with its zealous approach, included the whole re-typing; but I don't think it's going to take much explanation if you will bear with me for about ten minutes.

Questions

MR. DENNERY
Yes. Judge, I'm not quite sure where you're putting the alternate provision on. Is that going to stand as scheduled or what?

MR. TATE
Mr. Dennery, I know that my recommendation to the Style and Drafting Committee will be . . . the alternate will be in the Article XIV, Transitional Provisions, under whatever wording you adopt to it as a section of it, which will say, "shall be submitted to the people," ect; and, if it's adopted, then the other articles will be null. If not, it's of null, and no effect.

MR. FLORY
Judge, are we on this heavy set of white amendments here that's Amendment No. 1 on this?

MR. TATE
Yes, sir, that starts with Amendment No. 1. "The organization of the constitution shall be as follows:" It's just to set up the skeleton upon which we would transfer the committee and delegate proposals-- mostly keeping them in the title to which they were passed, but using this set of numbers.

MR. SINGLETARY
Judge, it says, "the Constitution of the State of Louisiana of 1974" Is that technically correct, or would it actually be 1975?

MR. TATE
Mr. Singletary, my understanding from the staff is that, since it will be adopted by the people in 1974, even though it is . . . as a matter of fact, under its present terms, it will become effective on December 31, '74, if that's the correct appellation. Yes, sir.

MR. JENKINS
In that regard, Judge, wouldn't it really be confusing for people, inasmuch as nothing can occur during the year 1974 which will be covered by this constitution, inasmuch as it becomes effective at midnight on the 31st day of 1974? Won't it be confusing, for instance, in cases and things like that to see a date 1974 and the Constitution of 1974 when, in fact, it was not in effect at any time during 1974?

MR. TATE
Well, Mr. Jenkins, . . . Representative Jenkins, you may have a point, although I have no strong views. However, I understand that it's . . . for instance, Act so-and-so of 1974 is title Act so-and-so of 1974, if it's adopted during 1974, even though it be not effective until '75. Understand; that's the technical reason why we're calling the Constitution of 1974; the people and the year 1974, Lord willing, adopted it in '74.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 2

MR. TATE
Amendment No. 2 is in the nature of a technical amendment-- a Style and Drafting amendment-- the Section 18 . . . the former Section 18 in the new thing will become Section 16. But, at the time it was adopted in the legislative proposal it said: no money shall be withdrawn except through specific appropriation. But, subsequently, the Civil Service Article was adopted. So, in order to make it accurate, it says "except as otherwise provided by this constitution," and that is the change in wording . . . that is the change of wording that is here before you--"except as otherwise provided . . ." it said, "no money shall be withdrawn." You just add it in front of "Except as otherwise provided by this constitution, no money shall be withdrawn from the state treasury except through specific appropriation." That's the . . .

Questions

MR. AVANT
Judge Tate, could you tell us, when you go through these amendments, where in this bound document that we have here this appears and where you propose to move it to?

MR. TATE
Well, this is simply a renumbering proposition. It will be found in Article III-- the Legislative Branch. . . Legislative Branch. . . Article III--Legislative Branch, at . . .

Page 16.

MR. TATE
. . . at page 16. It was formerly Section 18, but due to what . . . it's going to be recommended as removing a couple of prior sections into general provisions, it would be Section 16.

[Amendment No. 2 adopted without objection.]

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

Amendment No. 3

MR. TATE

Now, Amendment No. 3 is to the Executive Branch, and it represents combining Paragraphs (D) and (E) of the Section 5 of the Executive Branch Proposal, which had a separate paragraph about the operating budget and the capital budget, which were found word for word and are found word for word in Article VII, which is Revenue and Finance, Section 11, of your . . . and so, rather than repeat the same word, word for word, word for word, the recommended changes to delete those two and combine them into the paragraph noted "The governor shall submit to the legislature an operating budget and a capital budget, as provided by Article VII, Section 11, of this constitution."

[Amendment No. 3 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 3 (A)

MR. TATE

All right. Amendment No. 3 (A), which is . . . Executive Branch -- it was the former Section 18 -- which as passed by the floor said, "A vacancy, as used in this constitution," it said, "shall occur in the event of death, resignation, removal by any means, or failure to take office for any cause." When we restyled the Executive Branch, we -- because we hadn't yet got to this point -- recommended that you put it "Article" -- as used in this Article -- referring to the Executive Branch. We're now recommending you go back to "constitution" -- and this thing will be, in line with Mr. Duval's question at the time, transferred into General Provisions by a subsequent amendment. It will apply . . . definition through out the constitution what a definition makes. In other words, "a vacancy as used in this," we're going to say, "Constitution," as the floor originally said, "shall occur in the event of death, resignation, removal by any means, or failure to take office for any reason." In other words, that applies not only to the Executive Branch, but throughout the state and local government. It was the appropriate amendment to put it in Article X: Public Officials and Employees.

Questions

MR. ABRAHAM

If I understand you correctly, Judge, this was Section 18 of Article IV, but now it has been taken out. I'm looking at Section 18 of Article IV, and it has to do with the determination of inability of statewide elected officials.

MR. TATE

Yes. This Section 18 will become -- and if you look at your table -- it will become Section 28 of Article X and that list of tables, if you approve that amendment subsequently. It's a matter of general definition throughout the constitution. It would seem more appropriate to put it there rather than to leave it in the Executive Branch.

[Amendment No. 3 (A) adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 4

MR. TATE

All right. Amendment No. 4 is to Section 29 in Part III of Article X. Article X is your public officials and employees. The sole change there -- and it was retyped, but it shouldn't have been, -- was that in Section (B) they refer to other officials. . . other officers as we passed it -- we didn't catch that styling change in the retirement -- and it says, "providing for retirement of officers." The sole change is just to make the word "officers" into "officials" as we've used throughout this constitution. The '21 Constitution used "officers" for "elected officers" and other people, or whatever "officer" means. The present Constitution used the word "officials", and that's the sole change.

[Amendment No. 4 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 5

MR. TATE

All right. Mr. Chairman, now this is the first of the ones we're putting into the Part I of the Transitional Provisions.

Now, it technically takes the Subparagraph (B) and makes it a section. The Section 12 -- while we put it in there, we may come back tomorrow and give you another number. . . recommend to you another number, but that is the sole change is that it takes Paragraph (B), which has to do with adjudications prior to 1880, and puts it in the Transitional Provisions with the hope that, by the next constitution at least, we will not have to talk in this much detail about forfeitures prior to 1880.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment No. 5 adopted: 83-0. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment No. 6

MR. TATE

All right. Amendment No. 6 -- and this is, I believe, the last one of this nature we have for you tonight -- is strictly to take Paragraph 15 (B) of -- we may have one more like this -- of Section 16 of Tax and Finance, C.P. 15 -- which had to do with the tidelands settlement, and there's no prescription on taxes -- to take it out without any change at all in text, but to make it a Section 11, entitled "Prescription, Tidelands Taxes," to place it as one of those that will be in the Transitional Measures, tentatively placed there as Section 11 -- the thought being that when the tidelands settlement is over, when our grandchildren can enjoy the proceeds of those wells out there, that this will fade out of the constitution and we shouldn't put it up in the body.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment No. 6 adopted: 79-0. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment No. 7

MR. TATE

All right. Amendment No. 7, Mr. Chairman, simply adds a subtitle -- Compensation -- to the subsection. What used to be Section 43 will be Section 42 of Committee Proposal No. 17 having to do, I believe, with something in Plaquemines Parish -- I forget what. No, levee districts. Everywhere. That's a joke.

[Amendment No. 7 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 8

MR. TATE

All right. Amendment No. 8 simply adds the words "by law" in line with . . . we didn't catch this in the early stylizing when it says "the legislature may abolish or merge" -- "by law" may do it. On about the 5th line, then -- "the legislature by law may establish trial courts." -- we just said the legislature "may", and the intention, of course, was to "by act", and in line with the stylizing through the rest of the constitution . . .

[Amendment No. 8 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 9

MR. TATE

All right. Amendment No. 9, Mr. Chairman, takes out of Committee Proposal No. 26 the tax measure. . . the property taxation measure, the transition measure on the effective date of the property tax, being Sections 18 to 2 -- the former Sections 1 to 3 of C.P. 26 become Sections 18-20 of Article VII. It tells when they shall become effective.

[Amendment No. 9 adopted without objection.]

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

Amendment No. 10

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, Amendment No. 10 simply--all it does is shortens the title.

[Amendment No. 10 adopted without objection.]

Amendments Nos. 11 and 12

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, I do not know if the court wishes . . . if the Chief Justice-- I mean if the Speaker wants to look . . . let me bring up amendments 11, 12, 13, 14, and 15--wait a minute-- Mr. Chairman, I'll just move the adoption of Amendments Nos. 11 and 12, as just simply changes of title.

[Amendments Nos. 11 and 12 adopted without objection.]

Amendments Nos. 13, 14, and 15

MR. TATE

All right. On Section 13, Mr. Chairman, again is simply.. 13, 14 and 15 are all simply changes of title of measure . . . of sections that remain in the same committee proposal or delegate proposal as adopted.

[Amendments Nos. 13, 14, and 15 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 16

MR. TATE

All right. Amendment No. 16, as a change of reference to be accurate under the newly numbering of a certain section of Paragraph (B) of Section 1 of C.P. No. 4.

[Amendment No. 16 adopted without objection.]

Amendments Nos. 17 through 24

MR. TATE

All right. Mr. Chairman, Amendments Nos. 17-24, at least, are self-explanatory changes of reference that will fall into shape in order to change the reference from the former numbering to the new numbering recommended.

[Amendments Nos. 17 through 24 adopted without objection.]

Amendments Nos. 25 and 26

MR. TATE

No. 25 in the Transitional Measure, it . . . because it simply changes the references again 5, 6, 7 to the renumbered article of the Education Article, Article VIII. It's again . . . and Amendment No. 26, again, is a change of reference.

Amendment No. 24 is a change of reference.

Amendment No. 25 is a change of reference-- in other words, it used to be Sections. . . other numbers of Article VIII. I'll look them up if you want, but we're now renumbering them in accordance with the new numbering, and Section No. 26 again changes the reference from Section 9 to Section 8.

MR. HENRY

All right, so we're really on Amendment No. 25, I believe. Judge, are you going to try to take both of them at once?

MR. TATE

Yes, sir.

[Amendments Nos. 25 and 26 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 27

MR. TATE

All right. Amendment No. 27 is one of your green amendments . . . it's blue. Now, this is checked by Mr. Avant and Mr. Flory, and I hope they'll . . . it simply takes that long firemen and policemen thing that they were generous enough to take out of the constitution and just keep for statutory reference; and, instead of having subparagraphs, it has section numbers. As it passed the floor, as shown on the front and back in green, the changes made-- I believe some people who are color blind might say blue--the changes made . . . and the alphabetical numbers being changed to sections as shown in ink on it and there in the amendment is the final text as it will appear in the new constitution. Instead of one long paragraph with a bunch of numbered -- I mean, alphabetized--subparagraphs, it's separate sections as is the rest of the constitution and as will be state and city civil service, should you approve.

[Amendment No. 27 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 28

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, 28 is the other green amendment. I believe that's the only other one that's for tonight. It is a similar re-arrangement of state and city civil service from those long . . . one section that . . . with subparagraphs going to Paragraph (O) or (P) or something into sections in line with the organization and the rest of the constitution.

[Amendment No. 28 adopted without objection.]

Amendments Nos. 29 through 62

MR. TATE

Now, Mr. Chairman, 29 through 62--through 61--and on the correction sheet a 62, are simply renumbering amendments. In a few instances, they may transfer something from another article into Article XIV, although I believe we've . . . I've explained those. Article XIV, as we mentioned, we may come with the renumbering tomorrow. But, all the rest of these, Mr. Chairman, are simply renumbering in line with the organization that you've adopted by Amendment No. 1 of the proposals that have been passed. . .

[Amendments Nos. 29 through 62 adopted without objection.]

Further Discussion

MR. TATE

Well, Mr. Chairman, I've got good news for you. Sixty-two, we just did, too, Senator De Blieux. We snuck it by when you weren't looking on the other sheet.

Mr. Chairman, I have good news for you. What you have done tonight, you now have as . . . subject to your final ratification, the reorganization of everything that you . . . through today--that has passed up until today, permanently, we trust, and are up through Article XIII, with the twelve other measures in transitional provisions that will come back tomorrow with what you passed tonight, and you'll have your final document.

Questions

MR. CASEY

Judge, you have a lot of admirers here for the fine work that you've done. But, some of us were sitting here, we don't know if you've forgotten one amendment in your left pocket. Is that a bacon sandwich, Judge?

MR. TATE

Around my house we don't mention that word anymore.

MR. HENRY

You just bring it home, huh, Judge?

Would you yield to a question from Senator De Blieux?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman, Judge Tate, just for the matter of the records, I want you to understand we're not going to meet tomorrow, I don't believe. We're meeting today, and all these things are going to be thrashed out today, just for the matter of the record.

MR. TATE

I stand corrected.

121st Days Proceedings—January 18, 1974

MR. HENRY

All right. Judge Tate, has that concluded your part of the program? It was certainly good to have had you again.

MR. TATE

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

MR. HENRY

Justice Tate has gotten up. . .he's already torn up two microphones talking to the. . .Looks like a karate expert up there with his hands going.

[Motion to suspend the rules to allow Committee on Style and Drafting to meet at 8:00 o'clock a.m. adopted without objection.]

MR. LANDRUM

Dear brother. . .

MR. HENRY

I see you there. . .

MR. LANDRUM

I just think that Judge Tate and his group have done such a great job. . .

MR. HENRY

Well, they're not through yet.

MR. LANDRUM

. . .and have a lot more work to do, that I would like to also take the privilege of saying to the staff I believe they have done an extremely great job. Thank you.

MR. LEITHMAN

Mr. Speaker, I wonder if it would be in order to ask for a suspension of the rules to reconsider the entire education proposal, the Article on Education. I think we could do a better job if we'd open it up tonight and get into it.

MR. HENRY

Mr. Leithman, I would have to say that you are living proof we could do a lot better with education in this state than we've done.

[Motion to recess to 9:30 a.m. adopted without objection.]

ROLL CALL

[103 delegates present and a quorum.]

PRAYER

MRS. MAYBUCE

I'm a little hoarse this morning, but I'll do my best.
May we pray.

(Singing) Our Father, which art in Heaven, hallowed be Thy name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, and the power, and the glory forever. Amen.

PRAYER

MR. A. LANDRY

As we bow our heads:
We pray, O Lord, that we be forever reminded that there's a time to part, and a time to meet, there's a time to sleep, and a time to eat. There's a time to work, and a time to play, there's a time to sing, and a time to pray. There's a time to plan, and a time to do. There's a time to grin, and a time to show your grit. But there never was a time to quit.

As we approach the completion of our work, and we return to our homes, we ask You, oh, Lord, to please grant us the fortitude not to call it quits. And we also ask that You grant us the strength, the health, and the ability to explain our work to our constituents with the hope and the expectation that they will ultimately accept the new constitution written by Your servants, through Your guidance. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

READING AND ADOPTION OF THE JOURNAL

Personal Privilege

MR. FOWLER

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this has truly been a great experience for me this year. It's one that I hope that I will never experience again in my lifetime. Really, the association with you, and working with you here in the convention has been tremendous. Today, as each of us part and go our separate ways, I hope and pray that each of us will go with the thought and the idea that we have done a good job, and that we have, and will, bring a document to the people that they can buy. I believe that with each of us going back to our respective districts, that we will be able to sell this document without any trouble whatsoever. It's so far superior to the one that we are operating under now. It's not by any means a perfect document. We all know that. But so far superior to what we are operating under at the present time.

Before I leave this podium, I would like to say to each of you, I think that we, as delegates to this convention, owe a great debt of gratitude to the Chairman of this convention, E. L. "Bubba" Henry, and how he stood up under the pressure that has been thrown around his shoulders for the past year, is beyond me. So, I would like for you to join with me in giving "Bubba" a standing ovation.

MR. HENRY

Please, please, take your seats.

MR. FOWLER

Second in command, and the man that keeps "Bubba" straight is the little man right behind my back, David Poynter. David, we owe you a great hand, too.

To the tremendous staff that we have had that has worked literally day and night for the past year in keeping up, and keeping us up with our work as we go along, we owe a great deal of thanks to them.

To the Styling and Drafting Committee, this is one of the greatest. I would like to know just how many man-hours the Styling and Drafting Committee has put in. They have done a tremendous job. They are to be commended for their work.

Next is Mrs. Zervigon and the Transition Committee. You did a tremendous job in yours, too. You worked many an hour, too. Thank you a lot, Mary.

To all other committees, you did a great job; to the Chairmen, duly respected, as you served in your respective places, you did a tremendous job in holding the line on the committees and keeping as much legislation out of this constitution as you have. We want to thank you for that.

So, as we leave here today, and as I leave here, I would like to say this:

As the road rises up to meet you
And the wind is at your back,
May the Good Lord hold you in the palm of His hand.
God bless all of you.

INTRODUCTION OF RESOLUTIONS

[II Journal 1393-1394]

Reading of the Resolution

MR. POYNTER

Next resolution sent up by Delegate Pugh, becomes Delegate Resolution No. 52. I believe a copy of this on yesterday was placed on each of your desks.

Resolution to provide (A) for the form and manner of submission to the electors of the state of the new proposed constitution, together with alternative proposals relating to education, and the delegation of authority relating thereto, to the appropriate officers of the convention.

(B) For the use of the facilities and services of boards, commissions, departments, and agencies of the state, and of the political subdivisions of the state.

(C) With respect to the disbursement of funds appropriated to the convention.

(D) A method of reconvening the constitution without per diem for any purpose consistent with law, and

(E) For the supremacy of this resolution over other actions of the convention.

Explanation

MR. PUGH

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, as I commence to speak on this resolution, I call your attention to three things. I had the staff make these corrections, and copies were to be delivered to you. Let me give them to you at this time. I have numbered the resolution fifty-two on the first page.

On the third page...all right, if you will, on page 3, on line 13, it had been drafted, or typed by the staff with the conjunction "and" appearing after the word "practical" when it should appear before the word "insofar". That is on page 3, line 13. No commas.

Page 4, line 20, your copy may start off with the words, "the requirements". They had failed to put in there "as to R.S.18:567." I'll explain that to you in a minute.

Line 24, I went ahead and put the date in you agreed on yesterday. As I appreciate it, if the Secretary of State will promulgate this constitution on December 2, 1974, then it shall become effective on January 1, 1975.

I now address myself to the resolution.

If I may have your attention...

In my humble opinion, I believe that having finished substantially, if not all of the document, the most important problem that addresses itself to our attention is that Act 2 of 1972 calls upon us to specify the form and manner in which this is to be submitted to the people. I have taken into consideration in this resolution the five things mentioned by the Clerk; that is its purposes are set forth to provide the form and manner as he so described. It also calls upon the various boards and commissions of not only the state, but of the political subdivisions, to grant the assistance which the law, in Act 2 of 1972, compelled them to do. It also refers to the disbursement of funds in relation to the work that must be done by the Secretary of State. It also provides a method for reconvening the convention. This, perhaps, caused the most contention yesterday. I am of the opinion that although we may not be paid a per diem after today, that we do have the authority to have ourselves called back in for the purpose of making such changes as may be necessary to the form and manner of the election. I do not believe we can do anything insofar as the document is concerned. Last is the obvious need for a supremacy of this resolution insofar as our other rules and provisions may be.

If you will turn to page 2, having passed the "whereas", we get to the "therefores". I have started off by tracking the language of Act 2 in the first paragraph verbatim as it appears in the statute. Then, as suggested to you, language which I think would adequately describe what is to be done by the electors at the time they cast their ballot or ballots.

In that connection, you'll notice that I have called upon this to be done at public expense, all in accordance with the statutes. I believe it to be the Constitution of 1974. This provision as it appears here would provide for the constitution with the exception of any article relating to education to be voted for or against by the electors.

As to the alternative provisions relating to education which butts them up against each other, and this provides that a majority of those voting on either of the alternatives relative to education shall be determinative of which article shall be placed in the constitution if adopted. As I pass on, I'll come back to that in a minute.

But, as I pass on, insofar as the resolution is concerned, I call your attention to the fact that unfortunately, the election laws of Louisiana do not fit hand in glove with Act 2 for nowhere is there provision for the things that would have to be done in connection with the adoption of a constitution.

As Paragraph 2, of page 3, I have provided that there will be three commissioners and one clerk; I have provided that there will not be watchers. As you know, under the law, each political party selects watchers. As this act is drafted, we're not dealing with parties, we're dealing with people. I do not believe it to be practical to provide for watchers. However, in view of the fact that we do not know whether or not, at this point in time, the governor will have this election at either a general or a special election, I have provided that in the event that it is in a general election, then, and in that event, the commissioners, clerks and watchers who would otherwise be appointed for that general election would suffice for these purposes.

In view of the fact there is nothing in the election laws relating to the necessity of the use of voting machines or booths, as it's used in the statutes, I provide that they shall be used, and I also have provided that insofar as practical, the provisions of R.S. 18:1161 and 1198....

I had just mentioned that we will be using voting booths or machines as they are used in the statutes. Next, I provide for absentee voting, because unless there is such a provision specifically provided for, there would not be absentee voting. Again, I say insofar as practical, that the provisions of R.S. 18:1161 and 1198 will control.

Now, one of the most difficult problems that might confront us from a time standpoint, from the lack of pay standpoint, we may well have some things that will occur between now and the time that this constitution is voted on, which must address themselves to responsible people, and must be immediately acted upon. I have, therefore, provided a method by which the Chairman and the Secretary of this convention, or either of them jointly or severally, have the full power of this convention to do all things necessary, subject only to judicial review insofar as the manner of the election is concerned.

Please give me your attention to this fact. First of all, we must specify both the form and the manner of the election. You will note that we here today will determine the form of the election; we here today will determine the manner of the election; however, should there be any problems, then these two individuals have the right to make a determination relative to the manner of the election.

Again, in view of the fact that getting us all back together again would be very difficult, I have provided that these people's interpretations of this resolution shall be final only subject to review by the courts. It may be asked, "Why didn't you provide for the Executive Committee?" You've got a mechanical problem of calling any more than two people together. I assure you from my experience yesterday morning at 3 o'clock, until I finished this resolution at 11 o'clock, having during that time trying to digest all the election laws of Louisiana, and make them fit this matter, I came to the conclusion that a provision of this nature was almost mandatory, and certainly foolish not to provide for.

Moving on to 6, I made a method for the cost of the printing of the tally sheets, the cards of instruction, etc., to be paid for by state expense, and also, that those expenses normally occurring in a parish, to which the state by warrant, or the parish by warrant, draws against the state treasury, that also those provisions be made. Now, somebody said, "Well, the state auditor is not the one." All I can tell you is the law says the state auditor is the one. I have done nothing but follow the law insofar as this resolution is concerned. Not custom, but the law.

Next, insofar as the polls are concerned, I provide what is customary; that is that they open from six and that they close at eight. That's a.m. and p.m. respectively. Also, that those persons within the barrier, or within the building where the voting is being done, may continue to vote until 12 o'clock midnight. I specified before, during, and after these hours the commissioners and the clerks and all other parties mentioned in any of these election provisions shall have the powers and duties granted in these provisions. Also, shall be subject to the obligations and the penalties provided for in these provisions. You do appreciate that there are some criminal sanctions relative to elections. In my opinion, they must be provided for.

I have picked out those statutes which I deem applicable, or at least usable in connection with this election. I have by numerical designation, made reference to each and every one of them. I have also given us the provision of a general statement that all other pertinent provisions of Title 18 may be applicable.

Now, insofar as the one change that I mentioned earlier, one particular--one particular--statute relates to votes for candidates. It, in my opinion, comes as close as any of the statutes to help us. Therefore, I have indicated that insofar as that statute is concerned, that when the word "candidate" is used, it shall be presumed to mean the constitution and the alternative. This statutory reference is 18:567. I also, subject to your will yesterday, have provided that the Secretary of State will promulgate the election on December 2, 1974. Nowhere in the act does it say that he will promulgate this election. Now, if you use December 2 and figure your thirty days, in my opinion, that means this constitution would be effective on January 1, 1975.

Now, I call your attention to what I think to be a very serious problem. Yesterday, Mr. Gravel mentioned right before lunch about '76 instead of '75. I did not take the rostrum, but I would be remiss.....as a lawyer if I did not point out to you that if the election is called by the governor, say in April, and if there is an election contest relative to that, it may well be that that matter will not be finally adjudicated in time to trigger this to start off on January 1, 1975. I make no suggestions, I make no recommendations, I merely call that to your attention.

Next resolution calls upon every instrumentality of this state, and its political subdivisions, including by specification that of the Secretary of State and the Custodian of Voting Machines, to cooperate with this body and these designated officials in the fullest. I've tracked the language which calls upon them to furnish services, facilities, employees, and in all ways to cooperate with this body and its designated officials insofar as this election is concerned.

The next resolution provides for the amount of money that Wade Martin advised me that he would need, $45,000.00. I call your attention to the fact (Mr. Chairman, could I have some order, please?)....

I do not appear before you with any pride of authorship as to the contents of this resolution. But, I do address to your attention, the contents thereof, insofar as the fact that without this, we have nothing.

The resolution relating to the Secretary of State authorizes expenditure of forty-five thousand dollars insofar... up to that sum, insofar as it may be necessary and usual, subject, however, to the applicable provisions of the law, 'cause there is some problem about whether or not we can use the funds that are allocated to us for the Secretary of State for this purpose. I have also called upon the Secretary of State to give appropriate and comprehensive instructions as to each of (A) through (I) of things relating to the election.

Now, insofar as the cost of the election is concerned, I want to commend Mr. Fowler, the custodian of voting machines, who not only was extremely helpful to me, he has provided that he has all the funds that may be necessary for this election. So, what was a problem relating to finances for us to grope or contend with, has now been resolved in that connection.

Now, moving on to Paragraph 5, on page 5, I'm sorry, line 20, (excuse me, could I have your attention, please?). At this point I have called upon the Chairman, or a majority of the officers of this convention, either one of them may call this body back into session if for any reason there's a need to do so. I reiterate that we must serve without per diem, in my opinion. I do, however, believe that all that the act requires us to do is to deliver the document to the governor before midnight tonight. That insofar as our being available for recall for any purpose except redrafting, or changing part of the document, that that may occur, and can occur. Again, as a precautionary measure, I tell you it can be the Chairman, or a majority of the officers.

I've also provided that this resolution shall take preference and priority over all the rules of this body which might otherwise conflict with it. I have been asked by the Public Information about the possibility of a provision relating to not only the advertisement of the document, which we have already otherwise provided for, but not only the advisement of the document, but for its distribution. I await their suggestions and recommendations insofar as such a resolution might be.

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

Questions

MR. FONTENOT

Mr. Pugh, along with what you just said concerning the Public Information Committee, in our rules--I know your resolution is going to override our rules---but, at the present time, the Public Information Committee has the job of distributing the constitution in the manner and form that the Public Information Committee decides. There's a lot of work left to do in this particular committee. I think we ought to add a section to your resolution, perhaps, giving the power or the authority of this committee, or the officers of this committee, to act. I talked to you about it this morning. Have you planned anything on that?

MR. PUGH

I'll be glad to help you draft one, or if you would draft it, I'd certainly be interested in having it. I just, from the time standpoint, haven't had a chance to. I think the point's well-taken, and.....

MR. FONTENOT

I'll get with Mr. Juneau, and we'll try to come up with some additional section.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Pugh
...on page 2 of your resolution, on the question of adoption of one of the two alternative provisions relating to education, it's my understanding there is one alternate. I don't see how you could provide for two alternative provisions when we only have one alternate, and the other one is embodied in the proposed constitution.

MR. PUGH

Well, when you say an alternate, it necessarily implies it's an alternate to something. Whatever that something is is the other alternate that I had reference to.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Well, I don't see how it could be an alternate if it is a provision. It's not an alternate. I don't see how you can consider it as such since it is in the body of the proposed constitution. That's.....so I contend there is only one alternate. I hope that you will recognize that and make provisions for one alternate.

MR. PUGH

Well, you may make any amendments you want to make, Mr. Hernandez.

MR. AVANT

Mr. Pugh, as I understand your resolution, it, in effect lifts the provisions with respect to the governance of higher education out of the body of the proposed constitution and sets it over on the side in juxtaposition with this alternative proposition, does it not?

MR. PUGH

Well, they didn't put it to the side. I put it below it. But, other than that, you are absolutely correct.

MR. AVANT

Now, there is no need for you and me to engage in a legal debate at this point. We've discussed this for several days. But, you are operating on the assumption that it is legal and in compliance with Act 2, and not in violation of any other law, to tell the voters that a majority of the people who vote on the alternative proposition will be a sufficient vote to adopt that proposition and to replace in the constitution the provisions which the convention has so far included in the main body of the document.

Now, my question is this....

MR. PUGH

Do you want me to answer that first as to whether or not we agree to that premise?

MR. AVANT

You are operating on that assumption, are you not, that that's legal?

MR. PUGH

Not the way you phrased it, no, sir.

MR. AVANT

Well, you give an admonition to the voters in your resolution. "A majority of those casting votes on the following alternative provisions shall be determinative of which alternative proposition shall be a part of the Constitution of 1974, if adopted."

MR. PUGH

That is correct.

MR. AVANT

So, you are operating on the assumption that the alternative can be adopted by a majority vote of those voting on the alternative without reference to those who vote on the basic document. Are you not, sir?

MR. PUGH

I have submitted this on the premise that under Act 2 of 1972 that this honorable body may determine the form and the manner of the election. I buttress that fact with an opinion from the attorney general which shows it exactly as I have it here.

MR. AVANT

All right. That is the assumption on which you operate. Now my question....

MR. PUGH

Let me tell you one other thing so we can get all the floor laid out.

MR. AVANT

All right.

MR. PUGH

From the day I came to this convention, I have been told, "Look at the Illinois constitution that's got some stuff in it." I believe you will find this pretty well follows that type thing, also.

MR. AVANT

All right. You're making your legal argument.

MR. PUGH

No, I'm trying to answer your question.

MR. AVANT

Well, my question is this.

Suppose you are wrong, and suppose this thing goes to the voters the way you have it set up, and the majority of the people voting on the alternative, but far from a majority of those voting on the constitution, vote in favor of the alternative, and a lawsuit is filed and the court says, "Mr. Pugh, you were wrong."

MR. PUGH

All right.

MR. AVANT

What are going to be the provisions in the constitution with respect to the governance of higher education?

MR. PUGH

None.

MR. AVANT

None.

MR. PUGH

That's right.

MR. AVANT

Be absolutely left up to the legislature by a majority vote, will it not?

MR. PUGH

That is right. No question about it....yes, I guess it is a majority of the legislature.

MR. AVANT

It is also possible, is it not, sir, if you were wrong, that in view of the erroneous instructions on this ballot, that there is a possibility the whole document may fall.

MR. PUGH

Well, now, of course, I'm not going to tell you what the courts might do. They can do most anything, I've learned, in twenty-five years of practice. I will tell you that if you follow the suggestion of Mr. Hernandez, that is to put an education article in the body of the constitution, and then to put this off by itself, you run into the same dangers that you are pointing out right now, in that a court might also determine that as not being effective and constitutional. In my opinion, you must rely on the manner and form authorization as set forth in the act. That's why I told you on yesterday that the amendment of Mr. Tobias' was almost sacramental it was so necessary.

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

MR. AVANT

But, you do agree that if you are wrong, that then at least ...the least consequence of your erroneous judgment will be that there will be no provision in the constitution relating to the governance of higher education.

MR. PUGH

There is that possibility relating to any one of the suggestions that I've seen.

I take that back. There was one suggestion that somebody said to use the 1921 Constitution which would give you a third alternate.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Pugh, I'm looking at your provision giving authority to the Chairman of the convention, and the Secretary of the convention. I'm wondering, don't you feel that perhaps we might want to add a third person in this group to cover the situation, although it is probably improbable, that Mr. Dennery and the Chairman would not agree as to which was the proper course of action? We would have the third person as a tie breaker in that situation.

MR. PUGH

I have no quarrel with that. Quite frankly, I thought of the treasurer at the time I was drafting this. It was more important to me at the time to be sure that if anyone of them "went home," as the Baptists say, that at least there would be one survivor who in turn could handle this for us. I have no objections to it being three. I suggest to you that keep the number small on account of the mechanics. Other than that, I have no pride of authorship insofar as that is concerned.

MR. LANIER

Well, did you know....

MR. PUGH

I don't know that it has to be an officer. I don't really care.

MR. LANIER

Did you know that I discussed this with Mr. Dennery, and he said that although he felt the Chairman was bigger, he felt that he was craftier.

MR. PUGH

I have no quarrel with your suggestion, Mr. Lanier.

MR. STOVALL

Mr. Pugh, do you know that I think this is a fine resolution that you have prepared for this convention at a late time? I am deeply grateful to you for the time that you put in on it. I think I speak for the entire convention in saying that, did you know?

MR. PUGH

Thank you.

It came about by an unusual set of circumstances that would not necessarily benefit any of us.

MR. CONROY

Mr. Pugh, yesterday this convention amended Section 25 of Proposal 38 to make the effective date December...midnight December 31, 1974. That being the case, don't we have to change your date to December 1, 1974?

MR. PUGH

Well, the problem is, I don't know how you can change it to one and make it....I don't know how you can ever get it midnight, frankly.

MR. CONROY

Well, that's what the act says, also, is that it becomes effective at midnight on the 30th day...effective at 12 o'clock midnight on the 30th day after the date on which the Secretary of State promulgates the results of the election.

MR. PUGH

I had "one" in there yesterday, and changed it to "two" because I counted the thirty days. But....

MR. CONROY

But, you were counting to January 1 last time, weren't you?

MR. PUGH

Yes. That's right.

MR. CONROY

So. O.K.....

MR. PUGH

I have no objection to the "one" being in there. I don't care.

MR. CONROY

Thank you.

MR. PUGH

As lawyers, we always have problems counting days.

MR. ALEXANDER

Mr. Pugh, you make several references to the effect that the supremacy of this resolution over other actions of the convention. You make two references. Isn't that rather far-reaching and all-inclusive?

MR. PUGH

Yes, sir. I intended it to be because I think that ultimately, if this...if there's any challenge on the election--you know, sometimes those things happen--that language will be extremely necessary.

MR. ALEXANDER

What do you mean when you say that other actions inconsistent with the provisions of this resolution must be suspended? Could we not suspend some vital actions of this convention as a result of this resolution?

MR. PUGH

Only those that might be inconsistent with this. I'll tell you that yesterday morning about 3:30 I was groping for words. Those are the ones I thought that would be applicable; having to go over all the election laws was enough of a problem without having to go over all the rules and provisions that had been adopted to date by this body. I certainly don't intend--if you've got some other language, I've got no quarrel with it.

MR. ALEXANDER

Now, on the question of commissioners. The watch...the fact that watchers are permitted in our election laws arose from the fact that some candidates were not fortunate enough to draw commissioners at times at some polls. Now, there may be factions that will develop, I hope not, God forbid, but it's possible. If they're not represented at the polls, the system of watchers permits everybody to be represented if they want to, even though they're not paid. Isn't that a little danger? Could you not say in the event a faction is not represented at the polls, then, watchers may be permitted if that individual wants to supply them?

MR. PUGH

I can't think of anything that might get us in greater trouble than that kind of language in this resolution. I gave a lot of thought to watchers. But, the difficulty with watchers are, they are appointed by a political party. Now, I gave some thought to this convention. Each appoints so many watchers. Then the question was raised, "Well, do they get paid?" and "Are we taking care of our friends?" I don't think insofar as the constitution is concerned, that we need watchers. It's not something that I lightly considered. The practicalities of it rule it out in my opinion.

MR. ALEXANDER

You know they're not paid.

MR. PUGH

Yea, I understand that. But, the public don't know it.

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

MR. ALEXANDER

Well, and you know they don't necessarily represent parties. They represent factions or groups.

MR. PUGH

I merely said they were picked by parties. I didn't say they were representatives of the parties they were picked by.

MR. SMITH

Mr. Pugh
.....on page 5 in the paragraph, line 20 to line 28, that concerns me about the Chairman calling the convention back. The legislature in its act, extended the convention until January 19.

MR. PUGH

Yes, sir.

MR. SMITH

Say tonight...today, if we adjourn sine die, how can we legally be called back into session? I mean, I'd just like to know what mechanics need to be used.

MR. PUGH

My interpretation of the act is that we were called upon to deliver to the governor of this state a document no later than that date. Nothing that I find in the act provides that we can't be recalled in. I think our function on that day--would have been on or before that day--but at this time, on that day is to deliver to the Honorable Governor of this state the document. Beyond that, I think we may legally be recalled. Unfortunately, under the terms of the act, we can't be paid for it. Be that as it may, I'm satisfied that people of this body, if it was deemed necessary to do so, would be willing to be recalled without pay.

MR. SMITH

Well, I wasn't sure. I just wanted to be sure we could legally be called back.

MR. PUGH

It is my opinion that you may be legally called back. You may want to discuss that with some other lawyers.

MR. BURNS

Mr. Pugh, I join with the other delegates in commending you on work that you put in on this resolution and other documents in connection with this constitution. But, the ballot on the bottom of page 2 gives me a lot of concern. I'm not going into it because it was discussed by that...what I wanted to ask you was, would you have any opposition to the...either one of the amendments to be offered by Delegate Burson, or Delegate Kean?

MR. PUGH

Well, I haven't seen any of these amendments. I put this out yesterday at noon.

MR. BURNS

Well, it looked like it could be presented to the people in a much simpler form without taking the present article or section of the constitution out of the constitution.

MR. PUGH

The only proposed amendment that I saw that had Mr. Kean's name...the only proposed amendment that I saw that had Mr. Kean's name on it was one that said something about voting for or against, and one that had reference to the fact that there was no geographic distribution requirement as to appointed members. I would object to that if that's what he's doing. I don't know what to do, though. I haven't seen it.

I will tell you that there are these problems insofar as the language is concerned. There's always a problem when you submit on a ballot whether or not there is enough information thereon to call the voters' attention to the facts. I would believe that the issue of five boards for governance, versus two boards for governance, will be the watchwords of this election. For that reason, I use that language. If there's anything else more descriptive, again I have no pride of authorship. It's a question of submitting that to you...you know, put commas, or change. It doesn't make any difference to me. I'm going home tonight, win, lose, or draw.

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Pugh, on line 17, page 1, would you have any objection to deleting the words "consistent with" and in lieu thereof inserting "not prohibited by" to make the sentence read, "a method of reconvening the convention without per diem for any purpose not prohibited by law."

MR. PUGH

I have no objection to that. That's just a provision going into it.

I'd have taken help from anybody, I'll tell you that. I'm still....

MR. LEIGH

Mr. Pugh, the Act 2 of 1972 as I read it provides for the calling of an election, or have a special election, for the purpose of submitting the proposed draft to the people for their adoption or rejection. Now, as I understand the draft that we have prepared here, it contains an education article. Your proposal, as I understand it, proposes to submit that draft to the people without an education article. Am I correct?

MR. PUGH

That is absolutely correct.

MR. LEIGH

And if, as I believe, in answer to Mr. Avant's, if for any reason your submission should be wrong, and the alternative should not be accepted, then you would not have submitted a draft of our constitution to the people. Wouldn't that be correct?

MR. PUGH

I think we could submit as much of a constitution as we want. As the governor said, we could have quit, in fact, I think he might have said we should have quit, at the time we got through with the three branches of government and the Bill of Rights. So, how much we have in the constitution, I don't think has anything to do with the draft aspect of it. I will suggest to you that I used what I have here because in my opinion, my humble opinion, this particular method of doing it, pretermits and defines this question which I think is there--this method in my opinion, is the one that has the greatest possibility of not endangering the constitution from the validity of an election suit.

MR. LEIGH

But, Mr. Pugh, I'll ask you this question, the column which you have to vote for or against the constitution in your proposal, does not contain a draft of the constitution as we have adopted it, does it?

MR. PUGH

That's correct.

MR. LEIGH

I recognize that we might have submitted any draft that... we could quit at any time as you said....

MR. PUGH

That's right.

MR. LEIGH

...but we would have had to submit whatever draft we had. Wouldn't that be correct?

MR. PUGH

That's correct.

MR. LEIGH

This does not submit the entire draft...

...For or against.

MR. PUGH

I was of the opinion that unless and until we delivered the document to the governor, we weren't through with this constitution. If we are through with it, I'm ready to go home. If we aren't through with it, then I think what's outlined here is not only feasible and practical, but more important, is legal.

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Pugh, I'll be redundant in complimenting you on the job that you've done, and I'd like to get a couple of things straight.

Don't you think, sir, that notwithstanding the legal vagaries of the alternate, that certainly the body of the constitution would be valid in any event, because of the severability of it?

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

MR. PUGH

There's no question about that.

MR. DUVAL

O.K.

The second thing I wanted to ask you, Mr. Pugh, is it your opinion that this constitution is still--constitutional convention, in essence, is still alive--is alive until such time as the document is completely and finally ratified and all legal questions are cured? Basically, is that your intent?

MR. PUGH

Except for redrafting the document. I don't think after midnight tonight we can redraft the document. Other than that, I think we can do anything.

MR. DUVAL

In other words, your position is that, of course, we can't make any....we present it to the governor, after today. But, we can come back until...how long do we stay alive is what I'm asking you?

MR. PUGH

As far as I'm concerned, until such time as somebody makes a resolution saying we are through. I don't mean necessarily sine die. I mean one hundred percent through.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Pugh, the question I have treats the...evolves around the legal problem brought up by Mr. Avant earlier.

MR. PUGH

All right.

MR. CASEY

If you've answered it in full, and discussed it in full, I apologize in advance.

MR. PUGH

Not at all.

MR. CASEY

The suggestion...question I would have in the form of a suggestion, in order to cure the problem is, would it not be possible to include in the schedule, and, therefore, be voted on by the people, the method that we are finally going to arrive at in adopting the constitution itself and the alternatives, so that if there is any legal question about the method of adoption of either the constitution or the alternatives, the people would ratify that method and possibly eliminate in advance the legal questions of the method of adoption; for instance, the number of votes by which the alternative is adopted. Would not that be safer to have that method included within the schedule?

MR. PUGH

Yes, I don't know where you were yesterday, but there was an amendment; Tobias' amendment did it, in my opinion. It didn't pass. Then, the amendment that was practically like Tobias' did pass, and does, I think, what you suggest. I said from this microphone, as I discussed it yesterday, I thought it was of paramount importance that it be adopted. I'm pleased that it was adopted by all but two votes.

MR. CASEY

From that viewpoint, specifically, probably, the question I have, is it better to have specificity in that? I know you had...I know Max Tobias' was defeated; I know your's was adopted. But, I question the specificity of it. Whether there was adequate detail included within that particular new section... I think it was a new section, in order to resolve the problem. Or would it be safer, once we adopt this resolution, with specifics included within this resolution, then go back and reinstate these specifics in that particular schedule?

MR. PUGH

I don't think there was any question that Max Tobias had about as fine an amendment as I have heard from these floors. There's no doubt in my mind that that's the best amendment to adopt. The difficulty was one of posture yesterday. Somebody thought a hog was hidden in there somewhere. For that reason, the body decided not to vote for it. But, I tell you that in my opinion, you are right; that that's the kind of amendment that if I were defending this matter, I'd like to pull out of my brief case.

MR. SUTHERLAND

Mr. Pugh, Mr. Avant questioned you quite extensively this morning about the guessing wrong on this proposition.

MR. PUGH

I'd rather you'd not use the word "guess." But, it's all right if you want to.

MR. SUTHERLAND

Well, I'm going to try and explain that.

As an attorney, all of us are familiar with the opinions of the attorney general. But, there are a lot of people in the convention who are not attorneys. For their benefit, I'd like to say this to you, or ask you this question. Either way we go we could be wrong in our judgment on this particular proposal. Either way we go we could be wrong. Now, because that is a fact, we have two ways of going to try to get a decision. We can go to the attorney general and get an opinion, which is not necessarily binding on the court, but which certainly is persuasive. Or, we can ask the Supreme Court for declaratory judgment. Now, as a matter of time this is impossible to follow the latter procedure. So, the only thing open to you at this time is to seek an attorney general's opinion, which you have done, and which you have indicated is in order. In other words, he has approved what you have said. Isn't this the only possible legal thing that you can do now to at least determine that what we are trying to do is going to have some legal effect?

MR. PUGH

Yes, and in answer to your question I will tell you that Thursday, or Wednesday night, I took the position that this--that a declaratory judgment suit should be filed in the district court of this state--it was Wednesday night because I knew that the Supreme Court met in conference on Thursday, and that it'd be immediately taken to them. Once I had the concurrence--not the word--once Mr. Conroy, in whom I have a great deal of respect, Mr. Denney, in whom I have a great deal of respect, and Mr. Kean, had at least concurred that I was of the opinion that what might--you know that if we shook up the voters by rushing into court to get something done--would not be outweighed by the judgment of these fine lawyers.

MR. KEAN

Mr. Pugh, as I appreciate the attorney general's opinion, that opinion related merely to the method of putting the alternative on the ballot, did it not?

MR. PUGH

Yes, that's my recollection.

MR. KEAN

And, the attorney general, in effect, tells you could have a "for, for" alternative if you wished to do so; did he not?

MR. PUGH

Let me look at his opinion. He did not suggest a "for, for," no, sir.

MR. KEAN

Well, he approved of an "or" which, in effect, is a "for, for," did he not?

MR. PUGH

He said a majority of those casting votes on the following alternative provision shall be determined to which article on education shall be a part of the constitution if adopted. You may only vote for one of these alternatives. I took his comma out because I didn't want to emphasize "if adopted."

MR. KEAN

The question of whether or not you would, in effect, pull out of the constitution a particular article that had been adopted by this convention during the course of its deliberations and shut that over in a separate proposal that was not considered; was it?

MR. PUGH

I don't know what he considered. I could tell you the results of his letter because I have it before me. I don't know what he considered, that's the subject in question.

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

MR. KEAN

Well, the mechanics of your proposal with respect to the form of the ballot would require that he now go back and take from the table Article VII, the Education Article, which was deliberated and adopted by this body and then physically, I guesa, remove it from the proposed draft of the constitution; would he not?

MR. PUGH

Well, sir, whatever you mean by physically, of course, you know, we will have to take it out; yes.

MR. KEAN

If that wasn't adopted, you would have to have sixty-seven votes to remove Article VII from the table or whatever it is and then take it out of the draft of the constitution?

MR. PUGH

You'll have to have sixty-seven votes to do anything this resolution calls for.

MR. KEAN

And, then it's your proposal then that we would offer to the people a constitution which did not contain an Education Article?

MR. PUGH

That is correct.

MR. KEAN

And, that would be left over to one side as something that the public would take one or the other?

MR. PUGH

No, sir, it would be below.

MR. KEAN

Well, below, one side, wherever you put it. So, that we do not, then, have an alternate to a provision in the constitution under your plan; do we?

MR. PUGH

An alternate on what?

MR. KEAN

An alternate on education to a provision in the constitution that we are proposing?

MR. PUGH

No, sir. I might suggest to you I considered one other possibility, Mr. Kean, which I think is legally feasible. You could have three columns. You could have a constitution with Education Article (A) in it. You could have a constitution with Education Article (B) in it, and you could have against the constitution. In my opinion, if you've got two votes, and three votes, and four votes we lose the constitution and that is the reason I didn't suggest that possibility. I think that's a fair way of presenting the two issues insofar as education is concerned than putting it up above completely.

MR. HENRY

All right. Mr. Pugh, I believe if there are no other questions then we have some amendment here. So, Mr. Clerk, will you read the first set of amendments?

Mr. Ambroise Landry, do you have a question?

MR. A. LANDRY

Mr. Pugh, is it also possible in alternates if we could get sixty-seven votes to include on the ballot on alternates one big alternate, Article VII, Delegate Proposal No. 98 and also Article XII of the 1921 Constitution?

MR. PUGH

No problem.

MR. A. LANDRY

Wouldn't that eliminate the possibility that if we have...if we would remove Committee Proposal No. 7 from the constitution and we vote on those two alternates only, wouldn't it be a possibility that I would be able to go and vote against the constitution and have no choice to decide whether or not I would like to have Article XII of 1921 instead of the two alternates?

MR. PUGH

The biggest problem that I was confronted with, in my opinion, under this act was that very same thing. I feel that an instance where you have a constitution and you can vote against the constitution and then you can turn right around even though you are opposed to the constitution and vote on a proposition relative to a part of that constitution...that is nutty. However, the conjunction "and" appears in this act and Mr. Conroy, and Mr. Denney, and I took the position that it was better to go in that fashion; it's a real problem....

MR. WILLIS

Mr. Pugh, does not your resolution synchronize the opinion... or opinions of the attorney general and fully satisfy the inquiries of the secretary of state?

MR. PUGH

Well, I will say that it does synchronize on the attorney general. I'm not in the position to discuss one way or the other the present thinking of the secretary of state.

MR. WILLIS

Does it precisely direct the custodian of voting machines?

MR. PUGH

Yes, sir, it precisely does that.

MR. WILLIS

Now, the question I stood up for was this: Isn't it a fact that the present Education Article and the alternative, which we adopted, are considered in your resolution on equal status?

MR. PUGH

Absolutely.

MR. WILLIS

And, that to do otherwise, would not give them equal status?

MR. PUGH

No question about it.

MR. DERBES

Mr. Pugh, what would be the legality or perhaps the legal possibility of having the legislature confirm--I don't know when the election on this constitution will be called--but of having the legislature confirm whatever process we choose here taking into consideration the ambiguity of Act 2?

MR. PUGH

Well, I think they might be able to legislate relative to Act 2. Once the people adopt this constitution, if it's presented to them in a proper form and manner, well I think it will speak for itself. I disagree with some people that say you couldn't even move the capital but premitting that question, I think that the people when they vote on it, they are voting on it, and they can do as they wish, and they have done what they wish. However, if the legislature meets between now and the time it's presented to the people and is in the remedial legislation, then I will be for it.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The first amendment would go to, in effect, the title of the resolution sent up by Delegate Gravel, reads as follows:
Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 17, after the word "purpose" and before the word "law" delete the words "consistent with" and insert in lieu thereof the words "not prohibited by".

Explanation

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentleman of the convention, I had asked Mr. Pugh whether he had objection to this proposed change. I think it just makes it clear that this convention in the event it does act hereafter, that it can act in any manner that's not specifically prohibited by law rather than that we have to act in a manner consistent with some law that may have been enacted. I believe this would give us the latitude we may need in the event it's necessary to take some procedural action in the future. I don't know of any reason why we should have any....

Questions

MR. SCHMITT

Mr. Gravel, I don't understand what you are trying to do. But, it seems to me what you're adopting is worse than what we have right now.

MR. GRAVEL

I think it's absolutely essential for us to say that we have the right to come back into session and act in any manner that's not prohibited by law. There is no law that I know of that provides for us to come back into session. Thank you, Mr. Schmitt.

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

I move the previous question.

MR. LANIER

Mr. Gravel, if we acted consistent with law, then our action would not be prohibited by law; would it?

MR. GRAVEL

To that extent you are correct.

MR. LANIER

What is your feeling that the definition of the word "consistent" is?

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Lanier, maybe I can better answer your question by simply saying this: That my belief with respect to this language is that we would have to come in and act pursuant to some specific provision of law. I don't think that that is the case insofar as our future operations, if any, may be concerned because there's no law that I know of that specifically says that we can act in the future. But, there is no law that says that we cannot. So, we wouldn't be acting consistent with law. We would be acting in a manner where there is no legal prohibition, in my judgment; I think there is a difference.

MR. LANIER

Well, what I'm thinking of is if we have no limitation on our actions, then if we did act, we would be consistent; would we not?

MR. GRAVEL

I would hope what we do would not be prohibited by law. My feeling is, I can't say it any other way, Judge Lanier, "consistent with law" means to me that you are acting in conformity of a provision that was written down, that you can see; whereas, you might be able to act in some manner that does not involve any law that is spelled out defining a course of conduct. There is to me a difference between acting in a manner not prohibited by law and acting in a manner consistent with law; I felt that everybody on the Local Government Committee understood the difference.

MR. LANIER

Well, I think, perhaps, we are getting to a problem of semantics here and that's why I asked you for your definition of consistent. What is your definition of consistent?

MR. GRAVEL

In this context here?

MR. LANIER

Yes.

MR. GRAVEL

It's "in accordance with the law."

MR. LANIER

Now, if our enabling act says we're only prohibited from acting in three ways, which I believe Act 2 of 1972 says; is that not correct?

MR. GRAVEL

No, I think it goes beyond that. I don't think that we can do anything after today with respect to the substance of the document. I think that the enabling act in those three instances refer to what's to be done with regard to the substance of the document. I do think that the act permits us to act procedurally, or with respect to matters of form, or with respect to housekeeping matters after today, and I think there is a difference.

MR. LANIER

Well, as a matter of fact, there is no prohibition from us acting after today in that manner; is that correct?

MR. GRAVEL

As far as I know, there isn't.

MR. LANIER

And, if there is no prohibition, then our conduct would be consistent with law since there is no prohibition on what we are doing; would you agree with that?

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Lanier, I do have a difference of opinion as far as I think your opinion may be as to what this means. I think there's a difference between what is not prohibited by law and what is consistent with law. I can't explain it any other way than I already have.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Chairman, there are two amendments now at the desk would come next in order, dealing with a different manner, if you will, and set out in a resolution for constructing the ballot proposition. Mr. Kean has sent up an amendment to that effect, as has, Mr. Burson.

MR. HENRY

Pick one, let's go. Go with the Kean amendment.

Now, gentlemen, we are fixing to...the Clerk is fixing to read this Kean amendment. I'm sure some of you have words of wisdom that you will want to let us have on this amendment. Now, I would ask that you give the Clerk and the speaker your attention so that we can dispose of all this business as soon as possible.

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, line 13--this is the Kean, Sandoz, Cowen amendment and others--delete the words "one of two" and insert in lieu thereof the word "and" and delete the word "provisions" and insert in lieu thereof the word "provision".

Amendment No. 2. On page 2, line 19, delete the words "and exclusive of either" and delete line 20, in its entirety.

Amendment No. 3. On page 2, line 22, delete the words "and exclusive of" and delete line 23 in its entirety.

Amendment No. 4. On page 2, delete lines 24 through 35 inclusive in their entirety. On page 3, delete lines 1 and 2 in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"The proposed constitution will include a provision for the creation of a single coordinating board for higher education with appointed members and creation of three boards for the management of state colleges and universities unless a majority of those voting in favor of a constitution vote for the following alternates; therefore, those electors who vote for the constitution may also vote on the following: To have a single board for higher education with both elected and appointed members." Of course, set to the right is the appropriate ballot slot.

Amendment No. 5. On page 4, line 22, delete the abbreviative word "sions" and insert in lieu thereof the abbreviative word "sion"

Amendment No. 6. On page 4, between lines 33 and 34, add the following:

"The custodian of voting machines shall arrange the ballot and the voting machines in such a manner that those electors who vote against the constitution will not be permitted to vote on the alternative proposal set forth in this resolution."

Explanation

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I would like to try and outline by way of background the problem that I think that confronts us in dealing with this question of the alternative proposal. Those of you who were listening the other day may recall that I raised the issue as to what vote would be required in order to adopt the alternative. Frankly, there are about four approaches to this problem. I would readily admit that in my opinion as a lawyer, such as I am, that there is only one approach that I think would safely avoid any question. That approach would be to have and remain in the constitution the present Article VII which we adopted by a vote of sixty-seven members of this convention and more, which is a part and parcel of the constitution that was given to you last night. Then, have the alternative proposal and provide that a majority of those who vote for the constitution and for the alternative proposal, a majority of those voting in the election would carry those particular items. Now, there is understandably concern about that approach. Mr. Pugh has come up with an approach which would involve taking out of the constitution the provisions of Article VII which we have enacted and, in my opinion, not providing an alternative but merely two options for the voters of this state which could result in not only no Educational Article in the constitution, but create serious questions as I did as to the validity of the action taken on what was left of the constitution in that same election. Another approach would be to leave Article VII in the constitution and then provide that on the alternative only a majority of those who vote on the alternative would be required to pass it. Now, as I view that alternative, it would permit less than a majority of those who voted in the election to override what a majority have done in adopting the constitution, assuming the constitution is adopted in that same election. I think that's not the democratic way in the first place, but I think it raises a very serious, serious legal question in the second place. Now, my amendment was drafted in an effort to try and raise between these shows that I've just outlined for you. My amendment is predicated upon the idea that only those who vote for the constitution ought to vote on the alternative proposition. Now, I think this can be legally done. I think it can be done within the framework of the authorization for this convention by Act 2 of 1972. It seems to me to be inconsistent the more you look at it and contrary to good logic to say that a person who votes against the constitution may, at the same time, exercise his preference with respect to an alternate that he has, in effect, already turned down. I think the amendment which I have drafted and which I can say, I believe, has the approval of those on the other side of the fence, including Mr. Juneau, would simply permit, would simply provide that in order for the alternate to pass and then supercede what is in Article VII of the present proposed constitution it would take a majority of those voting in favor of the constitution to adopt that alternate. In order to carry that out, it would be necessary to lock out, so to speak, those "no" votes once they had voted no; otherwise, it would be difficult, if not impossible, to determine whether or not you have, in fact, gotten a majority of those who voted in favor of the constitution. So, I think my amendment is a fairly simple approach to the problem. It simply says that those persons who vote for the constitution then have the right to exercise the additional vote to determine whether or not they prefer the alternate. If a majority of those then voting for the constitution vote for the alternate, then the alternate then becomes the Educational Article instead of the article which was contained in the constitution. I don't see any other reasonable approach to the problem. We've given a lot of time and study to it in an effort to otherwise resolve the difficulties that exist in trying to utilize the other alternatives that have been suggested. I believe that it can be done legally. If the Act 2 in Section IX said that "we will afford the voters the right to vote for or against the constitution and on the question of the adoption of such alternative proposals as may be proposed." It further provides that "we may submit the proposal of acceptance or rejection of the constitution or any alternative proposal in such form and manner as it may determine." I don't think there would be any question at all. I don't think there would be any legal question at all that could be raised with respect to this proposal that Act 2 of 1972 had provided.

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

Vice Chairman Miller in the Chair

I will finish my remarks briefly by reiterating. I don't think there would be any question if Act 2 had specifically provided that in the election to be held on this occasion that those who voted for the constitution would be authorized to vote for any alternate that might be submitted. I think the broad general language of this Act 2 of 1972 would clearly permit what the legislature could have specified if it had desired to do so. I think it left with us the flexibility of making that decision. I think under the circumstances that what we have here proposed does carry out the purpose and the intent of the Act--I think it does permit us to get the matter before the voters in a fair manner. I suggest your approval of it.

Questions

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Kean, at the outset, of course, I want you to know that I have great respect for your ability as an attorney.

MR. KEAN

Let me say at the outset, Mr. Duval, I'm not warranting anything.

MR. DUVAL

Well, yes, sir. Well, I was hoping you... I think there is definitely a prohibitory defect in Amendment No. 6. I want you to know....don't you know, Mr. Kean, that I have no strong feelings as to how this goes on the ballot? I do have very strong feelings about the new constitution. Don't you think, Mr. Kean, that the other legal questions that have been raised are frivolous compared to the very, very serious legal question in my mind that's raised by Amendment No. 6?

Well, my question was rather lengthy. Perhaps I can be a little more succinct. I would love nothing better, Mr. Kean, than to have any vehicle which would attempt to compel people to vote for the constitution. I'm all for it; I think we need it desperately. But, I just think, Mr. Kean--or don't you think... obviously, you don't--but have you thought about the fact that it would be certainly a disenfranchisement of those who voted against the constitution because then their right to say, in the event it passes, what type of educational system they want would be obviated? Don't you think that presents a serious legal question?

MR. KEAN

I have considered that at great length, Mr. Duval, and I admit that it raises a legal question just as Mr. Pugh did with respect to his. I think, however, that you can certainly take the position that a person who votes no on the constitution under those circumstances has, in effect, cast a ballot against the alternative proposal, and that therefore, you leave to those who vote for the constitution to make the decision as between them.

MR. DUVAL

Well, Mr. Kean, in any event, don't you think there should be some language saying that a vote "no" against the constitution is also tantamount to a vote "no" against the alternative?

MR. KEAN

That's correct.

MR. PUGH

Mr. Kean, is it not a fact that you were of the opinion about two days ago that everybody who voted had to have the right to vote on the alternatives?

MR. KEAN

Yes, sir.

MR. PUGH

You have changed your opinion since then?

MR. KEAN

After further discussion and review of it, I have concluded that you could do it in this manner. I don't warrant any legal opinion with respect to it, Mr. Pugh.

MR. PUGH

As I understand, you were also of the opinion that the majority of those who voted for the alternative provision would have to control. Have you changed that opinion?

MR. KEAN

No. I said at the outset. Mr. Pugh, that my preference, both from a practical and legal standpoint, would be to provide that the alternative would have to be adopted by a majority of those who cast votes in the election, and I still stand on that. I have another amendment prepared to offer in the event that this fails which would just do that. I simply say that in this case I think you could take the position under the language of Act 2 that you can count the votes for the constitution and take a majority of those who vote on the alternative under this....

MR. PUGH

Buttering the bread, is it not true, then, what you're saying is that if a fellow votes against the constitution, and he can't vote on the other, and only those who favor the two vote...if you will, the two board, will be voting below, that that's not giving the five board and the two board an even shake; is it?

MR. KEAN

I would think this would give him an even shake; yes.

MR. PUGH

You're telling me now, first of all, that you have an opportunity if you vote above the line, you may vote for or against the five-board, but when you get below the line, you can't vote for or against that in view of the fact that you voted against the constitution; therefore, you don't have that privilege; isn't that right.

MR. KEAN

My amendment would limit the vote on the alternative to those who vote in the election for the constitution.

Further Discussion

MR. KOY

Madam Chairman, it appears to me--and I just wish we'd meet the issue head on here--everybody knows what this is all about. What I want to address to the Chair is: Is there any way that we can get the proponents of the Kean side and the proponents of the Juneau side to get before us the basic issues so that we can cut out all this legal hodgepodge argument that whether what we're doing is right or not right--and if he loses one point, then he brings up another amendment--and get this issue to this convention before we find ourselves in a position that we have nothing to submit to the governor of the State of Louisiana? Now, we've been arguing this since the other day at the White House Inn, and now we just have a response made that if this is defeated, I've got another amendment to say that it takes a majority of those voting on the entire document to be overridden by the people who vote on the alternate. I just think we ought to get to the meat of the coconut and get going. I'd like to ask if there's no rule or no point of order that can be raised if we do that.

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Roy, we can do what we've been doing in the past. We can entertain a motion, if it would be satisfactory with the delegates, to limit debate to a length of time. Do you make that motion, Mr. Roy?

Motion

MR. ROY

Yes, I make the motion that we limit debate on this matter for thirty minutes on each side.

MRS. MILLER

You move to suspend the rules that we could limit debate... what, thirty minutes on each side?

MR. ROY

Yes, ma'am.

[Substitute motion to limit debate to fifteen minutes for proponents and fifteen minutes for opponents adopted: 69-51.]

Point of Order

MR. ROEMER

For a point of order, Madam Chairman. I didn't hear anything in the motion that precluded people who are on the list for questions of the introducer of this particular proposal to be cut off. Mr. Pugh was in the midst of asking questions, and I know several people on the list to ask questions. Are they going to be summarily cut off?

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Roemer, we extended Mr. Kean's time ten minutes. He went twelve minutes beyond the extension. There was no other motion. We couldn't possibly get to the fifteen people for questions in twelve minutes.

Point of Order

MR. CHATELAIN

Madam Chairman, I certainly share Delegate Roemer's opinion on this. Many of us thought we were going to continue to ask Mr. Kean questions. If you'll remember, Madam Chairman, it was only a couple of minutes before he had extended his time, and he was still speaking. I would certainly appreciate it if you would check the time, Madam Chairman, and see if we couldn't continue to ask a few more questions. I think it's vitally important.

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Chatelain, Mr. Kean exceeded his time on his first five minutes; he exceeded his time on the extension. There was no motion before we made this other motion to extend this.

Now, we have voted on this other motion to limit debate. There was no other motion to suspend the rules to give him additional time.

MR. CHATELAIN

Madam Chairman, would it be in order for a motion at this time that to limit the proponents and the opponents to three minutes apiece to give more people a chance to speak? Would it be in order to make a motion of that type?

MRS. MILLER

That motion would be in order, Mr. Chatelain.

MR. CHATELAIN

I move that we limit the proponents and the opponents each three minutes.

[Motion adopted: 80-40.]

Motion

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Mrs. Miller, I don't know if it's in order, but in order to determine the wishes of the convention, it seems that a motion to have no debate would be in order. It seems that we really want to cut off debate. In order to determine if that's the will of the convention, I think maybe I'd make that motion-- that we have no debate whatsoever.

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Chatelain, the situation as it exists right now is we have one motion that has been adopted to limit debate to fifteen minutes for each side. We've also had a second motion adopted to limit debate of each speaker to three minutes. So, this would give five speakers time to speak on each side.

MR. POYNTER

Your motion is [...] to the previous question on that amendment, if you wish to make it, sir.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

I withdraw the motion.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

Point of Order

MR. STOVALL

Mr. Chairman, Mr. Pugh was in the middle of asking a question, and he was stopped from asking the question because the tape had to be changed. I would respectfully request that Mr. Pugh be permitted to conclude his question to Mr. Kean before we continue with the speaker.

MR. HENRY

Reverend Stovall, as happens so many times in the convention, the gentleman had...the time had been extended for the man, as I appreciate it, more than once, and time ran out. Now, you all have limited debate on this amendment, and there's nothing we can do because all I can do is run the convention as a result of the motions that you all make and do adopt.

Further Discussion

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of this convention, I hope you will pay attention to me for during this short period of time to see if I can get something over. But, I'd like to say this: the proposals in this Kean amendment are the most ingenious method I've ever seen to deprive a voter of his legal constitutional rights to vote on an issue. You are inviting opposition to this constitution which should not be because those people who want the two boards have got to go to that-- two boards instead of five--have got to go to the constitutional election and vote against the constitution or else they won't get a choice to make their position known on the two-board issue. It makes no difference to me whether you want five boards or two boards, but let's don't deprive the voters of their legal constitutional rights because you're making a voter vote against himself before he can cast one for himself. Now, what kind of an election is that? I'll tell you this: if that resolution is adopted, I'll guarantee you this, it will be upset in the courts because it's just as unfair as it can possibly be. You've got to give the voter an alternative, and if he votes for the constitution or against the constitution, he has a right to decide, if the constitution is adopted, whether he wants five boards or two boards. It's as plain and simple as that. I tell you this: please don't adopt something, which I feel quite certain as a lawyer the courts are going to knock down as being an unconstitutional deprivation of a voter's right to this. You are jeopardizing the constitution in that particular matter. Now, if you adopt the resolution as originally adopted, it provides the alternative which Act 2 calls for. At the present time, you have but one board. The Board of Regents is the only board you have because the Board of Supervisors, the Board of Education, and the Coordinating Council were abolished by the legislature in 1972 when they set up the Board of Regents. This is the way to put back into the constitution all of those boards, and I think the electors ought to have a right to decide one way or the other. Let's don't jeopardize the constitution by forcing people to go to the constitutional election and vote against the constitution in order to try and preserve the one board or the two board idea. Let's give them a choice. Let them vote on the constitution, and then vote whether they want five boards or two boards. That's the way we should do it.

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

I ask you in all good graces: let's defeat this Kean amendment, and at least do it legally so we won't have that threat in the courts because it's just as unconstitutional--in my opinion as a lawyer, and I've tried a few cases--as you can possibly write one. It's an ingenious method to be sure that you, the voters, will not have a chance to vote on the alternative or the two-board issue. Now, I'll answer questions if my time allows it.

Questions

MR. FAYARD

...In fact the Kean amendment requires a person who favored the three...at least the one board concept to have to vote for the three board concept in order to get a chance to actually express what he truly desired to be in the constitution?

MR. DE BLIEUX

That's right. So, he's got to vote against himself to start with before he can vote for himself.

MR. FAYARD

Would you say this is actually giving the voters a choice?

MR. DE BLIEUX

There's no choice in this, not in accordance with Act 2, which gives the right to set up alternatives on the ballot.

Further Discussion

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, there are many ways which we can constitutionally put this alternate on the ballot. Some of them you're already seen on other ballots in other states. I realize that political considerations have gone into the formulation of this particular provision of which I certainly see no objection. But, unfortunately, these considerations have jeopardized the entire article because the way it is submitted--especially the Amendment No. 6--it is patently unconstitutional. So, don't please, merely for the sake of expediency, to get this over with, because certain forces have agreed, don't vote for this--especially Amendment No. 6--because it's going to create...what you're going to have is you're going to have your entire educational article declared unconstitutional because it sets up many, many constitutional problems. I can almost guarantee you'll have a suit, and that the plaintiff will probably win. I urge you to vote against Amendment No. 6, especially.

Questions

MR. ANZALONE

Mr. Duval, insofar as this amendment is concerned, bringing the problem down to numbers, if one hundred thousand people were to vote for or against this constitution and sixty thousand of those people voted in favor, forty thousand against, would not five-sixths of the people who voted for adoption of the constitution have to vote before this alternative would be acceptable?

MR. DUVAL

I think that's correct.

MR. ANZALONE

See, you're not talking about a simple majority; you're talking about getting five-sixths of the people who are entitled to vote, which is over eighty percent?

MR. DUVAL

I think that's right. Yes, sir.

MR. BERGERON

Stan, I'm reading to you from Act 2 which set up the constitutional convention. "The constitution as drafted by the convention, together with any alternative provisions proposed for submission, shall be submitted to the people for their adoption or rejection." Now, if someone doesn't vote for the constitution--they vote against it--and they're not allowed to vote for the alternative, is that in accordance with Act 2?

MR. DUVAL

I don't think it is. I don't think it's in accordance with the Federal Constitution, actually, although I have no particular feeling on how we present it. I'm not emotionally involved with the educational provision. I merely want to see it put to the people fairly so the people can make an intelligent decision, rather than put to the people to...

Further Discussion

MR. CONROY

I rise in strong opposition to this amendment. I sincerely hope that we will not allow the fight between LSU and USL supporters, that has permeated this convention at the various times we have discussed this issue, to endanger a whole year's work. I feel very strongly that this amendment does exactly that because I don't think this process will just endanger the education article; I think that a court will readily throw out the entire election procedure as depriving the voters of this state of an appropriate opportunity to voice their opinion on the issues that ought to be presented to them in this constitutional ratification vote. For example, if I have no desire to cast a vote and I have no axes to grind one way or another on the election issue, I am forced to vote, to take sides on that issue the way this is cast. I have to vote. I have to vote somewhat in opposition to myself if I want to vote for the two-board system because I have to vote first for it and then against it. I think that this is patently an unfair system for us to ask the voters in this state to go into a voting booth and to make decisions on. I beg you to defeat this amendment. I think the Pugh proposal was well worked out. It had been discussed. At that time I think that those that had considered it thought it was a fair approach. There may be other fair approaches, but certainly, this is not one of them. This is most unfair, and I urge you to put aside your personal prejudices, put aside your views about LSU or USL, and vote this amendment down.

Questions

MR. FONTENOT

Mr. Conroy, you said that Mr. Pugh's resolution would be more acceptable to you, but wouldn't that in fact pull out what the convention by majority vote has already approved insofar as CP 7 is concerned?

MR. CONROY

That's...

MR. FONTENOT

It would have to actually pull it out of the present document and offer the people the unfinished...an incomplete document; is that correct?

MR. CONROY

At this time this convention has decided on two educational proposals, an original and an alternative. That's why I say there may be other ways to present it. I think Mr. Burson has presented some...that may achieve the objective you want.

Further Discussion

MR. ROEMER

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, to make it quite clear, I am an opponent to this particular proposal, particularly the Amendment No. 6. I'm not going to try to argue the vicissitudes of the law with you; I don't think I'm capable of that. I'm just going to argue on what I think is right and what, as an average citizen, the people might want to do in this regard. I think it's a phony and fallacious argument to say that if a man in his due process of thought, thinks that the document we present to him is not capable of his support and votes no, that that same man, therefore, does not have the right to decide in case the constitution does pass what's going to be in it in regard to education. My goodness, doesn't your kids that need to be educated, doesn't his stake in this world depend on the education of his children? Even though he might think this document does not warrant his support, at least he has the right, I believe, to decide what the educational system ought to be in case the constitution passes. Now, we're not left here with no alternative in case this proposal fails. I think that the Burson amendment that I have on my desk states the issue simply and clearly: that is, that everyone who's an eligible voter has the right to vote on the constitution. Those same voters, whether they vote yea or nay, in turn have the right to vote on these alternatives, and the majority should rule in each case. I think that makes good, common sense, and according to the legal opinions that I have been able to garner, I think we're under the protection of a law and the vicissitudes of Act 2 if we do that. I urge you: don't get involved in this LSU-USL business, and you can't see the forest because of the trees. I personally don't care; I'm not an educational expert. I think both systems are untried and unproven and might have to be changed in the future. I think we make a mountain out of a mole hill here. But, I further believe that we cannot deny—we should not deny the people who vote on this constitution, whether they vote yes or no, the right to go down and vote on these alternatives as they see fit. I urge you to defeat this particular proposal.

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

Question

MR. A. LANDRY

Buddy, I'm sure you're familiar with the fact that if this election is held at the general election in November, that the Louisiana law will not prevail, that it will be under the Voting Rights Act of the United States government, and therefore, it is a great possibility that it will be unconstitutional?

MR. ROEMER

No question about it in my mind, Ambrose. I think...

MR. HENRY

You have exceeded your time.

Further Discussion

MR. WEISS

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, in three minutes I'd like to make three points with you. The first has been eloquently made by the attorneys here already. But, when we in Madison reach a complex problem, and differ professionally, we turn to the patient for their decision. The attorneys, I believe, do likewise. They turn to the courts. I believe one famous judge in the Supreme Court said "The courts are the people's forum." I can tell you that the proposal of Mr. Kean, although simple and fair in his mind, is totally wrong. The courts, if I had anything to do...or say anything about it, would rule against such a proposal.

I would like to speak with you momentarily about the impracticality of this simple and fair legal conception. It is totally impractical. I sat on the Elections...Bill of Rights and Elections Committee. The amount of money that would be involved is sometimes quite extensive to put an "on" and "off" switch on these ballots. This is a very, very serious thing. Way back two hundred years ago, James Madison made the statement that most of our political evils are traced to commercial ones as most of our moral may be to political. This is another hooker in this amendment. The economic aspect of this may be prohibitive, and we do not know the cost of this. I urge you to vote against this amendment. This is dangerous politics. As so many of you have said before, there is no sense in throwing out the baby with the bathwater. Let's not throw out the constitution with this type of alternate amendment.

Questions

MR. FONTENOT

Dr. Weiss, have you ever voted in elections where you were forced to vote for a certain number of candidates--say you have to vote for five candidates, and if you voted for four, your vote didn't count, or if you voted for six, your vote didn't count? Have you ever been forced in that position?

MR. WEISS

I have had the option of voting for several candidates, Mr. Fontenot.

MR. FONTENOT

I mean, though, didn't you ever vote in an election where if you didn't vote for five, your vote didn't count at all?

MR. WEISS

No, I voted for one of the five, I thought, or two of the five, or three of the five, depending on the number that are running.

MR. FONTENOT

But, you never voted in an election where you had to vote for all five numbers, or your vote wouldn't count?

MR. WEISS

Not that I'm familiar with, although sometimes only one candidate, may....

MR. FONTENOT

Well, in the past, there have been elections where if you wanted to vote, you had to vote for five people. If you went in there and made a mistake and only voted for four, your vote was canceled.

Now, don't you think this would be the same thing? If you vote against the whole constitution, your vote is canceled. You don't have the right to vote for alternatives. This is the same logic.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Recess

[Quorum Call: 120 delegates present and a quorum.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

All right. Mr. Buraon at this time sends up amendments. Now the amendment that he's going with--he had two amendments passed out. One of them has the number 2 on it. It's the one without the number 2. That has no number appearing on it.

The caption, Provision, in addition to the one he's going with is boxed in, if you will--bold faced.

Amendment No. 1. Page 2, delete lines 16 through 35, both inclusive in their entirety. On page 3 delete lines 1 through... and 2 in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Official ballot. The full text of the proposed constitution and the alternative proposition is available for inspection at your polling place. If the proposed constitution fails to receive a majority of the votes cast, alternative issues also fail. Please vote on both issues 1 and 2. One: vote for one. The ballot spot for the proposed constitution, 1974 Constitution, ballot spot against the proposed 1974 Constitution. Bold faced and blocked off, the proposed constitution will include one Board of Regents with appointed members and three management boards for governance of higher education. Unless a majority of those voting (he strikes out the word "in this election," the words "in this election." Take those words out) unless a majority of those voting on the alternative, vote for alternative 2 (B). Two: vote for one. Ballot slot 2 (A). Four, one Board of Regents to higher education with appointed members and three management boards, or ballot slot 2 (B), for one board of regents for higher education with appointed and elected members and no management boards."

Explanation

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, we have reached a moment of truth in this convention. Just so there will be no misunderstanding about where I personally stand on the issue involved, I voted on both sides of it. I intend, when I say I voted on both sides of it, those of you that have been teasing me, I have various nicknames, "Super Fly" is probably the best one that I've heard so far.

I voted in favor of the committee proposal when it was proposed. But, I voted to put an alternative on the ballot. I intend to campaign in my district for the committee proposal which is not too hard to figure out if you figure that LSU-E is in my district. However, I think I can understand the position of the other aide since I am a graduate of USL. But, I'm for the committee proposal. So, let's not make any mistake about that. I'm going to campaign for it. I know Walter Champagne is going to want that transcribed in the record. But, the problem that we've got here, and the reason I had two amendments prepared is we've reached a stage where the basic issue between the two contending parties is, as I understand it, the people who are for adoption of the alternative say the issue on education should be decided only by a majority of those voting on the alternative, because to require a majority of the total vote means that all those who fail to vote on the alternative at all, have, in effect, cast a vote against the alternative, just as if one of us elects to walk out of here, we have, in effect voted against 67 votes needed on a particular proposition. So, the amendment without the number would espouse that position, and make it plain if you'll look at the boxed in material, that the proposed constitution will include the committee proposal with the three management boards, unless a majority of those voting on the alternative vote for alternative 2 (B).

The second amendment I have prepared, which I state here and now, I will not withdraw, and is available to anyone on either side, use instead the language that the majority has to be a majority of those voting in the election, which as I understand it, is the position of the proponents of the LSU Board on this particular subject. So, the choice is there for you to make. If you want a majority of those voting on the election, including those who don't vote on the education proposal or alternative at all, to decide that issue, then you will vote against the amendment that is now on the floor. If you feel, however, that this subject should be decided by a majority of those voting on the alternative, because a lot of people will skip voting on the alternative altogether, as I understand the basic position of the proponents of what we with shorthand purposes call the "USL side" contend, then you will vote for the amendment that's now on the floor. I think that otherwise this is a legal ballot form because I tried to copy it as exactly and appropriately as I could....

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

Point of Information

MR. KEAN

I understood Mr. Poynter to say that the proposal we were considering did delete the words "in this election" from it. There seems to be some confusion on the floor, however, and I'm wondering if we couldn't have the Clerk, or somebody, go ahead and make a corrected copy of this and pass it out so there won't be any confusion. There are people looking at an amendment which says, "in this election," and Mr. Poynter announced that that language had been taken out. I'm afraid a lot of people didn't hear that comment. I'd like to get the corrected amendment before them so everybody intelligently votes on them.

MR. HENRY

Well, now, Mr. Kean, Mr. Clerk, that wording has been deleted, has it not?

Mr. Kean, don't you think it would be much faster, and just as simple for everyone to take their amendment and scratch out the words, "in this election"? It takes one fountain pen to draw through three lines.

Explanation continued

MR. BURSON

Let me explain again, now. The purpose of this amendment is to place squarely before you what seems to be the issue of contention between the parties that have fought this issue so hard. That is otherwise, the ballot would be identical, but the issue here is whether or not you want the education proposal to be approved by a majority of those voting in the election, or whether you would be content to permit that issue to be decided by a majority of those voting on Proposal No. 2 on the alternative. That is the difference in the box that's in the middle between No. 1 and No. 2, so that if I went into the voting machine theoretically I would walk in and I would read at the top that the full text of the proposed constitution, and the alternate proposition, is available for inspection at your polling place.

If the proposed constitution fails to receive a majority of the votes cast, alternate issues also fail. So, if the voter would be apprised at the outset that it does him no good to vote just on the alternate, if the constitution fails because there would be nothing for the alternate to go in, then he proceeds, and is asked--now, this is a request; it's not mandatory--he is asked, please vote on both issues 1 and 2. There's been some discussion of whether or not you could require it. But, the opinion seems to be that this would mess up the voting terribly as far as the mechanics of the voting machines are concerned. So, we simply request them. We are calling their attention again at this point as the Montana ballot did, to the fact that there are two separate issues to vote on.

They proceed down, then, and they vote for or against the proposed constitution. That box, which is again from the Montana ballot, just to be sure again that they don't get confused at this point, tells them that the proposed constitution will include one Board of Regents with appointed members and three management boards for governance of higher education, unless a majority of those voting on the alternative, vote for alternative 2 (B) which is the single board for higher education, with appointed and elected members. If they understand that unless proposition 2 (B) gets a majority of those voting on No. 2 out of the total vote, but of those voting on No. 2, then, at that point, what is contained in the committee proposal is the education article of this convention. That, I think, states it clearly as it can be stated under the circumstances right now. Certainly I have no pride of authorship about the language. That can be dressed up. But, I think this gives you a workable form to follow, and one that would be understandable and comprehensible by the voters. As I say, I want to emphasize again in an attempt to be as fair as I know how, that there are those that feel here very strongly that it ought to be a majority of the total voting in the election on that question to determine the education issue. I'll answer any questions.

Questions

MR. FONTENOT

All right.

Mr. Burson, under these...under your proposal, suppose, I'm going to use numbers, now. Suppose a hundred thousand people vote for the constitution. Sixty thousand people vote for it, and forty thousand people vote against it. Now, under the alternate, if ten thousand people vote for 2 (A), and ten thousand and one vote for 2 (B), then what passes? 2 (B)?

MR. BURSON

Under your hypothetical question, 2 (B) would pass....

MR. FONTENOT

Now, if the whole constitution passes by sixty thousand votes, then you're going to...assuming only ten thousand and one people vote for alternative 2 (B), 2 (B) would override the whole sixty thousand votes. Is that correct?

MR. BURSON

That is correct.

MR. FONTENOT

Now, another thing. Doesn't this force the LSU people--I mean I'm not so sure which, I mean these die-hards--doesn't it force the LSU people to vote against the constitution and then for 2 (A)?

MR. BURSON

It may lead to that result in a particular instance if someone is totally concerned with that issue. I don't deny that. However, it seems to me that that's...you have to balance that possibility as over against the serious legal questions raised by some very good lawyers in here this morning, on the other scheme, which I will confess, I participated in putting together last night.

MR. FONTENOT

Now, doesn't this also force the proponents of the one board system to vote against the constitution and for that alternative?

MR. BURSON

No, they wouldn't have anything for the alternative to go in, then. It wouldn't do them any good at all.

MR. FONTENOT

Well, wouldn't they have Act 712 if the whole constitution fails?

MR. BURSON

Well, of course that's....

MR. FONTENOT

Act 712 is one board. So, if the constitution fails, they've got their one board. Isn't that correct?

MR. BURSON

That is presuming that Act 712 is not declared unconstitutional, which is a very great presumption.

MR. FONTENOT

Well, at the present time, it's constitutional, isn't it? It hasn't been declared unconstitutional, so you've got to presume it's constitutional.

MR. BURSON

That is correct.

MR. FONTENOT

Now, isn't it right....so, therefore, you're going to... make the LSU supporters, and the other one vote supporters vote against the constitution and for their alternative and jeopardize the whole constitution for the alternative. Isn't that correct?

MR. BURSON

No, Mr. Fontenot, I don't agree with that. I think that obviously proponents of both sides must feel that they are gaining something here one way or the other as this issue is decided.

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

MR. HENRY

Mr. Fontenot, you are going to have to quit arguing because there are other people that want to ask questions.

MR. FONTENOT

One more....

MR. BURSON

Let me say this. We can't fix the ballot to predispose the result either way. All we can do is let the people choose. I think this does that. It may incidentally have adverse effects one way or the other. But, we can't determine that. I expect that's up to the individual.

MR. FONTENOT

Now, one last question. You said that you think your proposal was similar to the Montana proposal.

MR. BURSON

Yes, sir.

MR. FONTENOT

Isn't it a fact that your proposal is a lot different than the Montana proposal in regards to the total number of votes required to pass one of these alternatives. Isn't that correct?

MR. BURSON

All right, Mr...Yes, sir. The Montana proposal did require that a majority of the total votes cast would approve the alternative...there is that difference. However, the form is substantially the same.

MR. ROEMER

Jack, as I understand your amendment, you would adhere to the principle of this amendment that everyone who had...was able to vote on the constitution--for or against--and did so, would have the same eligibility to vote in these alternatives. Is that correct?

MR. BURSON

Yes, sir.

MR. ROEMER

But, you would, in effect, have two majorities here--the majority in the first question, constitution, yes or no, and a majority in the second question, 2 (A) or 2 (B).

MR. BURSON

Yes, sir.

MR. ROEMER

So, we could have the possibility that a million people voted for or against the constitution....

MR. BURSON

Yes, sir.

MR. ROEMER

....and it passed by whatever margin. But, only a thousand people voted for the alternatives and still 2 (A) and 2 (B) would win whether it would be 501 to 499, or whatever the vote.

MR. BURSON

Yes, sir. But, we could, also, and of course, when I say we could also, it's with full realization that as a practical matter people usually start from the top down. But, it is theoretically, at least, possible, to have more votes cast on the alternative than on the constitution as well, because we are leaving that choice free to the people who vote.

MR. ROEMER

Well, I'm glad you make a point because I didn't mean by my question I was opposed to your amendment. I am very much in favor of it. I just think we ought to give the people that right. If only a thousand people wanted to vote on education, then a thousand people decide how it was determined. Of course that won't happen. It could very well be the opposite of that.

Finally, I want to make the point, it seems to me, don't you agree, that under your amendment there's only three things that can happen. Really, just three things. No. 1, the constitution could fail; No. 2, it could pass with 2 (A) in its provisions; No. 3, it could pass with 2 (B) in its provisions.

MR. BURSON

That's correct.

MR. ROEMER

That's it.

MR. BURSON

That's the alternative.

MR. HENRY

Will you yield to a question from Mr. Pugh?

Passes.

Mr. Guarisco.

MR. GUARISCO

Mr. Burson, to someone like myself who does not carry the brief for LSU or for north, by Northwest, or south by Southeast, and all those other fine universities, all I'm interested in is possibly passing the constitution and let education fall where it may. How do I vote, and do you take care of people who are admired?

MR. BURSON

Then the only thing you've got to do when you walk into the polling place is vote on the constitution. You can walk right out again, and your vote counts. There's no problem there. I might point out, that as far as the legal question of whether or not it would be legally valid for a majority voting only on proposition 2 to carry the day on that proposition, the only comparison I can think of, and it is not an entirely valid comparison, but, it is a comparison, is the vote that we take on constitutional amendments when we have multiple amendments, and we do go by plurality there. However, I'm....

[Motion to limit debate on the Amendment to ten minutes for the proponents and ten minutes for the opponents adopted: 64-46.]

Further Discussion

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise before you today as humbly as I may, not to speak words of wisdom as so many of you have often done, but merely to touch upon things we already know to be the truth. How unfortunate it is at this late hour, when we must form battle lines in our deliberations. How simple it would have been at the outset of this convention to resolve the method and the means of providing for alternatives; a procedure different from that agreed upon by a majority of the delegates. If we could have done so without the handicap of having our minds fixed and cemented on the issue to be resolved by a majority of the people in the early days of this convention and in the meetings prior to this convention sponsored by the League of Women Voters and others when very able speakers from other states, Illinois, and others, spoke of the merits of alternates, I dare say to you in good conscience that I, and a majority of you, never once thought that to do so would do anything else but express the will of the majority. But, that was more than a year ago and we all know that hindsight is so much easier than foresight. Let us hope that future conventions shall profit by our mistakes. Legal matters I know not, but God willing, justice I understand. As I traveled the highways and byways of my mind I remember places far and near when often I championed the cause of the minority, but on the date on which those issues were voted upon and settled just as in this convention, majority prevailed. This constitution and its provisions must rise and be adopted or changed if it is the will of the majority of the voters of this great state, otherwise it fails. But, let us no longer speak of failure, but let's speak in a positive manner, and let us all join with our governor and officials and lead to a new constitution adopted by a majority of the people. Then, indeed, we the people of this great state shall have reached our finest hour. I urge you to reject this amendment and to consider the next Amendment No. 2 (A). I think that we must have the will of the majority of the people of this state and a majority in my mind does not mean less than the majority.

Thank you.

Questions

MR. ROEMER

Walter, we've worked together for a long time on Revenue and Finance and I respect you highly. You use a phrase though that bothers me and that's "a majority of the people".

MR. CHAMPAGNE

That's right, sir.

MR. ROEMER

I guess you mean every person in the state because I

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

frankly think that a majority of all the people living in Louisiana won't even vote on this constitution at all.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

I mean a majority of those voting for . . .

MR. ROEMER

Well, you didn't say that and I think we ought to clear it by terms, because don't you agree with me that chances are that a majority of the people won't even go to the polls to vote on a proposition?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

I assume that if you have your way, Mr. Roemer, that a much less of a majority of the people will decide what education principles we get in this constitution.

MR. ROEMER

Well, Mr. Champagne, how can you be so sure that the one portion of this constitution that's the most controversial, that is, education, won't draw even more votes than the document as a whole? It will certainly be the most highly publicized.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

If it does, Mr. Roemer, it will draw some negative votes, sir, for the constitution.

MR. FONTENOT

Mr. Champagne, isn't the effect of this amendment overall the same effect as the Pugh resolution?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Yes, sir.

MR. FONTENOT

I mean doesn't it, in fact, it doesn't exactly say the same thing, but the effect of it is the same, it's pulling out what we have already decided by requiring a majority of those voting on the alternative to vote for the . . . for one or the other; it's pulling out what we've already decided and leaving it up to the majority of those people voting on the alternative, isn't that correct?

MR. CHAMPAGNE

In all conscience I think it's better than the Pugh amendment, but it's not nearly good enough for me, sir.

Further Discussion

MR. ARNETTE

Ladies and gentlemen, I know you've thought about this quite a bit as I, myself, last night sat down and for about four or five hours worked out all the different ways that I could think of to put this proposition on the ballot. As far as I could see, the only constitutional way I could put the thing on the ballot would be unfair to one side or the other. I'll agree Mr. Burson's idea is fair, but I don't think it's constitutional. I think we have some slight constitutional problems in it. It might be that we would end up with no Educational Article at all in the new constitution under Mr. Burson's concept. Now, listen very carefully, suppose the . . . Mr. Bollinger says it might be a good idea not to have an Educational Article. Well, he might be right at this point-- but, the possibility I can see with this particular way of phrasing it is, suppose you have sixty votes for the constitution, forty against the constitution and the most either alternative we've got we'll say thirty-five, the only opportunity someone had to vote against both alternatives was to vote "No" on the constitution so, therefore, the forty votes against the constitution would be equal to voting against both the alternatives, so, neither alternative would pass. I see this is a distinct possibility in Mr. Burson's amendment. So, therefore, you might end up with neither alternate in the constitution. Now, the way Montana did it, the way Illinois did it, and the way Mr. Burson's amendment was originally drawn and had "in this election" in it to me would be constitutional because that way the people would have a clear choice and to have one alternate or the other. But, the problem with this is I don't think it is quite totally fair, but this is the best thing I could come up with as Mr. Burson's original amendment "without any selection" deleted from it. The others, I think, do have some . . . this one, I think, and many others do have some constitutional questions; or, if not constitutional questions, then you might end up with no Education Article at all, and that's all I want to point out to you. I don't know for sure that I am correct; I have no court decisions to back me up; I'm just telling you what I think my opinions are. Yes, I will answer questions.

Questions

MR. ARNETTE

Even though I know he'll probably pin me to the wall, but I'll yield to his question anyhow.

MR. CONROY

I just am confused by your analysis of this. It seems to me that this box makes clear one possible problem that may have existed in the Pugh Proposal because it says that "the proposed constitution will include one Board of Regents with appointed members and three management boards for governance of higher education unless a majority of those voting on the alternative vote for alternate (2) (B)." I don't see how you could wind up then without anything.

MR. ARNETTE

Well, okay, Mr. Conroy let me show you my analogy again. Sixty votes for the constitution, forty against; thirty-five for (2) (A), thirty for (2) (B). The majority voted for (2) (A), but yet, (2) (A) did not get more votes than there were against the constitution.

MR. CONROY

But, under that situation; under the box the proposition contained in (2) (A) would be in the constitution. That's what this says.

MR. ARNETTE

Okay, suppose the other way then (2) (B) gets thirty-five and (2) (A) gets thirty; what happens in that particular case?

MR. CONROY

It would have received . . . (2) (B) would have then received the majority of those cast on that proposition and would be the one in the constitution.

MR. ARNETTE

Okay, but how could somebody vote against both of these?

MR. CONROY

Well, you can't vote against everything that's . . .

MR. ARNETTE

I can vote against both them . . .

Further Discussion

MR. PUGH

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise in support of this Burson amendment assuming that the amendment we're talking about is the Burson amendment without the Number (2) on it, and assuming that the words "in this election" had been excluded from the box in the center of a proposed amendment. If that's presently before the floor then I support it. I do so because I think it's a distinction without a difference as to what I propose within the original resolution. I indicated to you initially that I had no pride in authorship, it was just a question of the constitutional provisions of the law as I understood them and as to be applied. I really quite frankly think that you're telling the people more when you're honest with them, and tell them that you're excluding Education in the top because that's absolutely what you're doing. The net result of this amendment, as I appreciate it, is one, regardless of how many people vote on the first proposition, the majority will determine whether or not we have a constitution. Then regardless of how many people vote on the second proposition the majority of those voting on the second proposition will determine which of the Educational Articles we shall have. I reiterate, the difference between the resolution and this is a distinction without a difference; it's a question of terminology--Mr. Jenkins had an amendment whose terminology perhaps may or may not be more acceptable-- I think that gets down. . . terminology gets down to a choice of phrases of words as distinguished from the legal issues involved. I'm authorized to say that Mr. Conroy joins me in this statement that I'm making that this in effect is what was in the original resolution. I'll yield to questions.

Questions

MR. BERGERON

Mr. Pugh, in other words, so everyone will understand this -- and I clarify my own mind-- regardless of how many people vote for or against the constitution, we're only concerned with the alternate. In other words, with a hundred people voting for the constitution and only fifty people vote for either alternate and the alternate passes, we're just looking at the majority of those voting on either alternate will pass. Am I correct?

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

MR. PUGH
Absolutely.

MR. BERGERON
Thank you.

MR. PUGH
I might add in response to that I think this will get the votes out just like the other one will because obviously, anybody votes for the constitution is going to run down there and vote for those others. It's going to give us a lot of attention, I'll tell you that.

MR. WINCHESTER
Mr. Pugh, so this will be clear in my mind, if everybody that went to the poll did not vote for an alternate. . . if no one voted for an alternate, but the majority voted for the constitution what would then be the status of the legal . . . I mean of the Education Boards?

MR. PUGH
Well, first of all, that ain't going to happen. But, in my opinion, when you say whatever is in the constitution and its five-boards in the constitution then that's it because nobody voted on the other one.

MR. WINCHESTER
I take that back, that may not be the case because you said unless a majority of them.
I'm still confused. Does a vote for the constitution include the (2) (A)?

MR. PUGH
No, sir.

MR. WINCHESTER
Well, then I think the language in the box is misleading.

MR. PUGH
Well, it may be.

MR. ROEMER
Mr. Pugh, some of these questions remind me of what would happen to mankind if he could travel at the speed of light; it will never happen. It's never going to happen, is it, that we're going to have a million votes for a constitution not a single vote for an alternate, is it?

MR. PUGH
I certainly don't think so.

MR. ROEMER
Are you capable of telling us how many people are going to vote for this constitution?

MR. PUGH
Don't have the furthestest notion.

MR. ROEMER
No way of us knowing, so we don't know what the majority is, this figure we keep talking about, do we?

MR. PUGH
All I know it's more than one.

MR. ROEMER
Exactly . . .

MR. PUGH
Right.

MR. ROEMER
Don't you think that Education is important enough to have the people to vote on it to have a choice and let the majority of those people decide what we're going to have in the constitution in that regard?

MR. PUGH
No question in my mind the two issues ought to butt up against each other and I so said earlier.

MR. KEAN

Mr. Pugh, I'm a little confused by this ballot and I understand you don't necessarily agree with the language or style, or what have you, but at the top it says, "Please vote on both issues 1 and 2." Now, does that mean that if I didn't vote for both issues that I've got a spoiled ballot?

MR. PUGH
Not because you've been asked just like we'll go in there and I'll speak to a group and I'll say, "Please go and vote," and that's all I say, "Please go and vote." I can't make them go vote. You can't make them vote both ways. I think you've been courteous with the electors and that's all when you say, "Please vote on both of them."

MR. KEAN

It follows then exactly what Mr. Winchester was pointing out. If the person who goes and votes for the proposed constitution and does say under the erroneous impression that he's then approving Article VII, the Education Article, and then forgets to vote or doesn't think he needs to vote for (2) (A) in order to make sure it stays in, the net result of that is you're simply giving to the people who are voting for (2) (B) the result of the election, aren't you?

MR. PUGH
I indicated I thought Jenkins' language was a little clearer, frankly.

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Pugh, did I understand you to say that in voting on the alternatives that the proposition in the constitution was not there any more? In other words. . . .

MR. PUGH
That's right.

MRS. WARREN

All right. Now, in the event that we have a tie vote, what happens?

MR. PUGH
In event of a tie?

MRS. WARREN
It's highly likely.

MR. PUGH

All right, if there's a tie then there's not a majority. If there's not a majority then we take whatever we've said at the top, and I assume that this . . . at this instance it's five boards.

MRS. WARREN

That's what I wanted to know.

Further Discussion

MR. DERBES

Ladies and gentlemen, I rise because I frankly feel that there is a serious point that has been overlooked here. I rise in support of this amendment. The point which I feel has been overlooked, the point which has been raised to suggest that this amendment is somehow violative of the democratic process is that the history of constitutional revision in this state and particularly those constitutional revision provisions which we have enunciated in the main body of our document merely indicate that a constitutional amendment, for example, which receives a majority of the votes cast on that amendment becomes a part of the constitution. I'm referring, of course, to the history of constitutional amendments in Louisiana where multiple amendments may be submitted to the voters. An interest may develop . . . may develop specifically along the lines of one amendment or two amendments and may be minimal for other amendments, yet the majority of the votes cast on each amendment dictates whether or not the amendment is approved. We have never had in this state the requirement that in order for a constitutional amendment to be approved it must receive a majority of the votes cast. . . it must receive a majority of the votes cast by all the electors voting in that election. We have only required in the event of multiple choices on the ballot that in order for success of the particular amendment it must receive a majority of the votes cast for it alone. That is a provision which we have enunciated in our constitution and I think it is one that is clearly applicable here. We cannot necessarily expect that the same number of people voting on the entire constitution will exactly vote on the alternates, but I think it is consonant with our history and consonant with the policies that we've enunciated in our constitution . . . our proposed constitution if we say that when a majority of votes cast on the alternate approves the alternate it becomes a part of the constitution. Therefore, I think that the criticism of this amendment that it is somehow violative of the democratic process and does not permit government by a majority, to me is unfounded when considered in terms of our history. That's basically all I have to say, and I yield to any questions.

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

Questions

MR. ARNETTE
Jim,

. . . how can I vote against both these alternatives?

MR. DERBES

All you need to do is vote against the constitution.

MR. ARNETTE

If I vote against the constitution I'm voting against both of them, correct?

MR. DERBES

That's correct.

MR. ARNETTE

Okay. If there are more votes against the constitution than there are for either alternative, they both fail, correct?

MR. DERBES

Well, . . .

MR. ARNETTE

That's the point I was bringing out earlier, isn't that correct? The only way I can vote against them is to vote "no" on the constitution. If I vote "no" on the constitution and I've got more votes than I want for either alternative, both fail.

MR. DERBES

That's basically correct, yes.

MR. ARNETTE

So, in other words, we might end up with neither one of them, is that correct?

MR. DERBES

But, I really don't think that's a real problem, Gregg, because I frankly think that the disproportionate amount of votes that have been cast about the floor here hypothetically on these issues is basically misleading. I expect a real interest on the part of all the voters in both the alternates and the constitution as a whole.

MR. ARNETTE

Well, Jim, in other words you do see a problem if more people voted against the constitution than voted for either alternative, and that is a distinct possibility, is it not?

MR. DERBES

Yes, that's a possibility, yes.

Closing

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I want to stress again that the objective of framing the two amendments was to bring clearly before the convention at a moment when we were running out of time what seemed to be the basic conflict in two positions which have had many conflicts in this convention. Those of you who feel, as Mr. Arnette did, that a total majority should be required for adoption of an alternate which was the situation on the Montana ballot, then you would vote against the amendment that is now proposed. If on the other hand, you feel that it should be decided that the alternate question--the question of Education--should be decided only by a majority of those who vote on the alternative itself, then you would vote for the amendment on the floor because the No. 2 amendment that you still have on your desk has only one difference with the one we're voting on now and that is that it would require a majority of those voting in this election to approve the alternate. Now, I would say that legally, in my opinion--and there are many here whose opinion is worthy of more weight than mine--but in my opinion either way would be legally defensible requiring a majority of the total vote cast on the election is unquestionably legally defensible from anybody's point of view. It is the majority rule it's what we're talking about. Secondly, as pointed out by Mr. Derbes, I think, the position recommended in the amendment you are now considering is legally defensible because we have traditionally in Louisiana adopted constitutional amendments on the basis of a majority of those who voted on the particular amendment even when we had fifty-two amendments in a row. So, this would be entirely consonant with our prior practice in this respect. As to the objection raised by Mr. Arnette about giving those who didn't like either alternate their option, I would submit to you that Act 2 requires us only to give the voters a chance to vote "for" or "against" the alternates that we proposed and not to have a third option for the best of all possible worlds which we certainly can't give them. I think if they vote against the constitution, they have effectively been given a choice to vote against both of them. As far as any clarity of language that subsequent amendments may work I certainly have no problems with that. My only objective in proposing these amendments was to decide the basic bone of contention between the parties and permit some time for the remainder of the day to work out the niceties of the language and to take care of problems such as those raised by Mr. Kean if, in fact, they do exist in the language I have proposed. I'll attempt to answer any questions.

Questions

MS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Burson, in relation to Mr. Arnette's reservations about this particular amendment let's compare it to the ordinary amendments in Louisiana. Suppose in the latest race for district attorney in New Orleans I didn't like any of the candidates. How could I vote against them all?

MR. BURSON

Ms. Zervigon, I think this is a situation that probably a lot of the people that voted for some of us that are at this convention find themselves in. But, if they wanted to vote at all they had to vote either for us or our opponent; they didn't have any choice in the second primary.

MS. ZERVIGON

In the case of constitutional amendments, ordinarily, suppose I don't like the language in the '21 Constitution and I don't like the language that's being offered as an amendment either. How do I vote against them both?

MR. BURSON

Then you'll either have to decide, in my view, whether what we've done is better or whether you want to wait another fifty years and try for something the next time.

MS. ZERVIGON

No, sir, that's not my example. I'm saying the last time amendments were put on the ballot . . .

MR. BURSON

There's no way you can do it, practically speaking.

MS. ZERVIGON

It's the rarest thing that we give the voters an option of voting none of the above. In fact, I can't conceive of that.

MR. BURSON

Well, in fact, we couldn't do it under Act 2, it speaks in terms of "for" or "against" an alternative. . . and an alternative, I think, requires us to give them an "either or" choice.

MS. ZERVIGON

Thank you.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted:
68-56. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Personal Privilege

MR. BURSON

I don't want to get in the way of any improvements on the language of the form that was improved. I just want to state plainly and simply for the record to correct them is understanding that many delegates told me they had on the amendment that was adopted. Where it says, "please vote on both issues 1 and 2," this does not mandate or require the voter to vote on both 1 and or

MR. HENRY

Thank you, Mr. Burson. Before we proceed any further, I had hoped that we would wait till a little later on to be able to do this, but we have a very distinguished guest with us today, who I'm going to introduce at this time. We have Mr. Joe O. Fernandez. Mr. Fernandez, if you will, stand up. Mr. Fernandez was a delegate to the Constitution of 1921. We're certainly proud to have you with us today, sir. He also has his wife, Mrs. Fernandez, with him, and we're certainly glad to have you all here. I hope you all didn't have as much problem on the last day you all met, as we're having, Mr. Fernandez.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Jenkins, at this time, sends up an amendment. It says, "the Jenkins ballot amendment" that's been previously passed out. Mr. Jenkins has had to make some changes in it, and I want to indicate those carefully to you. I'm going to try for those that I know there's a great deal of concern--to try to get some more copies run off in time for you to consider them and look at it. But, if you follow me, I think we can follow most of the changes. It reads as follows:

"OFFICIAL BALLOT

(Instructions)--this is the first change--strike out the word "of" and insert in lieu thereof the word "to". "Instructions to voters: Place an 'X' in the boxes which express your preferences. The full text of the proposed constitution and the alternative propositions are available for inspection at the polling place. If the proposed constitution receives a majority of the votes cast thereon"--this is the second change--insert this language: "it shall become the Constitution of Louisiana and"--picking up--"the alternative proposition which receives the higher number of votes shall be included in the new constitution. If the proposed constitution fails to receive a majority of the votes cast thereon,"--this is the next change. Strike out the word "the"; insert "both"; "both alternative propositions" insert the words "shall fail". "If the proposed constitution fails to receive a majority of the votes cast thereon, both alternative propositions shall fail.)"

1. Do you favor or oppose the adoption of the 1974 Constitution?

(Vote for one)

FOR adoption of the proposed 1974 Constitution.....[ ]

or

AGAINST adoption of the proposed 1974 Constitution.....[ ]

Then, the words, immediately above 2, this is the last change, immediately above the word "2" on the left-hand side in all caps, Mr. Jenkins has inserted "ALTERNATIVE PROPOSITIONS" in all caps. Right below the line, and before the number "2" and situated to the left-hand side, he has inserted the words in all caps "ALTERNATIVE PROPOSITIONS ". Then, we pick up and there are no further changes.

2. If the proposed 1974 Constitution is adopted, do you prefer inclusion of

(A) the governance of higher education by a Board of Regents and management boards for the LSU system, the Southern University system, and all other state colleges and universities, or (B) the governance of higher education solely by a Board of Regents?

(Vote for one)

(A) governance of higher education by a Board of Regents and management boards for the LSU system, the Southern University system, and all other state colleges and universities.....[ ]

Explanation

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, delegates, this in essence is exactly the same concept that Mr. Burson put forth earlier. It's only an attempt to hopefully improve the language and make it a little bit clearer to the voters. All of the changes that the Clerk just read are technical changes with one exception, and that is on the fourth line after the word "thereon" where the words are inserted "it shall become the Constitution of Louisiana and". That is simply to make it clear to people the effect of their vote for or against this constitution. That's the only substantive change, and it's really for purposes of clarity. Really, I'd like to answer questions. I'm going to move that this is adopted, that this be referred to Style and Drafting for a few moments so that they can go over it according to the same form and style that we've been going through in this convention. They may want to consider, for example, whether or not to number these boxes. We traditionally number candidates' names on the ballot, and it may be advisable for us to number them 1, 2, 3, 4. There are a few things like that that may need to be done. You may need to put a "for" in front of the "A" and "B" on the Education Alternative. But, I'd like to ask if we do adopt it, that we refer it to Style and Drafting for their consideration. I'd like to answer any questions you have. Mr. LeBlanc asked if we had deleted Mr. Burson's with this amendment, and the Clerk did read it in such a way that it would.

Vice Chairman Miller in the Chair

Questions

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Mr. Jenkins, do you know that I believe that instead of saying "A" and "B", if you said "1" and "2" that it would be clearer to the people of this state in choosing it because some people have a difficulty in picking letters, but less trouble picking numbers, sir?

MR. JENKINS

I think maybe you're right. What we could do is we could say, just leave out the number 1, there, on the before "Do you favor or oppose the adoption of the constitution?" and put next to the box on "For the adoption" the number 1; next to the box "Against the constitution", number 2. Then, where we have "A" and "B" in the text, under "Alternatives" you could call that "3" and "4". I'd like to leave that to Style and Drafting, if possible.

MR. PUGH

This, Woody, also addresses itself to Style and Drafting perhaps, but since we may be working in different directions, I want to point it up. As you have now said that "if the proposed constitution receives a majority of the votes cast thereon, it will become the constitution." I don't have that language. "And the alternate proposal which receives a higher number of votes shall be included in the new constitution." We seem to be having a great deal of trouble about which article to put in there. I think there's a good possibility on this language we might be putting both of them in there if the so-called two board concept should be favorably voted on in the second paragraph. It gets us back to the original problem of the original resolution excluded education, so there wasn't any question about it. Then, the vote on the articles on education then became part of that original constitution with the excluded language.

MR. JENKINS

I think probably what we need to do is where we say, "it shall become the Constitution of Louisiana," we need to probably say, "exclusive of the Education Article" similar to that language that you had in yours. I think if Style and Drafting did that it might be clearer then.

[Motion to limit debate on the Amendment to five minutes for the proponents and five minutes for the opponents adopted without objection.]

MR. KEAN

Mr. Jenkins, I have the same problem with yours that I've had with the others. As I appreciate it, you would leave in the proposed constitution the present Article VII on Education, and the voter, who then went to vote on item 1, would in effect vote for adoption of the proposed '74 Constitution which includes that article; would they not?

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

MR. JENKINS

Frankly, no; I don't think that's exactly it, Gordon. I think that when a person votes for the adoption of the proposed constitution under number 1, he is voting for it with the understanding that that constitution is going to include whether either "A" or "B" under the Alternatives because it clearly says under Alternatives, that if the proposed constitution is adopted, you're to choose one of those two systems for the Education Article.

MR. KEAN

Well, that's my next question. If I read your alternative, you're going to have to...for passage, you're going to have to then move to delete the Education Article from the constitution that this body has adopted, won't you; because otherwise when they vote on your number 1, they will also be voting on that article if they don't take it out; won't you?

MR. JENKINS

Well, really, I think the number 1, the "for," includes the contingency with regard to "A" and "B", and I think that they are not adopting truly a specific document until you have the results on "A" and "B", and I think...

MR. KEAN

Well, if this convention adopts this document that was passed out to us last night or has adopted it, and that document includes an article on education, we now tell the voters that you vote for the adoption of the proposed 1974 Constitution; wouldn't that vote include the article on education?

MR. JENKINS

No, sir; I don't think that the way you've stated it's exactly right because we have also adopted a delegate proposal which is of equal rank to that document you saw last night, and that delegate proposal provides that there will be an alternative on the ballot and if that alternative passes that the thing in the other document will be deleted. I don't see that there's any difference in stature between those two documents that we've passed.

MR. KEAN

So, it's your intention in connection with this proposal that when you say "for adoption of the proposed 1974 Constitution," the person who votes there is voting for the constitution without regard to an education article?

MR. JENKINS

No, I would say that he is voting for the constitution, which constitution he is for regardless of the outcome with regard to the alternative provisions. He is voting for the constitution with whichever article on education receives the highest vote under number 2. That's precisely, I believe, what it says in the instructions to the voters.

Further Discussion

MR. PUGH

I think we have almost come three hundred and sixty degrees in that what the original resolution said was to use the word "exclusion" and that's because you're honest with them because you actually are excluding it. You don't put the fellow in the posture of voting for, say, five boards when they don't want five boards, and then turning around and amending the constitution that he just voted for. What Jenkins has insofar as the language relative to the alternate proposal, it's just... again I get back to the fact that it's the question of how best to present the fact that you're looking at five boards or two boards. But, in the final analysis you're getting back to the original resolution before you get to the alternate provision.

Questions

MR. FULCO

Isn't there a possibility of overlooking the top portion of this ballot and choosing the alternate down below, and by that never voting for the constitution above?

MR. PUGH

Well, there's always the possibility...

MR. FULCO

What I mean is, since it says below "ALTERNATE PROPOSITIONS".

MR. PUGH

It's not the best language in the world relating to the constitution. It may well be better language than what I suggested insofar as the alternates are concerned. That's what I tried to say awhile ago.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted:
88-21. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Point of Information

MR. AVANT

To inquire a point of information. As I understand it, Mr. Jenkins's amendment did not delete Mr. Burson's amendment; did it? It did?

MRS. MILLER

Mr. Clerk...just a minute, Mr. Avant.
Why do you rise, Mr. Burson?

Motion

MR. BURSON

Madam Chairman, in view of the fact that Mr. Jenkins' amendment embraced the same general theory as mine, and since I felt many subsequent amendments will probably be involved with the language, I would like to move that we recess for approximately fifteen minutes to permit Style and Drafting to go over the language of Mr. Jenkins' amendment, and report back to the convention a suggested language.

MRS. MILLER

Just a minute, Mr. Burson.

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Burson, of course it's up to this convention...I see Judge Tate sitting here waving at me back and forth...there are still a large number of amendments not even affecting ballot procedures that do need to be resolved in this resolution. I'll just point that out.

Motion

MR. O'NEILL

Madam Chairman, I'd like to suggest that we have a huddle for about five minutes to see if some of these things just can't be resolved.

MRS. MILLER

This was what Mr. Burson was trying to get at, Mr. O'Neill. Just a minute, please. We have a lot of people that want to say something.
Mr. Burson.

MR. BURSON

In that vein, I withdraw my motion in favor of Mr. O'Neill's motion.

MRS. MILLER

That's a good idea. Thank you.

[Burson amendment withdrawn.]

Point of Information

MR. ALEXANDER

Madam Chairman, I have an amendment that does not affect either one of these amendments, and it could be disposed of during these five minutes that we're going to lose.

MRS. MILLER

Just a minute. Let me look at this with the Clerk.

MR. POYNTER

We've got a whole bunch of conflicting amendments. It really might be well, Reverend, if everyone that has an amendment kind of came up and kind of resolved some things and see how many of these people want to go with and don't want to go with and whatnot; a lot of them maybe are dead. So, maybe we could do some good at just kind of clearing out the stacks.

MRS. MILLER

We'll take a five-minute huddle here. Will all of you who have amendments up here please come forward and meet with us up here?

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

Recess

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

So, Mr. Kean sends up the first amendment; would read as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, delete lines 13 through 15, in their entirety, and at the top of page 3, delete lines 1 and 2, and of course delete the Jenkins amendment, and insert in lieu thereof the following: " one of two alternative propositions relating to education, on official ballots, printed and distributed at public expense, to read as follows:

"The Constitution of 1974 shall be adopted if a majority of those casting votes on the proposition is in favor thereof."

[ ] FOR the Constitution of 1974, as drafted by the Constitutional Convention.

[ ] AGAINST the Constitution of 1974, as drafted by the Constitutional Convention.

The proposed Constitution includes a provision for the creation of a single coordinating board for higher education with appointed members, and creation of three boards for the management of state colleges and universities unless a majority of those voting in this section vote for Alternative 2A.

2A. To have a single board for higher education, with both elected and appointed members and with no geographic distribution requirements as to appointive members.

FOR [ ]
AGAINST [ ]

Explanation

MR. KEAN

Madam Chairman, fellow delegates, I recognize the votes that have been cast on the two prior proposals by Mr. Jenkins and by Mr. Burson, but I thought it only proper that I bring this particular amendment for your consideration because I think I can say that if we had pursued the original proposal or the amendment that I offered this morning dealing with the method of voting, which did not permit those who voted no to act on the alternative, I think we could have gotten votes to pass that amendment. I withdrew that amendment because in light of some of the discussion that took place here on the floor, particularly comments by Delegate Conroy or Delegate Pugh, and what I understood was the view of Delegate Denny with respect to that proposal, and then serious reservations on my own with respect to that proposal, I withdrew it. I think that what we have done subsequent to that has created as much legal controversy for the adoption of this constitution as that particular amendment would have itself done. I'm not too sure that I would, if I had my druthers, I would have preferred to go with the original amendment I offered so far as the literature is concerned, than those which have now been previously adopted. I say this because I don't find anything in any of these particular provisions that speak in the terms of options, or giving to the voters a chance to vote on two different things, neither of which are contained in the constitution which this convention adopted. As I view Act 2 of 1972, it anticipated that we would adopt a constitution which would contain articles dealing with the various aspects of that constitution, and if there was some item in which we wanted to have an alternative proposal for consideration by the voters, that alternative proposal would then be provided for, and in that context where the constitution itself contained a provision with respect to that same subject matter of that alternative proposal, that it would be grossly unfair to have a majority of the people vote on the constitution with that particular material in it and pass it, and then be defeated in their efforts to accomplish that by less than a majority of those voting in that election by reason of their right to vote on the alternative and having the alternative that gets the most votes pass. Secondly, I think the way we have postured these particular so-called alternatives where you vote one or the other, and then take which one of them... whichever one gets the most votes, is not postured in the sense of an alternative proposition. I think the only fair way that we can offer to the people of this state a true alternative proposition and guarantee to ourselves and to the people of this state that if it's adopted, the constitution and the alternative proposal both are legal, is to do what this amendment does. First, it would require that the alternative proposal receive a majority of the votes cast in the election. Secondly, it would offer the people who voted in that election an opportunity to vote for or against the alternative. I think if we can accomplish those two things, we will have done what is legal and fair, and I submit to you, contrary to the amendments that have previously been adopted, that this offers the only possibility we have of being certain in our own minds that if we're going to have an alternative proposal that the result of the election would be valid and legal. I say to you that what we have adopted heretofore raises a serious legal question, and if we pursue that as we have in the past, then I think we've got a cloud over this constitution any way we jump. I submit to you under the circumstances that this amendment deserves your honest, sincere consideration, despite the votes which have previously occurred, and I urge your adoption of this amendment.

Questions

MR. PUGH

Mr. Kean, have you made "FOR" and "AGAINST" because you think there's something in Act 2 that requires that language?

MR. KEAN

I think there's a good possibility that the wording of Act 2 of 1972 which requires a "For and Against" vote on the constitution could be construed to require a "For and Against" vote on any alternative.

MR. PUGH

The last amendment did not have a "For and Against"; did it?

MR. KEAN

No, sir; it didn't.

MR. PUGH

Are you at reference to the language that says that you will for or against the adoption of the constitution, aimed on the question or questions of adoption of such alternate provisions?

MR. KEAN

Yes.

MR. PUGH

Do you not think after the word "conjunction" it relates back to the word "vote"?

MR. KEAN

Where are you reading from? I'm lost.

MR. PUGH

From Act 2.

MR. KEAN

I don't have it in front of me.

MR. PUGH

I'll read it. It says, "to vote on the proposition for or against adoption of the constitution and on the question or questions of adoption of such alternate provisions as may be proposed by the convention."

MR. KEAN

It's a legal question, Mr. Pugh, as to whether or not that "or" means we can treat the propositions differently from the "For and Against" requirement with respect to the constitution. I simply say to you that the only way I know to be certain we've complied with Act 2 would be to have "For" and "Against" in both instances.

MR. PUGH

Then, I'll ask you this: What would be your feelings if you had "For and Against the constitution," "For and Against Proposal A" relating to education, and "For and Against" a proposal 2 relating to education?

MR. KEAN

Do you mean two "For and Against"?

MR. PUGH

Yes, sir.

MR. KEAN

What?

MR. PUGH

I'm excluding from the constitution either one of those provisions.

MR. KEAN

The only problem with that, Mr. Pugh, is we discussed when we met with Mr. Martin and the others the other day, is you've got a real problem in trying to decide which one wins and whether or not either one wins. I question then what happens if you don't have something in the constitution relating to education, you end up with nothing.

MR. PUGH

All right. Now, let me ask you this third question, if I may: (perhaps, it's the fourth) isn't it a fact now, if I am interested in, say, a five-board concept, I vote for the constitution, and then I get another chance to take a look at the two-vote proposition by voting against down in 2A. Is that not correct?

MR. KEAN

That's right, and by the same token, if you were for the single board, you could vote for the constitution and come down and vote for the single board. I don't see why anybody's placed at a disadvantage by that.

MR. PUGH

You don't think that weights that in favor of the so-called five-board proposition?

MR. KEAN

I do not. I think it'd be just the same as the other. I don't care whether you put the "For and Against" or "For", as long as you require a majority of voters who vote in the election to vote for the alternative.

MR. PUGH

Well, what you're saying though...

Further Discussion

MR. DE BLIEUX

Madam Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I rise in opposition to the . . . amendment and I think it can be stated very simply, this matter. Act No. 2 of 1972, and I'll read therefrom, says "the election shall be held and the results shall be promulgated under general election laws of the state. All electors duly qualified to vote in this state at the time of the election shall be entitled to vote without regard to party affiliation in their respective precincts on the proposition for or against adoption of the constitution and on the question or questions of adoption of such alternative provisions as may be proposed by the convention. It doesn't say anything about voting for or against any alternative proposition. It only states that they will be able to make a selection. Therefore, this amendment of Mr. Kean's is not in accordance with Act No. 2. Another thing is, that under the Kean amendment, if it is adopted, you'd have to vote for the five board proposition before you could determine whether or not you want to make up your mind on the other board proposition. It's not clear-cut; it's not simple as the Jenkins amendment which we have previously adopted. Now, how do you determine what a majority is on the voting of these particular proposals? Are you going to take all the votes that are cast for the constitution, since the original five board concept would be in the constitution, and say those votes were for that particular proposition and then consider the "no" votes or the "yes" votes on Proposition No. 2, as he's outlined. That you can simply see is not a fair way to put the proposition before the people. I ask you, regardless of how you feel, whether you're for the five board concept or whether you're for the two board concept, let's give the voters a clear choice so they can make up their minds which way they want this constitution drafted. That's all I ask you to do. Therefore, I ask you since the Kean amendment does not do that, let's vote down the Kean amendment and stick with the idea and philosophy, even if you want to amend it and dress it up, the Jenkins amendment. I think that's the only way the voters can properly understand the matter when it's presented to them. Now, Madam Chairman, I'll be glad to answer any questions that may be put. . . if there are any.

Questions

MR. LANDRY

I'm over here. . . I'm the Clerk, Okay. Let me ask you this, if we are successful in passing this would you consider passing this type of legislation for the election of Clerks of Court next election? Because that's the best way I know how to get elected.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Landry, I'm thinking the same thing. I wish I could get that sort of a setup if I was running for election and wanted to exclude my opposition in the same matter.

MR. LANDRY

You feel this would give a fair shake to both proposals or only to one?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Not in the least, Mr. Landry. That's the reason I'm opposed to it, because I just don't believe in the unfairness in the way the matter is presented.

MR. LANDRY

Senator, I want you to understand that I did not graduate from any of the colleges. I graduated from the school of hard knocks.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, I think you understand fairness and justice though, Mr. Landry.

[Motion to limit debate in the Amendment to ten minutes for the proponents and ten minutes for the opponents adopted without objection.]

Further Discussion

MR. AVANT

I'm going to hurry, Mr. Stagg.

Madam Chairperson, fellow delegates, I don't think anybody in this hall has any doubts about where I stand insofar as the merits of these propositions are concerned. But, I assure you that if I stood on the other side that what I would be saying to you is exactly what I'm going to say to you now. I think that when we came here we came under a moral responsibility to submit to the people of this state a proposed constitution in such a fashion and in such a manner that if they approved it that it was going to stand up, that it was going to be the constitution. Now, you heard the questions that I asked of Mr. Pugh this morning and you heard the questions . . . or heard the remarks that were made by Mr. Burson this morning. I think that you have to agree and you have to believe as I do-- you don't have to -- but I think that if you disassociate yourselves from the political or the emotional aspect of this problem, if you are a lawyer, if you were considering this not in the light of a new constitution and dealing with Act No. 2, but you are considering it in the light of a corporate charter and some provisions in the bylaws and you're preparing a document in connection with the corporate charter and you had to operate under the same language that you're operating here, you must come to the conclusion that there is only one way that you can submit these alternatives to the people of this state and be absolutely sure that you have not placed the entire constitution in jeopardy, and that is doing it the way Mr. Kean proposes in his amendment. Mr. Burson this morning said, if I recall correctly, that there was no question -- there was no question -- whatsoever that if you required the alternative proposition to be adopted by a majority of the votes cast in the election that that would be in compliance with law and would cast no cloud or doubt whatsoever on the fate of the constitution itself. You heard Mr. Pugh in response to some of the questions that I asked him, admit that if you did it his way and he had guessed wrong that then there was a possibility that the entire document itself--not just the alternative provisions relating to education, but the entire document might go down the drain. Now, I ask you to consider that. I care not where you stand on the merits or demerits of the issue, but I really believe, and as I told you the other day in convention hall, when you get into this question of alternatives and how you're going to put them on the ballot you have engaged in a guessing game and you better doggone sure be sure that you guess right. I think that you must agree that's the only way you can present this alternative and be sure that you have not jeopardized the document in this way. I believe, and you are certainly free to disagree with me, that we are under a moral obligation to make sure that what we submit to the people, if they approve it, that it's not going to be thrown out by the courts if it's attacked. That's all I have to say.

Questions

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Avant, do you know of any provision at all in the statute under which we're operating that authorizes or directs an against vote with respect to an alternate?

MR. AVANT

Yes, I think, Mr. Gravel, that when you read that sentence that says "to vote for or against adoption of the constitution and on the question or questions of adoption of such alternative propositions as may be proposed by the convention" that the for or against applies to both.

MR. GRAVEL

But, that's just not what it says, is it?

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

MR. AVANT
That's just what it does say, Mr. Gravel.

MR. GRAVEL
Mr. Avant, it says that you vote on the question of adoption of alternative provisions and not for or against the adoption.

MR. AVANT
Don't just read part of it, Camille, read the whole sentence.

MR. GRAVEL
I have it before me. "The right of each voter to vote. . .

MR. AVANT
All right. "On the proposition for or against adoption of the constitution and on the question or questions of adoption of such alternative propositions as may be proposed by the convention." If you tell me that the for or against most assuredly don't apply to both, then I say you are blessed with an omniscience that I do not possess.

MR. GRAVEL
Thank you. I think perhaps in this instance I do.

Further Discussion

MR. CONROY
I again rise in opposition to Mr. Kean's amendment. This is a slightly different amendment, but it still has the same....I feel the same unfairness inherent in it that was involved in the first Kean amendment, and that is that in this state as far as I know, there are no instances in which the vote to determine one issue is decided by how many people vote on another issue and that is what the Kean amendment would attempt to do. It says that you have to get a majority of those voting on the basic. . . on the first issue, who vote on the constitution in order to determine whether the second issue would pass or fail. I think it's inherently unfair and inappropriate. I think throughout this state in all elections we're accustomed to the idea that the majority voting on a particular issue decide which way that issue is to be resolved. I think also that it is inappropriate in light of the other amendments which deferred the deal with the Jenkins amendment, for Mr. Kean to suggest that certain language changes might be necessary in the Jenkins amendment. Additionally, I think that criticism was unfair because Delegate Proposal No. 98, which is the part of the constitution which actually deals with this question is yet in fact, to be passed on by this convention, that Delegate Proposal No. 98, which contains the alternate also contains the language which describes the effect of the adoption of the alternate on the constitution. So, I think that the Kean amendment should be rejected. I think that there may be some further cleaning up of language which would be needed in the Jenkins proposal and I'm sure that Mr. Kean, once this amendment is rejected, will join with us in attempting to be sure that we are presenting to the people of the state appropriately the issues for them to decide. So, again, I urge you to defeat the Kean amendment.

Questions

MR. DENNIS
Mr. Conroy, I appreciate there's some merit in what you're saying, but don't you agree, in order to be fair, that Mr. Kean's amendment is the only one that's been offered which would prevent the possibility of a minority of the voters voting in the election writing the . . . in effect writing the Education Article?

MR. CONROY
No, quite the contrary. I have exactly the opposite view of it because the decision is to be made on the issues separately, and the vote is determined below on the majority of those voting in this election. Look at Mr. Kean's amendment--interestingly enough, the vote on the issue of whether the constitution is adopted or not is based on the vote on that proposition, not on the total vote cast in the election; it's only when you get down to the alternative that you have to add them all up. So, conceivably if more people voted on the alternatives you could have a minority of the people, under your suggestion, adopting the constitution--in the way this is worded. I'm sure that's not his intent, but that's what gets you into what I think is fallacious reasoning, when the reason why each of these propositions, as has always been done in this state as far as I know--each proposition submitted to the voters is determined on its own base, which proposition gets the most votes.

MR. DENNIS
Well, don't you agree though that the other amendments do present the possibility of a minority of the people voting in the election writing the Education Article and this one doesn't. This one may present the possibility of a minority of the people voting in the election adopting the basic constitution.

MR. CONROY
Judge, I just couldn't disagree with you more because that's not the problem. The same thing is true of any election where you have a whole series of candidates; you don't determine which candidate is elected by how many votes are cast by the other candidates or how many votes are cast totally in the election, and you wouldn't here either. You'd determine each proposition separately on its own base.

MR. DENNIS
Well, Mr. Conroy, you do agree I hope, that we're writing one constitution; we're not voting on two candidates here?

MR. CONROY
We are writing one constitution and we're submitting to the voters two propositions: one, whether they want the constitution and two, the alternates. There are two separate propositions that are being submitted to the voters.

MR. DENNIS
Well, I disagree on that. I'd like to ask you just one more question though. Don't you think that . . .

Further Discussion

MR. LOWE
Yes, ma'am. Madam Vice-Chairlady, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, for the last few days I've remained relatively quiet on the issues that have been before us. I've remained relatively quiet on this particular issue, and I think it is an emotional issue. There's no doubt that by now we all agree that there are two sides to this particular issue. We've seen learned attorneys come before us and expound on one view and other learned attorneys come before us and expound on another view; attorneys on both sides that you and I have learned a great deal of respect for; attorneys that if they had not been here, those of us that are not attorneys would not on occasion have been able in this deliberative process to learn how we should have voted. So, . . . the issue is clear--there is clearly two sides. I'm here not to speak as an attorney, but to speak to you as how I think the average voter is viewing our work at this convention. When I came to this convention I came with the thought that we would write a constitution, a whole constitution. I believe that the voters back home feel that we've come here to write a constitution, and that when they go to vote at the polls for or against they feel that after they vote they will have voted yes or no against a whole constitution. I believe that that's the way we should give it to the voter. Regardless of how hard we work to inform the voters, ballot placement is difficult. You know and I know that in the various districts when we ran as delegates to this Constitutional Convention, we came here by virtue of the fact that maybe there was one-tenth of the people that voted in the entire election that may have voted on the delegate race, and that's unfortunate. I don't believe we should place the voters in the State of Louisiana in that unfortunate position again, or the citizens in that unfortunate position of having them in the position that a slight number of voters can decide on how the Education Article in this constitution will be drafted. Now, wouldn't it be unfortunate if a million voters went to the polls and voted for this constitution and voted for it overwhelmingly and because of some hard-sell issues or some hard-sell program that there be a hundred thousand votes for the alternative proposition and maybe fifty thousand against the alternative proposition. So, we find ourselves in the position where one-tenth of the total people that went to the polls would have, in effect, decided how this Educational Article should be written. I just don't believe that we should place ourselves in that position. I believe that when a voter leaves the polls he should feel that he has voted on the entire article. Unfortunate as it is I can't stand here and deny to you, those of you who are opponents to this particular amendment that we have before us, that maybe there isn't some sort of prop. . . the proposition as offered favors the people that want the proposition the way it is in the constitution right now. But, by the same token, if we do it any other way, the other side is favored. There's no way to present this to the voters in a manner that's going to be fair to all parties that are involved. So, at least, let's present it to the voters in a manner that the majority of the people that are voting in this election will in fact decide what's in the constitution.

Questions

MR. DENNERY
. . . .Lowe, I now ask you a question because you're a CPA and know figures. If a million people vote in this election and six hundred thousand vote for the constitution and then in the alternate proposal a total of six hundred thousand vote and four hundred of those vote for the alternate, how many of the six hundred thousand who voted for the constitution would have voted for the alternate, presumably?

MR. LOWE

Well, I'm sure you've had a chance to sit down and work out the ratio, so why don't you tell us, Mr. Dennery.

MR. DENNERY

Well, wouldn't you agree under those circumstances that you would then have under this theory a minority of the people who voted voting for the five board concept?

MR. LOWE

No, sir, I don't agree with that. I don't understand your logic. I guess maybe.....

MR. DENNERY

If I vote for the alternate, and I had to vote for the constitution if I wanted it, I must have been against the five board concept if I voted for the two board concept, correct?

MR. LOWE

Well, you make some presumptions though, Mr. Dennery. There could be some people that would feel strongly enough about the proposition that perhaps they'd vote for the alternate without voting on the constitution.

MR. DENNERY

Mathematically, Mr. Lowe, don't you.....

MR. LOWE

But, mathematically we can take and do almost anything we want to with numbers, Mr. Dennery.

Further Discussion

MR. PUGH

Madam Chairman and fellow delegates, I tried to honestly answer Avant's questions as he propounded them to me without adding anything to them. Obviously, that wasn't totally expressive of my opinion. And indication that this was political--my biggest problem in trying to get a little rest over there at the White House Inn is about every time I go to bed that red light flashes on downstairs because I thought I had heard from the children or something and I ran and I get a letter from one of my old classmates who I hadn't seen in twenty-five years and he tells me what a great job I'm doing on this education issue and so forth and so on. So, it's not totally political in nature. Now, what's happened here is that Johnny Jackson one day got up and he made an amendment for five boards. Now, the amendment that was proposed awhile ago, and was withdrawn.....do you know that of eight authors on there that five of them voted against that amendment, and one of them wasn't even there? So, here we are today talking about Johnny Jackson's amendment and here we are having an amendment styled with eight authors, five of whom voted against it. As a practical matter, we put the two board concept in because we were told that the people wanted an expression on education other than what we had in there; I mean it's cut and dry. We are talking about this issue because somebody perhaps, other than us, suggested the people ought to have a choice. Well, if we buy that concept, and obviously we did because by one means or another we're going to give them a choice. Now, with a choice, what is more fair than something like the Jenkins amendment that passed 88 to 20 or 22--something along that nature--I think that's beginning to be expressive of this body as to what its feelings are. Now, we're not denying anyone any rights. We're not dealing in politics. We're not playing games. We're saying specifically vote for or against the constitution. I think the present instructions are exclusive of the Education Article which relates to what I said earlier. It tells the people, "Now look, in addition to the constitution or in connection with the constitution or in or out of it or anyway you want to cut it, you're going to decide what education board you want." It's as simple as that. Once you make that premise, what's so basically wrong with having two propositions. Do you want two boards, call them whatever else you want, add all kinds of expressive language short of the total size of the voting booths, anything that you want to say that's responsive to what we did. On the other hand, turn right around and say five boards and use any kind of language not misleading that will adequately express the issue. Then we present to the people of Louisiana a constitution without an Article on Education. So what? We tell them, "Now, look we couldn't make up our mind; you make it up for us." That's what they go into the voting booth for; there's nothing wrong with that. That's what we do every time we have a constitutional amendment--all fifty-five or whatever there were, that failed. You decide whether or not, in the old constitution, you want garbage collection, you want this or do you want that. In an attempt to get away from that, we culled this thing substantially. We did leave the issue of education yet to be decided. Now, I came down here opposed to alternates--I really was--because I thought that anything good enough to be an alternate was good enough to be there in the first place. The convention in a deliberative manner decided we were going to present two issues to the people. Now, I say to you before it gets to be midnight, let's just present the two issues to the people. If we can't make up our mind on English language, just let the voters decide.

Believe it or not, they've got a lot of sense. Thank you.

Closing

MR. KEAN

Madam Chairman and fellow delegates, I will only speak very briefly because I....apparently act under a misapprehension that this convention had adopted an Article on Education which it included in the constitution that we propose to offer to the people of this state. As I understand, the opponents of this particular amendment, they take a different position. They take a position that we have not adopted an Educational Article which we offer as a part of the constitution of this state. They take the position that what we've done is simply set out here two options that we leave up to the people to vote on, and I simply have a contrary version of what this body has done. I want to point out to you one final point for your consideration--not that it's going to change any votes--but I think it's something we ought to think about. If we take out of the constitution, as the opponents of this amendment suggest we have done, we're not only placing in jeopardy the higher education boards of this state, we're placing in jeopardy the entirety of the Educational Article, which deals with many other things beside higher educational boards. Now, when you say you take the Educational Article out of this constitution--as Mr. Pugh says he has done--or what Mr. Jenkins' amendment accomplishes, then I say to you we've taken out the foundation. We've taken out the millages for the New Orleans School Board. We've taken out the other provisions of that particular article that we've put in as a part of this constitution. If for some reason, this particular alternative option proposition that they propose to offer the people is declared invalid because it didn't get a majority of the votes of the people of this state, we have no educational provisions in this constitution or in any other constitution. You know what they did in Illinois to avoid that horrible result? They said that if it didn't pass you went back to the old constitution. We haven't even said that. So, I say to you when you vote against this amendment--and I'm sure many of you will--you ought to consider that as a result of that the possibility is that we put at issue not boards, we put at issue the whole Educational Article that we've labored so long and so hard to put together for some several weeks during the course of this convention. I think that ought to have some consideration. One final word, Mr. Gravel asked the question whether or not there was any law which required a for or against vote in connection with a question submitted to the people of this state? I suggest that you look, those of you who have got some interest in this matter, at R.S. 18:761 which is a part of the general election law of this state which Act No. 2 of 1972 said, "shall be applicable in connection with this election," and you'll find that under Subsection (C) it requires that the ballot designate so that the voter may, by his approval or disapproval, cast a vote on any constitutional amendment or any question submitted. I say to you that what is now before you that has been considered and approved by this body does not conform to that particular section, does not conform to the requirements of Act No. 2 of 1972. If you want to put this matter behind a cloud of legality, why just proceed to vote this amendment down and let the Educational Article hang out there for whatever someone wants to take a knap at it. Thank you.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

[Amendment rejected: 61-61. Record vote ordered on the motion to table reconsideration. Motion to table reconsideration adopted: 67-57.]

Personal Privilege

MR. J. JACKSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates to the convention, I have cautiously attempted, except for that little moment last night, to come up before you again before this convention was over. My good friend and probably the most person that had provided the greatest of assistance to me, unknowingly, made a blanket statement that an amendment that I introduced was the creation for all this confusion that we're going to sit point. For those who...and I believe...and I understood it in the context he meant it. But, for those who really want to know, and don't know, the facts of the matter, the amendment that we introduced was an amendment creating one additional board to the four boards that were created, an amendment that was designed to bring equity to another system within this state and, particularly....I've heard the discussion for the last two days, and I have cautiously and unemotionally sit in that seat and hear only discussions again, and it's apparent that we still have not recognized that there does exist another system of higher education in this state. Now, whether we want to recognize it in our discussions or whatever manner you want to put it on the ballot, I'll take my chances. But, I would like you to leave this deliberate body, leave this chambers with the feeling--at least the understanding--that there is, in fact, another system of higher education in this state and that the Southern system can no longer--regardless if you put this proposition on the ballot that may be favorable to the ultimate or favorite to the committee proposal--that we cannot continue to believe in fear and forget that Southern is a very viable system and, whether you, I, or anybody likes it, it is a reality and that I, as being a graduate of that university and a graduate of that system, want to, at no more, impress upon you right here to recognize that we do exist.

MR. STAGG

Mr. Chairman, it is twelve minutes to three. We have barely nine hours to go. If there is some way that we can cut off some of these amendments by shortening the time for their discussion, if we can let Style and Drafting get back to the floor, if we can finally adopt this constitution--and, in the nine hours remaining, we barely can do it--I would suggest to the delegates that we get after it.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Drew sends up amendments at this time.

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, delete lines 16 through 35, both inclusive, in their entirety and on page 3, delete lines 1 and 2 in their entirety and, of course, delete the last adopted amendment, which was the Jenkins amendment, and insert in lieu thereof the following: "OFFICIAL BALLOT. The text of the proposed constitution and the alternative proposition is available for inspection at your polling place. If the proposed constitution fails to receive a majority of the votes cast, alternative issues also fail."

[Motion to waive reading the amendment adopted without objection.]

Point of Order

MR. DE BLIEUX

At least--if not a point of order--at least a plea to Mr. Drew. This is identically, you might say, almost the amendment that Mr. Kean had. I think, as a result of that and the showing of this convention, we should certainly not consider it because we're just prolonging our time in agony.

MR. DREW

May I answer, Mr. Chairman? May I answer, Mr. De Blieux?

MR. HENRY

Well, I think, in explaining it, you going to answer his problem because I think he can show you where you're in error, Senator De Blieux.

MR. DREW

Mr. Chairman, I would like to withdraw the amendment to add a technical amendment on the last line of the paragraph under "OFFICIAL BALLOT" where it says "majority of votes cast, insert "thereon"--"majority of votes cast thereon"--and then we should offer the amendment.

[Amendment withdrawn and resubmitted with correction. Motion to limit debate on all amendments to ballot provisions to ten minutes for the proponents and ten minutes for the opponents. Substitute motion to limit debate to five minutes for the proponents and five minutes for the opponents. Substitute motion adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. DREW

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, let me start with my technical amendment, and I think it does, possibly, cure something that would cause a terrific hiatus in our proposal here. As it now reads, it says: "If the proposed constitution fails to receive a majority of the votes cast, ("comma (,)") and I can see the possibility of the alternative receiving more votes in the constitution. It may very well be interpreted that, thereby, the constitution had failed was the reason I inserted the word "thereon", and I think that is important. Now, let me make this statement in the beginning. I have no strong feelings, as my voting record on education shows, on either the constitutional provision that we have adopted that's to be offered to the people or on the alternative. But, I do disagree with the fact that we have put them on an equal basis. Had it been the will of this convention for the alternative provisions, they would have been in the constitution. We adopted the constitution with the present education provision in it, and then, later on, we decided that the people--if they were not satisfied with that--should be given an alternative, as the out provides, as was read to you up here: "The constitution as drafted by the convention, together with any alternative provisions proposed for submission, shall be submitted to the people for their adoption or rejection." I am trying to track that, and I think it is very important. That's the reason I had drawn this amendment before the key amendment was drawn, I think. It is very important that this be placed on the ballot in a "for" or "against" status. I think it complies with Act 2. I think it complies with what we have all, throughout the State of Louisiana, been used to. When you submit two or three positive propositions, you have done the electorate a disfavor. I disagree with the fact that we reached a point to where we said we can't make up our minds. We've made up our minds very emphatically as to what this convention would propose, and that is the provision that is included in the constitution that we are offering to the people. Nowhere, nowhere, ladies and gentlemen, in the constitution or in the alternative proposal does it say that we have taken their provision out of this convention proposal. I have drawn this because I think it is much simpler; I think it is much easier to understand than the Jenkins amendment; and I think that anyone could go in a voting booth and, in a very short time, read the ballot, as here proposed, and know exactly how they were voting. But, as it is now proposed, you have a "for" or "against" the constitution; then you have two positive propositions on your alternatives. There is no way, ladies and gentlemen, no way that you could interpret this thing to say that the provision we adopted and placed in the constitution is on the identical status of the alternate proposal. We have said, by adopting it and placing it in this proposal: this is the desire of the majority of this convention; if you disagree with the desire of the majority of this convention, we are giving you a choice to vote for something else. And that is what an alternative proposal is. I do not like the word, and I think it is doing a disservice to people on either side. As I say, I have no strong feelings either way. On any type of instructions where you use the words "vote for" or use the words "vote against," I think you are making a suggestion--at least, to the subconscious mind--as to how the voter may vote. That is the reason that, instead of using "voting for" or "voting against," I have used the word "adopt," which I think is a much more neutral position, although not completely neutral. I think that, if we follow the Act, put this thing on the ballot--this proposition on the ballot--as it was intended to be: To the people of Louisiana, we have offered you a constitution. If you do not like the education proposal, we have offered you an alternate to what we are submitting to you. That is the only way you can interpret the actions of this convention. To say that anywhere in that alternate proposition--the proposal that was adopted--that it deleted the education proposal from our Constitutional Convention proposal, you cannot find it. It says that this will be awkward as an alternative, and that's what I'm trying to do. Here, you have a "for" or "against" the constitution; you have a "for" or "against" the alternative; and I think that is the proper manner. I will say this much: I do seriously disagree with the vote of the convention on the requirement of a vote of the majority of those voting in the election, because I do think it raises a serious constitutional question. But, the convention has shown, by three votes, that they will not go with that. For that reason, I am coming with a very simple way of placing this matter on the vote on the ballot, which, I think, is as neutral as it can possibly be. I hope you will adopt the proposal. I will yield to questions, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

MR. BURSON

Mr. Drew, isn't it true that your amendment follows the general Montana ballot format that was in the amendment that I'd proposed earlier today?

MR. DREW

Very similar, Mr. Burson, and it also complies with the general election laws which Mr. Kean brought out up here.

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

MR. BURSON

It complies with those general election laws because it provides for a "for" or "against" vote. Isn't that true?

MR. DREW

It complies with those laws and then complies with Act 2 when it says "it shall be submitted for adoption or rejection." That cannot be anything but "for" or "against."

MR. BURSON

Isn't it true that it retains the principle that you said the convention had already voted on today that the majority voting on the alternative would prevail on that question?

MR. DREW

The majority voting on the alternative prevail--I disagree with the concept. It is the will of the convention, and I submit to their will.

MR. BURSON

Would you have any objection if--subsequent to the adoption of your amendment which I hope passes--that we propose additional language to go in that little box which would say something to the effect that, if the alternative passes, in that event, the alternative article on education shall be substituted for the Education Article in the proposed constitution, to make plain what the legal consequences would be in that event?

MR. DREW

If the convention thinks it's necessary, I wouldn't oppose it; however, where it says that "the constitution will include unless," it seems to be clear to me, but I would have no objections.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Drew, the vote on the alternative does not depend upon the vote on the constitution, then?

MR. DREW

Absolutely not.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Suppose that the vote here on the constitution--we'll say it's the proposal for the adoption of the constitution--should be one million votes, and the votes against the constitution, we'll say, is eight hundred thousand. Now, suppose--on the alternative proposal for--we see five hundred thousand against four hundred thousand, will it be adopted?

MR. DREW

No, sir, not if....

MR. DE BLIEUX

Whatever receives the majority of votes cast for...

MR. DREW

Mr. De Blieux, I think where it says "is adopted by a majority" could be interpreted no way except meaning a yes vote.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, now, you mean that more people have got to vote for the alternative than voted in the constitution for its adoption?

MR. DREW

No. Absolutely not.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, what you're saying, that's the point I'm trying to clear up. You say, if the "for" was more than the "against," that it would not be adopted.

MR. DREW

It says: "unless the alternative is adopted by a majority of those voting on it." How could that be interpreted any other way than the vote on the alternative?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, that's what I'm talking about. Now, if the majority of those that vote for the alternative--that is, more vote for it than vote against it--would it become a part of the constitution?

MR. DREW

If more voted for it, yes, sir. While ago, you had the....

MR. DE BLIEUX

Regardless of what might be vote on the....

MR. DREW

Regardless of the vote on the constitution. The majority would rule separately on each vote, if that's the point you're trying to make.

MR. DE BLIEUX

If what you say would be true, that sounds like a good alternative to me, but I just don't think it's....

MR. DREW

I don't see how it can be interpreted any other way than alternative.

MR. HENRY

Mr. Drew, turn around here and give the Clerk your attention a minute there, please, sir.

MR. DREW

It has been called to my attention--I'm sorry I didn't catch it--and with the permission of the convention, where it says, "against one Board of Regents for higher education with appointed and elected members," it has left out the word "no." I would like to withdraw it to insert "no" there to where both are....

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

He just makes the against proposition conform, word for word, with the for proposition; so it would read: "against one Board of Regents for higher education with appointed and elected members and no (inserted) management boards."

Questions

MR. CASEY

Mr. Drew, I apologize in advance for asking this question again because it's already been hit upon, and I know you disagree with the question. But, there are a lot of people who will have to vote on this particular amendment who feel--and I am one of them--that the language in the box is not adequately clear as to what vote is necessary in order to adopt the alternative, and it could be read--and I have read it myself, for whatever opinion that's worth, two ways--that either you're governed by the vote on the proposed constitution or, maybe, the "it" could refer to a majority of those voting on the alternative. I merely suggest to you that it might be well to clarify that language because there are quite a few people on the floor of the convention who feel there is some confusion, and that it is not adequately clear. Do you know that, sir?

MR. DREW

Tom, I had originally intended to make that "by a majority of those voting thereon." Would that clarify it to any extent or not?

MR. CASEY

I merely suggest to Mr. Drew, on the technicality of language, that "thereon" may be as confusing as "it," whereas, in the Burson amendment and others, I think it has been adequately spelled out.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The next set conforms with the amendment as previously submitted, with two changes--technical changes--and these additions. Both of them are contained inside the box provisions talking about the alternative. It will now read: "The proposed constitution will include one Board of Regents with"--insert this word: "all"--appointed members and three management boards for governance of higher education unless the alternative is adopted by a majority of those voting on the alternative--instead of "it". "Voting on the alternative". There is one further change. I'm sorry I misled you there. Immediately after "2." and the language "The alternative is:" insert parentheses "(Vote for One)". Those are the only changes.

Explanation

MR. DREW

Ladies and gentlemen, we made three technical changes, which the Clerk has read, which several people thought would make it very clear as to what we were submitting and how the votes would be determined. I move for the adoption of the floor amendment.

Questions

MR. CHATELAIN

Delegate Drew, just to make it abundantly clear, your amendment provides that if I walked into a voting machine that I have an option to vote for or against the new constitution. Is that right, sir?

MR. DREW

Right.

MR. CHATELAIN

And, if I stop right there, as far as I'm concerned, I don't have to vote on whether or not I want an alternate--for or against the alternate. Is that right?

MR. DREW

You do no requirement, no, sir.

MR. CHATELAIN

Supposing there are six hundred thousand votes cast--I mean, sixty thousand votes cast for and forty thousand against. Supposing, again, there was--for the alternate--there was forty thousand votes cast for the alternate and twenty-nine against. The alternate would carry, sir, and so would the constitution?

MR. DREW

That's the way it reads, yes, sir.

MR. CHATELAIN

In other words, the top part doesn't bear on the bottom part?

MR. DREW

No connection. They both stand on their own majorities.

MR. CHATELAIN

Thank you.

MR. DREW

I move the adoption of the amendment.

MR. PUGH

Mr. Drew, if Style and Drafting figures that "said amendment" is better than "it," do you have any objection to that?

MR. DREW

You mean in the box?

MR. PUGH

Yes.

MR. DREW

I have changed that--deleted "it" and changed it to "the alternative."

MR. PUGH

I understand that, but when you refer to "it," I think you're still in problems with that, by what you mean.

MR. DREW

I don't have "it"; I had to take it out, and it reads: "those voting on the alternative." It was just amended, Bob, to delete "it" and add "on the alternative" to clarify that.

MR. PUGH

Can I ask you one other thing?

MR. DREW

Certainly.

MR. PUGH

Did you put "vote for one" down there, as you told me you would?

MR. DREW

"Vote for one" is inserted.

Point of Information

MR. WEISS

This perhaps is a point of information, but, on the sheet I just received, Burson floor amendment.....

Well, the important thing is that all are appointed. That's what I'd like to see included in that. Is that correct in the present.....?

MR. POYNTER

That's correct, Dr. Weiss.

MR. JENKINS

Harmon, my question is with regard to what appears to me to be an ambiguity in the usage of the word "alternative." I refer you to the last three words in the box: "on the alternative." You say it must be adopted by a majority of those voting on the "alternative."

MR. DREW

The only way to adopt an amendment is to vote for it, Woody. I don't think there could be any question there.

MR. JENKINS

When you say "on the alternative"--"the majority of those voting on the alternative"--you're meaning, say, if there's sixty for and forty against, a majority would be one over fifty?

MR. DREW

Right.

MR. JENKINS

But, earlier, you say "unless the alternative is adopted." In that sense, you mean "alternative" only in the sense of the "for"; isn't that correct?

MR. DREW

I don't know how you could say "unless it's rejected," Woody.

MR. JENKINS

Well, couldn't you say "unless Alternative 2A is adopted by a majority of those voting on the alternatives"?

MR. DREW

"Unless the alternative is adopted by a majority of those voting on the alternative"--is that your suggestion? That's the way it reads, Woody. This simplifies the thing on the ballot, and I think it...

Further Discussion

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I've just been solemnly assured by two of the most vociferous proponents of the Van Camps, who I will not name, that this amendment does grave damage to their side. That being the case, it is bound to be, and must be at long last, the acceptable way to set up the ballot because it will satisfy neither one. I'd like to close by quoting to you something Harry Truman said one time which, as I recall, goes something like this: that it's better to do the second best thing when it's time to do something than to wait too long to do the best. So, let's vote for this amendment and get on.

Further Discussion

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I just want to point out to you that this particular amendment is weighted in the other direction from the Kean amendment. The only thing that I like to be is for in this election. Now, as it stands right now, those people who are going to favor a two board education system are going to go to the polls and vote on this alternative. Those others who are not interested in that will overlook this. As a result of that, I think that you have a weighted-in position insofar as the two board concept is concerned. I'm opposed to this one for the same reason that I opposed the Kean amendment. You can vote it as you please, but I just want to be fair and square and put it on the ballot where people can understand what they're doing. I just let that go for what it might be worth.

Questions

MR. WILLIS

Senator, I quite applaud your keen observation of this amendment. Does not this amendment reduce the alternative proposal to subordinate status when mathematics and algebra are called into play?

MR. DE BLIEUX

It certainly does, and gives those who favored it a decided advantage over those who disfavor it.

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

MR. WILLIS

Let me illustrate how it can occur, and would you agree with it? Put a question mark to this. If I go in that voting machine, and my people go in that voting machine, and they pull only a trigger for the constitution, and this education article is in that constitution, they can simply ignore the alternative. So, they have no alternative at all. Isn't that correct?

MR. DE BLIEUX

That's exactly right. They are figuring for the.... five man concept, and ignore this, and those that are for this will go vote for it, and you won't have any five board concept.

MR. ROEMER

Well, your point, then Senator, I think is well taken. That is placed in this form--we don't require the people to consider the education provision at all, do we?

MR. DE BLIEUX

That's....correct.

MR. ROEMER

They can completely ignore it.

MR. DE BLIEUX

That's right.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Senator De Blieux, do you know that I agree with you completely that I think that this is one of the worst amendments ever offered to this convention?

Further Discussion

MR. JACK

Mr. Chairman, I've witnessed a miracle, since we put in that five minutes for each side, my watch shows thirty-eight minutes.

Now, what I'm going to tell you is by that, fat as I am, if you could use that time, I could run the hundred yard dash in three seconds.

Now, I'm going to ask, since they voted my motion substitute, five minutes to each side, that if you all don't have a watch up there, get one. Unless they're going to reverse it, let's follow this five minutes because time is getting by in spite of the way it's being kept.

MR. HENRY

Well....well, Mr. Jack. Let me say this. We took a lot of that just listening to you ask questions, and for a little recess, etc. We're trying to get things going along here just as fast as we can.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. DREW

I'll be very brief. I've been asked to state for the record again that the vote on the alternative will stand on the majority of votes cast on the alternative as this thing reads. There is one correction that Style and Drafting can make. On the desk copy, there is no 2 (A) before the for or against. On some of your copies, there is a 2 (A) before each of them, which I'm sure can be deleted by Style and Drafting. It's not on the official desk copy, so there's nothing to be concerned about there. I think it simplifies the matter. But, as it's placed on the ballot, I hope that as a compromise we....you will accept and we can live with. I ask for the adoption of this amendment.

Questions

MR. NUNEZ

Mr. Drew, I'll ask you this question because I think it should be on the record somewhere. Did you know that Mr. Martin said in his opinion, this is the most legal way that we can handle this situation?

MR. DREW

Thank you, Mr. Nunez.
Yes, sir.

MR. FONTENOT

Mr. Pugh....I mean Mr. Drew, your amendment at the bottom--the alternative is vote for one; you asked for one board of regents for higher education with appointed and elected members and no managing boards--in effect has switched it and put the so-called one board on top and the five board on the bottom. Isn't that correct?

MR. DREW

No, the against reads the same thing, Clyde. It's for or against the identical words.

MR. ROY

Harmon, I disagree with my good friend, Burt Willis. Your vote on No. 2 will be the deciding vote on whether we have an alternative, or whether CP-7 is adopted by the people. Isn't that true?

MR. DREW

That is provided in CP-98, I believe....that if the alternative is adopted, the constitution provision now in there will be null and void and shall be substituted for.

MR. ROY

Simply stated, if we happen to get a tie vote on No. 2 where ten thousand voted for and ten thousand voted against, then the CP-7 that is presently in the body of the constitution that we've already adopted--that's the old education article--would be the education proposal in the new constitution: that is, a five-man board concept; would it not?

MR. DREW

That would be my opinion. It would neither....

MR. ROY

Or, if nobody voted at all on Article....on No. 2, then CP-7 and what we've previously adopted in the present body of the constitution would be the constitutional article on education, would it not?

MR. DREW

I don't know any way to require them. If you required them to vote on the constitution, and on the alternative, you may as well leave in a majority of those voting in this election, if you required both.

MR. BERGERON

Harmon, let me just straighten this up, just for clarification. In other words, if I'm a citizen, I go to the voting booth. First of all, I vote on the proposition of for or against the constitution.

MR. DREW

Correct.

MR. BERGERON

All right. Let's say I vote for the constitution. Then I go down, whether I favor the five board or the two board plan, I go down and vote for or against alternative two.

MR. DREW

Right.

MR. BERGERON

So, whether I'm for the five boards, or against the.... for the two boards, I vote yes or no for the constitution. That is, I vote on the constitution and then the alternatives.

MR. DREW

There are two separate votes that are governed by the majority in each. There is no connection between the majority in either vote on the constitution or the alternative. I think that's clear.

MR. BERGERON

Right. I just wanted to straighten it up.
Thank you, Harmon.

MR. DERBES

Mr. Drew, as you have phrased the amendment, am I correct in stating that the only way in which a vote on the constitution is related to a vote on the alternatives is one, in the event that there are no votes cast on the alternatives; and two, in the event that there is a tie with respect to the votes cast on the alternatives.

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

MR. DREW

You could go a little further, Jim, and say that if the alternative--had I not put "thereon" in there, and I think that clarified it--had the alternative received more votes cast in that poll than for the constitution, I think the constitution would fail.

MR. DERBES

So, that would be still a third...that would still be a third eventuality that you have provided for, but with the exception of those three eventualities....

MR. DREW

I have deleted one of them. That's what I'm saying, Jim.

MR. DERBES

I see.

But, with respect to those eventualities, there is no relationship between the alternatives and the constitution....

[Record vote ordered. Amendment rejected:
62-63. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

The next set of amendments sent up by Delegate Avant.

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, line 16, in Floor Amendment No. 1 proposed by Delegate Jenkins and adopted by the convention on January 19, 1974, on line 25, after the language added by said amendment, add the following:

"With the superintendent of education as its administrative head", add this, "who shall implement the policies of the board... the Board of Regents."

Explanation

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this amendment is simply to add very briefly some more descriptive language which will inform the electorate of the nature of the alternative proposition upon which they are voting. One of the salient and most significant features of the alternative proposition which was adopted by this convention is contained in Section 2 relating to the superintendent of education which provides that the superintendent, with respect to the superintendent of education, that he shall be the administrative head of the department of education and the Board of Regents, and shall implement the policies of the state board of elementary and secondary education, and the Board of Regents, and the laws affecting schools under their jurisdiction. So, it seems only fit and proper, since we can do it in just a very few words, to inform the electorate of the state, in voting on this alternative proposition, that their state university will be under the jurisdiction of a Board of Regents, and that the administrative head of that board will be the elected superintendent of education who shall implement the policies of that board. I think that that is such a significant and salient feature of the plan that that information should be imparted to the voters on the ballot so that they will have the benefit of that knowledge, and in that way, the passage of the alternative will...or the question of the passage of the alternative will be based upon a properly informed electorate.

For that reason, I ask you to vote favorably for this amendment.

Questions

MR. GOLDMAN

Mr. Avant, in keeping with your desire to inform the public completely on what they are voting on, would you agree to another amendment which would also say that management boards are permissible through the legislature?

MR. AVANT

If that's a correct statement, which I am not sure whether it is or not, I would have no objection to fully informing the voters as to the alternative proposition that they are asked to accept in simple, plain language.

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Avant, is it not a fact that the electors of this state is going to get a constitution that they can read? Won't this be in the constitution?

MR. AVANT

...They're going to get a constitution that they can read. Yes, ma'am.

Now, what was the second part of the question?

MRS. WARREN

Will this provision you have here already be in the constitution?

MR. AVANT

Well, the point, Mrs. Warren, is this: that the alternative proposition, which we are being asked to vote upon, provides that the superintendent of education will be the administrative head of the Board of Regents, and will implement the policies of the Board of Regents. Now, that...if the alternative is adopted, then that will be the constitution. Now, the only reason for making this amendment is to place on the ballot, in that little block that you see, where it will be on the voting machine when the people go in, that little bit of information, so that they will be aware of that when they vote.

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Avant, do you know that whether they have an alternative or not is not important to me? What I'm worried about, is all this verbiage that's going to go on the ballot to confuse the people. I mean, I just can't see the necessity of putting it on there when you're going to give them a constitution to read. So, when they get to that, they will automatically know this is connected with that alternative.

MR. AVANT

Well, Mrs. Warren, if you think that very many voters are going to go walking around in the voting booth, or in the polling place there, and get this constitution and the alternative proposition and sit down and read it word for word, I think you are going to be in for a big shock.

MRS. WARREN

Well, I sure wish they could put it all on there so they could read it when they get there.

Thank you.

MR. A. JACKSON

Mr. Avant, in adding this verbiage to the proposition, is this...part of the issue that the voters must decide?

MR. AVANT

Is this part of the issue?

MR. A. JACKSON

Yes, that language that you are adding there, is that part of the issue....?

MR. AVANT

Oh, yes. That is part of the issue because, as I recall, the main document which we adopted with respect to the Board of Regents that the elected superintendent of education is separated from the Board of Regents, and he has no duties with respect to the Board of Regents.

MR. A. JACKSON

But, is it not true that the powers and the duties of the superintendent is not before the voters, and this proposition. But, what is clearly before the voters is whether or not you want a governor's structure with five boards, or one with two boards. Isn't that the proposition that's before....

MR. AVANT

No, that is not the proposition. The proposition is whether you want to adopt an alternative proposition in lieu of what's in the basic document which....put higher education....

MR. HENRY

You've exceeded your time.

Mr. Roy.

I know it doesn't make any difference because we've got more amendment drafters in here than I've ever seen. But, we're sure running out of time.

Further Discussion

MR. ROY

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I hate to rise and say what I'm going to say, but I am fed up with LSU right now. I'm a graduate of LSU; I went there all my college term. I dare say I'm the only person here,--it doesn't make a darn, I guess,--who knows the Alma Mater in French. I was ready to sing the darn thing. But, I have never seen a convention stymied by such a group. Now, this is nothing more than overloading this particular section so that we can't get sixty-seven votes on end, because it has about as much place on the ballot as me flying out of here without a plane.

I came here today, ready this morning, to vote for the first Kean amendment, although I disagreed with it, because I felt that I had voted for an alternative. The only way that alternative can be fairly presented to the people is for the people to have an option to vote for or against it, and not to count against the people who don't vote on the alternative, the hundreds of thousands who are going to vote on the constitution as a whole. I was ready to vote for it, holding my nose, to some extent. Then, Mr. Kean pulled it. Then later, he came with another one that made it impossible for me, as a citizen of this state, to face any constituent and say to him fairly, I gave you an alternative. Now, we are either going to face this issue now, and the people who are for LSU like I am, and who've contributed every year to the Century Club and everything else, are going to stand up for what's right and what's fair or we're not going to have a constitution. It's just time that you faced the issue, LSU. The people have spoken. They want an alternative. They want it to be fairly presented to them. They don't want a stuffed ballot box on it.

That's all I have to say. I'm sorry. I'm sorry that I have to get up and say it. I hope you kill this amendment.

Point of Information

MR. GOLDMAN

A question of the chairman.

Is there any procedural way that we can get back to Resolution No. 52 with the original Pugh language on there? ...for the alternative?

MR. HENRY

You're talking about you want to get off the ballot business?

MR. GOLDMAN

No, I want to get back on the original way the ballot is on there as opposed....

MR. HENRY

You'd have to do it by amendments, sir.

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. AVANT

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, all I ask is for you to let the voters know what they are being asked to accept. If that offends Mr. Roy, or anybody else, I make no apologies for it.

[Amendment rejected: 38-81. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Personal Privilege

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I have had a lots of ups and downs in my life. I've been in a lot of tight places. I've been in this building when, late at night, the master switch was pulled, and the lights went out. I've been here when a bill was passed in this chamber and got lost before we could get it in the Senate chamber. I'm afraid that the way we're acting, that the trend of this convention, that I might see something like that again. I hope I don't. We've got a problem here today, and the educated people, I think, should take a few moments and use their common sense and try to get together. I've voted so many ways today that I don't really know how I've voted. I thought Mr. Kean's amendment went too far one way. I voted against it thinking that one would come along after while that I could vote for--here comes another one, and it went too far in another direction. For our colleges and universities and for the people that has their interest uppermost in their heart, I think that there's some way that this could be solved by both sides giving a little. All I want to do, and I try to help them all; I got Southeastern over there, my neighbor; I got LSU here with a lot of my constituents and their children that go there. I've always went out of my way to try to help them--all of them--because I'm for the cause of education. But, I believe we've reached the point where they're not really trying to help themselves. I have never seen a fight like this over something that should be by intelligent people, worked out and submitted to the people of this state, in the language they can understand it, and let them vote the way they please. There are moments that I've been looking at here lately, in my opinion, there's a little bit of disguise in there trying to mislead someone, or trying to get a little edge on what the people want. I stand here trying to represent the people that I know needs to have the opportunity to vote their will. I call on you, educators; I call on you smart people. Come up with something that will be fair to both sides. Let's adopt it, and let the people decide this issue. It looks like we are going to fail to decide it ourselves. So, let the people decide it with some language that they can read and understand. That's all I'm going to ask you to do. I think it's time that we done that. I think the people that are here can do it if they'll give a little and take a little, and let's go on with our work.

Motion

MR. BOLLINGER

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I think it's obvious that the time has arisen where we should stop this foolishness. Therefore, I move for a suspension of the rules for the purpose of precluding any further amendments, with that part of the resolution dealing with the ballot.

Point of Information

MR. RAYBURN

Would that apply to my amendment that's already been introduced and that's on the desk at this time?

MR. HENRY

It would apply to any amendments, yes, sir, that had been up here or not, Senator. I'm assuming.

Substitute Motion

MR. AERTKER

I'd like to make a substitute motion that we recess for five minutes. I really believe that we could come up with something. If we don't, then we would go with the motion. I believe that we can come up with something.

MR. HENRY

All right, now. I'm going to tell you what we are going to do, if you all will just roll with me a minute. We'll give them five minutes. But, we've about five minutes ourselves right out of business. But, when it...I don't want any lobbyist coming in the rail. I want the delegates to this convention to try to work out this problem. You've got five minutes.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Jenkins has sent an amendment for redrafting in essence his amendment.

On page 2, delete lines 16 through 35, both inclusive in their entirety, and on page 2, delete lines 1 and 2 in their entirety, and all floor amendments thereto, and insert in lieu thereof the following:--need some quotes, Mr. Jenkins--"official ballot".

[Motion to waive reading of the amendment adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, this is essentially the same amendment we approved before except it makes a change to resolve a legal question that Mr. Kean had raised with regard to the deletion from the proposed constitution of the article on education in case alternative 2(B) were approved. That's what this language at the top does under "Instructions to Voters." One thing that you...it's this one right here; you've had it for, I guess, an hour or so...one thing to remember is that these instructions to voters at the top undoubtedly would be printed just as this sort of thing normally is, in smaller type on the ballot, so that the main thing on the ballot would be the "Do you favor or oppose the adoption of the proposed constitution," and the "for" and "against" and the same thing with regard to the alternatives. Now, I've checked around to Judge Tate and a number of the other lawyers in the convention, and no one has raised any objections to the legality of this. I think just about everyone agrees that this will do it from a legal standpoint. It's just a question of whether or not you want this particular wording. So, I'd like to urge the adoption of this amendment.

Questions

MRS. ZERVIGON

Mr. Jenkins, in your opinion, do very many people make up their mind on a question because of the wording on the ballot, in the booth; or do you think most voters have made up their minds before they go into the booth?

MR. JENKINS

Well, I think it depends on what the issue is. In this case, I think most people are going to make up their mind before they go into the booth. The purpose for the language, for most of the language under "Instructions to Voters", is not really for instructing voters. The purpose of the language primarily is to cure the legal questions involved, to make sure about what the legal effect is of the adoption or rejection of the constitution, the adoption or rejection of the various alternatives. That's the real purpose of the top paragraph, so that it is possible for a voter to ascertain what the effect of his votes will be so that he can cast an intelligent vote, and because that is available to him to make this reasonable and lawful. So, that's the purpose of it.

MRS. ZERVIGON

The main question before us is, insofar as ballot provisions are concerned, is whether the alternative would take a majority of those voting on the constitution or a majority of those voting on the alternative itself, in order to pass; isn't that correct?

MR. JENKINS

That's correct, and that's what the amendment I had adopted earlier I think that made a statement at that time on that question, and I'm not submitting this again on that issue. I'm submitting it simply because of the technical changes in the top paragraph to cure some of the legal questions that have been raised. So, that's the only difference between what we now have and what I'm offering now.

MRS. ZERVIGON

Would it be your feeling that the convention having decided that about three times, perhaps we could adopt these technical changes that you are making and go on to the next question before the bartering?

MR. JENKINS

Well, I would think so, Mrs. Zervigon, but we've shown no propensity to do that so far.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

Amendment sent up by Mr. Anzalone, Fayard, and Rayburn read as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 15, lines 2 and 3, insert the following paragraph:
 "(2) Secretary of state shall designate in numerical sequence each "for" and "against" item to be voted on in order that each appears on the ballot."

Amendments 2-7, just renumber the following paragraphs or subparagraphs thereafter.

Explanation

MR. ANZALONE

Mr. Chairman and delegates, the primary function of this amendment is that regardless of how we come up with a ballot, we're going to have some "for" provisions and we're going to have some "against" provisions on the ballot. As has been pointed out, you're not going to get too much information from what appears within the machine itself. There's little question about that. But, as has been in the past, and I'm sure that it will be in the future, with the assistance of numbers placed on the side of your proposals, you are going to enable a great deal many more people to avail themselves to vote on the constitution. Right now I would submit to you that across this state that the people are thinking that the vote on this constitution is going to be the most complex thing that they've ever done in their life; and for that reason I think a great number of them are not going to vote on the constitution, which is something that we don't want. If we place numbers by the propositions, whether it be "for" or "against", but a number that can be identified, I think it would lend great assistance to these people. You would get greater participation, and in doing so, you would get more of the will of the people of this state whether or not they do want or don't want this constitution.

Questions

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Anzalone, let me see if I understand you correctly. Of course, at the present time we have only adopted the Jenkins amendment. Now, the Jenkins amendment will have "for the constitution," "against the constitution." One of those, the "for" would probably be numbered "1" and "against" would be numbered "2"; is that it?

MR. ANZALONE

Yes, sir.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Now, then you go down to the alternates, and you'd have alternates 2(A)...

MR. ANZALONE

That'd be 3 and 4.

MR. DE BLIEUX

What's that?

MR. ANZALONE

My intention would be 3 and 4. Senator, the reason that we didn't put the tentative numbers in here was because we don't know when this thing is going to be called for approval by the voters. It may be at the bottom of the ballot; it may be on the top. But, my intention is simply to say that you're going to vote, for instance, in Woody's amendment, it would be 1, 2, 3, and 4. Just that simple.

MR. DE BLIEUX

In other words, you just wanted to number the various items on the ballot?

MR. ANZALONE

Right. Just like you do the candidates.

MR. FAYARD

Mr. Anzalone, do you know that I've spoken with Mr. Pugh, the author of that proposal, and he has no objection to this amendment?

MR. ANZALONE

No, sir; I didn't know that. Oh, well, that's good.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

This amendment is sent up by Mr. Gravel and Mr. De Blieux. It goes to page 4, line 24. After the word "on" delete the date December 2, 1974, and insert in lieu thereof the following, "the thirtieth day prior to twelve o'clock midnight on December 31, 1974, by publishing such results out in the Baton Rouge Sunday Advocate or the Baton Rouge State Times."

Amendment No. 2. On page 4, line 23 after the word "be" before the word "promulgated" insert "officially".

Explanation

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen, this is really a technical amendment because the Act 2 requires that the constitution go into effect thirty days after the promulgation to vote. We have already adopted the effective date of the constitution as being midnight, December 31, 1974. Therefore, the promulgation must take place thirty days prior to that time, and that's all this amendment does. I move for favorable adoption of the amendment, Mr. Chairman.

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Reverend Alexander, you ready for yours, sir?

Amendment No. 1. On page 3, line 7, at the end of the line delete the words "if the" and delete line 8 in its entirety and on line 9, at the beginning of the line, delete the word and punctuation "use."

Explanation

MR. ALEXANDER

Mr. Chairman, delegates, ladies and gentlemen, I come to you in support of this amendment which, in my way of thinking, solves many of our problems. I believe the language contained here on lines 8 and 9 would, in effect, create enemies for this constitution that we don't need. The words to be deleted here are those words which stipulate that there would be no watchers at the polls. Now, that may not be a very serious problem, but if I were against this document, I don't think I would have very much difficulty convincing those people who would listen to me that somebody has conspired to deprive them of their rights at the polls. They'll think that you're trying to put something over on them, or trying to have them unrepresented. For example, suppose one...it may be one little group in a community. It could be a large community or an isolated community. If this question is raised and the general population of the state gets the idea that somebody is trying to put something over on them by not permitting them to have representatives at the polls, then I think we're in trouble. Now, as I conclude, this idea of the watchman developed some years ago when there were some candidates running for office, and during the process of drawing for commissioners, some candidates were not represented at the polls. This would only permit each faction or group to be represented through a watchman, or a watcher, rather. This watcher has access to the polls. He has access to the information. He can do nothing. He is not paid. He is designated by the owner represented only to watch, and I ask that you vote for the amendment. Thank you.

Questions

MR. DERBES

Reverend Alexander, I realize that you're trying to remove the prohibition against watchers, but how would the watchers be selected?

MR. ALEXANDER

It is my opinion, Mr. Derbes, that if this election were held under the regular election laws of the state, it would be better for us because those election laws have already stood the test of litigation, and there's no problem, and I think it would be better.

MR. DERBES

Are you saying then that the election laws of the state as they are presently enacted and enforced provide for the selection of watchers at such an election?

MR. ALEXANDER

That is correct.

Further Discussion

MR. PUGH

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I mentioned this to you earlier this morning. There is a provision in the law for watchers in special elections. Unfortunately, the watchers are appointed by their respective political parties. This is not a political party election. This is an election where the people themselves rather than political parties are related to or concerned with the constitution. I deleted it for the obvious purpose; there is no way for it to fit. That was what I had to do in all of the election provisions that didn't fit and there's no way to appoint them. If we appoint them, we're appointing them for the constitution, I guess. Who's going to appoint them against the constitution? It's just something that I respect what you're saying, Rev., but you just don't fit this procedure. I would hope that you would consider the judgment decision made that there's no provision for them, and therefore, you can't have them.

Questions

MR. WILLIS

Is not this election be for a thing instead of persons, and that therefore you don't need watchers?

MR. PUGH

That's correct.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Pugh, if I'm not mistaken in my experience in elections and as a member of the Democratic State Central Committee trying to conduct them and so forth, I believe watchers are only provided for in the primary election law. I don't think they are acquired in general elections. No one selects them in general elections, but the candidates themselves have the privilege of having somebody there if they see fit for him. Did you know that?

MR. PUGH

I not only know that, I know that my language says that if the election is held as a special election, there'll be no watchers. There's nothing to do at a general election.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, in this particular case, I don't know whether you realize it or not, but there'd be no harm done in deleting this particular language because they're not required.

MR. PUGH

They're not required in special elections?

MR. DE BLIEUX

I may be in error, but that's the way I read the language...

MRS. WARREN

Mr. Pugh, to quote Mr. Willis, he said, "this is a thing."

MR. PUGH

Yes, ma'am.

MRS. WARREN

Would you agree that this is one of the hottest things we have had yet?

MR. PUGH

No question about that.

MRS. WARREN

It just might bear some watching.

MR. PUGH

Well, if there was just some way we could figure out how to appoint them, that's the only problem. I tell you, trying to figure out how to appoint watchers in here is going to be an awful lot worse than this education problem we've got.

MR. BEL

Mr. Pugh, what provisions could be made in this election for official watchers?

MR. PUGH

Well, I guess each one of us could pick some out. I don't know who else would pick them out.

MR. BEL

You mean there's no provision in law for this to do that?

MR. PUGH

None; that's what I'm saying. You've got to exclude them because the special election calls for them. Ordinarily, see, when you have constitutional amendments, they're on general elections, and watchers are there for the parties and those were used. That's why I said that if it's a general election, we'll use the watchers that are provided for in the general election. That's taken care of. But, the problem then in a special election--and I really believe they're required for special elections--there's just no mechanics, that's all.

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

MR. BEL
They do require them in special elections.

MR. PUGH
Thank you, Mr. Bel. That's what I...

MR. A. LANDRY
Mr. Pugh, that you say that thirty days prior to the election, the board of supervisors are elected in each parish, shall appoint three commissioners and one clerk to preside over the election?

MR. PUGH -
Yes, sir.

MR. A. LANDRY
It does not provide anywhere in a regular general election the fourth part is submit commissioners, and because of the fact that you only have three commissioners and a clerk, you have some left over as submitted by the party, and therefore, you have watchers. But, in this particular election you specifically state whether we take this out or not doesn't make any difference because the board of supervisors are not going to appoint watchers anyway. They're going to put two clerks...one clerk and three commissioners, too.

MR. PUGH
The reason I excluded that...

[Previous Question ordered.]

Closing

MR. ALEXANDER
Mr. Chairman and delegates, the proposal simply states, simply prohibits watchers, and I don't think that language should be included. Now, there's nothing in the amendment that I have submitted to include watchers. The only thing it says that if any faction or any group or anyone, wants a watcher that there would be no prohibition against it. Now, once you say that, the psychological effect of stipulating that there would be no watchers, and I'm of the firm belief that some small faction could go to court and cause a lot of trouble. That's the only thing I'm trying to prevent. I'm asking you, and then, may I also state that the persons who will be selecting these commissioners are democrats. Remember, they're democrats, and there are two other parties in this state. I want you to keep that under consideration--two other legal parties, political parties in this state. I ask that you vote for the amendment.

Questions

MR. PUGH
Reverend, I have no objection if you want to use the word "need" instead of "shall" and I think that will satisfy your requirements. What worried me was the converse of what you were talking about, is if somebody files a suit to contest the validity of the election because there were no watchers. We had the right to exclude them; you understand? If we say they need not be done, then we're all right. I'll use the word "need" instead of "shall", but I would be worried about somebody filing a suit and tying us up on an absurd issue about the fact that there were no watchers. That's all.

MR. ALEXANDER
Would you be willing to change then your proposal, and use the word..

MR. PUGH
I'd be happy to change the word "shall" to "need" if they'll allow me to open it up for that purpose.

MR. HENRY
Can't you do that with this amendment, Mr. Clerk?
Are we pushing you too far?

MR. POYNTER
No, we can do alright. I just want to make sure I'm with Mr. Pugh and Rev. Alexander.

MR. ALEXANDER
"Shall" to "need" and that will solve the whole problem.

[Motion to suspend the rules to withdraw amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER
Mr. Alexander now sends up the following amendment:
Amendment No. 1. Page 3, line 8, immediately after the word "watchers" strike out the word "shall" and insert in lieu thereof the words "need not".

MR. HENRY
Let's get it right, Mr. Clerk.

MR. POYNTER
All right. I'm with you. "No watchers need be used," right? Just insert the word "need".

MR. ALEXANDER
Mr. Chairman and delegates, that solved the problem, and I ask you to vote for the amendment. I don't think we have any more controversy.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER
Mr. Flory, Gravel, Pugh, Fulco and others send up amendments.
Amendment No. 1. On page 3, delete lines 18 through 33 both inclusive in their entirety, and insert in lieu thereof the following: "5. The Executive Committee of the convention is hereby granted the full authority, power and authority to do all things which they may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this resolution, and they shall have the convention's unlimited authority to call upon any instrumentality of the state or its political subdivisions to cooperate in the furnishing of services, facilities, and employees for the purpose of carrying out the responsibilities of the convention and providing for the manner of the election;"

Explanation

MR. FLORY
Mr. Chairman and delegates, what the amendment does, briefly, is--if you recall earlier when Mr. Pugh gave his explanation of the resolution, he delegated to the Chairman and to the Secretary the authority to carry out and to implement the effects of this resolution--this changes that and gives it to the Executive Committee, which is given the authority under the House Concurrent Resolution passed last year to continue in effect and operate until the day of the election, and allows them to fully implement this resolution. That's all it does, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

MR. DENNERY
Mr. Clerk, haven't we changed the number? Shouldn't this now be 6 rather than 5, by virtue of Mr. Anzalone's....

MR. POYNTER
I think you're correct.

MR. DENNERY
Mr. Flory, I think this is a good idea. The only problem is: Are you going to have to call the Executive Committee into session, or can this be done by telephone, by mail ballot, or what?

MR. FLORY
I think the rules set up in the convention as to the operation of committees would apply, Mr. Dennery, insofar as a majority constitute a quorum--the majority taking care of the business of the Executive Committee.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER
Amendment sent up by Delegate Jones reads as follows:
Amendment No. 1. On page 1, between lines 4 and 5, insert the following: "PART I".
Amendment No. 2. On page 1, delete lines 18 and 19 in their entirety.
Amendment No. 3. On page 1, between lines 19 and 20, insert the following: "PART II".

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

Amendment No. 4. On page 5, delete lines 29 through 33, both inclusive, in their entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: "BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the provisions of this resolution shall take preference and priority over and shall be paramount to any rule, provision, or resolution heretofore adopted or taken by the convention relating to the matters in PART I of this resolution."

Explanation

MR. JONES

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, Amendment No. 1 is merely an effort--and Amendment No. 3--to divide the resolution so we could better express ourselves in regard to the real meat of these amendments in regard to Amendment No. 4 and Amendment No. 2. Amendment No. 1 merely describes a preamble of a resolution and inserts it as PART I between lines 4 and 5. Amendment No. 2 deletes lines 18 and 19, which read, in the preamble of the resolution: "which provides for the supremacy of this resolution over other actions of the convention." I'd requested that that be deleted. The third amendment is the one I previously referred to, which refers to the "WHEREAS" provision of the resolution and describes it as "PART II." Then, the saving clause--the last part of the resolution on page 5--the primary change is leaving out the words "or other action" and describing it by using the provisions set forth in PART I. As it reads now, it provides that "any rule, provision, or resolution or other action heretofore adopted or taken by the convention relating to the matters covered hereby." It seems to me that we're granting, in this resolution, just broad powers to vitiate anything that you ladies and gentlemen have done since last January. It looks as though they could change just about anything, particularly using the provision (E), which is lines 18 and 19: "which provides for the supremacy of this resolution over other actions of the convention." It seems to me like they could change just about anything they wanted; so that's why I have deleted that and deleted the words "or other action" on page 5. I ask your favorable adoption of this amendment.

Questions

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Jones, my question has to do with the fact that Delegate Resolution No. 98, presumably, has some provisions in it with regard to the ballot. Now, under your setup, those ballot provisions would govern over whatever we put in this resolution--the way you have it divided into PART I and PART II.

MR. JONES

How do you explain that, Mr. Dennery?

MR. DENNERY

Well, you have the official ballot provisions in the resolution....

MR. JONES

As Proposal No. 98?

MR. DENNERY

...will be in PART II of this resolution, as you have it worded. Since your Amendment No. 4 refers only to priority of PART I over any other action of the convention, if 98 contains ballot provisions, they would preempt what we've been arguing about all day, and it seems.....

MR. JONES

In the ballot provisions? Not insofar as PART I is concerned, I wouldn't.....

MR. DENNERY

No, but they're not in PART I; they're in PART II. That's my point.

MR. JONES

That's right; we're not preempting anything in PART II.

MR. DENNERY

Well, the point is that 98 has something in it about ballot provisions, Louis, and you say that what's in PART II will not preempt what's in the....

MR. JONES

I don't think PART II is affected. It's merely to define the rest of the resolution after you define it in PART I. It just makes the language easier. I could leave out PART I and PART II and refer to lines 6 through 17, for example.

MR. DENNERY

Well, I think that would necessarily imply, then, that the provisions of Resolution No. 98 take precedence over this resolution. That's what we're trying to avoid. It seems to me you're killing the effect of this resolution when you do that.

MR. JONES

Well, I'm sorry, but I really don't understand it that way.

MR. PUGH

Mr. Jones, I assumed that a resolution of a body of this type necessarily required a "to provide" paragraph at the beginning of it. Am I in error as to that?

MR. JONES

Well, that's what you have in this resolution. Correct?

MR. PUGH

I'm saying: Am I in error as to that assumption?

MR. JONES

That's what it says. I agree.

MR. PUGH

Well, do you think it's necessary to have a reference at the beginning of the resolution to what the resolution contains?

MR. JONES

I think it does, but I don't think this resolution should have the right to vitiate anything else this convention's done over the last year.

MR. PUGH

Well, as I understand, the "to provide" language merely keys you in to the specific language that occurs in the resolution.

MR. JONES

Yes. That's why I think you've covered everything adequately in provisions (A) through (D).

MR. PUGH

Well....O. K.

MR. JONES

I just think you've gone too far.

MR. FLORY

Mr. Jones, perhaps, along that same line--I'm a little bit confused too, as Mr. Dennery--on line 3 of the "FURTHER RESOLVED" provision, you used the word "provision or resolution heretofore adopted." Now, what are you talking about? Provision of what? Rules, regulations, proposals?

MR. JONES

I was trying not to upset the resolution, as much as they had it, and then take out the catchall provisions--the real basin of it. The word "provision" is not my choice of language. I was trying to leave it as closely as I could with taking out the words "or other action," and my feeling was that provision was not proposal; so I just left it in there. I didn't want to gut it too much. That was my main idea. I don't think provision means proposal.

MR. FLORY

Well, then, you'd be agreeable to withdrawing it and say "provision...."

Would you be agreeable to withdrawing it and resubmitting it with the language "provision of any resolution heretofore adopted"?

MR. JONES

Be happy to.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Jones, in addition to the statements contained by Mr. Flory, you'll notice that the first part--that is, from lines, you might say, 5 through 19--are onto the title of the resolution. Now, I notice in your amendment that you have deleted lines 18 and 19. Now, if you may, look on page 2 of the resolution. Lines 5, 6, and 7 relate to 18 and 19 on page 1; so, if you're going to delete the lines on page 1, shouldn't you also delete the lines on page 2? because I believe the Amendment No. 4 would take care of that proposition.

MR. JONES

I'm not sure what you have in mind, Senator, but I'll withdraw the resolution, Mr. Speaker, and get together with Mr. Flory, and I'll also ask Mr. Denny to help me out and see if we can't get....

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

MR. HENRY

Before you all draw it, Mr. Jones, if you'd consult with the Clark too, I'd appreciate it. We've got some problem with this we'd like to discuss with you.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Amendment

MR. HARDIN

Amendments sent up by Delegates Perez, Gravel, Stovall, and Carmouche:

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, line 16, delete Amendment No. 1 proposed by Delegate Jenkins and adopted by the convention on January 19, 1974, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"OFFICIAL BALLOT. The full text of the proposed constitution, including the alternative proposal on education, is available for inspection at your polling place. (Vote for one)

1. [ ] For the proposed Constitution of 1974 including the education proposal with one Board of Regents with appointed members and three management boards for governance of higher education.
2. [ ] For the proposed 1974 Constitution with one Board of Regents for higher education with appointed and elected members and no management boards.
3. [ ] Against the proposed 1974 Constitution."

In the box: "The votes cast in favor of propositions 1 and 2 shall be added together, and if such total constitutes the majority of the votes cast in the election on the constitution, the constitution shall be adopted. Whichever proposition receives the greater number of votes shall become the Constitution of the State of Louisiana."

Motion

MR. GRAVEL

After Delegate Perez has explained the amendment, I would move that debate be limited to thirty minutes--fifteen minutes on each side of the motion.

MR. HENRY

We have a motion in effect...or a rule that put limit on debate already in effect, as a result of the Jack motions an hour or two ago, to limit all debate on all amendments with reference to the ballots to five minutes for proponents and five minutes for opponents.

MR. GRAVEL

O. K. I withdraw my motion, then.

Motion

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Chairman, this amendment is so important that I suggest that we move now to go along with Mr. Gravel's motion to at least make it fifteen minutes for proponents and fifteen for opponents.

MR. HENRY

I personally think your point is well taken; but, anyway, is there any objection to that, Mr. Jack?

[Motion to limit debate on the Amendment to fifteen minutes for the proponents and fifteen minutes for the opponents adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. PEREZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I hoped that I could have everybody's attention because I know that we've been locked up on this particular problem all day long. I hope that this is a solution to the problem which will give each side in this education situation a fair and equal opportunity to have their particular proposal on the ballot. I might say, from the beginning, that it is difficult to try to show in regular type what a ballot should look like, and I know that there are those who feel that the way that propositions 1 and 2 would be proposed appear to be the tail wagging the dog. But, if you could visualize what a ballot would look like and if the words "for the proposed '74 Constitution," in each case, and "against the proposed '74 Consti-tion" were in larger print so that they would stand out and then the words "including," etc., and then (1) and (2) "with one Board of Regents", etc., were in smaller print, then you would be putting the proposition to the people, I think, in the proper context. That is, for the constitution with one approach: that is, with the so-called LSU approach; for the proposition with the alternate approach; and against the proposition. Now, as far as the legality of this matter is concerned, I have discussed this situation with some attorneys who are very well versed in the election laws of this state, and they find no problems with it because of the fact that you would be in a position to vote either for or against the constitution. You would be in a position to vote for or against any alternate proposal because, if you vote for the constitution, you'll be voting for number one; against it, number three. You'd be voting for the alternate if you voted for two, and against the alternate and against the constitution if you voted for three. The only problem that presents itself, which I do not think is a major problem, was if a person wanted to vote against the constitution, but for one of the particular alternates: that is, for one board against the five-board. But, in my judgment, if a person votes against the entire constitution, he's voting against any of them ever being adopted; so he has no particular legal right to be in a position to complain that he wants to vote against the constitution and for any particular alternative. I believe that this is the solution to the problem. The way the votes would be totaled would be that you would total the votes cast for (1) and (2). If that total exceeds (3)--that is, the against votes--then, the constitution would be adopted. Then, in determining which proposal would be adopted, with respect to education, the proposal (1) or proposal (2), whichever would receive the greatest number of votes, would be the new constitution. So, it would either be the one-board or the five-board, depending upon whether number one or number two got the majority of votes. It appears to me to be as good a solution as we can ever work out. I'd be glad to yield to questions.

Questions

MR. JENKINS

Two questions, Mr. Perez. First of all, what is wrong with what we now have?

MR. PEREZ

In my judgment, from what I can understand, Mr. Jenkins, if there are enough delegates who want to adopt what you have now, it's fine with me. I was only trying to seek some alternative solution which would put the education proposals in a position of an equal footing, so that people could vote for or against the constitution... so that for the constitution would either be proposal (1) or proposal (2). I think it's a better arrangement, and I think it's something which, more thoroughly, puts on the ballot the proposition. It's my understanding that we are still locked up, even with the amendment that's been adopted. Now, if the majority of delegates want to go with what was adopted under your amendment, it's fine with me.

MR. JENKINS

My second question is with regard to the legality of what you propose. You say in your box that the votes cast in favor of propositions one and two shall be added together. It appears to me that, if a person votes for number one, he's voting for a certain kind of constitution: namely, one with the four boards for higher education. If he votes for number two, he's voting for a different constitution: one with one board for higher education. If a court were to allow you to do that, wouldn't the court be allowing you, in effect, to add up apples and oranges?

MR. PEREZ

No, Mr. Jenkins, because I think it's the same thing as if you have "for the constitution" and a person votes for it, and then goes down and votes, beneath it, for an alternative. He has voted for the constitution, and then he has come down lower, below, and voted for an alternate which would change that which he has voted for above. So, I don't believe that there are apples and oranges. I don't think that, either way you do it, you're doing the same thing. That is, you're voting for the constitution--if you do it the way I understand your amendment is--for the constitution with the so-called LSU Board; then, you turn right around and vote for the one-board you, in essence, have voted out as an orange, or so to speak, and there's no way to tell how many people voted for the constitution, who stuck with the five-member board, and how many of them voted for it and went down and voted for the one-member. So, I don't see a bit of difference between, from a legal standpoint, from your proposal and what's here.

MR. JENKINS

Isn't the difference that, under the way the section stands now, people are voting for a constitution with the understanding that the board is to be decided in the alternative proposition. They're not voting....

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

MR. PEREZ

You're not voting for the constitution until you vote for the whole document, and part of that document is the Education Article. So, then, I'd see no difference between what you're talking about and what's here.

MR. JENKINS

Isn't it also true that, under the way the section stands now, those who vote against the constitution have a right to help determine what the educational setup will be if the constitution is adopted?

MR. PEREZ

No, that's in PART I and PART II.

No, that's the part I went into fairly carefully, and I do not agree with you on that. I don't believe that a person who votes against the whole constitution could then turn around and have a right to say that he wants to be able to determine how the Education Article is going to be determined, if he has voted against the whole constitution to begin with.

MR. JENKINS

But, that is how we've established it in the section as it stands now; isn't that correct?

MR. PEREZ

Yes.

MR. ROEMER

Mr. Perez, I just want to follow up on those questions by saying that I'm sure you realize your amendment substantially changes what we've done here today; is that not true?

MR. PEREZ

Well, Mr. Roemer, if there are sixty-seven votes to pass what you've already done here today, I'm perfectly happy. All I was trying to do was to find something where we could get enough of the delegates together that we could move forward. Hopefully, this was a solution.

MR. ROEMER

Well, of course, and you also realize that, under the rules of politeness and the rules that we work under in this body, that everybody has a right to put in as many amendments as they want to keep debating this issue over and over. It seems fairly obvious to me--perhaps, you might not know that--that, in looking at this, this is the most confusing of all the issues we've had before us and that you've got one, two, three here. A man can vote one time, two times, or three times, if he's not well informed here.

MR. PEREZ

No, sir, because of the way the machine would be set up, he could only vote for one or two, but he would not be able to vote for both. The machine would be set up so that he would only vote for number one, for number two, or three. You can only pull one time, and if you.... just a minute, please; you asked me.....

If you'll look up top, it says: vote for one.

Further Discussion

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this is one of the most important issues to come before this constitutional convention since our inception. Now, I'm not.... I haven't heard anything wrong with the Jenkins' amendment yet. The Jenkins' amendment seems to be a very palatable, simple, good amendment that most people can go for. Now, if you recall when Mr. Kean had his original amendment this morning, he had an Amendment 6 in there which locked out certain persons voting against the constitution from voting on the one.... on the alternates. This, as everyone will admit, has the same effect. It has a lock, it's tantamount to a lock-out provision. Therefore, if it is federally unconstitutional, because you, in essence, had locked out the right of the voter whose voting against the constitution to vote for one of the two alternates--if that is federally constitutional.... unconstitutional.... and several lawyers came up here and said it was today, and others say, well, it's a question of judgment--let me tell you what you're doing now, and this is a point I want to make. I would really appreciate it if you pay attention.

The way this is drafted, the entire constitution will fail if any of these lawyers happens to be right. The entire constitution will go down--not just the education article. This is a torpedo writing the entire constitution. What I'm saying is, if you isolate the education article, there will be some problem there, some constitutional problem. Then, very well, perhaps, only the educational article would be tainted with unconstitutionality. But, this way, to vote on the entire constitution would be tainted, and the entire document might fall. I'm not willing to gamble on the wonderful work we've done here, to impale it on the horns of this amendment. I suggest to you very adamantly, that you vote this amendment down. There hasn't been one thing said that something is wrong with the Jenkins amendment. He has some technical amendments that he can cure it with. We should not risk this entire constitution. Many, many lawyers have said it's a question of judgment. It's a constitutional question. But they're willing to gamble all our year's work on this and I think that's foolish. I suggest to you, read this, think about it, and vote it down.

Questions

MR. ROEMER

Stanwood, don't you think that the beauty of the Jenkins' amendment was in that it did separate the question of the alternative from the full body of the constitution, and allowed the person the right, regardless of how he voted on one issue, to have the right to vote on another. Isn't that true? This negates that completely. Yes, sir. Didn't that Jenkins' amendment pass 88 to 20 something?

MR. DUVAL

It sure did.

MR. CHAMPAGNE

Mr. Duval, I don't know anything about it, but one attorney told me that since we had adopted the severability clause, that in the event some judge did decide this unconstitutional, the only thing we'd lose would be the education article.

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Champagne, the point I make is that may well be true when you vote on the education alternate separate. But, when you vote on the entire constitution by one vote, it may well, perhaps, negate your vote on the entire constitution, and the severability clause may not apply. This is the problem I had with this amendment.

MR. RAYBURN

Stan, I kind of like this in a way. I can see where I think it will help the document as a whole. But as a citizen, and I'm asking you this as an attorney, I'm of the opinion that an alternate is something to give you a choice. Am I correct in your legal opinion?

MR. DUVAL

That's my understanding. Yes, sir.

MR. RAYBURN

If I say, well, I don't like either board. I think we should have it a little different. I like the rest of the document. But, under this language, I've got to vote for one or the two alternates, or vote against the whole outfit. Am I correct?

MR. DUVAL

Mr.... Senator Rayburn, that's a very good point. Yes, sir.

MR. RAYBURN

But, I really like it, and I think it will help pass the document, but I'm wondering whether we are depriving the people of a choice or not. Now, that's the only thing that's got me disturbed.

MR. DUVAL

That's the same concern I have. I like it myself, but I like the constitution better.

Further Discussion

MR. BOLLINGER

I think Mr. Duval brought out some good technical and legal points why we should reject this amendment. But, I think we ought to look at the practical aspects. I hear a lot of people hollering out that they think that this amendment would help pass the constitution because people have a chance to vote for it twice. I disagree with that, strongly, and I'll tell you why. Our main motive here, I think, is to pass this constitution. But we're putting first and foremost in our minds an alternative.

Traditionally, the people of Louisiana have rejected...rejected when going to vote on propositions they do not understand. Many, many individuals in this state are going to go into that voting booth with the idea of voting for or against the constitution. They're not concerned about the educational board. They're going to get to the ballot and find out they have to make a choice for one type of board, for another type of board, very possibly not understanding what's the difference. Consequently, they're going to vote against the constitution—not for it. You're confusing them with this amendment. By establishing a ballot with two fors, and two different boards in each for, you confuse the electors and force many of them to vote against the constitution. Practically speaking, this is a bad amendment. It does not enhance the passage of this constitution. It deters from it. I move, please, please, I beg of you, vote down this amendment. At least with the Jenkins' amendment, they can vote for or against a clear-cut question. No possible way they can interpret the boards being involved in the main question. They can either vote for or against, or not vote at all on the alternatives. It can stand on its own merits. But, it will not jeopardize the passage of the entire document.

I yield to any questions.

Questions

MR. FULCO

Mr. Bollinger, in comparing the two, Mr. Jenkins' and Mr. Perez's amendments, we are trying to get something that is simpler, very simple for the people to vote on, aren't we?

MR. BOLLINGER

That is correct.

MR. FULCO

That is the primary concern.

Now, in Mr. Perez's amendment, we have three paragraphs; one, two, and three. Wouldn't it be very easy for you to tell your constituents if you wanted, or he or she wanted to vote like you wanted them to vote, to tell them to go in and vote for No. 1, and that would simplify it because it's altogether? On the other hand, wouldn't it be confusing and frustrating for you to ...for that same person to vote on Mr. Jenkins' amendment where you had to look up at the top and see what it said? Then, go down below on the bottom of the line, where it says alternative proposition and think, as a result of that, that you had to vote for either one or the other.

MR. BOLLINGER

Frank, I think some of both.

I think simplicity is the least of our worries here. I think first, we have to get something that's legal, that's going to allow the constitution, if ratified, to be put into effect, and the alternate, if ratified, or either alternate, to be placed into the document. First and foremost, legal.

Second, I think we have to establish something that's going to be fair. That when the voters see it, they understand it and realize what they're voting on—not try to deceive them in any way. I think that's our second objective.

Possibly third, make it simple.

MR. FULCO

But, Bollinger, in the Perez amendment, you've got everything in one paragraph.

MR. BOLLINGER

I think...

MR. FULCO

The same thing the Jenkins' amendment calls for in two separate paragraphs.

MR. BOLLINGER

Not at all. It's not at all the same thing that the Jenkins amendment calls for. Mr. Duval, I think, quite eloquently expressed there's a very, very grave question of the legality of the Perez amendment.

Further Discussion

MR. ARNETTE

Ladies and gentlemen, I agree that Mr. Perez's amendment is fair. The only thing I have is like the previous speakers. I don't think—or, I think it raises some very serious constitutional questions, mainly, can you add apples and oranges; can you add a vote for one kind of constitution to a vote for another kind of a constitution? You have two totally different constitutions there in one and two. I don't think you can add them both together to overcome the "no" vote. This is what my objection is. Unless one of the first two would get a majority, there would be a constitutional question as to whether it's validly adopted. I don't think we need to risk our work for over a year on this document, on this kind of constitutional question. I hope you realize the problem that I'm putting before you. You can't add one kind of a vote to another kind of a vote against a vote against both.

Questions

MR. BURSON

Mr. Arnette, I would love to think that this solved all our problems. But, the thing that bothers me the most is, it looks to me like if we're talking about being fair, that we've got to be fair to those who are against the constitution as well as those that are for. Aren't they, in effect, running two candidates against one and letting the two candidates add their votes up?

MR. ARNETTE

That's exactly right, Mr. Burson. You're running two entirely different things and allowing them to add their votes up. That's why I think it raises a very, very serious question.

Now, I have an amendment prepared that would be relatively like Mr. Perez's...would be just as fair. But, would allow a voter to vote against both constitutions if he so wished. If either would pass, it would be the constitution. To me, it presents no constitutional problems, it would be fair to both sides. I'll present it as soon as it is prepared and run off. But, this particular amendment, I think, is very, very, very dangerous. I would hate to risk an entire year's work on this kind of election.

MR. LANIER

Greg, this convention voted to place an alternate proposal on the ballot. Is that not correct?

MR. ARNETTE

That is correct.

MR. LANIER

Now, that, then, raises the legal issue of do all voters in this state have a right to vote on that alternate proposal, doesn't it?

MR. ARNETTE

That is true. This is another problem with Mr. Perez's amendment is that it is a de facto lock-out of people who want to vote against both. Or, you're not giving them a choice.

MR. LANIER

Well, if you wish to have the right to vote on the alternate the way this ballot is arranged, then you would have to vote for the new constitution even though you may be opposed to it. Is that correct?

MR. ARNETTE

That is correct. That's the problem I was trying to point out. I might not have done it very well. But, this is the big problem. You're not giving the person who votes against the constitution a choice on the alternate at all. It's not a lock-out done by the machine, but it is, in effect, a lock-out just the same. You're disenfranchising those persons from voting on the alternate. This is the problem that I see with Mr. Perez's amendment, besides the fact that you're adding two different votes to beat one.

MR. FAYARD

Greg, taking the other side of the coin, suppose you got a guy that goes into the voting booth, a typical voter, says I've never been to LSU. I've never been to Southern. I've never been to USL. But, I want to vote for this constitution. But, I don't know anything about education. What are you forcing that guy to do?

MR. ARNETTE

Well, you're forcing him to make a choice as to which alternate he wants.

MR. FAYARD

Do you think that's fair under this amendment?

Further Discussion

MR. STOVALL

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates. Would you look right this way for just a moment, please. I have in my hand here Act II of

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

1972, relating to the constitutional convention. I want to read to you from page 10. It says: "The convention may submit to the electors of the state the proposal of acceptance or rejection of the constitution, or any alternative proposals in such form and manner as it may determine, and may direct the proper election officials to take the necessary steps to effectuate the determination of the convention, etc. It seems to me that this provision that I have just read to you negates the statements that Mr. Aroette and Mr. Duval, and others have made concerning the constitutionality of what we seek to do. Now, from my point of view, looking at it not so much from the legal point of view as from what of how it will be received by the people, it seems that this form of presentation is very simple; it's fair; it's reasonable.

In answer to Mr. Fayard's question, it will encourage the people of the state to become aware of what's in the constitution. Also, it will encourage different interested groups to inform and educate their constituents so that they will go to the polls and vote for the constitution; that is, to vote either for Proposition 1, or Proposition 2. I think this will encourage a healthy discussion throughout all the state of the issues involved in the educational proposal, as well as other issues related thereto. It presents a very definite choice. It's a simple presentation. It's clear. I encourage your favorable support of this in order that we might get on with completing other business.

Thank you.

Questions

MR. O'NEILL

Reverend Stovall, would you address yourself to the question of what's wrong with what we have adopted right at the moment?

MR. STOVALL

Mr. O'Neill, I think this is the determination each delegate will make. We came to an impasse a few moments ago. We had a recess. We reached what we thought was a consensus in this kind of presentation at this point.

MR. O'NEILL

Do you think the problem with what we have right now is that it doesn't give an unfair advantage to either side? You think that might be the problem with it?

MR. STOVALL

I don't think this gives any points to either side. I think it's reasonable and fair. I'm not saying that it's only...the only approach, Mr. O'Neill. But, this is the one that we are concerned with at the present time.

MR. HENRY

Will you yield to a question from Mr. Willis...Mr. De Blieux?

MR. DE BLIEUX

Reverend Stovall, can you visualize that there might be some voters that might be opposed to the constitution--that if it is adopted they would have a definite choice as to which alternate they'd want to go into the constitution?

MR. STOVALL

Mr. De Blieux, I think we realize that we can't make this completely simple.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Yes. Don't you think there's a possibility that we might have some voters in that category?

MR. STOVALL

That's a possibility.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Now, how is he going to express his opinion under your... under this proposal?

MR. STOVALL

I think that on the basis of what we've done, we've decided on an alternative provision of education. I think it's our business to educate and inform the people so that they will know how to vote.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Now, if you deny him of his right and privilege, don't you think you might invalidate the whole election?

MR. STOVALL

No, I don't think we are denying anyone the right to vote.

We've got two ways here whereby they could vote for the constitution.

MR. HENRY

Mr. Jack, are you speaking for it or against it?
Mr. Jack. Are you a proponent of the amendment?
Well, it depends...for the opponents, the time is out.
For the proponents.

MR. JACK

I'm for the...
I can speak on either side.

MR. HENRY

Well, I've heard that you talk...

There are a lot of people that have told me that you talked out of both sides of your mouth. Is that what you're saying, Mr. Jack?

Further Discussion

MR. JACK

Each side....
We have been told the technicalities, and I rise in favor of this amendment. Now, of course, if I was on the other side, I would say this is the most ridiculous, misleading I've ever seen.

MR. HENRY

Wait just a minute, now.

All right, Mr. Jack, you've exceeded...Mr. Jack, now, I'm serious. We don't have time for a lot of hot polloi this late. Now...all right, Mr....I'll ask the Sergeant-at-Arms... to give the man...get out the hook...or get out the net, either one.

Further Discussion

MR. PUGH

Mr. Chairman, this is the one I mentioned in my opening conversation this morning at which time I expressed my opinion. Therefore, I will not speak on it.

Further Discussion

MR. GRAVEL

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, in view of the time...short period of time for the proponents, I'm not going to answer any questions. I want to make a very brief statement that I think is very important to all of us.

I fully support this proposal. I hope we adopt it. Almost every person in this Chamber who is a lawyer can have some concerns about the constitutionality of anything that we do with regard to the construction of the proposed ballot, and the method of submission. I think that the lawyers in this convention, in good faith, can differ on the constitutional questions that might arise. But, we're not here to decide constitutional questions that are not susceptible of definitive conclusion today. What this proposal will do is clearly, succinctly, and in response to the provisions of Act II, lay before the voter the opportunity to intelligently cast his ballot. That's all that the courts of this state have ever required with respect to the election procedures, and that is that there be a clear opportunity for the electorate to express its will. I suggest to you, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, that above all others, this proposal will accomplish that purpose.

Thank you very much.

Further Discussion

MR. REEVES

Well, I approach this mike with people sitting around me saying, "Get him, get him. He's one of them dumb boys." Well, that's right. I'm not an attorney. But, at the same time, I do come before you as one of these simple people that's going to have to vote on this constitution, realizing that there are some problems... possible problems, in reference to the court system. Now, as I've heard many times over from a number of you attorneys, we can take either side and probably win anyway in any battle, in any particular part of this constitution that we've gone over.

First of all, I'd like to say that you are...I would like to address myself to a few particular provisions that were brought up. One of these has been said that you're going down one, two, and three, and that these individuals would not have the opportunity to, or they would be disenfranchised--that some people would be disenfranchised. However, I feel otherwise, that they would not for the simple reason that on proposition three when you would vote against the proposed 1974 Constitution, you are speaking out. You are saying something. You are saying you don't like the 1974 Constitution, and you are in favor of the 1921 Constitution. At the same time, we also have heard that there are some people in this state that don't have any recollection or any knowledge at all of the educational system throughout this state, and that they are not interested in it. Well, first of all, there may be some individuals...but I feel very strongly that the State of Louisiana, or the citizenry thereof, are very interested in the educational system. If they are not, they definitely should be. At the same time, I feel very strongly that you do have... that any individual would have particular references to portions thereof, being at least elected versus appointed members of the Board of Regents. Now, again, I'm not a constitutional attorney and do not intend to ever be because I probably couldn't pass the bar exam, as some people have said, because I'm too dumb. I'm from up in the north Louisiana country woods. But, I'll tell you what. This is a good, succinct, equalized ability of individuals to express their opinions for or against the constitution of the State of Louisiana as we have proposed it--either of two alternative bases. I think it's the simplest way you could have done it. I think Mr. Perez--and I'd like to say, "Thank you, Chalin," because you have done us a favor, I hope--because we have been deep in mire today. Mr. Perez and I have differed many times over, but today, we do agree on this. I hope that you will at least approve this particular thing and we'll get off dead center.

Questions

MR. JUNEAU
Terry, this is not a legal question. As you said, you wanted a simple question.
We do have, in this country, do we not, if nothing else, we do have precedent from other states within the past ten years for a ballot such as proposed by the Jenkins' amendment? Isn't that correct? I'm referring to...to Montana.

MR. REEVES
To Montana.

MR. JUNEAU
Do you know of any state anywhere, any time, any place, that has a ballot similar to that that you advocate that's before you now?

MR. REEVES
To the best of my knowledge, no. But, that doesn't necessarily mean that it couldn't be had. I...

MR. JUNEAU
Don't you think from a layman's standpoint that that makes sense? That's kind of a safe thing to do?

MR. REEVES
I guess we could have had that opinion when we created this country because there was no democracy anywhere in 1776 when we created this nation.

MR. JUNEAU
All right. Second question, Terry. Do you think that the ballot as stated is an alternate in the Jenkins' amendment, is a fair statement of the alternate to both sides of this issue?

MR. REEVES
I think there's a problem in getting it passed. I do feel that there are some technical problems within the Jenkins' amendment.

MR. JUNEAU
I said is it fairly stated to both sides? The language.

MR. REEVES
I think, probably, it is fairly stated to both sides.

Further Discussion

MR. TOBIAS
Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise in support of this particular amendment. I, as an attorney, could argue either side of the case. But, I would suggest to you this: that if we go with this compromise, or if we go with this amendment, it is still at some point, possible, after further study, for the governor to call a special session of the legislature, bring us back in, extend our time. The legislature could also provide procedures for ratification. It's possible.

Questions

MR. STAGG
Max, are you willing to have worked as hard as you have worked from January 5 of last year, to this hour of this day, and rest all of that work on the legal sufficiency of the ballot provision in the Flory...I mean in the Perez amendment?

MR. TOBIAS
I personally believe that it is valid, and that it is a proper procedure.

MR. STAGG
What if you are wrong? Do you think the people are going to look on us as anything other than a pack of thieves if we have to ask the legislature to get a special session to pass the law to bring us back into office in order to cure what we might do in a hasty moment on this afternoon of all days?

MR. TOBIAS
Mr. Stagg, anybody can make a mistake. That's why they put rubber mats around spittoons.

MRS. ZERVIGON
Max, you referred to this as a compromise. It has, in common with the Kean amendment defeated this morning, the lock-out provision in that you cannot vote for or against an education proposal if you oppose the constitution. Isn't that correct?

MR. TOBIAS
No. You can vote against the education proposal by voting for Paragraph 3...No. 3.

MRS. ZERVIGON
I'm saying if you are opposed to the constitution as a whole, and, therefore, vote "no," you may not choose between the two education proposals which, as a citizen of the state you may have to live under, if the constitution passes as the objection. Isn't that correct? It has that in common with the Kean amendment.

MR. TOBIAS
In my opinion, and I must be honest, that is a possibility.

MRS. ZERVIGON
In addition to that, it also has in common with the Kean amendment, a presumption in favor of CP-7 in that anyone who has not...

Closing

MR. PEREZ
Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, first, let me apologize to you from the standpoint that I did not intend to take up so much time. I thought that we had come to what, I thought, was a compromise, or something which would satisfy most of both sides. But, I do have to call this to your attention because of the fact that there have been those lawyers who have gotten up and have questioned the legality of the proposal as I have submitted.

On the other hand, let me call to your attention to the facts that the...to the fact that the Jenkins' proposal, in my judgment, has very serious possibilities of a violation of the act under which we are operating because it says that you vote for or against adoption of the constitution and on the question or questions of adoption of such alternative provisions as may be proposed by the convention. In the Jenkins' amendment, you vote only for and not against, so that if we're going to raise questions of legality, the first thing we have to do is get past the legality of the act itself before we worry about constitutional problems. I've discussed this with lawyers, but...and I don't want to call names because of the fact that they are in official positions and do not want to be repeated as such. But, their interpretation was that you must--- that you must provide a vote for or against each proposition. In the Jenkins' proposal, you are providing only with regard to the education alternative votes for and not against. So, what I'm saying to you is that I'm satisfied from a legal standpoint. After discussing this with people whom I believe to be the most qualified in the state on this subject matter, that that which comes closest to completely complying with the act under which we're operating and being constitutional, is that which I have proposed. I don't believe that we're going to settle this matter here. It may be that somebody may have to settle it before the courts.

But, let me call to your attention, as far as the law under which we are operating is concerned, it says that "the convention may submit to the electors of the state the proposal of acceptance or rejection of the constitution, or any alternative proposals in such form and manner as it may determine." The only limitation on that is in the paragraph above which requires votes for and against.

So, I submit to you again that this is the simplest of the proposals. That it completely complies with the act under which we are operating. It gives the people a good, clear alternative --- a good clear approach to it. I don't want to take up any more of your time. I don't think it'll do any good to answer any questions.

So, I therefore submit to you the amendment and hope that you'll vote for it.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted: 64-59. Record vote ordered on the motion to table reconsideration. Motion to reconsider tabled: 63-59. Motion for the Previous Question on the Resolution rejected: 47-73.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Jones and Pugh send up an amendment that reads as follows:

Amendment No. 1. On page 1, line 18, after the word "over" delete the word "other" and insert in lieu thereof: "inconsistent"

Amendment No. 2. On page 5, line 32, after the word "convention" delete the remainder of the line and delete line 33 in its entirety and insert in lieu thereof the following: ", but only insofar as the same may be in conflict with the particular provisions of this resolution."

Vice Chairman Casey in the Chair

Explanation

MR. JONES

We have eliminated the other amendments in the original Jones amendment. I've gotten together with Mr. Pugh and we have taken into consideration what Mr. Denney said and also, Senator De Blieux. It's a technical nature but it limits these particular phrases to this alternative proposal without giving the resolution broad overall effect. I urge your adoption.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Burson, Kean, Faysrd, and others send up amendments.

Amendment No. 1. On page 2, delete lines 16 through 35, both inclusive, in their entirety and on page 3, delete lines 1 and 2 in their entirety, including all amendments adopted thereto and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Official ballot. The full text of the proposed constitution, the alternate proposition, is available for inspection at your polling place. If the proposed constitution fails to receive a majority of the votes cast, alternate issues also fail. Please vote on both issues (1) and (2).

(1) Vote for one: For the proposed 1974 Constitution....

The proposed constitution includes one Board of Regents with all appointed members and three management boards for governance of higher education. If the following alternative is adopted by a vote which is at least a majority of those voting in favor of the constitution, it shall replace the Education Article on the proposed constitution.

(2) The alternative is: One Board of Regents for higher education of elected and appointed members and no management boards. For or against.

Explanation

MR. BURSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I ask your close attention because there is a difference from this amendment and those which Mr. Drew and myself have previously offered although the form is very similar. The form is similar and almost exactly the same in the top part, that is, the vote on the constitution. I think there is no question that insofar as the ballot extends to the vote on the constitution, you get away from any legal problems whatsoever. The alternative is set out in a simple statement. You vote for it or against it. Now, if you will look at the box, the box tells you that the proposed constitution includes one Board of Regents with all appointed members and three management boards for governance of higher education. Then, in the next sentence, it tells you that if the following....

This second sentence is the key because it says that "If the following alternative is adopted by a vote which is at least a majority of those voting in favor of the constitution, it shall replace the Education Article in the proposed constitution." Now, follow me, if you will, and I'll explain why I feel that this splits the difference between those that say you ought to have a majority of the total vote and those that say you only need a majority of those voting on the alternate which then leads to the objection. Well, let's suppose you have only a small number of people voting on the alternate and there be deciding the Education Article in the constitution because what this says is, that by whatever vote if the alternate receives more for votes than it receives against, it is not necessarily at that point accepted. Let me give you a hypothetical example by which you will understand what I am talking about. Let's take a hundred thousand votes cast on the proposed constitution, sixty thousand vote for it, forty thousand vote against it. Let's take a vote on the alternative which is thirty-five thousand votes for the alternate and twenty-five thousand votes against the alternate. At that point, the alternate would become part of the constitution because not only has it received more votes for it than against it, but it has received a clear majority of the sixty thousand votes cast in favor of the constitution. Now, I submit to you before anybody asks the question that I doubt very seriously if you will find a ballot like this that's ever been proposed in any state. It is proposed purely and simply as the last-ditch attempt to split the difference on what has been, in my view as I said at the outset this morning, the two basic conflicting philosophies on the alternative that we have had at work here today. It does meet the objection raised by Mr. Kean earlier in the day that our general election law would seem to require a vote for or against any proposition that we offer; I think it comes very close. If you look at it in this light, it is very, very close indeed to what Mr. Drew offered except Mr. Drew offered a vote on the alternative which would be determined simply by who got the most votes for or against on the alternative, whereas, this would add an additional factor into the computation. I'll answer any questions. I would also point out that this is susceptible as the earlier ones today to amendment to change the words in the box if you want to. But, we keep those two propositions separate and we do not endanger a defeat of the whole constitution or having the whole constitution declared illegal because of the form of our ballot.

Questions

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Burson, you know out in this state there are a lot of people that are more interested in a Board of Elementary and Secondary Education than there is interested in boards of higher education, that is, especially true over in my part of the state, I think, you will find it other places equally interested in the Board of Elementary and Secondary Education. You have not mentioned in your box here a Board of Elementary and Secondary Education. Would you object to including in that, for instance, on the second line after "members" strike out the "and" and put in place a comma ", three management boards for governance of higher education" and change the period "." to "and a Board of Elementary and Secondary Education." Would you care to include those in your box there?

MR. BURSON

Mr. Hernandez, of course, the three management boards are in the constitution; this is the alternative. I would have no objection to adding "and board for elementary and secondary education" to the language of the alternative because that....

MR. HERNANDEZ

No, it says the proposed constitution includes, at the present time, a Board of Regents and three management boards.

MR. BURSON

Oh, I see, you mean add that in the box. No, that's fine.

MR. HERNANDEZ

I think you would improve an already good proposal here if you could include in that "and a Board of Elementary and Secondary Education." Out in the rural sections they are especially interested in this Board of Elementary and Secondary Education.

MR. BURSON

I would have no problems at all with such an amendment.

MR. HERNANDEZ

Thank you very much, sir.
Would you include that or should we offer an amendment?

MR. BURSON

Well, I'm afraid if we get back and forth up here we may get confused. I would just certainly think that such an amendment would be entirely in order. I would like to try and get the form passed as it is to split those issues of the constitution in the alternative because I think it's essential to do it. I'm not saying that this completely eliminates, I believe it was Mr. Gravel that pointed out that probably nothing we can do will completely eliminate legal questions because I went up to the Law Library up on the twenty-fourth floor last night and looked and West has got a fine key number that leads you into where the cases should be on this topic and there aren't any cases. But, the point is, it seems to me that we need to separate these two issues so in this battle over education we don't sink the whole ship in case something is found to miss in what we do. I would emphasize again the formula for deciding whether the alternative goes into the constitution splits the middle between those that say you ought to have a majority of all of it and those that say that you ought to have just a majority voting on the alternative.

MR. ANZALONE

Jack, if your amendment is successfully adopted, would you have any objection to what may amount to a technical amendment rather than have your blocks on the left for Issue No. 1 and on the right for Issue No. 2 to drop down below your alternative proposal and put your blocks on the left and say one would be for the alternative and the other one would be against the alternative?

MR. BURSON

Absolutely not, that would be a more rational setup.

MR. CONROY

Mr. Burson, in the box where you say the alternate has to be approved by at least a majority of those voting in favor of the constitution. Now, you didn't intent to restrict the vote on the alternate to those who voted in favor of the constitution, did you?

MR. BURSON

No, sir, Mr. Conroy. We are simply using that as a gauge for determining who is successful, which is the theory advanced earlier this morning by Mr. Kean in his original proposition which would have prevented those voting against the constitution from voting on the alternative. This doesn't prevent them from voting on it, but it relates the results of the alternate to the total number of votes cast for the constitution.

MR. CONROY

Let me make sure I understand it. A person could vote for either one or the other proposal....

MR. BURSON

Absolutely. You could go in the voting booth and vote on Proposition No. 1; you could vote on Proposition No. 2; you could vote on both; that's up to you.

MR. CONROY

And, each one would pass according to whether they received more "for" votes or "against" votes on that particular proposition except that in the case of the alternative, it would have a certain minimum....

MR. BURSON

It must also receive at least half of the favorable votes cast for the constitution.

Further Discussion

MR. ABRAHAM

Ladies and gentlemen, I've sat here all day long and listened to all this talk that's been going on. I've been amazed. I've been dismayed at the number of people that have got up before this microphone and how we've beat this dog from one end of this chamber to the other, how we've talked ourselves in circles. I've been dismayed to hear attorneys sit up here and say, "I can argue either side of it." If the legality of anything that we do here is that shaky whether he can argue either side of it and thinks he can win, then I think we ought to get off of that particular issue. But, I am very disheartened at the way we are going about this on this last day where we've got a good constitution and we're going to hang it all on this one Education Article because some of us just don't want to give anywhere; some of us don't want to give an inch. Now, I have already made up my mind I'm going to go out, sell this constitution, even though there may be some things in here that I don't like. I'm going to argue for the things that I don't like as well as the things I do like because I think we do have a good document. But, we've argued and you've argued ballots and we've given examples. I have here a sample ballot from Montana and it's set up for the proposed constitution against the proposed constitution and a block that says, "The proposed constitution will include a bicameral legislature unless a majority of those voting in this election vote for a unicameral legislature." and then it says vote for one and down before there are two places to vote--for an unicameral legislature or for a bicameral legislature. Then, on the same ballot there is the proposition for allowing the people of the legislature to authorize gambling, against allowing people of the legislature to authorize gambling. So, you've got a proposition with "for" for two different propositions; you've also got another one that's "for and against." The Illinois ballot does the same thing.

Point of Information

MR. ANZALONE

Mr. Chairman, what is going to happen to this resolution after it's finally adopted?

MR. CASEY

Mr. Anzalone, now I don't think that was appropriate.....

MR. ANZALONE

No, sir, the reason I'm asking you, Mr. Chairman, is because it's after six; we have a midnight deadline, and I would like to know how much work is going to be necessary to get done before we can actually, finally adjourn?

MR. CASEY

The Clerk just said ten minutes ago, three hours of work between the time it's adopted and the time that we can adjourn, Mr. Anzalone. The Clerk can correct me if he wishes.

Mr. Abraham, you have two minutes left for all proponents.

Further Discussion

MR. ABRAHAM

All right. The Illinois ballot is set up the same way where you've got to vote for or against the constitution. Then, there are the alternatives there where you vote either for one or the other; it's an "or" proposition on the other two. Then, on the same ballot, there is a "yes" and "no" proposition. The point I'm trying to make is that in both cases the people were given a chance to vote for or against the constitution itself, notwithstanding the alternates. Then, they were given a chance to vote for either one alternate, or the other, or to vote for or against the alternate. So, I tell you it matters not what this language at the bottom says whether it's for or against, for, for or how anyway you want to set it up. But, it does matter that the people are given a chance to vote either for or against the constitution. As we have it set up now, we are not giving the people a chance to vote for or against the constitution as we have adopted it. The Perez amendment disallows this. So, I think we need to get back to the type of language that we have here with the Burson amendment and give the people a chance to vote for or against the constitution. Then, we can debate the issue or the people can decide the issue of just what type of alternative educational setup they may want to have. Any way you cut it, we're not telling the people the full story on the two Educational Articles. There are many differences in these two educational proposals, but the one thing that they are going to look at is the number of boards. They are not going to be worried about the duties of the superintendent of education. They are not going to be worried about the geographic distribution of the members, or the difference in the way of selecting the Board of Regents. But, they are going to be looking at whether you have the three management boards or not; I think this is going to be the whole issue. So, I think as we have it set up here, it's far better than what we have in the Perez amendment. I would have preferred the Jenkins amendment, but.....

MR. CASEY

You have exceeded your time, Mr. Abraham; I'm sorry, sir.

MR. ABRAHAM

I urge the adoption of the amendment.

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment adopted: 102-17. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Chairman Henry in the Chair

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Pugh sends up amendment that reads as follows:
On page 4, line 17--it's on your desk--immediately after the figures and punctuation "591," and before "and 593" insert "671 (C)"

Explanation

MR. PUGH

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this is an amendment I proposed earlier when the question arose on the "for" and "against." In my opinion, there's no provision in Act 2 for a "for" and "against" vote as was just passed. By adopting this amendment we make specific reference to the statutory provisions which would allow such a vote. I think it's absolutely essential that it now be in the resolution.

[Amendment adopted without objection.]

Motion

MR. SHANNON

Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a motion that this convention limit itself to a consideration of any further amendments after this next amendment coming up.

MR. HENRY

You move that we don't consider any other amendments? Is that....

MR. SHANNON

We do not consider any other amendments.

MR. HENRY

On this proposal?

MR. SHANNON

On this resolution.

Point of Information

MR. PEREZ

Point of information. Will this resolution have to go to Style and Drafting? If it does, we'll have a problem.

MR. HENRY

Yes, sir. Are you...you're not referring to Style and Drafting amendment.....Mr. Shannon.

MR. SHANNON

No, sir....

MR. HENRY

All right.

MR. SHANNON

Not to Style and Drafting; no.

Point of Information

MR. NEWTON

Suppose this resolution fails to pass? Wouldn't it be.... what will we have to do, suspend the rules again before we would be able to offer an amendment?

MR. HENRY

Well, you know, you can undo what you do. I think what he was trying to do was just speed along the process. Let's just see what happens with the Hernandez amendment, Mr. Shannon, if you will.
Read the Hernandez amendment.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

Maybe I can explain it better than reading all of the directions to you. Take out the text of the language contained in the box there "for the alternative" and insert in lieu thereof: "The proposed constitution includes one Board of Regents with all appointed members, three management boards for governance of higher education, and a Board of Elementary and Secondary Education. If the following alternative is adopted by a vote which is at least a majority of those in favor of the constitution, it shall replace the Education Article in the proposed constitution." It just adds "in a Board of Elementary and Secondary Education."

Point of Information

MR. SUTHERLAND

Isn't the elementary and state board of elementary education in both the original proposal and in the alternative proposal?

MR. HENRY

It's my appreciation that it is, sir.

MR. SUTHERLAND

Then, why does that have to appear on this....

MR. HENRY

Well, the gentleman can offer it in a form of an amendment; it's up to the delegates to determine, Mr. Sutherland.
Proceed, Mr. Hernandez, and explain it.

Explanation

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, the only purpose of this is to add in there that the proposed constitution also includes a "Board of Elementary and Secondary Education," that's all it does. There is no need of my taking up more of your time, that's all there is to it. The reason I do this, ladies and gentlemen, is because there are so many people--now, especially in the rural sections of this state--that are more interested in a Board of Elementary and Secondary Education than they are in any of the other boards. This will just let them know there is a Board of Elementary and Secondary Education there. Thank you very much.

Questions

MR. JUNEAU

Mr. Hernandez, I'm at a complete loss to understand this. As I appreciate it, the reason for putting things on the ballot is for simplification; isn't that right, the language you want to put in there?

MR. HERNANDEZ

Yes, sir.

MR. JUNEAU

How come, Mr. Hernandez, that you want to put in the proposed constitution that you have one board for the Board of Regents, then one for the lower board? Then, when you get down to the alternate, you're going to indicate to the people that we're just going to have a Board for Regents and make no indication that there's going to be a lower board. Wouldn't that be indicating to the people that they won't have a lower board if they vote for the alternate?

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Juneau, I have no objection to your putting one in down there. I thought about this, you mentioned all the other boards here. If you're going to mention all the others, why not say a Board of Elementary and Secondary Education? But, I have no objection to your putting in this same phrase down there.

MR. JUNEAU

I didn't draft the amendments. You did. I wonder why you didn't put it in like that?

MR. HERNANDEZ

Well, I didn't even think about that. I was just trying to get one in this box here.

MRS. CORNE

Mr. Hernandez, I have just about the same kind of question that Mr. Juneau had; in fact, he did ask my question. I will go further and ask you this: Do you know that there is a prohibition now against any other amendment coming after yours? Therefore, I don't believe it would be possible to amend your amendment in order to include elementary and secondary education in the alternative. Did you know that I would, therefore, have to vote against your amendment and ask the people to vote against it because it's definitely not fair?

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mrs. Corne, I had no idea that you couldn't offer another amendment when I placed this in there. It just went in there in a hurry to try to get this ready, to make it as short as possible, to get this so that they'd know the other boards are listed--Board of Regents, all appointed members; three management boards of governance of higher education; and a Board of Elementary and Secondary Education--because the people in my area were definitely interested in that. I have no knowledge that there would be such a motion offered to preclude any other amendments.

MRS. CORNE

And, of course, Mr. Hernandez, I know you to be a very fair man and one that would be concerned with all of the people, not only the people in your district. Do you know that the people in my district are also very much interested in the boards, say, elementary and secondary education?

MR. HERNANDEZ

No, ma'am, I didn't know how your people felt, I just....

MR. WEISS

Delegate Hernandez, in an attempt to straighten out this inequity, would you withdraw your amendment and simply add to it the same phrase at the end of the alternate? Then, we can vote on it one way or the other. I think that's what you had intended to include, the expression "a Board of Secondary and Elementary Education" in both the box and in the alternate. Would you withdraw and do that and then let us vote on it and get it to?

MR. HERNANDEZ

I would be delighted to do that, if that's acceptable to the Chairman, to withdraw it temporarily to add on the alternate the same phrase exactly.

MR. STINSON

If he withdraws it, he can't reintroduce it, can he?

MR. HENRY

Well, Mr. Shannon withdrew his motion there, sir. You withdraw your amendment, Mr. Hernandez?

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Chairman, if it's agreeable with you, I will be happy to withdraw this for the purpose of adding this same expression in the alternative proposal.

[Amendment withdrawn.]

Point of Information

MR. THOMPSON

Did they withdraw that after this more could be amended?

MR. HENRY

Yes, sir.

MR. THOMPSON

Well, would it be in order that after this is straightened out to keep us from being here until midnight trying to rush something through at the last minute to make such a motion then?

MR. HENRY

Mr. Thompson, we may take about a five minute recess to kind of find out where we are here in a minute because every time we look around somebody's coming up with some different concept on how we are going to put this confounded thing on the ballot. I would ask the delegates, I would ask you for goodness sake, if you are interested in the thirteen months we put in to quit drawing these amendments without rhyme or reason unless you are certain that you know what you're talking about. I know we are working under a difficult, difficult schedule, but we are going to make a very serious mistake if we're not careful.

Point of Information

MR. BURNS

Mr. Chairman, didn't we pass a motion just now on this particular proposal that we would accept no more amendments other than the ones already in?

MR. HENRY

No, sir. The gentleman withdrew that motion, sir.

Amendment

MR. POYNTER

All right. In brief what it does, immediately after the words "the alternative is" at the bottom of the Burson amendment--in addition to what it's already done--it strikes out that sentence and inserts "one Board of Regents for higher education, elected and appointed members and no management boards, and a Board of Elementary and Secondary Education."

MR. HERNANDEZ

Mr. Chairman, this puts exactly the same words in each side, as wanted. The sole purpose of it is to let people know when they vote on this that they are including in this then...either one they vote for a Board of Elementary and Secondary Education, which is of prime importance to most of the people in this state--that is the only change. They both have this...exactly the same wording now; I ask for your consideration. Thank you.

Personal Privilege

MR. WOMACK

Mr. Chairman, who is out of the chair, I would like for you... I've saved my ten minutes until tonight, and I've been saving it three weeks. I don't care whether you like the final document submitted or not. There are some parts of it I like; there are some parts of it I don't like. You may say that we ought to put this off for ten years and supposed let's come up with a better document and that sounds real good, except ten years from now, twenty years from now you're still going to have a L.S.U. You're going to still have the other institutions either under one board, or under school boards, or under five boards, or under something else and the others aren't going to particularly like L.S.U. because they are not as large and old L.S.U. is going to try to keep them from beating L.S.U. We're still going to have elementary and secondary education; there will be some unhappy spots there. We're still going to have agriculture that's got this special selfish interest. You're going to still have the Public Service Commission's institutions that's under them, and they are going to have their special interest. You're still going to have local government. You're still going to have taxes. We're still going to have natural resources. I would hope that ten, fifteen, or twenty years from now we'll still have this similar three branch government as we have now; namely, the Executive, Judiciary, and the Legislative. I feel certain we'll still have electors throughout. I'm of the opinion that they would still have their peculiar ideas of what they want. We're still going to have big industry. We're going to have PAR; they're going to have their selfish interest as to what they want. We're still going to have banks. If we don't adopt this, you're still going to have the 1921 Constitution and it will be just as bunglesome and out of date as it is today plus another ten, twenty, or thirty years. If you have a new convention, you're still going to have some lawyers and going to have some attorneys. You're still going to have Channel 2, 4, 5, 7, 8, 9, 10, and 12; the Associated Press, UPI, and all the local newspapers in the respective parishes. You'll still have the churches. You'll still have the institutions. We're going to have every special interest that you've got today. You're going to have every sacred cow you've got today. I don't know that you will have as good a staff working on another convention as you have now. I have no assurance that you will have a more dedicated group of people to try to put together another proposed constitution as you have now. I seriously doubt that you could get a better cross section anywhere in the State of Louisiana; you have every kind in the world here today. I respect every person here today, their dedication. Once in a while I question their judgment; I'm sure you have questioned mine. Back at home we are still going to have the uninformed, the misinformed, the disinterested, those that misunderstand it. You're going to have a combination, then, among all of those items. We'll just have a group of people that's going to try to save the country with us. You'll have another group who want to save the country from us. We'll have a few people that want this, and we'll have a few people going to call their neighbor to see if he has gone fishing--all of these are still going to be around. What I'm trying to say here now, we've got to admit whether it altogether suits me or whether it doesn't altogether suit me. Ten, twenty years from now, five years from now if a document is put together in this state, we're going to have every special interest group that you've got here today with every pressure that you've got here today and none of them are going to change. When they come together with their document, by far and large the document they propose is going to be darn close to what's proposed today unless massive changes have been made on the entire governmental or economic structure or both of them. The point I'm trying to get over now is this, it's easy to be against, very easy; it's a little bit harder to be for. To be for it they are going to ask you why and someone came over a while ago, a very fine gentleman in this crowd, and told Mr. Munson; he said, "I'm for this." Bob asked him "Why?" and that's where the conversation really stopped; it's a little bit hard to say why. It's not too hard to be against; it requires no intelligence, no knowledge, no character, no work, absolutely no anything. I'm just against it; I don't understand it; it could be unconstitutional. Who knows how far it's going to lead us, how far it's going to mislead us? But, I think in general when we leave here, I think we need to recognize that any document you put together in the State of Louisiana-- and I've made this statement since the first day the constitutional convention was called--has got a problem because Louisiana has had the longest constitution in the nation of any state. By the same token, it's had the most complex and probably has more sacred cows than all other constitutions in the nation put together. Everybody is for good government as long as it's for somebody else and let me have mine like I want it. I think when you go back home they will be for or against. I think these are some of the things that you need to keep. But, while I'm here, and I don't know how long I'll stay; maybe I'll stay till twelve, one, or two with everybody or maybe I'll leave fifteen minutes early. But, I will take this time to tell you that during this convention I've developed a very, very healthy respect--although I had no disrespect to start with--for every delegate in this convention. I appreciate the fact that these heartfelt items, like this one we are on now, he's done it because he was trying to represent, not necessarily a selfish interest, but what somebody wanted; he just done it because he felt like it was in the best interest of the state. But, somewhere down the line those people you were closest to keep telling you how good the position they want you to take is. Again, I won't be back up here for anything; I'm going to listen, I've done that for three weeks. But, I hope the best of everything for the delegates of this convention. I hope that each of you has a bright future and many, many years of it. I appreciate your courtesy and kindness and the attentive manner in which you've sat at your seat tonight. If I can help any of you as we go through legislative circles, I'd appreciate you coming by. Thank you.

Closing

MR. HERNANDEZ

I had completed my remarks and it has been amended to put the same phrase in both propositions; it's exactly the same. If I have a right to close, I'll waive that right.

[Previous Question ordered. Amendment rejected: 48-79. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Amendments

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Jenkins and Mr. Drew at this time send up amendments. This amendment is, in essence, identical to the amendment that has been passed out to you and was, in fact, previously adopted by this convention. Mr. Jenkins, it is necessary--I didn't have a chance to mention this to you, but I did talk to your other cosuthor--to add an Amendment No. 2 to delete the Pugh amendment because if this amendment should be adopted that section that Mr. Pugh had adopted relative to the "for" or "against" propositions concerning that particular revised statute needs now to come out. So, it has Amendment No. 1 setting forth the text of a last Jenkins amendment previously adopted. Amendment No. 2 would delete the Pugh amendment just adopted. Now, if anyone does not have--in fact, I think we've got enough distribution copies of this one, again the pages are passing them out--certainly if you don't have a copy of that amendment still at your desk, raise your hand. This deletes all prior...maybe I didn't make myself clear. This amendment as offered by Mr. Jenkins would delete all prior amendments affecting the ballot construction and that, of course, includes the last amendment by Mr. Burson that was just adopted. In addition to the copies just passed out, it would have the effect of striking out Convention Floor No. 1 proposed by Mr. Pugh to page 4, line 17 just adopted, as I understand that provision needs to come out if this amendment is adopted.

Explanation

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, there's really not too much I can say on the merits of these issues. The only thing I can say with regard to this amendment is that it seems to be about the only thing that everyone can tolerate. The purpose of having an alternative on this ballot is to get us votes for this constitution. But, it seems like what we have now and most of the things that have been discussed tend to lose us votes. That's why this is being offered because I assure you that in our discussions everyone was not happy with this, but it was a sort of compromise that everybody felt like they could live with and tolerate. With regard to the length, I want to remind you that on the ballot you have different sizes of print. Undoubtedly, the instructions and the discussion around Point 2 would be in much smaller type so that the thing that would stand out to the voter would be the two propositions that they would be voting on. So, I urge the adoption of this amendment.

Questions

MR. FONTENOT

Woody, this past couple of minutes did you vote for the Burson other amendment that just passed by 102-19?

MR. JENKINS

I sure did because I thought that the amendment before that that was pending at that time did serious violence to this constitution. I think that if we had let that stay in, that we would have been subject to very serious court challenges if the voters had approved it. That's why I voted against it because I think most anything I would have been....

MR. FONTENOT

You voted against it; you said?

MR. JENKINS

I mean that's why I voted against it when it was enacted, and I voted to repeal it and put in the Burson amendment because I thought that most anything would have been better than that.

MR. A. LANDRY

Mr. Jenkins, would you mind having some more coauthors on this amendment with you? Would it be all right to open the machines for coauthors?

MR. JENKINS

I'd be happy to accept you, Mr. Landry.

Further Discussion

MR. DREW

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, our whole thirteen months work hinges on the action that we take, and we don't have too much time in which to take action. I offered an amendment which was very similar to the Jenkins' amendment except mine was a "for" or "against" proposition. The amendment he's offered was adopted earlier today by, I believe, eighty-eight votes. The only change there is is that you vote for the alternative or for the provision in the present proposal. I think it's time that we get off of high center. We've got to; we don't have the time that we've had in the past. I think this is an amendment that creates no injustice. I don't think it does or creates a favor in favor of one side or the other. I think it is as neutral as you can get, and certainly, that's what we want. I think everyone wants that or should want that placed on the ballot. I urge your adoption of this amendment, and let's move on with the business of the convention.

I'll yield, Mr. Fontenot.

Questions

MR. FONTENOT

Mr. Drew, doesn't this have the same constitutional question that the original Jenkins proposal had this afternoon or this morning: that is, the fact that a majority of the people voting for or against the constitution won't necessarily control the minority who might vote on the alternative; isn't that correct? Isn't there a constitutional question that might be...

MR. DREW

You mean that either alternative would have to get the same majority as the constitution?

MR. FONTENOT

Right.

MR. DREW

I don't think that's a constitutional question there. I don't think it's serious at all, if any question there.

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

I ask for the adoption of the amendment, and let's move on with our business.

Further Discussion

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I'm going to be very brief. I rise only because I didn't want Mr. Jenkins' comments about the consensus on this amendment to be misunderstood. I did attend a meeting in the Speaker's Office concerning this matter, and I did not agree with the Jenkins amendment being reoffered. I make my position plain. I have fought here all day because I felt it imperative that the alternative proposal not be in a posture where it could be adopted by a minimum number of voters contrary to the will of the large majority who might vote for the constitution with the other provision in it. It seems to me that this does violence to that position, and therefore, I can't support it. It further seems to me that, when I worked with Mr. Burson on the amendment which he offered and which got about 102 or 107 votes just a few minutes ago, that that was a half way between proposition. It avoided the question of the possibility of a small number of voters approving the alternative. It put a floor, so to speak, on what it would take to adopt the alternative proposal, and under those circumstances, I fully supported Mr. Burson's amendment. As a matter of fact, I suggested it; we drew it before Mr. Perez ever came forward with his proposal. It's a little bit unfair in my opinion to say that the only reason the Burson amendment was adopted was because of the Perez amendment which had preceded it. I think the Burson amendment represents a reasonable basis for a solution to this matter, and for that reason, I oppose the Jenkins amendment.

Questions

MR. WEISS

Delegate Kean, could you explain to me what the significance of the majority vote in either of the two amendments that we are now discussing and the significance of this majority vote in the alternate proposal that the public would select from?

MR. KEAN

The difference as I see it, Doctor, is that if we require, and certainly we have to require, a majority of those who vote on the constitution to pass it, and then we say that it only takes a majority of those who vote on the alternative to pass the alternative, you simply end up, in my opinion, with a situation where a minority interest could pass the alternative even though a large majority had adopted the constitution. That's the reason I supported the Burson amendment because at least it tied into the two together and would have required fifty percent of those who voted for the constitution in order for the alternative to pass.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Kean, do you realize that we might have a lot of voters who would be interested in adopting the constitution but would not be near as interested in which board that we had, and therefore, would not cast a vote either way?

MR. KEAN

Well, they've got a right to vote under the Burson amendment for the constitution and against it and walk out of the polling booth if they want to.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Well, that's the reason under this particular proposal we have here--the Jenkins' proposal--wouldn't that give those people the right to go in and vote for or against the constitution without having to make a decision on the boards?

MR. KEAN

Sure; so would this one.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Now, isn't that their constitutional right to do so?

MR. KEAN

I don't deny them that right. We didn't deny them under the Burson amendment that right.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Now, haven't we had a number of constitutional amendments submitted where that we'd have maybe five or six times as many votes cast upon one as the other, but it would not invalidate those who had a majority?

MR. KEAN

Senator, there's no use you and I arguing this matter back and forth. You've been at difference with me all day on this subject. The constitutional amendment is different from this alternative proposal, as I see it.

[Record vote ordered. Amendment adopted: 96-22. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

Point of Information

MR. CANNON

Question of the chair, Mr. Chairman.

This did not undo the Anzalone-Rayburn amendment that was previously passed?

MR. HENRY

No, sir.

[Previous Question ordered on the entire subject matter.]

Closing

MR. PUGH

I move the adoption.

MR. HENRY

Mr. Pugh, that was a beautiful speech.

PROPOSALS ON THE CALENDAR FOR APPROVAL OF FINAL STYLING

Committee Proposal No. 38

MR. POYNTER

The amendments are being passed out at this time. As I appreciate it, they go up through Part III but do not include Part IV; is that correct?

MR. TATE

Of Article XIV.

MR. POYNTER

Of Article XIV.

Amendments Nos. 1 through 14

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, while the amendments are being passed out, I will try to explain very briefly something that I hope will take little time for your consideration and approval. The Committee on Style and Drafting approved these recommendations unanimously. The Chairman of the Committee on Legislative Liaison has checked with the subcommittee of her committee; they find no objection. As you may remember last night, we reached agreement on the rearrangement of all the provisions we have adopted up through what would be Article XIII of our new proposed constitution. We're now talking about the transitional measures...provisions that will appear in Article XIV. If you have your outline, it's the last article, the one we did not get to last night. We had transferred before--in last night's action--about twelve provisions that had earlier been adopted as part of the constitution, and they in the main form Part I, Part I of your new Article XIV. This morning we had circulated, thinking we would reach it about ten and had no time to retype...(That's a funny, supposedly) what up here says "Committee Proposal No. 38, First Enrollment". We cut and pasted it to show the general changes in ink that we had added to these proposals. We are right now circulating... They are mostly, as you notice, renumbering--renumbering and changing certain language and certain numbers to conform with the previous renumbering we've just gone through. Attached to the back of that as it was circulated is a yellow page, which is the one caveat amendment which involves the deletion of some language that was thought to be unnecessary. I'll explain that. Then, subsequently, circulated to you was a corrected yellow page, which, if you want to follow the instructions, you go "Presto!" throw the first sheet away, take the second one, and so on. Now, without explanation--and Senator Rayburn says he figures I get by with this because nobody figures a fellow who talks this dumb can be slick. Now, with that little preface, these amendments, Amendments 1 through 15, that you see there...that you see before you on the front and back of that page, they are to the final enrolled copy or the first enrolled copy of Committee Proposal No. 38, which you may have. But you may also use if you want the xeroxed copy.

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

I'll yield to a question, Mr. Chairman.

Question

MR. O'NEILL

Judge Tate, I was wondering if you thought it would be possible that we could adopt Amendments Nos. 1 through 14 all at once together?

MR. TATE

Well, Mr. O'Neill, that would deprive me of the chance to waste your time, but I think simply speaking...simply yes because it's simply renumbering and a reordering that has been checked throughout. I would, Mr. Chairman, in the absence of objection, then, move the adoption of Amendments 1 through 14. If there's even one objection, I'll go in a slower series, but in the absence of objection, I move the adoption of 1 through 14, subject to any...

[Amendments Nos. 1 through 14 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 15

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, Amendment No. 15 may require a brief moment of explanation. Amendment No. 15--now if you will look at page 13 of this dummy (not me, at the top of that page it says-- the former Section 24--it says "(A) Property Taxes. The provisions of Article X of the Constitution of 1921 relating to ad valorem taxes shall remain in effect until the provisions of the subject contained in Article VIII of this constitution take effect." However, if you will notice Section 13, which is on page 6 of your dummy which you have previously put there and taken out of the former Article VII of our constitution put here, has the exact transition schedule. It says the only things that don't come into effect on the effective date are the new statewide evaluation on the basis of fair market value and use value--that's Section 18--and the only thing that doesn't come into effect is a new and more generous homestead exemption on Section 20. It doesn't come into effect until we have the statewide readjustment within three years of this effective date. So, the inclusion of this language did not only duplicate what was held earlier but would create some confusion because there would be some confusion whether the old exemptions in Article X of the former constitution were continued in effect for three years, or whether they conflicted with the new exemptions under the new constitution which come into effect on the effective date. Now, after quite a great deal of experience, there was found to be no objection...

Questions

MR. TOBIAS

Judge, would you move the adoption so we can get on to Style and Drafting so we can get out of here tonight.

MR. HENRY

Take it easy, Mr. Tobias; you're going to live through this.

MR. THOMPSON

Judge Tate, do you mean that possibly for the next three years that we'll have a hundred percent evaluation of all the property in the state?

MR. TATE

I would say, Mr. Thompson, that under the provisions of the article that you've adopted--under either provision...of the amendment that you're deleting or under the Revenue and Finance Article that we have adopted....no. The present situation continues until it's replaced.

MR. THOMPSON

I want your answer. I don't want all these that's telling you what to say to get out of here.

MR. TATE

I would say that under the intention of the new article, and of both provisions, was to not require the new schedules to come into effect until three years following the adoption of this constitution. Does that answer your question? It doesn't quite; does it?

MR. THOMPSON

No.

MR. TATE

Well, whether the present constitution requires a hundred percent assessment, of course, is a matter of some litigation at the present time. If it does, that will not end until... for three years. Yes, sir.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Judge Tate, isn't it the provision in the constitution that the new reevaluation, new schedules, will not take place until three years from the effective date of the constitution?

MR. TATE

Yes, sir.

MR. DE BLIEUX

Now, isn't this particular provision in order to take care of that and allow the 1921 Constitution to remain in effect until that particular time?

MR. TATE

Yes, sir.

MR. DE BLIEUX

And isn't it true that this also takes care of the veterans' exemption, make that particular portion stay in effect until the effective date of the new constitution.

MR. TATE

Yes, sir. Section 13 does do that.

MR. WINCHESTER

Don't you know that we're now assessed at one hundred percent?

MR. TATE

Yes, yes, Mr. Winchester.

[Amendment No. 15 adopted without objection.]

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, with that we have now concluded everything that has happened, and this is a new Part III of the Article XIV. We have only to recess--at least could we have leave for Style and Drafting to meet for about ten or fifteen minutes to report on what happened today and report back on that, Mr. Chairman? I would request that leave.

MR. HENRY

All right. If you'll give me just a minute. Let the Clerk get through talking with his mother here.

Point of Information

MR. O'NEILL

Mr. Chairman, I simply want a point of information if we didn't need a record vote on Amendment No. 15, since it was inserting a new section.

MR. HENRY

No, sir, we didn't. Thank you, sir.

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, I might say that it was just deleting a Section

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

(A) out of that and renumbering (B) into what...but it's an old section with the renumberers. Thank you, Mr. O'Neill, though; we might have overlooked it. Thank you.

All right. Now, while we're adjourning, we're going to now pass out to you what a subcommittee has proposed to our committee for the minor stylistic changes in what was passed by way of Delegate Proposal No. 98. This morning we approved in principle the thought that this would probably form Sections in Part IV, but this is tentative. But, the internal portions you will wish to see because they just changed section references.

INTRODUCTION OF RESOLUTIONS [II Journal 1407]

MR. POYNTER

To introduce a Delegate Resolution to be numbered Delegate Resolution No. 53.

A resolution relative to the printing and distribution of copies of the constitution throughout the state.

"BE IT RESOLVED by the Constitutional Convention of Louisiana that the publication of the constitution in the official journal of the state prior to election and the printing and distribution of copies of the constitution throughout the state prior to the election shall be accomplished and paid for by the convention. The Executive Committee is directed to do all things necessary and proper to accomplish the same."

[Motion to suspend the rules to consider the resolution adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. DENNERY

The purpose of this resolution is to obviate any possibility that we may run into difficulties in connection with the official publication in the printing and distribution. Normally, these are handled through the office of the secretary of state, and in order to avoid any question, we wanted this resolution so that the secretary of state would have an official authorization by this constitution that he did not have to do this, that we would do it. We've already arranged for it as you know through the Public Information Committee, and this is merely to get it into the convention record so there will be no question. I ask its adoption, please.

[Resolution adopted without objection.]

Personal Privilege

MR. WILLIS

Mr. Chairman Henry, with unanimous consent to my last personal privilege here, I speak with a deep sense of humility on this occasion. With great personal satisfaction and pride and pleasure, I announce that I am fully mandated to voice the grateful sentiments of your colleagues regarding your chairmanship. Real gratitude, like joy, is a feeling that can neither be concealed, nor suppressed; it has to be expressed.

Words cannot be sufficient recompense, because words cannot pay the debt we and our state owe you for your gratuitous stewardship, but they are our most honest recompense.

You have opened the doors of courtesy to let in the fresh air of friendship, the garment of good will.

One of the treasures of our lives is that we were privileged to have served together here. The close friendships which resulted and exist among us, all of us will endure for us to cherish as our fondest memory and priceless possession.

We vividly realize the depth of our love for each other at this hour nearing final adjournment and cannot omit the mention of your contribution to our great confraternity and our pleasant, productive, and constructive relationship which were facilitated by your stewardship.

You have made us tolerant of variety in opinions.

Because your authority was well employed and never in the face of doubt, it was never resisted and cheerfully obeyed. Your rulings made common sense, and common sense is as rare as genius. Your genius for leadership continually manifested itself strategically, directly, and forthrightly at the heart of the target. You were always in the arena. We have all looked to you for wise counsel, and rigid standards of integrity and conciliatory and mutually-just negotiations via the "Henry Huddle." Throughout the storms of one emergency after another, of some clinging to the status quo and others to imaginative measures, your counsel and firm guidance brought us through to reasonable achievement.

Our constitution, which will favorably alter the face of Louisiana, was hammered out under your gavel to its final form by the most democratic process under brilliant lights and while all the eyes and ears of Louisiana were upon us.

Under your capable guidance, we never lost the feeling of being in the presence of a tried, true, fair, and good commander, whether we had your agreement or opposition or whether you had ours. How wonderful it was to know that, whether you agreed with us or not, you had time for us. You knew the minority must be heard even if the majority must prevail, although God is not always on the side of the biggest squadrons.

You never manifested the arrogance of power and you are unsullied by pomp and bluster. The bare fact is that neither opportunity nor circumstance to the abuse of power ever tempted you.

Your spirit saw to that because your use of persuasion was more pronounced than your use of power. You adhered to my first prayer opening a day's session.

The benevolence of your love, guidance, and leadership is written in our document, and your shadow will reach across the length and breadth of our state as this document is contemplated by our people, because no man can detract or add from your accomplishments here. Your scales of decision were not altered to accommodate the majesty of any other power or prestige than righteousness under our rules.

Your decisions on questions of order were prompt and impartial. Our parliamentary inquiries received full and fair response; personal privilege was allowed to any to puff; you never prompted the previous question; so, your deportment toward the delegation was with patience, good temper, some levity, yet dignified, and for the dispatch of the business of the convention, allowing fair exhibition of every subject presented for consideration.

In moments of agitation, from which no deliberative assembly is exempt, and which, to our credit, never resulted in physical combat, you were unshaken and firm and fair amidst the storms of sharp exchanges and, with the learned assistance of our esteemed clerk, who also served gratuitously, you guarded our rules from being sacrificed to the transitory pride, passion, prejudice, or interest of any delegate. You need not look back or have misgivings of your rulings or conduct during the heat of conflicting ambitions. You have acquitted yourself royally, even though we have no royalty in America. If we had, you would be a prince.

Your outstanding parliamentary skill enhanced our image of dignity and tradition as a diligently-deliberative body, which entitles you to immeasurable respect, esteem, and affection, and which all of us who had the privilege and honor to have served with you hold for you tonight.

Mr. Chairman, this is an historic occasion. Louisiana history is being made here today and you have been our chief architect, because history-making is habitual with you. Generations yet unborn will reap the harvest of your faithful devotion to and capable discharge of duty.

In simplicity, but with deep sincerity, we all join in paying this deserved tribute to a great Louisianian, a great American, indeed an All-American!

My regret is that I cannot vote for you in your district, but my wish is that someday I might when, I hope, your sphere is enlarged. At the pace you grow in governmental -- and now constitutional -- stature, I believe I might, as I consider the distinction your colleagues in this House, and this convention, have bestowed the highest office it was its and our privilege to bestow on you -- the leadership of the people's chambers.

We need not sell this constitution to our people. A sale has three ingredients: the thing, the price, and the consent. The people have the thing, our document; they have paid the price; we now only need their consent.

Reckoning that we, of this generation, are a living link between the past and the future because we are the present, I, as one of "We, the people" again give my consent to it here and now. I did not sign my name to it to make it more ornate. As delegate, lawyer, and citizen, I recommend and will recommend it to all Louisianians with the least bit of reserve.

I express premonitions that those who are hesitant will do likewise when more reliably advised and sincerely informed and will raise their own hue and cry of advice and consent.

The prologue to this assembly, the second act of our legislature of 1972, the monologues at this podium opening the debates on proposals and amendments, and the dialogues between the podium and the interrogations from the floor maturing the debates will, I trust, entitle us to an epilogue of praise from our people when we present them our precise printed plan of government.

It is not and was never expected to be perfect. It is not the ark of the covenant. It is a better if it is not the best constitution for our state and one which any unselfish Louisianian may embrace.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, and before I return to my chair, I seize this last opportunity at the podium to express our profound thanks for your stewardship, and bid you farewell, with bon voyage; and bid to our entire, intelligent and industrious staff, adieu; and bid to all of you, my fellow delegates, au revoir.

[Motion to insert Delegate Willis' remarks into the official Journal adopted without objection.]

MR. HENRY

Mr. Willis, I know that they will...I appreciate that, on your behalf, more than you know. A perfect comment would be after hearing something like that, I think about all you could do with me is save me for breeding purposes, I guess. My wife is here I heard.

MR. JENKINS

Mr. Chairman, I would like to move that your last remark also be included in the Journal.

MR. HENRY

Don't insert it in the record if you're not going to do anything about it.

We will stand at ease for just a minute.

Delegate Chehardy in the Chair

Personal Privilege

MR. RAYBURN

I don't know of much I can say after you have heard from our good friend and fine delegate, Burt Willis. But, I would like to say in passing, I've had a lot of ups and downs in my lifetime and probably will have some more if I remain here very much longer. I have met a lot of new people here in this convention. I've found a lot of new friends. I hope that our labors will be fruitful. It's awful hard to satisfy the yen, as you and I know. I hope that we have a timely product that will comply with the wishes of the people of our great state. There's been a lot of us that maybe hasn't worked as hard as we should have. There's been others that in some time I felt they worked a little harder than they should have. I stand at this microphone this evening to pay tribute to a man that in my opinion has worked longer and harder than any other delegate, in my opinion, in our midst. Maybe you haven't always agreed with him. I've heard it said sometimes that they would rather he would put it in writing than words. But, regardless of how he done it, he done it. In my opinion, he's done an outstanding job. He afforded us with counsel and guidance when we need it most. To a man like me that neither has no formal education, I had to reply on people like him. Sometimes I was caught in a bind. I've listened to Dr. Weiss in this ear and Dr. Stephenson in this one. If you listen to them long enough, both of them have a worthy cause, and in some cases both convinced me they were right. But, let that be what it may. I just feel like that I wanted to do something for this particular person I've been talking about. I wanted to do something because I realized after hearing him talk on many occasion at this microphone that there was one thing that was uppermost in his mind, and that was letting everyone take a little bacon home. At this time, Mr. Acting Chairman, with your permission, I would like to ask two of my colleagues in the Senate, Senator Brown and Senator Lambert, if they please, to escort the Honorable Justice Tate to the rostrum.

Judge Tate, I'm fixing to present to you...down in front, please...you might have to stand up in just a moment, or you might even have to run. Judge Tate, I'm going to present to you something that I know is close and dear to your heart. On behalf of the delegates of this convention. We've looked long and hard to secure this gift. We have tried to take every means to see that this gift was helping, and at this particular time, I'm going to ask Dr. Mauberrret to come forth and present you with a health certificate before I make the presentation of the initial gift.

Dr. Mauberrret.

Personal Privilege

MR. MAUBERRET

Mr. Acting Chairman and fellow delegates, I have the adoption and the official health certificates. We certify this registered animal is free from any contagious and infectious disease. This certificate does not certify that the animal is free of any malodors and does not guarantee to be calm and docile. It is signed by Dr. Stephenson, Doctor of Chiropractics; Dr. Frank Ullo, Doctor of Dental Surgery; Dr. Gerald Weiss, M.D.; and myself, Dr. Claude Mauberrret, Doctor of Veterinary Medicine. It's attested to and sworn to and subscribed before me this 19th day of January, 1974 by E.L."Bubba" Henry, Attorney-at-law, Representative, Delegate, Speaker of the House, Chairman of the Convention and sometime Notary Public in and for the State of Louisiana.

So, Judge, this is a fine little fellow you've got here. Take him home on Octavis Street, and I know he's going to do real good in New Orleans with us.

MR. RAYBURN

Now, Judge, knowing that you are a man that believe in doing everything right, and certainly don't believe in discrimination against creed or color, this particular animal is black and white, and it has a real, nice pedigree, and to be honest with you, it's double bred. We did not have a chance to run the pedigree back for nine or ten generations but we did chase the pedigree back for at least three generations. The father of this particular gift is named "Pa Bel." The mother of this particular gift is named "Ma Tel Bel." The grandfather is named "Grand Graham Bel." Grandmother is named "Grannie Sou Bel." The grandfather of the mother is named "I.N. Tel," and the grandmother is named "A. Mary Nickel Tel" who deceased in '73.

Now, Judge, with this health certificate and with this pedigree, it is an honor and a privilege for me to present this nice gift to you. Now, Judge, before presenting it to you, I would only like to say this--I want to get the correct name where you'll know how to call it because it answers to its name--with all this back pedigree, the animal I am now fixing to present to you is "Sou Tel Bel." We did not know whether you liked your bacon fat, lean or mediocre. So, therefore, we're presenting you with this little gift, where you can produce it in the manner that you like it. It is now a pleasure for me to present "Sou Tel Bel" to you.

MR. CHEHARDY

Judge Tate, everyone would like to see him a little bit better. Would you pick him up, please?

MR. TATE

Listen, Senator, all I can say is "Oink!"

MR. BLAIR

Does anyone have a shovel?

MR. CHEHARDY

I'm just passing on Senator Blair's request. Would anyone have a shovel or be connected with someone who has one? Senator Rayburn, could you use your connections to clean up the trail of the pig?

MR. DERBES

Mr. Acting Chairman, I'd just like to point out that apropos his new master, the little fellow has just filed his first dissent in one of the sales.

MR. CHEHARDY

Will the delegates please take their seats?
Mr. Justice, now sit down with your little pig.

Chairman Henry in the Chair

MR. HENRY

Judge, you can stay, but your little friend's got to go.

MR. LEBLEU

Mr. Chairman, I think one of our former governors was remembered in history for riding his horse up the front steps. I just wonder whether Judge Tate would be remembered for having this pig in here?

[Motion to revert to Introduction of Resolutions adopted without objection.]

INTRODUCTION OF RESOLUTIONS
[II Journal 1408-1414]

Reading of the Resolution

MR. POYNTER

Next resolution is Delegate Resolution No. 54, introduced by

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

Delegates Henry, Abraham, and all other delegates to the convention have been so listed as authors of the resolution.

A resolution to commend and express its sincere gratitude and appreciation of the Constitutional Convention of 1973, to Norma M. Duncan, Director of Research and her staff for the invaluable services rendered the convention.

[Motion to suspend the rules to consider all resolutions adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. CASEY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, at the appropriate time we also wish to later on give further recognition to certain individuals who have worked with the convention, but I thought it would be appropriate at this time to specifically recognize the entire Research Staff. I have a memorandum here which was worked up today that I thought would be of general interest to the convention delegates. I had been informed that of the members of the Research Staff, which includes all of the senior research people and the secretaries, etc., that a total--now this is the total hours spent in working for the convention in the area of research alone--have a total of 95,000 hours of research time by the Research Staff and its employees has gone toward work with the Constitutional Convention. Of that 95,000 hours, 15,000 of those hours were overtime hours where these people worked above and beyond the call of duty and which is roughly about fifteen percent of the hours worked were overtime.

I had the privilege incidentally of being Chairman of the Subcommittee of the Executive Committee on personnel and staff, and when we interviewed many of the research people and the employees, we asked them and they thought we might have been frivolous at the time whether they like to work twenty-four hours a day and seven days a week. They didn't realize that that would become a reality, particularly in the early days of the convention when the committees were being serviced and particularly now in the closing weeks of the convention when they really have put in many, many hours. . . long hours of long hard work. The convention staff comprised. . . of the research staff comprised overall on an average of about sixty employees at any one time. So, you can imagine the job that it was that our committee had to assemble that many good, efficient people on such short notice. I just think the research staff has done a fantastically, outstanding job and I would like to ask at this time that all the members of the research staff come out from behind the closed doors and please stand, and I think they're certainly worthy and due a resounding standing ovation from this group.

MR. HENRY

Come on out, Norma and folks.

MR. CASEY

One of the reporters remarked he wanted to find out when do they file suit for their overtime, Mr. Chairman.

[Resolution adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Resolution

MR. POYNTER

Next resolution, Delegate Resolution No. 55 introduced by Delegate Henry, other delegates of this convention.

A resolution to commend and express the appreciation of the Constitutional Convention of 1973, David Poynter, Chief Clerk, and his staff for the services rendered the convention.

WHEREAS, David Poynter has provided the Constitutional Convention of 1973 with his excellent background and experience and has ably and faithfully served this convention --this is why it's nice to be Clerk, you can make sure they don't put anything bad in here-- in the capacity of Chief Clerk and parliamentarian. . .

[Motion to waive reading of the resolution adopted without objection.]

MR. POYNTER

I really would in particular like to read the portion that pays tribute to the people that made my life possible, notably my assistants, Mr. Edward Hardin, Assistant Chief Clerk, Mr. C. Wayne Hays, the Journal Clerk, Mr. Sam Bonnette, Jr., who's my Calendar Clerk, Mr. Richard Broussard, on my right, the Assistant Calendar Clerk, Mr. Eugene Limar, who's sitting on the far right, I believe right now, Assistant Endorsement Clerk, my secretary, Miss Julia LaBauve, Butch Speer, head page, and Jules Regard, assistant head page. Certainly, for these people it made your life a little bit easier and I thank them.

MR. HENRY

Let's give the Clerk and his staff a big hand.

[Resolution adopted without objection.]

MR. CASEY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, proper recognition will be given at a later time to Mr. Poynter. However, I do wish to mention that the resolution does include not only his staff, but the many employees that Mr. Poynter had which includes, the pages which have serviced the convention and many of which . . . many of whom rather are in the office in the rear. So, those that are out on the floor at this time and those in the office-- Mr. Chairman with your permission-- I'd like to request that they stand. . .

MR. HENRY

You folks come on out here.

Let's give the pages a nice welcome hand, and that was to include, of course, the sergeant-at-arms as well.

Reading of the Resolution

MR. POYNTER

Next resolution is Delegate Resolution No. 56.

A resolution to commend and express the appreciation of the Constitutional Convention of 1973, Mrs. Jane Noble, Chief Clerk of the Enrolling Room and her staff for the valuable services rendered.

WHEREAS, the authenticity of all official proposals and resolutions introduced and the validity of all amendments thereto by the convention has been maintained largely due to the dedicated and skillful performance of Mrs. Noble, Chief Clerk, Enrolling Room and her staff; and

WHEREAS, Mrs. Noble's assistant, Mrs. Agnea Nooper, and the other members have labored diligently throughout the session of the convention and. . .

[Motion to waive reading of the resolution adopted without objection.]

MR. POYNTER

I wish that these ladies and one gentleman were here . . . for you to recognize them. They are, of course, along with a good percentage of the convention staff, over at the Treaty Room trying to prepare the final enrolled copy which you will sign and present to the governor tonight.

I couldn't convey to you the painstaking job they have and I think it is apparent that as this resolution indicates the ultimate validity and the ultimate authenticity of what you do must be incorporated in their diligent and careful work. Certainly, I think, you have had the benefit of what I consider to be without doubt some of the most professional people in the service of the State of Louisiana. I owe them and the entire convention does, a great debt of gratitude.

MR. HENRY

I ask that we give the Enrolling Room people a nice round of applause, although I don't think they're here.

[Resolution adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Resolution

MR. POYNTER

Next resolution is a resolution of commendation for the services of Mrs. Jane French, the Chief Clerk of the Transcript Service Office and her staff for their valuable services rendered to the convention.

[Motion to waive reading of the resolution adopted without objection.]

MR. POYNTER

Again, someone who has done and a group of women who have done an overwhelming job. You see one aspect of it daily with one of the ladies who monitors the tapes over here and logs everything, but upstairs on the second floor everyday you all have been in session, there have been women who have had to transcribe, proof, and reproof, and retype, every single wonderful word uttered in this convention and plenary session. It's my understanding that that transcript, full verbatim transcript runs well in excess of 20,000 pages at the present time. Contemplated to be bound in something like perhaps as many as twenty volumes. It's been an overwhelming task. I can tell you they're only about three days right now behind you in your sessions, and they have done a wonderful job and something that I know many of you people when you started were very desirous on will be available to the scholars, those who have legal questions as to your intent will be made available to those people largely through the efforts of Mrs. French and her staff.

[Resolution adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Resolution

MR. POYNTER

Next resolution to commend and express appreciation of the convention to the legislature of the state.

WHEREAS, the enactment of Act No. 2. . .

[Motion to waive reading of the resolution adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. CASEY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, just briefly, it was thought it was appropriate to recognize the legislature first of all for Act No. 2 of 1972, and for their continued support particularly with the appropriations and funds necessary. We do hope that when the document is examined by them that we certainly solicit their wholehearted endorsement and approval. We do hope they will get behind the document with us to insure that it will be finally adopted whenever it is voted on by the people.

[Resolution adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Resolution

MR. POYNTER

Next resolution is Delegate Resolution No. 59 introduced by Delegates Henry and other members of the convention.

A resolution to commend and express the appreciation of the Constitutional Convention of the State of Louisiana 1973 to Richard L. Barrios, Jr., the Chief Sergeant-at-arms and his staff for the services rendered the convention.

[Motion to waive reading of the resolution adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. CASEY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I don't know that Mr. Barrios is in the audience, but certainly many of the members --- is Mr. Barrios here-- I think it would be appropriate at this time to recognize Mr. Barrios and his sergeants-at-arms in their red and blue coats, and I think it would be appropriate to give them a very warm standing ovation.

MR. HENRY

You all have done an outstanding job.

Reading of the Resolution

MR. POYNTER

Next resolution is Delegate Resolution No. 60 introduced by Delegate Casey.

A resolution to commend and express the appreciation of the convention to the staff, personnel serving in office of the Chairman of the Convention and Treasurer of the Convention.

[Motion to waive reading of the resolution adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. CASEY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, I don't wish to take too much time of the convention with the various resolutions. We just wanted to make sure that we properly recognized everybody, that their names were properly inscribed in the final journal of the convention and these are the members of the convention that worked directly under the Chairman and hence a separate resolution for them.

I don't know if Mr. Fugler and the other members, Miss Weaver, who worked for Mr. Lowe as the assistant treasurer or chief accountant and other members of their staff-- I don't know if they're in the audience-- but they are certainly due an ovation from the delegates, if they're in the Chamber here.

Further Discussion

MR. DE BLIEUX

Mr. Chairman, I must just say in connection with Delegate Casey's remarks and I just talked to Mr. Lowe, and I think this is a good note to end this convention on. He informs me that we will have approximately a half million dollars left out of the appropriation that was appropriated to take care of this convention. I think it's good to let the public know that.

MR. HENRY

Point is well-taken, sir.

The last resolution there with respect to Gale Clausen who works for me and to Roy Fugler, and Mr. Lowe's staff. If Mr. Lowe's people have worked as hard as mine have and I know they have, they deserve a great deal of credit. Mr. Roy, in particular because of the outstanding work he did, details and putting things together that you didn't know about and I didn't either, but taking a lot of detail work away from those of you and I who would have had to do it otherwise.

Reading of the Resolution

MR. POYNTER

Next resolution is Delegate Resolution No. 61.

A resolution to express the appreciation to the officials, operators and messengers of South Central Bell Telephone for the telephone services provided.

[Motion to suspend the rule adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. CASEY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, in every legislative session and it also was true for the Constitutional Convention, the telephone company has always furnished messenger service at their cost to the legislature and they have to the Constitution Convention. I think their kindness and generosity is certainly worthy of recognition. I think those members of the telephone company here in the audience is certainly due an ovation for cooperating with the convention.

MR. HENRY

Let's give them a big hand here.

MR. JONES

Mr. Chairman, I think we should ask Judge Tate to take that suckling pig back to South Central Bell so they can be sure that they got their little bit of bacon out of this convention from their interested delegate. Thank you.

[Resolution adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Resolution

MR. POYNTER

Next resolution is Resolution No. 62 introduced by Mr. Henry and all other delegates.

A resolution to commend the members of the news media for their services to the public during the Constitutional Convention of 1973.

[Motion to waive reading of the resolution adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. CASEY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, the future of the Constitutional Convention of 1973 depends on that continued generosity and support and very strong support of the press and news media. We certainly appreciate those members of the news media for having so worked closely with the members of the Constitutional Convention. Many of those members of the press and the news media are our very close and personal friends. Those that are here present with us, I think, should be recognized. We would ask that they stand and that we give to them a very nice ovation.

MR. HENRY

Let's give them a big hand.
Gentleman moves the adoption of the resolution.

[Resolution adopted without objection.]

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

Reading of the Resolution

MR. POYNTER

Next resolution is Resolution No. 63 introduced by Delegate Henry and all other delegates.

A resolution to commend and express the sincere gratitude and appreciation of Louisiana AFL-CIO for the use of their equipment and personnel.

MR. HENRY

In that connection, we used a lot of tape during the convention. The figures we got were we used 210 tapes, taped 630 hours which they say checks out to 756,000 feet of tape or a 143.2 miles of tape. The people who have handled that, Ralph Hicks, who's that big, tall, ugly fellow over there--Ralph, stand up-- we had T.J. Hughes, who I don't see. I don't see the other fellow, Tom Michelli. If you fellows understood, I've been looking for you, Red Bourg and Raymond Martinez. We appreciate more than you know your putting up with us. It was a hard job teaching T.J. to count to four over there, so he could identify the mikes.
Senator Rayburn.

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Chairman, I'm for everything you said. I think you left a few things out. I would like to commend them for the time they've devoted to the delegates.

MR. HENRY

I think that was the general purpose of the resolution, Senator.

[Resolution adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Resolution

MR. POYNTER

Next resolution is Delegate Resolution No. 64.

A resolution to commend and express the appreciation of the Convention to Louisiana State University and the State University Law School, and its dean, faculty and staff for the use of its facilities.

Explanation

MR. CASEY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, the L.S.U. Law School and, of course, the administrators of the entire school itself was certainly very cooperative in working with us and furnishing free space for our research staff over at the L.S.U. law center. Ordinarily, in a large group of this size I would not particularly point out any one delegate for recognition, but one of the members of my Committee on Staff and Personnel, this just happened to follow under my responsibility took a really . . . picked up the ball, took the responsibility and used his architectural experience and professional experience and subdivided the fourth floor of the law center for our research staff, spent many, many hours on his own in using his architectural abilities. I think it would certainly be appropriate to recognize Mr. Perry Segura, for doing such a real fine job on the law center.

MR. HENRY

Stand up Mr. Segura.

MR. KELLY

Before we vote on this resolution I would like to be furnished with a copy of it though.

MR. HENRY

You want to know how it's going to be on the ballot.
Mr. Kean has a question.

MR. KEAN

Mr. Chairman, I just want to say that this is probably the only commendation L.S.U. has gotten out of this convention.

[Resolution adopted without objection.]

MR. JENKINS

That's not correct Mr. Kean, remember we commended L.S.U. for loaing to Tulane.

MR. PUGH

Mr. Kean thinks he has a problem, I just got a wire from the Louisiana Trisl Lawyers' Association telling me I had an hour and a half still to do something about a public review of facts.

Reading of the Resolution

MR. POYNTER

Next resolution sent up, Delegate Henry and others commend and express the appreciation of the Convention to the individuals who have assisted the convention.

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Chairmen, I just wanted to apologize for Mr. Segura, he just advised me he had left to sign the contract; he will be back immediately.

Explanation

MR. CASEY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, this is somewhat you might call an omnibus resolution to include just about everybody who in some small way assisted the convention in the success that we hope it will have. For instance, the Legislative Council that furnished some of its staff on many occasions in contributing to the many hours of research and work that we've had in many, many of the other state agencies. Also, the staff of the Speaker's offices incidentally put their shoulder to the wheel and worked with the Speaker in contributing much of their time in working with us. So, we would certainly appreciate your approval of this omnibus resolution.

[Resolution adopted without objection.]

Reading of the Resolution

MR. POYNTER

Next resolution, Delegate Resolution No. 66, by the Delegates of the Convention to commend and express the appreciation of the convention to the Honorable Edwin W. Edwards, governor of the state.

[Motion to waive reading of the resolution adopted without objection.]

MR. CASEY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, we thought it appropriate to recognize the efforts of Governor Edwards, first of sll in promising to the people in his campaign that he would support the efforts for a Constitutional Convention and, after his election in living up to his campaign promise in supporting Act No. 2 of 1972, whereby the Constitutional Convention was created. We certainly appreciate his support and interest and I can say very, very strongly that we are depending on his support of the final document, which we will adopt tonight, and that we certainly expect that he will be behind the document with us when we go out to the people and sell the document to the people and hope for its final adoption.

[Resolution adopted without objection.]

MR. DUVAL

Mr. Chsirman, I just thought we ought to have a resolution thanking Mr. Caaey for thinking of all these resolutions.

MR. FULCO

I was reluctsnt to get up, but I think this really does deserve consideration. How about thanking the wives and the husbands of the delegates for their sacrifice?

MR. HENRY

I think that's vary appropriate. We've got a lot of wives back there; we ought to give them a big round of applause, and husbands. All right. We include "and husbands" in that by the way.

Personal Privilege

MR. LOWE

Sort of on a point of personal privilege Mr. Chairmen. You had performed very well all year up until this last month and I'm aggrieved thst when Senstor De Blieux stood up and made my treasurer's report you didn't rule him out of order, you complimented him instead. I just wanted the delegation to know that he is wrong again as usual. He said that there's a surplus of half a million dollars. There's really $499,999.99, so if you're going to make my report, Senator De Blieux, I'd appreciate your doing it correctly. Seriously, Mr. Chairman, I think it would be wise if we went home on the note that we did spend two and half million dollars, there was two million, two hundred thousand up until the time that we gave the Public Information three hundred and twenty-five thousand for printing and mailing the tabloid. We did do some research today and find out that without a doubt Louisiana's Constitutional Convention has cost about half of what the average conventions that have been put on in the United States. So, it's a compliment to the Chairman and all of the delegates and staff and everyone involved that we were able to put on the type convention we did, and still spend about half the money that the average conventions have spent.

MR. HENRY

Thank you, Mr. Lowe.

MR. LANDRUM

Mr. Chairman, I was wondering if Mr. Casey included PAR in his report.

MR. HENRY

Who?

MR. LANDRUM

Just PAR, Mr. Steimel, the League of Women Voters and others in that group.

MR. HENRY

I'll let Mr. Casey answer it.

MR. CASEY

Mr. Chairman and delegates, in the omnibus resolution, I think we covered just about everybody who made some sort of contribution to the convention, including PAR, Reverend Landrum.

MR. STINSON

Mr. Chairman, I checked last week, and it was my understanding that there would be a resolution expressing appreciation and thanks to the Shreveport Journal for the paper they placed on our desk each day.

MR. CASEY

The Shreveport Journal was included in the omnibus resolution.

MR. STINSON

Thank you.

MR. HENRY

Thank you, Mr. Stinson.

MR. ANZALONE

Mr. Chairman, you haven't been looking to your right because since Reverend Landrum mentioned the name PAR, Mr. Chehardy has been trying to get recognized, and you just will not do it.

MR. HAYNES

Mr. Chairman, I think protocol would dictate that we would commend our very efficient treasurer, the one who is responsible for the delegates getting their checks on time and who saw to it that the accounting was accurate and that the savings were for the State of Louisiana. I'd like to ask Delegate Casey that he would include him other than in that broad resolution that we passed nearly last.

MR. HENRY

That was taken care of in one of the resolutions that was adopted awhile ago, Mr. Haynes.

We've got some business now that we're going to have to begin taking up here in just a minute--a resolution.

Reading of the Resolution

MR. POYNTER

The next resolution is a resolution introduced by Delegate Rayburn, of a business nature.

A resolution--and other coauthors--relative to distribution of public information concerning the proposed constitution of '74.

Be it resolved by the convention, that in their book, the Committee on Public Information determines that information shall be disseminated to the people of the state through the medium of newspapers. Said committee is hereby authorized and directed to take such necessary steps as are necessary to assure that where space is purchased, the information is printed at least in the official journal of each parish, and in all event shall make every effort to disseminate information relative to the proposed new constitution in the weekly newspapers throughout the state as well as in the daily newspapers.

[Motion to suspend the rules to consider the resolution adopted without objection.]

Explanation

MR. THOMPSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, as you've heard, we've got about $499,999. The official journal of the state is the State Times, and I feel like that of all the publicity that has been given throughout the state to the dailies, to the weekly, to the television, to the radio and to all the other news media throughout the state that this resolution is necessary. That if we do have it put in any papers other than the State Times, that we not only put it in the dailies, but also in the weeklies, or if we don't, that we don't put it in any of them. This is what the purpose of this resolution is. As all of us know, we have a job selling this constitution. We need every paper, whether it's a weekly, or a monthly, or a daily, or what it is to help us get this constitution to the people. I think that this resolution is necessary, and I urge the adoption. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Questions

MR. WOMACK

Mr. Thompson, did you all include the Ladies' Birthday Almanac in this?

MR. THOMPSON

We will, if you would like it.

MR. JUNEAU

Mr. Thompson, I appreciate everybody taking care of their local problem, but I'm afraid you're going to create about a five hundred thousand dollar problem for me. I have objection to your language, Mr. Thompson. I don't have any particular objection to the resolution, but you say: "We are hereby authorized and directed to take such steps as are necessary." I don't have that money, Mr. Thompson. If you'll get it to me, I'll do it. Do you have any suggestions on how to solve that problem? I'm worried about the language, I really am. The intent of the resolution, I understand. . .no objection. But, I am concerned about this language, "hereby authorized and directed." What is the intent?

MR. THOMPSON

The intent is that if you use other than the State Times, you either use all of them or none of them and give all of the papers the same break and try to make it where all of them will be with us throughout.

MR. JUNEAU

Well, Mr. Thompson, let me just put it this way: as I say, I don't want to raise a problem like this, but it could be expensive. Are you aware of what we did pass?

MR. THOMPSON

That you're going to. . .all I'm asking is it be in the official. all this resolution is asking is it be in the official journal of each of the parish. . .parishes, if you use other than the State Times, which is the official journal of the state.

MR. JUNEAU

Well, maybe it would be appropriate if I told you what we did pass, Mr. Thompson. You can tell me, then, if I have any problems, 'cause I really don't know. The motion was passed and the appropriation has been approved by the Executive Committee that the distribution of this document would be via bulk mail to every rural box, every house box, and every home in the State of Louisiana; and that we would use, by legal requirement, the document would be published in the official state journal on one occasion as required by state law. We then have an appropriation to run notifications in all newspapers: the weeklies, dailies--at home we call them wipers, but that's not true--and then radio and television notifying the people when this would be done. You don't have. . . I wondered if I'm kind of having trouble with that. I just want to make sure intent wise so I. . .

MR. THOMPSON

This is where space is purchased, and if you purchased it in all the weeklies and the dailies here; you don't have any problem if you have done what we said. . .where space is purchased.

MR. CHATELAIN

Delegate Thompson, are you familiar with the fact that we have been authorized by a committee and approved by the Executive Committee that we could spend ten thousand dollars, a total amount of ten dollars in the newspapers throughout this state for an ad notifying the people that there is going to be in the mail in the next few days an official copy of the document? You know that you would probably be hamstringing this committee's work, which we've spent so much time on, in trying to force us to use every official journal, because in some parishes, some sections of the state, the official journal is not the leading paper, it is not the paper, necessarily, that would get the most mileage out of it for your money. I would certainly appreciate it if you'd consider withdrawing this resolution.

122nd Days Proceedings—January 19, 1974

MR. THOMPSON

This merely says "where space is purchased." It doesn't say that. . . anything that you all are trying to read into this thing, and we're not trying to tell you what to do. We are spending the people's money and the taxpayer's money, and I feel like it should be spread out to all the papers and have all the papers supporting this document.

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Thompson, if these people are concerned, well read the resolution--just read the resolution--in the beginning. It says, if the Committee on Public Information determines to use the news media and get information to the people of the state through the medium of newspapers--spells it out, newspapers-- said committee is hereby authorized and directed to be fair to all the papers whether they are daily, weekly, or anything else. That's to try to get it across in every hook, nook and crook of this state. Now, we're only talking here if they decide to use the newspapers as a media. Let's be fair with all of them. That's all this resolution says. If they decide to use some other media, that's up to them. This is strictly leaving it up to them. But, if. . . am I correct, Representative Thompson, in saying that all this says, if they decided to use and it spelled out--don't say news media, it says "newspapers"--that they try to be fair and to make every effort to disseminate information relative to the new constitution in the weeklies throughout the state, as well as the dailies? That's all it says. You try to get the information in all of them. It says no more than that.

MR. THOMPSON

You're exactly right, Senator.

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Thompson, in line 14, I can appreciate the problem Mr. Juneau has. You are having the convention direct this committee to do certain things. Would you be willing to change that "directed" to "requested"? It is possible that they may not be able to get every single newspaper in the state. This resolution, as I read it, says if you advertise at all, you have to advertise in every single paper in the state.

MR. THOMPSON

It doesn't. You haven't read it, as Senator told you. It says, "said committee is hereby authorized and directed to take such steps as are necessary to assure that where space is purchased, the information being printed at least in the official journal." So, you're not having to get every paper. They tell me here that you all are already doing that.

MR. JACK

I've been watching that clock, and if it's wrong with this daylight saving, we're in a mess. Remember what happened to Cinderella? We better get going.

[Previous Question ordered: 91-30.]

Closing

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I just want to say that I don't think I've voted to move the previous question since I've been here. Where I come from, we believe in letting the people be heard. Some people don't believe in letting people be heard. I have had a tremendous amount of calls not only from my Senatorial District, or my so-called delegate district, but from other sections of this state from weekly newspapers. I discussed the matter no longer than today with the governor. He told me he had been bombarded because someone issued a statement somewhere, or something got in the news media that they thought they might only advertise in the larger daily papers. I did not see it; I do not know whether it has foundation or not. All in the world this resolution says, it says that if the Committee on Public Information determines that that information shall be sent out through the news-- it does say media--through the media of newspapers, that they shall be directed--authorized and directed--and I didn't put the word "direct" in the original resolution. I want you to know that. But, it got in there after I got talked to. That they shall be fair and equal if they decide to do that--and I'm not standing here telling them how to handle their business--but if they do be fair and equal with all the newspapers in this state. Now, that's all this resolution says. I have got calls from about twenty parishes in this state. I don't have many weekly newspapers in my area, but I still do have a sense of fair play. I believe that that little man that's living in Dry Prong, or Sandy Loam or some other place in this state has got a chance to pick his paper up and read what's going on just the same as I think the people in New Orleans or Baton Rouge or Bogalusa has got a right to read the Picayune or the Morning Advocate like I read. Now, if I'm wrong, I'm just wrong. But, you've got some places in this state that the daily newspapers don't go to. You know that and I know it. Those people are entitled to any information that anybody else in any other section of this state gets. We are not asking them to do anything unless they decide to use the media of newspapers. If they decide to mail them out, good and well. But, if they do go to the news media through the papers of this state, just put a little something in all of them and particular, put it in the official journal of each parish. That's all this resolution is asking. If it's wrong, we poor folks have lost again.

Question

MR. WOMACK

Senator Rayburn, in the Executive Committee's action, we discussed this at length. I believe that we are required by law to publish the entire document--I may be wrong--in the official journal of the state, which is a legal requirement and is not public information as such; but it is a legal requirement. That's the first thing. Now, the second thing that we approved--I'm trying to get this clarified--the second thing we approved was the spending of money to do exactly what you say as far as public information on when the mail ballots would go out--and money was approved--it necessary to put this type of commercial in every newspaper in the state. What I want to know is this: putting the official journal advertisement in to meet the legal requirements in the state legal journal covers that part of it, officially. Then, the advertisement going out in each of the papers, or every paper in the state, telling them when the official documents will be mailed out as a mail ballot, wouldn't that qualify with the directive of this resolution?

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Womack, if you do that, you're doing exactly what the contents of this resolution says--exactly what it says and nothing else.

[Record vote ordered. Resolution adopted: 70-30. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

MR. THOMPSON

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, thank you. The little people are still represented. Thank you very much.

[Motion to revert to Reports of Committees adopted without objection.]

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES [II Journal 1414-1416]

MR. POYNTER

Judge Tate sends up three different reports as this time from Style and Drafting with respect to Delegate Proposal No. 98 returned by his committee with amendments to you.

Respectfully submitted by Judge Tate.

Just a second, please, Judge.

A supplemental report with respect to Delegate Proposal No. 98, returned with amendments, and also a supplemental report on Committee Proposal No. 38, returned with amendments.

Respectfully submitted by Judge Tate, Chairman of that committee.

[Motion to suspend the rules to consider the Amendments contained in the report adopted without objection.]

PROPOSALS ON THE CALENDAR
FOR APPROVAL OF FINAL STYLING

Delegate Proposal No. 98

Amendments Nos. 1, 2 and 3

MR. TATE

Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I'll try not to explain in too much detail and oink, I mean with. . .excuse me, with coherency. But, generally speaking, what we intend to do is when we finish with these series of amendments--and I'll explain the only one that is of somewhat nontechnical nature--what we intend to do is add to the transitional article the last two or three sections that deal with the alternative proposals.

The effect of what we're going to do is to take Delegate Proposal No. 98, the Henry resolution that first created the alternative proposition on education, and amend it to include the Jenkins' ballot as a part of the transitional article and section numbers. Then we are going to take the Leithman-Juneau transitional alternative on how to replace boards in case the transitional alternative article on education carries. Now, that. . . before you--and you need not look at it unless you really want to, and you probably won't--are the first and last pages of Delegate Proposal No. 98, before we did any amending of it. That's the Henry resolution, and it's just to show. . .it will be just to show you what we do, where we put the new ballot. This shows how it passed the floor with the old ballot on it. There is also what. . .it will say Section 40, what used to be Section 28, "Transition to Board of Regents." That's the Juneau-Leithman amendment on the transitional revisions, to replace boards in the event the alternative article on education passes. Now, with that in mind, I would move. . .and waiting. . .if you have any questions, I would move one by one for. . .these amendments.

On the first sheet which just has three amendments to the Delegate Proposal No. 98, I would move for the adoption of Amendment No. 3 because it changes a section number to conform with the section number that is now found in the constitution of the Executive Branch proposal permitting subsequent appointment by the superintendent of education instead of election. It's just a technical amendment. Amendments No. 1 and 2 on that page are concluded within Amendment No. 1 on the second page you have, of amendments. It just has four amendments on it. Now, if you will take my word--and you need not--I'll stop to tell you further it. . .are there any questions?

Amendment No. 3 on this page with Amendments No. 1, 2, 3 and 4, simply change section references--simply change section references--and within Delegate Proposal No. 98 to bring them into line with the numbering in the constitution that we. . .as we agreed on last night. If there's no objection, then, I would move for Amendment No. 3 on your first set of amendments to the Henry Proposal No. 98 and for the adoption of Amendments 1 through 4 on your second set of proposals, the supplemental report.

MR. HENRY

Well, now, you. . .we've got to adopt the first amendments, don't we, Judge? You said Amendment No. 3 and then Amendments 1 through 4.

MR. TATE

The first amendment on. . .Amendment No. 3 on the first report. All right. All three amendments. They're going to do the same. . .

[Amendments Nos. 1, 2 and 3 adopted without objection.]

Delegate Proposal No. 98
Supplemental Report

Amendments Nos. 1 through 4

MR. TATE

Now, Amendments 1 through 4 to 98 on the supplemental report.

[Amendments Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 4
adopted without objection.]

Committee Proposal No. 38
Supplemental Report

Amendments Nos. 1 through 7

MR. TATE

Now, the third set of amendments which is on two sides is to take what we have just done and put them in the Zervigon Transitional Article as Part IV, including Amendment No. 8. The reverse side of the pages will show the form of the ballot as we recommended, which is essentially the Jenkins' amendment with the slight changes shown in ink on this page.

Now, Mr. Chairman, Amendments 1 through 7 are of a technical nature to correct the section references. Unless there is. . .subject to questions, I move their adoption.

[Amendments Nos. 1 through 7 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 8

MR. TATE

All right. Now, Amendment No. 8 which is on the reverse side includes the form of the official ballot, which is the Jenkins' proposal we adopted this afternoon, which will be found, then, as Section 38 of the Transitional Article and will replace the old Section 1 of the Henry amendment which set forth a different ballot on alternatives. There are no questions?

Question

MR. AERTKER

Judge Tate, the amendment is exactly as we passed it? There hasn't been any change in position on the ballot and so. . .

MR. TATE

No, no, Mr. Aertker, and I'm glad you asked the question. The slight change that is shown, it was shown as Alternative 2A as we passed it. As you. . .as it is renumbered, for this reason only: you adopted a resolution that said we had to show the propositions, number them--the propositions that will go to the people--by 1, 2, 3 and 4. So, you will see that these, if you look at it--you said you favor or oppose the adoption of the proposed 1974 Constitution. For the adoption of. . .that's one before the. . .where you put your ballot; against, two before where you make your mark. Then, the alternative proposition it said the first one was "A." You see, you eliminated the one and two. Have you got the ballot, Mr. Aertker? You just call it Alternative "A," Alternative "B."

[Amendment No. 8 adopted without objection.]

Amendment No. 9

MR. TATE

The final amendment, Mr. Chairman, simply takes Section 28 of the Committee Proposal No. 38, that's the Zervigon transition amendment, and the Amendment No. 28 is the Juneau-Leithman transition article and takes it as amended and makes it Section 40, the final article in the transitional alternative provisions of Part IV of Article XIV of our constitution.

I move its adoption, Mr. Chairman.

[Amendment No. 9 adopted without objection.]

Personal Privilege

MR. TATE

Yes, Mr. Chairman. May I say one note of personal appreciation, sir? Yes. . .may I. . .

Fellow delegates, I personally want to express deep appreciation to the members of our hardworking and able committee, strong characters of. . .who conscientiously devoted many extra hours to the work of this convention. Also, to our wonderful staff--Norma Duncan, Lee Hargrave and Jeannie Connors, C. E. Forgotaton who replaced Lee, and Connie McMannis. We all express our appreciation to each and everyone of you for your interest in the work of our committee, for your help to us, and we think. . .we hope. . .through your work, we think there has been produced a constitution for the people of this state which they will be proud of when they adopt it, as I know they will.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

MR. HENRY

Thank you, Judge Tate, and your committee for a well done job. I appreciate everything you've done.

Personal Privilege

MR. LANDRUM

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, indeed it is a pleasuring and a bit of sadness to come at this hour of the night, at this time of the year to say to you, I've enjoyed you, enjoyed working with you. I've enjoyed listening to the many things that I didn't know about country life. I enjoyed the things that Sixty Rayburn taught me about the watermelon--now you ask him about that, now. But, there are other things. I enjoyed many wonderful experiences here this year. Judge Tate, wherever you are, I want you to know that that pig got more black in him than what you are believing. I have to leave you on that. . .telling you that, I mean, so, that's the way you styled me the first of the year, because I told you about blackness. I don't want to leave with you no other impression. . .yes, with one other impression. But, my little lady, Mrs. Zervigon, stand. I think that lady deserves a round of applause from everybody. She has worked as a coordinator, and some say she couldn't do it. But, I don't believe nobody, today, with this convention would say that Mrs. Audrey LeBlanc did not hold her on here with this convention. I would like to thank my wife and my children for allowing me to spend more than fifty percent of last year away from them, because I've been in Baton Rouge most of 1973. I gave each of you a card, and that card bore the message telling you about the Lord go with you. Now, I gave you that message because everyday when I talked with my mother from here, that's what my mother tells me--the Lord go with you. That's what I want you to do. I want you to take the Lord with you. Whatever we have done, praise God for it, and I am certain I have no reservation about it. Some of you might have doubts about the passage of this document; I have no reservation about it. I feel certain that together, we are going to get it to the people. When I say together, I'm talking about all these newsmen, the governors, and the mayors, and the sheriffs, and everybody, and all the delegates. We, altogether, are going to tell the people that this is a fine document. I want my little boys back there to know that their father stood here within these walls and helped to write this document, that they will tell it to their children and tell it on down to another generation that America is a great country, that Louisiana is a great state, regardless to what people say about it. We are a great people and especially if we know the Lord. As Mrs. Michelli wrote on a card of mine, using the word "horrende"--remember horrende--a Swahilian word means "let us all pull together." That's what I say to you tonight--let us all pull together. God bless you, God keep you.

Questions

MR. A. JACKSON

Rev, we've been having a little serious debate over you--me and Delegate Jackson. We just want to know if it is true or not. There's a rumor going around that you've been trying for two hundred years to get in this hall and for three months. . .this little pig made it tonight. Is that true?

MR. LANDRUM

That's true. Absolutely, totally true.

MR. A. JACKSON

Now, my question was, so you can appreciate it. . .

MR. HENRY

Wait, wait!

MR. A. JACKSON

We were just discussing a rumor going around that Delegate Landrum was been trying for two hundred years to get in this hall, and a pig made it in three months. . .

MR. LANDRUM

That's right, Johnny.

Personal Privilege

MR. BERGERON

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I feel honored to come before you as we proceed into our last hour as delegates of CC/'73. As the youngest delegate to the constitutional convention, you'll just have to take a little bit of your time. I'll be brief on it. You know, when I first came up to the convention I had wondered, being elected at eighteen, whether I would be as welcome, whether I would be considered as. . .by you, the delegates, as an equal, and respected by you, the delegates. Let me say that you've made me feel more than welcome. I've shared many experiences with you. I've argued with you; I've agreed with you. We've gotten along; we've had our differences. We've worked hard; we've played hard. I feel that we've come up with a good document. It's been the most enjoyable experience of my life. I would just like to relate on to you that you have taught me so very, very much in the past year. My good friend Burt Willis who served on committee with me, Mr. Harmon Drew who was also a committee member, Justice Tate who I admire and respect so much--each and everyone of you in your own way will always be and reserve a place in my memory, because each and everyone of you was a very special. . .to me. I would like to thank you for the welcome feeling that you have extended to me throughout the past year, the way we have worked together, to know that each and everyone of us has contributed in his own way to the betterment of government in Louisiana. I say to you, we have done a very fine job. Thank you very much.

Personal Privilege

MR. SHANNON

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, including Mr. Anzalone, I felt compelled to make a statement because of the things that I have done in this convention. Whether they're good or bad, I'll let you decide. I, first, would like to express my appreciation to all of you for the friendship and courtesy shown me throughout this convention. This has been a highlight of my life. I've been associated with government matter in an elective capacity practically all my life, and I think this is a great climax for me, personally, to have served with you, the people of this convention. What I wanted to bring out, though, was the fact that I doubt if anyone more than I moved the previous question on the floor of this convention. I would call to your attention that it is now 11:20, by my watch. So, I think that you can see the reason that I had behind for doing this, because had it not been done, would we have finished at eleven--we aren't finished yet--but would we have finished by twelve o'clock tonight? So, I hope that you take those motions by me in the spirit that they were given; that I was not trying to cut off debate, but merely move us along, or get us to move along so we could finish the business at hand. If I offended anyone at any time by calling the previous question, well, I apologize. Thank you very much.

Personal Privilege

MR. BURSON

The only thing I can say about that tape is: I'm glad that we don't have to pay for the transcript according to the number of pages we've contributed to it. I think that it's time for you all to know one of the best kept secrets of this convention: that I didn't always go up to the mike as many times as I did because I wanted to talk. But, I sat right directly in front of Mr. Chehardy, and he kept hitting me with spitballs all during the convention, and it was more comfortable at the podium than it was in my chair.

Seriously, I'd just like to share a very few thoughts with you about the process that we've used to adopt this constitution. We're going to hear, in the weeks to come, that this was not the way to write a constitution, that we should have had a panel of experts sit up in an ivory tower and write some abstract ideal constitution, and we should have worked from that. Well, I submit to you that the American political process depends on our continuing faith that the best form of government is one in which the elected or appointed representatives of the people meet in a forum, each representing their own constituency, their own interest group, if you will; and that out of the clash of these particular interests, somehow, by some mystical process that maybe we don't fully understand, arises the common good. I submit to you that that is what has happened in this convention, and that what we have is not the best of all possible constitutions, because there's no Mt. Sinai in Baton Rouge from which anyone is handing down Ten Commandments. But, the world of divine providence works in history much more often one step at a time than it does by a lightning bolt. Whether this step that we take in presenting to the people of Louisiana this constitution is a giant step or only a good constructive single step forward, only time will tell. But it is a step forward, and this is the message that each one of us must leave here and bring to them. There is not a delegate here who has not fought very hard on a particular issue and lost. But, the sum of our total contribution is so much greater than any individual defeat that we may have suffered, that we must unite and go out and sell this thing from the grass roots up, because I'll guarantee you one thing, that anybody who writes a constitution in an ivory tower is going to have a hard time getting down to the grass roots that we've got the people in here that came from the grass roots, and we can bring it back. That's what we're going to do. I'd just like to leave you with one quote that I thought was appropriate from Edmond Burke, the British political philosopher who also happened to be the founder of political parties as we know them today. He told his constituents in Bristol, England, in 1780, about the parliamentary process: "Applaud us when we run, console us when we fall, cheer us when we recover, but let us pass on--for God's sake, let us pass on." Let's pass this constitution.

Personal Privilege

MR. JUNEAU

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I think we would all be remiss if we did not recognize two people that played a very important roll in this convention. During the course of this past year, we had an opportunity to ventilate our views on the Chairman and on the Clerk of this convention. They spent hours from early in the morning, as early as five, to as late as two o'clock the next morning on numerous occasions. I'm sure when they got frustrated, they hid those views and took them home. On many occasions, I know in the case of our Chairman the occasions when he was home was far and few in between. I'd like to pay a special tribute and a deep debt of gratitude to Jane Poynter, David Poynter's wife, and a special debt of gratitude not only from the convention, but the State of Louisiana, to the contribution she made in keeping the sanity of her husband and for giving up of her family time to the gentleman who served us so well, Mrs. Frances Heory. I'd like for us to give them a standing ovation, please.

MR. HENRY

Shoot, they're lucky just to get to live with me and David. I don't see why you'd do something like that.

Personal Privilege

MR. BURNS

Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I speak to you at this late hour as the senior partner of this firm of a hundred and thirty-two members, Philip Bergeron having addressed you just a few moments ago as the youngest member of the firm. I doubt if I would come up here tonight if it were not for the fact that I think perhaps it might be the last time that I will ever have the honor and the privilege of being together with all of you in one gathering such as we have enjoyed, or I have enjoyed this past year. Most of you have not only your life, but your public lives and your political lives before you. But, of course, I doubt if--to use the old saying--"if I will ever pass this way again." But, I have enjoyed this year tremendously. It's been quite an experience with me having, I thought, retired from politics some thirteen years ago, to come up here and be associated with such an energetic, enthusiastic group of ladies and men such as composed this convention. I just wanted to take this last opportunity to tell you how much my association with you and the friendships, and the associations that I have made here this past year will ever be cherished in my memory, as long as I live. I hope, when we leave here tonight, that you and your family will enjoy the richest blessings of God and that everything that you want may be yours in the future. Thank you very much.

MR. HENRY

Thank you, Mr. Jim.

Personal Privilege

MR. WINCHESTER

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I want to thank you for your kindnesses and your friendship during these long days that we've had here. I had many experiences--some new and some old. But, the experience that shook me up the most happened during the first day that we held the session in this chamber. Being a green and inexperienced delegate, I did not know about the loud-speaker system in the various rooms throughout this floor. I was in the men's . . . boys' room and Mrs. Ruth Miller's voice came through loud and clear. Right at my back she said, "Will the delegates stop playing and sit down."

Questions

MR. GUARISCO

I just want to explain to my cohort, Dan, that that's exactly what the Women's Lib. . . the women on the other side said would happen if we passed that in the Bill of Rights.

MR. HENRY

Mrs. Warren, I'm almost afraid to ask you if you have a question.

MR. WARREN

You know, it is always said that women are the ones that talk so much. Tonight, I've noticed nobody has been saying anything but men. So, now, I'm about to agree. They say, "if you want a secret told," say, "tell it to a woman." But, I'm going to change their story. You can just "tell it to a man."

Personal Privilege

MR. SCHMITT

I went to school for seven years of college, and I went and did some post graduate work in medicine afterwards. But, I can tell you, nothing that I learned there compares to my one year of experience that I've had here. One of my greatest educators is a man who I really have a tremendous amount of respect for and as he said earlier, he has graduated from the school of hard knocks, and that's Senator 'Sixty' B. B. Rayburn. At this time, I'd really like to express my appreciation for his putting up with me during this entire period of time, 'cause I know he and Gordon Flory and Edwin Edwards sometimes have had problems with me. But, at the same time, I've had problems with them. I'd like to thank you all for your many wonderful experiences that I have, I guess, suffered through during this convention. I really appreciate the opportunity to serve with you. I really believe this is one of the greatest meetings of minds that have ever been accomplished in the history of the world. Thank you very much.

MR. RAYBURN

Mr. Chairman, coming from a Republican, that's the nicest words I've ever heard.

Personal Privilege

MR. A. JACKSON

I thought I'd had my moment a few minutes ago. I was talking to Johnny who said not only was that pig in here, but he was able to do things that he wasn't able to do. All right, on a serious note, though, I do think that this has been a great opportunity for all of us. I do believe that Louisiana is going to be a better place because all of you were able to come here and share in the magnificent opportunity to move this state and this country ahead. I believe that you came here because you wanted to reckon with the future. I think that this document will speak long after many of us are no longer here. It will attest not only to our faith in the people of this state, but it will attest to the hopes and dreams and aspirations of the people who sat here and the people who were without these walls. I think more than just a document was wrought here. I think of all the spirits that were fashioned here. I noticed not only among the delegates, but within myself, that we have all grown. I believe because we have grown we are going to usher in a whole new degree of humanity, and people will work together and live together and grow together, and this state will be better because all of us were here. Finally, on a rather serious, serious note, may I say that I know that some of you have doubts about this document; and while I will attest to all of the good things that are in it, I would like to remind you of the words uttered by Benjamin Franklin as he stood imploring the delegates to the constitutional convention that brought about this great country of ours when he said that he would urge the delegates there to doubt their infallibility, to know that it was not perfect. But, they had given of themselves and that their spirits were so much a part of the document that it was going to live on. So, I would implore you to know that we have great humanity in this document, and it will express itself in the years to come. So, know that you are not infallible, but know that you have wrought well, here, and that this document will serve the people of this state well. We will bring to generations yet unborn hope, humanity, and love, and the ability to fashion a great government.

MR. HENRY

Thank you, Alphonse.

Report of the Secretary
[II Journal 1417-1447]

MR. DENNERY

Mr. Chairman, delegates to the convention I am pleased to submit the following report that: the following document constitutes the proposed constitution, including alternative propositions of the Constitutional Convention of 1973 convened under the authority of Act 2 of the 1972 Regular Session of the Legislature, as amended, as that document is contained below the enacting clause of the several committee and delegate proposals heretofore adopted by the convention.

Respectfully submitted, Moise W. Dennery, Secretary.

For a motion, Mr. Chairman.

MR. HENRY

The gentleman has moved the adoption of the document.

[Motion to suspend the rules for a roll call vote in reverse alphabetical order on the final document adopted without objection.]

Point of Information

MR. BLAIR

Mr. Chairman, if everyone's in their seat, shouldn't they either vote yes or no?

MR. HENRY

Well, the rules of the convention don't compel you to vote; no, sir.

MR. ABRAHAM

Mr. Chairman, on this last vote of the convention, I would simply like to say that it was indeed a pleasure to surrender my position as first man under the gun to Mrs. Zervigon.

[Proposed Constitution adopted: 121-1. Motion to reconsider tabled.]

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Hardin is going to come down with the signature sheets.

MR. HENRY

Do you want to sign it down at the front at the rostrum?

MR. POYNTER

I think it would be appropriate if we signed it at the rostrum.

[Affixing of Signatures to the Proposed Constitution.]

DELIVERY OF PROPOSED DOCUMENT TO THE GOVERNOR

MR. HENRY

If you all don't mind, we don't think there is any problem with what the law says but if you all don't mind, I'm going to make the formal presentation to comply with the book to the governor's executive secretary right here because I've got six minutes till midnight. Mr. Fisher, if you will step over here, it will give me a great deal of pleasure to give you this document.

MR. POYNTER

Mr. Chairman, the signing of the Constitution of the State of Louisiana 1974 is complete.

MR. HENRY

Please take your seats, gentlemen and ladies.

There are a few people who wanted yet to be recognized on personal privilege. We have a couple of presentations to make. I know we're all tired and do as you will, but Mr. Singletary, I recognize you at this time on personal privilege.

Personal Privilege

MR. SINGLETARY

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, on the front of our capitol are written some words, which though written on another hallmark in Louisiana history, I think they express the hope of us, the delegates to the Louisiana Constitutional Convention of 1973-74, for what our proposed constitution will eventually bring in the future to our state. "These instruments which we have just signed will cause no tears to be shed; they prepare ages of happiness for innumerable generations of human creatures." Robert R. Livingston, May 3, 1803, at the signing of the treaty of purchase of Louisiana from France.

Vice Chairman Miller in the Chair

Personal Privilege

MR. CASEY

Madam Chairman and delegates, I think it's appropriate at this time for the delegates to the Constitutional Convention of 1973 to single out just a few individuals for their outstanding and dedicated, distinguished and unselfish contribution in their individual roles of responsibility and leadership to the constitutional convention. It's impossible to recognize and honor everybody who made a contribution. But, I think it's appropriate to single out certain individuals who contributed above and beyond the call of duty. In giving these individuals this recognition and memento, I would like to just momentarily deflate their egos, the egos of those recipients by saying to them that in honoring you here tonight, that it is our intention also to honor those people that you represent, and who worked under you so feverishly during this convention. I've already indicated I was Chairman of the Subcommittee on Staff and Personnel, and that committee, after many arduous days, weeks, and months, had the privilege of choosing to the position of leadership as director of research a lady that was well known in government for many years. We felt that through her knowledge and talents, and her extensive background in government, her experience in the position that she held as the number two person with the Louisiana Legislative Council, that she would be ideal to fill the position of director of research. So, we chose that person, and we feel that she has certainly been able to please the one hundred and thirty-two prima donnas that were delegates to this constitutional convention by making all of us believe that although we may have had some weird ideas, and some weird amendments, she made us believe that they certainly were not; however, she really tactfully tried to make some recommended changes in those many amendments that we wanted to present. I think she has performed fantastically well. On behalf of the one hundred and thirty-two delegates, it's our privilege to honor tonight, Norma M. Duncan, with a small token of our esteem and we'll ask the Chairman of the convention to give that presentation to Mrs. Duncan if she will come down here. Mrs. Duncan.

MRS. DUNCAN

Probably for the first time in eleven months, I am without words. Certainly let me reiterate what Mr. Casey said. I did nothing; I had so much help from all of you. I can't tell you thank you enough for me. I had so much help from a really outstanding, fantastic task force that was so interested in what you were doing, and wanted so much to help you succeed, as certainly you did. Thank you so much for them, as you say, you honor me. Thank you.

MR. CASEY

I'll ask the Chairman of the convention to make the next presentation. I would like to point out that the small plaques that are being given are certainly small and not ostentatious, but I might mention to the recipients that they are pure sterling silver plaques containing the crest of CC/73 with a small inscription. I'd like to now ask Mr. Henry to make the next presentation.

MR. HENRY

Madam Chairman and fellow delegates, the recipient of this plaque is a young man--and you know who it's going to go to--but, I've got to say a few words about David Poynter. An outstanding young man, a man who I trapped into working for this convention for free, a man who I got out of law school to come and handle all the hard work for the convention. I have had the privilege of knowing David for several years, and he never ceases to amaze me. David wanted to be a delegate to the convention, and thank God he wasn't because I don't think he could have been the Clerk and a voting delegate, too. You all think you all don't know what you would have done without him; and Lord knows what would have happened to me. Sometimes I feel like we are the Charlie McCarthy and Edgar Bergen team, and you're not unaware of that. But, David's made a great contribution to this state, not just in the convention, but particularly in the convention. David's going to make a great contribution to the state. I saw his wife, Jane, here a while ago, and she's got to be a good and a patient woman, because David is not inclined sometime to go home anyway; but, Jane, a lot of it's my fault; and he's in good company, I assure you. Those nights that he tells you that we've been working on amendments, or we've been working on hustling votes, or whatever it was we were hustling, I assure you it was legitimate. David, come down here and receive your plaque.

MR. POYNTER

Thank you much more than you'll ever know. Of course, Bubba, it's not the company I keep, but it's what my company does that I think concerns all of our wives. I really would like to say... I had to say it before; Norma mentioned it, and there's no way you can say it too many times. It sounds like the Emmy Awards, but without the people behind me and in the enrolling room and in the transcription room, the job that you wanted done simply would not have been done. I say without reservation that I have had the assistance of some of the people that I consider to be the most talented professional people in the State of Louisiana. I'd like to also say that to a very great measure my job has been functionable, if you will, and possible because of each and every one of you in this room. I have never had anything but tremendous cooperation. When I've raved at you and wouldn't talk to you, you've understood that I was doing something. You've cooperated, assisted me in every way, and without that the job couldn't have been done, and at this late hour if you will permit me one other observation I'd like to make, that I'm not sure that many people in the State of Louisiana have ever realized—when Act 2 was passed, the thing that concerned me most about Act 2, quite frankly, there were no procedures, no forms prescribed in Act 2 limiting the way this convention would conduct itself, and make its decisions. Even after the fine set of rules that you adopted, proposed by Mr. Stagg and his fine committee, you could have done such things, as by sixty-seven people, or two-thirds vote suspending the rules, and having twenty people adopt a section. You could have chosen the low road, but invariably this convention chose the high road, and the people of the State of Louisiana should be proud of you, in my opinion. Your decisions were made in public; they were made in a way that the people of this state can know that its representatives express the deliberate sense of the people they represented. To me, without being required to by any constitution, you maintain the integrity of representative democracy, and I commend you to your constituents. Thank you.

MR. CASEY

Madam Chairman and delegates, after the close of the 1972 Legislative Session and after some of the ambitious legislators ran and were elected to the Constitutional Convention—and I was one of those so elected—I indicated to the speaker of the House of Representatives, who also was a delegate, that it was my personal hope that he would seek the position of Chairman of the Constitutional Convention. Of course, he indicated at that time that I started making him think about that position. Of course, he hadn't thought about it before I had mentioned it to him. But, you know and I know, that it takes one forceful person with a tremendous amount of energy, foresight, vision, leadership, integrity, and just about any good quality that you can think of in a real genuine person and a true leader—that is what we needed in order to put this effort successfully together, in order to achieve and complete what we have achieved and completed tonight. I think it's appropriate at this time for this convention to recognize the outstanding leadership that our Chairman has given to this convention, and let us leave no doubt in anyone's mind at any time in any place that he was certainly just the right person to put the whole thing together. I think it's appropriate that we recognize at this time our Chairman with this little memento that we have from all the delegates—that we give to E.L. "Bubba" Henry this memento. Mr. Henry.

MR. HENRY

Thank you, Tom, and ladies and gentlemen of the convention. I had initially thought I would make a few remarks in closing tonight, and it's gotten so late, I decided I wouldn't. Honestly, after those beautiful cuff links at Christmas, I didn't expect and certainly don't deserve anything else. I do appreciate it. I would like to say one or two things. I've waited here for thirteen months, and listened to you all talk, and if you'll just indulge me for a few moments, I would like to say one or two things before we get out on the road and start promoting this document. I thought a long time as to whether or not I should run for Chairman of the convention. I'm human; I'm ambitious and was desirous that the document not be jeopardized from its very inception. I made my decision finally, and I don't know how to say that I finally determined it; it was after I decided, I'm sure, that I wanted to, and after I had some encouragement. It was a great honor to have had you elect me as your Chairman. I didn't know what I was getting into, and had I known what I was getting into, I probably would not have fooled around with it at all. I'm glad now that I did, and it's been a real pleasure to have served with each and every one of you. In wrapping my part of this up tonight, I'm not going to tell you what a great document we've adopted, how much better it is than the present constitution because you know as much about that as I do. Lord knows we've had our critics in the past thirteen months; some of them fair, and some of them not so fair; some of them well informed, and some of them not informed at all. We've had our advisors; we've had those that we've sought advice from and those that just volunteered it. Sometimes I've wondered who annotated those people with all the information and knowledge that they had, sitting in the balcony on the sidelines, clothed in their wisdom and righteousness, with us all the way—with us all the way, representing their special interest, so long as their special interest, their ox wasn't gored, or their sacred cow kicked in the fanny. We haven't really started getting the criticism yet, ladies and gentlemen. The fun's just fixing to start. But, you know, since we got into this convention, I have really, really become interested, more so than ever before, in American history. You can't help if you're interested in what we've done and what we're doing, and you're interested in government in this state and this country, to look back at the history, the adoption of the federal constitution. You think we've had dissenters? We've had them. That's right, but there's a bunch of those folks that were elected to serve as delegates to that convention that never even showed up. When they got through with that document, they were really in for the criticism because when they left there that day in September, after they had signed the document, everybody was shook and scared because they went there to redraft the Articles of Confederation and came out with a whole new plan of government. Partner, did they have some trouble! We think we're going to have critics with some high powered folks going against us. Wonder how Jefferson and Washington and those fellows felt running around Virginia trying to get that document ratified in Virginia when Patrick Henry was screaming and hollering from the hilltops that that federal constitution that we live under now was the most fatal plan that could possibly have been conceived to enslave a free people. That's a high powered campaign fodder, but they got it adopted, just like we're going to be able to get ours adopted if we want to and if we work at it because those folks that criticize what we've done, that criticize what we propose just amaze the daylight out of me because it appears to me they never reflect on what we're trying to exchange this for. Certainly, there are defects in the document that we've adopted, but what are we comparing it with? We're comparing it with an antiquated, outdated, outmoded document. I don't tell you that we've done a perfect job because we haven't, but I know, and I know in my heart that we've done a substantially better job. I'm going to wrap it up, and wrap it up with a compliment and with a comment. I have never, nor do I believe I'll ever be associated with a finer, more dedicated, more diligent group of people than those of you who've labored through this for the past thirteen months. You sacrificed, and probably you didn't know what you were getting into, but you've been up on the hilltops and down through the valleys with me, and that means a lot. I'm a part of you now, and you're a part of me, and we'll never be able to change that, and I'm proud to say you're my friends and that I've been associated with you. I love the House of Representatives, next to my family, I guess just about better than anything. But, I can stand before you tonight and tell you that I don't love the members of the House or the House of Representatives any more than I do you delegates because you've made a contribution and do you know what you've done? You've been Louisiana for the last thirteen months. We've sat here and we've washed the dirty linen of this state in public. That's what's caused the problem because it hasn't been nice, and it hasn't all been good because everything that's gone on for the past fifty years in this state hasn't been nice and it hasn't been good. Now, we think we're through, and this is the comment. We're not through. We've just begun to get in the situation to deal the cards. We've shuffled them; we've made them; we've cut them; and we're fixing to deal them; and we're fixing to get in the biggest gin game that you ever heard of because we're going to go out of here going to sell this document. Now, there may be those of you, and it's fine if that's the way you feel, that you can't or that you won't support this document because of one article or one section. If that's the way you really feel and you really believe, so mote it be. But, I ask you this: How long must we wait, how long must we wait in this state to get the opportunity to do the things that need to be done? I submit to you that two years ago when we had the election in this state that the people were saying something to us. I submit to you that what they're saying is one of the reasons we convened in this convention last January 5, because the people of this state were telling us that they wanted things to be different, that they were ready for a change, and they expected those of us in public life to make sure that things were changed. I don't say this critically of anything that's gone on in years before, but I say that I think the people had just become completely dissatisfied in the way our state's been run, and the basic organization of our state government. Now, I may be wrong, but I don't think so. I think that it's going to boil down to what you and I are willing to do, how much more you and I are willing to sacrifice to see that this document's adopted. People say we can't get it adopted if so and so doesn't help. That's a bunch of tommyrot. It's going to take some hard work; it's going to take some organization, and it's going to mean that you and I are going to have to go back home in those districts and organize the people, organize them to the extent that we've got to tell them what's in this document. Don't kid them around that it's the best document that's ever been written because we know it's not, but show them where it's so superior to what we've got. We're going to have to take the lumps and those of us that are going to have to...the ones who want to be in politics in future years are going to have to take some chances but what in the world is the use of being in politics and getting elected and reelected if we're not going to take some chances? So, my challenge to you, and I would say to you tonight in closing, that if we take this to the people and if the people reject it, I won't be disappointed if I feel like they rejected it after we took it to them with a good fight, after we explained to them what is in it. I won't be disappointed then because I'll say, "I was wrong. The people are not ready for the changes I thought they were." But, I submit to you that while we have finished our work tonight, while we think we've completed our work, at least of drawing the document, that if you and I don't take advantage of the opportunity of going back to the folks at home and letting them know what's in the document, if we allow them to go in those voting booths and vote no because of ignorance, then we've failed, and we haven't fulfilled the obligation that you and I have made to the people of this state. I look forward to seeing the campaign develop. I plan to do everything that I can to see that the document's adopted. Everything that's legal and moral, I'm going to do. I hope you'll do the same. It's been a real pleasure working with you. Good luck and God's speed.

MRS. MILLER

You know, Mr. Henry, that's the quietest they have been for any ten-minute period in thirteen months. I don't know what you did tonight. Maybe we should have been using this all along.

Moise Dennery has a few words to say to us.

MR. DENNERY

That was wrong, Mrs. Miller. I have a few words to sing to you all, and you'll have to bear with my voice. I was asked to write a few verses to Auld Lang Syne. If you'd like to join with me, please feel free to do so.

"Should auld acquaintance be forgot and never brought to min'
We should remember that we did the Constitution sign.

So bang the gavel once again and open the machine
While Bubba Henry stands aloft with countenance serene.

When Wellborn Jack begins to speak the members, to a man
Quiet down to hear the wisdom flow from North Louisiana.

And then St. Martin's orator spouts Bible and the Bard
As Mr. Perez argues with his friends from St. Bernard.

Assessors all with bated breath await Chehardy's joke
While Casey and Ms. Zervigon are both about to choke.

Then Alphonse Jackson and Chris Roy their civil rights things do
And E.J. Landry and Ambroise discuss Lafourche Bayou.

Judge Albert Tate goes to the mike to speak of draft and style
As Graham, Gravel and Robert Pugh all visit in each aisle.

Then loud voiced Alvin from Slidell asks questions from the floor While Munson and Hernandez, Pete, for timber do implore.

The sheriffs and the clerks of court agree with the D.A.'s
And all the folks from Thibodaux sing out La Marseillaise.

Then Flory and Avant arise and both approach the Chair
They labor long and labor hard their grievances to air.

The VET from Nouvelle Orleans computes the rate of tax
While Sixty and the senators give P.A.R. the axe.

The ladies--and we bless them all-- their liberation flout
As all the many ministers come forth with prayers devout.

While Norma Duncan and the staff work overtime galore
The pages and the sarg-st-arms try order to restore.

I know I have forgotten some but none did I malign
And ne'er will I forget you all in days of Auld Lang Syne.

MR. HENRY

We're going to reconsider the way he sang that and let Mrs. Maybuce try it.

MRS. MAYBUCE

I don't know what the historians will write about the history we have made in Louisiana and in America. They're going to have to be extraordinary people to record and capture what really happened here on the east bank of the great Mississippi in beautiful downtown Baton Rouge because together we Southerners have capitalized on our differences and on our ethnic differences, our religious differences and our sectional differences. Certainly, none of us will ever be the same. Each of us in our own way has made our own mark on the annals of this century. We have shown to America that the South can rise again, and shall rise again, but this time together. I have tried to paraphrase for us in trying to capture some of the feelings which I felt in this convention, and I'm going to ask you that as we get to "Auld Lang Syne, my dear," that will you turn as we do in the Episcopal Church; we always say, "May the peace of God be with you." We answer, "and also with you." Will you turn to your neighbor and shake his hand like I am, and do that; and if our Chairman is not so tired, I'd like him to lead us and do that. To the right hand, fellowship as you do in your church, turn to your neighbor and just shake hands and say, "May the peace of God be with you," also or whatever you'd like to say. Some of us have already said it, but for effectiveness.

1. "Should auld acquaintance be forgot and never brought to mind?
Though nerves were frayed
There were memories made
Pleasant thoughts our hearts can find.

For days of CC/73
Are coming to an end
We've done our best
Now the biggest test--
Will the voter be our friend?

2. We've come through many storms and trials
We have often disagreed.
Our work is done and our race is run
Though it can't be said "with speed".

For days of CC/73
We never more shall see
And as we part

MR. HENRY

Mr. O'Neill is recognized, and we're fixing to wind it down, gentlemen and ladies.

MR. O'NEILL

You know, friends, each day we open with a prayer, and it seems to be the most appropriate thing that we could do, and so I think it appropriate that we close. But, I'm going to close with a different kind of prayer, and I'm going to intersperse it with probably the greatest document that was ever written of all times, and that is the Bible. The book of Genesis tells of the creation of the world and how it came about in six days. I'd like to tell you about the creation of this convention, and how we ourselves came about in those six days. In the beginning, there was need for creation. The people of our great state were disillusioned and weary under the great weight of a document too old to meet the test of time, and too cumbersome to reflect the changing of those times. Thus, on the first day, God said, "Let there be light," and just as He said, "Let there be light," so we said on the first day, "The people of our state deserve more." So, we met on the first day, full of the uncertainty we reflected, borne from the people who sent us, cognizant of the need for creation, and hopeful that this, the first day, did mark the beginning of a new day for us all. Then, there was the evening of the first day. Then came the dawn of the second day. As we wandered and groped in the early break of dawn, we found organization and strength in and of ourselves. The open road lay before, and on that, the second day, we began our journey. The vehicle we used to travel that road was an organization put together of the best minds and brightest hopes. This system safeguarded the rights of each of us, and made us equal to one another only to be surpassed by the strength of reason and the force of persuasion. Such was the second day. Then came the third day of creation. Our world went into a period of incubation so that we might have a chance to put the pieces in place, just as the pieces of a small child are fitted before he is born. The third day provided us with knowledge, knowledge many of you possess, knowledge to be gained by many others. We divided ourselves into committees so that our efforts would not be duplicated. We did so so that we might return together and place the pieces into a whole. The third day was the shortest day, and when the dust settled on the third day, we knew our longest day lay ahead. The fourth day was before us, and this indeed was the longest day. Just as all the world was formed and fused by thought, our document was formed on this day. This day seemed an eternity. This, the fourth day, saw the men of mind put together the basic framework of our government. When the framework was finished, the individual rights of each citizen in relation to that government, were established and enshrined. This set of rights proclaim that individuality and equality was the basis of all rights. As that day lengthened, man was provided the means to govern himself at the most local levels. He was allowed the right to determine his own form of government, and to have a greater voice in his own destiny. So that our people could participate in life and in government, we provided education for them. We then provided for the rights of the individual to control the fruits of his endeavor, and encouraged him to own a home free of the heavy burdens of taxation. We provided that man would have bountiful resources with which to live. Looking back over the fourth day, we were all able to say it was, indeed, a very good day. The fifth day brought storms and agonizing soul-searching for all of us. The storm clouds which had been gathering on the horizon brought forth the full wrath of the one who had created us. He brought us ideas, suggestions, compromise and his message that if we did not consider some change, the people for whom we had so tirelessly labored would turn our work away, and continue to live with the burdens of the past. The fifth day was an agonizing day. The effects of the storm were to fill our minds with the torrential flood of thoughts and remind us that complacency is an evil saboteur lurking to raise our shield and destroy us. The fifth day was a cold and lonely day, but the sun would rise once more. The sixth day rose with a burst of glory and light that filled the day. We awoke to a conciliatory spirit that would provide compromise and not doom us to failure for shielding ourselves from the harsh light of day. As our minds sought to reach the other minds, some new and pervading force transcended us all; a force which made us realize that indeed we were sorry to leave our friends of the year past; a force which made us realize that what we had done was just and good; a force which made us know that whatever the results of our efforts, it was in the interest of those who sent us here, created for their good and destined to be their future. The sixth day brought to our minds the awareness that there are those who would destroy our work for their selfish interests and seek to ridicule and slander us. Just as it brought this realization, it brought, too, the realization that we must withstand many more assaults. The end of the sixth day is now at this very, very moment. Now, we must, in the words of John Kennedy, "Let the word go forth from this time and place to friend and foe alike" that what we have created is good and noble, and the best that the minds of each and all of us could produce. We must use this bond that exists among us, and on this very last day to unite and carry forth this righteous work. Then we saw that which we had created was all very good, and so we contemplated; myself, the thoughts of the knowledge attained and the friendships bound; and you, the feeling of accomplishment and dominance over the things which were said would never be changed. After the sixth day, we rested. We surveyed all that we created and smiled upon it, confident that what we created was indeed very good.

MR. LANDRUM

Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask that you would allow Rev. Alexander or Rev. Stovall to close out with a prayer to God. I enjoyed Mr. O'Neill, but we didn't start on the Kennedy's, as much as my appreciation for them, nor on poems, but on the Lord. I think we should close that way.

MR. HENRY

I think your point's well taken.
 Rev. Alexander, would you lead us in our closing prayer, prior to adjournment?

PRAYER

MR. ALEXANDER

Oh, Lord God of our fathers, Thou who has gathered us from the four corners of the state, Thou who has brought us through the year 1973 and into 1974, Thou who has been with us in our deliberations, Thou who has guided us, Thou who has loved us and protected us, we pray, oh, God, that as we terminate our work and our toil on this document, that as we prepare to submit it, first to the governor of this state, and then to the people, that Your presence will go with us and with it, that You will guide us as we go back to meet our constituencies, to inform them of the handiwork of these Thy people and of Thine hand. Bless us both individually and collectively, and guide us in whatever we do, and may our actions be consistent with Your love, and Your mercy, and Your humility. Then, God, when we shall have terminated all that Thou hast assigned to our hands in this world to do, we pray that we will hear Your welcome voice inviting us to that everlasting rest by saying, "Servants of God, well done, well done, well done." Amen.

MR. HENRY

Amen.

MR. SEGURA

It's been over a year that this convention first began. Many times, many, many times during that year I considered submitting my resignation, as many of you must have. My family has suffered; my business has been neglected, as your family and your business has been neglected. But, today, I know, as you do, that it was all worthwhile. I've said many times throughout the convention that too much time was wasted in unnecessary debate. As the convention progressed, and as the constitution began to take form, I look back today, a much wiser person. I know that I was wrong because I now believe that every word in every talk, and every minute we spent here wasn't only necessary, but it was healthy for the preparation of this constitution. The document we have prepared is not perfect, by any sense of the imagination, but it is in my opinion the best document that we the delegates of this convention could have put together. It is far superior to the constitution we're now living under. You know, many of us represent special interests, and this convention has been criticized many times by so many special interest groups. But, without this special interest, this convention would not in my opinion have been representative of the people of this state. The governor and the legislature in its wisdom created us in that manner. Nothing else that I can think of, as I look back, could have been better for this convention. By spending the year with all of you I've learned to know you a lot better; I've learned to respect each and every one of you, and I'm grateful to all of you for having given me that opportunity because as we demonstrated here today, this delegation can be serious. It can be very serious, and it can fight to the bitter end, and on that very same day we can all join together for fun and laughter as we have today. But, after one week with you, I believed that every one of you was sincere, and wanted a good constitution. After one year with you, I know that you all are sincere, and that you did write a good constitution. For this, and I'm sure the people of the state also join me, in thanking you for this; and in conclusion, Mr. Chairman, and fellow delegates, I'd like to move that we adjourn, subject to recall.

MR. HENRY

The gentleman now moves that we adjourn subject to recall.
Is there objection?
Without objection, so ordered.
